This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google®books

https://books.google.com

Digitized by Google

•

.

i

ţ

1

-----

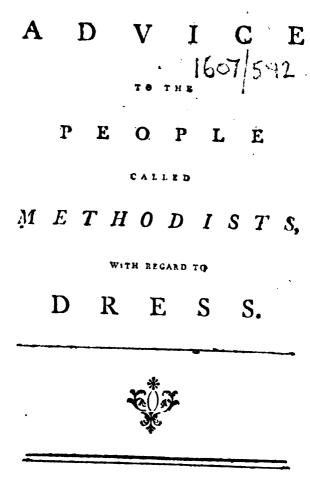

,

ł

$

1

LONDQN:

Printed by G. PARAMORE, North-Green, Worthip-Street. Sold by G. WHITFIELD, at the Chapel, City-Road; and at the Methodift Preaching-Houfes in Town and Country. 1795.

**◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆◆

1 1

ADVICE CONCERNING DRESS.

I. 1. I Am not fond of faying the fame thing over and over: efpecially when I have fo many things to fay, that the day of life (which with me is far ipent) is not likely to fuffice for them. But in fome cafes, it is needful for you that I fhould: and then it is not grievous to me. And it may be belt to fpeak freely and fully at once, that there may be the lefs need of fpeaking on this head hereafter.

2. When we look into the Bible with any attention, and then look round into the world, to fee who believes, and who lives according to this book; we may easily difcern, that the fystem of practice, as well as the fystem of truth there delivered, is torn in pieces, and scattered abroad, like the members of Ablyrtus. Every denomination of Christians retains some part either of Christan truth or practice : their hold falt one part, and thole another, as their fathers did before them. What is the duty, mean time, of those who defire to follow the whole word of God? Un--doubtedly to gather up all these fragmonts; that, if poffible, nothing be loft: with all diligence to follow all those we fee about us, to far as they follow the Bible: and to join together in one icheme of truth and practice, what almost all the world put afunder.

g. Many years ago, 1 observed feveral parts of Christian practice among the people called Quakers, 'Two things I particularly remarked among them, plainness of speech, and plainness of dvels. I willingly adopted both with some referictions, and particularly plainness of dress: the same I recommended to you, when God first called you out of the world; and after the addition of more than twenty years experience, k recommend it to you full.

4. But before I go any farther, I must insteat you, in the name of God, he open to conviction. Whatever prejudices you have contracted from education, cultom, or example, divelt youilelves of them, as far as possible. Be willing to seccive light eithor from from God er man: do not that your eyes again it. Rather, be glad to fee more than you did before; to have the eyes of your understanding opened. Receive the truth in the love thereof, and you will have reason to bless God for ever.

.

II. c. Not that I would advise you to imitate the people called Quakers, in those little particularities of dress, which can answer no possible end, but to distinguish them from all other people. To be fingular, merely for fingularity's take, is not the part of a christian. I do not therefore advise you to wear a hat of fuch dimensions, or a coat of a particular form. Rather, in things that are absolutely indifferent, that are of no consequence at all, humility and courtefy require you to conform to the customs of your country.

2. But I advife you to imitate them, First, in the neatness of their apparel. This is highly to be commended, and quite fuitable to your Christian calling. Let all your apparel therefore be as clean, as your fituation in life will allow. It is certain, the poor cannot be for clean as they would, as having little change of raiment. But let even these be as clean as they can, as care and diligence can keep them. Indeed they have particular need for to be; because Cleanlines is one great branch of Frugality. It is likewife more conducive to health, than is generally confidered. Let the poor them especially labour to be cleant, and provoke those of higher rank to jealoufy.

3. I advise you to imitate them, Secondly, in the Plainnels of their apparel. In this are implied two things; i. That your apparel be cheap, not expenfive; far cheaper than others in your circumflances wear, or than you would wear, if you knew not God; a. That it be grave, not gay, airy, or showy; not in the point of the fashion. And these cafy rules may be applied both so the materials, whereof it is made, and the manner wherein it is made or put on the table.

and. Would you have a further rule with refrect to both ? Then take one you may always carry in In your bolom : GoDo every thing herein with a fingle eye;" and this will direct you in every circumstance. Let a fingle intention to pleafe God preforibe, both what cleathing you shall buy, and the manner wherein it shall be made, and how you shall put on and wear it. To express the fame thing in other words; let all you do, in this respect, be lo done, that you may offer it to God, a facrifice acceptable through Christ Jefus; fo that, confequently, it may increase your reward, and brighten your crown in heaven. And fo it will do, if it be agreeable to christian humility, ferious for and charity.

5. Shall I be more particular still? Then I exhort all those, who defire me to watch over their fouls, Wear no gold, (whatever officers of state may do; or magiltrates, as the enfign of their office) no pearls or precious flones : ule no curling of hair, or colly · apparel, how grave foever. I advife those; who are able to receive this faying. Buy no velvets, no filks, no fine linen, no superfluities, no mere ornamonts, though ever fo much in fashion. Wear nothing; though you have it already, which is of a glaring colour, or which is in any kind gay, gliftering, showy; nothing made in the very height of the fashion, nothing apt to attract the eyes of the bystanders. I do not advise women to wear rings, ear-rings, necklaces, lace, (of whatever kind or colour,) or ruffles, which by little and little may eafily shoot out from one to twelve inches deep. Neither do I advife men, to wear coloured waillcoats, thining flockings, glittering or colly buckles or buttons, either on their coats, or in their fleeves, any more than gay, fashionable, or expensive perukes. It is true, theic are little, very little things; therefore they are not worth defending : therefore give them up, let them drop, throw them away without another word. Elle a little needle may caufe much pain in your flein, a little felf-indutgence much hurtto your foul.

III. 1. For the preceding exhortation I have the authority of God in clear and express terms. "I will,

Digitized by Google

that

that women (and by parity of reafon, men toe) adorn themselves in modest apparel, with shamefacednels and fobriety, not with broidered (curled) hair, or gold, or pearls, (one kind of precious ftones, which was then most in use, put for all,) or ceftly apparel, but (which becometh women profelling godliness) with good works," 1 Tim, ii. 10. Again, "Whole adorning let it not be that outward adorning of plaiting (curling) the hair, and of wearing of gold, or of putting on of apparel. But let it be-the ornament of a meck and quiet spirit, which is, in the light of God, of great price, 1 Pet. iii. 3, 4. Nothing can be more express : the wearing of gold, of precious flones, and of coffly apparel, together with curling of hair, is here forbidden by name : nor is there any restriction made, either here, or in any other fcripture. Whoever therefore fays, "There is no harm in these things," may as well fay, there is no harm in stealing, or adultery.

2. There is fomething peculiarly observable in the manner, wherein both St. Peter and St. Paul fpeak of these things. "Let not your adorning (fays St. Peter) be that outward adorning; but let it be the ornament of a meek and quiet fpirit." The latter claufe is not added barely to fill up the fentence, but with ftrong and weighty reason. For there is a direct contrariety (as little as we may fulpeft it) between that outward, and this inward adorning : and that, both with regard to their fource, and with regard to their tendency. As to their fource, all that adoming forings from nature; a meek and quiet spirit from grace: the former, from conforming to our own will, and the will of man; the latter from conformity to the will of God. And as to their tendency. nothing more directly tends to deftroy meeknefs and quietnels of fpirit than all that outward adorning, whereby we feek to commend ourfelves to men, and not to God. For this cherifhes all those passions and tempers, which overthrow the quiet of every foul, wherein they dwell.

3. " Let

((37))

s. u Let them adom themfelves, faith St. Paul, not with curling of hair, or with gold, pearls, or coffly apparel, but (which becometh women profelling godlinels) with good works." The latter claule is here likewife added for plain and weighty realons. For a. That kind of adorning cannot fpring from godlinefs, from either the love or fear of God, from a defire of conforming to his Will, or from the Mind which was in Chrift Jelus. 2. It no way tends to increase godlinels; it is not conducive to any holy tomper. But g. It manifestly tends to deftroy feveral of the tempers most effential to godlineis. It has no friendly influence on humility; whether we aim at pleafing others or ourfelves hereby. Either in one cafe or the other, it will rather increase pride or vanity, than lowliness of heart. It does not at all minister to the feriousnels, which becomes a finner born to die. It is atterly inconfiltent with fimplicity: no one uses it merely to please God. Whoever acts with a fingle eye, does all things to be feen and approved of God; and can no more drefs, than he can pray, or give alms, to be feen of men.

1

ł

ß

¢

e

b

ł

3

)

ł

A. "O! but one may be as humble in velvet and embroidery, as another is in fackcloth." True : for a perfor may wear fackcloth, and have no humility at all. The heart may be filled with pride and vanity, whatever the raiment be. Again; women under the yoke of unbelieving parents or hufbands, as well as men in office, may, on feveral occasions, be constrained to put on gold or costly apparel. And in cafes of this kind, plain experience thews, that the baleful influence of it is fulpended. So that, whenever it is not our choice, but our crofs, it may confilt with godlinels, with a meek and quiet fpirit, with lowline's of heart, with christian leriouine's. But it is not true, that any one can chule this from a fingle eye to pleafe God; or, confequently, without fultaining great lofs, as to dowlinefs and every other christian temper.

5. But however this be, can you be adorned at the fame time with coftly apparel, and with good works? works? That is, in the fame degree as you might have been, had you bestowed less cost on your anparel? You know this is impossible : the more you expand on the one, the lefs you have to expend on the other. Colline's of apparel, in every branch, is therefore immediately, directly, ninewitably deftructive of good works. You fee a brother, for whom Chrift died, ready to perifh for want of needful clothing. You would give it him gladly; but alas! "It is corban, whereby he might have been profited." It is given already, not indeed for the fervice of God, not to the treafury of the temple; but either to pleafe the folly of others, of to feed vanity, or the luft of the eye in yourfelf. Now, (even fuppose these were harmless tempers, yet) what an unspeakable loss is this, if it be really true, that " every man shall receive his own reward, according to his own labour!" If there is indeed a reward in heaven for every work of faith, for every degree of the labour of love !

2dly. 1. As to the advice fubjoined, it is eafy to obferve, that all those smaller things are, in their degree, liable to the same objections as the greater. If they are gay, showy, pleasing to the eye, the putting them on does not spring from a single eye to please God. It neither flows from, nor tends to advance a meek and quiet spirit. It does not arise from, nor any way promote real, vital godlines.

2. And if they are in any wite costly, if they are purchased with any unnecessary expense, they cannot but, in proportion to that expense, be destructive of good works. Of consequence, they are destructive of that charity, which is fed thereby; hardening our heart against the cry of the poor and needy, by inuring us to shut up our bowels of compassion toward them.

3. At leaft, all unneceffary expences of this kind, whether fmall or great, are fenfelefs and foolish. This we may defy any man living to get over, if he allows there is another world. For there is no reward in heaven for laying out your money in ornaments, or costly apparel: whereas you may have In eternal reward, for whatever you expend on carth.

4. Confider this more closely. Here are two ways propoled of laying out fuch a fum of money. I may tay it out in expensive apparel for myfelf, or in necessary cloathing for my neighbour. The former will please my own eye, or that of others; the latter will pleafe God. Now suppose there were no more harm in one than in the other, in that which pleases man, than in that which pleases God : is there as much good in it? If they are equally innocent, are they equally wife? By the one, I gratify the defire of the eye, and gain a pleafure that perifhes in the using: by the other, I gain a larger thare of those pleasures that are at God's tight hand for evermore. By the former, I obtain the applaufe of man; by the latter, the praile of In this way, I meet with the admiration of God, fools: in that, I hear from the Judge of all, "Well done, good and faithful fervant | Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

5. Brethren, whatever ye are accounted by men, I would not have you fools in God's account, "Walk ye circum[pettly, not as fools, but as wife?" not in those ways which God may poffibly forgive, (to put things in the most favourable light;) but in those which he will cortainly reward. "In wickedness be ye children flill; but in understanding be ye men." I want to see a visible body of people, who are a standing example of this wisdom; a pattern of doing all things, great and small, with an eye to God and eternity.

IV. 1. But we may be affured, the wildom of the world will find out abundance of objections to this. Accordingly, it is objected, first, "If God has given us pleatiful fortunes, if we are placed in the higher ranks of life, we must act fuitable to our fortune. We ought then to drefs according to our sank, that is, in gold or coftly apparel." Not to milift, that more of you are of this rank, I answer, where is this written? Our Saviour once occafionally faid, Behold, they who wear gorgeous (fplemdid) did) apparel, are in king's courts: but he does not fay, they ought to be even there; he neither enjoins, nor countenances it. And where is this either enjoined or allowed by him or any of his apostles? Bring me plain, foriptural proof for your affertion, or I cannot allow it.

2. " But did not God give express command by Mofes, that fome even among his chosen people should be adorned in the most exquisite manner, with gold and precious ftones and coftly array?" Indeed he did : he expreisly commanded this with regard to Aaron, and his fucceffors in the high priefthood, But to this I answer first, this direction which God gave, with regard to the Jewish high-priest, can certainly affect no perfon in England, unlefs the Archbishop of Canterbury. "And I apprehend, he does not plead the precedent. Secondly, the Jews and we are under different dispensations. The glory of the whole Molaic dispensation was chiefly visible and external : whereas the glory of the christian dispensation is of an invisible and spiritual nature. 99 3590

3. " But what then, are gold and precious flongs for? Why have they a place in the creation?" What if, I fay, I cannot tell? There are abundance of things in the creation, which I do not know the ule of, What are crocodiles, lions, tigers, fcorpions for? Why have fo many poilons a place in the creation? Some of them are for medicine: but whatever they are for, they are certainly not to be uled in fuch a manner as God has expressly forbidden.

4. "But if they were not thus adorned, kings and generals would be defined by their subjects and foldiers." Supposing they would that is nothing to yest for you are neither kings nor generals. But it is absolutely certain, they would not, if they were not defined on other accounts. If they are valiant and wife, they will never be defined for the plainness of their dress. Was ever general or king more effected or beloved by his subjects and foldiers, than king Charles of Sueden? And the fure sure, he wore no gold or costly apparel, not for much as a common officer.

١,

1

t

2

.2

Ł

1111

X

71.

Ľ

G

.54

:::

27

(1

30

ПŚ

ie

5

x

r٠

3

s

5. "But if all men were to drefs like him, how would tradefmen live ?" I answer, 1. God certainly confidered this, or ever he gave these commands. And he would never have given them, had he not secn, that if they were universally observed, men in general would live better than they otherwife could ; better in this world, as well as that to come. But, 2. there is no danger at all, that they should be univerfally obferved. Only a little flock in any civilized nation will observe them, till the knowledge of God covers the earth. ' 3. If those who do observe them, employ the money they thus fave in the most excellent manner, then a part of what before only ferved to fat a few rich tradefmen for hell. will fuffice to feed and clothe and employ many poor, that feek the kingdom of heaven. 4. And how will those tradefmen themselves live? They will live like men, by honeft labour, most of whom before live like fwine, wallowing in all gluttony and fenfuality. But, 5. This is all mere trifling. It is only a copy of your countenance. For it is not this, it is not a regard to trade, or the good of the nation, that makes you difobey God. No: it is pride, vanity, or some other finful temper, which is the real caule of these linful actions.

6. "But we cannot carry on our own trade without dreffing like other people." If you mean only conforming to those cultoms of your country, that are neither gay, nor coffly, why fhould you not " drefs like other people?" I really think you fhould. Let an Englishman dreis like other Englishmen; not like a Turk or a Tartar. Let an English woman drefs like other English women ; not like a French woman or a German, But if you mean "conformity to them in what God has forbidden," the answer is ready at hand. If you can't carry on your trade without breaking God's command, you must not carry it on, ' But I doubt the fact :- I know no trade which may not be carried on by one who ules plain and modest apparel. I fear, therefore, this this too is but a copy of your countenance: your love these things, and therefore think them necesfary. Your heart carries away your judgment; if you were not fond of them, you would never dream of their necessity.

7. In one fingle cafe thefe things may be neceffary, that is, unavoidable; namely, that of women who are under the yoke of felf-willed, unreafonable hufbands or parents. Such may be confirmined to do in fome degree, what otherwife they would not. And, they are blamelefs herein, if 1. They use all possible means, arguments, intreaties, to be excused from it; and when they cannot prevail, s. Do it just fo far as they are confirmed, and no farther.

V. 1. And now, brethren, what remains, but that I befeech you, who are not under the yoke, who are under God, the directors of your own actions, to fet. prejudice, oblinacy, fashion aside; and yield to; feripture, to reason, to truth. Suppose, as some affirm, you acted on no higher motive than to pleafe me herein, I know not that you would have need to be ashamed; even this you might avow in the face of the fun. You awe fomething to me : perhaps it is not my fault, if ye owe not your fouls also. If . then you did an indifferent thing only on this principle, not to give me any uncalinefs, but to oblige, to comfort me in my labour, would you do much amifs ? How much more may you be excuted in doing what I advile, when truth, realon and, fcripture advise the fame? When the thing in question is not an indifferent thing, but clearly determined by God himfelf?

a. Some years ago, when I first landed at Savannak in Georgia, a gentlewoman teld me, "I asfureyou, Sir, you will see as well-dreft a congregation on Sunday, as most you have seen in London." I did for and foon after I took occasion to expound those for prures which relate to drefs, and to prefs. them freely upon my audience, in a plain and close application. All the time that I afterward ministered at Savanach, I faw, neither gold in the church, ner costly apparel. But the congregation in general was almost almost constantly cloathed in plain, clean linen or woollen.

1 3. And why should not my advice, grounded on fcripture and reason, weigh with you as much as with them? I will tell you why, 1. You are furrounded with the faints of the world, perfons fashionably, reputably religious. And these are constant opposers of all, who would go farther in religion than themfelves. Thefe are continually warning you against running into extremes, and striving to beguile you from the fimplicity of the gospel. 2. You have near you still more dangerous enemies than these, Antinomians, whether German or Englifh: who when any christian practice is enforced, come in with the cuckoo's note, "the law, the law;" and while they themfelves glory in their fhame, make you ashamed of what should be your glory. 3. You have fuffered by falfe teachers of our own, who undermined the doctrine you had received : negatively, in public, by not infifting upon it, by not exhorting you to drefs as perfons profelling godlineis : (and, not to speak for a chriftian duty, is in effect to fpeak against it :) and pofitively, in private, either by jefting upon your exactnels in observing the scripture-rule, or by infinuations, which if you did not mind them then, yet would afterward weaken your foul.

ĸ

8

1 ۵

i¢

C

d

18 )$ í

1 0

2

i

4. You have been, and are at this day in perils among falle brethren : I mean, not only those of other congregations, who count strittnefs all one with bondage; but many of our own; in particular thole, who were once clearly convinced of the truth; but they have finned away that conviction themfelves, and now endeavour to harden others against it : at least, by example : by returning again to the folly, from which they were once clean efcaped. But what is the example of all mankind, when it runs counter to fcripture and reafon? I have warned you a thousand times not to regard any example, which contradicts reason or scripture. If it ever should be (pray that it may not be; but if it ever should) that I or my brother, my wife, or his.

R

bis, or all of us together, fhould fet an example contrary to feripture and reason; I intreat you, regard it not at all; still let feripture and reason prevail.

5. You who have paffed the morning, perhaps the noon of life, who find the fhadows of the evening approach, let a better example to those that are to come, to the now-rifing generation, With you the day of life is far spent : the night of death is at hand. You have no time to lofe: fee that you redeem every moment that remains. Remove every thing out of the way, be it ever to fmall (though indeed gay or coftly apparel is not fo) that might any ways obstruct your lowlines and meekness, your feriousness of spirit, your single intention to glorify God, in all your thoughts and words and actions. Let no needlefs expence hinder your being in the highest degree you possibly can, "rich in good works; ready to distribute, willing to communicate," till you are clothed with glory and immortality.

Our carcales will foon fall into the duft; then let the furvivors adorn them with flowers. Mean time let us regard thole ornaments only, that will accompany us into eternity.

6. You that are in the morning of your days, either your form is agreeable, or it is not. If it is not, do not make your perfon remarkable; rather let it lie hid in common apparel. On every account, it is your wildom to recommend yourfelf to the eye of the mind: , but especially to the eye of God, who reads the fecrets of your hearts, and in whole light the incorruptible ornaments alone are of great price. But if you would recommend yourfelf by drefs, is any thing comparable to plain neatness? What kind of perions are those, to whom you could be recommended by gay or coftly apparel? None that are my way likely to make you happy: this pleafes only the filliest and work of men. At most, it gratifies only the filliest and worlt principle in those who are of a pobler charader.

7. Eo

To you, whom God has intrusted with a mere ng form, those ornaments are quite needlafs,

** The adorning thee with for much art Is but a borbarous fluil; *Tis like the poifoning of a dart, Too apt before to kill."

۱

ł

6

ri i

15

•

٥

í

3

1

That is, to exprefs ourfelves in plain English, without any figure of poetry, it only tends to drag them fafter into death everlasting, who were going fast enough before, by additional provocations to lust, or at least, inordinate affection. Did you actually defign to raife either of these, in those who looked upon you? What ! while you and they were in the more immediate prefence of God? What profaneness and inhumanity mixt together ! But if you defigned it not, did you not forefee it? You might have done fo without any extraordinary fagacity.--"Nay, I did not care or think about it." And do you fay this by way of excuse? You featter abroad arrows, freerands and death; and do not care or think about it !

8. O let us walk more charitably and more wifely for the time to come! Let us all east aside from this very hour, whatever does not become men and women professing godlines; whatever does not spring from the love and fear of God, and minister thereto. Let our feriousnels shine before men, not our drefs : let all who fee us, know that we are not of this world. Let our adorning be that which fadeth not away, even righteousness and true holinels. If ye regard not weakening my hands and grieving my spirit, yet grieve not the Holy Spirit of God. Do you alk, "But what shall I do with the gay or costly apparel, and with the ornaments I have already? Must I suffer them to be lost? Ought I not to wear them now I have them?" I answer, there is no loss like that of using them; wearing them is the greatest loss of all. But what then shalt thou do with them? Burn them rather than wear them; throw them into the depth of the fea

fea. Or if thou canft with a clear confcience, fell them, and give the money to them that want. Bug buy no more at the peril of thy foul. Now be a faithful fteward. After providing for those of thine own houshold things, needful for life and godlines, feed the hungry, clothe the naked, relieve the fick, the prisoner, the ftranger, with all that thou haft. —Then shall God clothe thee with glory and honour, in the presence of men and angels: and thou shalt "shine as the brightness of the firmament, yea, as the stars for ever and ever."

¥

N. I S.

. . :

Digitized by Google

.

- 1.11
- 1

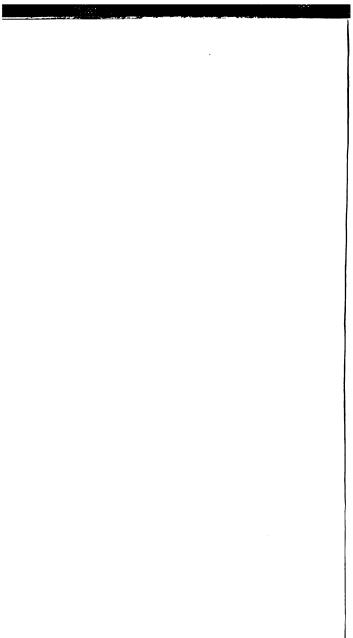

.

.

Digitized by Google

Digitized by Google

PRESERVATION SERVICE

SHELFMARK 1607/592

THIS BOOK HAS BEEN MICROFILMED (1995) RPI MICROFILM NO SEE ESTC

