
This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google™ books

<https://books.google.com>

State University of Iowa Libraries

BT15
W37
v. 2

Arthur Hubert Couratin.

UNIVERSITY OF IOWA

3 1858 028 316 762

Date Due

CAT. NO. 23 233

PRINTED IN U.S.A.

THE WORKS

OF

THE REV. DANIEL WATERLAND, D.D.

FORMERLY

MASTER OF MAGDALENE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE, CANON OF WINDSOR, AND ARCHDEACON OF MIDDLESEX.

TO WHICH IS PREFIXED A REVIEW

OF THE

AUTHOR'S LIFE AND WRITINGS,

BY

WILLIAM VAN MILDERT, D.D.

LORD BISHOP OF LLANDAFF.

THIRD EDITION, WITH COPIOUS INDEXES.

IN SIX VOLUMES.

VOL. II.

OXFORD:

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

M. DCCC. LVI.

20 21 22
23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42
43 44 45 46 47 48
49
50 51 52 53 54
55 56 57 58 59 60
61
62
63
64
65
66
67 68
69
70 71 72 73
74
75 76
77 78
79 80 81 82 83
84
85 86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100

BT 15
W 37
V. 2

CONTENTS

OF

THE SECOND VOLUME.

EIGHT SERMONS, IN DEFENCE OF THE DIVINITY OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST, PREACHED AT THE LADY MOYER'S LECTURE	Page 1
AN ANSWER TO DR. WHITBY'S REPLY, RESPECTING HIS BOOK ENTITLED DISQUISITIONES MODESTÆ	197
THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION CONSIDERED	259
A SUPPLEMENT TO THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION CONSIDERED	311
A SECOND VINDICATION OF CHRIST'S DIVINITY, OR A SECOND DEFENCE OF SOME QUERIES RELATING TO DR. CLARKE'S SCHEME OF THE HOLY TRINITY.....	365
AN ANSWER TO THE POSTSCRIPT	765

EIGHT SERMONS

PREACHED AT

THE CATHEDRAL CHURCH OF ST. PAUL,

IN DEFENCE OF THE

DIVINITY OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST;

UPON THE

ENCOURAGEMENT GIVEN BY THE LADY MOYER,

AND AT

THE APPOINTMENT OF THE LORD BISHOP OF LONDON.

WITH A PREFACE,

Containing Remarks upon two late Pamphlets : one entitled, " Modest " Plea, &c. Continued &c." the other, "Unity of God not inconsistent " with the Divinity of Christ, &c."

TO THE RIGHT REVEREND FATHER IN GOD, JOHN,
LORD BISHOP OF LONDON,

AND

ONE OF THE LORDS OF HIS MAJESTY'S MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL.

MY LORD,

THE following Sermons, drawn up and preached under your Lordship's influence, in defence of that ancient faith which you have so seasonably and signally supported, have a natural claim and title to your Lordship's patronage. Their design is to shew, that we follow not mere human decisions, or words of men, as hath been slanderosly reported, but the infallible word of God; to which we appeal from the sentence and determination of any fallible men whatsoever. Nevertheless, it is great satisfaction to us to observe, that the Scripture evidences of our doctrine have, in all ages of the Church, appeared so full and clear, that the generality of wise and good men could not fail of coming into them. We think it no discredit, but a great advantage to our doctrine, that it is ancient and Catholic. If this be all that some mean, by objecting to us human decisions, we do not only acknowledge it, but glory in it. It has been the method of the wisest and best men, since the date of Christianity, to prefer express Scripture, or certain consequences from Scripture, before merely human and philosophical conjectures. Human but well grounded decisions have served to beat down the pride and vanity of human and ill grounded conceits: and hence it is that the faith of the ever blessed Trinity has constantly, and will, I trust, finally prevail over all opposition from men, whose strength and confidence is not in Scripture, but in vain philosophy; not in the word of God, but in I know not what dark and blind metaphysics, the words of men.

I gladly embrace this opportunity of joining in the public thanks to your Lordship, for the late memorable instance of your truly primitive and episcopal zeal against the adversaries of our common faith. The attempt to introduce, by a private authority, new forms of doxology, in opposition to those now in use, which are of long standing and great authority in the Church of Christ, is justly abhorred by all that have the honour of our blessed Lord and of our common Christianity near at heart. To ascribe all glory to the Father, in contempt of those other forms which give glory to all the three Persons, is too plainly declaring in facts what is disowned in words; and is laying aside that modesty in practice which is pretended in principle. It was high time to give a check to such dangerous innovations; and to warn your faithful Clergy against such scandalous abuses. Present and future generations will be obliged to your Lordship for your pious cares and wise endeavours in this behalf; and for so eminent an example of an unshaken firmness in those principles which alone can make our Church glorious or kingdom happy. From which should we ever be so infatuated and abandoned as to start or swerve, (which God forbid,) we should, from being the purest and most justly celebrated Church in the world, become the meanest and the most contemptible of any, (if we could still be called a Church;) should expose ourselves inevitably to the just wrath and vengeance of Almighty God, and to the scorn and derision of all the Churches around us. That these and the like dangers and mischiefs may be effectually prevented or turned away from us, is the hearty prayer of,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most obedient and most humble Servant,

DANIEL WATERLAND.

P R E F A C E.

THE following Sermons may be looked upon as a Supplement to my Vindication of Christ's Divinity, before published. I intended them as such, avoiding repetition of the same things as much as I well could: or where I could not avoid bringing up again the same arguments, I have endeavoured to give them some further light or strength; for the most part, enlarging upon what had been before but briefly hinted. I have entirely omitted the argument from worship, because I had distinctly and fully treated of it under Queries sixteenth and seventeenth. Some other arguments I have passed over, purely because I had not room for them. Those which I have taken and considered appear to me of as great weight as any; and more than sufficient to justify our belief in Christ Jesus as a Divine Person, coequal and co-eternal with God the Father.

In my Vindication, &c. I was chiefly upon the offensive, against the adversaries of our common faith, demanding of them some clear and good proof of their pretensions in this momentous controversy; since they had hitherto produced nothing considerable enough to move any wise and good man to forsake that faith which has so long and so universally obtained, and with such visible marks of a Divine power accompanying it. They that undertake to alter the fundamental and universally received articles of the Christian faith, which may be traced up to the very infancy of Christianity, or as high as any records reach, ought to be well provided with reasons and arguments to make good such big pretences: otherwise they do but render their cause ridiculous, and expose their own vanity. The presumption will always lie (especially in a point of this moment, in which it can hardly be supposed that God would ever have suffered his Church to be so long, so universally, and so lamentably deceived) on the side of prescription and long possession: and nothing less than clear and evident demonstration can have weight sufficient to bear up against it. This therefore is what I had reason to insist upon, and what I still demand of our new guides, if they hope to prevail any thing with considering men. I may further demand of them to propose some other scheme opposite to the Catholic, and to clear it at least of all considerable objections. For if it appears that there are but three schemes, in the main, Arian, Socinian, and Catholic, one of which must be true; and that the two former are utterly repugnant to, or can neither of them be shewn to be consistent with, the whole Scripture taken together; it will follow that the third is the true one, unless Scripture be inconsistent with itself; which is not to be supposed. This way of proving our point, though indirect, is notwithstanding just and solid; provided we can make it appear that neither the Arian nor Socinian (or what is nearly the same, Sabellian) hypothesis can tolerably account for several Scripture texts. But I have, in the following Sermons, chose, for the most part, to proceed more directly, giving the direct Scripture proofs of what has so long and so universally prevailed; that it may be seen that we have a great deal more than prescription or possession to plead for our principles. They are founded in the infallible word of God, fixed and riveted in the very frame and constitution of the Christian religion. If our proofs of this, merely from Scripture, appear but probable, they are yet more and better than can be produced, merely from Scripture, for the contrary persuasion: and if what appears but probably to be taught in Scripture itself appears certainly to have been taught by the primitive and Catholic Church; such probability, so confirmed and strengthened, carries with it the force of demonstration. Not that I think our Scripture proofs to be barely probable, though our cause would not suffer even by that supposition. I think them as clear and as strong as should be expected or desired in any case of this nature: and I know not whether the Scripture proofs of the Divinity, even of God the Father, his eternal, immutable, necessary existence, his omniscience, omnipresence, and other Divine attributes, might not be eluded and frustrated by such subtilities and artifices as are used to elude the Scripture proofs of the Divinity of God the Son.

It must however be allowed, that in all manner of controversy which depends upon interpretation of dead writings, he that undertakes to prove a point, or to establish a doctrine, lies under this disadvantage; that, as long as there appears any possibility of a different interpretation, an adversary may still demur, and demand further evidence. Now, considering the great latitude and ambiguity of words and phrases, in all languages, (if a man would search into all the senses they are possibly capable of,) and that even the most full and express words may be often eluded by having recourse to tropes and figures, or to some other artificial turn of wit and criticism; I say, considering this, there may be always something or other plausibly urged against any thing almost whatever: but more especially if the point to be proved be of a sublime, mysterious nature; then, besides the advantage to be taken of words, there is further ground of scruple or cavil from the thing itself.

And here the objector has much the easier part, as it is always easier to puzzle than to clear any thing; to darken and perplex, than to set things in a good light; to ask questions, than to answer them; to start difficulties, than to solve them. In a word, it is easier for the objector to shew his own ignorance, and perhaps the other's too, than it is for either of them to be perfectly knowing, and able to extricate a subject out of all perplexity and doubtfulness. Hence it is that both Arians and Socinians have, for the most part, been content to object against the Catholic scheme, having talents very proper for it, but they seldom undertake to defend and clear their own: or if they do, they soon see reason to repent it. When the Socinian is to prove that Christ is a man only, or an Arian that he is a creature, and that Scripture can bear no other possible interpretation, they come off so indifferently, and with such manifest marks of disadvantage, that they do but expose themselves to the pity or derision of their adversaries.

It was proper to observe this, in order to give the common reader a just idea of the state of the present controversy, and of the method and management of the controvertists, on either side. The way to judge rightly, either of it or them, is to compare things carefully together, and to observe how they perform their several parts; which are reducible to these three: 1. To prove and establish their own tenets; 2. To disprove those of the adversaries; 3. To object to, or weaken, the adversary's proofs.

For the purpose: what have the Catholics to produce from Scripture in proof of their principles? And what has either an Arian or Socinian to produce in proof of his? Take their evidences together, set them fairly one against another, and then judge of them. What have the Catholics to urge in order to disprove the Arian or Socinian scheme? And what again has either Arian or Socinian to plead in order to confute the Catholic doctrine? Let these respectively be balanced one against another, and let the impartial examiner judge which has the advantage upon the comparison. Lastly, let it be observed what the Catholics have to say, to weaken the proofs brought either for the Arian or Socinian hypothesis; and again, what the Arian and Socinian has to plead, to invalidate the proofs brought for the Catholic persuasion. Upon the whole, I may remark, that the most difficult task of all is to establish a doctrine: the next hardest is to disprove or confute any tenet; because that, in some cases, (where one of the two must be true,) is establishing the contrary: the lowest and easiest part of all is to object against the adversary's proofs, or to puzzle a cause among weak readers.

These things being premised, I may now proceed to take notice of two late pamphlets, wrote by way of Answer to my Vindication of Christ's Divinity. The first of them, indeed, is very modestly and properly called, An Answer to Dr. Waterland's Queries, otherwise, Modest Plea &c. Continued, by an anonymous hand. I was surprised at it, because the Queries had received an answer long ago; and the world expected an answer to my Defence, not a new answer to the Queries. I will not say that the author was in hopes the common reader might not distinguish between an Answer to the Queries and an Answer to the Defence, but might be indifferently content with either; nor that he thought he might the more easily triumph over the Queries, after he had exposed them again naked and stripped of their guards and fences: I am unwilling to believe an author of any name or character, (as this seems to be,) could have any such low aims and little views as those mentioned. But I must observe, that the author, in his performance, is religiously observant of his title: for he brings up frequently the very same pretences which I had fully, largely, and distinctly answered in my Defence, without taking the least notice of what I had said: for his intent was not to answer my Defence, it seems, but my Queries. Whether this be a proper method to clear a dispute, and to do justice to common readers, I leave to any man to judge. But I am promised, in an advertisement at the end, a large and particular answer to my Defence, &c. which I shall wait for with great impatience, being desirous of nothing more than to see this controversy fairly and thoroughly discussed on both sides. In the meanwhile, I shall content myself with a few remarks upon this late Answer to my Queries, not thinking myself obliged to go so far out of my way, as to draw up any more particular reply to a nameless writer, and one who does not appear to have any desire or design to have the point distinctly debated and cleared; but only to throw a mist before the readers, and to fence off all fair trial or examination.

1. I must observe, that the author does not offer any particular scheme, for fear, I suppose, of being called upon to defend it. Yet if he at all knows what he is doing, or what he is aiming at, it is the Arian scheme or none he has taken up with. There are but three possible suppositions of God the Son, considered as a real distinct Person. Either he is a man only, which to say is Socinianism; or he is more than man, but yet a precarious dependent being, depending as much on the will of the Father as any creature whatever, and consequently a creature; which to say is Arianism, and the whole of Arianism, however variously expressed or differently disguised: the third supposition is, that the Son is necessarily existing, uncreated, and properly Divine, which is the Catholic doctrine.

Now this writer is evidently no Socinian nor Sabellian; and from the whole tenor of his performance it is plain he is no Catholic, in the sense before given : it remains only that he is either an Arian, or else hangs between two, floating and fluctuating between Catholic and Arian ; which is the most favourable opinion that can be conceived of him.

2. As this writer pretends not to maintain any particular scheme opposite to the Catholic doctrine, so it may be observed, that he constantly avoids coming to the pinch of the question between Catholics and Arians. He never so much as attempts any the least proof of God the Son's being a creature ; never undertakes to justify creature worship ; never endeavours to clear the Arian scheme of the difficulties which I had charged it with in several places of my Defence, vol. i. and particularly in p. 556. where I summed up the principal of them under five heads. He is so far from this, that he commonly turns opponent, though he had undertaken the part of respondent ; and by his deep silence, in respect of the most considerable difficulties, seems tacitly to allow that they are not capable of any just and solid answer. I had asked only a plain question, that I might come to the point in hand, "whether the same characteristics, especially such eminent ones, can reasonably be understood of two distinct beings, and of one infinite and independent ; the other dependent and finite ?" Qu. 6. This gentleman desires to be excused from saying one word of dependent or independent ; and calls it an invidious insinuation, to mention a syllable of finite and infinite, p. 13. This was coming to the question, and therefore the point was not to be touched. He runs off, and talks, somewhat confusedly, about some prime, greatest, incommunicable perfection, (objecting only, when it was his business to respond,) not telling me whether he means it of necessarily existing, or only of unbegotten. If he means it of the former, making necessary existence and self-existence the same thing, then I shall tell him, that he has no manner of ground for supposing that that perfection is not common both to Father and Son : and if that be also Dr. Clarke's notion of self-existence, I shall then observe, that the Doctor's propositions (particularly his 5th, 12th, 14th, 19th, 23rd,) are not so innocent as this writer would represent them, but are unscriptural, false, and dangerous. If he means it of unbegotten, I shall leave him to prove, at leisure, what real perfection, beyond a relation of order, or mode of existence, is contained in it. In the mean while, what becomes of the Query, which demanded a clear and determinate answer, whether the Son be finite or infinite, whether his existence be precarious, or independent on the will of any ? A direct answer to this would soon have let our readers into the main debate, to be tried by Scripture, reason, and antiquity. I give this instance only for a specimen of the author's manner of evading and shifting, whenever he comes to the pinch of the question : the reader will observe many more such, in the perusal of the whole pamphlet. It is very plain then, that this writer never means to give us an opportunity of confuting his principles, if they happen to be contrary to ours; because he cares not to own them, however invited or provoked to it. The most that he aims at is the safest, lowest, meanest part of a disputant, who happens to have a cause which he dares not confide in; and that is, to object, cavil, and find fault with something which he likes not, without ever so much as offering any thing better in its stead, or submitting what he has to propose to the examination and judgment of the learned.

3. It is worth observing what this writer says to the two main points in debate between the Catholics and the Arians, viz. the consubstantiality and eternity of God the Son. He speaks indeed of Dr. Clarke; but I suppose he, at the same time, gives us to understand what his own sentiments are. "There is nothing in any of the Doctor's assertions, but what holds equally true upon all (the possible) hypotheses concerning either the metaphysical substance or eternity of the Son," p. 29. "All his propositions are equally true and certain both from reason and Scripture, whatever the substance, and how unlimited soever the duration of the Son be," p. 67. See also p. 23, 24, 27, 28, 43, 51.

It is some satisfaction to us, that, as this gentleman pretends not to hold any scheme of his own, so neither does he attempt to confute ours. All that we insist on and contend for may be true and right, for any thing he has to say to the contrary; which is very obliging, especially considering that he speaks both for Dr. Clarke and himself. For though we have no reason to apprehend any thing from the Doctor's arguments, yet his very name and character may do our cause harm, among many, if it be thought that he has declared plainly against us. This writer charges me with "palpable and direct calumny," p. 28, for saying that Dr. Clarke every where denies the consubstantiality. Softer words might have done as well, in one that professes "not to render evil for evil, nor railing for railing." I had certainly no intention to calumniate the Doctor; I gave my reasons for what I said, which have not been answered; I did not lay any thing to his charge more than what the Country Clergyman, and Mr. Emlyn, and several others, who are thought the Doctor's friends, believed of him as well as I. I will not say what may be pleaded to make good the charge, from the Doctor's own books, from the whole drift and tenor of them, besides many particular passages, and what from this very piece wrote in his defence; nor how unaccountable his whole conduct relating to this controversy is on any other supposition; nor how needless it is to prove what hardly friend or foe makes any doubt of. Let it be so, that the Doctor has neither directly nor by necessary consequence denied either the consubstantiality or eternity. I am more willing to have it thought that the charge is false and groundless, than this author imagines ; and gladly take this opportunity of acquainting the world that the Doctor has less to say against the received doctrine than was once believed of him. I am always very averse to representing any man worse than he really is, especially such a man as Dr. Clarke, who may be a credit to our cause, as soon as it appears that he does not really differ from us.

I am very unwilling that any man of sense and learning should be thought an Arian, (Arians generally have been men of a different character ;) and if it can be made appear either that the Doctor never was such, or has ceased to be such, upon further views, (his own good sense leading him at length out of it,) I shall very heartily rejoice at it, and acknowledge my mistakes or misrepresentations with infinitely greater pleasure than I could ever be supposed to make them. If the Doctor has really denied no consubstantiality that either the Ante-Nicene Fathers or the Council of Nice intended, (as this author says he has not, p. 27, 28.) I am very glad of it, and desire no more than that the Doctor do sincerely acknowledge the same, and abide by it : and I hope that those who pretend to have the Doctor's authority to countenance them in their opposition to the received doctrine, (the same which the Ante-Nicene Fathers and Council of Nice taught,) will take special notice of it. What is it then that the Doctor and we differ about ? This author will tell us : the Doctor's " three hundred texts " were brought to prove a subordination, not in mere position or order of words," &c. p. 40. " The Son must be subordinate to the Father " in real order of nature and dignity, and not in mere position of words," p. 29. " The subordination of the Son——is not a subordination merely " nominal, consisting (according to Dr. Waterland) in mere position or order of words——but it is a real subordination of the Son to the Father, " in point of authority and dominion over the universe. This is the " main, the true and only point," &c. p. 57, 58. Let us see then, if this main, this true and only point can be any way adjusted between us : for we are very desirous to have the learned Doctor on our side, as nearly as possible ; or if he must be against us at last, the less the better, both for him and us. Perhaps the Doctor is with us in the main, only has happened unfortunately to mistake our principles ; which is a very usual thing with disputants in most controversies. If he has the same notion which this author has, that Dr. Waterland makes the subordination to consist in " a mere position or order of " words," it is a mistake indeed ; and I cannot but wonder at his peculiar fancy. I always intended, always spoke of a real subordination : but then I considered the strict force and propriety of the word subordination, implying a difference of order only, while the nature is supposed equal. We do not say that things of a lower kind are subordinate, but inferior, to those of an higher. Brutes are not subordinate, but inferior to man; and creatures are not (in strict propriety) subordinate, but inferior to God. I allow all that is really, truly, and strictly subordination; excepting against nothing but inferiority, (which is more than subordination,) and division of substance, such as is between two human persons acting subordinately one to the other. But of this matter I had declared my mind fully and distinctly in my Defence, vol. i. p. 442, and therefore wonder the more, how I came to be so strangely misunderstood by this writer. If the Doctor will be contented with a real subordination, (admitting no inferiority, no inequality of nature,) he and I need not differ. But if he carries the point one tittle further, I desire to know what sense or meaning he can possibly have in it, without making the Son of God a creature: which if he does, I hope I shall no longer be charged with calumny; and that the Doctor will think himself obliged, not to say, or to insinuate it only, but to prove it (if possible) from Scripture, reason, or antiquity. There will be no occasion to stand upon any nicety of expression. We shall apprehend his meaning, if he pleases only to say plainly, that the Son is not necessarily existing; which may be a softer way of saying, that he is a precarious being; which is another phrase for creature. The Modest Pleader, indeed, has spoke out^a; and a certain gentleman that calls himself a seeker after truth, and pretends to be in Dr. Clarke's interest, says, in the name of the whole party, that they are not backward to express their denial of Christ's necessary existence; but that they avowedly maintain, with the most ancient Fathers, (that is, so far as he knows any thing of the Fathers,) that the Son is not necessarily existing^b. Had Dr. Clarke not been backward in saying this, or had he avowedly and plainly maintained it, it would have saved us some trouble: and I must then have insisted upon it, from that single consideration, that every tittle of what I charged him with was just and undeniable. He does indeed drop something very like it, (Reply, p. 230, 231.) but if that be really his meaning, (which however I charge him not with,) and if his propositions are to be interpreted accordingly; this author does very ill in pretending, that I have not attempted to refute the Doctor's principal propositions, when my whole book is directly levelled against that very tenet; and is (if I do not too much flatter myself) a full confutation of the Doctor's principal propositions, supposing he meant necessarily existent by self-existent. I was once of opinion (but let it pass for conjecture only) that the Doctor, having a mind to introduce the Arian heresy, thought to do it obliquely; not by calling the Son a creature, which is gross, but by denying his necessary existence^c, which comes to the same thing : and yet this was to be done covertly, under the name of self-existence ; a word with two faces, one to oblige friends, the other to keep off adversaries. But this may be my fancy only. One thing however I must observe, that if the Doctor has any design against the necessary existence of the Son, he has not so much as one single text of Scripture to help him in it. He must be obliged to the Fathers, (whose verdict nevertheless he will not stand to,) even for so much as a colour to his pretences ; as appears by his seventeenth proposition, which stands only on the authority of Fathers ; though it is the most to his purpose of any that he has, and seems to come the nearest to the point in question. It will not be difficult to disable him from doing any thing with the Fathers : I have, in a great measure, obviated his pretences that way in my Defence of Query the eighth. It will be easy to shew, that none of the Fathers looked upon God the Son as a precarious being, but asserted his necessary existence. This is certain and manifest even of those very Fathers who speak of a voluntary generation. We are not indeed to expect the word necessary existence, (a school term, and none of the most proper,) but the thing we shall find, in other words, fully and clearly asserted. This writer tells me (p. 15.) that I have not been able to produce one single passage out of any one Ante-Nicene Father, wherein the Son is affirmed to have emaned, or been emitted by necessity of nature. He might have said likewise, that I could not produce any one Post-Nicene Father affirming the Son to have emaned, or been emitted by necessity of nature : that is, they never express it in those terms. Ἀνάγκη in the Greek, and necessitas in the Latin, had not the same sense which the word necessity bears, when we say that God exists by necessity of nature. It shews but small acquaintance with ecclesiastical language, for Dr. Clarke to understand by ἀνάγκη φυσικῆ, and φύσεως ἀνάγκη, (Script. Doctr. p. 252, 253.) the same that we understand by necessity of nature. The Fathers understood by it outward coaction, force, or compulsion ; and what we express by necessity of nature, they expressed by the word nature : e. g. God is by nature good, he exists, or is God, by nature, (φύσει, or κατὰ φύσιν.) generates a Son by nature, and so on, in opposition to necessity, which (in their sense) could not be ascribed to God at all^d. Such as denied the Son's existing by necessity of nature,

^a Modest Plea, &c. p. 17, 217.

^b Second Letter to Dr. Mangey, p. 27.

^c This very artifice was made use of by the ancient Arians, who being ashamed to call the Son a creature, contrived to say the same thing, in other words, by denying his necessary existence. Πῶς οὐ δέκνεται τούτων ἡ πολυκέφαλος πανουργία ; ὅτι κατασχυνθέντες ἐπὶ τῷ λόγῳ ποίημα καὶ κτίσμα, καὶ οὐκ ἦν πρὶν γεννηθῆναι τὸ θεοῦ λόγος, ἀλλως πάλιν κτίσμα λέγουσιν αὐτὸν εἶναι, βούλησιν προβαλλόμενοι, &c. Athanas. Orat. iii. p. 610.

^d Vid. Athan. p. 611. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. cap. 9. p. 540. Damasc. de Fid. Or. theod. lib. iii. cap. 14. p. 221. Hilar. de Synod. p. 1184. Basil. contr. Eun. ii. p. 56, 57. Cyrill. Theasaur. p. 53. August. de Trin. lib. xv. p. 993. Epiph. Ancorat. n. 51.

See some other references in Petavius would, for the same reason, have denied likewise that God exists by necessity of nature. Necessary generation, (as we call it,) they expressed generally by Christ's being God by nature, or a Son by nature. Upon the whole, we may leave the Doctor either to give up the Fathers, or to abide by their authority, just as he pleases. If he gives them up, he has not one text of Scripture for his main position, (supposing it his, that the Son is not necessarily existent: if he abides by the authority of the Fathers, they are, when rightly understood, plainly against him, (as may be easily made appear,) and can do him no service. But I return to the writer of the pamphlet.

4. He is pleased, in his Preface, to condemn the method which I have taken in this controversy. But, I suppose, little regard is to be had to the judgment of an adversary, who will be apt to condemn such a method as he was most afraid of, and commend such as might be most advantageous to his own cause. The method which he has chalked out for me is as follows. Either,

1. "To shew that Dr. Clarke had mistaken or misinterpreted all, or "at least the principal texts of Scripture which he has cited." Or,

2. "To examine the truth of all, or the principal of his propositions."

I have, in effect, done this, though in my own method. But, however, the gentleman should consider, that many of the Doctor's comments and propositions are purely wide and foreign to the dispute; excepting only that the more pernicious an error is, so much the more necessary is it to mix a great deal of truth with it, to make it go down with the readers. Many more of the Doctor's comments and propositions are general or ambiguous, looking two ways; having properly no one meaning, because no determinate meaning. Such being the case, I took the short and plain way, which is always the best when a man has a cause he can confide in: and that was, to cut off impertinences, and to come to the main question, laying all the stress there. Whatever I met with, in the Doctor's books, that appeared to make the Son of God a creature, or a precarious being, or not necessarily existent, (for these are all the same, without any difference, more than lies in the syllables,) I endeavoured to confute; and I hope I have done it. The learned Doctor may now open himself; or he may let it alone if he pleases: it matters not what his tenets are, provided the true Catholic tenets be preserved and maintained. If he had any ill meaning in his comments or propositions, I have used my best endeavours to prevent any ill effects it might have among some readers:

de Trin. lib. vi. cap. 8. p. 343. As to Ante-Nicene Fathers, if some of them supposed the generation, or προέλευσις, of the Son to be properly voluntary, yet all of them supposed his existence to be necessary, (as we call it,) and expressed it in such terms as they expressed the necessary existence of the Father by.

if he had not, I am very glad of it, and have done no more than explained his doctrine for him to an orthodox sense; which he ought himself to have done long ago, if he really had no design against the Catholic received doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity. But enough of this.

I must here take notice of this gentleman's doctrine about worship; though it be rather obscurely intimated, than plainly expressed: the innuendo way of writing, as I take it, is the art of imposing upon the vulgar, at the same time preventing, as much as possible, the examination of the learned. All worship, he says, should "be to the glory of " God the Father," (p. 57.) Who doubts it? I hope the worship of the Son is to the "glory of God the Father:" why then does this writer find fault? or what is it he has a mind to say, and is afraid to speak out, "to the glory of God the Father?" Has he some secret and reserved meaning? So it seems, or else it will be very hard to make out the pertinency or consistency of his observations. He directs us (p. 64.) "to worship uniformly the one God, the Father Almighty, even " our Father which is in heaven, through the intercession of his only " Son our Lord Jesus Christ, in the manner the Scripture directs." Do not all Churches, and our own in particular, do it uniformly and in the manner the Scripture directs? What is it then that the writer aims at? I could perhaps point out what it is that offends him. Is it not either that direct worship is paid to the Son at all; or that the Son is worshipped as God? But sure the author is not so rash or inconsiderate, as to advise us to any such dangerous innovation in worship, either to leave out the Son entirely, or not to worship him as God. What could a professed Eunomian or the rankest Socinian desire more? Can Dr. Clarke, (for, I suppose, he speaks for the Doctor and himself too,) can Dr. Clarke desire this? He that has not yet determined either against the consubstantiality or eternity of God the Son: he that has only a few scruples about subordination, (owing to his mistake of Catholic principles, and his not attending to strict propriety of language,) hardly in the main differing from us, if this writer's pretences be real and sincere; would he have us ungod the Son in our practice, even before we see reason to alter our principles? or must we strike Christ's Divinity out of our public service, before we do it out of our articles of faith? It will be time enough for the Doctor to give this advice, after he has declared plainly against the eternity and consubstantiality of the Son; after he has not only declared against them, but disproved them, which he can never do; after he has made it as clear as the sun, that the Christian world have been in an error, have been idolaters, from the beginning downwards to this day. It is poor pretence to say that we are "not to build any practices, wherein the “ worship of God is immediately concerned, upon metaphysical speculations, not mentioned in Scripture,” p. 64. The Divinity of Christ is a Scripture truth, as much as the Divinity of the Father; and one is no more a metaphysical speculation than the other. Besides that it is strangely improper and absurd to call these principles pure speculations, which are of so great importance for the regulating our worship, that we can neither omit to worship Christ, if they are true, without the greatest impiety; nor perform it, if they are false, without being guilty of idolatry. In short, there is no sense in what this writer here says, but upon the supposition that Christ is really a creature; and that the dispute only were whether a creature might, in any forced improper sense, be said to be eternal, or consubstantial; which indeed would be both a fruitless and an impertinent speculation, after giving up the whole point in debate. But it is further pretended (p. 65.), that we “ should confine ourselves to the clear and uncontroverted expressions “ of Scripture concerning them (the Son and Holy Spirit) and the “ honour due unto them; and this is undoubtedly, upon all possible “ hypotheses, right and sufficient in practice.” But let this writer tell us, whether, in his opinion, every thing controverted is to be set aside, or only what is justly controverted. The former would come properly enough from a Deist, who will make Scripture itself a controverted point; and an Atheist would still go further. Let this gentleman shew that the Divinity, or direct worship of Christ is justly controverted: till he has done this, he has said nothing. It is ridiculous to tell us, (if that be his meaning,) that to worship the Father only, leaving out the Son and Holy Ghost, is sufficient, “ upon all possible hypotheses;” when upon the hypothesis that all the three Persons are one God, (which is something more than an hypothesis,) no one of the Persons can be entirely omitted without manifest iniquity and impiety. It is in vain to think of any expedients in this affair, while our doctrine stands unconfuted. There is no room left so much as for a neutrality, in the present case. For I will be bold to say, and bound to make it good, that, all circumstances considered, there can be no reasons sufficient to make a man neuter in this point, but what would be sufficient to determine him on the opposite side.

I shall here take leave of this writer, having occasionally remarked upon some passages of his, by way of note to my Sermons; and designing, God willing, to consider every thing material (if I have here omitted any thing) hereafter; when I am favoured with a large and particular answer to my Defence of some Queries.

There is another writer who, in a sixpenny pamphlet, has drawn his pen against me. It is entitled, The Unity of God not inconsistent with the Divinity of Christ: (nominal Divinity he means:) being Remarks on the Passages in Dr. Waterland's Vindication &c. relating to the Unity of God, and to the Object of Worship.

The author is a grave, sober writer; and ingenuously speaks his mind, without any doublings or disguises. It is a satisfaction to any man, who has no concern for any thing but truth, to have such an adversary to deal with; for then it is soon seen what we have to do. Much time, much trouble, much wrangling is saved: we presently enter into the merits of the cause, for the ease and benefit of the reader. This writer takes the Arian hypothesis: for he supposes the Son to have been a distinct Spirit (p. 7.); to have been God's instrument in the creation (p. 26.); not to be true God (p. 34.); to have been ignorant of the day of judgment, considered in his highest capacity, i. e. as the second Person of the Trinity (p. 8.) Having seen his drift and design, let us next examine his performance. He does not undertake to shew that the received doctrine cannot be true; or that his own (i. e. the Arian) must be true; one of which I might reasonably have expected of him, since he pretends to have drawn up an answer to the main parts of my Vindication &c. But he is content to shew (so far as he is able) that his doctrine may be true, notwithstanding one or two arguments which I have made use of against it. In a word, he undertakes to prove that some of my arguments against Arianism are not conclusive. With what success, I come now to shew; after taking notice to the reader, that, supposing he had really done what he intended, it does not follow that the Arian doctrine must be true, nor that there are not arguments enough to prove it cannot be true; but only that I have used an argument or two, which alone are not sufficient for my purpose. One considerable objection against the Arian scheme is, that it stands in opposition to the first and great commandment; introducing two Gods, and two objects of worship; not only against Scripture, but also against the unanimous sense of the Christian Church from the beginning, and of the Jewish Church before; which together are the safest and best comment we can have upon Scripture. This is one considerable objection, among many, against Arianism; and is what this writer has undertook to answer. He applies himself particularly to the English and unlearned reader, (p. 4.) whom he hopes to satisfy; the rather, I suppose, because the argument is learned, and must lose much of its force and strength on our side, when stripped of its additional advantages from history and antiquity: besides that the unlearned reader (especially in this controversy) may be easily imposed upon by little turns and fallacies; such as have been tried, and examined, and despised, long ago, by those that have been thoroughly read and conversant in these matters. But to proceed to what I design, by way of remark upon this writer and his performance : the sum of what he pretends to is contained in the following particulars :

1. That we have no sufficient grounds for charging the Arian doctrine with the belief or worship of two Gods.
2. Nor for our own doctrine that Father and Son are one God.
3. That we have no certain warrant for appropriating every kind and degree of religious worship to God alone.
4. That mediatorial worship may be due to Christ, though not true God, or supreme God.
5. That Dr. Waterland has, in effect, given up the main of what the Arians contend for.

These several particulars (containing his sense, though, for brevity and perspicuity, expressed in my own words) must be examined in their order.

1. He pretends, first, that we have no sufficient grounds for charging the Arian doctrine with the belief or worship of two Gods. He has a particular fancy of his own, that the phrase two Gods signifies two supreme independent Gods, p. 32. And that a supreme God and a subordinate God are not two Gods, p. 34. I shall, first, examine his reasons for this ; and, next, endeavour to convince him that it is neither true in itself, nor would answer his purpose, if it really were true.

He observes, from Matt. vi. 24. that two masters do not there mean a supreme and a subordinate master, but two coordinate or independent masters, p. 32. He could not have pitched upon an instance less to his purpose. It may appear somewhat harsh to put God and mammon so much upon the level, as to suppose them two coordinate or independent masters : but, waving that, it is very plain that the text is meant of two opposite or disagreeing masters, whether coordinate or subordinate. If two coordinate masters agreed perfectly together, it would be as easy to serve both as one. If this text be any rule for the common way of speaking, two coordinate or independent masters (provided they were but wise enough and good enough to agree constantly in every thing) could not be justly called two masters. The Trinitarian Tritheists, if there be any such, will, I suppose, be very thankful to our author for this discovery. Upon the hardest supposition that can be made, the doctrine of the Trinity, upon these principles, will stand perfectly clear of Tritheism : so that if the author has any way served his own cause, he has at the same time been extremely kind to his adversaries. But what hinders this text from being at all serviceable either to one or the other is, that the expression here, in St. Matthew, is somewhat particular and unusual ; and can by no means be made a rule of speech, against the more general and current use of language.

This writer endeavours, next, to find some instances of a sovereign and a subordinate king, which together were not, or are not, two kings. He instances in David and Solomon; who were not, that I know of, each of them a king at the same time. He proceeds farther to the instance of Pharaoh and Joseph; that is, of a king and no king: and he instances in a king of Great Britain and a lord lieutenant of Ireland; that is, again, a king and no king: so hard a matter is it any where to meet with two that are kings, and yet are not two kings.

He observes, next, that "one Saviour, one Master, one Potentate, "one Father, one Lord, one Shepherd, &c. signify one supreme Saviour, "Potentate, Master, &c. and so two Gods must necessarily signify two "supreme Gods," p. 33. But, for any thing he knows, "one Saviour, "one Master, one Potentate, &c." may as well signify one heavenly, or one adorable, or one necessarily existent Saviour, Master, Potentate, &c. one, in some distinguishing, emphatical sense, whatever it be; yet not excluding what essentially belongs to that one. Our blessed Lord is one Lord, (1 Cor. viii. 6.) and yet I hardly believe our author will construe it one supreme Lord, or one Lord in the highest sense. He is also our Saviour, emphatically and eminently so styled; yet this writer will not from thence conclude that he is supreme Saviour, and all others (suppose the Father himself) subordinate to him. This author therefore has taken a very uncertain and fallible rule for the interpreting of emphatical appellations. Besides that if one God signifies one supreme God; then, since all but the supreme God are excluded from being Gods, in any religious sense, the consequence is, that an inferior God is no God; not that a supreme and an inferior God (were they really each of them a God) are not two Gods. This gentleman then, we see, is very far from proving his point. We may, in the next place, consider, whether it be not capable of a clear confutation.

I had before argued that one God and another God make two Gods, or else one of them is no God, contrary to the supposition: which reasoning is so plain and strong, that I thought it might be trusted with the meanest reader. But this serious gentleman (I know not why, except it be that he is not used to consider this controversy) suspects it all to be banter, p. 36. I will offer one argument more, which perhaps may take with him. The Pagans, though they professed generally (as is well known to the learned) one only supreme God, looking upon all the rest as subordinate ministers of the one supreme, yet stand charged with Polytheism by the Jews, by the ancient Christians, by the common consent of mankind. Thus Jupiter and Mercury (though one was supposed a subordinate minister of the other) were, by the Lycaonians, spoken of in the plural number as gods; that is, two gods, Acts xiv. 11, 12. And this has been the common way of speaking in all writers I have met with, sacred or profane, ancient or modern.

But what if the customary usage of language had been otherwise? does this writer imagine that the dispute is only about a name? If the changing of a name would set all right, I do not know any man of sense that would contend about such a trifle. To extricate this matter, Polytheism may be considered either in a stricter or a larger sense: it may either signify the belief of more Gods than one, in the proper sense of necessarily existing, supreme, &c. (in which sense there have been few, very few Polytheists; the Pagans themselves, generally, were not Polytheists in this sense;) or it may signify the receiving more Gods than one, in respect of religious worship, whatever opinion of those Gods they may otherwise have. It is this kind of Polytheism which the first commandment has chiefly respect to: and it is the same that Pagans, Arians, and Socinians, stand justly charged with. Should any man alter the name, the thing would be the same still. For suppose we should not call it Polytheism, it would not appear at all the better under the name of idolatry; which it really is, as well as Polytheism. I must observe farther, that though the Arians or Socinians, or other such Polytheists, do not believe in two supreme Gods, and so, in that respect, are not speculative Tritheists, or Ditheists; yet by paying worship, religious worship, (the incommunicable honour due to the supreme God only,) to two Gods, they do by construction and implication, though not in intention, make two supreme Gods; and consequently are practical Ditheists, at least, even in the highest and strictest sense of Ditheism.— Thus much may suffice for the first particular. This author has not cleared the Arian doctrine from the charge of receiving two Gods: nor, if he had, would his cause be at all the better by changing the name from Polytheism, or Ditheism, to that of idolatry. Not to mention that, upon his principles, it is the easiest thing in the world for the Catholics, admitting a subordination of order, to get perfectly clear of Tritheism, which is the grand objection*: besides that, in his way of explaining the exclusive terms, the Catholics will easily answer every text he can bring to prove the Father only to be the true God: for it is only saying that he is so emphatically, or unoriginately, and the Son may be true God and necessarily existing notwithstanding: so that if this writer has at all weakened one of our arguments against the Arians, he has, at the same time, very kindly cut the sinews of all, or however of the most considerable arguments of the Arians against us; and so has really disserved his own cause, more than he has served it.

* Just and wise is the reflection of a judicious Father on this head, in the following words: Μήτε τὸ τῆς τριθείας ἔγκλημα αἰσχυρῶς, ἕως ἂν καὶ ἄλλοι κινδυνεύη τὴν διθεῖαν. ἢ γὰρ συνέλυσας, ἢ συνηπόρησας, ἢ ὁ μὲν ἐναυκάγησε μετὰ τῶν

λογισμῶν καὶ θεότητα, σοὶ δὲ παρέμεινε θεότης, καὶ εἰ ὁ λόγος ἠσθένησε, κρείσσον καμῆν ἐν τοῖς λογισμοῖς μετὰ τῆς ἀγγελίας τοῦ πνεύματος, ἢ προσχείρωσ ἀσεβῆσαι, τὴν βαστάσθην διώκοντα. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxiii. p. 422.

2. The second particular which I propose to examine is, his pretence that “we have not sufficient grounds to conclude that Father and Son are one God.” He does not undertake to examine or confute all we have to urge upon that head: but so much only as we urge by way of proof^f of Christ’s Divinity. We are used to plead thus: the Father is God, and the Son God, and yet God is one: therefore Father and Son are one God. This is the argument (though rather too briefly expressed) which he labours to confute for many pages together. We are now to see how he has performed.

He observes that God is the only Saviour, Othniel also a Saviour; and yet God and Othniel are not one Saviour, p. 17. Again, God only is holy, a Bishop must be holy; and yet God and a Bishop are not one holy being, p. 19. God only is Master, some men are masters, and yet God and an earthly master are not one master. These things he delivers seriously, without the least air of banter; and goes on, in the simplicity of his heart, with the like instances to the number of twenty-eight, as he observes, p. 30. I am very willing to take his word without counting them; nay, and to add two or three more to the number. For God is one, and Moses was God; and yet God and Moses were not one God. God is one, and the Devil is God, (2 Cor. iv. 4.) and yet God and the Devil are not one being. Angels are gods, and magistrates gods; and yet God with his angels, or with magistrates, does not make one being. This is so plain, that even the Trinitarians (blind as they are thought) both see and confess it: which had the author considered, he might have saved himself some trouble, and as much waste of time. The short of the case is this: Though there be gods many, and lords many, yet there is but one God and Lord to be honoured with religious worship: now Christ is God and Lord, in such a sense as to be honoured with religious worship; therefore Christ is the one God. The premises I have proved in my Defence, vol. i. Qu. 16, 17. The conclusion makes itself. This is the Catholic argument, which I leave the gentleman once more to exercise his thoughts upon; desiring him, particularly, to answer my reasons against any inferior or subordinate, but adorable Gods. I easily perceive now, why he did not understand a plain question which I asked: Where did the Scripture give any intimation of two true Gods? See what he says to it, p. 34. I know but one God that is to be worshipped;

^f N.B. Every argument which proves Christ to be God in the strict sense, proves him to be the one God, since God is one. But in that way Christ’s Divinity is presupposed; and his being the one that one God is the true God; more adorable Gods than one are, by necessary construction and implication, more true Gods.

God inferred afterwards. The argument from worship proceeds differently, proving Christ to be God in the strict sense, because he is the one true adorable God.

3. The third particular which this writer insists upon (in sense, I mean, not in terms) is, that we have no sufficient warrant for appropriating all kinds and degrees of religious or divine worship to the true God only. Here indeed lies the very pinch of the argument. For if all religious worship be not appropriate to the one true God, the Arians (so far as I apprehend) are not justly chargeable with idolatry or Polytheism for worshipping a creature; neither is our argument from worship alone sufficient to prove that Father and Son are one God. I have (in my Defence, vol. i. Qu. 16.) shewn at large, that all acts of religious worship are, in Scripture, appropriated to the one true God, in opposition to creature-worship. I have to Scripture added the concurring sentiments of the primitive Christians. I might have added the sentiments likewise of the ancient and later Jews to the same purpose; which, however, the reader may find collected in Dr. Cudworth's. This argument has been learnedly and accurately handled by many great men (particularly by Bp. Stillingfleet) against the Papists. As the point is of great concernment, so the evidence appears every way answerable to it. Greater or stronger proofs cannot be expected, or reasonably desired, in a thing of this nature, than express Scripture, confirmed by the concurring sentiments both of the Jews before Christianity, and the Christian Church from the beginning; not to mention what may be farther pleaded from the nature and reason of the thing itself. This writer, on the other hand, has little or nothing of weight to oppose to such a cloud of witnesses. He does indeed give us his own sentiments, or rather wishes: for if you ask for proof, he has none. He first falls to conjecture (p. 39.), how he thinks this matter of worship might stand: that is, supposing he had had the direction of an affair, which an all-wise God has took into his own hands. He tells us how it might be reasonable (that is, supposing he is wise enough to dictate to God) to ask pardon of Christ, or any other blessings, and to thank him for them upon his hypothesis, i. e. supposing Christ to be no more than a creature. All this is only guessing, presumptuous guessing. P. 52. he lays down his whole doctrine concerning worship in these three particulars: 1. That all our worship terminate upon the one supreme God. 2. That it be not offered to other Gods; any farther than our worshipping of them is really a worshipping of him, as redounding to his glory. 3. That it be not offered to other Gods, (that is his sense,) any farther than the supreme God has commanded.

1. As to the first rule, it is groundless and insignificant. Groundless, because he can produce no Scripture proof of it. We can easily shew that God alone is to be worshipped: where is it said that all worship, whether offered to God or creatures, must terminate upon God? He pleads (p. 51.) that the priests serve the tabernacle, (Heb. xiii. 10.) which service of theirs terminated upon God. But let him shew that servng there bears such a sense, as when we are said to serve God; or that the priests worshipped the tabernacle; and then the instance may appear more to the purpose. He pleads farther, that though we are to serve God only, yet we are allowed to serve others also, p. 51. Therefore, I suppose, though we are to worship God only, yet we may be allowed to worship others also. But when we are ordered to serve God only, religious service, not every kind of service, is intended; which religious service is not to be paid to creatures, Rom. i. 25. not to those that "by nature are no Gods," Gal. iv. 8. Having shewn then that this first rule of our author's is groundless, I must next observe that it is trifling and insignificant. The very Papists and Pagans, in their grossest idolatry or image-worship, keep up to this rule. They terminate, at least intentionally, all their worship upon the one supreme God.

• Cudworth, Intellect, Syst. p. 465, &c.

2. This gentleman's second rule for worship is, that it must not be offered to other Gods, any farther than our worshipping of them is really worshipping of the supreme God, as redounding to his glory. But who can assure us that any worship of the creature is really worshipping of God; or that it does or can redound to God's glory? Are we better judges of what is properly the worshipping of God, or of what is most for his glory, than God himself is? If this gentleman can prove that any creature-worship is really the worshipping of God, or that it redounds to God's glory, he will then do something. I mention not, that both Popish and Pagan idolaters pretend, that all their worship is really the worshipping of the one supreme God, and redounds to his glory. But Divine wisdom seems to have fixed the affair of worship upon quite another foot, as it were on purpose to cut off all such pretences of men, wise in their own conceits.

3. The last rule laid down by this writer is, that worship be not offered to others, any farther than the supreme God has commanded. This is a safe and a good rule; and I wish that this gentleman, and such others, would abide by it. It is evident from the whole tenour of Scripture, that God has not only not commanded, but absolutely prohibited, all creature-worship; and laid it down as a fundamental rule, that God alone is to be worshipped, because he is God, in opposition to all that do not stand possessed of those excellencies and perfections which belong to God. If therefore this rule be good, as it certainly is, all creature-worship is for ever precluded by it. I proceed to, torial worship may belong to Christ, though not true God, or supreme God. But he has not proved that there is any such thing as mediatorial worship, distinct from Divine. If Christ our Mediator is worshipped, it is because he is God as well as man, a Divine Mediator. This writer cannot prove that Christ's mediatorial office is the ground and foundation of the worship which we are commanded to pay him: but it may, on the contrary, be proved that it is not. As to what he pretends from John v. 22, 23. I refer the reader to my defence of Qu. 19. vol. i. which this gentleman should have answered, instead of repeating an old objection. As to Phil. ii. 9, 10, 11. I refer to my fifth Sermon, and to my defence of Qu. 18. vol. i. p. 189, &c. where I shew that these and the like pretences are calculated only for the Socinian hypothesis, and come very absurdly from the pen of an Arian. As to Rev. i. 5, 6, and v. 12. I refer to my Defence, vol. i. p. 195, 196. which this gentleman has attempted to answer in part, but has not done it. I had said, "that the essential dignity of Christ's Person is really the ground and foundation of honour and esteem, (and consequently of worship, the highest expression of both,) which ought always to bear proportion to the intrinsic excellency of the object," (Defence, vol. i. p. 196.) To this he replies, "that if we take worship to signify prayer and thanksgiving, then my assertion is plainly false: for the essential dignity of Christ's Person is not the ground on which his title to prayer and thanksgiving is founded." To which I rejoin, that prayer and thanksgiving, considered merely under the notion of asking a favour, or giving thanks for it, (as this gentleman seems to understand them,) do not suppose any Divine excellency in the person we ask of, or give thanks to: for we may ask a favour of a man or an angel, present with us, and give thanks to them for what they have done. But prayer and thanksgiving, in the religious sense, considered as acts of worship, suppose Divine excellency in the object we address to, God having commanded all worship, properly such, to be paid to God alone, making it thereby incommunicable to any creature. In a word then, prayer and thanksgiving, under one consideration, are founded in kindnesses to be received, or already received: but considered as parts of religious worship, they carry in them the same significancy which sacrifice or any other instance of religious worship does; are outward marks and expressions of that honour which belongs to God only, and are therefore founded in the essential dignity of the person to whom this honour is paid. This writer observes justly enough, (p. 43.) "that there would be no obligation either to prayer or thanksgiving, if God did not exercise a providence over the world; and "from thence he infers, (p. 44.) that God's government of the "world is the foundation of this kind of worship." This may be true, in a certain sense, and very consistent with what I had said, according as prayer and thanksgiving may be taken under different conceptions. I considered them under such precise formality, as expressions or marks of honour : and that my reasoning was just, is capable of being proved, even with the evidence of demonstration. I shall make it out distinctly, step by step, as follows. There is no reason why I should esteem or think any thing thus or thus excellent, but because it really is so ; therefore the intrinsic excellency of the thing is the sole foundation of all just value or esteem. Inward honour is a mental acknowledgment of that esteem which I have of, or bear towards, the thing so esteemed, and consequently rests upon the same foundation : worship, considered as an outward expression or mark of that honour, (as it must be considered when once appropriated to the one only greatest and most excellent Being^h.) rests upon the same foundation that the honour does : prayer and thanksgiving, considered as parts of religious worship, (and consequently as marks and expressions of that highest honour, which is appropriate to the greatest and best of Beings,) has the same foundation which all worship has ; that is, which honour has ; that is, which esteem has ; that is, the intrinsic excellency of the object : which was to be proved. There is no answering this, but either by denying prayer and thanksgiving to be parts of religious worship ; or by shewing that all worship is not appropriate to God. Thus far I have proceeded in observing, that this writer has not been able to make good his position, that the worship of Christ is founded on his mediatorial office. The contrary may be proved from two plain reasons :

4. A fourth particular maintained by this writer, viz. that media-

1. That the only Scriptural foundation of any religious worship is the Divinity of the person to be adored, in opposition to all creature-worship ; as I have formerly proved in my Defence, &c. vol. i. Qu. 16. And it is worth observing, how naturally and how easily this falls in with the commands to worship Christ ; since the same Scriptures, which declare him to be adorable, describe him also as God ; and, together

^h I shall endeavour to illustrate this matter for the sake of common readers. We read in Daniel, chap. vi. of a law made that no petition should be offered to any one for thirty days, save to the king only, under pain of high treason. By that law petitions, for such a time, were appropriated to the crown, became ensigns of royal dignity and majesty, and acknowledgments of sovereignty in the person to whom they should be offered. Should any subject, for that time, have made a petition to any but the king, and have pleaded that the person to whom he made it was capable of obliging him, and upon that foundation (the sole foundation of all petitions) he had petitioned him ; he would presently have been told, that the receiving a petition was a privilege of the crowns, and went along with the throne ; that there could not now be any legal foundation for it, but the royalty of the person to whom it should be offered. Now, put for royalty, Divine perfections ; and for petitions, religious prayer and thanksgiving ; which are appropriated, not for thirty days, but for ever, to God ; and it will appear that the only lawful foundation of religious prayer and thanksgiving, considered as parts of worship, is the Divinity, i. e. the intrinsic excellency of the object.

with the name, ascribe to him likewise those Divine perfections which make up and form the idea signified by so august and venerable a name.

2. That the mediatorial office will cease at the day of judgment, and therefore cannot be the foundation of that worship which will continue beyond it; even for ever and ever, as Christ's worship will. See Rom. ix. 5. Heb. xiii. 21. 1 Pet. iv. 11. 2 Pet. iii. 18. Rev. i. 5, 6. v. 12, 13.

This gentleman demands of me a plain Scripture text, where it is said that Christ is to be worshipped as being God, equal to the Father. But to this I answer, that Scripture supposes men to have common sense; and therefore when Scripture has laid down one only rule and foundation of worship, and it appears from the same Scripture that Christ is to be worshipped; there is no need of any thing farther, the rest follows of course. Besides, that though Scripture has not in express terms said that he is to be worshipped on that particular account; yet, since Scripture has asserted the equality of the Son to the Father, in more places than one, and his right to worship too; a very little logic will suffice to shew what relation these two things must have to each other.

5. A fifth particular maintained by this writer, though it concerns myself more than the cause, I am now to take notice of. "Dr. Water-land," he says (p. 54.), "has, in one passage, given up both points" (viz. that the Son is God in a lower sense of the word God, and is to be worshipped only as Mediator) "to us." But where have I said either, or any thing like it? I have given nothing up, that I know of, which can do this writer, or his cause, any service. I have said, that the Father is primarily and eminently God, Creator, and object of worship: which he may be, without supposing him to be God in any higher or any different sense of the word God, Creator, &c. A different manner or order of existing or operating may, in many cases, be sufficient to ground an emphasis upon, (as might be proved by plain instances,) without recurring to a higher and lower sense of the words. As to the allowing of a subordination, it is so far from inferring a lower sense of the word God, &c. that, in strict propriety of speech, it implies the contrary; as I have before observed more at large.

Having thus examined and answered the most material pretences which this writer insists upon in favour of Arianism, or in opposition to the Catholic doctrine, I might now take my leave of him. But it may be proper first to say something to a pretended contradiction, which not only he, (p. 6.) but the Modest Pleader also, (p. 48.) has been pleased to charge me with; as it is usual with many to think every thing contradictory which they cannot readily reconcile.

My words are, (Defence, vol. i. &c. p. 248.) “ Each divine Person “ is an individual intelligent agent : but as subsisting in one undivided “ substance, they are all together, in that respect, but one undivided “ intelligent agent.” This, they tell me, is to say, that three persons are one person. But, if they please to think again, they will find it is no more than saying, that person, and undivided intelligent agent, are not reciprocal. Undivided or individual intelligent agent, like the phrase individual being, may admit of a stricter and a larger sense. When this writer is able to fix a certain principle of individuation, he may then perhaps have something of colour for the charge of contradiction. See this matter more distinctly and fully explained in my Defence, &c. vol. i. p. 122.

I have detained my reader long enough, I fear too long, in the Preface. But I was willing, having this fresh opportunity of appearing in public, to take some notice of those two pamphlets, (the only ones that deserved it,) which had objected to my Vindication of Christ's Divinity, vol. iv. If I have, either through haste, or through a desire of brevity, slipped over any thing of real weight, or that may create any scruple or difficulty with impartial and considering men ; I shall, when apprised of it, (if God permit,) carefully and fully examine and discuss that, and whatever else falls within the compass of what I have undertaken, namely, the point of Christ's real Divinity, in opposition to the pretended Divinity maintained by the Arians.

I should just observe to the reader, that some of the Sermons, as they appear in print, are somewhat longer than when preached. The three last especially are so, which I was obliged to shorten in the preaching, passing over several pages, for fear of keeping the audience too long. Some notes I have here and there added at the bottom, since the Sermons were delivered ; though much the greater part were prepared before. I thought it very proper to intermix all along with Scripture the testimonies of the ancients, as the best comments upon it. The reader will be the better satisfied in having a view of both together ; and our adversaries may perhaps see cause to abate of their unreasonable and unaccountable boasts that way, when it appears from so many plain and clear proofs, that their pretences to antiquity are groundless, and their faith novel as it is false.

I cannot here forget to mention my obligations to the Reverend Dr. Knight, of St. Sepulchre's, London ; whose great learning and judgment are equal to his singular modesty and ingenuity ; and to whose judicious observations it is owing, that the following Sermons appear more correct, and may, I hope, be more useful, than they would otherwise have been.

Christ God in the strict and proper sense :

OR

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

ASSERTED

FROM JOHN I. 1.

The first Sermon preached Sept. 9, 1719.

JOHN i. 1.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God.

SAINT John the beloved Disciple, the undoubted author of this Gospel which bears his name, was the youngest of the Apostles, and survived the rest many years. He saw so much the more of the state of Christianity, and of the progress it made under two persecutions; the first by Nero, the second by Domitian. Under the latter, he himself had inevitably suffered, had not God miraculously preserved him. After this, he was banished into Patmos, a little island in the Archipelago; and, during his retirement there, was favoured in a particular manner with revelations from heaven; which he committed to writing, and left behind him for the benefit of the Church. After a year or two's exile, it pleased God to call him forth again to Ephesus, his usual seat of residence; and there he passed the short remainder of his days, being then ninety years old, in the most divine and comfortable employment; taking upon him the charge of the churches of Christ, those especially of the Lesser Asia. As there must be heresies at all times, (infinite wisdom permitting them for great ends and reasons,) so were there not wanting, even in the times of the Apostles, some denying the divinity, others the humanity of our blessed Lord, and both for the same reason; being offended at the great and unsearchable mystery of God incarnate. The tares had been sown by Simon Magus, Cerinthus, and others; and were grown up to a great height before St. John's death. This made it the more necessary for him to write his Gospel; which accordingly he undertook at the request of the bishops of Asia, and the brethren of the neighbouring provinces. But first he appointed solemn fasting and prayer for the divine blessing and assistance in it; after which being more fully instructed and more plentifully inspired, he thus began his lofty theme. "In the beginning was the WORD, and the WORD was with God, and the WORD was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made." In these few words, and those that follow in that chapter, the good Apostle has not only confuted most of the heresies then on foot, but has obviated as many as should thereafter rise up in opposition to the divinity, personality, or incarnation of the Son of God: points of the greatest concernment to all Christians, but which nevertheless (through the perverseness of men's wits, and their proneness to take wrong measures of divine things) have been a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to the disputers of this world, in former and in latter ages. This first chapter of St. John (as I said) is alone sufficient, with reasonable men, to end all disputes upon those heads. The words are plain, and the sense clear when carefully looked into; and it is for that very reason that they have been more tampered with than any in the whole Scriptures. For, when the obvious and natural meaning of a text happens to stand in the way of an hypothesis, or preconceived opinion, pains must be taken to darken the evidence, and to perplex the proofs which make against it. My design is briefly to enumerate the several interpretations which have been given of this chapter, to remark upon them as far as is needful, and to establish the only true one. They are reducible to four; which I may call Sabellian, Socinian, Arian, and Catholic. I shall explain them in their order. To begin with the first.

1. Under the Sabellian interpretation I include all that belongs to men of Sabellian principles, whether before or after the times of Sabellius, who lived about the middle of the third centure. The Sabellians deny the Λόγος, or WORD, whereof St. John speaks, to be any real or substantial thing, distinct from the Person of God the Father. They understand by the Word, either some attribute, power, or operation inherent and permanent in the Father; or else some transient voice, sound, and the like. How they came into these and the like fancies, I shall shew presently, after I have premised a few things about the name of the Λόγος, or WORD, which St. John uses. I do not design any historical account of the use of the term among Jews or Gentiles; being happily prevented, in that part, by a late excellent sermon of a very worthy and learned Prelate^a. But I must observe that the Greek Λόγος, which we render WORD, may signify either inward thought, or outward speech. And it has with good reason been supposed by the Catholic writers, that the design of this name was to intimate that the relation of Father and Son bears some resemblance and analogy to that of thought, or of speech to the mind^b. For example: as thought is coeval with the mind; so the Son is coeval with the Father^c. As thought is closely united to, proceeds from, and yet remains in the mind; so also may we understand that the Son is in the bosom of the Father, proceeding from him, yet never divided or separate, but remaining in him and with him. As to speech, it is properly the interpreter of the mind; and so, in this respect also; there is some resemblance and analogy, the Son being as it were interpreter and revealer of the unknown Father to the world^d. Some of the ancient Catholic writers^e joining both

^a Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry. Sermon before the King.

^b Λόγος δὲ ὅτι οὕτως ἔχει πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ὡς πρὸς νοῦν λόγος. οὐ μόνον διὰ τὸ ἀπαθὲς τῆς γενήσεως, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ συναφές, καὶ τὸ ἐξαγγελτικόν—Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxvi. p. 590. Vid. etiam Basil. Hom. 15. Petav. de Trin. p. 743.

^c Vid. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. p. 259.

^d Ob hoc Verbum nuncupatur, quia ex proprio divino ore processit, et nihil Pater sine eo aut jussit, aut fecit. Pseud. Ambros. de Fid. Orth. cap. vi. p. 353. ed. Bened.

Διπταται δὲ καὶ ὁ λόγος υἱὸς εἶναι παρὰ τῆ ἀπαγγέλλειν τὰ κρύφια τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκείνου, ἀνάλογον τῶ καλουμένῳ υἱῷ, λόγῳ νοῦ τυγχάνοντος· ὡς γὰρ ὁ παρ' ἡμῖν λόγος Ἄγγελός ἐστι τῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ νοῦ ὁραμένων, οὕτως ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος ἐργωκὸς τὸν πατέρα—ἀποκαλύπτει δὲ ἔγνω πατέρα. Orig. Comm. in Joh. p. 41. Vid. et Just. Mart. Dial. p. 358. Iren. lib. ii. cap. 30. p. 163.

^e Theophilus Bishop of Antioch, where he speaks of the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος and προφορικὸς (p. 129.) is thus to be understood. Tertullian, in his piece against Praxeas, has a great deal to the same purpose. Athenagoras, Tatian, and Hippolytus, though more obscurely, seem to have intended the same. And even Origen himself had adopted the like notion, as may appear from the following passages.

Ἐὰν ἐπιμελῶς ἐξετάζωμεν αὐτοῦ πά-these notions together, have considered them as applicable to the Son at different times, and in different capacities. Before the world was made, while he yet existed alone with the Father, (always including the Holy Ghost,) they supposed! he might best be compared to silent thought resting in the mind, and which in Greek is called Λόγος ἐνδιάθετος. But when he afterwards came to create the world, and to reveal both himself and his Father, then he might more properly be compared to outward speech, or a word spoken forth, which the Greeks express by λόγος προφορικός. And thus it is that the same writers sometimes speak of the Λόγος, or WORD, being both eternal, and in time: eternal in one capacity, not so in the other. For as thought must be considered previous to speech, so the Λόγος, or WORD, under one consideration might be conceived more ancient than under the other.

Thus far the Catholics, sober men, carried on the parallel; and there was no harm in it, while they kept close to the rule of faith, and within the bounds of sobriety. But the Sabellian heretics did not stop there. They pursued the parallel still farther, till they left the Λόγος, or WORD, no distinct personality. They observed that inward thought was no real substantial thing, distinct from the mind itself; and that outward speech was but a voice or sound, nothing fixed, real, and permanent: and from hence they took occasion to misinterpret the Apostle very widely; as if the WORD, which he speaks of, were nothing really distinct from the Father, not a second Person, any more than a man's thought, or word, is another person from the man. This kind of construction was openly received and propagated σας τὰς ἐπινοίας, μόνον κατὰ τὸ εἶναι σοφία ἀρχὴ ἐστὶ.—ὡς εἶπεν ἄν τινα τεθαῤῥηκότως πρεσβύτερον πάντων τῶν ἐπινοουμένων ταῖς ὀνομασίαις τοῦ πρωτοτόκου πάσης κτίσεως ἐστὶν ἡ σοφία. Orig. in Joh. p. 19.

Ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος—ἀρχὴ δὲ μετὰ μαρτυριῶν τῶν ἐκ τῶν παροιμιῶν ἀποδίδεται εἰρησθαὶ ἡ σοφία, καὶ ἐστὶ προεπινοουμένη ἡ σοφία τοῦ αὐτὴν ἀπαγγέλλοντος λόγου, νοητέον τὸν ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ, τοῦτέστι τῇ σοφίᾳ, αἰεὶ εἶναι. Orig. in Joh. p. 43. Compare p. 59.

Afterwards Origen uses an argument to prove that the λόγος has a real substance, and adds in conclusion: Ὁ λόγος—ἐν ἀρχῇ τῇ σοφίᾳ τὴν ὑπόστασιν ἔχων, p. 44. Which words are remarkable, and worth comparing with Tertullian's upon the same subject, where he says: Jam in usu est nostrorum, per simplicitatem interpretationis, sermonem dicere in primordio apud Deum fuisse, cum magis rationem competat antiquiorem haberi; quia non sermonalis a principio, sed rationalis Deus etiam ante principium, et quia ipse quoque sermo ratione consistens, priorem eam ut substantiam suam ostendat, Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. v.

by ^fPhotinus, about the middle of the fourth century; by Paul of ^εSamosata, almost a century before him; by ^hSabellius and Noëtus earlier than he; and by ⁱPraxeas still higher up, about the end of the second century; and ^jprobably by some other heretics before him. What remains of it at this day is to be met with chiefly among the Socinians; those of them, I mean, who have refined upon their master Socinus, in this particular; and are more properly Photinians, or Sabellians. A ^kcelebrated writer abroad has openly espoused this Photinian notion in part; disguising it a little under the name reason, answering pretty nearly to the heretical sense of the λόγος ἐνδιδήθετος, or inward thought: so that now the Sabellian interpretation, after the latest improvements, runs thus:

“ In the beginning was Reason, and Reason was in God, and Reason was God himself. It was in God from the beginning, before the world was: for whatever is in nature was made with the highest Reason, neither is there that single thing that was made without Reason.”

But against this, or any other the like Sabellian construction of the first chapter of St. John, many unanswerable reasons have been urged both by ancients and moderns.

1. As first, St. John does not say that the WORD was ¹Θεός, a divine Word, which might have favoured the Sabellian sense, but Θεός, God; thereby strongly denoting a real Person. A man's word, or thought, is not called man; nor would the Word or Wisdom of God be called God, if a mere attribute or operation only was intended, and not a real Person. Or if it be said, that it does denote a Person, the same Person that was before ⁱ Tertull. contr. Prax. c. vii. viii.

^f Hilar. p. 789, 1048, 1179. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 8.

^ε Epiphani. Hæres. lxxv. p. 608, 609.

^h Epiphani. Hæres. lxxv. p. 608.

^j Vid. Clem. Alexandr. Strom. p. 646. Iren. p. 130, 132, 157, 158.

N. B. The notion of a λόγος ἐνδιδήθετος and προσφορικὸς, in this heretical sense, is justly condemned by all the Fathers. Athanasius, Hilary, Basil, Ambrose, and other Catholics censured it as smartly as the Council of Sirmium, Eusebius, or the Arians. Vid. Orig. in Joh. p. 24. in Jerem. p. 184. Euseb. contr. Marc. p. 120. de Laud. Const. c. 12. Cyril. Hiero-sol. Catech. iv. c. 5. p. 50. Athanas. Expos. Fid. p. 99. Orat. ii. p. 503. Basil. Hom. xxvii. p. 602. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. cap. 7. Ignat. Epist. Interpolat. ad Magnes. c. 8. Some even of the Arians, after they came to make a distinction of a twofold λόγος, adopted, in part, this very Sabellian notion. Vid. Athanas. p. 503, 282, 260. Cyril. Alex. in Joh. lib. i. p. 30. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. c. 7.

^k Le Clerc, Comment. in Joh. i. 1.

¹ Vid. Euseb. contr. Marcel. p. 83. Tertull. contr. Prax. p. 504. Epiph. Hæres. lxxv. p. 609. Deus erat Verbum cessat Sonus vocis—Res est, non Sonus; natura, non Sermo; Deus, non inanitas est. Hilar. p. 796.

spoken of as God, in the same verse; then how can the other words stand, that he was with God? He cannot be supposed the selfsame Person with whom he was. ^m With God, plainly signifies the same as with the Father, (see 1 John i. 2.) who is God. The Apostle can never be supposed to mean that the Father was with the Father; the Word therefore, if it denotes a Person at all, must be understood of another Person. But that it denotes a Person will appear further.

2. For it is not said that the WORD, or REASON, was in God, as might be proper of an attribute, &c. but with God; which is another personal characterⁿ.

3. It is said that all things were made by the Word: which (as appears from other texts) comes to the same as to say, that the WORD made all things: which is a further confirmation that a real thing is intended by the WORD, not an attribute only^o.

4. The Apostle observes (v. 8.) of John the Baptist, that he (ἐκεῖνος) was not that Light, intimating thereby that he had been speaking of a Person before, who really was: and therefore from hence also it appears that the WORD is something real.

5. It is said, (ver. 11.) of the WORD, that "he came unto his own, and his own received him not." This is good sense, and sounds well. But to say that Reason, the attribute, came unto its own, and its own received it not, has hardly either sense or propriety.

6. The WORD is represented (ver. 14.) as the only-begotten of the Father; which again is personal. For if begotten may be a proper expression, concerning an attribute or property; yet only-begotten is not, unless God has no more attributes than one. The characters therefore being thus plainly personal, and no necessity appearing why we should have recourse to figure, the literal interpretation is undoubtedly preferable.

7. I may add, lastly, that St. John in his "Revelations" expressly applies the name of Λόγος, or WORD, to Christ Jesus. "His name," saith he, "is called the WORD of God." Rev. xix. 13.

^m Εἰ ὁ λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, οὐχ ὁ λόγος ἐστὶ πρὸς ἃν ἦν. οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ πρὸς ἃν ἦν ἐστὶ λόγος. Epiphan. Hæres. lxxv. p. 609.

ⁿ Verbum erat apud Deum. Nunquid audieras in Deo, ut Sermonem reconditæ cogitationis acciperes? — non in altero esse, sed cum altero prædicatur. Hilar. p. 796.

^o Fecit enim et ipse, quæ facta sunt per illum. Quale est ut nihil sit ipse sine quo nihil factum est? Ut inanis solida, et vacuus plena, et incorporalis corporalia sit operatus? Tertull contr. Prax. c. 7. Comp. Phœbad. p. 304.

These reasons are abundantly sufficient to convince us, that St. John intended not any attribute or operation by the WORD, but a real, living, substantial thing or person, distinct from the Father: and so the Church of Christ from the beginning has constantly understood it. So much for the Sabellian interpretation of this chapter.

2. The next that offers itself is the Socinian, properly so called; never espoused by Heretic or Catholic; never so much as thought of, at least not heard of, before the days of Socinus. He supposes St. John to have intended a real Person, by the Word, viz. the man Christ Jesus. His interpretation then is to this effect:

“ In the beginning of the Gospel, was the man Christ Jesus, “ otherwise called the WORD. He was with God, having been “ taken up into heaven before he entered on his ministry. And “ he was God, having the office, honour, and title of a God “ conferred upon him, after his resurrection. The same was in “ the beginning of the Gospel with God. All things belonging “ to the Gospel-state were reformed and renewed by him: and “ without him was there not any thing reformed or renewed.”

A construction so manifestly forced and foreign, as this is, carries its own confutation along with it. It serves only to shew what contempt the heads of a sect generally have, not only of the rest of mankind, but even of their own disciples; while they can thus unmercifully impose the wildest conceits imaginable upon them. To do the later Socinians justice, they have, I think, for the most part given up this violent interpretation; and, instead of it, have rather closed in with the Sabellian construction, which is more ingenious and plausible, and serves their hypothesis as well. Neither of them will answer to the truth of the sacred Writ: they are both no other than the device of man, and must equally come to nought.

I proceed to the Arian interpretation, which appears better than either of the former, as coming nearer to the true one: and it is for that Pvery reason the most insinuating and dangerous of any.

¶ Vinci illi vel facile possunt, vel facile vitari, quorum prima propositione omne consilium pectoris proditur. At vero hi (Ariani) quibus multa nobiscum paria sunt, facile possunt

innoxias mentes, et Soli Deo deditas, fraudulenta societate percutere, dum malorum suorum virus per bona nostra defendunt. Pseud. Ambros. de Fid. Orthodoxa, cap. i. p. 347. ed. Bened.

3. The Arian construction, invented probably before, but first openly espoused and propagated in the beginning of the fourth century, is as follows :

“ In the beginning of all things, before ever the earth or the world was made, there existed a very glorious and excellent creature, (since called the WORD,) the Oracle of God, and Revealer of his will. That excellent Person, the first whom God of his own good pleasure and free choice gave being to, was with God the Father; and he was God, another God, an inferior God, infinitely inferior; but yet truly God, as being truly partaker of divine glory then, and foreordained to have true dominion and authority in God's own time. God employed him as an instrument, or under agent, in framing and fashioning the world of inferior creatures; and approved of his services so well, as to do nothing without him.”

This is the sum of the Arian interpretation, as nearly as I could draw it, out of the most general principles of the sect. For it must be observed that there never was a sect so divided and various, so unsettled and fluctuating in their principles as they. The reason of it is this; they take a kind of middle way between Catholics and Socinians, which admits of so great a latitude, that they know not where to fix. The Catholics looking upon the Son as essentially God in one capacity, and as man in another, easily know what may be proper to ascribe to him, in this or in that respect. The Socinians believing him to be man only, can as easily come to a resolution in the particulars of their scheme. But the Arians supposing him a creature at large, and not knowing the several degrees of perfection on this side infinite, are always in uncertainty; not being able to determine how much or how little it may be proper to ascribe to the Son of God: and hence it is that they could never unite together in any one fixed and certain set of principles; but have been always wavering, various, and unconstant; and must ever be so to the world's end. But this by the way: having laid before you the Arian interpretation, nothing now remains but to offer to you the Catholic sense of this chapter, which I mean to explain, and defend; and that will be the same thing with confuting the Arian.

4. The Catholic construction, at length, is this :

“ In the beginning, before there was any creature, (consequently from all eternity,) the WORD existed; and the WORD was no “ distant separate power, estranged from God, or unacquainted “ with him, but he was with God, and himself also very God ;

 “ not another God, but another Person only, of the same nature, “ substance, and Godhead. All things were created by him, &c.”

This I presume to call the Catholic and truly primitive interpretation of the first verse of this chapter : and what time your patience will further allow me, shall be taken up in asserting and maintaining it. St. John has here called the WORD, God. In what sense, is the question. The context, and circumstances, and other collateral evidences must at length decide it. I shall first inquire,

1. What kind of idea, or notion, Scripture and Christian antiquity give us of one that is truly and really God. And

2. Shall consider what reasons we have to believe that St. John here calls the Λόγος, or WORD, God, in the same sense, or in conformity to that idea.

I. I shall inquire what kind of idea, or notion, Scripture and Christian antiquity give us of one that is really and truly God. If we trace this matter through the Old Testament, we shall find that the Scripture-notion of a Person that is truly God, and should be received as such, includes in it power and might irresistible^r ; perfect knowledge and consummate wisdom^s, eternity^t, immutability^u, and omnipresence^x ; creative powers^y ; supremacy, independence, and necessary existence^z. These are the distinguishing characters under which God was pleased to make himself known : and it is upon these accounts that he, in opposition to all other Gods, claims to be received and honoured as God. These therefore are what make up the Scripture-idea of a Person who is truly, really, and strictly God. And if Scrip-

^r Dei Verbum, imo magis ipse Deus. Iren. p. 132.

* Ἐν γὰρ ἀμφοῖν ὁ Θεός· ὅτι εἶπεν, ἐν ἀρχῇ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ· καὶ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος. Clem. Alex. p. 135.

Alium autem quomodo accipere debet, jam professus sum. Personæ, non substantiæ nomine ; ad distinctionem, non ad divisionem. Tertull. contr. Prax. p. 506. Hunc didicimus Filium Dei esse, et Deum dictum ex unitate substantiæ. Tertull. Apolog. c. 21.

Εἰ δὲ οὖν ὁ λόγος πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, Θεὸς ὢν, τί οὖν φήσειεν ἂν τις δύο λέγειν θεοὺς ; Δύο μὲν οὐκ ἐρῶ θεοὺς ἀλλ' ἡ ἓνα, πρόσωπα δὲ δύο, &c. Hip-pol. contr. Noët. c. xiv. p. 15.

^r Deut. iii. 24. vii. 19. x. 17. xxxii. 39. 1 Chron. xxix. 11. Job ix. 4. xii. 16. xlii. 2. Isa. xxvi. 4. xlii. 5.

^s Job xxxvi. 4. xxxvii. 16. Dan. ii. 20.

^t Psal. xciii. 2. Job xxxvi. 26. Gen. xxi. 33. Deut. xxxiii. 27. Isa. lvii. 15.

^u Mal. iii. 6.

^x Deut. iv. 7. Psal. cxxxix. 7, &c. Jer. xxiii. 23, 24.

^y 2 Kings xix. 15. Job xxvi. xxxviii. Psal. viii. 4. Isa. xlv. 7, 18. Jer. x. 12.

^z Exod. iii. 14.

ture has thus informed us what properties, attributes, and perfections, must be supposed to meet in one that is truly and properly God, our own reason must tell us, that these attributes, &c. must have a subject, and this subject we call substance: and therefore the Scripture-notion of God, is that of an eternal, immutable, omnipresent, omniscient, almighty substance. If it be pretended that these are the characters of a supreme God only, and not of every Person that is true God; I answer, that supremacy (negatively^a considered in opposition to any superior nature) is one of the characters belonging to any Person that is truly God, as much as omnipotence, omniscience, or any other; and consequently he is not truly God, in the Scripture-notion of God, who is not supreme God. This is the Scripture-notion of one that is truly God; and thus it stood when St. John wrote his Gospel.

Let us next inquire, whether the same notion obtained in the Christian Church after St. John wrote.

Justin Martyr, a very early and excellent writer, within forty or fifty years of St. John, observes, that ^bGod alone is necessarily existing and immutable, (or incorruptible;) and that for this very reason he is God; thereby intimating that without such perfections he could not be God.

Irenæus, another early and judicious writer, almost contemporary with Justin, expresses himself more fully and clearly upon the same head; observing that ^cno Person that has any superior can be justly called God; nor any thing that has been created, or ever began to exist. The same Irenæus has a whole ^dchapter to prove that the Old Testament, or New, never gave the title of God, absolutely and definitively, to any one that is not truly God.

Tertullian (in the beginning of the third century, or sooner,

^a I say, negatively: because positive supremacy over others could not commence till the creation.

^b Μόνος γὰρ ἀγέννητος καὶ ἀφθαρτος Θεός, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο Θεός ἐστι. Justin. Dial. p. 21. Jebb.

^c Qui enim super se habet aliquem superiorem, hic neque Deus neque rex magnus dici potest. Lib. iv. cap. ii. p. 229.

Quæcunque autem initium sumpserunt, et dissolutionem possunt percipere, et subjecta sunt, et indigent ejus qui se fecit, necesse est omnimodo uti differens vocabulum habeant apud eos etiam, qui vel modicum sensum in discernendo talia habent: ita ut is quidem qui omnia fecerit cum verbo suo, juste dicatur Deus et Dominus solus; quæ autem facta sunt, non jam ejusdem vocabuli participabilia esse, neque juste id vocabulum sumere debere, quod est Creatoris. Iren. lib. iii. cap. viii. p. 183.

^d Lib. iii. cap. 6.

within a hundred years, or very nearly, of St. John) observes, that the word God does not, like Lord, signify dominion or power only, but substance; that none but the eternal, uncreated substance can justly be called God; that an inferior God is a contradiction in terms.

These testimonies are sufficient to shew (without adding any more) how the word God was taken and generally understood by the Christian Church, soon after the Apostle's time; and therefore very probably, in the Apostle's time also. Now let us proceed to consider,

II. What reasons we have to believe that St. John, in his first chapter, calls the WORD God, in the same sense, in conformity to that idea which Scripture hath given us of one that is truly God; and which the primitive writers also appear plainly to have embraced.

1. This alone is a strong presumption, in favour of our interpretation, that the Scriptures before, and the Christian Church after, espouse this notion. Would St. John have called the WORD, God, in the manner that he does, without guard or caution, had he not intended it in the strict sense, which Scripture itself so much favours, and in which the generality, at least, would be most apt to take it? Had he meant it in a lower sense, it might have been very proper to have inserted a qualifying clause to prevent any mistake or misconstruction; which yet he is so far from doing, (as we shall see presently,) that he has put together with it many circumstances, all tending to convince us that he used the word in the strict sense, as Scripture had done before, and the Christian Church did after. For

2. It is observable, that the Apostle does not say, in the beginning God created the WORD, (as the style runs in the first chapter of Genesis, and might have been properly used here, had he intended to signify that the WORD was God, in an inferior or improper sense:) but instead of that, he only says that the WORD was^f; intimating that he existed before any

^e Deus substantiæ ipsius nomen, id est Divinitatis; Dominus vero non substantiæ, sed potestatis, &c. Tertull. contr. Hermog. p. 234.

Deus jam vocari obtinuit substantia cui ascribo. Hanc invenies solam innatam, infectam; solam æternam, et universitatis conditricem—nega Deum quem dicis deteriorem: nega summum magnum, quem credis minorem. Adv. Marc. lib. i. cap. 6, 7. p. 368.

Ἐπαρὰ δὲ τὸ ἀεὶ συνεῖναι τῷ πατρὶ, λέγεται, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. οὐ γὰρ ἐγένετο πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. καὶ ταυτὸν ῥῆμα, τὸ ἦν, τοῦ λόγου κατηγορεῖται, ὅτι ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν, καὶ ὅτε πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἦν, ὅτε τῆς ἀρχῆς χωριζόμενος.

thing was created, consequently from all eternity: for whatever existed before any thing was created, was no creature, as is manifest of itself; and if no creature, eternal. This is further confirmed from the Apostle's repeating it in the next verse, "The same was in the beginning with God." It is not improbable that the Apostle might intend this in opposition to Cerinthus, who believed the Δημιουργός, or Creator, to be separate and estranged from Gods. Nothing can be more directly levelled against that doctrine than this assertion of St. John's, that the WORD, who was Creator of the world, was from the beginning, or always, with God. But to proceed:

3. Another argument of St. John's intending the word God in the strict sense, may be drawn from the time whereof he is speaking. It was before the creation; he was then God. It is not said, that he was appointed God over the things that should be afterwards created. No; he was God before the world was. Our adversaries sometimes tell us of a throne, a power of judging, a regal authority belonging to the Son: and that therefore he is God; and they observe^h (as they think, shrewdly, but in truth very weakly) that the Holy Ghost has therefore none of that title, as having no regal dominion, &c. And when, in answer to this, we say further, that the Son was Jehovah, God, and Lord, under the Old Testament; they reply, that he was then ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, acting in the name and Person of God, and therefore styled God. Admitting all this, (which is mostly fiction,) yet what will they do with this text of St. John? Here it is plain, that the Son was God before any dominion over the creatures commenced; before he acted as representative of the Father, or was ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, in that low fictitious sense: how was he God before the creation? Here they have little left to say, but that "he was partaker of divine power and glory with "and from the Fatherⁱ." From hence then we see, that ὅτε τοῦ πατρὸς ἀπολειπόμενος. Καὶ πάλιν ὅτε ἀπὸ τοῦ μὴ εἶναι ἐν ἀρχῇ γινόμενος ἐν ἀρχῇ, ὅτε ἀπὸ τοῦ μὴ τυγχάνειν πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἐπὶ τῷ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν εἶναι γινόμενος. πρὸ γὰρ πάντος χρόνου καὶ αἰῶνος. ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. Orig. in Joh. p. 45.

Ὅτι ἦν γὰρ ὅτε ἀρχῇ ἀλογος ἦν. διὸ λέγεται ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ λόγος. Ibid. p. 66.

Vid. etiam Athanas. p. 526. Hilar. p. 795. Chrysost. in Joh. p. 25. and other testimonies collected in Suicer. Thesaur. under Ἀρχή, and Petav. 147, 417.

^g Iren. lib. iii. cap. 11. p. 188. lib. i. cap. 26. p. 105. Tertull. de Præscript. Hæret. Append. p. 221. Epiphani. Hæres. xxviii. p. 110.

^h See Script. Doctr. p. 264. 2nd edit.

ⁱ Script. Doctr. p. 240. 2nd edit.

dominion alone is not sufficient to account for the Son's being God; not to mention that the Holy Ghost might have been called God in Scripture, as having been "partaker of divine power and glory with and from the Father," as well as the Son; so that that pretence about the Holy Ghost and this solution hang not well together. To such straits and inconsistencies are men reduced by bringing their hypotheses with them to interpret Scripture by, instead of making Scripture the rule of their faith. But to conclude this article: since then neither dominion, (on account of which princes and magistrates have been sometimes called Gods,) nor vicegerency, nor any thing of like kind, will account for the WORD's being called God by St. John in this place: and since our adversaries themselves appear to be very sensible that their principles, which serve to help them out at other times, fail them here; and that they are forced rather to say any thing, however slight or trifling, than to be wholly silent: this alone is a strong presumption on our side of the question, where the solution is so easy and natural, and entirely consistent with our other principles.

4. Another circumstance, confirming our interpretation of this passage of St. John, is, that "all things" are there said to have been "made by him;" and, to be more emphatical, that "without him was not any thing made that was made." I shall not here insist upon the dignity of the Son as Creator, (the distinguishing character of the one true God,) designing that for a distinct head of argument another time: all the use I shall make of it at present is to observe, that it is not said, all other things were made by him, but all things absolutely; wherefore he himself cannot, according to the letter, be supposed of the number of the things made, unless he made himself, which is absurd; and since nothing was made or created but by and through him, it is but reasonable to infer that every creature whatever is a creature of the Son's as well as of the Father's; and therefore certainly the Son is not a creature at all.

5. A further circumstance favouring our sense is, that the WORD is called God, in the very same verse, wherein the Father is mentioned as God, and undoubtedly in the strict and proper sense. And how shall any the most judicious reader be ever able to understand language, if in the same verse and same sentence, the same word should stand for two ideas, or bear two senses widely different and scarce akin to each other? and that too, not only without any guard or caution, or any notice given of the change of ideas ; but also with such circumstances as give no suspicion of any change, but all tending to confirm us the more that the same idea is still kept up, and applied equally to Father and Son. It has been objected that the Father is $\delta \Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, God with the article, the Son only $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, God without the article. But every body knows that the addition or omission of an article is no certain proof of any change at all in the sense of a word ; besides that the word $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, God, is used in the strict sense, though without the article, several times in this chapter. The sacred penmen were not so critical about articles ; neither can we imagine that a point of this moment should have been left so unguarded, with nothing to direct us but I know not what blind and dark conjectures of the use of articles ; concerning which we have no certain rules either for Scripture, or for any other writings. The word $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, God, is frequently used without the article to signify the true God : and it is used with the article (2 Cor. iv. 4.) where it is supposed by most interpreters to be meant of the Devil : so little account is there to be made of articles. But enough of this. It is further pretended, that $\delta \Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, God, applied to the Father, may stand for Jehovah, which is the proper name of a Person, and that therefore God and God, in the text, cannot bear the same sense, unless both be one and the same Person Jehovah. But in answer to this, it is sufficient to say, that it can never be proved that Jehovah is a proper name of any Person, but as that Person is considered as having independent or necessary existence : and then the name must be common to as many persons as exist necessarily, or independently ; independently on the will or free choice of any. Besides that it is certain that the name belongs equally to Father or Son, (as I shall shew presently,) and therefore St. John might intend that the Father is Jehovah and the Son Jehovah too, and both in the same sense ; while at the same time, by his telling us that one was with the other, he has sufficiently signified that they are not the same Person ; but that Jehovah is a name proper indeed to one substance, or one Godhead, but common to more Persons than one. I proceed then,

6. To observe, that St. John did look upon God the Son as the true Jehovah ; and this alone is an irrefragable argument of St. John's meaning in the text before us. I shall first shew the fact, and next make good my inference from it. The fact may be proved first from chapter xii. verse 41. of this very Gospel. The words are : " These things said Esaias when he " saw his glory," (meaning Christ's glory,) " and spake of him." Now the place of Esaias referred to is chapter the sixth, which begins thus :

" I saw also the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up, and his train filled the temple. Above it stood the Seraphims—And one cried unto another and said, Holy, holy, " holy is the Lord of Hosts, the whole earth is full of his glory." Here we are to observe, that the Lord, which Esaias saw in his vision, was the Jehovah, and Lord of Hosts, which is of the same signification with Lord God Almighty. Him it was, and his glory, which the Prophet saw. And that this was Christ, and that glory Christ's glory, St. John has before testified ; and therefore certain it is that God the Son is, in St. John's account, the Jehovah, and Lord God Almighty. This reasoning is in itself plain and strong ; and is besides further confirmed by the ^kconcurring sentiments of many Catholic writers.

A ^llate writer endeavouring to elude the force of this text, devises this construction, that the Prophet, in beholding the glory of God the Father, revealing the coming of Christ, he then saw (that is foresaw) the glory of Christ. But admitting that saw may signify foresaw, (which however is a very needless supposition, since it is certain that our blessed Lord had as much glory with the Father before the world was, as ever he had after, John xvii. 5.) yet what occasion is there to suppose the Father's glory to have been principally spoken of, when St. John says plainly it was Christ's glory, and that the Prophet spake of him. viz. Christ? It is indeed said, that Christ shall come " in the " glory of his Father." (Matt. xvi. 27.) But it is also said, that " he shall come in his own glory" (Matth. xxv. 31. Luke ix. 26.) ; " and sit in the throne of his own glory." (Matt. xix. 28.) If then the Prophet saw indeed the glory of the Father also, it is because the glory of both is one ; and if the Father be the Lord of Hosts, whom the Prophet saw, it is because the Father and Son are one Lord of Hosts : for it is as certain as ^k Eusebius in loc. Athanasius, p. 877, 889. Hilar. Trin. lib. v. cap. 33. p. 873. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. v. p. 115, Hieronymus in loc. Epiphan. Ancorat. p. 15, 13. Jobius apud Phot.

p. 605. Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. xiv. p. 202. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. c. 12. p. 141. ed. Bened. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. l. ii. p. 488.

^l Script. Doctr. p. 93. 2nd edit.

words can make it, from what St. John says, that the Son's glory was seen; and that he was the Jehovah of whom the Prophet spake. If the Father was so too, we have a full and strong proof, not only of the Son's being Jehovah, but of the Father and Son both being comprehended under the same one Jehovah: and so indeed ^mseveral of the ancient Fathers have interpreted it. But that is not what I insist upon now, my argument not requiring it. It is sufficient for me, that the Prophet saw, or foresaw (no great matter which) the glory of Jehovah, or Lord of Hosts; and it was the Jehovah, or Lord of Hosts, that the Prophet spake of. That is, as St. John interprets it, he saw the glory of Christ, and spake of him: Christ therefore is Jehovah and Lord of Hosts; which was to be proved.

There is a second passage in this very Gospel, which proves the same thing. It is John xix. 37. "Another Scripture saith, "They shall look on him whom they have pierced." The Scripture referred to is Zech. xii. 10. where the Lord (Jehovah) is introduced saying, "They shall look upon me, whom they have "pierced." The Person pierced is Jehovah, and the same Person is Christ: wherefore, by necessary construction and implication, Christ is Jehovah. The fact being thus plain and clear, we are next to consider the inference from it. The import of the name Jehovah (according to the best critics, ancient and modern) is eternal, immutable, necessary existence. The Greek $\delta \delta \nu$, or $\rho \delta \delta \nu$, taken from it, or answering to it, has been interpreted to the same sense by Jews, Gentiles, and Christiansⁿ. It would be tedious here to enter any further into the detail of that matter. It shall suffice to observe how the one true God insists upon his being Jehovah, in opposition to all other gods, glorying, in a manner, and triumphing in it, as the distinguishing character by which he would be known to be infinitely superior to all the gods of the nations.

"I am the Lord, (Jehovah), that is my name, and my glory will I not give to another," Isa. xlii. 8. "Against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment: I am the Lord, (Jehovah)," Exod. xii. 12. "Who hath told it from time to time? have not I the Lord, (Jehovah?) and there is no God else besides me;

^m Athanasius, Basil, Gregory Nysen, Ambrose, Jerome, Epiphanius, before referred to.

ⁿ Vid. Petav. Dogm. Theolog. vol. i.

lib. i. c. 6.

Appendix to the Considerations on Mr. Whiston's Histor. Præf. p. 101. and part ii. p. 2, 3, &c.

“ a just God, and a Saviour ; there is none besides me,” Isa. xlv. 21. “ I am the Lord, (Jehovah,) the God of all flesh : is there any thing too hard for me? Jer. xxxii. 27. “ I am the Lord, (Jehovah,) I change not,” Mal. iii. 6. “ I am the Lord, (Jehovah,) and there is none else: I form the light and create darkness—I the Lord (Jehovah) do all these things,” Isa. xlv. 6, 7. I forbear to add more texts. These are enough for a specimen. There is no giving a full and complete idea of this matter, without transcribing a great part of the Old Testament. Now since the title of Jehovah is, in Scripture, a principal note of distinction by which the true God was pleased to manifest himself, and to set forth his own superior excellency in opposition to all pretended deities ; and since St. John has given us to understand, that Christ is Jehovah, or Lord of Hosts, and consequently possessed of all those distinguishing powers and perfections which go along with that title ; the consequence is evident and undeniable, that when the same St. John tells us that the WORD was God, he intended no nominal or inferior Deity, but God in the true, strict, and proper sense, eternal and immutable, of the same power, nature, and perfections with God the Father. I shall now briefly sum up the particulars of the argument, that we may the more easily take into one view the whole strength and force of it.

The Apostle has here told us, in a very solemn manner, in the very entrance upon his Gospel, that the Λόγος, or WORD, was God ; the very mention whereof, according to the Scripture-idea of God, and the prevailing notions of those who lived in and near St. John’s time, carries with it, in its first and most natural conception, all that is good, great, or excellent : and so every unprejudiced man, upon the first reading or hearing the Apostle’s words, would be apt to understand him. He has inserted no guard or caution to prevent any such construction : but, on the contrary, has hardly omitted any thing that might tend to confirm and enforce it. The WORD was God before he had any dominion, before he had acted as representative of the Father ; God, in the beginning, before the world was, before there was any creature ; God, by whom the world was made, and to whom every creature owed its existence ; who coming into the world, came unto his own, who is Jehovah and Lord of Hosts, the same as Κύριος παντοκράτωρ, the Lord Almighty, and God over all : in such a sense, and with these circumstances, the WORD is called

God, in the very same verse where mention also is made of the Father, with whom he was, and who is there called God, in the strict and proper sense: all this put together amounts to a demonstration, that the Apostle intended no nominal or inferior God by the WORD, but the true and living God, one with the Father, coessential and coeternal. Thus the first Christians understood it; and thus the Catholic Church has believed: and this is the faith which we ought evermore earnestly to contend for, as being "once delivered to the saints."

I entreat your patience but a little further, just to take notice of a late pretence of an Arian writer^o.

The Jews, says he, and Gentiles believed in one God, understanding it of one Person only: our Saviour and his Apostles taught that Christ was the Son of that one God: when therefore Christ is also styled God, those among whom he was first so styled, would naturally understand it in the subordinate sense, as the word Elohim in the Hebrew, Θεός in the Greek, and God in the English frequently signifies.

This is the argument, and in this, the author says, "the sum of the whole controversy is briefly comprised." If this be really the case, the controversy may be brought to a short and clear issue. By subordinate sense of the word God, the gentleman means such a sense in which creatures may be gods, and have been called gods. I hope I have sufficiently shewn that St. John could never intend any such low sense, nor be so understood by any man of ordinary attention or common discernment. As to the question, how it would be understood by those who first heard it, it has been already determined by plain evidence of fact. It appears certainly to have been understood in the strict and proper sense, as high as Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Irenæus, Athenagoras, that is, within sixty or seventy years of St. John's writing: and I will venture to add Ignatius^p, which brings it up to the very time: for Ignatius had been well acquainted with St. John himself, having been once his ^qdisciple.

As to Jews or Gentiles, whatever short or imperfect notions they had of God, (though it is a disputable point, whether

^o Modest Plea, Postscript, p. 318.

^p Ὅς πρὸ αἰῶνων παρὰ πατρὶ ἦν, καὶ ἐν τέλει ἐφάνη. Ignat. ad Magn. cap. vi. p. 22.

^q Ὅς ἐστιν αὐτοῦ λόγος αἰδιος, οὐκ ἀπὸ συγῆς προελθὼν. cap. viii. p. 23.

Εἰς ἰατρός ἐστιν, σαρκικός τε καὶ πνευματικός, γενητός καὶ ἀγένητος, ἐν σαρκὶ γενόμενος Θεός. Ad Ephes. cap. vii. p. 14.

^q Act. Martyr. S. Ignat. cap. iii. p. 49.

they did not both admit of some plurality in the Deity,) they are to come to Christians to be more fully instructed; and we are not to be taught by them, how we are to understand a clear and plain Gospel. Hard must be our case indeed, if we are to be sent to Jews or Pagans to learn Christianity. However, Jews and Gentiles both (as many as came over to Christianity, and did not side with heretics,) then at least corrected (or rather filled up what was wanting in) their ideas of the divine Unity, by their faith in, and profession of one holy, undivided, and co-eternal Trinity. We have seen then, first, how St. John ought to have been understood; and next, how he actually was understood by sober men, and those that were the most competent judges of his meaning. What can be desired more to cut off all further controversy in this article?

To conclude: The Sabellians at this day, as well as formerly, are a standing evidence of the strength and force of those two or three first verses of St. John's Gospel. For as they reject the Catholic doctrine of the Trinity in Unity, only because they think it repugnant to reason; so they reject also the Arian hypothesis, because they take it to be repugnant to Scripture, and particularly to the first chapter of St. John. They are sensible how absurd it is to suppose so much to be said of a creature, and said in that manner, and with those circumstances; and therefore they interpret the whole of God the Father himself. Thus they get over one difficulty, but unhappily split upon another; and the Arians have as plainly the advantage in the point of personality, as the other have in respect of the divinity of the WORD. Happy might it be for both, if, laying aside prejudice, they would contentedly submit their fancies to God's written Word; interpreting it according to its most obvious and natural meaning, without laboured subtleties and artificial glosses: remembering always that, in case of doubt, there is no safer guide to take with us, than the concurring judgment of the ancients; nor any more dangerous than warmth of imagination, or a love of novelties.

Christ properly Creator :

OR

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

PROVED FROM CREATION.

The second Sermon preached Oct. 7, 1719.

JOHN i. 3.

All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made.

I HAVE before took notice of these words of the Apostle, but so far only as was necessary to give some light to the words going before, whereof I was then discoursing. My design now is, to consider them distinctly, as containing a further argument, independent of the former, to prove the real, essential divinity of our blessed Lord, "by whom all things were made, and without whom was not any thing made that was made." I have, in my former discourse, intimated the various interpretations given of this chapter, under the names of Socinian, Sabellian, Arian, and Catholic, suitably to their respective schemes. Accordingly, these words of the Apostle, in passing through those several hands, have been shaped and fashioned into so many several constructions; though one only can be the true one. The Socinian will tell us, that all things belonging to the Gospel-state were regulated and modelled by the man Christ Jesus; that the moral world was reformed and rectified by him; and that the Apostle is not here speaking of a proper, but a metaphorical creation. Next comes the Sabellian, who thinks that the text is meant of the creation of the natural world, and all things in it; but then, not by the man Christ Jesus, nor by any Person really distinct from God the Father: all things were made by reason or wisdom, figuratively put for God himself; so that the Apostle intended not here any real Person besides God the Father: thus far the Sabellian. After him succeeds the Arian, who admits of a proper creation of the natural, not the moral world; and admits also of a distinct Person, viz. the Λόγος, or WORD, himself a creature: and he does not deny him any hand or concern at all in the creation; but endeavours only to detract from him, more or less, with great uncertainty. For, as I have before observed, that sort of men are always fluctuating, hovering, and doubtful, not knowing where to fix upon any certain set of principles. Sometimes ^ayou will find them pretending that God the Son, properly speaking, did not make or create any thing at all; but that the Father only was Creator, through him. At other times ^bthey will not scruple to allow that the Son, by his own inherent power, created all things out of nothing; which is carrying the point as high as any the soundest Catholic can carry it: only they add, by way of lessening, that this was at the command of the Father, who had appointed him Creator; which however might bear a sound and good sense. Betwixt these extremities of high and low (if I may so call them) amongst the Arians, there is a middle way, and that also with a latitude: some think it enough for the Son to have created some things only (suppose, what belongs to one system): others again (understanding by creating, modelling only) apprehend it sufficient, if he did but frame, model, or digest what was already created to his hand: others, lastly, admitting both, yet say, it was not by his own power, but the power of the Father, always present with him: or that he had learned the art of creating by being bred up under the Father; which was the profane and wanton suggestion of Asterius, an Arian sophist of the fourth century ^c. There is no end of fancies and conjectures, when men are once got out of the plain and open way of truth. I shall not undertake particularly and severally to confute the three hypotheses, and the interpretations built upon them: but I shall proceed to lay down the Catholic construc-

^a Πολλάκις γὰρ ἀκήκοά τις λέγοντας ὅτι ὁ υἱὸς ἐποίησεν οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο τὰ γενόμενα. Epiph. Anacorat. p. 33.

^b Antequam faceret universa, omnium futurorum Deus et Dominus, Rex et Creator erat constitutus. Voluntate et præcepto (Dei et Patris sui) caelestia et terrestria, visibilia et invisibilia, corpora et spiritus, ex nullis exstantibus, ut essent, sua virtute fecit. Serm. Arianorum apud Aug. tom. viii. p. 622. ed. Bened.

^c Athanas. Orat. ii. 496.

tion; which if I can maintain and defend, the other drop of course. The Catholic doctrine is this: that the Son, together with the Father, (always including the Holy Ghost,) was the efficient Cause of all things, the Creator and Framer of men and angels, of principalities and powers, of the whole universe. I shall therefore, in my following discourse, undertake these three things:

I. I shall endeavour to shew, that God the Son, a distinct Person from God the Father, is strictly and properly efficient Cause and Creator of all things:

II. I shall consider the force of the argument arising from it, in favour of Christ's divinity.

III. I shall draw some suitable inferences from the whole.

I. I shall endeavour to shew that God the Son, a distinct Person from God the Father, is strictly and properly efficient Cause and Creator of all things. And here I shall distinctly consider what light we may have in this matter from the New Testament, and what from the Old, and what additional confirmation from the declared sentiments of the primitive and Catholic Church.

1. To begin with the New Testament; and first with the very words of the text: "All things were made by him, and "without him was not any thing made that was made." I have, in a former discourse, asserted the distinct personality of the Λόγος, or Word; shewing that the Sabellian interpretation of this chapter will by no means bear: I shall occasionally take notice of the Sabellian pretences in relation to other texts, as I come to treat of them. For the clearer understanding of the text now under consideration, we may observe, that Cerinthus and other heretics (against whose pernicious principles St. John is reasonably believed to have wrote his Gospel) had made a distinction between the upper and lower world, pretending they had not one Author. Hence, very probably, it is, that the Apostle expresses himself so particularly and emphatically in these words, (which might otherwise look like tautology,) "and "without him was not any thing made that was made." He had first told us affirmatively, that all things were made by the Word; then he repeats, as it were, the same thing over again, but negatively, that nothing was made without him: that is, we are not to expect any part of the creation, not the invisible things above, which the heretics pretended to distinguish from the other: all things visible and invisible; all, without exception, were made by the WORD. I must here observe, that, after the Arian controversy arose, the Catholics made good use of the latter part of this text especially, which is so very expressive and emphatical. The Arian principle is, that the Son was the first thing that God had made; and that God made him, ἀμεσιτέως, immediately by himself, without the intervention of any other person. Against this, the Catholics pleaded that nothing was made without the intervention of the Son; the Apostle having emphatically declared, that “without him was not any thing made that was made:” there was therefore nothing made ἀμεσιτέως, immediately by the Father, without the intervention and concurrence of the Son. Consequently, the Son was not mads at all, since it is absurd to imagine that he intervened or concurred to the making of himself; which would be the same as to say, that he existed before he existed, or was prior to himself. But I pass on to what I design. “All things were made by him,” signifies the same as that he made all things. Thus the ^dancients have unanimously interpreted it, and the idiom of the language will undoubtedly bear it^c. We find the phrase of δι’ αὐτοῦ or δι’ οὗ, τὰ πάντα, by whom are all things, nearly the same with what St. John here says of the Son, twice applied to the Father himself, (Rom. xi. 36. Heb. ii. 10.) which effectually takes off any pretence the Arians can have, merely from the force of the preposition διὰ, as if it were intended as a note of inferiority, when it is nothing more than a note of distinction. When Father and Son are joined together, (as 1 Cor. viii. 6.) of whom is indeed applied to the Father, and by whom to the Son, to signify at once the unity of operation and distinction of Persons, and withal some priority of order, as the Father is the fountain of all, and first in conception, whenever we think of the Deity. This is all that can

^d Οὗτος γὰρ ἐστὶν ἀφ’ οὗ καὶ τὸν οὐρανὸν καὶ τὴν γῆν, &c. Just. Dial. p. 331.

Πρὸς αὐτοῦ γὰρ, καὶ δι’ αὐτοῦ πάντα ἐγένετο. Athenag. p. 38.

Verbum Dei per quod omnia facta sunt, et quoniam mundus proprius ipsius et per ipsum factus est, voluntate Patris—mundi enim Factor vere Verbum Dei est. Iren. p. 315.

Fecit enim et ipse quæ facta sunt per illum. Tertull. contr. Praz. p. 504.

Verbum autem hoc illud est quod in sua venit, et sui eum non receperunt. Mundus enim per eum factus est, et mundus eum non cognovit. —Si homo tantummodo Christus, quomodo veniens in hunc mundum, in sua venit, cum homo nullum fecerit mundum? Novat. cap. xiii. p. 714, 715.

^e See Petavius de Trin. lib. vii. cap. 17. p. 431.

be reasonably inferred from the Scripture-usages of the prepositions: especially if it be considered that under the same latitude of expression, as all things are said to be of the Father, so likewise all things are said to be by the Son; consequently the operation of one is of equal extent with the operation of the other, and indeed is but one work of both. All things then are made by the Son, but in conjunction with the Father; and the Father hath made nothing but in and by the Son. This appears to be the true and full sense of the text in St. John, whereof I am now treating; and it is confirmed by other passages of the New Testament, which I shall take in their order. There is one occurring in the same chapter, a few verses lower. "He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not: he came unto his own, and his own received him not." ver. 10, 11. Some have thought that by his own, in this place, is meant only his own people, the Jews, as being of his kindred according to the flesh. But this can never be the meaning of it. The Evangelist is here speaking of the Λόγος, or WORD, antecedently considered, and now coming to those who were his own before he came to them, before he took flesh upon him. The words immediately preceding, viz. "the world was made by him, and the world knew him not," make it probable that the Apostle was not then thinking of the Jews only, but of mankind in general. Besides this, it is worth the noting, that some heretics, in St. John's time probably, as well as after, had a conceit that the Creator of this lower world was separate and distant from the supreme God, and that Christ came not into a world of his own making, but into one that belonged to another. Now in opposition to these and the like chimerical fancies, the Apostle informs us, that the same Creator (that is, Christ in conjunction with the Father) made every thing; and that therefore when he came into the world, he came unto his own, his own house and workmanship, this world being by right of creation his. This construction is what Irenæus, a very ancient writer, gives of the text^f. The like construction is given of it by *κ*Clemens of Alexandria, Hippolytus and Novatian, writers of the second and third centuries. Some, who interpret the text of the Jews, yet do not give this for the reason that the Jews were his own, as being akin to him

^f Iren. p. 188, 315, 316.

contr. Noët. cap. xii. p. 14. Novatian.

κ Clem. Alex. p. 882. Hippolyt. cap. 13.

according to the flesh; but as they were his peculium^h, his chosen people, and as he was in a more eminent manner their God: and so Cyril of Jerusalem seems to understand itⁱ. Taking the text either of these ways, it affords us an argument of the Son's being properly Creator. For if it be understood of the world in general, then it is manifest from the words immediately preceding, that the τὰ ἴδια refers to his right of creation, and that the world is called his own in that respect. Or if it be understood of the Jews, it will prove thus much, that they were his own, as they were his people, and he their God; and it will appear from the Old Testament, that the God of Israel was the Maker of the world, the same that created Jacob, and formed Israel, (Is. xliii. 1.) and none else. If it be said, that the Jews may here be called his own, as he was their promised Messiah, their Saviour and Redeemer; that construction seems to be the least probable of any: first, because he was equally the Saviour of mankind, and therefore there is no reason why the Jews should be called his own in that respect. And secondly, because, admitting they might be called his own in that respect, yet it could not have been so properly said of them, antecedently to the work of redemption, before he had bought them at the price of his blood, and thereby made them his own. I conclude therefore from this passage, that whether it means the world or the Jews, they were his own in some higher respect; and that could be no other but as he was their Creator.

The next Scripture I shall cite shall be out of the Revelation, the work of the same Apostle whose words I have been considering. Our blessed Lord is there called the Ἄρχῆ, "the beginning," (that is, ^kauthor or efficient cause) "of the creation of God." Rev. iii. 14. This I mention as the most probable construction of the place, suitable to what I have before observed from St. John's Gospel. Otherwise, I think, nothing can, with any certainty, be proved from this passage alone; the word Ἄρχῆ (which we render beginning) being a word of great latitude, and capable of many senses. The ancients may afford us some light in this matter; not that I find this text

^h See Deut. xiv. 2.

ⁱ Cyril. Catech. xii. p. 152, 312. Ox. ed.

^k Ἄρχῆ γὰρ τῆς κτίσεως ἢ προκαταρτικῆ αἰτία καὶ ἀκτιστος. Andr. Cæsar. in loc. p. 20.

Non ideo se principium creature dicit, quod ipse sit creatura, sed quod ab ipso omnia sint creata, ut puta architectus fecit domum. Berengaud. in loc. p. 511.

particularly explained or quoted by any of the earlier writers : but it is frequent with them to apply the name 'Αρχή to God the Son ; and they give this account of it : ¹he existed of and from the Father before all things : he made all things ; and he governs all things : and therefore is the 'Αρχή, the head, or beginning of all things, or of the whole creation. This, I presume, may serve as the best comment we can meet with upon this text in the Revelation. I shall now proceed to other texts of more clear and certain meaning : 1 Cor. viii. 6. "To us there is but one God, the Father, of whom are all things, and we are in him ; and one Lord Jesus Christ, by whom are all things, and we are by him." Before I come to the argument which I intend from this text, I may just take notice that here we find Father and Son equally opposed to the gods many and lords many. There is but one Lord to us, viz. Jesus Christ. Is then the Father (who also is the Lord "by whom are all things," Rom. xi. 34, 36.) excluded among the lords many ? God forbid. But Father and Son are one Lord. So likewise to us there is but one God, viz. the Father. Is then the Son excluded among the gods many ? the Son, who, as the same St. Paul testifies, is "over all God blessed for ever?" (Rom. ix. 5.) No, certainly ; but Father and Son are one God. Thus, and thus only, can St. Paul's reasoning in that chapter be made to hang together : or otherwise he himself has infallibly shewn us that there are to us two Gods and two Lords, at the same time that he intended to prove (see ver. 4.) that to us there is but one God and one Lord. The truth is, St. Paul has not only hereby insinuated to us, that Father and Son are one God and one Lord ; but he has likewise intimated the reason why, or on what account they are one. It is because all things whatsoever arise or flow from both. There is nothing of the Father, but by the Son ; nor any thing by the Son, but what is also of the Father : so that the original of all creatures is referred up to both, as to one individual fountain and cause of their existence. The Father does not make one thing, and the Son another ; but what the Father creates, the Son creates, for all things are by the Son. Hence it is manifest that God the Son is Creator and author of all things, as well as the Father; nor would the Apostle have used the same latitude of expression in respect of both, (without any the least guard, caution, or exception,) had he not so understood it^m. I find an ancient writer, under the name of Ignatius, though certainly later than Ignatius, concluding from this very text that the "Son of God created all things. Whoever the author was, the reasoning is true and just, agreeable to other Scriptures, and to the unanimous sentiments of the primitive Church. Some amongst us of late have affected very much to say, that all things were created through the Son, rather than by the Son. But they do not tell us the meaning of their quaint distinction between by and through; nor indeed are they able, in the present case, to make sense of it. Whether they say through or by, all comes to the same thing, that the Father is Creator by the operation of the Son: that is, both work together, ("my Father worketh hitherto, and I work; what things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise," John v. 17, 19.) The operation is undivided, and the work one: °one creation, and one Creator in all. But more of this in the sequel.

¹ Ἡ τῶν ὄλων Ἄρχὴ ἦτις ἀπεικονίσται μὲν ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ἀοράτου πρώτῃ καὶ πρὸ αἰῶνων. τετύπωκεν δὲ τὰ μεθ' ἐαυτῆν ἅπαντα γενόμενα. Clem. Alex. Strom. i. p. 669.

Οὗτος λέγεται Ἄρχὴ ὅτι ἄρχει, καὶ κυριεύει πάντων δι' αὐτοῦ δεδημιουργημένων. Theoph. Antioch. lib. ii.

Vid. Coloss. i. 18.

The next passage in order is Ephes. iii. 9. "God who created all things by Jesus Christ." The sense of this must be the same with the former, and needs not any further comment. The last words, "by Jesus Christ," are observed to have been wanting in the most ancient copies; and are therefore probably presumed to be an addition to the text. If so, then this text is nothing to our present purpose. I shall only remark, that when this text is away, there will be but one left, in the whole Scripture, where that particular form of expression is used, of God's making the world by the Son. And that is Heb. i. 2. "By whom also he made the worlds,"

^m Omnia enim per Filium ex nihilo substiterunt: et ad Deum ex quo omnia, ad Filium vero per quem omnia Apostolus retulit. Et non invenio quid differat, cum per utrumque opus sit virtutis ejusdem. Si enim ad universitatis substantiam proprium ac sufficiens creaturis esset quod ex Deo sunt; quid habuit necessitatis memorasse, quod quæ ex Deo sunt per Christum sint, nisi quod unum idem est, per Christum esse, et ex Deo esse? Hilari. Trin. lib. viii. c. 38. p. 970.

ⁿ Πρωτόκοκος πάσης κτίσεως, και

Θεός λόγος· και αυτός έποίησε τὰ πάντα. λέγει γάρ ο άπόστολος. εἰς Θεός ο πατήρ, έξ ού τὰ πάντα· και εἰς Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, δι' ού τὰ πάντα. Ignat. adscript. Epist. ad Tars. c. iv. p. 106. Cotel.

Vid. etiam Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. xxi. Athanas. Orat. i. contr. Arian. p. 124. Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. x.

° Μή είναι άλλα Χριστού δημιουργήματα, και άλλα πατρός. μία γάρ ή πάντων δημιουργία· του πατρός διά του υιού πεποιηκότος. Cyril. Catech. xi. p. 143.

The other places which make mention of the Son's creating all things run in a somewhat different style; saying only, that the world, or all things, were made by him; not that God made them through, or by him: which different way of expressing the same thing is worth the observing, to keep us from two extremes; that we may not so interpret God's making all things by the Son, as to exclude the Son from being properly Creator; nor so interpret the Son's making all things, as to forget that he is a Son, and as such refers all to the Father, as the Head and Fountain of the Son himself^p.

I pass on to a famous passage in the first chapter of the Epistle to the Colossians, which runs thus:

“Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature: for by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers, all things were created by him, and for him. And he is before all things, and by him all things consist.” (Coloss. i. 15, 16, 17.) Strong, lively, and magnificent expressions; plainly intended of a Person, the Son of God just before mentioned, (ver. 13.) so that here is no room for any Sabellian pretences; of a Person preexisting before the world began, so that here is as little left for the Socinian; lastly of a Person who was before all creatures, and made all creatures, which is enough to silence the Arians. The last particular I am principally obliged to speak to. In the Greek we have two expressions, ἐν αὐτῷ and δι' αὐτοῦ, in him and by him, were all things created; and also εἰς αὐτόν, for him; the same expression which we find used of God the Father, probably, (Rom. xi. 36,) and is there rendered to him. So now we have found εἰς αὐτόν τὰ πάντα, as before δι' αὐτοῦ τὰ πάντα, equally applied to Father and Son: such expressions, so indifferently applied to either, have a meaning; and contenting himself with throwing in two or three expressions, as explanatory of the Father's being Head and Fountain, (which are really not explanatory, but a manifest perverting of the sense,) drops the point which it concerned him to speak to. The objection from subordination, long ago despised out of the mouth of Eunoimius, will not grow considerable merely by being repeated, without any thing new to enforce it.

^p The anonymous writer of “Most Pleasant Plea, &c. continued,” pretends that this concession of the Father's being Head and Fountain, &c. overturns our whole scheme. (p. 39.) But he does not attempt to shew how. Dr. Clarke and his adherents have been called upon more than once, to make good their consequence from subordination of order to inferiority of nature. (See my Defence, &c. vol. i. p. 448, 450, 535.) But this writer,

did not drop by chance from inspired writers. But to consider the passage more distinctly.

In respect of the words, "first-born of every creature," our translation comes not up to the force, or meaning, of the original η . It should have been, born (or begotten) before the whole creation^r; as is manifest from the context, which gives the reason why he is said to be πρωτόκοκος πάσης κτίσεως. It is because he is "before all things," and because by him were all things created. So that this very passage, which, as it stands in our translation, may seem to suppose the Son one of the creatures, does, when rightly understood, clearly exempt him from the number of creatures. He was before all created being, and consequently was himself uncreated, existing with the Father from all eternity. But this by the way only, the better to introduce what I have to observe further from this passage. Creation is here ascribed to the Son in very full, clear, and expressive terms. "All things:" not sublunary things only, not this inferior system, but "all things," whether above or below, "that are in heaven, and that are in earth;" not inanimate things only, or the inhabitants of this globe, but also what is remote and distant; all things visible and invisible; and not only all rational creatures of an inferior rank and order, but the very

^q Μῶσῃ ἰδίως υἱὸς τῷ Θεῷ γεγέννηται, λόγος αὐτοῦ ὑπάρχων καὶ πρωτόκοκος καὶ δύναιμις. Justin. Mart. Ap. i. p. 46.

Πρωτόκοκος τῷ ἀγενήτῳ Θεῷ ἐστὶ. Ibid. p. 101. *Ὁς καὶ λόγος πρωτόκοκος ἄν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Θεὸς ὑπάρχει. Ibid. p. 123. Θεοῦ δὲ, ἐκ τοῦ εἶναι τέκνον πρωτόκοκον τῶν ἄλλων κτισμάτων. Dial. p. 364. Πρωτόκοκον τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ πρὸ πάντων τῶν κτισμάτων. Ibid. p. 295. Τοῦτο τῷ ὄντι ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς προβληθέν γέννημα, πρὸ πάντων τῶν ποιημάτων συνῆν τῷ πατρί. Ibid. p. 187. Πρὸ πάντων ἀπλῶς τῶν κτισμάτων. Ibid. p. 375.

It is observable that Justin never says πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων κτισμάτων, but, simply and absolutely, before all creatures, clearly exempting the Son from the number of creatures.

Πρῶτον γέννημα εἶναι τῷ πατρὶ, οὐχ ὡς γενόμενον &c. Athenag. p. 38.

Πρὸ γὰρ τὴν γίνεσθαι, τούτων εἶχε σύμβουλον, αὐτοῦ νοῦν καὶ φρόνησιν ὄντα ὅπως δὲ ἐβίβλησεν ὁ Θεὸς ποιῆ-σαι ὅσα ἐβουλεύσατο, τούτων τὸν λόγον ἐγέννησε προφορικῶν, πρωτόκοκον πάσης κτίσεως, &c. Theoph. Antioch. p. 129.

Primogenitus conditionis, ut Sermo Creatoris per quem omnia facta sunt. — Quomodo ante omnia, si non primogenitus conditionis, si non Sermo Creatoris? Tertull. contr. Marc. lib. v. p. 486.

Primogenitus omnis creaturæ— quoniam secundum divinitatem ante omnem creaturam ex Patre Deus Sermo processit. Novat. c. 16.

Πρωτόκοκον πάσης κτίσεως, τὸν πρὸ αἰῶνων εὐδοκίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα, οὐ κτισθέντα. Constit. Apostol. l. vii. c. 41.

These passages are sufficient to shew how πρωτόκοκος was understood by the earliest Christian writers. If the reader desires to see it still further explained, he cannot consult a better than the great Athanasius. Orat. ii. contr. Arian. p. 530, &c.

^r See John i. 30. πρῶτός μου ἦν.

highest orders of angels or archangels: whether there be thrones or dominions, principalities or powers; they are all created in and by him: not only so, but for him, or to him; he is the final as well as efficient Cause; as much as to say, that they are made for his service and for his glory, the ultimate end of their creation. And that it may not be suspected that they have their dependence upon another, and not upon him; or that in him they do not live and move and hold their being; the Apostle adds further, that "by him all things consist." He is not Creator only once, but perpetual Creator, being the Sustainer and Preserver of the whole universe.

Is this the description of a creature? or can any thing be said higher or stronger even of God the Father, to signify his being properly Creator and Preserver of the world?^s

I go on to Heb. i. 2. where it is said "by whom (Christ) "he (God) made the worlds:" to which is subjoined that he is ἀπαύγασμα, the "brightness (or effulgency) of his glory, and the "express image of his person, and upholdeth all things by the "word of his power," ver. 3. which I shall leave without further comment, to be interpreted from what hath been said before, that I may the sooner come to another passage in the same chapter, so full and strong that all the wit of man can devise no way to elude it.

"Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of "the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands. "They shall perish; but thou remainest: and they all shall wax "old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them "up, and they shall be changed: but thou art the same, and thy "years shall not fail."

In the first place we may observe, that here the Sabellian

* The author of "Modest Plea, &c. "continued," is pleased to say, (p. 36.) that it is a "mean thing to confound "the unlearned reader with the ambi- "guity of the terms Creator and Pre- "server." I hope he had not considered how plainly the Scripture has taught, what he thinks it so mean to say; nor how frequent it was with the early Fathers, as high as the second century, to apply those very titles expressly to God the Son. This was the constant Catholic language, insomuch that the old Arians, and even Eunomius himself (see Basil.

contr. Eunom. lib. ii. p. 58.) did not refuse to style the Son Creator. Other Arians scrupled not to say, "Christum colimus ut Creatorem," (vide Maxim. apud August. p. 663. ed. Bened.) We worship Christ as Creator. If this writer had but as honourable thoughts of God the Son, as the generality of the ancient Arians had, he could not find fault with these or the like expressions; if he has not, I leave him to reflect how mean a thing it is to pretend to exceed even the most refined Arianism, and at the same time to admit the grossest.

pretences are fully obviated. The characters are all plainly personal, both in this chapter, and in the Psalm from whence this is quoted. The Socinian subtilties about the renovation of the moral world are as light and empty as the other: the words are as express as the first chapter of Genesis, for the material earth and heavens: besides that it can never be explained how the new creation and moral world shall “wax old as doth a garment,” or be “folded up as a vesture,” or be changed and perish. The Arian can deal no better with this passage than either of the two former. It is the Jehovah and God of Israel who is here spoken of, as is plain from the Psalm whence this is taken, and it is now applied by the sacred writer to Christ. The heavens are here said to have been the “works of his hands,” and he it was (it is not said, another through him) that “laid the foundation of the earth.” Here are none of the prepositions ἐν, or διὰ, by or through, to criticise upon. Those pretences, however serviceable at other times, can have no place here. If therefore either plain and strong words have any sense, or Scripture any weight, God the Son is and must be Creator, properly and strictly so, maugre all the endeavours of weak and vain men to the contrary.

Seeing then that this passage is so full and clear, that neither Socinians, Sabellians, nor Arians, can any way work it into any of their schemes, what must be done next? †Some of them have been willing to think, and bold enough to say, that these four verses were fraudulently added, and were not originally a part of this Epistle. But all the copies and ancient versions of this Epistle retain these four verses: so that any pretence of forgery or interpolation does but expose the man that makes it, and the cause that needs it. The last pretence is, that this passage is intended of God the Father, and not of Christ. But the whole context, and the whole scope and drift of the author, in citing these verses, are sufficient to confute that conceit: nor would any one, that has not an hypothesis to serve, ever suspect that the words were intended of any other but Christ, to whom they are so manifestly applied. Thus was the passage understood (and never otherwise that I know of) in the fourth and fifth centuries, and cited in proof of Christ’s being properly Creator ; not only by ^xAthanasius, Ambrose, Austin, Chrysostom, and Cyril of Alexandria, but by the elder Cyril too, who has been generally thought a very moderate man, and not much a favourer of Athanasius, though he retained the same faith. But enough of this. From what hath been said it appears now plainly and undeniably, that God the Son is properly Creator of the world. It was he that "laid the foundation of the earth," and the "heavens are the works of his hands." If there be any doubt in respect of the other texts, as not being full and explicit enough, there can be none in respect of this: so that, at length, we see Scripture itself has put an end to the disputes about the propositions ἐν and διὰ, in, by, or through, and shews that all the criticisms of our adversaries about them, if intended to prove that God the Son is not properly Creator, are groundless and false. But if any thing else be intended, they are not pertinent to the cause in hand.

† Judgment of the Fathers, p. 30.

‡ See my Defence, vol. i. p. 329.

I may here observe to you further, by the way, that those gentlemen who retreat to that subterfuge, that they may appear at least to have something to say, do not themselves know distinctly what they mean by it. Is it that God made the world by Christ, as he "wrought special miracles by the hands of Paul?" (Acts xix. 11.) Is the Father in such a sense the efficient, and the Son the ministering Cause? They do not, ^ythey dare not say it. For, besides this plain text, out of the Epistle to the Hebrews, directly against it, they cannot but know that the whole Catholic Church, down from Barnabas, (that is, from the days of the Apostles,) were of another mind; that even Origen and Eusebius, their two favourite authors, would condemn them; and that the soberer Arians themselves were so far orthodox, as to allow a proper efficiency to the Son, in the work of creation, Scripture and tradition running clear and strong for it. Since therefore a proper efficiency must be admitted, what can they pretend next? That the Son's efficiency reached not so far, was not of the same extent, as the Father's? But here Scripture, express Scripture, comes in, and precludes every pretence of this nature. "All things were made by him," says St. John, (John i. 3.) not a single thing without him: all things, says St. Paul, (Eph. iii. 9.) and again, all things by the Son, the same, and therefore as many things as of the Father, (1 Cor. viii. 6.) and again, "all things visible and invisible," &c. Coloss. i. 16. If therefore a proper efficiency, and of the same extent, must be allowed, what will our adversaries allege further to lessen it? Will they say that it is not the same in kind? that the Father, for example, created; the Son only framed or modelled? But neither will this pretence serve any better than the former: for then it would not have been said that the Father made or created the world, or all things, by his Son, but framed and modelled only. And yet we have every word applied in this case, that can be supposed to carry any weight or significancy; πάντα ἐγένετο, says St. John, all things were made, not framed or modelled only. Or if κρίσειν, to create, be stronger, πάντα ἐκρίσθη, all things were created, twice over by St. Paul, Coloss. i. 16. Or if ποιεῖν be imagined to signify something more, we have that word also, δι' οὗ τοὺς αἰῶνας ἐποίησεν, "by whom also he "made the worlds," Heb. i. 2.

^x Athanas. tom. i. p. 440, 461, 685. tom. ii. p. 10. Chrysost. in Joh. p. 44. Cyril. Alexand. Thesaur. p. 126, 205. Cyril. Hierosol. Cateches. p. 221. Pseudo-Justin. p. 296. ed. Sylburg. Ambros. de Fid. l. v. c. 2. Augustin. contr. Maxim. l. ii. p. 741. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eum. l. iv. p. 542.

^y Dr. Clarke, indeed, says, (Script. Doctr. p. 269. 2d ed.) that the Son created the world by the power of the Father: but he does not deny that he created it by his own power: that would be too plainly running counter to Scripture and the whole Catholic Church; and betraying meaner thoughts of Christ than the generality of the ancient Arians appear to have had. See above, p. 49.

If then the Son's efficiency be proper, and of the same extent, and of the same kind with the Father's, let our adversaries tell us what they would have next? They will say still, the Son is subordinate. Right; and so long as they take the other considerations along with it, that he is efficient in a proper sense, in the same kind, and in the same extent, as the Father is, we shall not dispute the point of subordination with them. The Father is primarily Creator, as the first in order, the Son secondarily, as second in order; and they are both one Creator, as they are one in nature, in power, and in operation. This is the Catholic faith, which was before Arianism; and will be after it.

Thus far I have proceeded in the proof of my position from the New Testament: and there is no further need of any other. But since the ancients have also made use of several texts of the Old Testament, it will be proper to take a short view of them also; not so much to confirm what has been before proved and wants no confirmation, as to explain and illustrate it something further, and withal to give us a clearer idea of the sentiments of the primitive writers on this head.

In the first chapter of Genesis, ver. 26,² God is introduced, speaking in the plural number, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness." This text has been understood of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, (or at least of Father and Son,) by the whole stream of Christian writers, down from the times of the Apostles. The Christians were not singular in thinking that the text intimated a plurality. The Jews before, and after, believed so too, as appears from Philo, and Justin Martyr's Dialogue with Trypho the Jew; only they interpreted the text of God and his angels, which the Christians understood of the Persons of the Trinity. Justin Martyr and others made very good use of it against the Jews, observing how absurd it was to suppose that angels could be joined in that manner with God the Father, and be able to create man, or any thing.

Thus far at least we may infer from their manner of using this text, and their reasonings upon it, that the Christian Church, in general, believed Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to create, as it were, in concert, and every Person of the Trinity to be properly Creator.

This will appear further from another text of the Old Testament, which they cite very frequently to the same purpose. It is Psalm xxxiii. 6. "By the word of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the hosts of them by the breath of his mouth:" or, as it may be understood, by his WORD, and by his SPIRIT. This they interpreted of the Λόγος, or WORD, which St. John speaks of, and of the Holy Ghost. Which interpretation ²obtained very early in the second century, and was generally received afterwards. It must indeed be presumed that those early writers would not have entirely founded any doctrine of that moment on texts so very capable of another construction. But having already imbibed the principles of Christianity from the New Testament and Catholic tradition, they easily believed that those texts intended such a sense, when they knew from other evidences, that that sense was a truth, whether taught there or no.

² Theoph. Antioch. p. 21. Ox. ed. Irenæus, p. 98, 183. ed. Bened. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. cap. xii. p. 14. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. vii. p. 503. Origen. in Joh. p. 43. Euseb. Præp. Evan. lib. vii. cap. 12. lib. xi. cap. 14. in Ps. p. 125. Athanas. p. 694. Basil.

contr. Eunom. lib. iii. p. 82, 110. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xlii. p. 714. Epiph. Anchorat. p. 29. Pseudo-Justin. Expos. Fid. p. 296. Sylb. ed. Pseudo-Ambros. de Symb. Apost. lib. vi. p. 324. ed. Bened.

Here again I must observe, that whether the text of the Psalms proves any thing or nothing to the point in hand, its being used formerly, in favour of such a doctrine, shews that that doctrine was then received, and was the faith of the Church.

There are two texts more out of Psalms, which I may put together, being both of the same import and significancy. Ps. xxxiii. 9. "He spake, and it was done; he commanded, and it stood fast." The other is Ps. cxlviii. 5. "He commanded, and they were created."

These the ^aancients understood of the three Persons; the Father being supposed to issue out his orders or commands for the creation, and the Son and Holy Ghost to execute or fulfil them. This notion ^bobtained among the Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene writers; and seems to have been grounded chiefly upon those two passages out of the Psalms, and some expressions in the first chapter of Genesis^c. What led the Fathers to take the more notice of those places, was the singular use they might be of in their disputes with Jews and Heretics. The Jews denied the divinity, or rather the distinct personality of the Λόγος, or WORD. They were not to be confuted out of the New Testament, (which was of no authority with the Jews,) but out of the Old, which both sides equally admitted. Hence it became the more necessary to search the Old Testament for proofs of the divinity or distinct personality of Christ. Now it was thought that no person would be introduced as giving out orders or commands to himself, but that such expressions denoted a plurality of persons. Who then could these other Persons be that received the commands? They could not be angels or archangels: why? because the orders were such as no angels could execute^d. They were orders to create man, and the whole de Sp. Sanct. cap. 16. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 146. Ox. ed. Hilar. p. 325, 837, 840. Athanas. p. 216, 499. See others cited in Petav. lib. ii. c. 7. p. 141.

^a Irenæus, p. 118, 183, 169, 288. Epist. Synod. Antioch. Labb. tom. i. p. 845. Orig. in Joh. p. 18, 61. Contr. Cels. p. 63, 317, 79. Euseb. Præpar. Evang. lib. vii. cap. 12. in Psal. p. 125. Athanas. p. 216, 499. Cyril. Catech. xi. p. 143, 147. Hilar. de Trin. lib. iv. p. 837.

^b Irenæus, lib. iv. cap. 38. p. 285. Hippolytus contr. Noët. p. 16. Basil.

^c Vid. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. xii. p. 506. Hilar. de Trin. lib. iv. p. 836. Athanas. Orat. ii. p. 499.

^d Οὐ γὰρ, ἔπερ ἡ παρ' ὑμῖν λεγομένη αἵρεσις δογματίζει, φαῖν ἂν ἐγὼ ἀληθὲς εἶναι, ἢ οἱ ἐκείνης διδάσκαλοι ἀποδείξαι universe. None less than God's own Son and Holy Spirit could be equal to such a charge. There are therefore two divine Persons, or at least one, besides the Father. This was their argument from the Old Testament against the Jews. They had, besides, almost the like occasion to make use of the very same argument against heretics; against the Sabellians especially, and sometimes Arians. For, as many as had a mind to prove that the Person of the Father, and he only, was God, were wont to plead that Moses and the Prophets knew of no other real Person that was God besides him; quoting Deut. vi. 4. ("Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord:") and other passages of the Old Testament of like import. Had this pretence been true, it would not have weakened the belief of a Trinity of Persons, founded upon a fuller and clearer discovery made by the Gospel. But they thought there were sufficient (though in some measure obscure) intimations given of a plurality of real Persons in the Old Testament; and accordingly they alleged those texts which I have mentioned, and abundance more too tedious to recite; insisting upon it, that Moses and the Prophets had asserted a plurality of divine Persons; and that, notwithstanding their doctrine of the Unity of God, they had actually applied the titles of God, Lord, Jehovah, &c. to more Persons than one; and that it was not the Father singly, but he, and his Son, and Holy Spirit, that created the world. The last particular (as I have before observed) they inferred from the texts which I have here cited out of the Psalms, and from others of like import. I have dwelt the longer upon this δύναται, ὅτι ἀγγέλοις ἔλεγεν, ἢ ὅτι ἀγγέλων ποίημα ἦν τὸ σῶμα τὸ ἀνθρώπειον. ἀλλὰ τοῦτο τὸ τῷ ὄντι ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς προβληθὲν γέννημα, πρὸ πάντων τῶν ποιημάτων συνῆν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ τοῦτ' ὁ πατὴρ προσομιλεῖ (fort. προσομιλεῖ.) Just. Dial. p. 187. Jebb.

—Tantus Deus, et ipse est qui per semetipsum constituit et elegit et adornavit, et continet omnia—Non ergo angeli fecerunt nos nec nos plasnaverunt, nec angeli potuerunt imaginem facere Dei; nec alius quis præter verbum Domini, nec virtus longe absistens a Patre universorum. Nec enim indigebat horum Deus ad faciendum quæ ipse prædefinierat fieri, quasi ipse suas non haberet manus.

Adest enim ei semper Verbum et Sapientia, Filius et Spiritus, per quos, et in quibus omnia libere et sponte fecit, ad quos et loquitur dicens, Faciamus hominem, &c. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 20. p. 253.

Nihil in totum Diabolus invenitur fecisse, videlicet cum et ipse creatura sit Dei, quemadmodum et reliqui angeli. Iren. p. 288.

Εἰ γὰρ ἐνετεῖλατο ὁ Θεὸς, καὶ ἐκτίσθη τὰ δημιουργήματα, τίς ἂν κατὰ τὸ ἀρέσκον τῷ προφητικῷ πνεύματι, εἶη ὁ τὴν τηλικαύτην τοῦ πατρὸς ἐντολὴν ἐκκληρώσαι δυναθεὶς, ἢ ὁ (ὡς οὕτως ὀνομάσω) ἔμφυχτος λόγος καὶ ἀλήθεια τυγχάνων; Orig. contr. Cels. lib. ii. p. 63.

matter, because some persons, upon their first reading of the Ante-Nicene Fathers, (meeting with those passages where the Father is said to have commanded, and the Son to have executed his orders,) are apt either to be offended at them, or to draw strange conclusions from them: not considering that such men as Athanasius, Basil, and Cyril, made no scruple of them, understanding very well what such expressions meant at that time, and with what view they were intended. The patrons of Arianism will never be able to serve their cause at all by them. They would indeed gladly infer, that since the Father is introduced as commanding, and the Son as fulfilling, that therefore the Son was supposed of an inferior nature to the Father. But if they please to take a view of the whole argument, as it stands in the primitive writers, they will find that the very contrary is the truth. For the argument is this: the Father is represented in Scripture as giving out commands for the creation of the universe: no inferior person, no angel or archangel, no creature whatever, could be equal to the office, or able to execute those commands: therefore there must be some other Person or Persons, distinct from the Father, and superior to all creatures; and those are his Son, and his Holy Spirit. Thus we see, that the primitive writers proceeded upon a supposition directly opposite to what the Arians pretend: for had they supposed the Son and Holy Ghost to be creatures, there had been no force at all in their argument; nor could they, in that way, have proved that there was any Son or Holy Ghost at all. But admitting that the work of creation was too big for any creature, and admitting at the same time that there were other Persons, besides the Father, who created the world; the consequence is very clear, that there are more divine uncreated Persons than one; and thus the doctrine of a coeternal Trinity is established.

I must entreat you to observe, that I do not take upon me to maintain the whole premises, which those ancient writers went upon. I think the argument from those texts is barely probable: I do not apprehend that a plurality of Persons can certainly be inferred, merely from such forms of expression, where the Father is said to have commanded, and things were created.

* See the meaning of them clearly opened and explained by Athanasius. Orat. ii. p. 499.

† See the quotations from Irenæus especially.

The style is not improper or unsuitable, as I humbly conceive, though the Father were supposed the only Person concerned in creating. It is a handsome way of expressing that to will or to do is with God one and the same thing. All that I intend is, that the Fathers, who made use of that way of reasoning, believed that God the Son was properly Creator (otherwise there is neither force nor pertinency in their argument) and properly divine. As to the argument itself, they had no need of it, but in occasional disputes, where it might be of some service, ad homines at least; or where the New Testament proofs, on which they chiefly grounded their doctrine, could not be admitted at all.

I shall now just give you a brief summary of the doctrine of the primitive Church, in this article, and then take my leave of you for this time. They believed that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, were distinct Persons, and all jointly concerned in the creation of the world; not as many Creators, but as one Creator; not dividing the work into parts, but as concurring in the whole, and in every part. Man, and every man, was supposed the creature of the whole Trinity; and so also the universe, and every part of the universe, was believed to be the creature of all, there being no creatures of the Father's but what were likewise creatures of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Yet they admitted some distinction in the manner of operation, reserving to the Father, as first Person, some sort of preeminence in every thing. He was primarily considered as Creator by the operation of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; but without excluding them from a proper efficiency. So far from it, that they chose rather to represent the Father as willing or designing, and the two other Persons as acting and executing; contributing, as it were, but in subordination to one Head, to the beginning, the growth, and the perfection of every work. They ventured no further, nor was it proper to indulge imagination in a matter so sublime, and above the comprehension of men or angels. It is sufficient to know, that the creation was the effect of three Persons, whose operations were undivided, as their nature and essence is; and whose powers, perfections, and glory are one. But I must not anticipate what more properly belongs to my second head of discourse.

Having shewn from Scripture, that God the Son is strictly and properly Creator of men, of angels, and of the whole universe, I am next to consider the force of the argument deducible from it, in favour of Christ's divinity. But the first part having already taken up the full time allowable in discourses of this nature, I must be content to defer the remainder to another opportunity.

Christ properly Creator :

OR

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

PROVED FROM CREATION.

The third Sermon preached November 4, 1719.

JOHN i. 3.

All things were made by him, and without him was not any thing made that was made.

IN discoursing on these words, I proposed three things :

1. To shew that God the Son, a distinct Person from God the Father, is strictly and properly Creator, and efficient Cause of all things.
2. To consider the force of the argument arising from it, in favour of Christ's divinity.
3. To make some reflections and observations upon the whole, for our further improvement.

I had then no more time than was necessary to be taken up in making good my first position : which, I hope, I have clearly shewn to be founded in express words of Scripture, and confirmed all along by the unanimous suffrage of Catholic antiquity. The two remaining parts I reserved for the subject-matter of our present meditations. I proceed then to my second general head of discourse.

II. To consider the force of the argument, in respect of Christ's divinity, contained in this ; that he is properly Creator of men, of angels, of all things. I shall consider it under three views, debating the point distinctly, from the reason of the thing, from Scripture, and from antiquity.

1. From the reason of the thing. I shall not here treat of the subject in the scholastic way; which would afford but dry entertainment: besides that, the argument would suffer by it, and lose much of its force and efficacy. There is sometimes in moral probabilities an irresistible strength, little short of the strictest demonstration. There is something so affecting and sensible under them, that they cannot fail of making their way into every well-disposed and ingenuous mind: and so it often happens that they do as infallibly (and more agreeably) win over our assent, as demonstration can force it. To come to the business in hand: God the Son is Creator of all things. On that foundation I am to proceed: and when I say Creator, I include Sustainer and Preserver. Let us then distinctly consider him:

1. As Creator of man.
2. As Creator of the earth, and of all things in it.
3. As Creator of the heavens, with all their host.
4. As Creator of angels and archangels, thrones and dominions, principalities and powers, which live, and move, and have their being from, and in, the Son of God.

I do not heighten or rhetoricate at all, in these particulars. They are no more than strict and close comment upon Coloss. i. 16. and Heb. i. 10. only branching out into parts what is there couched and comprised in few words.

1. First then, let us consider our blessed Lord as Creator of man, of all men living quite round the globe; of all that have lived and died from Adam down to this day. I leave it to the anatomists and physiologists to describe the wonderful mechanism and exquisite workmanship of the human body: the erect posture, the figure and shape, the size and stature, the structure and use of every part, and the symmetry of the whole; which carry in them uncontestable proofs of the skill, and the contrivance, and the consummate wisdom of him that made us. How many lectures might be read upon the fabric of the eye, the texture of the brain, the configuration of the muscles, and disposition of the nerves, or glands; all bearing testimony to the power and greatness of the Son of God; of whom we may now say, that "he hath set the members every one of them in "the body, as it hath pleased him;" and hath so "tempered "the body together," as admirably to answer all the wise ends and purposes designed by him. The same wisdom, which is visible in every single individual, reaches at the same time to the whole species round the globe. All are supported, sustained, and actuated by God the Son, in "whom all things consist." He is equally present to all, supplying motion, nutriment, and strength to every individual, extending his providential care to the ends of the earth, and in one comprehensive view grasping the whole system. For,

2. We are to consider him as Creator of the terraqueous globe, the earth and all things in it. He "has laid the foundations thereof," divided it into sea and land, garnished it with plants, trees, and flowers, stocked it with living creatures for the use of man, and plentifully furnished it with the most grateful and unexpressible variety. Every herb that grows, every spire of grass that springs up, every creeping thing that moveth upon the face of the earth, proclaims the wisdom of its Maker, sounds forth the praises of the Son of God. I may here apply the words of the Psalmist, which, whether meant of Father or Son, are certainly applicable to both. "Praise the Lord from the earth, ye dragons, and all deeps: fire, and hail; snow, and vapours; stormy wind fulfilling his word: mountains, and all hills; fruitful trees, and all cedars: beasts, and all cattle; creeping things, and flying fowl: kings of the earth, and all people; princes, and all judges of the earth: both young men, and maidens; old men, and children: let them praise the name of the Lord: for his name alone is excellent; his glory is above the earth and heaven." Psalm cxlviii. It would lead me too far off from my purpose to consider, or to enumerate, the many legible characters of a wisdom and power nothing short of divine, which are every where discoverable within and without this earth whereon we live. These I leave to the naturalists to describe. No man that considers its stupendous size, or bulk alone, but must think it a work too august and great for any thing less than a divine architect. We have often triumphed over atheists upon this head, alleging that no power or wisdom less than infinite could be equal to the task. The very same topics, to such as believe the Scriptures, may be as justly urged for the divinity of God the Son. It was his hand that made all these things, and by his power they are sustained and held together. And yet these are little things, and as nothing in comparison. For,

3. We are thirdly to consider, that the heavens also are the “works of his hands.” That huge and vast compass, that immense region of ether, and therein the sun, with its planetary chorus dancing round it, the fixed stars, (perhaps suns too, with their planets rolling about them,) whatever modern much improved astronomy has discovered, or whatever yet further discoveries future ages may bring to light; all things visible and invisible have the Son of God for their Creator, Sustainer, and Preserver. If we survey the magnitude of the heavenly bodies, some smaller, most vastly bigger than our own globe, all of an amazing size and greatness; if we consider the nice proportion of their distances, the regularity of their situations, the harmony of their courses, and uniformity of all their motions; they cannot but raise in us an idea of the infinite power, wisdom, and greatness of him that made them. This is a theme of very wide extent, and has been often and excellently handled in defence of our common religion, against the atheists and sceptics of our age or nation. It is with pleasure I observe, that the same topics (only taking in those Scriptures which they and we own) will almost equally serve against Arians or Socinians, or any that presume to deny the divinity of God the Son. It is clear from the Sacred Writ, that he “created” all things, and that by him “all things consist:” and therefore it is evident, that all the marks of wisdom, power, or majesty, discoverable in this grand palace, and august structure of the universe, are so many arguments of his divinity, and proclaim him to be the eternal and omnipotent God. I have one particular more to urge under this head. Hitherto I have been speaking of sun, moon, and stars, prodigiously great, but yet inanimate bodies; and creatures less perfect than we ourselves are, who make a part, though the lowest part, of the rational creation. We are further to consider,

4. That the very angels themselves, the top, surely, of the creation, those bright intelligences, and glorious ministers of the court of heaven, are the creatures and workmanship of the Son of God. Whether they be thrones or dominions, principalities or powers, they were all created, not only by him, but for him. Myriads of those heavenly spirits are continually serving and praising him. To him they owe their perfections, their strength, their glory, their life, their very being; and on him they depend for their support and sustenance. I shall proceed no further: I have said enough. I leave it to any man of plain good sense, and common discernment, to pass a judgment, whether, supposing these facts be true, (and they are true, if plain Scripture be so,) any longer doubt can be made of the real and essential divinity of the Son of God. If any one tells me, after all, that this does not amount to strict demonstration, because we cannot make a certain estimate of the scale of being, nor define peremptorily what degrees of perfection there may be short of infinite; I say, if any one urges this, I should allow that there is not what may be called strict demonstration: but it is demonstration that the evidence is such as ought to convince every wise and considerate man; and such as ought to have the same effect upon the mind as a thousand demonstrations. There are many things not capable of strict demonstration; and yet so evident and undoubted, that a man would forfeit the very character of sobriety and common sense, that should seriously make the least question of them. I might mention, for instance, the existence of the world about us; which good philosophers have thought not capable of strict demonstration. But a man would hardly be supposed well in his wits, that should seriously entertain any the least doubt or suspicion concerning it. His eyes, his ears, and all his senses bear testimony to the truth and certainty of it: and if it be not strictly demonstrable in the rational way, yet this is demonstrable, that the nature and circumstances of men are such, that he both may and must believe it. The same, in a great measure, I am persuaded, is the case which I have been mentioning. For, allowing the first position, that the Son of God is properly Creator of men, of angels, and of the universe; there is no man that attends to it, and considers it in its full latitude, but must come to this conclusion, that the Son of God is no creature, nor any thing less than the eternal and infinite God. So much for my first head of argument, from the nature and reason of the thing itself. My second head of argument is from Scripture-texts.

2. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, the same who had told us, in his first chapter, that the Son had "laid the foundation of the earth," and that the "heavens were the works of his hands;" I say, the same author observes, ch. iii. ver. 4, that "he that built all things is God;" thus establishing the very conclusion which we are seeking after, as he had before done the premises. This, considered as a general maxim, must be applicable to the particular instance of God the Son, if it was he that "built all things," as hath been proved: nay, it is reasonable to believe that the Apostle intended it particularly of God the Son. This construction is very suitable to the argument which the author was upon, in that chapter; and to the high things spoken of the Son in chapter the first: there is nothing in the context but what extremely favours and confirms it; except it be that, verse the sixth, it is said, "Christ as a "Son over his own house," intimating as if he was not that Person before spoken of, (who is called God, ver. 4,) but Son of that Person. But to this it may be replied, that the author was here setting forth the preference of Christ above Moses: the comparison was between those two persons only. How the Person of the Father came in here, is not easy to account: but understanding it of the Person of the Son, the sense is clear, the argument proper and pertinent. As to his being called God in the fourth verse, and Son in the sixth, it was very proper and significant, because he is so God, as withal to be Son of God, or God of God.

I proceed now to another text, Rom. i. 20. "The invisible "things of him from the creation of the world are clearly seen, "being understood by the things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse." If then, as the Apostle here testifies, the work of creation proclaims the eternity and divinity of its Creator, it will follow from thence, that God the Son as Creator must be eternal, and strictly divine. I am sensible that St. Paul's argument may be taken under another view. For it may mean, not that the magnificence or greatness of the work proves that every Creator must be eternal, or God; but that there must be one eternal first Cause of all things; otherwise there would be a progress of causes, one higher than another, in infinitum, which is absurd. The first construction I take to be the more probable, as it is more obvious to common capacities, and as the argument in that view strikes the more sensibly, being such as few could miss of; and therefore the Gentiles were without excuse, for not attending to it. However this be, I lay no great stress upon it, designing a more general, and, I think, more convincing argument out of Scripture, than I have hitherto mentioned; which is this: that the work of creation is every where represented as the certain mark and characteristic of the true God. It is the favourite topic which God is pleased to insist most upon, whenever he would either distinguish his own peculiar majesty and power, above and beyond all the gods of the nations, or when he would excite in his people the highest idea possible, suitable to his transcendent excellency and peerless perfections. Numberless are the texts of the Old Testament, which might be cited to this purpose. I shall single out as many as may serve to give a due light and force to the present argument.

Hezekiah, in his prayer to God, thus expresses himself: "O Lord God of Israel, which dwellest between the cherubims, thou art the God, even thou alone, of all the kingdoms of the earth." Then follows the reason why he is so eminently distinguished, and so infinitely superior to all others: "Thou hast made heaven and earth." 2 Kings xix. 15.

Job, describing the supereminent majesty of the one true God, thus elegantly sets it forth: "He stretcheth out the north over the empty place, and hangeth the earth upon nothing. He bindeth up the waters in his thick clouds; and the cloud is not rent under them—The pillars of heaven tremble, and are astonished at his reproof. He divideth the sea with his power.—By his Spirit he hath garnished the heavens; his hand hath formed the crooked serpent." Job xxvi. 7, &c.

In the Psalms we meet with a great deal to the same purpose. "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handywork." Ps. xix. 1. "All the gods of the nations are idols: but the Lord made the heavens." Ps. xcvi. 5. "The heavens are thine, the earth also is thine: as for the world and the fulness thereof, thou hast founded them. The north and the south, thou hast created them." Ps. lxxxix. 11, 12.

More to the same effect occurs perpetually in the Prophets. I shall cite a few examples only. "Lift up your eyes on high, and behold who hath created these things, that bringeth out their host by number," &c. Isa. xl. 26. "Who hath measured the waters in the hollow of his hand, and meted out heaven with the span, and comprehended the dust of the earth in a measure, and weighed the mountains in scales, and the hills in a balance?" Isa. xl. 12. "Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it," &c. Isa. xlii. 5. "Thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed thee, O Israel." Isa. xliii. 1. So again;

“ I am the Lord, and there is none else. I form the light, and “ create darkness.” Isa. xlv. 6, 7. “ I have made the earth, “ and created man upon it; I, even my hands, have stretched “ out the heavens, and all their host have I commanded.” Isa. xlv. 12. “ Thus shall ye say unto them, The gods that have “ not made the heavens and the earth, even they shall perish “ from the earth, and from under these heavens. He hath “ made the earth by his power, he hath established the world “ by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heavens by his “ discretion.” Jer. x. 11, 12.

It would be tedious to add more texts. These are sufficient to shew what a particular stress and emphasis is laid upon God's being Creator of all things. It is the distinguishing character of the one true God; and whenever Scripture intended to raise in men's minds such esteem and veneration as they ought to have for the supreme God of Israel, nothing higher or greater could be said than this, that he had created the universe, had “ laid the foundations of the earth,” and that the “ heavens were the works of his hands.” (See Psalm oii. 25, 26.) This is further confirmed from the New Testament, Rom. i. 25, where St. Paul directs us to worship the Creator, in opposition to all creature-worship. From whence it is plain that the Apostle supposes the Creator, or Person creating, to be no creature, but God “ blessed for ever :” from whence also, by the way, we may remark that Scripture knows no medium between God and creature, but includes all things and all persons whatever under that distinction; as does also antiquity unanimately, and all sound philosophy, and the common sense and reason of mankind. But to proceed.

Seeing then that the title of Creator is thus magnificently and elegantly set forth in holy Scripture, as the distinguishing mark of eminency, the epitome of all perfection, and the sure and certain character of true Divinity: if nothing higher or stronger can be thought on, to raise in us the most sublime, awful, and exalted idea of the supreme God of Israel; and if the Son of God be plainly and evidently set forth to us under this same high character: if he created all things, visible and invisible; if he “ laid the foundations of the earth,” and if the “ heavens are “ the works of his hands :” if these be the premises, let any man of common abilities, that has not his faculties foreclosed, or is not steeled against conviction, be left to draw the conclusion.

To say of God the Son, that he is the Maker of the world, of the kinds in it, as well as of the grand palace itself, (as a late ingenious author^a expresses it,) is to say as much and as high of him, as it is possible to say or to conceive of any other person, however named: because the whole that we can naturally know or apprehend of God, his powers or perfections, is only what we can infer from his work of creation. Hence it is, that Socinians and Sabellians have joined with the Catholics in condemning the Arians for making two or more creators, the same in effect with two eternal gods: and since there is no way of avoiding it, but either by saying that Father and Son are one Creator, or else denying the Son to be Creator at all; those gentlemen have chose the latter, rather than part with their main principle, that the "unity of God is an unity of Person." But then they manifestly run counter to Scripture, which evidently makes the Son of God Creator, as I have before shewn.

3. I proceed now, thirdly, to inquire into the sentiments of the ancients, upon this head; whether they thought it did not exceed the power of a creature to create any thing, or whether the work of creating was not looked upon as a work properly divine, belonging to God only. It does not appear that any, except heretics, ever dogmatically^b ascribed the work of creation, or any part of it, to any creature.

Simon Magus, borrowing his sentiments from the Platonic philosophy, did not scruple to assert, even in the times of the Apostles, that this lower world was made by angels. After him, ^dMenander, ^eSaturninus, ^fBasilides, ^gCarpocrates, ^hCerintus, with the infamous crew of Gnostics, taught the same, or very nearly the same doctrine; and this within the first century. Cerdo and Marcion of the second century have been thought by some to have asserted the same principles in the main, differing rather in words than in *reality*ⁱ. The Valentinians also were so far in the sentiments of the Gnostics, as to ascribe the creation of the lower world to a creature of their own devising, whom

^a Mr. Nye, Explication of the Divine Unity, p. 91.

^b Origen indeed seems to have indulged some fanciful conjectures that way, in some of his looser writings, if they be his. (See Comm. in Joh. p. 42, 43.) But in his more accurate and certainly genuine works, nothing appears of it, but the contrary.

^c Irenæus lib. i. cap. 23. p. 99.

^d Ibid. p. 100.

^e Ibid.

^f Ibid. p. 101.

^g Ibid. p. 103.

^h Ibid. p. 105.

ⁱ Vid. Dissert. Præv. ad Iren. et Bened. p. 70.

they called Demiurgus, or Creator. These wild and vain conceits were utterly detested by the sober Catholics; who would not so much as hear of any angel or archangel's creating the world, or any part of it; but ascribed it wholly to the joint operation of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. It appears to have been a rule and maxim of the Church, in Irenæus's time^k, and probably all along, that no creature whatever could have any hand in creating; but that creating was an indisputable mark of a divine immutable nature. These principles seem to have obtained constantly in the Church long before the Nicene Council. No sooner did the Arian controversy arise, but the Catholics, upon their old principles, charged the Arians with great inconsistency, as making a creature of the Son of God, and yet admitting him to be Creator. They scrupled not to tell them, that this was copying after Valentinus, and reviving the principles of the Gnostics: that it was confounding the ideas of Creator and creature, and was all over contradictory and repugnant. No argument bore harder upon the Arians than this, as appears by the perplexity and confusion they were in upon it; not being able to come to any fixed and certain resolution in it. Scripture and Catholic tradition appear clear, full, and strong for the Son's being properly and strictly Framer and Maker of the world; and there were but few in comparison that durst go such lengths as openly to deny it: on the other hand, to make a creature-creator, was in a manner unheard of, except among heretics, and was, besides, harsh and shocking even to common sense^l.

To soften this matter, the Arians, many of them, would not

^k Nihil enim in totum Diabolus invenitur fecisse, videlicet cum et ipse Creatura sit Dei, quemadmodum et reliqui angeli. Omnia enim fecit Deus, quemadmodum et David ait: Quoniam ipse dixit et facta sunt; ipse præcepit et creata sunt. Psal. cxlviii. 5. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 41. p. 288.

Et hoc Deus ab homine differt, quoniam Deus quidem facit, homo autem fit: et quidem qui facit semper idem est. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 12. p. 240.

That this was likewise the sense of all antiquity appears from hence, that all the Fathers, where they declare against creature-worship, do at the same time declare for the worship of the Creator: constantly opposing Creator and creature to each other, in such a manner as shews plainly that they thought there was no medium between, and that creation belonged to God alone, not to any creature.

See Athenagoras, p. 56. Tertull. Apolog. c. 17. Clem. Alex. p. 55, 59. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 158, 375.

^l Quis auctorem inter opera sua deputet, ut videatur id esse quod fecit? Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 5. p. 450.

own that they held the Son to be a creature; which was presence only, and playing with words: for had they not only verbally, but really intended that the Son was no creature, they and the Catholics could have had no further dispute. But this was a contrivance to dissemble an absurdity too gross to be owned, and to disguise a difficulty which they could not answer. They had, besides, many little arts and subterfuges, to lessen and undervalue the Son's part or province in the work of creation, such as I have mentioned and confuted above; the same that are made use of by their successors at this day. But all would not do: Scripture was plain and clear, and tradition full and strong; and was not to be bore down by little quirks and subtilities. In fine, truth prevailed, Arianism daily lost ground; and this very argument, from the Son's concern in the work of creation, contributed, as much as any other, to sink it. The strength of it has been often tried since. The Socinians, who at the beginning were most of them Arians, were soon sensible of this difficulty. They knew not what to make of two Creators upon the Arian scheme, nor how to avoid it, if the texts were to be understood literally of a proper creation: and this, very probably, was one main reason of their giving the Arian scheme up, and running in with the Photinian hypothesis, which looked more defensible. They observed that the texts, which speak of the Son's being Creator, were few in comparison; and therefore thought, they might be able to deal with them; being never at a loss for some subtle and surprising meaning for any text in the Scripture which made against them. Their device, at length, was to interpret every text of a metaphorical creation: and so they left the Arians to shift as they could, resting themselves upon a new bottom. Yet this could not hold long, though supported and set off with all the advantages of wit and criticism. Several of the acutest and ablest of the Unitarians grew dissatisfied with it, and began themselves to feel the force of, and to close in with, the arguments of the Trinitarians against it. The result was, the preferring the old Sabellian before the late Socinian construction: and yet that is as manifestly unscriptural, false, and groundless, as either Socinian or Arian. But thus do men rove and range about, after they have once forsaken the truth, and have given themselves up to the conduct of their private fancies, instead of adhering to God's written word, and to the most faithful guide, for the interpretation of it, the primitive and Catholic Church. I thought it not improper to hint thus much of the history of the argument whereof I have been discoursing. It has lost no weight or strength all the time: for truth is always the same. The variety of methods thought on to elude it, only confirm it so much the more. I doubt not but the Unitarians, of every denomination, are very sensible, that our interpretation of Scripture, so far as concerns this point, is the most easy, obvious, and natural, and most agreeable to the letter of the inspired writers: only they have some scruples about three and one, and know not how to digest three Persons that create, and yet but one Creator. There is all the difficulty: and so they choose to follow philosophical conjectures, (which they call reason,) rather than the dictates of true and sound reason, which will tell us, that we ought not to be wise beyond what is written, nor put a violent construction on any passages, where there is no necessity for it, nor leave a safe and plain rule, to follow our own wanderings. But enough of this. I have now finished, in a great measure, what I designed, having explained and vindicated the argument for Christ's divinity drawn from the consideration of his being Creator of the world. In a former discourse I endeavoured to maintain the premises; and now in this, to make good the conclusion. The sum of it is this: God the Son is Creator of the universe: the Creator of the universe is strictly and truly God: therefore God the Son is strictly and truly, or essentially God, which was to be proved. It remains now only, in the third and last place,

III. To make some reflections and observations upon the whole.

1. Having before shewn the truth and certainty of our principles, give me leave, in conclusion, to recommend them further from their plainness and simplicity. The Arians were never more perplexed about any thing, than in accounting for God's taking in a creature to be his agent and operator in making the world^m. What? make one creature in order to make others? Why might he not rather have made all creatures, as well as one, and reserved the sole glory of so great and so stupendous a work, as that of creating, to his own self? Did he want the assistance of an inferior being? Or was not his own will and fiat sufficient to give birth to all things? Besides, did he cease to work after he made the Son, leaving it to a creature of his own to have, in a manner, the honour of doing of every thing else, and to be the immediate agent and manager in all things, both in heaven and earth? These were tenets which appeared very harsh and strange, and were not naturally, scarce tolerably, accounted for on the Arian hypothesis. But, upon the Catholic scheme, all is easy, expedite, and clear. The Son is of the same nature and substance with the Father; so nearly allied, so closely united, that nothing could be the work of one, without being at the same time the work of both: hence it was, that the Son was Joint-Creator with the Father, that "all things were made by him," and nothing without him. It was not ⁿ possible for them either to act or to exist separately; and therefore it is, that the work of creation is in Scripture attributed to both. This is an easy and natural account of the whole thing; and besides very agreeable to Scripture. "My Father worketh hitherto, and I work." John v. 17. "What things soever he doth, these also doth the Son likewise." John v. 19.

^m Vid. Athan. Orat. ii. p. 496.

2. Another thing which recommends our principles is, their great consistency with each other, and with the principles of the Catholic Church, in this article especially, from the very beginning. When the Arians first broached their heresy, they had some plausible things to urge, particularly in respect of the generation of the Son, which was their principal topic, and which they most delighted to dwell upon. But then they took but a partial and superficial view of things, and knew not how to work up a consistent scheme. The Church had all along set forth God the Son as Framer, Creator, Maker, nay, and Sustainer too, of all things, in subordination to the Father. The subordination looked well on the Arian side; but Creator and Preserver were strange attributes to be applied to a creature. This alone was sufficient to shew, that the Catholic Church had never gone upon Arian principles; having so unanimously and so expressly ⁿ Οὐκ ἠδύνατο μὴ δι' αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι τὰ δημιουργήματα· καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ φῶς τῷ ἀπανγύσματι τὰ πάντα φωτίζει, καὶ ἄνευ τοῦ ἀπανγύσματος οὐκ ἂν τι φωτισθείη. οὕτω καὶ ὁ πατήρ, ὡς διὰ χειρὸς, ἐν τῷ λόγῳ εἰργάσατο τὰ πάντα, &c. Athanas. Orat. ii. p. 498.

Comp. Cyril. Alex. Comm. in Joh. i. 3. p. 45.

ascribed creative powers to the Son of God; and not only so, but had supposed him Inspector and Governor of the whole universe^o, extending his power and presence through the whole compass of being. That the fact was really thus, besides many other evidences, one might reasonably infer from the works of Eusebius alone; of whom I may venture to say, that he never would have ascribed more power, dignity, or perfection to the Son of God, than the plain force of Scripture and Catholic tradition obliged him to. This man, though a favourer of the Arians, (of the men at least, if not of their cause,) yet everywhere says many high and great things of the Son's creating and governing the whole universe, such as any man of plain sense must think can belong to no creature, but to God only.

In his oration before the Emperor Constantine he describes God the Son, under the most endearing and magnificent characters imaginable. "He is the omnipotent Lord and Governor of the whole universe, the framer and disposer of all things, who is above all, and through all, and in all; pervading and permeating all things both above and below, earthly and heavenly, visible and invisible. It is he that formed and brought into regularity the confused chaos, made it habitable and pleasurable, adorned it with trees, plants, and flowers, stored the sea with fishes, and the land with variety of animals, supporting, preserving, and sustaining them all. It is he that gave the sun its light, and who directs the courses of the stars; who is superintendent every where, and steers the whole universe. To him the very angels owe their life, their light, their knowledge, or whatever excellencies and perfections they stand possessed of. In a word, he is set forth as operator and manager, director and supervisor over all the works of God, shedding his rich blessings, and distributing his bounties through the whole creation." This is Eusebius's account of God the Son, as it lies scattered through that oration^p. A great deal too much for any Arian to say, and more than can be tolerably accounted for, upon any other than Catholic principles. I shall not here pass any positive judgment upon Eusebius, about whom the learned world has been so much divided. I shall only say,

^o Iren. p. 190, 315. Clem. Alex. Novat. cap. 14.
 p. 123, 273, 831. Tertull. adv. Prax. p. 501, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, cap. xxiii. p. 514. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 63, 164, 239. in Johan. p. 122, 128, 531, &c.

that if he was an Arian at the bottom, he was the most inconsistent one that ever was. He ought either to have been much more of an Arian than he appears to have been, or no Arian at all. He ascribed so much to God the Son, that he hardly left any thing peculiar to the Father, but a kind of nominal greatness and majesty, as it were to be above and beyond the world. In short, he describes him, as it were, sitting in his throne of state, and looking on, and God the Son as acting and performing every thing. Athanasius's account of this matter appears much more rational and consistent. For indeed it is by no means reconcilable with good sense, and the truth and reason of things, to allow so much to God the Son as Eusebius did, and not to allow him every thing which Athanasius, with other Catholics at that time, (as the Catholic Church had all along,) ascribed to him. It was a weak thing to pretend to honour the Son of God by halves. A creature or no creature, was the question. The Arians innovated in making the Son a creature, and yet were minded to keep up, in other respects, the same honours and acknowledgments which had been paid him before. This was trifling and inconsistent. The Catholics were wiser men. They preserved the same honour and respect which had been formerly paid to God the Son ; but withal, carefully looked after the foundation of it ; that so they might be able not only to do their duty, but to give a reason also for the doing it. This was acting with thought and judgment ; in which they appear to have been as much superior to their adversaries, all along, as in true piety, probity, and sincerity. But,

3dly and lastly, I would observe to you, what I before hinted, that while we acknowledge the Son of God to be Creator, we acknowledge him a Son also : the second only, not the first Person of the Trinity. The Father therefore is primarily Creator, as Father. He is first in conception, whenever we speak of the divine nature. And hence it is that he is said to create by the Son, and he is eminently and emphatically represented in the Creeds, as Maker of heaven and earth, the Son having another title, more peculiar to him, that of Redeemer. The Nicene Creed (as do many other ancient Creeds) takes notice of the worlds' being made by the Son ; but yet so that he did not make the worlds by the Father, but the Father by him. This is the constant language of antiquity, always keeping up some preeminence of order, as proper to the first Person, along with the true essential divinity of the other two. This distinction of order, consistent with a parity of nature, they learned from Scripture, and inviolably maintained. For thus they thought that, by referring all things to one Head and Fountain, they should preserve the unity, along with the distinction; and consistently teach a plurality of Persons in one Godhead, as we do at this day. There can be no such thing as Tritheism, upon the principles of the ancient Church, so long as a proper Sonship and subordination is allowed: for therein consists the relation, the alliance, the strict union of the Persons, while they are considered, as I may say, of the same stock, and included in each other. But take away that relation and alliance, either by supposing three independent separate principles, or by making two of the Persons creatures, and consequently of a different nature from the other; and then immediately commences either Tritheism, strictly so called, or Gentile Polytheism. So that the Catholic doctrine is the only security against a plurality of Gods; unless we take our last refuge in Sabellianism, which is utterly repugnant to the whole tenor of Scripture, and to the doctrine of the universal Church. “Now to God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, three Persons and one God, be all honour and glory, power and dominion, henceforth and for evermore.” Amen.

The Scripture-Unity not an Unity of Person :

OR

THE DIVINE UNITY

STATED AND CLEARED.

The fourth Sermon preached Dec. 2, 1719.

MARK xii. 29.

Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Κύριος εἷς ἐστίν.

Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord.

MY design in taking this text is to inquire into the Scripture-notion of the Divine Unity: a point very necessary to be stated and cleared, in order to a right understanding of the doctrine of the Trinity. I was once inclinable to defer the treating of it some time longer; thinking it most suitable to the rules of strict method to throw it off to the last part of what I intend upon this subject. But I considered, that while I am asserting the divinity of more Persons than one, the thought will, in a manner, perpetually occur, how it can be consistent with the Scripture-account of the Divine Unity: and many may be impatient to have that point settled before we go further. Upon this consideration, I thought it advisable to postpone this matter no longer, choosing rather to break in upon the rules of strict method, than to suffer a prejudice to lie upon the minds of any, which might so easily be removed. I shall therefore now fall directly to the business of the Unity.

The words which I have chosen to discourse on appear first in Deuteronomy, chap. vi. ver. 4, from whence they are cited by our blessed Lord, and thereby made a doctrine of the Gospel, as before of the Law. "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is "one Lord." I think it proper, in the entrance, to take notice, that the original word in the Hebrew for Lord, is Jehovah, (according to our now customary way of reading and pronouncing it;) and if we put Jehovah, instead of Lord, into the English text, it will then run thus: Jehovah our God is one Jehovah. The use which I intend of this will appear presently.

There are three several constructions of this one short sentence. The differences betwixt them may appear slight, but are really of moment in this controversy, as will be seen in the sequel. The Anti-Trinitarians of all sorts have here an interest to serve in making the word Jehovah to be nothing more than the proper name of one Person only. It is for this reason chiefly they contrive to change the obvious, natural order and construction of the words: for otherwise indeed, upon their hypothesis, they would scarce be sense. Suppose it were said, David, our king, is one David; or Abraham, our father, is one Abraham; what sense would there be in it? And yet this sentence, Jehovah our God is one Jehovah, supposing Jehovah to be merely a proper name, will be just such another saying, and is too flat and insipid a sense to be suffered to pass upon the sacred writings. This our adversaries are sensible of, and therefore, to salve their hypothesis, they make bold with the order and construction of the words two ways; which I shall here previously take notice of and examine, and then proceed to lay down the third construction, which is the only true one.

1. The first way is, to turn the sentence thus: Jehovah is our God, Jehovah only. Here you see, in this form, Jehovah may be a proper name, and the words are good sense too: and so, they think, both points are secured. But the objection against it is, that the words here in St. Mark (and indeed those in Deuteronomy) will not bear that construction. For then the words should have been thus: Κύριός ἐστιν ὁ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, Κύριος μόνος, which is very different from what we find, and is quite another proposition.

2. A second way of construing the words is thus: Jehovah our God, even Jehovah, is one Person. Here again you will observe, that Jehovah may be understood as a proper name, which is thought a great point gained; and a greater than that is intended by interpreting one, one Person. So there are thought to be two ends served at once. But it will be easy to defeat them both; which we shall see presently, as soon as we come to assert and explain the true construction of the place.

I shall here only examine a pretence which is ^a made from Zechariah xiv. 9. in favour of this fanciful interpretation. The verse runs thus in our translation: "And the Lord shall be King over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one."

Here it is thought that the truer rendering of the latter part should be thus; The Lord (or Jehovah) shall be one, and his name one. That is, say they, The Lord shall be one Person. It is somewhat strange that they do not add likewise, that his name shall be one thing, to answer to the other. It requires no great acumen to perceive that the attribute of one is applied to Jehovah in the same manner as it is to the name; and so it is eis, or unus, in the masculine gender, when applied to Lord; εἷς, or unum, in the neuter gender, when applied to name. And it is evident that the meaning only is, that as there shall not be many names, but one name acknowledged in that day over all the earth; so there shall not be many lords, but one Lord, or one Jehovah, one only received as such. This consideration alone is sufficient to confute the surmise, as if the Prophet was here concerned about Unity of Person, or intended any thing like it. He certainly meant no more than that the Jehovah, who has the sole right of dominion over all, will then appear so in fact, and be received, among his subjects, as the only God and Lord, reigning without a rival. He will be one, in opposition to any different gods or lords, and acknowledged as one Head, uniting all under him. This is the sense of the place, as is clear from the context^b. For the text is not speaking of what God is in himself, being in that respect always the same; but of what he should be in respect of his reception in the world, when he should be generally acknowledged, and have no rival set up in opposition to him. The other construction, which would force Unity of Person out of this passage, take it which way we will, is scarce sense. For is it thus? Jehovah will in that day become one Person, which he was not before? This is, at first sight, ridiculous. Or, is it that Jehovah will then be acknowledged to be one Person? This is almost as absurd as the other. For, probably, those that did not receive the God of Israel as their God, yet might have thought him to be one Person, all along. This was not the point; but they were to acknowledge him so one, as not to presume to set up any rival power against him. The Prophet had something else at heart than either Unity of substance, or Person. Ἔσται Κύριος εἷς: "There shall be one Lord" (as our version rightly renders it) both for Jew and Gentile. The expression is much such another as νόμος εἷς ἔσται, (Numb. ix. 14.) "There shall be one law to him that is homeborn, and "to him that sojourneth among you:" You shall not be under different rules or laws, but one and the same shall be for all. In like manner the Prophet predicts that Jew and Gentile shall not have different gods or lords, but one and the same God and Lord shall rule over both. Having shewn then that the second interpretation is as groundless as the first,

^a See Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 2. ed. 2. Modest Plea, p. 133.

^b Vid. etiam cap. xiii. ver. 2.

3. I proceed to lay down the third, which is the true one. The Lord our God is the sole Lord, or the only God: in opposition to gods many, and lords many, whether supreme or inferior. Thus the Scribe, to whom our Lord spake, and whom he commends as answering so far discreetly, understood it. "There is one "God, and there is none other but he." This shews that Jehovah was here equivalent to Θεός, or God. Some of the ancient versions, instead of one Lord, render it, one God: as do also some of the ^cprimitive Fathers; none of them (so far as I have observed) either considering Jehovah in this place as a proper name of one Person only, or ever bringing this text to prove that God is but one Person. This they understood, and this only; that there is but one God, one Lord, and one Jehovah; not two Gods, two Lords, or two Jehovahs.

If it be asked, who, or what Person is intended by "the Lord "our God" in the text, it seems most reasonable and natural to understand it of God the Father; not exclusive of, but abstracting from the consideration of, the other two Persons. The Scribe perhaps understood it in the exclusive sense; exclusive of all other Persons. Our Lord commends him as answering discreetly, in acknowledging one God; but intimates withal, that he was not yet come to perfection: he wanted something further, he was "not far from the kingdom of God." One thing that he wanted was to acknowledge the Son to be God and Lord, as well as the Father: and it is pretty remarkable that both the Evangelists, St. Matthew and St. Mark, after relating this conference of our Saviour with the Scribe, immediately subjoin the history of our Saviour's putting a question to the Pharisees, how the Messiah could be both David's Son and David's Lord, quoting that passage of Psalm cx. 1. "The Lord said unto my Lord," &c. It is no improbable conjecture of a ^djudicious Father, that our blessed Saviour thereby intended to correct the Jewish construction of Deuteron. vi. 4, and to intimate, as far as was proper at that time, that the Father is not εἰς Κύριος, one Lord, in such a sense as to exclude the Son, who is also Κύριος, or Lord, and tacitly included, as often as the Father is styled the only God, or Lord. But it is now time to consider more distinctly and fully the doctrine contained in the text, which I shall endeavour thus :

^c Irenæus, lib. v. cap. 22. p. 319. Cyprian. de Orat. Domin. p. 151, 172. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 1, 2. p. 445, 448. ed. Bened.

1. By inquiring, under what salvos, and qualifying considerations, we may reasonably understand the general doctrine of God the Father's being the only true God, or Lord.

2. By considering what we may justly infer from it, and what use we are to make of it.

I. I shall inquire, under what salvos, or qualifying considerations, we may reasonably understand the general doctrine of God the Father's being the only true God, or Lord.

The texts seem, at first view, to exclude all other persons whatever, from being divine in the same sense; and also from having any right or title to religious worship, or any degree of it. The texts run in the personal character; "I am the Lord thy God:" and generally ^e in the singular number; I, not we; or he, not they. And then the practical doctrine founded thereupon is to pay to that Person, not supreme worship only, but all worship; not our highest religious service, but our whole religious service; reserving no part nor degree of it to any other. If therefore the doctrine is to be interpreted up to the utmost rigour in both its parts, the Father only is God, in any strict or proper sense; and every part and degree of religious service is to be paid to him solely. But how can we be Christians if we say this? or how is it possible to reconcile it with other plain Scriptures? There must be some abatement, some favourable teste, confirmat. Hilar. p. 1001.

^d Dominus ipse præcipuum mandatum legis in unius Domini confessione et dilectione docens esse, non suo ad Scribam, sed Prophetæ testimonio usus est, esse se Dominum.— Dominum unum ita ex lege docens, ut se quoque Dominum, Propheta

^e I say generally, not always; because there are some instances of plural expressions: Gen. i. 1, 26. iii. 5, 22. xi. 7. xx. 13. xxxv. 7. Deut. iv. 7. Eccl. xii. 1. Jos. xxiv. 19. Isa. vi. 8.

allowance of construction, in one part or other, to make Scripture consistent; and the difficulty is to know where we are to settle this necessary latitude of interpretation, so as neither to do violence to the letter, nor defeat the intent of the inspired writers. There have been two ways thought on to compromise this matter. I shall mention that first, which is the least likely to do us any service, that I may come with the greater advantage to the other, which will appear to be not only the best, but the only way of reconciling the difficulty, after we have seen that the first will not bear.

1. The first way is to suppose that the words Lord and God admit of a higher and a lower sense; so that the texts which declare the Father the one God, are to be understood to mean one only supreme God, leaving room for inferior and subordinate gods besides him: and so also worship must be understood to be of two kinds, sovereign and inferior; and that the supreme God claims only sovereign, not all religious worship to himself.

But against this way of reconciling there appear to be many insuperable objections. It is not only against the letter, but the very intent and design of the sacred writings. For, not to mention that Scripture no where tells us of two true, i. e. two adorable, Gods, or of two religious worships, sovereign and inferior; the very end and design of all the texts relating to the Unity seems to have been to preclude inferior gods, and them especially; there being less danger of men's running into the notion of many supremes. Besides the general drift and purport of those texts, there are some particular texts still more express and decisive. "There is no God before me," says the one God, "neither shall there be any after me:" and yet every inferior God must be after the supreme^f. "The gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, even they shall perish from the earth." Jerem. x. 11. And yet it is never to be supposed that any inferior god can be Creator, which is the distinguishing character of the one supreme God; consequently, every inferior god shall perish and come to ^f Quis ergo hoc dicit, Pater an Filius? Si Filius, Ante me, inquit, non fuit alius Deus: Si Pater, Post me, inquit, non erit: hic priorem, ille posteriorem non habet. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 8. p. 454.

Εἰ γὰρ Θεὸς μὲν ὁ υἱός, πᾶν δὲ μετὰ

τὸν πατέρα Θεὸς οὐκ ἔστι, δῆλον ὅτι τὸ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ μὴ μετὰ τὸν πατέρα, τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι ὁ λόγος μαρτύρεται.— Εἰ τις οὖν μετὰ τὸν Θεὸν ἔστι, κτίσις τοῦτο, καὶ οὐ Θεός, διὰ τῶν εἰρημέων εὐρίσκεται. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. iv. p. 575.

nothings. Besides, every inferior god must of course be supposed a creature of the great God. But St. Paul has expressly cautioned us against serving the "creature more than (or besides) "the Creator," and against serving those that "by nature are no "gods." Further than this, it is as clear as words can make it, that the great God has claimed to himself all sacrifice, without distinction of sovereign and inferior, our whole religious service and whole confidence^h. To suppose the contrary, would have been to leave room for the greatest confusion in worship imaginable, and would not have been the way to root out, but to establish, idolatry. Add to this, that the distinction of a twofold sense in the word God will not help us out of the difficulty: because we have all the reason in the world to believe that another Person, besides the Father, is called God, in the same sense, in the same Scriptures; and therefore this solution of the difficulty will not bear; but we must of course look out for another.

2. The other way then is, to suppose that the exclusive terms of one, only, or the like, may admit of some latitude of construction; and that, so long as the full intent and meaning of the declarations of the Unity is in this way answered, all is safe and secure. That this is the very truth of the case, I shall now proceed to shew at large.

God the Father may be, and is, very reasonably and justly styled the one or only God, without excluding every other Person; particularly, without excluding the Son from the one true Godhead. It is a rule and maxim, and may be proved by many instances in sacred and profane writings, that exclusive terms are not to be interpreted with the utmost rigour, so as to leave no room for tacit exceptions, such as reason and good sense will easily supply. It may be sometimes needless or impertinent to mention every exception; and often wiser or better not to do it, but to leave them to the intelligent reader.

Thus for instance it is said, "No one knoweth the Father "but the Son, and no one knoweth the Son but the Father." (Matt. xi. 27.) If we should here interpret the exclusive terms with the utmost strictness, it must follow that the Father does not know himself, nor the Son himself. But no man of common sense can think so of either ; and therefore there was no occasion for any further guard or exception.

† See Cudworth's Comment on this text, p. 545.

^h See my Vindication of Christ's Divinity, Qu. 16. vol. i. p. 407, &c.

So again it is said, that " the things of God knoweth no one, " but the Spirit of God," (1 Cor. ii. 11.) as before, (in Matt. xi. 27.) " No one knoweth the Father but the Son." Now, if we understand the exclusive terms with the utmost strictness, it must follow from one passage, that the Holy Ghost knows more of the Father than the Son does ; and from the other, that the Son knows more of the Father than the Holy Ghost does : which are propositions directly repugnant. But the truth is, here was no opposition intended to Son or Holy Ghost in either place ; but to creatures only.

In like manner it is said, in the Revelations, of the Son of God, that " he had a name written, that no one (οὐδείς) knew, " but he himself;" (Rev. xix. 12.) which, if the exclusive term is to be strictly understood, makes the Father himself ignorant of what was known to the Son.

St. Paul says, " I determined not to know any thing among " you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified," 1 Cor. ii. 2. If this be rigorously interpreted up to the letter, St. Paul must have been contented to be ignorant of God the Father, and of many the most important articles of the Christian religion. But it is obvious to common sense, that such expressions are to be qualified both from the reason of the thing, and from other Scriptures. These instances are sufficient to shew that exclusive terms may, and in several cases must, admit of a favourable construction. Now to come to the point in hand. I shall first shew, directly and plainly, that God the Son was not intended to be excluded at all, by the texts which proclaim the Father the one God ; and next, give some reasons why there was no occasion to make any particular exception or salvo, on that account ; or why it was better not to do it. First, let us compare texts with texts.

Isa. xliv. 24. we read thus : " I am the Lord that maketh all " things ; that stretcheth forth the heavens alone, and spreadeth " abroad the earth by myself." Now here, according to the rigour of construction, one should suppose the Father (if it is indeed to be understood of the Father) to have been by himself when he made the world, and that no other Person had any hand in creating, or was so much as with him when he did it. And yet certain it is from other Scriptures, as I have shewn formerly, that God the Son was not only with him, but assisted also in the work of creation. But it was needless for the Prophet to take any notice of the Son's concern in it, while he was only considering the true God in opposition to other gods; besides that the time was not yet come for the distinct and clear revelation of God the Son. So again we find it said, probably in respect of the Father, "Thou only knowest the hearts of all the children of men," (1 Kings viii. 39.) and it is not said, Thou only knowest originally, or in the most perfect manner, but, Thou only knowest, simply and absolutely. And yet evident it is, from other places of Scripture, that not the Father only, but the Son also must then have known the hearts of all the children of menⁱ; and it may be certainly inferred from his being Creator of all men from the beginning.

We read (Ps. lxxxiii. 18.) "Thou, whose name alone is Jehovah," supposed to be meant of God the Father. If the exclusive term is there to be rigorously understood, no other Person but the Father has the title or name of Jehovah. And yet certain it is, from other Scriptures, that the Son is another Person, and that the name Jehovah is also his name. But it was needless, or would have been foreign, to have inserted any particular caution or exception, while the Psalmist was considering only the true God, in opposition to other gods, or to the gods of the nations. God the Father (probably) says, Isai. xliii. 11, "I, even I, am the Lord, and besides me there is no Saviour." And yet no man of sense that reads the Bible can believe, that the intent was to exclude our blessed Saviour from being properly such, as well as the Father. It is said also, (Isa. ii. 11, 17.) that "the Lord alone shall be exalted in that day." Suppose this be meant of God the Father; yet no one, who considers either the context, or reason of the thing, or other Scriptures, can imagine that this was designed to exclude God the Son from being exalted; or that it was intended in opposition to any thing but idols in particular, or creatures in general. It would be easy to illustrate this matter by more examples of the like nature: but these already given are, I am persuaded, sufficient to shew that, whether it be said that the Father is the only God, or whether it were said that the Father only is God, (which expression would be stronger,) the exclusive term only need not be supposed to affect the Son at all; but he may still be tacitly understood: and there was no necessity for any express caution in the case, the reason of the thing sufficiently shewing it afterwards. When therefore we read of the Father's being the one God, we are to understand it of the Father singly, not exclusively; of the Father, but in conjunction still with the Son: not that we mean by the term Father, both Father and Son, but we consider the Father singly, in such cases, abstracting from the consideration of God the Son, not excluding him from partaking of the same Godhead. This then appears to be matter of fact, that God the Son is not excluded, but always tacitly understood in those expressions of the Unity, which we meet with in Scripture. The same is true of any other expressions of the like nature, as if the Father be said to be the alone good, the only wise, the only potentate, or only having immortality; they are not intended in opposition to God the Son, or Holy Ghost, (who being so nearly allied to, so much one with the Father, are tacitly to be understood as partaking of every perfection which is ascribed to the Father,) but in opposition to creatures, or other gods; in opposition to every thing extra Patrem, every thing not contained in him, or not inseparably included with him. This I observe, on supposition that those texts are meant of the Father: but perhaps the word God in those places is to be understood in the indefinite sense, abstracting from the particular consideration of this or that person; in like manner as the word man often stands, not for any particular human person, but the whole species, or human nature: man is frail, man is mortal, or the like. I say the word God may be thus understood; and since the doctrine of the Trinity is demonstrable from other Scriptures, we have great reason to believe that this is the true and real meaning of the word God, as often as the context or other circumstances do not confine its signification and intent to one Person only. It remains now only to account for the manner of speaking. For it may be asked, why, when it is said, suppose by the Father, "I am the Lord, and there is none else," it may be asked why there might not have been added, except my Son and Holy Spirit, or some other saving clause of like kind? To this it may be answered,

ⁱ John ii. 24. xvi. 30. Acts i. 24. Heb. iv. 12. Rev. ii. 3.

1. That it was needless.
2. That it might have been hurtful.
1. It was needless. None of those declarations concerning the unity of God, and the worship due to God alone, were made at the beginning, or before idolatry was grown into practice. Their intent and design was to be a remedy against it, and to root it out of the world. Those declarations were then so understood, as it was intended they should be, in opposition to all other gods, all that were plainly opposite to, or different from, the one God of Israel. Thus the end of them was fully answered; and there was no occasion explicitly to mention the Person of the Son, before the proper time came to reveal his distinct Person and character fully and clearly to the world. After he was come, it was still as needless to insert any such saving clauses; because the revealing his nature, and character, and personal perfections, was equivalent thereto, and were interpretatively so many qualifying clauses or exceptions; the reason of the thing shewing that he must be supposed as included always, without any special proviso for it. Thus, for instance, if the Father claims all worship, homage, and adoration to himself, because Jehovah, because Creator, Sustainer, and Preserver of all things; and if it appears afterwards, that the Son also is Jehovah, Creator, Sustainer, and Preserver of all things; it is manifest that the worship of the Son comes within the reason, intent, and letter of the law about worship; and therefore it cannot, by any man of sense, be supposed to exclude him from it. There is no need of any special salvo to include a person, whom parity of reason shews to be included of course. So if it is said, that the Father is the only God or Lord, without any express caution or salvo, we might be apt to think it somewhat strange to hear of any other person who is God and Lord also: but when we find that this other Person is so nearly related, as a Son to a Father; that he and his Father are one; that he who has seen one has therein seen the other also; that he is in the bosom of the Father, and as intimate to him as thought to the mind; that all things which the Father hath are the Son's; and that what things soever the Father doth, those also doth the Son likewise; when we find them represented as "one temple," (Rev. xxi. 22.) and as having but "one throne," (Rev. xxii. 1.) and making "one light," (Rev. xxi. 23.) and that he is in the Father, and the Father in him; when we observe the same titles, the same operations, the same attributes, the same glory, &c. ascribed to both in holy Scripture: when these and the like considerations have been duly weighed; must it not look strangely impertinent to demand any exception, or special salvo, as often as the Father is styled the only God? The Scriptures suppose men to have the use of their reason, and that therefore there was no need to make express mention of the Son, whenever the Father is declared to be the only God; Father and Son being so much one, that asserting it of either is implicitly asserting the same of both^k. And hence it may appear,

2. That particular exceptions and cautions in this case were not only needless, but might have been hurtful. Had the first commandment run thus; Thou shalt have no other gods besides me, except my Son, it had been plainly making the Son another God^l, which was not the intent of Scripture, nor suitable to the truth and reason of the thing. The union and intimacy between Father and Son is such, that they are not two Gods, but one God. This was the idea which Scripture was to insinuate along with the distinction of Persons, and which it has every where carefully kept up. What may be thought an omission in the case, is really an advantage; and the want of an exception in respect of God the Son, or Holy Ghost, is an argument to us that their unity is too strict and intimate to admit of it. A late^m writer upon these words in Deuteronomy, “I, even I, am he, and there is no God with me,” (Deut. xxxii. 39,) observes, that it is not said, except it be in the same essence, but absolutely, there is no God. He might have observed also, that it is not said, except it be in subordination to me, or, except such inferior gods as are by my appointment; but absolutely, there is no God. To answer more directly: it is very true that Scripture has not mentioned any such exception, because it would have been improper, not to say absurd, to do it. The design was to teach us that there is no other God, besides the God of Israel. Had he said there is no other God, except it be in the same essence, it had been the same as to say, there is no other God, except one, who is not another God. But the objector here supposes that two divine Persons in the same essence are two Gods, which is supposing οὐκέτι· κατὰ τὸν Ἰσον, &c. Cyril. Alex. contr. Julian. lib. viii. p. 264.

^k Εἴ τις ἓνα λέγοι Θεόν, ἀλλ’ οὐ δίχα τοῦ ἰδίου γεννήματος ἐνοήσῃ ποτὲ τὸν πατέρα, οὔτε μὲν τοῦ κατὰ φύσιν ἐξ αὐτοῦ προχομένου πνεύματος, ὃ καὶ ἐστὶν ἴδιον αὐτοῦ. ὡσπερ γὰρ ὁ εἰπὼν ἄνθρωπον, πάντη τε καὶ πάντως διαμεμῆσεται καὶ τῶν ἐνότων οὐσιωδῶς αὐτῷ ἃ προσπεφυκῶτα μὲν ἄνθρωπον ἀποτελεῖ, οὐκ ἐνότα δὲ,

^l Atquin si nominasset illum, separasset, ita dicens, Alius præter me non est, nisi Filius meus. Alium enim etiam Filium fecisset, quem de aliis excepisset. Tert. Prax. cap. xviii.

^m Modest Plea, &c. p. 133.

the thing in question. The contrary appears from this very text. For let us admit that it was said, in the person of the Father, "I, even I, am he, and there is no God with me:" it is certain that God the Son was then with him, and that he was God before the foundation of the world, John i. 1. And yet there was no God, that is, no other God with him, as appears from this text: consequently the Son is not another God, but the same God; and therefore two divine Persons having the same essence, (as we are able to prove those two to have,) are not two Gods, but one God.

I have hitherto been observing the Scripture-manner of speaking in this article of the unity, and have shewn how easy it is to account for it upon Catholic principles. I shall just take notice further, that the primitive writers of the Church follow the same style exactly. We shall frequently find them giving the title of one or only God, to the Father, in such a manner, that if we looked no further, we might be apt to imagine that they thought of no other person's being God but the Father. And yet perhaps, within a few pages or lines, we shall meet with as full and strong expressions of the divinity of the Son, as any are, or can be; that he is God, true God, God of the Jews, and the like. These seeming contrarieties they sometimes leave without any guard or explication, presuming that no Christian, who had been but tolerably instructed, could mistake the meaning. At other times, upon occasion, they are more particular and explicit, shewing how reconcilable and perfectly consistent with each other, these things are. They give us to understand that the exclusive terms affect not the Son at all; that they are often meant in opposition to idols only; that at the most they exclude only other gods, and not the Son, who is the same and "not another God, nor indeed another Person in such a sense as separate divided persons are other persons. They are distinct only, not separate; and therefore, in a qualified sense, the Son is very self of the Father, as Irenæus expresses it, and as later Fathers, ἄλλος ἑαυτοῦς, alter idem, or alius idem, another self, another same; distinct and yet not different, one with the Father, and undivided from him. From these and the like hints and illustrations, we easily understand what either the ancient creeds or primitive Church-writers mean by styling the Father, the one, or only God^o; a title which they sometimes apply to the Son also, but seldom, and sparingly. The reason is this: the Father is, as it were, the top of Unity, the head and fountain of all: he is first in our conception of God, and therefore whether we speak of the almighty God, or the eternal God, or the all-knowing God, (and the reason is the same for the only God, unity being an attribute of the Godhead like omnipotence, eternity, &c.) we primarily and principally mean the Father, tacitly including the other two Persons.

^a Igitur unus Deus Pater, et alius absque eo non est: quod ipse inferens, non Filium negat, sed alium Deum. Cæterum alius a Patre Filius non est. Tert. contr. Prax. cap. xviii. p. 510.

Non ergo alius erat qui cognoscebatur, et alius qui dicebat, Nemo cognoscit Patrem; sed unus et idem, omnia subjiciente ei Patre, et ab omnibus accipiens testimonium, quoniam vere homo, et vere Deus. Iren. p. 234, 235.

This is more decent, proper, and suitable, than to have fixed these names, titles, or attributes principally upon either of the other two Persons, tacitly including the Father. The nature of language and customary way of speaking required that they should be thus generally fixed upon one of the Persons, and we are directed to which by the very name of Father, denoting some kind of priority of order, such as we cannot perfectly understand; but a confuse, general perception of it, is sufficient to all the purposes of faith or worship. In strictness, the one God is the whole Trinity: but we must be content to speak as the customary use of language will bear. Our ideas of person are plainly taken from our conceptions of human persons, and from them transferred to other subjects, though they do not strictly answer in every circumstance. Properly speaking, he and him are no more applicable to a divine Person, than she or

^o It is worth observing, how little stress the ancients laid upon the exclusive terms.

Clemens Alex. calls the Son the only Judge, p. 99. and only God, p. 84.

Origen calls the Son the only Lord. Contr. Cels. p. 389.

Cyril of Jerusalem calls him the only King, p. 223.

Eusebius understands, Psal. lxxxvi. 10. "God alone," &c. and Isa. xlv. 24. where it is said, that "he stretcheth forth the heavens ALONE," of God the Son.

Baruch iii. 35. "This is our God, and there shall none other be accounted of in comparison of him," is by Cyprian (Test. lib. ii. cap. 6.) and by Lactantius (Epit. p. 116.) understood of God the Son: as it is also by the later Fathers in general.

Micah vii. 18. "Who is a God like unto thee?" &c. is also by early writers understood of God the Son.

So also Isa. xlv. 6. and Isa. xlv. 14, 15. See my Defence, &c. vol. i. p. 291, &c.

Now had the ancients acknowledged any such force of the exclusive terms, as is insisted on by some moderns, the Father himself must have been thereby excluded from being Judge, Lord, King, or God.

her: but we have no third way of denoting a person; and so of the two, we choose the best, and custom familiarizes it to us. In like manner, when we would speak of God, we have but three ways of expressing our thoughts, and none of them without some inconvenience. To say it, or that, meaning that thing or substance, would sound low and flat; and it is the way of speaking which we have, in a manner, appropriated to inanimate or irrational beings. To say he, or him, ordinarily^p carries in it the idea of one Person only, and is therefore inconvenient on that account, as not taking in all that we apprehend of the one true God. To say they, or them, would appear as if the Persons were divided and separate, like other persons, and might sound as if the three Persons were three gods. Of those three ways, the best and least offensive is that which has been generally taken, as well in Scripture, as in ecclesiastical writings: which is to say, he, or him, speaking of God, and meaning it of one Person, principally, yet not excluding, but tacitly comprehending the other two, as partakers of the same Godhead. And since it was thus necessary to fix upon one Person, who should be primarily considered as God, it must of course be the Father, who revealed his own Person first to the world, and was known under that character before either the Son or Holy Ghost were distinctly and fully revealed; who has still the character of Father, as Head and Fountain of all, and is generally first in our conception, when we speak of God absolutely, without particularly specifying any Person of the Godhead. Yet I must observe to you, that it is far from being certain that the Father, or any particular Person, is always meant, whenever the word God is used absolutely in Scripture. For, xii. 2, 3. xiii. 17. xviii. 18. xlviii. 19. 20. xlix. 4, 8, &c.) Why then may not the like expressions be used of God the Father, the head and fountain of the other two divine Persons, which yet strictly are not to be understood of him alone, but of him considered with his Son and Holy Spirit, who are infinitely more united to him, than any earthly progeny is, or can be, to their head?

^p I say ordinarily, not constantly: and therefore the argument drawn from the personal characters, I, thou, thee, he, him, applied to God, is very weak and inconclusive against a plurality of Persons. We often find in Scripture the personal characters of thou, thee, he, him, applied to a whole family, tribe, or people, collectively considered; (see Exod. xiii. 5, 7, 9, 11, 13. Numb. xxii. 5, 6. xxiii. 9. Deut. i. 21, 31. iv. 9, 10. xi. 15. xviii. 2. Josh. xvii. 15. 1 Sam. xv. 3.) and at other times we find some things applied to the head of a family, which belong not strictly to him alone, but to him and his whole seed. (See Gen.

This argument is a fortiori, and there is more than parity of reason to be pleaded in favour of this manner of speaking, with relation to the Persons of the undivided Trinity.

as I before hinted, no good reason can be given why the word God may not be used in a large indefinite sense, not denoting any particular Person, just as the word man is often used in Scripture, not denoting any particular man, but man in general, or man indefinitely. (Gen. vi. 3, 7. viii. 21. ix. 6. Deut. viii. 3. 1 Sam. xvi. 7. Job iv. 17. v. 7. Psalm lvi. 11. lxxviii. 25. xc. 3. cxviii. 6, 8. Hos. xi. 9. Matt. iv. 4. Luke iv. 4. xviii. 4. 1 Thess. iv. 8. 1 Tim. ii. 5. Tit. iii. 4.) As the word man sometimes stands for the whole species; sometimes indefinitely for any individual of the species, without determining which, and sometimes for this or that particular man: so, by way of analogy, or imperfect resemblance, the word God may sometimes signify all the divine Persons; sometimes any Person of the three indefinitely, without determining which; and sometimes one particular Person, either Father, Son, or Holy Ghost. From what hath been said, I am willing to hope we may now sufficiently understand in what sense, and under what restrictions, the Father is set forth in Scripture or antiquity, as the one or only God. I proceed now,

II. To consider what we may reasonably and fairly infer from the Scripture-declarations of the unity. Of this very briefly; that I may not trespass (as I fear I already have) too long upon your patience.

1. We may certainly infer from them, that they absolutely exclude all rival or anti-gods, set up in opposition to God the Father; consequently all idols, and all the gods of the heathen nations.

2. We may further infer, that they do as certainly exclude all such gods as the Marcionites, or others, pretended to be besides, or superior to, the Creator and God of Israel.

3. We may also reasonably infer, that they exclude all things or persons whatsoever, that are separate from, or aliene to; that are not necessarily included in, and comprehended with, God the Father: briefly, they exclude all other gods; consequently they exclude all creatures: for since all creatures are posterior in time, and different in nature, they are adventitious and extraneous; they are not necessarily included in God the Father; he was without them, and may be again, if he pleases: if they are gods in any sense, they are other gods, not the same god with God the Father; and so stand excluded from having the name or title of God, in any proper or religious sense; and from receiving any kind, part, or degree of our religious homage, worship, or adoration. Socinians and Arians have split upon this absurdity, supposing the Son to be a creature only, and yet receiving him as God, another God besides the Father; which is Polytheism and Gentilism, condemned by Scripture, and all Catholic antiquity. The Arians, ancient and modern, have appeared so sensible of it, that they never durst openly profess it; being reduced to this hard and truly pitiable case, to receive, in reality, into their creed, what they are ashamed to express in terms^q.

They are used to insist much upon the force of the exclusive terms, when they have a mind to exclude the Person of the Son from being one God with the Father. But they entirely forget that the exclusive terms have any force at all, when they imagine that they do not so much as exclude creatures from being gods, but leave room for other gods, for two gods, or three gods, and as many objects of worship. Thus they appear to “strain at a gnat” while they can “swallow a camel;” and use arguments against the Catholics, which recoil more strongly upon themselves. They are forced, in their turn^r, to plead that the exclusive terms are intended chiefly in opposition to idols and false-gods; and that they do not exclude Christ from being true God, and true object of worship: which is unsaying all that they had before asserted, and is unravelling their own argument, so far as concerns the bare necessary force of the exclusive terms. For if they do not exclude creatures (strangers and aliens, in comparison) from being true gods, much less can they be supposed necessarily to exclude God’s own Son, of the same nature, and duration, and perfections with himself, (if the thing be possible,) from being true God with him, and one God with him. This then must be argued from other topics, and not from any supposed necessary force of the exclusive terms. To conclude, we may observe that Scripture and antiquity often tell us of God and God, but never of two Gods; Creator and Creator, but never two Creators; Saviour and Saviour, but never two Saviours; Lord and Lord, but never two Lords; Judge and Judge, but never two Judges; King and King, but never two Kings. These things are easily accounted for upon Catholic principles; Father and Son are one Creator, one Saviour, one Lord, one Judge, one King, and one God, because their operations, attributes, powers, and perfections (and consequently the substance of both) are one. “To Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, all honour and “glory be now and for ever.” Amen.

^p Consequens est, inquam, ut aut non colatis Christum, aut non unum Deum colatis, sed duos. Ad hoc tu responderes conatus, multum quidem locutus es, asserens quod et Christum Deum colatis: sed duos Deos a vobis coli, quamvis non negaveris, tamen non ausus es confiteri. Sensisti enim, duos Deos esse colendos, Christianas aures ferre non posse. O quam de proximo te corrigeres, si timeres credere quod dicere timuisti! cum enim clamet Apostolus, “corde

“ creditur ad justitiam, ore confessio fiat ad salutem:” si ad justitiam putes pertinere quod credis, cur hoc ad salutem etiam ore non confiteris? Si autem duos Deos colendos ad salutem non pertinet confiteri, sine dubio nec ad justitiam pertinet credere. Vid. Augustin. contr. Maxim. lib. i. p. 677, 678.

^r See Clarke’s Reply, p. 50. 69. Vid. et Crell. de uno Deo Patre, sect. i. cap. 1.

Christ's Divinity proved from his Coequality with the Father :

OR

EQUALITY OF CHRIST

WITH THE FATHER.

The fifth Sermon preached January 6, 1748.

PHIL. ii. 5—11.

Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men: and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name: that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

THERE have been great disputes between the Catholics and Arians about this passage; both sides claiming it as their own, and as directly favouring their respective principles. They have neither of them been content to be on the defensive only, in respect of this, as in several other texts; but, interpreting the words differently, and taking them under contrary views, they urge them against each other, and appeal to them as decisive both ways, according to their respective tenets and persuasions.

My design is to inquire carefully into the meaning of so remarkable a passage, and to fix it, where it ought to lie, on the Catholic side. It will be proper to take along with us the scope and intent of the Apostle in it, as a sure mark to direct us to the true and genuine sense of it. The two verses immediately preceding those of the text run thus: "Let nothing be done through strife or vain-glory; but in lowliness of mind let each esteem other better than themselves. Look not every man on his own things, but every man also on the things of others." Then follows; "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus," &c. The Apostle proposes Christ as a perfect pattern and example of the virtue or virtues which he had been recommending. And what were they? Humility, modesty, philanthropy, in opposition to vain-glory, ostentation, and self-seeking. He exhorts the Philippians to good nature and tenderness, to wave all little niceties and punctilios of ceremony, and to be willing to sacrifice their reputation or honour, upon occasion, to the glory of God and the good of others. Thus far by way of preliminary. Now let us proceed to the instance given, as a powerful motive to incite them to put on that happy temper of mind. It is the example of Christ Jesus: "Who being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God: but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant," and so on. Here, every word almost will require a minute and particular discussion. We must therefore be content to advance slowly, that we may clear our way as we go, and at length sum up the whole in a short paraphrase, concluding with a few brief observations upon it. And this is all the order, or method, that I propose to observe in my following discourse.

I begin with the words, "Who being in the form of God," ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ. We do not meet with this phrase elsewhere in Scripture. But there are two passages, one in the Epistle to the Colossians, the other in the Epistle to the Hebrews, which are near akin to it, and may help to direct us to the true sense of it. Our blessed Lord is by our Apostle styled the "image of the invisible God," (Coloss. i. 15.) There is not much difference between εἰκὼν and μορφῆ, betwixt image and form: and therefore, probably, the Apostle might intend the same thing by being "in the form of God," and being "the image of the invisible God." Now, as to the meaning of Christ's being the “image of the invisible God,” it is well explained by the words immediately there following: πρωτόκοκος πάσης κτίσεως: “born (or begotten) before every creature;” that is, as he was “Son of God,” before the creation of the world. Thus was he the “image of God,” bearing his figure and resemblance, as truly, fully, and perfectly, as a “son of man” has all the features, “lineaments, and perfections belonging to the nature of man.” And thus antiquity ^a has constantly understood Christ to be the “image of God,” as he is God’s Son. In the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. i. we find our blessed Lord described under the character of Son of God, and “heir of all things, by whom God “made the worlds,” ver. 2. And immediately after, he is said to be the ἀπαύγασμα, the shining forth of his Father’s glory, and the “express image of his person,” as we render it; or, as others think the more probable construction to be, of his substance ^b. This is a further confirmation, that those expressions of image or form of God relate to Christ’s sonship or filiation, whereby he is, as it were, the exact copy or resemblance of God the Father, in respect of his divine nature, being as truly God of God, in that capacity, as he is man of man in another. Thus, as before said, the Ante-Nicene as well as Post-Nicene writers understood the phrases of Christ’s being the image of God, and express image of his hypostasis: and not only so, but the very words of the text, his being “in the form of God,” were by them ^c believed to sig-

^a In effigie et imagine, qua Filius Patris, vere Dei prædicatus est. Tertull. contr. Marc. lib. v. cap. 20. p. 486.

Ἐὶ ἔστιν εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ἀοράτου, ἀόρατος εἰκὼν—τῆς ἀκατονομάστου, καὶ ἀφθέγκτου ὑποστάσεως τοῦ πατρὸς εἰκὼν, ὁ χαρακτήρ, λόγος, &c. Origen. apud Athan. tom. i. p. 233.

Τῆν πατρικὴν ἐμφερίαν ἀκριβῶς πέφυκε σώζειν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ πατρὸς, τὴν κατὰ πάντα ὁμοίότητα αὐτοῦ ἐκ φύσεως ἀπομαζάμενος, καὶ ἀπαράλλακτος εἰκὼν τοῦ πατρὸς τυγχάνων, καὶ τοῦ πρωτοτύπου ἔκτυπος χαρακτήρ. Alexand. Theod. E. H. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 15.

As to Post-Nicene writers, see Petavius, who has collected their testimonies, and who gives his judgment of all in these words:

Porro ex vi et nativa conditione productionis suæ hoc imaginem habere, ut auctorem representet: adeoque Verbum εἰκόνα, et imaginem ideo nominari, quoniam ita procedit a Patre, ut eum necessario exprimat, antiqui omnes Theologi demonstrant; qui imaginem dici Verbum Dei asserunt, quatenus a Patre gignitur. Petav. de Trin. lib. vi. cap. 5. p. 326.

^b Vide Petav. de Trin. lib. vi. cap. 6. per totum.

Τῆς θείας φύσεως ἀπαύγασμα καὶ χαρακτήρ. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 342.

Compare the parallel expressions in the apocryphal book of Wisdom.

Ἄτμις τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ δυνάμεως ἀπόρροια τῆς τοῦ παντοκράτορος δόξης εἰλικρινής· Ἀπαύγασμα φωτὸς αἰδίου ἔσοπτον ἀηλίδων τῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐνεργείας· εἰκὼν τῆς ἀγαθότητος αὐτοῦ. Cap. vii. ver. 25, 26.

^c Æque non erit Deus Christus vere, si nec homo vere fuit in effigie hominis constitutus—quod si in effigie et imagine, qua Filius Patris, vere

nify his being God, or God of God, or Son of God; all amounting to the same thing. This construction agrees also perfectly well with the context, which no other does. Nor the phrase of μορφὴν δούλου λαβών, "taking upon him the form of a servant," is plainly meant of his taking upon him human nature, becoming thereby a servant of God in that capacity. The Apostle himself interprets the "form of a servant" by the word immediately following, ἐν ὁμοιώματι ἀνθρώπων γενόμενος, that is, being made in the likeness of man; which is the same with being really and truly man: being in the form of man, as Son of man, in like manner as he was before said to have been in the form of God, as Son of God. The "ancients have constantly interpreted the "form of "a servant" in the sense which I have mentioned. Human nature was that "form of a servant" which our Lord assumed, and he became a servant by becoming man. The construction then now given of the words, ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, being agreeable to the context, as well as to the literal grammatical signification of the words; and being besides countenanced by parallel places of Scripture, and received by the ancients in general, it is certainly preferable to any other; and we need not look out further for a meaning, when we have so great reason to believe that this is the true and the only true one that can be assigned. Yet I must not conceal from you, that there is another interpretation, which has been taken up of late, and much contended for by some of the Arian persuasion. I must observe to you, in the way of preliminary, that all the appearances of God, under the Old Testament, were supposed by the ancients to have been in and by God the Son. It was he that called himself God of Dei prædicatus est, etiam in effigie et imagine hominis, qua Filius hominis, vere hominem inventum. Tertul. contr. Marc. lib. v. cap. 20. p. 486.

Ὁ μονογενὴς τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος, Θεὸς ἰπάρχων ἐκ Θεοῦ, κεκένωκεν ἑαυτόν, &c. Hippolytus, vol. ii. p. 29. Fabric. ed.

Θεὸς μὲν κενώσας ἑαυτὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ εἶναι Ἰσα Θεῶ. Conc. Antioch. Labb. vol. i. p. 848.

Ἡ δὲ μορφὴ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος μετ' αὐτοῦ Θεός, καὶ υἱὸς Θεοῦ. Dionys. Alex. contr. Paul. Samosat. p. 853. Labb.

Quamvis esset in forma Dei, non est rapinam arbitratus æqualem se Deo esse. Quamvis enim se ex Deo Patre Deum esse meminisset, nunquam, &c. Novat. de Trin. c. 17.

Ipse a Patre exaltatus sit, quia se in terris Sermo et Virtus, et Sapientia Dei Patris humiliavit. Cypr. de Unitat. Eccl. p. 118. ed. Ox.

The sentiments of Post-Nicene Fathers are well known, and need not be mentioned.

^d Herm. Pastor. Simil. v. cap. 2. Clem. Alexandr. p. 251. Origen. in Joh. p. 34. Hippolyt. vol. ii. p. 2, 3, 29. Novat. cap. 17. Euseb. in Psalm. p. 616. Hilar. in Psalm. pag. 325. ed. Bened. Athanas. Orat. i. p. 447. ed. Bened. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 322. ed. Ox.

Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and all along headed and conducted the people of the Jews. This notion, so far, is just, and the fact true, and it is of very good use against the Socinians especially; and, I may add, against the Arians also, when rightly understood. But some amongst us, mistaking this matter, have been pleased to speak of those appearances, or transactions, of the Son of God, as being little more than what any angel or archangel might have been capable of sustaining. They call it personating God, acting in his name, and speaking his words. And thus they understand that our Lord was, before his incarnation, ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, “in the form of God,” being God’s legate, vicegerent, or representative. But against this there lie these following objections :

1. That this construction of ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ is perfectly precarious. They cannot name any ancient Catholic writer that ever so understood it, nor bring any parallel text of Scripture to countenance it.

2. In the next place, the very supposition itself of Christ’s personating God, in any such low sense, is a mere fancy and fiction, unsupported by Scripture or Catholic antiquity. The primitive writers who speak of it understood that our blessed Lord did not barely personate God, but was himself really God, and spoke in his own name, as well as the Father’s; being himself Lord and God, &c. as coeternal and coessential Son of the Father^c. So that this interpretation of “form of God,” so far as there is any thing of truth in it, will at length resolve into the very same which I have before given.

3. Admitting (but not granting) that God the Son personated the Father in any such low sense as is pretended, (though our adversaries cannot shew that he ever said, I am God the Father, as he might have said upon their hypothesis, which is worth observing,) yet that cannot be the meaning of ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ in the text; for this plain reason: because St. Paul going about to magnify the great condescension of God the Son, from the highest pinnacle of glory (if I may so speak) to the lowest instance of contempt and ignominy, would certainly begin with the mention of what he was in his highest capacity. Now his personating the Father is nothing so honourable a circumstance, as what St. John speaks of in the first chapter of his Gospel, or what St. Paul himself has observed, (Coloss. i. 15, 16.) His being God from the beginning, and maker of the world, are of much higher import than personating God, which any angel might do, in such a low sense as is here pretended. If then the Apostle's argument did require that he should begin with the highest instance of perfection belonging to the Son, and if there be really a higher than is contained in this circumstance of personating God, (supposing it any thing more than a fiction,) it is a demonstration that St. Paul[†] did not intend ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ (“in the form of God”) in any such low sense, as would only lessen the miracle of Christ's condescension, and weaken the force of the Apostle's argument. So much for this. Having settled the meaning of the phrase ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ, signifying as much as God of God, or essentially divine, we may next proceed to the following words: “thought it not robbery to be equal with God.”

^c See my Defence, &c. vol. i. Query ii. p. 295, &c.

The phrase, οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο, occurs not any where else in Scripture, nor, so far as I can find, in any profane writer; (for there is a difference between ἀρπαγμα and ἀρπαγμός[‡];) so that all the light we can have into it must be from the grammatical meaning of the word, and from ancient versions, and from ecclesiastical writers, and the context. Our translators have rendered the words literally, and indeed very justly. It will not however be amiss to inquire what may be fairly pleaded for their interpretation. “Thought it not robbery to be equal with God.” The ancientest versions of the New Testament favour this rendering; the Greek and Latin Fathers, from the fourth century downwards, do as plainly countenance it. Nay, Tertullian[‡], of the second or third century, seems to have understood it in the same sense. The words will, in strict propriety, bear it; and not only so, but more naturally and properly than any other. Let us then put the sense together, and see how it will stand. “Who being Son of God, and therefore essentially God, thought it not robbery, that is, knew that he did not wrongfully or unreasonably assume to be equal

[†] Vid. Wooton. Præfat. ad Clem. Rom. p. 187.

[‡] Sermo enim Deus, qui in effigie Dei constitutus, non rapinam existimavit paritari Deo. Tertull. p. 329.

Deus erat Sermo—Hic certe est qui in effigie Dei constitutus, non rapinam existimavit esse se æqualem Deo. Ibid. p. 504.

“with God: but, notwithstanding, was pleased to make himself “of no reputation,” &c. The Apostle having before told us that the Son was really God (which I have shewn to be the meaning of “being in the form of God”) might very justly add, that he was “equal with God;” which is only explanatory of what he had said, and more emphatically expressing the dignity and majesty of that Person, whose condescension he was going to illustrate. The phrase, εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ, admits of no construction so naturally as this, “to be equal with God^h.” The force of it lies in the word εἶναι. For, whatever instances may be brought of the use of the word ἴσα, it can never be shewn that εἶναι ἴσα signifies any thing so naturally as to be equal to, or equal with. What confirms this construction is, that the ancients frequently infer the equality of the Son with the Father, from his being the “Son of God,” or the “image of God;” either of which comes to the same sense with St. Paul’s “form of God.” And why might not St. Paul make the same just inference from the same premises, since it flows so naturally from them, and was very pertinent to the argument on which he was treating? The most considerable objection against it is from the particule ἀλλὰ, following after; which some think should rather have been ἀλλ’ ὅμως, or the like. But this piece of criticism is easily got over: it is frequent^k for the sacred writers to have the word ἀλλὰ instead of ἀλλ’ ὅμως, signifying howbeit, or nevertheless: and so indeed our translators should have rendered it here, agreeably to their rendering of the words preceding. I shall give two or three instances out of St. Paul’s own writings. 1 Cor. ix. 12. “If others be partakers of this power over you, “are not we rather? Nevertheless” (ἀλλὰ in the Greek) “we “have not used this power.” So again, Rom. v. 13, 14. “Sin “is not imputed when there is no law: nevertheless” (ἀλλὰ ⁱ Et bene qui dixit ipsum immensum Patrem in Filio mensuratum: mensura enim Patris Filius, quoniam et capit eum. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 4. p. 231.

^h See Pearson on the Creed, Art. II. p. 123.

^o Ὁ θεῖος λόγος, ὁ φανερώτατος ὄντως Θεός, ὁ τῷ Δεσπότη τῶν ὅλων ἐξισωθεῖς: ὅτι ἦν υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ. Clem. Alex. p. 86. ed. Ox.

^π Ἰν’ εἰκὼν αὐτὸς τυγχάνων τοῦ ἀοράτου Θεοῦ, καὶ ἐν τῷ μεγέθει σώζει τὴν

εἰκόνα τοῦ πατρός· οὐ γὰρ οἷόν τ’ ἦν εἶναι σύμμετρον (ἰν’ οὕτως ὀνομάσω) καὶ καλὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ ἀοράτου Θεοῦ, μὴ καὶ τοῦ μεγέθους παριστάσων τὴν εἰκόνα. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 323.

^k Gen. xl. 15. 2 Chron. xxx. 11. Isa. xlix. 15. Matth. xxiv. 6. Mark ix. 13, 22. x. 43. xiii. 7, 20, 24. xiv. 29, 36. Luke xvi. 30. xxi. 9. Joh. xi. 11, 16. xvi. 7. Acts vii. 47. 2 Cor. v. 16. vii. 6. xii. 16. Coloss. ii. 5. 2 Tim. i. 12. 2 Pet. iii. 14. 1 Tim. i. 16. Rev. ii. 4, 6.

again) "death reigned from Adam to Moses." There is therefore no sufficient ground for laying aside this construction on account of the particle; which may, and often does, signify the same as nevertheless, howbeit, notwithstanding, &c. Thus far I have been pleading for that sense of the words which appears in our English version. The sum of the plea is, that it is literal and grammatical; agrees with the oldest versions; is countenanced by Tertullian in the beginning of the third century, and by the Catholic Fathers in general¹ after the Nicene Council; is very pertinent to the Apostle's argument, and there is no objection of weight from the context against it. If this construction be admitted, the Apostle's reasoning so far, will run thus: "Who being essentially God, as Son of God, knew that he was rightfully and naturally equal with God, and could not be said to usurp or arrogate in respect to what was his own. Nevertheless he made himself of no reputation, appearing and acting much below his dignity, taking upon him human nature, &c." It must be owned that some of the Ante-Nicene writers interpreted the words differently. Origen^m, understanding the whole passage, as it seems, of the man Christ Jesus, (whose soul he supposed to have preexisted,) interprets the phrase, οὐχ ἀπαγγύων ἡγήσατο, &c. did not assume, or covet to be honoured as God. And this construction he was led into from this consideration, that the Λόγος, or divine nature of Christ, could not be capable of any proper exaltation. Novatianⁿ understands the passage of the Λόγος, or divine nature, and makes the sense to be, that Christ did not pretend to an absolute equality with God the Father, considering himself as second only, or as Son of the Father. The churches of Lyons and Vienne (in a letter recorded by ¹ I may give one or two for a specimen.

Quid est "non rapinam arbitratus esse se æqualem Deo?" Non usurpavit æqualitatem Dei, sed erat in illa in qua natus erat. August. Tract. in Joh. 17.

Non quasi rapinam habebat æqualitatem cum Patre, quam in substantia sui, tanquam Deus et Dominus possidebat. Ambros. de Fid. lib. ii. c. 8.

Non alienum arbitratus est, esse quod natus est. Aug. contr. Maz. p. 681.

Manens enim in forma Dei, non vi aliqua sibi ac rapina, id quod erat, præsumendum existimavit, scilicet ut Deo esset æqualis. Erat enim in Dei forma, nihilque ei ex ejus gloria de-erat, in cujus forma manebat; sed formam servi sui per humilitatem accepit, &c. Hilar. in Psalm. p. 325. ed. Bened.

^m Origen. in Joh. p. 34, 413. He seems to be of the same opinion in his book against Celsus. See p. 167, 168, 172.

ⁿ Novatian. de Trin. c. 17.

Eusebius^o seem to understand it thus, that our Lord did not assume to himself, as he justly might have done, to be honoured as God, but waved his privilege, and declined all ostentation of his glory, for a pattern to, and for the good of others. The three interpretations now mentioned are different from each other, and all of them reconcilable with Catholic principles. Origen's, though singular, is very safe, for one that would be only upon the defensive, in respect of this text, against the Arians. Novatian's may serve either way; because, while he denies only such an equality as no Catholic contends for, he asserts the true equality of nature between Father and Son P. The third interpretation is too loose and general to make any thing of on either side: only this is observable of them all, that they construe the words οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο &c. not as a part of the preceding character of Christ's greatness, but as part of the consequent account of his humiliation, so far contrary to the interpretation which I have before been pleading for. You may have observed, from what has been already hinted, that, taking the words as a part of the consequent account of Christ's humiliation, they are still capable of a very good meaning, and no way favourable, but contradictory, to the Arian hypothesis. For let the sense of the passage appear as follows:

“ Who being essentially God, (and consequently having a “ rightful claim to be honoured equally with God,) yet did not “ covet or desire to be so honoured, did not insist upon his “ right; but, for the greater glory of God, and for the good of “ others, chose rather (in the particular instance of his incarna“ tion) to wave his pretensions, and, in appearance, to recede “ from them.” This way of paraphrasing the words takes off the objection about the particle ἀλλὰ, and answers to that sense

^o Euseb. E. Hist. lib. v. cap. 2.

Phœbadius of the fourth century, a zealous defender of the Catholic doctrine against the Arians, yet scruples not to interpret this text nearly in the same way with Novatian.

Hic Sermo, cum in forma Dei esset, sapientia et ratione, et spiritus ratione, et spiritus virtute constructus, hoc est, totam vim Dei possidens, non se Deo Patri adæquavit, sed formam servi accipiens humiliavit se usque ad mortem. Induerat enim quod servire, quod mori possit. Phœbad. contr.

Arian. Bibl. Patr. tom. iv. p. 304.

Cyril also of Alexandria seems, in one place, to have understood the words οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο, as part of the consequent account of Christ's humiliation.

Ὁ μὲν γὰρ τῶν ὄλων σωτὴρ καὶ Κύριος, καίτοι μετὸν αὐτῷ τὸ ἐν μορφῇ καὶ ἰσότητι τῇ κατὰ πᾶν ὄντων ὄρασθαι πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, καὶ τοῖς τῆς θεότητος ἐναβρύνεσθαι θάκοις, οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ, ἀλλ' ἐάντων, &c. Cyril. Alex. contr. Jul. lib. vi. p. 195.

of the phrase, οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο, which Origen, Novatian, and the churches of Lyons &c. took it in; and withal secures the main point which we insist on from this text, namely, the equality, the essential equality of the Son to the Father. In fine, either sense of the phrase, οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο, will suit very well with Catholic principles; but it is the latter only that can be any way drawn to favour the Arians: which indeed is the true reason why they contend so much for it. As to the two interpretations which I have given, the first, agreeing with our English version, seems to me preferable. It has been, in a manner, the standing interpretation for 1300 years. It has given indeed great uneasiness to the Arians; but they were never yet able, nor ever will be, to confute it. I pass on to the next words. "But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." Which words should have been turned thus: Nevertheless he emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men. This rendering is not only more exact and conformable to the original, but also more suitable to the rendering of the words preceding. When our Lord is said to have "made himself of no reputation," or to have emptied himself, which signifies much the same, we are not to suppose that he ⁹lost any thing which he had before; or that he ceased to be in the form of God, by taking on him the form of man. No: he had the same essential glory, the same real dignity, which he ever had, but among men concealed it; appeared not in majesty and glory like to God, but divested himself of every dazzling appearance, and every outward mark of majesty and greatness, ^rcon-

⁹ Εἰ δὲ καὶ σῶμα θνητὸν καὶ ψυχὴν ἀνθρωπίνην ἀναλαβὼν ὁ ἀθάνατος Θεὸς λόγος, δοκεῖ τῷ Κέλσῳ ἀλλάττεσθαι καὶ μεταπλάττεσθαι· μανθανέτω ὅτι ὁ λόγος, οὐδὲν μὲν πάσχει ὡς πάσχει τὸ σῶμα, ἢ ἡ ψυχὴ. συγκαταβαίνων δὲ &c. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 170.

Non amittens quod erat, sed accipiens quod non erat. Aust. in Joh. Tract. 17.

Ἐσμίκρυνεν αὐτοῦ τὴν θεότητα. Eu-seb. lib. i. cap. 13.

Nam etsi apostolus semetipsum exinanisse dicit, formam servī suscipiendo, non utique sic exinanitum accipimus ut aliud quam quod fuerat idem spiritus fieret: sed ut, seposito interim majestatis suæ honore, humanum corpus indueret, quo suscepto, salus gentium fieret. Ut enim sol cum nube tegitur, claritas ejus comprimitur, non cæcatur; et lumen illud quod toto orbe diffusum claro splendore cuncta perfundit, parvo admodum obstaculo nubis includitur, non auferitur: sic et homo ille quem Dominus Jesus Salvatorque induit, Deum tamen in illo non intercepit, sed abscondit. Pseud-Ambros. de Fid. Orthod. cap. viii. p. 355. ed. Bened.

^r Τὸ σκήπτρον τῆς μεγαλωσύνης τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς οὐκ ἔλθεν ἐν κόμπῳ ἀλαζονίας οὐδὲ descending to appear, and act, and converse as a man, like unto us in all things, sin only excepted. In this sense it is that our Lord emptied himself. He came not with any pomp and ostentation of greatness, he laid aside his Godlike majesty, and disrobed himself, as it were, of all outward glories, becoming a man, a miserable man, and in that nature suffering, bleeding, and dying for us. "Wherefore God hath also highly exalted "him." Here we must make a pause, and inquire diligently what this exaltation means. One that is truly Son of God, and in a proper sense God, cannot be properly exalted; that is, cannot be preferred to any higher or better state than he ever enjoyed, nor receive any improvement of, or accession to, his essential dignity, glory, or happiness. Hence it is, that as many of the ancients as have understood the text of a proper exaltation, have interpreted it of the human only, and not the divine nature of Christ. This is true of the Ante-Nicene, as well as Post-Nicene writers, which appears from Origen^s and Hippolytus^t: and I do not know of any direct testimony to the contrary. So that here again the Arians, understanding it of a proper exaltation to a better state, and of Christ considered in his highest capacity, run counter to the doctrine of the ancients before the Nicene Council, in a very material article respecting this controversy.

The ancients were certainly in the right not to admit of any proper exaltation, in the sense before given, in respect of the divine nature of Christ. For, as ^uAthanasius and other Catholics well argue in this case, how could he, that was with God, and in the bosom of the Father, be exalted, or become higher than he always was? How could the Giver and Dispenser of all graces receive any thing as a matter of grace or favour? How could he be then said to have attained the privilege of being adored, who had long before been adored both by men and ὑπερηφανίας, καίπερ δυνάμενος· ἀλλὰ ταπεινοφρονῶν, καθὼς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον περὶ αὐτοῦ ἐλάλησεν. Clem. Rom. Ep. cap. xvi. p. 70.

Αὐτὸς μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῇ ἀφθάρτῳ αὐτοῦ δόξῃ πρὸς ἡμᾶς ἐλθεὶν ἠδύνατο· ἀλλ' ἡμεῖς οὐδεπώποτε τὸ μέγεθος τῆς δόξης αὐτοῦ βαστάζειν ἠδυνάμεθα. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 38. p. 284.

"Ὅστις ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ὦν, διὰ τοὺς κολληθέντας τῇ σαρκὶ καὶ γενομένοις ὕπερ σὰρξ, ἐγένετο σὰρξ, ἵνα χω-ρηθῇ ὑπὸ τῶν μὴ δυναμένων αὐτὸν βλέπειν καθὼς λόγος ἦν, καὶ πρὸς Θεὸν ἦν, καὶ Θεὸς ἦν. Orig. contr. Cels. lib. vi. p. 322.

^s Ὁ γὰρ λόγος ἐν ἀρχῇ πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν, ὁ Θεὸς λόγος οὐκ ἐπιδέχετο τὸ ὑπερνωθῆναι. Orig. in Joh. p. 413. Huet.

^t Ὑπερνωθῆσθαι λέγεται, καὶ ὡς οὐκ ἔχων, διὰ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον μονοουχί, &c. Hippolyt. Fragm. vol. ii. p. 29. Fabric.

^u Athanas. Op. tom. i. p. 445, &c.

angels? He who was God from the beginning, who had glory with the Father "before the world was," who is himself the "Lord of glory," and Creator and Preserver of all things, was infinitely too high, too great, and too divine, to receive any accession to his dignity, any real increase either of perfection or glory. Thus far is very right; and therefore, if a proper exaltation, in that sense, be intended, it can only be meant of Christ as God-man, receiving those honours and titles, in his human or mediatorial capacity, which he had always enjoyed in another. And thus the α ncients, for the most part, have understood Christ's exaltation to be no more than a kind of new investiture, upon his new and late condescension; and his having those rights, titles, and honours confirmed to him as God-man, which as God he never wanted. This, in the main, is true and right; and is a good account, in part, of what was in fact. But there is some reason to think that it is not precisely and accurately the meaning of this text. For if the exaltation be meant only of the human nature, it is more natural to suppose that St. Paul would not here have spoken of the condescension of the Logos, but would rather have told us only what the man Christ Jesus had done, how humbly and how righteously Christ had demeaned himself in that capacity, and how God had rewarded his services. And thus it is that γ Hermas, a very early writer of the first century, represents this matter. α An ancient commentator upon

α Εἰ δὲ ὑψουῖσθαι λέγεται, καὶ ἐν τάξει χαρίσματος τὸ ὑπὲρ πάντων ὄνομα δεχέσθαι, εἰς ἐκεῖνο δηλονότι μετὰ σαρκὸς ἐπανάγεται, εἰς ὅπερ ἦν καὶ δίχα σαρκός. Cyriil. Alex. Thesaur. p. 130.

Vid. etiam Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. Orat. v. p. 597. Athanas. aliosque.

γ Adhibito itaque Filio, quem carum et hæredem habebat, et amicis quos in consilio advocabat, indicat ea quæ servo suo facienda mandasset, quæ præterea illi fecisset. At illi protinus gratulati sunt servo illi, quod tam plenum testimonium Domini sui assecutus fuisset. Ait deinde illis: Ego quidem huic servo libertatem promisi, si custodisset mandatum meum quod dederam, et custodivit illud, et præterea opus bonum adjecit in vineam, quod mihi quam plurimum placuit. Pro hoc igitur opere quod fecit, volo eum Filio meo facere cohæredem; quoniam cum sensisset quod esset bonum, non omisit sed fecit illud. Herm. Simil. v. p. 104. Cotelier.

α Quibusdam tamen videtur homini donatum esse nomen: quod est super omne nomen quod nullo genere, nulla ratione convenit. Si enim Christus Dei Filius idem ipse et homo est, non poterat Deus homo factus, sed manens Deus, his egere quæ habebat: aut si secundum quod homo erat, his egebat quæ Dei sunt, ipse sibi Dei Filius Deus dedisset quæ deerant ei juxta quod homo erat.— Neque caro hoc posset effici quod est Deus. Sed forte ut adoptione Deus esset: et hic color est. Incipiet enim ex parte Deus verus esse Christus, et ex parte adoptivus, aut duo Dii: sed aliud Scriptura significat. Illi enim donatum significat, qui se exinanivit, qui formam servi accepit, qui in similitudinem hominis factus est homo, this text gives several reasons why the exaltation here spoken of is not, cannot be intended of the Man only, but of Christ in his whole Person. “ 1. Because, if Christ be God as well as Man, “ then all the time from his incarnation he must have had, along “ with his humanity, all that pertains to God; and therefore “ could not afterwards properly receive what he had before. “ 2. Supposing that he wanted any thing in respect of his man- “ hood, yet why should the Father be said to give what he him- “ self, as God, could easily supply? 3. The things mentioned as “ given to Christ are too high and great for the man to receive, “ unless the human nature be supposed to be divine, which is “ absurd: or if it be supposed to have been made God by adop- “ tion, then either Christ is God partly by nature and partly by “ adoption, or the two natures are two Gods. 4. It appears “ from the text, that the exaltation belongs to the same nature “ which condescended and emptied itself. And what nature was “ that but the Divine nature? Or what great matter would it “ have been for the Apostle to have told us, that a man did not “ pretend to be equal with God, or was obedient to God?”

There is a great deal of weight in the reasonings of this author, which made him at length ^aconclude, that the text does not speak of any proper exaltation, or new accession to any thing, but of the more illustrious manifestation of him, for the solemn proclaiming him to be what he always was. And this, indeed, I take to be true in part, though not the full meaning of the text before us. Though the absolute, essential dignity of our blessed Lord was always the same, and in respect of which he was ever equal with God, yet his relative dignity towards us, founded in the obligations we have received from him, never so signally appeared as in that amazing and astonishing instance of condescension and goodness, his becoming man, and dying for us. We were hereby “bought with a price,” becoming servants to Christ, and Christ a Lord to us, in a peculiar sense ^b, qui patri obedivit. Si Homo Deo Patri obedivit, quid magnum est quod dixit Apostolus? Sed hoc magnum dicit, quia cum æqualis esset obedivit. Pseud-Ambros. in loc. p. 255.

^a Hoc ergo natus accepit, ut post crucem manifestaretur quid a Patre dum generaretur accepit.

^b 1 Cor. vi. 20. vii. 22, 23. 1 Pet. i. 19.

Εἰς τοῦτο γὰρ Χριστὸς καὶ ἀπέθανε καὶ ἀνέστη καὶ ἀνέζησεν, ἵνα καὶ νεκρῶν καὶ ζώντων κυριεύσῃ. Rom. xiv. 9.

Invisibilis visibilis factus, et incomprehensibilis factus comprehensibilis, et impassibilis passibilis, et Verbum homo, universa in semetipsum recapitulans: uti sicut in supercælestibus et spiritalibus, et invisibilibus princeps est Verbum Dei; sic in visibilibus, et and under a new and special title. Upon this occasion, and on this account, it pleased God, in the most solemn and pompous manner, to proclaim the high dignity of God the Son, to reinforce his rightful claim of homage, and to command heaven and earth, angels and men, to pay him all honour, reverence, and adoration suitable to the dignity of so great, so good, so divine a Person as the Son of God. He had lately run through an unparalleled work of mercy, had redeemed mankind and triumphed over death and hell: upon this his divinity is recognised, and his high worth proclaimed. We may observe how, under the Old Testament, it pleased God often to insist upon what great things he had done (though many of them slight in comparison to the work of redemption) in order to move the persons concerned to receive him as God. So he tells Abram, "I am the Lord that brought thee out of Ur of the Chaldees." Gen. xv. 7. And to the children of Israel he says: "I will take you to me for a people, and I will be to you a God: and ye shall know that I am the Lord your God, which bringeth you out from under the burdens of the Egyptians." Exod. vi. 7. And again, "I am the Lord thy God, which have brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage. Thou shalt have no other Gods before me." Exod. xx. 2, 3. Or when it pleased God to speak any thing higher of what he had done, he reminded his people of his being their Creator and Redeemer. "Thus saith the Lord that created thee, O Jacob, and he that formed corporalibus principatum habeat, in semetipsum primatum assumens, et apponens semetipsum caput Ecclesie, universa attrahat ad semetipsum apto in tempore. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 16. p. 206.

Accipiens omnium potestatem, quando Verbum caro factum est, ut quemadmodum in caelis principatum habuit Verbum Dei, sic et in terra haberet principatum, quoniam homo justus, "qui peccatum non fecit, nec inventus est dolus in ore ejus;" principatum autem habeat eorum quæ sunt terra, ipse primogenitus mortuorum factus: et ut viderent omnia, quemadmodum prædiximus, suum regem, &c. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 20. p. 253.

Per omnem venit ætatem, et infantibus infans factus. Sanctificans infantes: in parvulis parvulus—in juvenibus juvenis, exemplum juvenibus fiens, et sanctificans Domino. Sic et senior in senioribus, ut sit perfectus magister in omnibus—deinde et usque ad mortem pervenit ut sit "primogenitus ex mortuis, ipse primatum tenens in omnibus," princeps vitæ, prior omnium, præcedens omnes. Iren. p. 147, 148.

The sense of all this is very distinctly expressed by Hippolytus:

"Ὁς ἐπουρανίων, καὶ ἐπιγείων, καὶ καταχθονίων βασιλεὺς καὶ κριτὴς πάντων ἀποδέδεικται. ἐπουρανίων μὲν ὅτι λόγος τοῦ πατρὸς πρὸ πάντων γεγενημένος ἦν· ἐπιγείων δὲ, ὅτι ἀνθρώπος ἐν ἀνθρώποις ἐγενήθη, ἀναπλάσσων δι' ἑαυτοῦ τὸν Ἀδὰμ· καταχθονίων δὲ, ὅτι καὶ ἐν νεκροῖς κατελογίσθη—διὰ θανάτου τὸν θάνατον νικῶν. Hippol. de Antichrist. cap. xxvi. p. 15. Fabric.

“ thee, O Israel, Fear not : for I have redeemed thee, I have “ called thee by my name ; thou art mine.” Isa. xliii. 1. We see from hence, how even God the Father asserted his claim to the homage and adoration of his people, from the good and great things he had done for them. Not that he was not God and Lord before, but because the obligations laid upon them were apt to strike the more powerfully, and to bring the consideration of their duty towards him close and home to their hearts. To apply this to our present purpose ; you may please to consider, that after God the Son had shewn such amazing and astonishing acts of goodness towards mankind, then was it proper to celebrate his name to the utmost, to recognise the dignity and majesty of his Person, and to reommend him to the world, as their God and Lord, with all imaginable advantage, with such endearing circumstances as could not but affect, ravish, and astonish every pious and ingenuous mind. And thus I understand the words, “ wherefore God also hath highly exalted him.” That is ; on account of the great work of redemption, so full of love and goodness, so astonishing and so endearing, God hath remarkably proclaimed his dignity, and set forth his glory ; commanding all men hereupon to acknowledge him their God and Lord ; their Lord always, but now more especially, by a new and distinct claim, as their Saviour, and Deliverer, and only Redeemer^c. As to the sense of the word exalted, nothing is more frequent in Scripture than such as I have here given. I shall mention

^c God the Father had remained as glorious as now he is, although he had never created the world ; for the creation gave much, even all they had, to things created, it gave nothing unto God, who was in being infinite : yet if God had created nothing, the attribute of Creator could have had no real ground, it had been no real attribute. In like manner, suppose the Son of God had never condescended to take our nature upon him, he had remained as glorious in his nature and person as now he is ; yet not glorified for, or by, this title or attribute of incarnation. Or suppose he had not “humbled “ himself unto death”——he had remained as glorious in his nature and person, and in the attribute of incarnation, as now he is ; but without these glorious attributes of being “ our “ Lord and Redeemer,” and of being the “ fountain of grace, and salvation “ unto us.” All these are real attributes, and suppose a real ground or foundation ; and that was “ his hum-“ bling himself unto death, even the “ death of the cross.” Nor are these attributes only real, but more glorious, both in respect of God the Father, who was pleased to give his only Son for us, and in respect of God the Son, who was pleased to pay our ransom by his humiliation, than the attribute of creation is. The Son of God then, not the Son of David only, hath been exalted since his death to be our Lord, by a new and real title, by the title of redemption and salvation. Jackson on the Creed, vol. iii. lib. ii. cap. 3. p. 316. See also Bull Prim. Trad. p. 39, 40.

only two or three examples, referring to a Concordance for the rest.

“He is my God—and I will exalt him.” Exod. xv. 2. “Exalted be the God of the rock of my salvation.” 2 Sam. xxii. 47. “Let the God of my salvation be exalted.” Psal. xviii. 46. “Be thou exalted, Lord, in thine own strength.” Psal. xxi. 13. “Thou art my God, and I will praise thee; thou art my God, and I will exalt thee.” Psal. cxviii. 28. “The Lord alone shall be exalted in that day.” Isa. ii. 11, 17. These (besides many other instances of like kind) are enough to justify this interpretation of the word exalted^d. Besides that I would have it observed, that the word in the original is not ὑψωσε, but ὑπερύψωσε^e. The former very probably would have been used, had the Apostle intended only a proper local exaltation of the man Christ Jesus to the right hand of God. Further; the immediate words following confirm this sense of the word. For, how is Christ exalted? God “hath given him a name which is above every name.” That is, he has extolled and magnified his name above all names. Thus was the Son of God exalted, or glorified, for the great things he had done, and dignified (if I may so speak) with a very high and honourable title, (too big for any creature to have merited, or for any thing less than himself to wear,) that of Redeemer and Preserver of man, and Lord of the whole universe. After the Apostle had taught us the great and supereminent dignity of God the Son, it was very proper to add, “to the glory of God the Father,” that we might not be so entirely taken up with admiring and reverencing the excellency and perfections of God the Son, as to forget that he is a Son still, referring all to God the Father^f; whose glory it is to have had always with him, and “rejoicing always before him,” so great and so divine a Son, equal to himself, the express image, the perfect transcript and adequate resemblance of his Person ε.

^d Ὁ Θεὸς αὐτὸν ὑπερύψωσε. καὶ ὁ Θεὸς γὰρ λέγει τῷ Θεῷ μου Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ διὰ Δαβὶδ, Ὑψώθητι ἐπὶ τοὺς οὐρανοὺς ὁ Θεός, καὶ ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν ἢ δόξα σου.—Ἐδόξασεν αὐτὸν ὁ πατήρ· ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁ υἱὸς ἐδόξασε τὸν πατέρα, &c. Dionys. Ascript. Epist. contr. Samosat. p. 881. Labb.

^e Σὺ εἶ Κύριος ὁ ὑψίστος ἐπὶ πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν, σφόδρα ὑπερυψώθης ὑπὲρ πάντας τοὺς θεούς. Psal. xcvi. 9.

Αἰνῶ καὶ ὑπερυψῶ καὶ δοξάζω τὸν

Βασιλέα τοῦ οὐρανοῦ. Dan. iv. 34.

^f Æqualem ergo Patri credite Filium: sed tamen de Patre Filium, Patrem vero non de Filio. Origo apud illum, æqualitas apud istum—genuit autem Pater æqualem sibi, et totum quicquid est Filius, habet de Patre, quod autem Deus Pater est non habet de Filio. Itaque dicimus Patrem Deum de nullo, Filium Deum de Deo. Augustin. Serm. 140. tom. v. p. 681.

^ε Σέβωμὲν γε τὸν πατέρα, θαυμάζομεν

I may just observe to you the strict accuracy of the Apostle's expression "God the Father:" not God, absolutely, nor God his Father, as some affect to speak, but "God the Father;" intimating that the Son is God also, and therefore, for distinction sake, he adds, "the Father," expressing it thus, to the "glory of God the Father."

I have at length run through the text, explaining the particulars of it in their order. I shall now subjoin a summary view of the whole, in a paraphrase conformable to the explication before given.

"Ver. 3, 4. Be ye not vain-glorious, or selfish, but be "willing to stoop and condescend even beneath yourselves, "in some instances, for the glory of God and the good of "others.

"Ver. 5. Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ "Jesus :

"Ver. 6. Who, though Son of God, and, as such, rightfully "and really equal with God ;

"Ver. 7. Yet notwithstanding chose, in the instance of his "incarnation, to hide his majesty, and to veil his glories under "the garb of humanity ; being content to become a man, and "thereby a servant to God, though by nature a Son, and Lord "of all.

"Ver. 8. And having taken upon himself the nature and "condition of a man, he submitted yet further, even to death "itself ; and that too in the most ignominious circumstances, "nailed to a cross.

"Ver. 9. This amazing and astonishing instance of conde- "scension, love, and goodness, God the Father himself has most "remarkably approved ; and has thereupon more solemnly and "more illustriously proclaimed the supereminent dignity of God "the Son, who had merited so highly of men.

"Ver. 10, 11. Commanding all persons to honour, worship, "and adore him as God and Lord ; and under the new and "special title of Redeemer, to the glory of God the Father, whose "Son he is ; their honour inseparable, and their glory one."

This appears to be the most natural and obvious meaning of this celebrated passage, consonant to Scripture, and to the principles of the primitive and Catholic Church. I should now make some reflections upon the whole, but have scarce room barely to hint them for your leisure thoughts to improve.

αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱὸν, λόγον, καὶ σοφίαν, καὶ Θεοῦ, οὕτω δὴ καὶ τὸν γεννηθέντα ἀπὸ ἀλήθειαν, καὶ δικαιοσύνην, καὶ πάντα, τοῦ τοιοῦτου πατρός. Orig. contr. Cels. π. 387.

Let the Socinians or Arians make as great a matter as they please of a man's, or of a creature's becoming a servant to God; we shall think it a still greater and more marvellous condescension, for one that was above every thing servile, himself equal to God, to condescend as he did.

Let them magnify his merits and performances, done for his own sake, to arrive at such an immense glory above all other creatures; we shall look upon them as more noble, more disinterested, and truly divine, if done for others only, by one that was himself too great to receive any recompense.

Let them value it as an extraordinary piece of condescension, that he did not lay claim to what he had no right to; we shall think it more pious and more decent to say, that he quitted his right, and receded from his just pretensions.

Let them honour him as their Lord, made as it were but of yesterday; we shall honour him as Lord and God from the beginning; the Creator first, and now, at last, Redeemer of man.

Let them, lastly, look upon him as a servant still, a servant at least to God, (as all creatures are^h;) while we, with angels and archangels, with things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, believe and confess that Jesus Christ is no servant, but Lord and God, to the glory of God the Father. "To whom with the Holy Ghost, all honour, and praise, might, majesty, power, and dominion, be ascribed now and for ever." Amen.

^h Εἴ τι γὰρ ἔστιν ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, ἢ ἀνάγκης ἐλευθέρα ἢ δὲ κτιστὴ, δουλικὴ ἢ ἀκτιστος φύσις ἔστιν, ἢ κτιστή. ἀλλ' καὶ νόμοις δεσποτικοῖς ἐπομένη. Pseudo-Just. Expr. Fid.

Divine Titles ascribed to Christ in Holy Scripture :

OR

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

PROVED FROM HIS TITLES.

The sixth Sermon preached February 3, 1748.

JOHN xvi. 15.

All things that the Father hath are mine : therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

THESE are the words of our blessed Saviour, speaking of the Spirit of Truth, otherwise styled the "Spirit of God^a," and "Spirit of the living God^b," and "Spirit of the Father^c," and "Spirit of the Lord^d;" and sometimes the "Spirit of Christ^e," and "Spirit of Jesus^f," and emphatically "the Spirit^g," but most commonly the "Holy Spirit," or "Holy Ghost," who is the third Person of the ever blessed and adorable Trinity. Our Lord had intimated, in the verses foregoing, that this divine Person, the Spirit of Truth, should shortly come upon the disciples, and "guide them into all truth;" (ver. 13.) "for," says our blessed Saviour, "he shall not speak of himself;" that is, not of himself alone, separate from, or independent of, every other person^h, but "whatsoever he shall hear," (that is, know in an ineffable manner, by his intimate union and communion in all things with ^a Matt. iii. 16. Rom. viii. 9, 14. xv. 19. 1 Cor. ii. 10, 11, 14. iii. 16. vi. 11. Eph. iv. 30. 1 Pet. iv. 14.

^b 2 Cor. iii. 3.

^c Matt. x. 20. Eph. iii. 14, 16.

^d Acts v. 9. viii. 39. 2 Cor. iii. 17, 18.

^e Rom. viii. 9. Gal. iv. 6. 1 Pet. i. 11.

^f Acts xvi. 7. See Mill upon this place. Phil. i. 19.

^g Luke iv. 14. John iii. 8. vii. 39. Acts ii. 4. viii. 29. x. 19. Rom. xv. 30.

^h "Non enim loquetur a semet" ipso." Hoc est, non sine me et sine meo et Patris arbitrio: quia inseparabilis a meo et Patris est voluntate; quia non ex se est, sed ex Patre et meo est: hoc enim ipsum quod subsistit et loquitur, a Patre et meo illi
est. Didym. apud Hieron. vol. iv. pag.
514. ed. Bened.

Father and Son,) "that shall he speak: and he will shew "you things to come. He shall glorify me, for he shall receive "of mineⁱ, and shall shew it unto you," ver. 14. That is, whatever influences he shall shed, whatever truths he shall reveal, whatever miracles he shall perform, they will be all so many manifestations of my glory, as coming from me, acting and speaking in and by the "Spirit of God." Then follow the words of the text. "All things that the Father hath are mine: "therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it "unto you."

As much as to say, Think it not strange that I ascribe to myself the operations and influences of the "Spirit of God," or "Spirit of the Father," with the glory of them: for though these things do indeed of right belong to the Father, whose Spirit he is; yet this is very consistent with my claim, because "all that the Father hath is mine:" his power is my power, his works my works, his Spirit my Spirit; our perfections common, our nature equal, and our glory one^k. This is the most natural and obvious meaning of the text, consonant to other Scriptures, and to Catholic antiquity; as shall be shewn in the sequel. The text might lead me to discourse on the divinity of the Holy Ghost, as well as of the Son: but having hitherto confined myself to the single point of Christ's divinity, that I might the more fully and distinctly treat of it; I shall for the same reason do so still, and occasionally only touch upon the other, as it may fall in my way, or may be subservient to my main point. The words now under consideration will afford two distinct arguments of the divinity of God the Son; one particular and special, the other more general.

1. The first, which I call particular and special, is contained in this, that the operations, gifts, and graces of the Spirit of God with the glory of them, are ascribed to Christ.

ⁱ "De meo sumet," inquit, sicut ipse de Patris. Ita connexus Patris in Filio, et Filii in Paracleto, tres efficit coherentes, alterum ex altero: qui tres unum sint, nou unus; quomodo dictum est, "Ego et Pater unum sumus;" ad substantiæ unitatem, non ad numeri singularitatem. Tertul. contr. Prax. cap. xxv.

ⁱ Ὁ πατήρ δι' υἱοῦ σὺν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι τὰ πάντα χαρίζεται. οὐκ ἄλλα πατὴρ χαρίσματα, καὶ ἄλλα υἱοῦ, καὶ ἄλλα ἁγίου πνεύματος. μία γὰρ ἡ σωτηρία, μία ἡ δύναμις, μία ἡ πίστις. Cyril. Hieros. Catech. xvi. p. 236. Ox. ed.

^k Licet a Patre procedat Spiritus veritatis, et det illis Deus Spiritum Sanctum pententibus se: tamen quia "omnia quæ habet Pater mea sunt," et ipse Spiritus Patris meus est, et de meo accipiet. Didym. de Spir. Sanct. apud Hieron. tom. iv. p. 516.

2. The second, which I call general, lies in the general reason given as the foundation of the former; that "all things that the "Father hath," our Saviour attributes to himself, and challenges as his own. Of these in their order.

I. We are to observe, that the operations, gifts, and graces of the Spirit of God, with the glory of them, are ascribed to Christ; "He shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you." He shall glorify me: the glory of whatsoever shall be done or taught by the Holy Spirit, our Lord ascribes to himself, as being (in conjunction with the Father) the author and fountain of it. The context indeed mentions only the Spirit's teaching; but the reason is the same for whatever should be done by the Holy Spirit of God, who is also the Spirit of Christ: and therefore the miraculous works of the Holy Ghost are expressly ascribed to Christ by St. Peter, Acts ii. 33. "Being by the right hand "of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise "of the Holy Ghost, he hath shed forth this which ye now see "and hear." When therefore our Lord says, "he shall receive "of mine, and shall shew it unto you," it is but reasonable to understand it of every operation, gift, or influence of the Holy Spirit, (of whatever kind it were,) showered down upon the Apostles. All were derived from Christ; to him therefore (in conjunction with the Father and the Holy Ghost) is the glory of them to be ascribed, as is plain from the words, "he shall "glorify me," ver. 14.

Now, if the Holy Ghost himself be a divine Person, and one with God the Father, and adored together with him, as the Catholic Church has all along taught¹, and Scripture itself has sufficiently intimated; then we have here a clear and irresistible proof of the divinity of Christ, who, as appears from this text, is at least equal to, or in some sense greater than the Holy Ghost^m. But because the divinity of the Holy Ghost is what our adversaries will no more admit than they will the other, and it would be here too great a digression for me to enter into the proof of it; I must be content to wave that point, and consider only whether, or how far, our argument may be conceived to stand independent of it.

¹ Justin. Mart. Apol. i. cap. 16. Athenagoras, p. 40, 96. Irenæus, lib. iv. cap. 37. Clem. Alex. p. 1020. ed. Ox. Tertullian, contr. Prax. cap. ix. xiii. xxv. Hippolytus contr. Noët. cap. xii. Origen. apud Basil. de Sp. S. p. 219. in Joh. p. 124. Cyprian. Ep. ad Jubajan. p. 203.

^m Si a Christo acceptit quæ nuntiet, major ergo jam Paracleto Christus est: quoniam nec Paracletus a Christo acciperet nisi minor Christo esset. Minor autem Christo Paracletus Christum etiam Deum esse hoc ipso probat a quo acceptit quæ nuntiat; ut testimonium Christi divinitatis grande sit, dum minor Christo Paracletus repertus, ab illo sumit quæ cæteris tradit. Novat. de Trin. cap. xxiv.

The Person of the Holy Ghost is described in Scripture as the immediate author and worker of miraclesⁿ; and even of those done by our Lord himself^o; the Conductor of Christ Jesus in his human capacity, during his state of humiliation here upon earth^p; the inspirer of the Prophets and Apostles^q; the Searcher of all hearts, and the Comforter of good Christians in difficulties^r. To lie to him is the same thing as to lie unto God^s. Blasphemy against him is unpardonable^t. To resist him is the same thing as to resist God^u. He is in God, and knows the mind of God as perfectly as a man knows his own mind; and that in respect of all things, even the deep things of God^x. Men's bodies are his temples^y, and, by being his temple, are the temple of God^z. He is joined with God the Father and Son, in the solemn form of baptism^a; in religious oaths, and in invocations for grace and peace^b; in the same common operations^c; in the same authoritative mission and vocation of persons into the ministry^d; and he is joined with the Father in the same common mission, even of the Son himself^e: in a word, he is Lord^f (or Jehovah) and God^g, and Lord of Hosts^h. This is a brief summary of what the Scriptures have taught us of the person, character, and offices of the Holy Ghost. Exceptions may be made (though of no great weight) to some particulars, which I have not here time to consider. The least that can be inferred from them, and what the Arians themselves will not scruple to admit, is, that the Holy Ghost is a Person of very high eminence, dignity, and majesty; much superior to any angel or archangel, or any other person ⁿ Acts ii. 4, 45, 46. Rom. xv. 19.

^o 1 Cor. ii. 4, 5. xii. 4, 8, 11, xiv. 2.
 Heb. ii. 4.

^p Matt. xii. 18. Acts x. 38.
^q Matt. iv. 1. xii. 18. Luke iv. 1.
 John i. 32. iii. 34. Acts i. 2.

^r See the proofs in Clarke's Script.
 Doctr. cap. iii. sect. 2.

^s See Script. Doctr. cap. iv. sect. 3.
^t Acts v. 3, 4.

^u Matt. xii. 31, 32.

^x Acts vii. 51.

^y 1 Cor. ii. 10, 11.

^z 1 Cor. vi. 19.

^a 1 Cor. iii. 16. Eph. ii. 21, 22.

^b Matt. xxviii. 19.

^c 2 Cor. xiii. 14. Rev. i. 4, 5.
 Rom. ix. 1.

^d 1 Cor. xii. 4—7, &c.

^e Acts xiii. 2. Compare Hos. ii.
 23. Acts ix. 15.

^f Isa. xlvi. 16.

^g Compare Exod. xxxiv. 34. with 2 Cor. iii. 17.

^h Acts v. 3, 4.

ⁱ Compare Isa. vi. with Acts xxviii.
 25, 26.

whatsoever, excepting only God the Father, and his Son Christ Jesus. Let it then be considered, that however great and glorious, however mighty and powerful, however wise and knowing, however venerable and adorable this Person is, and however intimate with, and united to, God the Father, whose Spirit he is; yet all that he is, and all that he does, is to be referred to Christ, as the author and fountain of it. He claims the glory of all, because all is his. Now if we consider the infinite distance there is between God and the very highest of his creatures, and how arrogant it must appear in any creature to make a claim of this kind and value, a claim upon God's own Spirit, a claim of glory (though in strictness glory can be due to God alone) as having a hand in all his works, and, as it were, assisting and influencing the very "Spirit of the Father:" I say, if we consider this, and at the same time reflect that our blessed Lord (who was the most perfect pattern of humility, meekness, and modesty) has really made this claim, and has been thus familiar with Almighty God; what can we think less than this, that our blessed Lord is infinitely superior to all creatures, and consequently is himself really, truly, and essentially God, coequal and coeternal with God the Father? Thus, and thus only, can his claim be justified, and his pretensions reconciled to the Scriptures, or to the truth and reason of things: which will appear further, if we consider,

II. Secondly, the general reason, upon which our blessed Lord founds his particular claim. "All things that the Father hath "are mine." All things; and therefore the very highest of all, namely, those specified in that chapter. And indeed it is but reasonable, and even necessary to suppose, that one who could justly ascribe so much to himself must be in all respects equal to the Father, excepting only (what the text intimates in the very name of Father^k) that he is not another Father, ⁱ Neque enim de creaturis sumebat Spiritus Sanctus, qui Dei Spiritus est; ut ex his videatur accipere, quia ea omnia Dei sunt. Hilar. de Trin. lib. ix. p. 1033.

^k Διὰ τοῦτο γὰρ ἀκριβῶς εἶρηκεν, ὅσα ἔχει ὁ πατήρ, ἵνα καὶ ὧδε λέγων τὸν πατέρα, μὴ καὶ αὐτὸς πατήρ νομισθῇ· οὐ γὰρ εἶρηκεν ἐγὼ εἰμι ὁ πατήρ, ἀλλ' ὅσα ἔχει ὁ πατήρ. Athanas. Op. vol. i. p. 107. ed. Bened.

Procul hinc absint dialecticorum tenciculæ et sophismata a veritate pellantur: quæ occasionem impietatis ex pia predicatione capientia, dicunt: Ergo et Pater est Filius, et Filius Pater. Si enim dixisset, "Omnia "quæcunque habet Deus, mea sunt," haberet impietas occasionem confingendi, et verisimile videretur mendacium. Cum vero dixerit, "Omnia "quæ habet Pater, mea sunt;" Pa-but Son of the Father. This clearly accounts for his ascribing to himself all the influences, gifts, and graces of God's Holy Spirit, and the glory of them. For if God the Son hath all things that the Father hath, then hath he all the attributes and perfections belonging to the Father; the same power, rights, and privileges; the same honour and glory; and, in a word, the same nature, substance, and Godhead. Then, indeed, every divine work is his work; the Spirit of the Father is also his Spirit; the operations of the Holy Ghost must, of course, be the operations of Father and Son too; and the glory of every thing must be referred to both, as to one common author and fountain thereof. On these principles, the sense of the whole passage is easy, expedite, and clear; and very consonant to our blessed Lord's account of himself in other places of this Gospel: particularly where he says, "What things soever he," (the Father) "doth, these also doth the Son likewise," John v. 19. "I and my Father are one," John x. 30. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father—I am in the Father, and the Father in me," John xiv. 9, 10. "Glorify me with thine own self, with the glory which I had with thee before the world was," John xvii. 5. "All mine are thine, and thine are mine, and I am glorified in them," John xvii. 10. These are very high and strong expressions, confirming that sense of the text which I have given, and which prevailed in the Christian Church (as appears from Tertullian above cited) before the Council of Nice, as well as after¹. But my design is next to proceed to other Scriptures which expressly ascribe the same high titles, powers, and perfections to the Son which they do to the Father; therein justifying, or rather more fully and particularly declaring, what our Lord had but briefly intimated in the words, "All things that the Father hath are mine." My method shall be,

1. To shew that the divine titles are ascribed to the Son in holy Scripture: and,

2. That the divine attributes are also applied to him.

tris nomine se Filium declaravit; Paternitatem, qui Filius erat, non usurpavit. Didym. de Sp. S. Hieron. tom. iv. p. 516. ed. Bened.

¹ Athanasius, vol. i. p. 106. Hilarius de Trin. lib. ix. p. 1004. Didy-

mus, Interpr. Hieron. Op. tom. iv. p. 516. Ambros. de Fid. lib. ii. cap. 4. p. 477. ed. Bened. Cyril. Alex. Theol. lib. ix. Augustin. contr. Maxim. lib. ii. p. 697, 706. ed. Bened. Cyril. Hieros. Cath. xvi. p. 236.

3. To sum up the force of the argument, and to obviate such general objections as tend to weaken our conclusion.

I. The divine titles ascribed to the Son in Holy Scripture are as follows; God, God with us, Lord God, true God, great God, mighty God, God over all blessed for evermore, Jehovah, Almighty, Lord of Glory, King of kings, and Lord of lords, Alpha and Omega, the First and the Last. Of these in their order.

As to the title of God, our adversaries are pleased to allow, that "the Person of the Son is in the New Testament" (and the Old Testament should not have been entirely omitted) "sometimes" (and why is it not said frequently?) "styled God^m." But then we are told that itⁿ is not "so much" (is it then at all?) "on account of his metaphysical substance—as of his "relative attributes and divine authority," that he is sometimes styled God. But this is more than our adversaries know, or can give the least shadow of proof to countenance. The Son of God may be proved from Scripture to be God, in the strict and proper sense, after the very same way, and by the same kind of arguments, that the Father himself can be shewn to be God, in the strict and proper sense. What is said about metaphysical substance (by which, it seems, is meant abstract metaphysical substance^o) is trifling to the last degree. For undoubtedly the Trinitarians are not so destitute of common sense and understanding, as to take the substance of Father, or Son, to be an abstract idea; which is all the sense of an abstract substance. They certainly mean a real, living, intelligent, and infinitely perfect substance, existing without, necessarily existing. And when they say that the Son is substantially or essentially God, they intend to prevent equivocations, and to assert, that the Son is not of a fading perishing nature, as creatures are; no precarious being, depending on the will and choice of another, but truly divine and necessarily existing. If this be admitted, we have no further occasion to speak a word of substance; which, after all, is nothing more than another name for being or thing. And it must appear very strange, and savouring too much of delicacy or cavilling, that, if we are able to prove the Son to be eternal, divine, necessarily

^m See Clarke's Scripture Doctr. Propos. xxiv. p. 263. 2nd edit.

ⁿ Ibid Propos. xxv. p. 263.

^o Clarke's Scripture Doctr. p. 342. 2nd edit.

existing, &c. we may not be allowed to say that his substance is eternal, divine, &c., which is really neither more nor less than saying that he is so. Attributes and powers must have something to reside and inhere in, which something is what we call substance, and considered with divine attributes, divine substance, or God. And this is what Scripture means in calling the Son God; as we are able to prove from the same topics, and in the same way of reasoning, which another might make use of to prove the one God (or the God of the Jews) to be the supreme, eternal, and immutable God, against any Marcionite, Valentinian, Manichee, or other heretic, that should presume to deny it. Let those who object to us the use of metaphysics try if they can come at the proof of the Father's being self-existent, underived, one simple, uncompounded, undivided, intelligent Agent, &c. without entering into metaphysics: and let them from thence learn to distinguish between false metaphysics and true: and not presume to condemn both promiscuously. As to consequences, be they metaphysical or physical, moral or religious, it matters not, provided they are but just and true; which is the only thing to be inquired into. We are told, that "the Scripture, when it mentions God absolutely, "and by way of eminence, always means the Person of the "FatherP." But this is an assertion not only void of proof, but impossible to be proved; and is besides contrary to all antiquity, as I have shewn elsewhere^q; and even to the sentiments of the ancient Arians; whom our modern Arians would be thought to come up to at least, though they really fall short of them, as well in this as in many other instances. However, certain it is that the Church of Christ, down from the very times of the Apostles, have been in nothing more unanimous than in styling the Son God: and what they meant by that name, as applied to the Son, is well known to the learned from their worship of him, and their utter abhorrence of any inferior deities; from their arguing for the Son's divinity considered as a Son, of the same nature with his Father; from their similitudes and illustrations; from the divine titles, attributes, and perfections which they ascribed to him; and indeed from the whole tenour of their writings. This is a confirmation to us, that the Son of God, in Scripture, is so styled in the strict and proper sense of uncreated, eternal, and necessarily existing.

P Clarke's Scripture Doctr. Propos. xi.

^q Defence of some Queries, Qu. 2. vol. i. p. 278.

Another divine title given to God the Son in holy Scripture is God with us, or Emmanuel^r. Matt. i. 23. A late writer^s would insinuate that the word God, in this place of St. Matthew, may be meant of the Father. But the text is plain and full to the contrary. "Behold, a Virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a Son, and they shall call his name (the Son's, not the Father's name) Emmanuel." Christ therefore is Emmanuel, or God with us. The same writer pretends that the name Emmanuel proves nothing more, in point of argument, than even the names of places, Jehovah-Jireh, Jehovah-Shammah, Jehovah-Shalom, Jehovah-Nissi, &c. But this Socinian surmise had been before sufficiently confuted by the learned and judicious Bishop Pearson^t; whose reasonings upon this head should have been answered, instead of repeating a stale objection. I shall only take notice, that the early writers of the Christian Church constantly understood that Christ was really God with us, conformable to his name Emmanuel; and interpreted this text of St. Matthew as we do^u. To proceed :

Another divine title given to God the Son in holy Scripture is that of Lord God, which answers to Jehovah Elohim, the incommunicable name of the one true God. The first text of the New Testament to our purpose is Luke i. 16, 17. "Many shall he" (viz. John the Baptist) "turn to the Lord their God, and he shall go before him," &c. It is well observed by a late writer^x, that "these words (the Lord their God) are, in strictness of construction, immediately connected with the following word, him; which must necessarily be understood of Christ." Now, since there is no apparent necessity in the case of receding from the strictness of construction, it is but reasonable to under-

^r Μεθ' ἡμῶν ὁ Θεός. God, by way of excellency, with the article ὁ prefixed.

^s Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 71. 2nd edit.

^t Pearson on the Creed, art. ii. p. 130.

^u Diligenter igitur significavit Spiritus Sanctus per ea quæ dicta sunt generationem ejus quæ est ex Virgine, et substantiam quoniam Deus, (Emmanuel enim nomen hoc significat,) et manifestat quoniam homo, &c. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 21. p. 217. ed. Bened. Vid. et p. 205, 212, 273.

Quod si Emmanuel nobiscum Deus est, Deus autem nobiscum Christus est, qui etiam in nobis est (quotquot enim Christum tincti estis, Christum induistis) tam proprius est Christus in significatione nominis, quod est nobiscum Deus, quam in sono nominis, quod est Emmanuel. Tertul. contr. Marc. lib. iii. cap. 12. p. 403. Vid. et contr. Prax. cap. 27. It. Novat. cap. 12. Cyprian. Testim. lib. i. cap. 6. p. 36. Euseb. Comment. in Isa. vii. 14. p. 381.

^x Dr. Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 72. 2nd edit.

stand the words (Lord their God) of Christ. What confirms this construction is, that the same St. Luke, in the third chapter of his Gospel, speaks of John the Baptist's "crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord," chap. iii. 4. which answers to what he had observed chap. i. 16, 17. of John the Baptist's "going before him," that is, Christ, here called Lord God, as there the Lord: and this is further confirmed from Malachi iii. 1. "Behold, I send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the LORD, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant," &c. And from verse the 76th of the first of St. Luke, where he, before whom John the Baptist was to go, is called the Lord. There is no reasonable doubt to be made, after the comparing these passages together, but that the Lord (Kύριος) in St. Luke thrice, and in Malachi once, is to be understood of the Person of Christ. Neither is this construction of St. Luke strange or new, being countenanced by Irenæus^γ, an early Father of the second century. I pass on to other texts, which style the Son Lord and God. St. Thomas's confession, John xx. 28. "My Lord and my God," is pertinent to our purpose. The application of this to Christ is so manifest of itself^z, and, besides, hardly now disputed, that I need not say more of it. Isa. xl. 10, 11. we read thus: "Behold, the Lord God will come with strong hand, and his arm shall rule for him: behold, his reward is with him, and his work before him. He shall feed his flock like a shepherd," &c. This is to be understood of Christ, and his second advent to judge the world; as Eusebius^a well interprets it. The words, "his reward is with him," (comp. Rev. xxii. 12.) and, "he shall feed his flock like a shepherd," (comp. John x. 11.) are sufficient indications of the Person there intended. Christ therefore is Lord God in the Scripture-style, as well as the Father. As to the sentiments of the ancients, many testimonies might be cited, where they call the Son God and Lord, or Lord and God: but it will be sufficient to observe their application of several texts of the Old Testament to God the Son. For instance: Genesis iii. 8. "They heard the voice of the Lord

^γ Iren. lib. iii. cap. 10. p. 185.

art. ii. p. 131.

^z If any one doubt of it, he may consult Bishop Pearson on the Creed,

^a Euseb. in loc. p. 509.

"God walking in the garden^b." Gen. xxviii. 13. "I am the Lord God of Abraham thy Father^c." Exod. iii. 14. "The Lord God of your Fathers^d." Exod. xx. 2. "I am the Lord thy God^e:" and Hos. i. 7. "I will save them by the Lord their God^f." These, with many other like texts^g, were understood by the ancients in general, long before the Council of Nice, of God the Son. From whence it is evident, that the style and title of Lord God was thought to be very applicable to God the Son, and not peculiar or appropriate, in holy Scripture to God the Father.

True God is another divine title belonging to the Son of God. "We are in him that is true, even in (or by) his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life^h." 1 John v. 20. We have sufficient reason to believe that God the Son is here called "true God," and "eternal life." It is on all hands confessed that "eternal life," in the style of St. John, (see 1 John i. 2.) is an epithet appropriate to the Son, and is to be understood of him in this very passage. And thus a late Arian writerⁱ interprets the last words. "This is the true God, even the Father; and this is the way that leads to him, even Jesus Christ, who is the way, the truth, and the life;" understanding eternal life as another name for, or as appropriate to, the Person of Jesus Christ. But it is manifest that the pronoun this (οὗτος) is the subject of both the predicates, true God and eternal life. To make good construction of it the other way, the sentence should have run, This (οὗτος) is the true God, and that other (ἐκεῖνος) is eternal life. But the words are, "This (person, οὗτος) is the true God (ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς) and eternal life" (καὶ ἡ ζωὴ αἰώνιος). There is no other subject of the latter predicate besides the οὗτος, this, going before. If it be said that the particle ἡ may stand for αὐτή, and so the sense be, This is the way, pointing as it were to Jesus Christ before mentioned; yet so the construction is very harsh and unnatural: besides

^b Theoph. Antioch. p. 129. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 16.

^c Just. Mart. p. 218. Clem. Alex. Pæd. lib. i. cap. 7. p. 131.

^d Iren. lib. iii. cap. 6. lib. iv. cap. 5, 12. Just. Mart. Apol. i. p. 123. Ox. ed.

^e Clem. Alex. Pæd. lib. i. cap. 7. p. 131.

^f Novat. Trin. cap. 12.

^g See Defence of some Queries, vol. i. Qu. 2. p. 291, &c.

^h Οἶδαμεν δὲ ὅτι ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἦκει, καὶ δέδωκεν ἡμῖν διάνοιαν ἵνα γινώσκωμεν τὸν ἀληθινὸν (Θεόν). καὶ ἔσμεν ἐν τῷ ἀληθινῷ, ἐν τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ· οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ ἀληθινὸς Θεὸς καὶ (ἡ) ζωὴ αἰώνιος. 1 John v. 20.

ⁱ Modest Plea, &c. p. 264.

that the particle ἡ is observed to have been wanting in the Alexandrian and several other manuscripts. Our interpretation therefore agrees much better than the other with the words following after οὗτος, this. And I must observe further, that it agrees also better with the words going before it: "We are in him that is true, even in (or even by) his Son Jesus Christ." Then follows immediately οὗτος, this, this Person, immediately before mentioned, viz. Jesus Christ. For, allowing that a pronoun may sometimes refer to a remote antecedent, yet is it not so usual nor so natural; neither should it be presumed to do so, without a manifest necessity. Having shewn that the context plainly favours our construction, let us next examine the pretences on the contrary side.

It is said^k, that the most and best MSS. read τὸν ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν, the true God, instead of τὸν ἀληθινὸν, him that is true: and so the words will run thus: "We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding that we may know the true God, (viz. the Father,) and we are in him that is true, (the true God before spoken of,) in (that is, by) his Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God, and eternal life." But admitting this reading of the words, it is so far from confronting the sense before given, that it rather confirms it. For then it comes to this; that we are in the true God, viz. the Father, by being in his Son, because that Son is the true God. This construction is so far from being absurd or flat, that it is very expressive and significant; intimating that there is none so certain way of knowing the true God, as by a teacher who is himself true God; nor any other way of being reconciled to God, but by being united with one who is God: that the Son of God alone can be able to unite us to the true God, and that because he himself is true God; who by being incarnate could join the divine and human natures, God and man, in one. This kind of reasoning is very much insisted on by the ancient Fathers^l;

^k Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 51. 2nd ed.

^l Ἀνακρινεῖ δὲ καὶ τοὺς Ἑβραίωνους. Πῶς δύνανται σωθῆναι, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ τὴν σωτηρίαν αὐτῶν ἐπὶ γῆς ἐργασάμενος; ἢ πῶς ἄνθρωπος χωρήσει εἰς Θεόν, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἐχωρήθη εἰς ἄνθρωπον; Iren. p. 271.

^l Ἐδίδαξεν ἡμᾶς ὁ Κύριος, ὅτι Θεὸν εἶδέναι οὐδεὶς δύναται μὴ οὐχὶ Θεοῦ δοξάζοντος (leg. διδάξαντος) τουτέστιν, ἄνευ Θεοῦ μὴ γινώσκεσθαι τὸν Θεόν. Ibid. p. 234.

Εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἰδωρήσατο τὴν σωτηρίαν, οὐκ ἂν βεβαίως ἔσχομεν αὐτὴν. καὶ εἰ μὴ συννώθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῷ Θεῷ, οὐκ ἂν ἠδυνήθη μετασχεῖν τῆς ἀφθαρσίας: ἔδει γὰρ τὸν μεσίτην Θεοῦ τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων, διὰ τῆς ἰδίας πρὸς ἑκατέρους οικειότητος, εἰς φιλίαν καὶ ὁμόνοιαν and upon this account the divinity of our blessed Lord was looked upon by them as an article of the utmost importance to salvation. Now we see from whence they borrowed their notions, namely, from the Apostles, from St. John especially; who, as he began his Gospel with observing that the Father is God, and the Son God also; so he ended his Epistle, teaching us to believe in the Father, as the true God, and in the Son, as the true God too; which comes to the same with the other. Add to this, that St. John, very probably in his Epistle, as well as Gospel, (which were not wrote long after one another,) had a particular respect to the heresies then growing up, namely, of Cerinthus and the Ebionites^m, who, as they denied the divinity of our Saviour, so also denied any divine Sonship, antecedent to the birth of the Virgin. Hence it is that St. John so often inculcates, through this Epistle, the necessity of believing in the Son. "He that hath the Son hath life; and he that hath not the Son of God hath not life," chap. v. ver. 12. (See also ver. 10, 11, 13. and chap. iii. ver. 23.) Now, what sort of Son, or Son of God, St. John must have meant, appears sufficiently from the first chapter of his Gospel: he was the only-begotten Logos, that was with God, and was God, and "by whom all things were made." Such a Son of God as this, the Cerinthians and Ebionites denied our Lord to be; believing him to be a mere man, that had no existence before he became man. Nothing therefore could be more directly levelled against those heresies than this very verse of St. John's Epistle, asserting at once Christ's proper Sonship and his true divinity; which indeed amount to one and the same τοὺς ἀμφοτέρους συναγαγεῖν. Ibid. p. 211.

See passages of like import with this last citation from Irenæus, in the authors following:

Tertullian, Apol. cap. 21. De Carn. Christi, cap. 5. De Resurr. cap. 63. Contr. Prax. cap. 28. Novatian, cap. 18, 19. Clemens Alex. p. 251. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 131. Hippolytus, vol. ii. p. 45. Cyprian. de Idol. Van. p. 15. Testim. p. 37. Lactantius, lib. iv. cap. 13, 25.

^m Scripsit Evangelium, rogatus ab Asiæ Episcopis, adversus Cerinthum, aliosque hæreticos, et maxime tunc Ebionitarum dogma consurgens, qui asserunt, Christum ante Mariam non fuisse, unde et compulsus est, divinam ejus nativitatem edicere. Hieron. Catal. Script. n. ix. p. 105.

Irenæus, before Jerome, testifies that St. John's Gospel was wrote particularly against the error of Cerinthus. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 11.

The same Irenæus intimates, that St. John's Epistle pointed at the same heresy. Vid. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 16. p. 206. And Tertullian is still more particular in these words:

In Epistola, eos maxime Antichristos vocat, qui Christum negarent in carne venisse, et qui non putarent Jesum esse Filium Dei: illud Marcion, hoc Hebion vindicavit. Tertull. Præscript. adv. Hæres. cap. 33.

thing. These considerations put together abundantly make good our interpretation of this controverted text. But the author of *Scripture Doctrine*ⁿ is pleased to censure our construction of this passage of St. John as modern. "Some moderns," he says, "refer this to Christ; but others, with all the ancients, understand it of God the Father." It may be thought somewhat hard to have a construction censured as modern, which has undoubtedly prevailed in the Christian Church thirteen centuries upwards^o, if not higher. The Catholics of the fourth century cited it in this sense, without the least scruple, and without any intimation, so far as I can find, that it was ever otherwise understood. The Arians themselves, as seems very probable, admitted this construction^p; or certain it is that many of them allowed that the Son was Θεὸς ἀληθινός, true God, (I suppose in virtue of this text, since they objected not against the title as unscriptural), but they eluded the Catholic sense of it^q. The Ante-Nicene Fathers probably understood the texts just as the Post-Nicene Catholics did; only they had less occasion to cite it, having so many other texts, both of the Old and New Testament, to produce in proof of the Son's being God; which was the same with them as true God, the distinction between God and true God being hardly ever started before the Arian controversy. It is a very singular way of speaking, which the author of Scripture Doctrine makes use of, when he says, all the ancients understood this text of God the Father. Who would not imagine from hence, that some one, at least, of the ancients might be produced, interpreting the text as he pretends they did? Yet certain it is, that he cannot produce one. The fact is only this; that none of the writers of the three first centuries interpreted this text at all: from whence this author, I suppose, concludes (if we may judge of him from a friend of his, without a name^r) that the text must, in course, have been understood of the Father. This precarious, groundless inference (without letting his readers know that it is no more than an ⁿ Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 51. 2nd edition.

^o Athanasius, p. 99, 283, 558, 684, 888. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. iv. p. 106. Didym. in loc. Cyril. Alex. Dial. 8. ad calc. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 17. p. 467. Hieron. Not. in Is.

p. 65. August. contr. Max. lib. ii. p. 705. Serm. cxl. p. 681.

^p See Ambrose, Epist. Class. i. p. 791. ed. Bened.

^q Theodor. Eccl. Hist. lib. i. p. 28.

^r Modest Plea, &c. p. 261.

inference) he puts upon us as undoubted fact in Scripture Doctrine; which is greatly abusing his readers.

The sum then of what hath been pleaded for our interpretation of the passage is, that it is literal and grammatical; agreeable to the context, and to the doctrine of St. John in other places; that it suits perfectly well with the analogy of faith, and the undoubted principles of the primitive Church; that there is no one instance of any contrary interpretation of the text in all antiquity, but all that there are, are fully and clearly for it; that the objections against it are truly modern, and, besides, of little or no weight in themselves. Upon the whole, every reasonable man may be left to judge whether this or the other interpretation ought to be preferred. To proceed:

Another divine title given to the Son, in holy Scripture, is great God. “Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious “appearing of the great God and our Saviour” (or, our great God and Saviour) “Jesus Christ.” Tit. ii. 13. What we insist upon here is, that the titles of great God and Saviour are, in this passage, equally applied to Christ. Our adversaries themselves cannot but confess that the words will grammatically bear this construction^t: and we have good reason to believe, that, all things considered, they can fairly bear no other. 1. Because of the omission of the article τοῦ before σωτήρος, which, in strict propriety of language, should have been inserted, had the Apostle been speaking of two Persons; as the article generally is (though not always) in such cases, where different subjects are intended^u: and it is observable, that the Apostle goes on in speaking of Christ only, without a word of the Father, ver. 14. which makes it still the more probable that the article τοῦ would have been inserted, had he intended different persons. 2. Because ἐπιφάνεια, the appearing, is always^x, in the New Testament, ascribed to the Son alone, and never to the Father. For though it be said, Matt. xvi. 27. that “the Son of man shall come or “appear in the glory of his Father,” yet it is no where in the New Testament said, that the Father shall appear, but the Son only. If it be replied, that it is not here said that the great God,

^s Προσδεχόμενοι τὴν μακαρίαν ἐλπίδα, καὶ ἐπιφάνειαν τῆς δόξης τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ. Tit. ii. 13.

^t Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 77.

2nd edition.

^u Vid. M. Martin, Traité de la Relig. Revel. part iii. p. 262, &c.

^x See 2 Thess. ii. 8. 1 Tim. vi. 14. 2 Tim. i. 10. iv. 1, 8.

or Father, shall appear, but his glory only; I answer, that ἐπιφάνεια τῆς δόξης does not necessarily signify the appearing of glory, but may properly signify the glorious appearance; as it is rightly rendered in our English version^γ. Against this construction of the text it is objected^z, that the title of great God is, in the Old and New Testament, the character of the Father: which, if true, does not prove that it may not, in this place, be the character of the Son too. But the fact is very uncertain, and may as easily be denied as asserted. As to the texts of the Old Testament, since there is nothing to distinguish whether they are meant of God the Father, or Son, or both, or of the whole Trinity, no certain argument can be drawn from them. The God of Israel is the great God there spoken of; and it is begging the question to interpret the passages of the Father only. As to the New Testament, there is but one single text cited to this purpose; and it is Rev. xix. 17. where (if that be the true reading) mention is made of the supper of the great God; which the objectors imagine to be spoken of the Father. But if it be considered that our blessed Saviour is styled “King of kings, and Lord of lords,” ver. 16. but a very little before the supper of the great God is mentioned; and that the Apostle goes on speaking of Christ (not God the Father) described as sitting on the horse, ver. 19. comp. ver. 11. and as slaying those whose flesh was to be given to the fowls, ver. 21. that is, as providing that very supper which is called, ver. 17. “the supper of the great God,” because of the great God’s providing or making it: I say, if we lay these things together, we shall be inclined to think that this text of the Revelation, instead of answering the purpose of the objectors, is another evidence of the Son’s being styled great God; and so helps to confirm our interpretation of the text in Titus, whereof we have been treating. We have seen then that there is no objection of weight to be made against our interpretation.

In confirmation of what hath been urged in favour of our construction of the place, I may observe further, that ^aBasil, Gregory Nyssen, Epiphanius, Chrysostom, and Austin, of the fourth and fifth centuries, interpret the text as we do. And if we may judge of the Arians from Maximin, a celebrated Bishop amongst them of the fifth century, they also admitted the same interpretation^b; so uncontested a thing was it at that time. We have the less reason to wonder at it, because the Ante-Nicene Catholics before, very probably, understood the text in the same sense. For we find ^cClemens of Alexandria, of the second century, and ^dHippolytus of the third, interpreting it in the same way: nor is there any instance in all antiquity, so far as appears, of any contrary or different interpretation. I shall only add, that the title of great God was without scruple applied to God the Son by the ancients, as appears from express testimonies^e, and as we may reasonably judge from Eusebius's^f so applying it, had we no other testimonies for it.

^γ See Martin, Traité de la Relig. Revel. part iii. cap. 17. p. 271, &c.

^z Clarke’s Reply, p. 86. Modest Plea, &c. p. 250. Comp. True Script. Doctr. p. 26. and True Script. Doctr. continued, p. 84, &c.

^a Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. iv. p. 107. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eun. p. 265. Epiphanius. Ancor. p. 74. Chrysostom. tom. i. hom. 30. p. 341. Hom. in Joh. p. 36.

Mighty God is another divine title given to God the Son in holy Scripture. "His name shall be called Wonderful, "Counsellor, The MIGHTY GOD," &c. Is. ix. 6. El gibbor, the same title which is given to the one supreme God of Israel, Is. x. 21. Besides that the Hebrew word El, as Jerome observes^g, is for the most part the proper title of the one true God. The LXX, as the same Jerome remarks^h in rendering Is. ix. 6, have took a very unusual freedom. For, thinking it strange and harsh to apply the name of God, and Mighty, &c. to a person just before called a child, they chose rather to vary the sense, and to make a comment, instead of a translation, putting μεγάλης βουλῆς Ἄγγελος, Angel of the great counsel, instead of those other higher titles and epithets. But, more

^b Vid. August. Oper. tom. viii. p. 656.

^c Clem. Alex. p. 7. ed. Ox.

^d Hippolytus de Antichristo, cap. lxi. lxxvii. p. 31. 33. Fabric. It may be doubted whether this piece be genuine.

^e Clem. Alex. Pædag. lib. i. cap. 5. p. 112. Testament. Patriarch. Grab. Spic. vol. i. p. 156. Origen. contr. Cels. lib. vii. p. 342.

Origen's meaning is exceeding clear, that to say that God the Word, (as such,) or Truth, or Life, &c. should die, is as much as to say, that the great God should die, or become a servant. The Modest Pleader therefore (Modest Plea, &c. p. 251.) mistakes this passage.

^f Euseb. in Psalm. p. 629.

^g Deus separatim, qui Hebraice El dicitur. Denique in consequentibus ubi legimus: "Tu es enim Deus et nesciebamus." Et iterum: "Ego sum Deus, et non est alius præter me," et multa his similia, pro eo quod in Latino dicitur Deus, in Hebraico El scriptum est. Hieron. Comm. in Is. p. 85. ed. Bened.

^h Qua nominum majestate perterritos LXX reor non esse ausos de puero dicere quod aperte Deus appellandus sit, et cætera: sed pro his sex nominibus posuisse quod in Hebraico non habetur magni consilii Angelum, &c. Hieron. ibid. p. 86.

probably, the fault lay not in the LXX Interpreters, but in the Jews, who after Christ's time had corrupted some copies of the LXX. Certain it is that Irenæus, who was a professed admirer and follower of the version of the LXX, (looking upon it as an inspired performance^l;) yet quotes not this text of Isaiah, viz. ix. 6. according to the Septuagint, as it now is, or as it was, in some copies at least, in the time of St. Jerome, Eusebius, and even Justin Martyr^k; but according to what it should be, and as it lies in the Hebrew text^l; citing it in proof of the divinity of Christ. In like manner, Clemens of Alexandria, though equally an admirer of the Septuagint version^m, yet cites the same text of Isaiah, much after the same sense with Irenæus, and not according to the LXXⁿ; drawing an argument from thence of the greatness, majesty, and essential divinity, of the Son of God. It is the less to be wondered at, if afterwards we but seldom meet with this text cited in proof of Christ's divinity, since the Septuagint, which the primitive fathers chiefly followed and quoted from, exhibited another sense of the passage. Yet we find it cited by Athanasius^o (if that piece be his) and the elder Cyril^p, for that purpose. And there the verse is cited according to the Hebrew original; only taking in part of the LXX's translation: from whence one might suspect that there had been two versions of the same words, and both, by degrees, taken into the text, and tacked together. To what hath been said I shall only add, that the mighty God, spoken of Psalm l. 1. has been generally believed by the primitive fathers to be God the Son^q. But there the words mighty God are the rendering of El Elohim, and signify God

^l Vid. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 21. p. 215.

^k See Dial. p. 229. ed. Jebb.

^l Vocatur nomen ejus admirabilis, consiliarius, Deus fortis. Deus fortis est, et inenarrabile habet genus. Iren. p. 273.

^m Vid. Clem. Alex. Strom. i. p. 410.

ⁿ Θαυμαστός σύμβουλος, Θεός δυναστικής, πατήρ αιώνιος—ὁ τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ ὁ τοῦ τελείου παιδίου· υἱὸς ἐν πατρὶ καὶ πατήρ ἐν υἱῷ. Clem. Alex. Pæd. lib. i. p. 112.

Θεὸν ἰσχυρὸν, Θεὸν παιδίον κηρύττει. Dionys. Alex. Epist. contr. Paul. Samos. p. 852. Labb.

^o Καλεῖται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ μεγάλης βουλῆς Ἄγγελος, θαυμαστός, σύμβουλος, Θεὸς ἰσχυρὸς, ἐξουσιαστής, ἀρχὼν εἰρήνης, πατήρ τοῦ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος. Athan. de Incarn. contr. Arian. cap. xxii. p. 889. Comp. Apost. Constit. lib. v. cap. 16. Pseud. Ignat. ad Antioch. cap. 3.

^p Καλεῖται τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ μεγάλης βουλῆς τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς Ἄγγελος, θαυμαστός σύμβουλος, Θεὸς ἰσχυρὸς, &c.

Εἰ οὖν Θεὸς ἰσχυρὸς τοῦτο τὸ παιδίον, περὶ αὐτοῦ δῆλον εἶρηκε Δαβίδ. Ὁφθῆσεται ὁ Θεὸς τῶν Θεῶν ἐν Σίων. Psal. lxxxiii. 8. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 332. Ox.

^q See Iren. lib. iii. cap. 6. p. 180. Cyprian. adv. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 28. p. 48. et de Bon. Patient. p. 220. Euseb. in Psal. p. 209.

of gods; which however, in sense, are at least tantamount to the other.

Another divine title ascribed to the Son in holy Scripture is, "over all God blessed for ever," Rom. ix. 5. That this is said of Christ, not of God the Father, appears from the whole context, and the very form of expression. 'Ο ὧν naturally refers to the person of Christ immediately before spoken of: and the antithesis between what he is according to the flesh, and what according to the spirit, requires it. Thus all the ancients, 'Catholics and heretics, constantly understood the words, referring them to Christ, as here called "over all God blessed for ever." The author of Scripture Doctrine says, that "the word "Θεὸς, God, is wanting in many MSS^u." But, I presume, Bp. Pearson and Dr. Mills, who both declare all the manuscripts have it^x, may be believed, till he produces his vouchers, or explains his meaning. The reading of the place being fixed and certain, and its reference to Christ no less certain^y, as well from the context itself, as from the constant, uniform sense of all antiquity, we may now proceed to consider the force and significance of the phrase, "over all God blessed for ever." Our blessed Lord is not only here called God, but God with a very high epithet, over all, ἐνὶ πάντων, the very same that is applied to the Father himself, Eph. iv. 6. and is there rendered above all. Besides this, there is the addition of εὐλογητὸς εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας, blessed for ever: which again is the very same that St. Paul applies to the eternal Creator, Rom. i. 25. Add to this, that the title of blessed, as Bishop Pearson observes, "of itself elsewhere signifies the supreme God, and was always "used by the Jews to express that one God of Israel^z."

^r Comp. 2 Cor. xi. 31.

^s Comp. Rom. i. 3, 4. See Grabe's Not. in Bull. Def. F. N. sect. ii. cap. 3.

^t See the testimonies referred to in Dr. Mills. To which may be added Hippolytus contr. Noët. cap. vi. p. 10. ed. Fabric. vol. 2.

^u Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 75. 2nd ed. Comp. Reply, p. 86. and Modest Plea, p. 142.

^x The pretence of Erasmus from the fathers is vain; and as vain is that of Grotius from the Syriac translation, which hath in it the name of God expressly, as well as all the copies of the original, and all the rest of the translations. Pearson on the Creed, art. ii. p. 133.

Non tantum codd. omnino nulli omittunt Θεὸς, sed neque ipsa Syriaca versio. Verbo dicam lectionem hanc præferunt MSS. omnes. Mills in locum.

^y Some have pretended to understand the words "over all God "blessed," &c. of God the Father, whose pretences see confuted by Dr. Grabe in his Remarks on Mr. Whiston's Collection of Testimonies, p. 23, 24, &c.

^z Pearson on the Creed, art. ii. p. 133.

In answer to our argument from this text, it is said, that if "Christ be God over all, yet it is manifest that he is excepted, by communication of whose divine power and supreme authority Christ is God over all^a." Without doubt, the Father is excepted out of the number of those things, over which the Son is God. No Catholic ever pretended otherwise. Those general expressions, over all, &c. leave room for such tacit exceptions as either other Scriptures or the reason of the thing shews, ought to be made. And this, we hope, will be remembered, in favour of the Son and Holy Spirit, as often as the Father is said to be above all, &c. that such expressions may not be strained beyond their just and proper meaning. As to what is hinted under the word communication, by way of lessening, it is hardly deserving notice. Supreme power, whether communicated or uncommunicated, is supreme power: and if the Son has it communicated, then certainly he has it; which is sufficient to our purpose. Only we must observe, that the text now under consideration says nothing of what is communicated, but of what is: $\delta \delta \nu$, who is, not $\delta \delta \alpha \rho \alpha \tau \alpha \gamma \mu \acute{\epsilon} \nu \omicron \varsigma$, who is appointed, over all, &c. It is very trifling in our adversaries to refer us to 1 Cor. xv. 27, where it is said, that "all things are put under" Christ: as if the force of our argument lay more in the words "over all," than in the words "God blessed for ever;" or as if Christ's mediatorial kingdom, commencing at the resurrection, can any way account for his being God, which he certainly was before the creation. See John i. 1. compared with Coloss. i. 15, 16, &c.

Another divine title given to the Son in holy Scripture is Jehovah, the incommunicable name of the one true God. The fact I need not here prove, having done it elsewhere^b; besides that it is readily confessed by our adversaries^c. That the name Jehovah has reference to the necessary existence of the person so named in his own right, is acknowledged by the best critics, ancient and modern; and admitted even by our adversaries^d. And since they have no good reason to suspect that the Son of God hath it not in his own right, we may have leave to infer that he is necessarily existing, as well as the Father. To this it is

^a Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 75. 2nd ed.

^b Serm. i. p. 42. &c. Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 308, 309.

^c Clarke's Reply, p. 142, 163. Modest Plea, p. 21.

^d See Clarke's Reply, p. 164. Comp. Script. Doctr. p. 264. 2nd ed.

objected, that then there will be two Jehovahs, Father and Son^e. To which it is answered, that two necessarily existing persons may as well be one Jehovah, as one God; and to assert the contrary is only taking for granted the main thing to be proved. It is further pretended, that Jehovah is not the name of the essence or substance, but of the person whose it is. Had it been said of the persons, instead of the person, whose it is, we should have no occasion to differ: but to suppose it the name of one person only, is begging the question. Jehovah is the name of as many persons as are of the same necessarily existing substance; and is sometimes taken essentially and sometimes personally, in like manner as the name God. It is further said, that Jehovah is the name of a living person, not of an abstract substance^f. As if they, who suppose it the name of three living persons, were not as clear of this charge of making it the name of an abstract substance, as they who make it the name of one only. No one supposes it to be the name of an abstract substance, but the name of a person, or persons, expressing his or their substance considered as necessarily existing. Whatever abstraction there is, in this partial way of considering any thing, or things, under such precise formality, as necessarily existing, it holds equally, whether Jehovah be the name of one person, or more: for neither one person nor more are called Jehovah, $\delta \delta\nu$, or $\tau\delta \acute{\omicron}\nu$, any otherwise considered than as necessarily existing. This being really the case, our adversaries, upon their own hypothesis, may as well suppose it the name of an abstract substance, as they may upon ours. For whenever they consider a person merely as necessarily existing, they do not, under the same notion, conceive him under a different notion; the same idea being neither more nor less than the same idea. They must in this case abstract from the idea of personality, and consider the person no further than as the subject or substratum of that one property of necessary existence: and consequently they make Jehovah, thus precisely considered, the name of an abstract substance, as much as we: though, in strict propriety of language, neither they nor we do it at all. For, abstract substance is indeed solecism in speech; nothing being properly abstract except ideas. But I proceed:

^e See Modest Plea, &c. p. 274.

See the same objection repeated, p.

^f See Modest Plea, &c. p. 293. 160, 163, 252, 273, 274, 281.

Another divine title ascribed to God the Son, in holy Scripture, is Almighty, as we imperfectly render the Greek word, παντοκράτωρ. The most remarkable passage to our purpose is in the first chapter of the Apocalypse. "Behold, he cometh with clouds; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him: and all kindreds of the earth shall wail because of him. Even so, Amen. I am Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the ALMIGHTY." Rev. i. 7, 8. All the ancients, both before and after the Council of Nice, understand this of God the Son. This alone is a strong presumption in favour of our construction; especially when there is nothing in the context but what confirms it, rather than otherwise. The verse immediately preceding relates to Christ, who is to "come in the clouds," and whom every "eye shall see:" and the title of Alpha and Omega in the same verse is applied to Christ more than once in the Revelations^b. A late writer, on the contrary, objectsⁱ that, ver. 4. of this chapter, the words, "he which is, and which was, and which is to come," are used as the distinguishing character of the Person of the Father. He might as well argue that the words "Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the End," chap. xxi. 6. are used as the distinguishing character of the Person of the Father; and therefore that character cannot be applied to Christ in Rev. xxii. 13. or in Rev. i. 17. where First and Last amounts to the same. It is no strange thing to find the same characters, in the same Scriptures, applied both to Father and Son. It is what we assert and contend for, and from thence prove that Father and Son are equally divine. It is mere petitio principii, or, taking for granted the thing in question, to suppose that such characters are to distinguish the Father from the Son, only because they are applied to the Father. For we can more justly argue on the other side, that they are not distinⁱ Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 53. 2nd ed.

^a Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 17. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. cap. vi. p. 10. Fabric. Origen περὶ Ἀρχ. lib. i. cap. 2. Athanasius, p. 415, 554, 684, 762. ed. Bened. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxxv. p. 573. Phæbad. B. P. tom. 4. Ambros. de Fid. lib. ii. cap. 4. p. 476. Hieron. in Zech. ii. p. 1718. ed. Bened. Epiphon. vol. i. p. 488. ed. Petav. August. de Symb. ad Catech. lib. 2.

Andr. Cæsariens. in loc. See my Defence, vol. i. p. 537, 538.

^b Revel. i. 11, 17. ii. 8. xxii. 13. chap. i. ver. 17, and 18. the words are, ὁ πρῶτος, καὶ ὁ ἔσχατος, καὶ ὁ ζῶν, &c. The living One: comp. Numb. xiv. 21. καὶ ζῶν τὸ ὄνομα μου. Septuag.

guishing of the Father, as Father, because we find them equally applied both to Father and Son. Another objection is, that the best manuscripts read Κύριος ὁ Θεός, the Lord God, instead of ὁ Κύριος, the Lord: which is not of great weight, since many other MSS. favour the present reading; besides that if all the MSS. had Lord God instead of Lord, it would be only a further proof that Christ is Lord God, consonant to other Scriptures, and to all antiquity. Origen, Ambrose, and Jerome suppose Lord God to be in the text; and yet scruple not to understand it of God the Son; as indeed they had no reason for scruple. It is objected further^k, that παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, is always applied to the Father only, in the most ancient writers: which is notoriously false in fact, as appears from their understanding this very text of the Son; besides other collateral evidences^l. The last pretence is that the title of παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, is always elsewhere, in Scripture, applied to the Father only. To which I answer, 1st, that it is mere groundless presumption to suppose that as often as that title is applied to the one God in the Old Testament, it is applied to the Father only: since it may often be understood indifferently either of Father, or Son, or of the whole Trinity. And 2dly, that there are several texts of the Old Testament, which we have good reason to believe are to be understood particularly of God the Son. Psalm the xxivth has by the primitive Fathers^m been interpreted of Christ. Now that Κύριος δυνάμεων, Lord of hosts, applied to Christ in that Psalm, is equivalent to Κύριος παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, appears from hence, that the LXX Interpreters render the same words indifferently by one or other, as is observedⁿ by Ambrose and Jerome; and may be easily seen in a multitude of instances, by looking into Trommius's

^k Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 53. iv. cap. i. p. 523.

2d ed.

^l Justin. Mart. Application of Ps. xxiv. 10. Dial. p. 107. Jeb. Clem. Alex. p. 277, 647, 831. Tertullian. adv. Prax. cap. 17. Origen περὶ Ἀρχ. lib. i. cap. 2. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. vol. ii. p. 10. Fabric. Euseb. Demonstrat. Evang. lib. vi. cap. 16. p. 281. Comp. Euseb. in Psalm. p. 417. Comm. in Isa. p. 374, 435.

^m Justin Martyr. Dial. p. 197. Cyprian. adv. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 49. p. 49, 50. Origen in Matt. p. 438. Euseb. in loc. Ambros. de Fid. lib.

ⁿ Nam et hic sic positum plerique codices habent, quod Dominus Sabaoth ipse sit Rex gloriæ: Sabaoth autem interpretes alicubi Dominum Virtutum, alicubi Regem, alicubi Omnipotentem interpretati sunt. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. cap. i. p. 524. ed. Bened.

Sciendumque quia ubiqueque Septuaginta Interpretes Dominum Virtutum, et Dominum Omnipotentem expresserint, in Hebræo sit positum Dominus Sabaoth. Hieron. tom. iii. p. 519. Vid. etiam tom. iii. p. 1718.

Concordance. Besides that St. John himself in his Apocalypse, iv. 8. alluding to a passage of Isaiah, vi. 3. "Holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hosts;" instead of Κύριος δυνάμεων, (or σαβαώθ,) "Lord of hosts;" puts Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, "Lord God Almighty." It may be proved likewise from Isa. vi. 5. compared with John xii. 41. (as I have formerly observed^o,) that our Saviour Christ is "Lord of hosts," that is, Κύριος παντοκράτωρ, or Lord Almighty. The same may be further proved from Zech. ii. 8. as is noted by the learned Eusebius^p; who is therein followed by Ambrose and Jerome. And a further proof of the same thing may be evidently drawn from Zech. xii. 5, 10. compared with John xix. 34, 37. These instances are sufficient to check the confidence of such as roundly affirm, without a syllable of proof, that the title of παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, is in holy Scripture applied always to the Father only.

As to the three remaining divine titles given to the Son in holy Scripture, I shall but just mention them, not having room to enlarge. He is called "the Lord of glory," 1 Cor. ii. 8; which if compared with the title of "King of glory," Psalm xxiv. and the description there given, will appear to be a title of great weight and significancy. "King of kings and Lord of lords," is another divine title attributed to Christ, Rev. xvii. 14. xix. 16. This very title is made the distinguishing character of the one true God by St. Paul, in these words: "Who is the blessed and "only Potentate, the King of kings, and Lord of lords," 1 Tim. vi. 15. The last divine title I intend to mention, and barely to mention, is that of "First and Last, Alpha and Omega, the "Beginning and the End," Rev. i. 17. xxii. 13. the same that is applied to the one supreme God," Isa. xli. 4. xlv. 6. and to God the Father, Rev. xxi. 6. The force of these expressions I have elsewhere^q opened and explained, and need not here add any thing further.

^o Serm. i. p. 42, 43.

^p Vid. Euseb. Demonstr. Evang. lib. vi. cap. 16. p. 281. Hieron. in loc. p. 1718. Ambros. de Fid. lib. ii. cap. 4. p. 476.

^q See Defence of some Queries, vol. i. p. 340. and Chaldee Paraphrase upon Isa. xli. 4.

N. B. The anonymous author of Modest Plea continued, p. 12. endeavours to elude the force of these texts.

1st, By referring to the words, "I am "he that liveth and was dead," &c. Rev. i. 17, 18. But he would have done well to have considered the force of ὁ ζῶν. See the first Letter to the Author of the History of Montanism, p. 92. 2dly, By referring to Rev. iii. 14. which I have explained Serm. ii. and which confirms the sense I had given of Alpha and Omega. 3dly, By remitting us to Rev. xiii. 16. which is

Thus far I have proceeded in recounting, explaining, and vindicating the several divine titles ascribed to God the Son in holy Scripture. Particular objections to this or that, I have took care to answer in their proper places: general objections against the whole, intended to weaken the conclusion we draw from them, shall be considered hereafter. But it will be proper, in the mean while, to take a view of the divine attributes applied, in Scripture, to our blessed Saviour. These therefore, if God permit, are to be the subject of discourse at our next meeting.

no explication of the phrase of First and Last, but very wide and foreign. 4thly, By referring to Heb. xii. 2. which if it be a good comment upon Isa. xli. 4. xlv. 6. xlviii. 12. and Rev. i. 8. xxi. 6. then let it be also a just explication of the parallel texts, Rev. i. 11, 17. ii. 8. xxii. 13. But if the contrary be manifest in one case, we must have something more than mere conjectures and fancies, before we admit it in the other. The phrase First and Last expresses, 1st, the peerless majesty of God, who is he, the true God, Is. xliii. 4. 2dly, Eternity. Comp. Isa. xliii. 10. 3dly, Supreme power, dignity, and glory. See Isa. xlv. 6, 7, 8. 4thly, Creation and government of all things. See Isa. xlviii. 12, &c.

Vid. M. Abbadie on the Divinity of Christ, p. 77, &c. 183.

Divine Attributes ascribed to Christ :

OR

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

PROVED FROM HIS ATTRIBUTES.

The seventh Sermon preached March 2, 1738.

JOHN xvi. 15.

All things that the Father hath are mine : therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

IN a former discourse upon these words, I observed that they contained two arguments to prove the divinity of our blessed Lord : the first of which arises from this consideration, that the influences, gifts, and graces of God's own Spirit, with the glory of them, are ascribed to Christ ; and the second is, that all things which the Father hath are by our blessed Lord claimed as his own. After a brief account of the first argument, I proceeded more at large to open and illustrate the second, proposing these three particulars :

1. To shew that the divine titles are ascribed to the Son in holy Scripture.
2. To shew that the divine attributes are likewise ascribed to him.
3. To sum up the force of the argument arising from thence, and to obviate such general objections as tend to weaken our conclusion.

I had then only time to go through the first of these three particulars ; recounting the several divine titles, which are in Scripture applied to God the Son, as well as to God the Father. I proceed now,

- II. To shew that the same divine attributes are likewise ascribed to both. I shall insist particularly upon four; eternity, immortality, omniscience, and omnipresence; of which in their order.

1. The Scripture-proofs of the eternity of God the Son are many and clear; and may be divided into two sorts, being either implicit and indirect, or explicit and direct. The implicit or indirect proofs I shall but briefly mention, as belonging to other parts of my design, and not so properly coming in here. If the Son be God in the strict and proper sense, as I have before shewn, he is of course eternal. But this I pass over here, my design being now, not to prove him to be eternal because he is God, but to prove that he is God because he is eternal; founding thereupon a new and distinct argument of Christ's divinity.

I have before shewn that Rev. i. 8. is to be understood of God the Son. And now I must observe, that that single text affords two arguments of his eternity. He is "Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending:" which is the very description given of the eternity of the one God of Israel^a; and which our adversaries themselves would not scruple to interpret as we do, provided only they might be permitted to understand the text of God the Father. Besides this, the Son is also "he which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty." Our adversaries allow that these words denote independent eternity^b. Only they are pleased, without any grounds for it, to understand them of God the Father; having beforehand settled it as a rule of interpretation with themselves, that every text of this kind shall be understood of God the Father; or else that the very same phrases, when applied to God the Son, shall lose their significancy, and bear a very different meaning from what they do when applied to God the Father.

The Son's being Jehovah is a further proof of his eternity; that name expressing, as critics allow, necessary existence. Our adversaries would never scruple this construction of the name Jehovah^c, could they but find a way to confine the name, as they

^a See my Defence, vol. i. p. 340. Sermon. vi. p. 143, 144.

^b Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 264. 2nd edit.

^c See Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 88. 2nd ed. where he interprets $\delta \delta \nu$ and $\tau \acute{o} \delta \nu$, the self-existent Being, or Person; and, to confound his readers, puts self-existent instead of necessarily existing. Compare Reply, p. 164. and Script. Doctr. p. 264. See also Modest Plea, p. 163. where the author admits that the word Jehovah alludes to self-existence, (he should have said necessary existence;) and tells us that it signifies him, whose that essence is, do the thing, to the Father only. But having an hypothesis to serve, and resolving that words shall not signify what they really do, any further than is consistent with their preconceived opinions, they are forced either to deny that the name Jehovah signifies necessary existence at all, or at least to deny that it so signifies when applied to God the Son. Such is their partiality in this momentous cause, in which the honour of their God and Saviour is so nearly and deeply concerned. But I proceed. The eternity of God the Son is further proved from his creative powers, which I have before explained and vindicated at large; and more directly from those passages of holy Scripture which declare him to have existed before all creatures^d. For if he existed before any thing was made, he must of consequence be unmade, and therefore eternal.

There is a famous passage of the Prophet Micah relating to this head, which is too considerable to be omitted: "But thou, "Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands "of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is "to be Ruler in Israel, whose goings forth have been from of "old, from everlasting." Mic. v. 2. Here is a plain description of two comings forth: one when Christ should be born in Bethlehem; the other long before "from of old," and "from everlasting." This passage is a full and clear proof of Christ's preexistence before his birth of the Virgin, and a probable proof, at least, of an eternal^e preexistence. Here are two expressions, "from of old," and "from everlasting;" the rendering of two Hebrew phrases, either of which singly does sometimes denote eternity in the strict sense^f, and therefore both together may be thought to do so much rather: especially if it be considered that here is no limitation of time intimated in the context; nor meaning the Father only; adding a weak reason or two, why the same name, when applied to God the Son, shall not signify the same thing, viz. necessary existence.

^d John i. 3. 10. Coloss. i. 16. 1 Cor. viii. 6.

^e Cyril's note upon this text is worth observing: Μὴ οὖν πρόσχευε τῷ υἱῷ ἐκ τῆς Βηθλεὲμ, ἀλλὰ προσκύνει τὸν αὐδιῶς ἐκ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα. μὴ χρονικὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ υἱοῦ καταδέξῃ τινὸς λόγουτος, ἀλλὰ ἀχρονον ἀρχὴν γίνωσκε τὸν πατέρα. Cyrrill. Catech. xi. p. 145.

Αὐτοῦ δὲ τοῦ Χριστοῦ δύο ἔξοδοι, ἡγουν πρόοδοι, ἡ μὲν πρῶται πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων ἐκ πατρὸς γενομένη, κατὰ τὸ: αἱ ἔξοδοι αὐτοῦ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, ἐξ ἡμερῶν αἰῶνος ἢ δὲ ἐσπέρας, ἢ ἐκ παρθένου, ἥτις ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τῶν αἰώνων ἀπηγγήσεν. Athanasii, Eusebii, et Cyrilli Fragm. in Psalm. apud Athan. tom. i. p. 1256. ed. Bened. Vid. et Hieron. in loc. Epiphani. Ancor. p. 32. Euseb. Dem. Ev. lib. vii. cap. 2.

^f For the first, see Psalm lv. 19. Hab. i. 12. For the second, Psalm xc. 2. xciii. 2.

is there any deducible from the nature or reason of the thing itself. However, I pretend to call this construction of the passage no more than probable; since there is not ground sufficient for calling it certain and indisputable. Only this I may add, by way of remark, that whosoever should undertake to prove the eternity of God the Father from any express words, either of the Old or New Testament, would find his proof of it liable to the same difficulty and uncertainty, from the ambiguity of the Hebrew or Greek phrases used to denote eternity.

Another argument, of like kind with the former, to prove the eternity of God the Son, may be drawn from Solomon's description of Wisdom, Prov. viii. 22, 30. The Jews of old, and the Christian Church from the beginning, understood that passage of a Person, the substantial Wisdom of God^h, (either the Word, or the Holy Spirit, but generally the former.) And this was no matter of dispute between the Catholics and Arians formerly; neither is it, as I conceive, at this day. The only dispute is, whether we are right in our interpreting the phrases, from the beginning, from everlasting, &c. (Proverbs viii. 23.) of a strict eternity. It must be owned that our argument, so far as it is built merely upon the critical meaning of the phrases, and their usage in Scripture, amounts only to a strong probability; as in the text of Micah before spoken of. But it may receive some additional strength from several other considerations, which it may be proper to mention. Wisdom is here said to have been with the "Lord in the beginning of his way, before his works of old;" (ver. 22.) that is, before the works of creation; before there were any creatures; consequently from all eternity. Wisdom is further said to have been "by him, as one brought up with him;" (ver. 30.) which seems to be a very easy and natural description of two that had been always together co-eternal with each other: which is further confirmed from the following words, "and I was daily his delight, rejoicing always before him;" (ver. 30.) intimating, as Origen has well observedⁱ, that the Father can no more be supposed to have

^g See Allix, Judgment of the Jewish Church.

^h Just. Mart. Dial. p. 184, 375, ed. Jebb. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 20. p. 253. Clem. Alex. p. 832. Tertull. contr. Herm. cap. xviii. contr. Prax. cap. vi. Origen. Comm. in Joh. p. 11, 17, 33, 36. Athenagoras, p. 40. Theoph. Antioch. p. 82.

ⁱ Οὐ θέμις ἐστίν, οὐδὲ ἀκίνδυνον διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν ἡμῶν τὸ, ὅσον ἐφ' ἡμῖν, ἀποστερεῖσθαι τὸν Θεόν τοῦ ἀεὶ συνόντος αὐτῷ λόγου μονογενοῦς, σοφίας ὄντος ἢ προσέχαιρεν. οὕτω γὰρ οὐδὲ been ever without the WORD, or Λόγος, (here signified under the name of WISDOM,) than he can be supposed to have ever wanted joy and happiness. But what most of all confirms us in this sentiment is, the Son's being here represented, as we are now to suppose, under the name and figure of Wisdom; intimating that he is as near to, and inseparable from, God the Father, as his own wisdom is; and consequently coeternal. This also is taken notice of by Origen; who from thence draws an argument for the eternity of the Logos, or Word^k.

What has been here said reminds me of some other arguments, near akin to that now mentioned, of the eternity of God the Son, drawn from the several names ascribed to him in holy Scripture: such as, Λόγος, Δύναμις, Φῶς, Ἀλήθεια, Ζωή, that is, Word, Power of God, Light, Truth, Life, and the like. The ancients were of opinion that the eternity of God the Son was insinuated in those names^l: that the Father could no more be without the Son, than without thought, or power, or light, or ἀεὶ χαίρων νοηθήσεται. Origen. apud Athanas. Decret. S. Nic. p. 233.

^k Origen. Comm. in Joh. p. 43, 44. Comp. Pamph. Apolog. p. 230. ed. Bened. int. Op. Hieron. vol. v.

^l Ἐξ ἀρχῆς γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς, νοῦς αἰδίου ὦν, εἶχεν αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὸν λόγον, αἰδῖος λογικὸς ὦν. Athen. Leg. cap. x. p. 39.

Solus autem, quia nihil aliud extrinsecus præter illum. Ceterum, ne tunc quidem solus; habebat enim secum, quam habebat in semetipso; Rationem suam scilicet. Rationalis enim Deus, et Ratio in ipso prius; et ita ab ipso omnia. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. iv. p. 503.

Κατανοεῖτω γὰρ ὁ πολῶν καὶ λέγων, ἢν ποτὲ οὐκ ἦν ὁ υἱός, ὅτι εἶπεν καὶ τό. σοφία ποτὲ οὐκ ἦν, καὶ λόγος οὐκ ἦν, καὶ ζωὴ οὐκ ἦν. Orig. apud Athanas. tom. i. p. 233.

Αὐτῷ γὰρ πιθόμιστα τῷ εἰπόντι—Ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ Ἀλήθεια καὶ οὐχ οὕτω τις ἡμῶν ἐστὶν ἀνθρώπων, ὡς οἴεσθαι ὅτι ἡ τῆς Ἀληθείας οὐσία πρὸ τῶν χρόνων τῆς τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐπιφανείας οὐκ ἦν. Origen. contr. Cels. lib. viii. p. 386.

Αὐτὸς δὲ μόνος ὦν πολλὸς ἦν, οὕτε γὰρ ἄλογος, οὕτε ἄστροφος, οὕτε ἀδύνατος, οὕτε ἀβούλευτος ἦν. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. cap. x. p. 13. Fabric.

^l Αἰεὶ δὲ ἦν, εἰ γὰρ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἐστίν—

καὶ εἰ λόγος, καὶ σοφία, καὶ δύναμις ὁ Χριστός.—ταῦτα δὲ δυνάμεις οὐσαι τοῦ Θεοῦ τυγχάνουσιν. εἰ τοίνυν γέγονεν ὁ υἱός, ἢν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ταῦτα ἦν ἄρα καιρός, ὅτε χωρὶς τούτων ἦν ὁ Θεός. ἀποπάτατον δὲ τοῦτο. Dionys. Rom. apud Athan. tom. i. p. 232.

Ἄεὶ τὸν Χριστὸν εἶναι, λόγον ὄντα, καὶ σοφίαν, καὶ δύναμιν. οὐ γὰρ δὴ τούτων ἄγονος ὦν, ὁ Θεὸς εἶτα ἐπαυδοποιήσατο—ἀπαύγασμα δὲ ὦν φωτὸς αἰδίου, πάντως καὶ αὐτὸς αἰδῖος ἐστίν.—ὄντος οὖν αἰωνίου τοῦ πατρὸς, αἰώνιος ὁ υἱός ἐστι, φῶς ἐκ φωτὸς ὦν—οὐδέ ἐστίν οὕτε ὁ νοῦς ἄλογος, οὕτε ἄνοος ὁ λόγος. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. tom. i. p. 253, &c.

Τὶ δὲ οὐκ ἀνόσιον τὸ λέγειν, ποτὲ μὴ εἶναι τὴν σοφίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὴν λέγουσαν—ἐγὼ ἤμην ἢ προσέχαιρεν. ἢ τὴν δύναμιν τοῦ Θεοῦ μὴ ὑπάρχειν ποτὲ. ἢ τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ ἠκρωτηριάσθαι ποτὲ, ἢ τὰ ἄλλα ἐξ ὧν ὁ υἱός γνωρίζεται καὶ ὁ πατὴρ χαρακτηρίζεται. τὸ γὰρ ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης μὴ εἰναί λεγόμενον, συναναίρει καὶ τὸ πρωτότυπον φῶς, οὐ ἐστὶν ἀπαύγασμα. Alexand. Alex. Epist. ap. Theod. lib. i. cap. iv. p. 13.

Πῶς δὲ, εἰ λόγος καὶ σοφία ἐστὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ υἱός, ἢν ποτὲ ὅτε οὐκ ἦν; ἴσον γὰρ ἐστὶν αὐτοῦς λέγειν ἄλογον καὶ ἄστροφον ποτὲ τὸν Θεόν. Id. apud Socr. lib. i. cap. 6. p. 11.

truth, or life; the Son being deciphered and figured under those names or characters, on purpose to express his near relation to the Father, and his inseparable coeternity. This argument of the primitive Catholic Fathers I am the more willing to take notice of, because it has been strangely, though perhaps undesignedly, misrepresented by some late writers^m. We are told that to argue, as the ancients did, that the "Father considered without the Son would be without reason and without wisdom, is supposing the Son to be nothing but an attribute of the Father." But this is grossly mistaking the sense of those primitive writers, who were no less men than Athenagoras, Tertullian, Origen, Hippolytus, Dionysius of Rome, with the other Dionysius of Alexandria, and Alexander bishop of Alexandria: men that had not quite lost their senses when they wrote these things; most of them notoriously known to have been strenuous opposers of the Noëtian or Sabellian principle, which supposes the Son to be nothing more than an attribute of the Father. The truth is, these primitive writers did suppose, since the Son had the same names given him in Scripture that God's attributes have, (being called the wisdom, the reason, and the power, &c. of God,) that there was some meaning and significancy in those names: and they took it to be this; that the Son was near and dear unto the Father as his own attributes; inseparable from him, and coeternal with him. Some moderns may indeed assign other reasons for the Son's having those names: they may tell us that he is called the wisdom of God and the power of God, because "God's wisdom and power are manifested by himⁿ." But then let them own that this is but conjecture at most, novel conjecture; and that the reason assigned by the primitive Fathers may be true, for any thing that appears to the contrary; nay, is much more likely to be true, considering how near many of those writers lived to the apostolic time, and how unanimous they were in those sentiments, and how suitable those sentiments are to the other high things said in Scripture of the Son of God: besides that these names and characters are not common to other things; not given to prophets or apostles, nor to the very angels, (though God's wisdom, &c. is manifested by them,) but are, in a manner, peculiar to the

^m Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 255, Plea, &c. p. 308, 39.
257. 2nd ed. Reply, p. 177. Modest.

ⁿ See Clarke's Reply, p. 173.

Son of God. We find the Catholics afterwards, following the example of their predecessors, frequently insisting upon the same way of reasoning in proof of the Son's eternity^o: which I the rather observe, because it is evident that those later writers especially were very far from supposing the Son to be nothing but an attribute: and indeed it is but misrepresentation, without so much as any probable ground, to charge it upon the Ante-Nicene writers; though they may sometimes have expressed themselves more briefly or obscurely on that head.

There is another argument of the Son's eternity insisted on by some, even of the Ante-Nicene Catholics^p, drawn from the consideration of the Son's being the express image of the Father's Person, according to Heb. i. 3. and consequently resembling him in every perfection, and particularly in his eternity, the prime perfection of all. But I proceed:

There is one passage more in the New Testament, which has been usually brought in proof of Christ's eternity. The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, chap. vii. introduces Melchisedec as a type of Christ. Of him he says, that he had "no beginning of days, nor end of life:" that is, no beginning nor ending of his priesthood is any where recorded. This is a typical repre-

^o Οὐ γὰρ ἦν ὅτε ἄλογος ἦν, οὐδὲ ἦν ὅτε οὐ πατήρ, οὐδὲ ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἀληθής, ἢ ἀσποφος, ἢ ἀδύνατος, ἢ ζωῆς ἐνδεής, ἢ λαμπρότητος, ἢ ἀγαθότητος. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxxv. p. 574.

Ideo Sapientia Dei appellatur, ut nunquam Pater sine Sapientia, hoc est, sine Filio suo fuisse credatur. Pseudo-Ambros. de Fide Orthod. cap. ii. p. 349. Vid. Alexand. Ep. Encycl. apud Athanas. tom. i. p. 339. Athan. tom. i. p. 221, 416, 419, 423, 424, 428, 470, 500, 619. Phæbad. contr. Ariam. p. 303. B. P. tom. iv. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. lib. vii. p. 633, 634. Cyrril. Alex. de Trinit. p. 6. Op. tom. vi. Paris. Thesaur. lib. i. p. 23, 31.

N. B. Their way of reasoning from other names and characters of God the Son, clearly shews their meaning in the argument drawn from the absurdity of supposing the Father to be ἄλογος, ἀσποφος, &c. A few examples more will suffice, to leave with the judicious.

Πότε γὰρ εἶδέ τις φῶς χωρὶς τοῦ ἀπανγάσματος;—ἢ πῶς οὐ μαινεταί πλέον, ὁ κἄν ἐνθυμούμενος ἄλογον καὶ ἀσποφόν ποτε τὸν Θεόν; τοιαῦτα γὰρ παραδείγματα, καὶ τοιαύτας τὰς εἰκόνας ἔθηκεν ἡ γραφή, ἰβ' &c. Athan. p. 500. Compare p. 221, 416, 428. ὁ ὢν Θεὸς ἦν ποτε ἄλογος; καὶ φῶς ὢν ἀφεγγής ἦν. Compare p. 618. and p. 683.

Noli ergo credere quod fuerit momentum aliquod, quo fuerit sine sapientia Deus, aut sine splendore lux. Ambros. de Fid. lib. i. cap. 13. p. 460.

Οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἐπινοῆσαι τῷ λόγῳ, οὔτε ὑπόστασιν ἀχαρακτήριστον, οὔτε ἀλαμπῆ δόξαν, οὔτε ἀσποφον Θεὸν οὐκ ἀχειρα δημιουργόν, οὐκ ἄλογον ἀρχὴν, οὐκ ἄπαυδα πατέρα. Gregor. Nyss. contr. Eunom. Orat. vii. p. 634. Comp. p. 633.

Πότε οὖν ἦν ὁ πατήρ χωρὶς τοῦ ἰδίου ἀπανγάσματος; Πότε οὐκ ἦν ἐν πατρὶ τὸ φῶς αὐτοῦ; Cyrril. Alex. Thesaur. lib. i. p. 21. Compare p. 23, 27, 28.

^p Origen. apud Athanas. tom. i. p. 233. Alexand. Alex. apud Theod. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 17.

sentation of Christ; wherefore it seems that Christ must really have what the type was no more than a faint resemblance of, viz. an eternal existence without beginning and without end. That he shall never have end of life, is uncontested. If therefore to have no end of life imports a future eternity in the largest sense, it seems most natural to understand that to have no beginning of days must import eternity backwards in the largest sense also. Thus far I have proceeded in the Scripture-proofs^r of Christ's eternity, considered as distinct from the attribute of immortality; though in sound reasoning one implies the other, and to prove either is at the same time proving both. This being premised, I pass on,

2. To the more particular proof of his immortality. I shall not repeat the arguments from his being Jehovah; Alpha and Omega; he which was, and which is, and which is to come, or the like, equally proving both eternity, and independent eternity, that is, immortality; because the force of those has been already considered. But there are two or three texts, before omitted, which I have reserved for this place, and shall now consider distinctly.

The author of the Epistle to the Hebrews, opposing the immortality of Christ to the fading and perishing nature of the heavens and the earth, sets it forth thus in very expressive terms: "Thou, Lord, in the beginning hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thine hands: they shall perish; but THOU REMAINEST; and they all shall wax old as doth a garment; and as a vesture shalt thou fold them up, and they shall be CHANGED: but THOU ART THE SAME, and thy years shall not fail." Heb. i. 10, 11, 12. This is the very description which the holy Psalmist gives us of the immortality, or unchangeable nature, of the only true eternal God. And ^d Qui typum gerens Domini, et sine patre, et sine matre, et sine generationis enarratione, et sine initio, et sine fine describitur; ut ostenderet sempiternum Filium Dei in hunc mundum esse venturum, qui et sine Patre secundum incarnationem natus est, et sine matre secundum divinam generationem, et sine enarratione generationis; quia scriptum est, "Generationem autem ejus quis enarrabit?" Ambros. de Fid. lib. iii. cap. 11. p. 513.

^r As to the sense of the most early Fathers in relation to Christ's eternity, I have occasionally shewn it in part. For the rest, I refer the ingenuous and impartial reader to Bp. Bull's Collections and Observations on that head, in his Defensio Fid. Nic. which are abundantly sufficient to satisfy every ingenuous inquirer, that the eternity of God the Son was the constant doctrine of the Christian Church from the beginning, and that the contrary was always accounted heresy.

since it is here, without any restriction or limitation, applied by the inspired writer to our Saviour Christ; we cannot reasonably understand it to mean any thing less here than it does there. There cannot be any words devised more express or emphatical than these are: "They shall perish; but thou remainest: they shall be changed; but thou art the same^s." The force of these expressions was well understood by the great Athanasius, and triumphantly urged against the Arians^t. There is another passage out of the Epistle to the Hebrews of like import, declaring in strong terms the immutability of Christ. "Jesus Christ the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever." Heb. xiii. 8. Here is the phrase ὁ αὐτός, the same, again applied to the person of Christ, as before in chapter the first; and, besides, here is all time, past, present, and to come, taken in, to make the description still more full and complete. It may be best explained from a parallel text in the Revelations, by the character of, "which is, and which was, and which is to come:" words which confessedly and undeniably denote eternal, unchangeable existence. What is there expressed by "is, was, and is to come," is here signified by "yesterday, to-day, and for ever." Thus was the text generally understood by Catholics of the fourth and fifth centuries^u, and frequently cited against the Arians. How the Arians replied to it then, we know not; unless we may make a judgment of it from what is said now. It is now pretended that the meaning of the text is only this; that "the doctrine of Christ, once taught by the Apostles, ought to be preserved unchanged^x." But, under favour, this is rather the practical inference built upon the proposition of the text, than the proposition itself: for let us take in the whole context, which is as follows: "Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow, considering the end of their conversation. Jesus Christ (is)

^s Origen quotes the words, ὁ δὲ ὁ αὐτός εἶ, several times, as a proof of the ἰὸ ἀρεπτον καὶ ἀαλλοίωτον, the unconvertible and immutable nature of God. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 17, 169, 318.

^t Athanas. p. 440, 462, 685. ed. Bened. Vid. etiam Cyrill. Alexand. contr. Jul. lib. viii. p. 266.

^u Alexand. Alex. apud Athanas. tom. 1. p. 399. Athanasius, tom. i.

p. 440, 453, 685. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. xxxviii. p. 613. Ambros. de Fid. lib. v. cap. 1. p. 555. De Incarn. cap. vi. p. 716. Cyrill. Hierosol. Catech. xii. p. 156. Cyrill. Alex. de Rect. Fid. p. 47. De Incarn. Dial. p. 710.

^x Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 117. Reply, p. 169. Modest Plea, &c. p. 304.

“ the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines; for it is a good thing that the heart be established” &c. Now, whether the words have reference to those going before, viz. “ considering the end of their conversation;” or to the words immediately following, viz. “ Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines;” either way the sense is good, and the Apostle’s argument pertinent. For upon the former supposition the sense will run thus: “ Imitate your pastors, considering how great and how divine a Person you thereby adhere to; one who is no created or mutable Being, capable of failing in his own person, or of disappointing you in your just expectations; but one that is eternally and unchangeably the same;” whom “ therefore you may infallibly depend on, in the final result of things.” In this view the Apostle’s sense is both just and pertinent, and is not much unlike to what is elsewhere said of God, that he is the Lord, and “ changes not,” Mal. iii. 6. and that “ with him there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning,” James i. 17. But if we understand this text with regard to the words immediately following, “ Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines,” still the sense is just and to the purpose: “ Do not ye change, for Jesus Christ never changes, being immutably and essentially the same: endeavour to copy after him as far as your imperfect natures will permit.” Thus the precept and the example hang together, much after the same manner as in a text of St. Matthew: “ Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect:” where an argument is drawn from the natural and necessary perfections of God, to induce us to some faint resemblance and imitation of them. Upon the whole, it appears that our interpretation of this text in the Hebrews is literal; which makes it preferable to any figurative construction, unless there were a necessity for it. It is also very agreeable to the scope and design of the author in that place, and to what he had before taught us, chap. i. ver. 12. of the same Epistle: it is further countenanced by the Catholic Fathers, at least as high as the fourth century; and not contradicted by those before them: in fine, it is opposed only, or however chiefly, by those who, having an hypothesis to serve, like not the doctrine it contains; which doctrine nevertheless is set forth by other Scriptures, and confirmed by all antiquity²: and now let any man of common ingenuity be left to judge, which of the two interpretations offered be the true one. Having considered the Scripture-proofs of Christ's eternity and immutability, I proceed next to another of his divine attributes.

∇ See True Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity continued, p. 206.

3. Omniscience is another divine attribute, ascribed in Scripture to our Saviour Christ. "Now we are sure that thou knowest all things," said his disciples unto him, John xvi. 30. And again; "Lord, thou knowest all things," (John xxi. 17.) said St. Peter, directing his discourse to Christ. The words in both places are general, without any limitation or reserve intimated in text or context: neither does the Evangelist, who recorded these sayings, any where insert any caution to prevent our understanding them in the highest and most unlimited sense. Thus far the presumption lies in favour of our construction: and I shall endeavour further to shew from other Scriptures, that those expressions ought to be understood in their utmost latitude; and shall withal examine and confute the Arian or Socinian pretences to the contrary.

That God the Son "knoweth all things," in the strictest sense, may be justly inferred from his being the "Searcher of the heart," and his knowledge of the "deep things of God." To be καρδιογνώστης, "Searcher of the heart," is the peculiar and distinguishing character of the one true God; as appears from Jer. xvii. 10. "I the Lord search the heart, I try the reins." And from 1 Kings viii. 39. "Thou, even thou only knowest the hearts of all the children of men." And from Acts xv. 8. "God which knoweth the hearts." Yet this very perfection our blessed Lord claims to himself: "I am he," saith he, "that searcheth the reins and the heart," Rev. ii. 23. And St. John testifies of him, that "he knew all men," John ii. 24. "knew what was in man," John ii. 25. And the disciples in their prayer to him (as seems most probable) say, "Thou, Lord, which knowest the hearts of all men," Acts i. 24.

² The immutability of Christ is implicitly and consequentially asserted as often as the primitive writers assert the eternity, or consubstantiality, or proper, emphatical existence (which we now express by necessary existence) of God the Son; or declare him to be God in the strict sense, or no creature:

so that direct and express testimonies of Christ's immutability, if they occur not so often, are less needful. But some there are, full and particular to that very point. Vid. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 8. p. 183. Tertullian. contr. Prax. cap. xxvii. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 169, 170.

This is further confirmed from Heb. iv. 12, 13. "The WORD " of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged " sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and " spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the " thoughts and intents of the heart: neither is there any " creature that is not manifest in his sight: but all things are " naked and opened unto the eyes of him with whom we have to " do." That this passage is to be understood of the Λόγος, or Word, that is, of Christ, I think need not be doubted: the characters are plainly personal, and the name of Word is appropriated to Christ by St. John, John i. 1. Rev. xix. 13; and the "sword," or "two-edged sword," is a figure often mentioned in the Revelations, where Christ is spoken of; Rev. i. 16. ii. 12, 16.
 xix. 15. This passage was understood of Christ, both before and after the Council of Nice, by Catholic writers^a: and the application of it to Christ is not, that I know of, scrupled by our modern Arians, any more than it appears to have been doubted of by their predecessors. Here then it is said of Christ, that "all things are naked" before him; that every creature is "manifest in his sight;" and that he is a "discerner
 " of the thoughts and intents of the heart:" strong and lively expressions of his divine omniscience: I know not whether any fuller or more significant can be produced out of the holy Scripture, in proof of the omniscience even of God the Father.
 To this may be added another celebrated text, Coloss. ii. 3.
 "In whom are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge."
 The author of 'Scripture Doctrine' pretends, that it is ambi- guous whether this refers to the Father or to Christ. But if it certainly refers to either, there can be no reasonable doubt but it refers to Christ, immediately before mentioned. The words run thus: "The acknowledgment of the mystery of God and " the Father, and of Christ, (ἐν ᾧ;) in whom are hid all the " treasures of wisdom and knowledge." There may be some question whether the words ἐν ᾧ may not refer to μυστηρίου, mystery, before spoken of; and so may not be properly rendered in which, instead of in whom. But if they be rightly rendered in whom, it is plain they must refer to the nearest antecedent,

^a Origen in Joh. p. 34. Athanas. p. 189. Cyril. Alex. Thesaur. p. 169.
 tom. i. p. 503, 539. Serm. Maj. p. 6. See also Clarke's Script. Doctr.
 Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. cap. 7. p. p. 116. 2nd ed.
 534. ed. Bened. Euseb. in Psalm.

Christ; and in this interpreters are agreed. Origen, Hilary, and the ancient author of the commentaries under the name of St. Ambrose, refer the words to Christ. ^bThe two latter, as also Cyril of Alexandria, draw an argument from them of the absolute omniscience of Christ. Clemens of Alexandria twice cites the text: but whether he understood the words in dispute to relate to mystery going before, or to the person of Christ, is uncertain. It is observable, that four of the authors now mentioned read the words somewhat differently from the present copies^c. As to the sense of the words, and their reference to Christ, we shall find but little reason to doubt, if we consider the general scope and drift of the Apostle in this Epistle; which was to set forth the excellency and dignity of Christ. This appears particularly from verses 15, 16, 17, 18, and 19, of the first chapter; and from the 9th verse of this very chapter, where we are told, that “in him dwelleth all the fulness of the “Godhead bodily.” Well might the Apostle say, that “all the “treasures of wisdom and knowledge were in him, in whom “all the fulness of the Godhead was also.” I know, our adversaries, whether Socinians or Arians, will endeavour to elude the force of this text, as well as of the other. But as the Apostle ushered it in with a very solemn caution, to “beware “lost any man spoil us through philosophy and vain deceit, “after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, “and not after Christ :” so let all true Christians beware, lest they be imposed upon by weak pretences, built upon false philosophy and vain deceit; not upon sound and true reasoning. The author of “Scripture Doctrine” refers us^d to John xiv. 10. “The Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.” If he means that the Father’s nature and Godhead so dwells and resides in Christ, as to make a full and entire communion of substance and of all perfections, insomuch that the Son shall therefore be totus ex toto, perfectus ex perfecto, very God of very God; then indeed this construction would not be amiss, being the same which Hilary and some other Catholics give of it. But, if he understands the Father’s in-dwelling in any lower sense, ^b Origen. Comm. in Matt. p. 209. Hilary. p. 1025, 1028. Pseudo-Ambros. in loc. Clem. Alex. p. 683, 694. Vid. et Cyril. Alex. adv. Anthropomorph. p. 382.

^c Mystery of God in Christ; so Clemens and Pseudo-Ambros. Mystery in Christ; Origen. Mystery of God even Christ; Dei Christi: Hilary.

^d Clarke’s Scripture Doctr. p. 114. 2nd edit.

it would have come better from a Socinian, who would interpret the fulness of the Godhead, of the Father dwelling in the man Christ Jesus. It cannot easily be imagined that the Apostle, who in the first chapter of this Epistle had said so many high and great things of the inherent and personal dignity of the Son of God, as existing before all things, creating, preserving, and sustaining the whole universe, should now fall so low as to tell us, that he meant it not of any inherent personal dignity of the Son, but of the Father only: or if the Apostle had so intended it, why should not he have said plainly that the Father dwelt in him, a plain easy thing, instead of surprising us with so solemn and pompous an expression, (and that too after the ceremony of a preface to introduce it,) as that in him dwelt "all the fulness of the Godhead "bodily?"

The author of "Scripture Doctrine," not confiding in his first explication, invents another, inconsistent with it, though he lets both stand together in the same page. "Fullness of Godhead" he interprets fulness of divine power, dominion, and authority: for so the word θεότης, divinity, he says, signifies; and elsewhere^e, always signifies. He is much mistaken in his remark upon the sense of θεότης, as might be shewn by a hundred instances out of the best ecclesiastical writers; some of which I have referred to in another place^f, and upon another occasion. However, if θεότης always signifies power, dominion, and authority; then it never signifies the Being or Person, whose that power, dominion, or authority is: and therefore the text of St. John, xiv. 10. which speaks of the Father's (not the Father's power, dominion, &c.) dwelling in Christ, is very inconsistently put together with this other construction. But enough of this. As to the sense of the text, Col. ii. 9. we need not have recourse to any remote and farfetched explications, when the natural and obvious construction of it is no near at hand. Whoever considers that the Logos, or Word, was God, and was made flesh, or was "God manifest "in the flesh," (as St. Paul expresses it,) will easily believe

^e Reply, p. 283.

^f Defence of some Queries, vol. i. p. 323, 504.

^g 1 Tim. iii. 16. As to Θεός in this text, and the agreement of the Greek copies in it, consult Bp. Pearson on the Creed, p. 128. and Mills in loc. Dr. Clarke's surmise, that all the Fathers read ὁς or ὃς, instead of Θεός, till the beginning of the sixth century, which he pretends to collect from the tenor of their comments, is, without that that was the great mystery which St. Paul had in his thoughts, when he told us that the fulness of the Godhead dwelt in Christ bodily. He had the more reason to usher this in with a prefatory caution against philosophy and vain deceit, because the mystery of God incarnate was what the disputers of this world were most of all offended at, and what none of the heretics of the earliest times would come into^h. The Docetæ, a very early sect, denied the humanity of Christ, that they might still retain the belief of his divinity; while Cerinthus and the Ebionites denied his divinity, that they might still acknowledge his humanity; neither one nor other admitting the divinity and humanity together, because such an union and mixture of God and man appeared utterly repugnant to their philosophy. Both those heresies probably had their rise in the Apostles' times, and before St. Paul wrote this Epistle. And now we may understand what St. Paul meant by fulness of Godhead. The divine nature, the Λόγος, full and perfect God, assumed a body, took flesh upon him, or became incarnate. The "Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us," (in our nature,) "and of his fulness have we all received." John i. 14, 15, 16.

The construction which I have here given of this remarkable passage is not mine, but that of the primitive Catholic writersⁱ, as well before as after the Council of Nice. Now to return to the point which we were before upon: since it appears how high and great things the Apostle has said of Christ, in the two first chapters of this Epistle, we have the more reason to believe any grounds. See Greg. Nyssen. Orat. x. contr. Eunom. p. 693. where Θεός is read, and the tenor of the comment requires that reading.

^h See my Defence of some Queries, vol. i. p. 470, 471.

ⁱ Διόπερ καὶ τὸ ἐκ τῆς παρθένου σώμα, χωρήσαν πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς, τῇ θεότητι ἀτρέπτως ἡνωται, καὶ θεοποιήγεται· οὐ χάριν ὁ αὐτὸς Θεὸς καὶ Ἄνθρωπος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς προσεφητεύετο ἐν νόμῳ, &c. Concil. Antioch. Epist. Ladd. tom. i. p. 848.

Εἰ γὰρ οὐκ ἔστι κατ' οὐσίαν, ὅμοιος ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ πατρὸς, λείπει τὶ τῇ εἰκόνι, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι πλήρης εἰκόν, οὐδὲ τέλειον ἀπαύγασμα. πῶς οὖν ἀναγινώσκετε τὸ, ἐν αὐτῷ κατοικεῖ πᾶν τὸ πλήρωμα τῆς θεότητος σωματικῶς; Athanas. de Synod. p. 753. Comp. p. 556. ed. Bened.

Note, that the citation which Dr. Clarke (Script. Doctr. p. 114.) brings out of Athanasius, as if it had been his interpretation of this text, has no reference at all to it; as any one may see by looking into Athanasius, Epist. ad Philadelph. tom. i. p. 916.

Tantus est Filius quantus videbitur Pater: totus de toto, integer de integro, perfectus de perfecto, consummataque virtute: sicut Apostolus dicit ad Colossenses, in quo "omnis plenitudo Divinitatis corporaliter habitat." Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xlviii. ex versione Ruff. p. 733.

Vid. Hilar. p. 979, 983, 988, 1362. Epiphani. Ancorat. p. 95. contr. Hæres. p. 889. Exposit. fid. Justin. Mart. ascript.

that he meant to ascribe absolute omniscience to him, when he said, that "in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and "knowledge."

A further proof of his omniscience may be drawn from his being indisputably equal in knowledge to the Holy Spirit of God; that Spirit which "searcheth all things," even the "deep "things of God;" and who is as well acquainted with the mind of God, as a man is with his own heart and mind. I mention not other arguments of the Son's omniscience, deducible from his creative powers, and his being Preserver and Sustainer of the universe, and from the names of Wisdom and Truth^k given to him in holy Scripture; and from his intimate union with, and knowledge of, God the Father: these and the like considerations may serve still more and more to confirm us in the belief of it, and to render it less questionable with serious and considering men. I shall only add, that the Ante-Nicene Catholics were no strangers to this doctrine which I here maintain; but asserted it, many of them^l, as fully as I have done: none, so far as appears, ever presuming to oppose or contradict it. But there are some objections against the evidence I have produced, which come next to be considered. I shall confine myself to such pretences as have been lately revived, and artfully set off, by the author of "Scripture Doctrine."

I. As to our Lord's being "Searcher of the hearts," he thinks^m it may be accounted for from a passage of Clemens of Alexandriaⁿ; which he would gladly so interpret as to make Clemens say, that Christ is, by the will of the Almighty, Inspector of our hearts. But I have in another place^o took notice how widely he has mistaken the sense of his author.

A second pretence^p to invalidate our proofs of the Son's

^k Vid. Origen in Johan. pag. 28. Didym. de Spir. Sanct. p. 515.

^l See this made good in my Defence, &c. vol. i. p. 337, &c.

^m Script. Doctr. p. 45, 118, 294.

ⁿ Τὸν Κύριον Ἰησοῦν τῷ παντοκρατορικῷ θελήματι ἐπίσκοπον τῆς καρδίας ἡμῶν. Strom. iv. p. 611.

^o Defence of some Queries, vol. i. p. 338.

^p N. B. Παντοκρατορικῷ θελήματι, in Clemens, does not signify by the will of the Almighty, as the Doctor construes it; but by his sovereign all- containing will.

See parallel expressions in other authors. Μόνος δὲ ὁ Θεὸς περιέχει τῇ βουλήσει τὸ πᾶν. Pseudo-Just. ad Orthod. Qu. 11.

Immensus cum sit Deus, et mundi opifex, atque omnipotens, immensa et mundi opifex, atque omnipotentis voluntate, et effectu novo, potenter et efficaciter fecit ut omnis plenitudo, &c. Fragm. Irenæi, p. 342. ed. Bened. Comp. Clem. Alex. p. 674, 679.

^p See Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 45, 138.

omniscience, is from John viii. 28. where our Lord says, "I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things." The full meaning of which is no more than this, that God the Son is intimately united with the Father, never separate from him; and therefore neither acts nor speaks but in concert with him. Our blessed Saviour, speaking of his Father and himself, is pleased to take up with such expressions as are of common use with us: but they are to be soberly interpreted, suitably to the dignity of the subject. This I observe, lest the word taught, taken from what is customary amongst men, should be apt to convey a low idea, when applied (though in a more refined and elevated sense) to the Persons of the ever blessed Trinity¹. It is very certain that the Son has his knowledge, and every other perfection, from the Father, in the same sense as he hath also his nature or substance from the Father: but it should be considered, that after our blessed Lord had said, "The Son can do nothing of himself," (John v. 19.) he immediately added, "For what things soever, he (the Father) doth, these also doth the Son likewise." Let it then be acknowledged, that the Son can know nothing of himself, provided only that we add this consideration to it, that "what things soever the Father knoweth, these also knoweth the Son likewise;" and then it will appear that those expressions, which the objectors lay hold on, are so far from denoting any imperfection in the Son's knowledge, that, on the contrary, they set forth the great and unmeasurable perfection of it, as being inseparably linked with, and indeed one and the same in extent and degree with, the Father's.

3. A third objection^r against what we assert is taken from Rev. i. 1. "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him." But this has no difficulty with any who consider that all the transactions of God the Father with mankind are in and

¹ Dicere autem et loqui, in Trinitate, non secundum consuetudinem nostram—accipiendum, sed juxta formam incorporalium naturarum—neque enim ignorante Filio (qui Sapientia et Veritas est) Pater suam nunciat voluntatem; cum omne quod loquitur sapiens verusque subsistens in sapientia habeat, et in substantia. Loquitur ergo Patrem et audire Filium, vel e contrario, Filio loquente, audire

Patrem, ejusdem naturæ in Patre et Filio, consensusque, significatio est. Didym. de Spir. S. p. 515. ed. Bened.

"Filius nihil a semetipso possit facere, nisi viderit Patrem facientem:" in sensu scilicet facientem. Pater enim sensu agit; Filius vero, qui in Patris sensu est, videns perficit. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 15.

^r Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 45. 172.

by Christ Jesus. Every revelation of God is through Christ his Son, the Revealer and Interpreter of the otherwise unknown Father, and his will, to men. This order and economy, observable in the Persons of the sacred Trinity, is what we ought humbly to adore and reverence, rather than pry too curiously into; lest, pretending to be "wise above what is written," we fall from our own steadfastness, and lose ourselves in inextricable mazes.

4. The last and most material objection against us is from Mark xiii. 32: "But of that day, and that hour, knoweth no man, no, not the angels which are in heaven, neither the Son, but the Father." Or "Father only," as it is in Matt. xxiv. 36. which the author of "Scripture Doctrine" particularly taketh notice of^s. He does not, in terms, declare whether this text be, in his opinion, a proof of God the Son's being ignorant of any thing; but is content to say^t, or insinuate, as from Irenæus, (though he mistranslates his author,) that the Father is superior in knowledge, and that he only has perfect knowledge: very suspicious and doubtful expressions, and left without guard or caution. But to come to the point: I am to shew that these texts of St. Mark and St. Matthew prove nothing at all against the perfect knowledge, or strict omniscience, of the divine nature of Christ. It is not said, the Son of God knew not the day of judgment; but the Son, that is, the Son of man, as appears from the context in both the Evangelists: Matt. xxiv. 37, 39. Mark xiii. 26, 34. And it is well observed by Athanasius^u, that, after our Lord had mentioned the angels as not knowing that day, he did not add, neither the Holy Ghost; that it might still be considered, that if the Holy Ghost knew the day, well might also God the Son know it; and that therefore what is here said of the Son relates to the Son of man only. It is objected by Crellius and others, that it could not with truth and sincerity be said of Christ, that he was ignorant of the day, if he knew it in any capacity; as it cannot be denied that man is immortal, so long as he is immortal in any respect or capacity. But to this I answer, that as it may be truly said of the body of man, that it is not immortal, though the soul be: so it may be truly said, that the Son of man was not knowing, though the Son of

^s See Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 45, 132.

^t Ibid. p. 133, 134.

^u Athanas. tom. i. p. 593.

God knew every thing. Now, since Christ may speak of himself, either as Son of God or as Son of man; it is not inconsistent with truth and sincerity for him to deny that he knew what he really did know in one capacity, while he was ignorant of it in another. Our Lord says in one place, "Now I am no more in the world," John xvii. 11. and in another place, "Ye have the poor always with you, but me ye have not always," Matt. xxvi. 11, denying that he was, or should be, any longer present with his disciples: which can only be understood of his human nature and bodily presence; for in another respect he elsewhere says, "Lo, I am with you always," Matt. xxviii. 20. and, "If any man love me—my Father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him," John xiv. 23. From hence we see that our blessed Lord might, without any breach of sincerity, deny that of himself considered in one capacity, which he could not have denied in another. He denies the knowledge of the day of judgment, but in respect of his human nature; in which respect also he is said to have "increased in wisdom," Luke ii. 52. the divine Logos having with the human nature assumed the ignorance and other infirmities proper to it^x. If it be objected that the Son is here placed after the angels, and that the gradation requires that we should understand the text of a nature superior to angels; it is easily answered, that the Son of man's union with the Logos, and the particular concern the Son of man has in the last judgment, are sufficient to account for the supposed climax or gradation^y.

Upon the whole then it appears, that our Lord might very sincerely and justly say, that he knew not the day or hour of the final judgment, understanding it of himself considered in his human capacity; though at the same time, in another respect, he could not be ignorant of any thing^z. If it be pretended ^x See Mr. Boyse's very judicious account of this text, in answer to the pretences of Mr. Emlyn, who never thought fit to make any reply to that part.

^y See Dr. Bennet on the Trinity, p. 154, &c.

^z A learned gentleman has lately attempted a different solution of the difficulty arising from these texts; for which I heartily thank him. I do not dislike the proposing of several ways of coming to the same point: only I wish the author had been content with recommending one, without condemning another. He may please to consider, that we are upon the defensive only with regard to these two texts; that we prove the Son's omniscience from other texts; and that a respondent, as such, can never beg the question: not to mention that the distinction of the two natures, divine and human, is demonstrably plain from other Scriptures; that therefore our solution is very natural and obvious; further, that the Son of God, as such, and every other person whatever, is excluded, because of the words "Father only;" I answer, that the exclusive term only is not to be so strictly interpreted as to exclude what essentially belongs to the Father, and may be reckoned to him, as included in him, his WORD, or SPIRIT. It is said, Rev. xix. 12, of God the Son, that "he had "a name written, which no one (οὐδείς) knew but he himself." Now if it be reasonable and just to infer from thence, that the Father was ignorant of that name; then let it also be reasonable to infer from this place of St. Matthew, that the Son was ignorant of the day of judgment: or, if such inference be manifestly false and unjustifiable in one case, there must be something more than the bare force of the exclusive term to make it true or justifiable in the other.

From what hath been said it is manifest, that holy Scripture has by necessary consequence, and also in express terms, ascribed omniscience to the Son of God; and that the pretences against it are of no weight; being founded only on misinterpretation of texts, and misapplication of what relates to Christ in one capacity, to him considered in another.

3. I proceed, thirdly, to another divine attribute ascribed to Christ in holy Scripture, viz. omnipresence. The texts which prove it are these that follow: "Where two or three are "gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of "them," Matt. xviii. 20. "Lo, I am with you always, even "unto the end of the world^a," Matt. xxviii. 20. "By him all "things consist," Col. i. 17. These texts demonstrate that our blessed Lord is present on earth, at the same time that he is also present in heaven; that his presence reaches to all the ends of the earth, to all men living quite round the globe, to the whole system of creatures; for "by him all things consist:" as much as to say, "In him they live, and move, and have their being;" which is the most lively and emphatical description of the omnipresence of God. Christ's omnipresence is likewise intimated from the worship ordered to be paid him by men, by angels^b, by that it must be admitted with regard to Luke ii. 52. (and why not in the other place?) and that if our Saviour's dark and mystical way of speaking be sufficient to justify even so hard a supposition as that seems to be which this gentleman goes upon, it will be more than sufficient to take off all scruple with respect to so easy and so unexceptionable a solution as ours is.

^a Vid. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 239. In Joh. p. 122, 128, 419.

^b Heb. i. 6.

the whole creation^c. The same thing may certainly be inferred from his being Creator of the universe. Hence it is that the ancients do, with one voice, declare for the omnipresence of God the Son^d. Some of them indeed have been thought to have given into contrary sentiments, in their disputes with the Noëtians or Jews: but, upon careful inquiry, this appears to be only a groundless surmise; as is largely and solidly proved by the judicious and learned Bp. Bull^e.

It may perhaps be objected, that the Son's being present to all men, or even to all creatures, does not prove his omnipresence in the largest and fullest sense. To which it is sufficient to reply, that though there is not any Scripture-proof of an absolute omnipresence of the Son, extending beyond the limits of the world into I know not what imaginary extramundane spaces, yet there is full proof of his omnipresence through the whole creation: which is, to all intents and purposes, the very same thing to us with divine omnipresence; and is as high as Scripture has any where carried the omnipresence even of God the Father. Thus far I have proceeded in the proof of the divine attributes ascribed in Scripture to our Saviour Christ: the titles I have recounted and vindicated in a former discourse. Nothing now remains but

III. To sum up the force of the general argument, and to obviate such general objections as are brought to weaken our conclusion. I have left myself but little room for this: indeed, much is not needful. If the premises stand, the conclusion makes itself. Every single attribute that hath been mentioned, every single title, almost, justifies the inference, that Christ is no creature, but truly and strictly God: all together make so full, so clear, so irrefragable a demonstration of it, that one might justly wonder how any, who retain the least regard or reverence towards the sacred Writ, can make any serious doubt of it. It cannot be shewn that any one of those names, titles, attributes, and essential properties of God, was ever given, in this manner,

^c Rev. v. 8.

Si homo tantummodo Christus, quomodo adest ubique invocatus, cum hæc hominis natura non sit, sed Dei, ut adesse omni loco possit? Novat. cap. 14.

^d Just. Mart. Apol. ii. cap. 11. p. 27. ed. Ox. Irenæus, p. 190, 231, 315, ed. Bened. Clem. Alex. p. 711, 831, 840. ed. Ox. Tertull. adv. Prax. c. 23. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 239, 164. Hippolyt. Fragm. p. 45. vol. ii. Fabric.

^e Bull. Defens. Fid. Nic. sect. iv. cap. 3.

and with those circumstances, to any creature. If one or two of them (as the name God for instance) might be equivocal, yet the rest are not so; and the manner and circumstances, wherewith they are ascribed to Christ, sufficiently determine the sense of them. If titles alone are not of weight sufficient, attributes come in to strengthen and confirm them; and if any scruples remain still, creation and adoration understood of, and attributed to Christ, render the proof still more irrefragable. The strength and number of the evidences concurring to establish Christ's divinity, when fewer and less considerable might have been sufficient, is very wonderful; as if Divine Wisdom had purposely so ordered it, foreseeing what opposition would be made to it. Were it possible, by any quirk or subtilty, to elude every single evidence, yet the joint force of all together would be very considerable; because it is hardly to be imagined that, in an affair of this moment, God would ever have suffered so many plausible appearances, and specious presumptions, of a thing that is not, to stand in Scripture, for the deception even of wise and good and conscientious men. The Jewish Church were trained up to a sense of the true God by those very characters which are applied to Christ. Upon those they formed their idea of the divine Being: and would have thought it blasphemy to have ascribed the same, though by way of figure only, (in so serious a concern,) to any creature. And not they only, but all mankind must allow, that none more expressive and significant characters of God can be devised, than several of those are which are applied to Christ. If we are mistaken in this matter, it is a mistake which the Christian world, by plain force of Scripture, has, in a manner, inevitably been led into. He must be a very weak man who can imagine, that the doctrine of the Trinity could ever have come in, or could have subsisted half a century, were it not for the plain and irresistible reasons for it, appearing in holy Scripture. How the matter now stands all the Christian world over (except a few Reclaimants) is very well known. If we run up fourteen hundred years higher, or thereabout, we find the body of the Bishops and Clergy, summoned from all parts to debate this very question, determining at length as we have done, and as much deceived (if we are deceived) as we are at this day. If we look sixty years higher, and may judge of the principles of the Church at that time, from those of the two celebrated Bishops of Alexandria and Rome, with their Clergy; we still find them lying under the same fatal deception that prevails now. Go up a hundred years higher, to the middle of the second century; still, all the way as we pass, we meet with plain marks and characters of the same delusion (if it be any) overspreading the Church of Christ, at a time when miracles were not ceased, nor revelations uncommon. In short, when we have carried our searches up to the very apostolic age, we still observe manifest footsteps of the same error (if it be one) prevailing: nor can we find so much as one man of any considerable repute among Christians, whom we can certainly prove to have been free from it. Surely God had soon forsaken his heritage, and given up his Church to strong delusions, (that Church against which the gates of hell shall never prevail;) if we have been mistaken in these things. It appears however from hence, how powerful and forcible the Scripture evidences of Christ's divinity have ever been upon the minds of men: not the illiterate, unthinking, or injudicious; but the wisest, the most considerate, the brightest ornaments and the most eminent lights of the Christian Church. But our adversaries are men that can look up against all these evidences, and can harden their minds in opposition to them. Let us see what they have to plead, in order to fence off conviction, and to keep their wretched cause in any tolerable countenance, at this day.

1. To our argument, so far as respects the divine titles given to God the Son in holy Scripture, it is objected^f, that the highest titles of all, such as ὑψιστος, the Most High, or Supreme; παντοκράτωρ, the Almighty, or Supreme over all; εἰς Θεὸς καὶ πατὴρ πάντων, the one God and Father of all; εἰς Θεὸς ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα, one God of whom are all things; are never applied to the Son in Scripture. To which I answer, first, that if God the Son has not every divine title which is applied in Scripture to God the Father, yet he has more than enough to prove that he is no creature, but that he is truly, strictly, and essentially God: so that if any other high titles be ascribed to the Father, (not as Father, but as God;) those also, though not specially applied to the Son in Scripture, are virtually contained and necessarily included in those other that are expressly given him. I answer, secondly, that the title of παντοκράτωρ (Almighty) is expressly applied to God the Son in Scripture, as hath been shewn^g: and the sense of ὑψιστος (Most High, or Supreme over all) is plainly ascribed to him, Rom. ix. 5. And very probably the title itself in other Scriptures is applied to him^b, were it worth the while to insist upon a fruitless nicety, after so many and great proofs of what we maintain. As to the titles of one God and Father of all, and one God the Father of whom are all things, we should think it very strange indeed to find them applied to God the Son; because, taken all together, they are personal titles, peculiarly belonging to God the Father. It must appear very much for the advantage of our cause, that Scripture has so indifferently applied every divine title almost to Father and Son, as barely to leave no more than were proper or necessary to keep up the distinction of Persons: and it must appear as a standing monument against our adversaries, to their shame and confusion, that after we have given them every proof that can be requisite to shew that the Son is strictly God, yet none shall be thought sufficient, unless it be a proof of what we pretend not, of God the Son's being the very same Person with God the Father. This indeed is the secret meaning of all the opposition made against us: here lies the mystery of their heresy in this one false principle; that the Son cannot be the supreme God, that is, not truly, strictly, and essentially God, unless he be the very Person of the Father. Upon this bottom rest both Sabellianism and Arianism; and this is what the advocates of both have, betwixt them, been labouring to prove now for fifteen hundred years, and have met with nothing but disappointment. To conclude this article: we readily allow that the title of one God and Father of all is no where applied, either in Scripture or antiquity, to God the Son; because the Son is not the Father: but the title of the one God we prove to belong to him, as often as we prove that he is Lord and God, Jehovah, over all God blessed, and the like; for Scripture acknowledges no more Gods than one. The title of one God the Father of whom are all things, may also be peculiar to the *Father*ⁱ, because of the ^b Psalm lxxvii. 5. Vid. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 27. Athanas. p. 889. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iii. cap. 2. p. 498. Psalm lxxii. 18. Vid. Athan. p. 889. Ambros. p. 498. Luke i. 76. Vid. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iii. cap. 2. p. 498.

^f Modest Plea.

^g Serm. vi. p. 141.

ⁱ N. B. The author of Modest Plea

&c. continued is so destitute of arguments from Scripture, that he is forced to repeat this text of the Corinthians (though nothing to his purpose) perpetually; and it is to serve for an answer almost to every thing. The Son is not the one God of whom are all things, says he, personal distinguishing characters, Father, and of whom, denoting some particular manner of subsisting or operating. But if the Son be God, by whom are all things, he is essentially, though not personally, the same God with the Father; unless there be more Gods than one. But,

2. Another objection to our general argument drawn from the titles and attributes is, that they are ascribed to the Father in a higher and more eminent manner than to the Son^k. This objection is so loosely and carelessly worded, that it is not easy to fix any certain sense to it. Would but the objectors say, in plain terms, that the titles of God, or Jehovah, or Almighty, when applied to the Son, do not signify truly and strictly divine, necessarily existing, supreme over all, as when applied to the Father, we might readily know how to deal with them: or would they but say, that the attributes of eternity, omniscience, omnipresence, &c. when ascribed to the Son, signify no more than a limited duration, knowledge, presence, &c. we should thank them for speaking plain, and for giving us an opportunity of confuting what they have to plead for such rash and blasphemous assertions. But since they are pleased only to express themselves indefinitely and uncertainly, we can give them no certain answer more than this; that, supposing those titles or attributes to be ascribed in a more emphatical and eminent manner to the Father, as first Person, yet they are ascribed also to the Son in their utmost latitude and extent, and in the very same sense; (omniscience or eternity signifying neither more nor less than omnisciences or eternities, whether applied to one or to the other;) and therefore the objection from the more eminent manner, according as it is understood, is either without truth or without weight. The sum over and over. And what then? He is not that Person there stiled the one God, and particularized by his character, of whom are all things: that is, the Son is not the Father. Who pretends that he is? But he is the Lord and God by whom are all things. The Father singly is not the first cause of all creatures, but Father and Son (including always the Holy Ghost) together; as appears from that very passage. See my second Sermon, p. 31, 32, &c. The author's mixing and blending personal and essential characters together, with too artificial a confusedness, may take with some readers; but is easily seen through by men of sense. There is no more in it than this; that the Son cannot be God in the proper and strict sense, because he is a Son: whereas the contrary is the truth; he is God because he is God's proper Son, of the same nature with him. This author will never prove that unbegotten, a relative character, is the proper notion of the word God; but divine perfections, wherever they really subsist, or in whatever manner they subsist, unbegotten, begotten, or proceeding.

^k Modest Plea, p. 148.

of all is only this, that the Father is Father, and the Son is Son; one first in order, the other second. Whatever consequences necessarily follow this concession, we are very ready to admit: and it would save us a great deal of trouble, if the objectors would but try the strength of their philosophy, and put the cause upon this single question, Whether it were possible for God to have had a Son of the same nature, coequal and coeternal with him? We shall be very ready to join issue with them upon this very point; and it seems to be both a fair and a short way of ending the controversy. But if they still delight in obscurity and darkness, declining a fair open examination of their tenets, running from the point in question, screening themselves under general and ambiguous terms, insinuating what they will not say, and saying what they cannot prove: if this be the method they persist in, it will be easily seen that they seek not truth, but lie in wait to deceive; and are afraid of coming to the light, lest their errors should be made manifest.

Now to God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, be all glory for ever. Amen.

CHRIST'S DIVINITY

PROVED FROM

THE FORM OF BAPTISM.

The eighth Sermon preached April 6, 1720.

MATT. xxviii. 19.

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

THE text contains the solemn form of baptism prescribed by our blessed Lord himself, as a perpetual standing law to his Church. As soon as he had run through the great work of redemption, having completed his conquests over death and hell by his rising from the dead, he acquaints his disciples with the commencing of his mediatorial kingdom. "All power was given him both in heaven and earth." Then was fulfilled the prophecy of the royal Psalmist, who, speaking in the person of God the Father, says, "Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee. Ask of me, and I will give thee the heathen for thine inheritance, and the uttermost parts of the earth for thy possession," Ps. ii. 8. Our Lord having redeemed mankind, and thereby acquired a new and special claim to their homage and service, entered, as it were, and took possession of his purchased inheritance. The use he intended was, to bring all nations, now made his own by right of redemption, to the knowledge and worship of the true God. The honour of doing this was what no prophet or ambassador, before him, was admitted to. It was reserved to the fulness of time, for the more illustrious manifestation and more pompous reception of the Son of God. And now, since Christ himself had undertaken to draw all men unto him, the first and principal thing which all the nations of the world were to have notice of, was the obligation they lay under to three Persons, of high character and distinction, and related to each other, called by the names of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. In this consisted the sum of Christianity: on this foundation were the Apostles to erect a Church all the world over. Here, if any where, a right understanding would be highly necessary; nor could any one err more dangerously or fundamentally, than in an article of so great importance. The text informs us of the commission given to the Apostles; and we need not doubt but that it was every where faithfully and punctually executed, both by them and their successors. We have sufficient proof of the matter of fact from Church writers^a all along, and as high as Justin Martyr, who lived in or near the apostolic age, and wrote within forty years of it. It was then the constant practice of the Church to baptize in this form, pursuant to our Lord's commission; (a certain argument that this text of St. Matthew appeared in the copies then in use, as it is also now found in all the copies, and all the ancient versions;) and there is no just reason to suspect, but that baptism had been constantly administered in that very form from, and in, the times of the Apostles.

There is indeed some ground of scruple, (which the heretics^b of former times laid hold on,) arising from the history of the Acts, which no where tells us of the Apostles baptizing in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; but mentions only

^a 'Εν ὀνόματι γὰρ τοῦ πατρὸς τῶν δυνάμεων καὶ δεσποτῶν Θεοῦ, καὶ τοῦ σωτήρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, τὸ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι τότε λουτρῶν ποιοῦνται. Just. Apol. i. cap. 79. p. 116. Ox. ed.

Potestatem Regenerationis in Deum dans Discipulis, dicebat eis: Euntes docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 17. p. 208.

Novissime mandans ut tingerent in Patrem, et Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum, non in unum: nam nec semel, sed ter, ad singula nomina, in Personas singulas tinguimur. Tertull. adv. Prax. cap. 26. Vid. etiam De Baptism. cap. 13.

Dominus enim post resurrectionem Discipulos suos mittens, quemadmodum baptizare deberent, instituit et docuit, dicens; Data est mihi omnis potestas in caelo et in terra: ite ergo, et docete gentes omnes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti; insinuat Trinitatem, cujus sacramento gentes baptizarentur. Cypr. Ep. lxxiii. p. 200. ed. Ox.

Quomodo ergo quidam dicunt foris extra ecclesiam, imo contra ecclesiam, modo in nomine Jesu Christi, ubicunque et quomodocunque gentilem baptizatum remissionem peccatorum consequi posse; quando ipse Christus gentes baptizari jubeat in plena et adunata Trinitate? Cypr. Ep. lxxiii. p. 206.

^b Vid. Cyprian. Epist. ad Jubaian. p. 205, 206. ad Pompei.

their baptizing “in the name of Jesus Christ^c,” or “in the name of the Lord Jesus^d,” or “in the name of the Lord^e.” St. Cyprian, in answer to this difficulty, seems to admit the matter of fact so far, that the Apostles did baptize some in the name of Christ Jesus; but Jews only; not Gentiles, whom, he thinks, the commission peculiarly respected, and whose circumstances were something different from those of the Jews^f. Nevertheless it may be doubted, whether this was Cyprian’s solution of the difficulty, or no; some passages^g of the same epistle seeming to carry a contrary sense: and considering how unanimous most, if not all the other early writers^h of the Church have been in denying the fact, that ever the Apostles baptized in any different form from what our Lord prescribed, one may incline to think that Cyprian was of the same judgment. The most probable and most generally received account of this matter is, that the Apostles baptized all, both Jews and Gentiles, in the same form; “in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;” and that when they are said to have baptized in the name of Christ Jesus, the meaning only is, that they baptized into the faith and religion of Christ Jesus; in that method, and according to that form, which our Lord himself had prescribedⁱ. The Apostles administered Christ’s, not John’s baptism; that baptism which Christ had appointed; St. Luke expresses it briefly by baptizing “in the name of Christ;” not because it ran in his name only, but because it was instituted by his authority. Thus the practice of the Apostles is reconciled with the commission given them. As to the practice of the Christian Church after the Apostles, there can be no doubt of it, considering how many and how early records we have of it. The main thing now

^c Acts ii. 38. Comp. iii. 27.

^d Acts viii. 16. xix. 5. Comp. Rom. vi. 3.

^e Acts x. 48. xxii. 16.

^f Alia enim fuit Judæorum sub Apostolis ratio, alia est Gentilium conditio. Cypr. ad Jub. Ep. lxxiii. p. 205.

^g Jesu Christi mentionem fecit Petrus, (Act. ii. 38.) non quasi Pater omitteretur, sed ut Patri quoque Filius adjungeretur. Cyprian. ibid. p. 206.

^h Some doubt has been made of St. Ambrose as to this particular; of which see the notes to the Benedictine edition, de Sp. S. lib. i. cap.

3. p. 607. See also Mr. Bingham’s Antiquities of the Christian Church, b. xi. cap. 3.

ⁱ Τὸ μὲν εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν βαπτισθῆναι, σημαίνει ἂν τὸ κατὰ τὴν ἐντολὴν τοῦ Χριστοῦ Ἰησοῦ βαπτισθῆναι τὸν-ἴστιν, εἰς Πατέρα καὶ Υἱὸν καὶ ἄγιον Πνεῦμα. Eulogius apud Phot. cod. cclxxx. p. 1608.

In nomine Jesu Christi jussi sunt baptizari, (Act. ii. 38.) et tamen intelliguntur non baptizari nisi in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. August. contr. Maxim. lib. ii. cap. 17. p. 715. See Bull, Op. Posth. p. 850, &c.

to be inquired into is, the meaning, intent, or purport of that solemn form, "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Baptism had been an ancient custom of the Jews, long before our Saviour's appearance in the flesh^k. It was by baptism that they admitted proselytes into their religion, entering them thereby into covenant with the true God, in opposition to all the gods of the nations. This very practice our blessed Lord took up, adapting it to the like purposes; only altering the form of it, now made to run in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost^l. Had it run in the name of Christ only, one might have imagined that baptizing unto Christ had been much of the same import with baptizing unto Moses; Christ being considered as the minister and publisher of the Christian religion, in like manner as Moses was of the Mosaic institution. But since the Father himself is one of the Persons specified, into whom the nations were to be baptized, baptizing into must here bear a much higher sense; viz. entering into covenant with a Person as God, professing faith in him as such, listing one's self into his service, and vowing all obedience and submission to him. This is the most natural and obvious import of this rite of initiation, this solemn form of baptizing "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:" i. e. into the faith, service, and worship of the holy Trinity, the one true God. That this is really the case I shall endeavour to shew further, both from the reason and nature of the thing itself, and from the testimonies of the ancients.

I. We may argue the point from the nature and reason of the thing itself, which may suggest to us the following considerations:

1. That the nations were to be baptized in the name of three Persons, in the same manner, and therefore very probably in the same sense, as in the name of one. Whatever honour, reverence, or regard is paid to the Father, in this solemn rite of initiation, the same may reasonably be supposed to be paid to all three. Is he recognised as the object of worship? So are the other two ^k See Mr. Wall's Introduction to his History of Infant Baptism.

^l The Jews baptized proselytes into the name of the Father; that is, into the profession of God, whom they called by the name of Father.—It was proper among the Gentiles (to baptize) in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, that they might be hereby instructed in the doctrine of the true God. Hear this, O Arian and Socinian. Lightfoot. Op. vol ii. p. 275.

Persons likewise. Is he God and Lord over us? So are they. Are we his subjects, servants, soldiers listed under him? So are we equally listed under all. Are we hereby regenerated and made the temple of God the Father? So are we also regenerated unto the other two Persons, and are likewise made the temple of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. For what good reason can be given why the same outward act, respecting all the three, shall not carry with it the same import and significancy? Or if there be any doubt or question of what it signifies, how can we better resolve it than from what is clear and plain, so far as respects the Father; inferring it of the other two Persons from analogy and parity of circumstances?

2. To confirm which we may consider, secondly, that in the very names of Father and Son, a near relation, alliance, and unity between two of the Persons mentioned is intimated; and parity of reason will infer the like for the third. It is not said, in the name of God and his two faithful servants; nor, into God, and Christ, and the Holy Ghost; which might have suggested a thought that one only of the three was God: but it is in the name of the Father, and of the Son, (how equal and how familiar!) without any note of distinction more than that of a personal relation, carrying with it the idea of sameness of nature; as every father and son, among men, are of the same human nature with each other. It might therefore reasonably be presumed, from the wording of the very form of baptism, that the two first Persons named were equally divine: and the inference from thence would reach to the divinity of the third, to make all suitable and consistent. Besides that the epithet of Holy, and the name of Ghost, or Spirit, to which it is joined, could not but favour and countenance such an apprehension of him.

3. It may further be considered, that a new religion was to be introduced and ushered in with this solemn form of words. The Gentiles were to be taught to turn from their vanities to the living God, to renounce their idols and false gods, and so to be baptized "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of "the Holy Ghost." What more natural or obvious thought could occur to them on this occasion, than that, instead of all their deities, whom they had before bowed down to, they were now to serve, worship, and adore Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, the only true and living God? What could they imagine from this pompous and solemn proclaiming of these three Persons, in opposition to all other gods, but that these three had really that divinity which was presumed only with respect to the gods of the nations; and had a natural right to all that homage and service which men ought to pay to a divine Being? I may add, that the form running in the name, not names of those three, might insinuate that the authority of all the three was the same, their power equal, their Persons undivided, and their glory one^m.

4. Give me leave to observe further, that nothing can appear more unreasonable or unnatural than to suppose that God and two creatures are here joined together in this so solemn rite of initiation into a new religion, into the service of the living God, in opposition to all creature-worship. Acts xiv. 15. Rom. i. 25. For, as no rational account can be given of the Son and Holy Ghost's being so indifferently joined with the Father, in so public an act, and of such high importance to the salvation of all men, unless it be that all men are required to have faith in, and to pay worship and service to them also, as well as to the Father: so neither can it be reasonably imagined that they are recommended to us in any such capacity, as persons to be believed in, served, and adored, if they be creatures only, or if they be any thing else but the true and living God.

Thus far I have been arguing the point from the nature and circumstances of the thing itself, without taking in what Scripture has revealed of the nature, character, and offices of the three Persons. That indeed would be the best comment upon the form of baptism: but it must be waved here, my design being to raise a distinct argument for the divinity of Christ from the form of baptism, considered by itself; only taking in such con-

^m Ubi unum nomen audis, unus est Deus: sicut de semine Abrahæ dictum est, et exponit Paulus Apostolus: in semine tuo benedicentur omnes gentes: non dixit, in seminibus, tanquam in multis, sed tanquam in uno, et semine tuo, quod est Christus. Sicut ergo quia ubi non dicit in seminibus, docere te voluit Apostolus, quia unus est Christus: sic et hic cum dictum est in nomine, non in nominibus, quomodo ibi in semine, non in seminibus, probatur unus Deus Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus. August. in Johan. tract. 6.

Vid. Petav. de Trin. lib. ii. cap. 12.

§. 8. cap. 14. §. 4, 5, 6.

Baptisma unum: eodem enim modo, et in Patrem, et in Filium, et in Spiritum Sanctum baptizamur, et ter mergimur, ut Trinitatis unum appareat sacramentum. Et non baptizamur in nominibus Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, sed in uno nomine quod intelligitur Deus. Et miror qua consequentia in uno vocabulo, eodem opere, et eodem sacramento, naturæ diversitatem, Arius, Macedonius, et Eunomius suspicentur. Hieronym. Com. in Eph. cap. iv. p. 362. ed. Bened.

siderations as naturally arise from it, together with the sense of antiquity upon it, which I come next to examine.

II. Whatever uncertainty there may be in our reasonings on this head, (though the least that can in justice be said of them is, that they are extremely probable,) if they appear to be countenanced by the concurring sentiments of antiquity, they must then be owned to be of much greater force, and will the more readily be submitted to by all wise and considering men. The author of "Scripture Doctrine" is very right in referring us to the sentiments of the primitive Church for the true meaning of this text of St. Matthew, containing the form of baptism: though he happens, as is usual with him, to give a very lame and crude account of antiquity; interpreting the form of baptism by the Apostles' Creed, (as he pretends,) and the Creed itself as he pleases. As to the Apostles' (that is, the Roman) Creed, and whether it be a professed paraphrase upon the text of St. Matthew, I shall say more in the sequel: in the interim it will be proper to inquire into the sentiments of the earliest writers, in respect of the true and full import of the form of baptism.

Justin Martyr is the oldest writer we have, that mentions the commission to baptize "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." How he and the Christians of his time understood it, may be easily gathered from his writings. In his first Apology, he takes upon him to answer the charge of atheism, brought against the Christians by their heathen persecutors; and there he has these remarkable words: "We are called Atheists. And indeed we confess that in respect of such reputed gods, we are Atheists: but not in respect of the most true God, untainted with evil, the Father of righteousness, and soberness, and of other virtues. Him, and his Son that came from him, (and who taught us and the host of other angels that are good, being his followers and likened to him, these things^o;) and the Prophetic Spirit, we worship and adore, honouring them in spirit (in reason) and in truth^p."

ⁿ His words are: "How this text was universally understood in the primitive Church cannot be doubted, there being still extant a professed paraphrase upon it, even the Apostles' Creed; which, from the earliest times of Christianity, was, with little variation, in the several churches, the Baptismal Creed, or Profession of Faith, which all Christians were taught, on purpose that they might understand what it was they were baptized into." Clarke's Reply, p. 204.

^o See this passage justified, Bull. D. F. p. 70. Op. Posth. p. 962, 1037.

^p Ἐνθένδε καὶ ἄθεοι κεκλήμεθα. καὶ ὁμολογοῦμεν τῶν τοιούτων νομιζομένων

Here it is observable that Justin, in answer to the charge of atheism, shews both what and whom the Christians worshipped: not God the Father only, but the Son also, and the Holy Ghost. The worship of these three he opposes to the worship of the reputed gods of the Gentiles: a plain sign of his understanding baptism to be an entering into covenant with all the three; and engaging in the service, faith, and worship of them as divine: yet not as three Gods, (for all antiquity declare against it;) neither yet as one God and two creatures, (for that is contrary to the supposition of their being divine, besides that all antiquity, and Justin in particular, is against *creature-worship*¹: but as one God, the Father, with his Son and Holy Spirit. Justin does again, in the same Apology^r, assert the worship of all the three Persons; mentioning a difference of order, not of nature, amongst them. From the whole it appears that, in Justin's account, the God of the Christians is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; the same whereunto they are baptized.

Athenagoras, almost contemporary with Justin, is our next author; and he affords us still stronger and more express evidence of what I am contending for. In answer to the same charge of atheism, he breaks forth into this expression: "Who would not be astonished to hear us called Atheists, who acknowledge the Father as God, and the Son God, and the Holy Ghost; asserting their union of power (or power of union) and "distinction of order^s." Here again we may observe, that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are opposed to the heathen deities; and are also represented as distinct in respect of order, but in another respect one; and consequently not as three Gods, but as the one God of the Christians, instead of the heathen multiplicity. He makes the like answer elsewhere to the same charge of Θεὸν ἄθεοι εἶναι, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τοῦ ἀληθεστάτου, καὶ πατρὸς δικαιοσύνης καὶ σωφροσύνης, καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀρετῶν, ἀνεπιμίκτου τε κακίας Θεοῦ. ἀλλ' ἐκεῖνόν τε, καὶ τὸν παρ' αὐτοῦ υἱὸν ἐλθόντα, (καὶ διδάξαυτα ἡμᾶς ταῦτα, καὶ τὸν τῶν ἄλλων ἐπομένων καὶ ἐξομοιουμένων ἀγαθῶν ἀγγέλων στρατὸν) πνευμά τε τὸ προφητικὸν σεβόμεθα, καὶ προσκυνούμεν, λόγῳ καὶ ἀληθείᾳ τιμῶντες. Just. Apol. i. cap. 6. p. 11, 12. Ox.

¹ Τὸν Θεὸν μόνον δεῖ προσκυνεῖν. Just. Apol. i. cap. 21. Θεὸν μὲν μόνον προσκυνούμεν. Ibid. cap. 23. Since Justin declares so plainly for the worship of God alone, in the very same Apology where he declares likewise for the worship of the three Persons, it is manifest that he includes all the three in the alone God.

^r Justin. Apol. i. cap. xvi. p. 24.

^s Τίς οὖν οὐκ ἂν ἀπορήσαι, λέγοντας Θεὸν πατέρα, καὶ υἱὸν Θεόν, καὶ πνεῦμα ἄγιον, δεικνύντας αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ ἐνώσει δύναμιν, καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ τάξει διαίρεσιν, ἀκούσας ἀθέου καλουμένους. Athenag. Legat. cap. x. p. 40. Ox.

atheism, mentioning Father and Son as the God (not Gods) which the Christians worshipped^t. From hence then we may very justly infer that the Christians, in his time, did not understand the words of the form of baptism, of God and two creatures; nor of one supreme God and two inferior Gods: but of three divine Persons, and all but one God.

About the same time with Athenagoras lived the author of a profane dialogue, ascribed to Lucian. Whatever doubt there may be about the author, there is little or none about the time he lived in^u; which was the second century, towards the middle of it. Whoever he was, he appears to have been well acquainted with the Christian tenets, though a professed Pagan. He introduces, in a jeering manner, a Christian catechising an heathen; and, among other things, instructing his catechumen in the mystery of the Trinity. For to the question, Whom he should swear by? he that personates the Christian returns this answer: "By the God that reigns on high, the great, the immortal and heavenly, with the Son of the Father, and the Spirit proceeding from the Father; one in three, and three in one: take these for your Jupiter, imagine this to be your God^x." Here we see what kind of instructions used to be given to catechumens, preparatory to baptism: for it is to those that this author, while he ridicules them, plainly alludes. Here we may observe what baptizing into the three Persons meant at that time. It was receiving those three as divine, and as one supreme God. It is not one supreme God, and two inferior Gods; but Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are represented as being in the place of the one supreme Jupiter, and being all together one God.

Pass we on, next, to other testimonies of the same thing, in Christian writers of the same century. Irenæus is our next in order, about the year 173. He no where gives us any professed paraphrase upon the form of baptism: but from the creeds^y which he hath left us, with his interpretation of them; and from what he has occasionally said of the three Persons, it is very manifest

^t Οὐκ ἔσμὲν ἄθεοι, Θεὸν ἄγοντες τὸν ποιητὴν τοῦδε τοῦ παντὸς, καὶ τὸν παρ' αὐτοῦ λόγον. Athenag. cap. xxvi. p. 122. Comp. cap. xi. p. 46. cap. xxii. p. 96.

^u Vid. Bull. Def. F. Nic. p. 73. Judic. p. 32. Fabric. Biblioth. Græc. lib. iv. cap. 16. p. 504.

^x Ὑψιμίδοντα Θεόν, μέγαν, ἄμβροτον, οὐρανίωνα, υἱὸν πατρὸς, πνεῦμα ἐκ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον, ἐν ἑκ τριῶν, καὶ ἐξ ἑνὸς τρία' ταῦτα νόμιζε Ζῆνα, τὸν δὲ ἡγοῦ Θεόν. Lucian. Philopatr. p. 770. Compare p. 774.

^y Vid. Iren. lib. i. cap. 10. p. 48. lib. i. cap. 22. p. 98. lib. iii. cap. 3. p. 176.

that he (with the Church in his time) believed the Son and Holy Ghost to be inseparably united in the work of creation, and so intimate with the Father as to make (in a manner) but one self and one same with him^z. Hence then it appears how he and the Church in his time understood the form of baptism: not of one God and two creatures joined together; (for he makes Father and Son one God, and expressly denies the Son to be a creature^a, implicitly denying it also of the Holy Ghost;) but of three divine Persons inseparable from each other, the one God of the Christians.

Clemens of Alexandria, another excellent writer, contemporary with Irenæus, is a further evidence of what we are pleading for. He gives us a kind of short baptismal creed, as it seems, in these words: "ONE Father of the whole universe, and ONE WORD of the whole universe, and the Holy Ghost ONE, the same every where^b." Clemens in this passage attributes the same divine omnipresence to every Person of the sacred Trinity; which therefore he took to be really divine, and not made up of God and creature. And to shew you further that he looked upon all the three as one God, we may cite another passage from him as follows: "Let us give thanks to the only Father and Son, Son and Father, to the Son our Teacher and Master, together with the Holy Ghost, one in all respects; in whom are all things—to whom be glory both ^z Fecit ea per semetipsum; hoc est, per Verbum et per Sapientiam suam. Iren. lib. ii. cap. 30. p. 163.

Fecit ea per semetipsum; hoc est, per Verbum et Sapientiam suam. Adest enim ei semper Verbum et Sapientia, Filius et Spiritus, per quos, et in quibus, omnia libere et sponte fecit. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 20. p. 253.

Qui igitur a Prophetis adorabatur Deus vivus, hic est vivorum Deus, et Verbum ejus, qui et loquutus est Moysi, &c.—Ipse igitur Christus cum Patre vivorum est Deus, qui loquutus est Moysi, &c. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 5. p. 232.

Cum sit unus et idem Deus Pater, et Verbum ejus, semper ad assistens humano generi, &c. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 28. p. 266.

Is quidem, qui omnia fecerit, cum Verbo suo juste dicatur Deus et Dominus solus. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 8. p. 183.

Unus Deus Pater ostenditur, qui est super omnia, et per omnia, et in omnibus. Super omnia quidem Pater et ipse est caput Christi: per omnia autem Verbum et ipse est caput Ecclesiæ: in omnibus autem nobis Spiritus, &c. Iren. lib. v. cap. 18. p. 315.

Ὁ γεννητὸς καὶ πεπλασμέυος ἄνθρωπος κατ' εἰκόνα καὶ ὁμοίωσιν ἀγεννητοῦ γίνεται Θεοῦ. τοῦ μὲν πατρὸς εὐδοκούντος καὶ κελεύοντος, τοῦ δὲ υἱοῦ πράσσοντος καὶ δημιουργούντος, τοῦ δὲ πνεύματος τρέφοντος καὶ ἀξίοντος. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 38. p. 285. See this last passage explained in my Defence, &c. vol. i. p. 530.

^a Vid. Iren. p. 132, 153, 217. ed. Bened. See Defence of some Queries, vol. i. p. 515, 529.

^b Εἰς μὲν ὁ τῶν ὄλων πατὴρ· εἰς δὲ καὶ ὁ τῶν ὄλων λόγος· καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἓν, καὶ τὸ αὐτὸ πανταχοῦ. Clem. Alex. p. 123.

“now and for ever^c.” When he says of the three Persons, that they are in all respects (or entirely) one, he means that they are one God; as is plain from another passage, where, speaking of Father and Son as being one, he explains it by their being one God^d. It is therefore exceeding clear that, according to this writer, Christians were supposed to be baptized, not into God and two creatures^e, but into Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, three divine Persons, one God. Thus far for testimonies of the second century, all within less than one hundred years of the last of the Apostles.

I pass on to Tertullian, at the head of the third century. There can be no question made of his sentiments in the present case. He tells us plainly, that the Father is God, and the Son God, and the Holy Ghost God, and every one singly God^f, and all together make one God^g. He says further, that this doctrine is, in a manner, the prime article in the Gospel, the very sum and substance of Christianity^h. Undoubtedly he understood the solemn form of baptism to contain that doctrine which he teaches; and that being baptized in the name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, was receiving those three as one God, vowing all obedience, adoration, and homage to them as such. Indeed this writer, speaking of the three Persons, and the nature of Christian baptism, makes every Person equally the object of our faith and hope, the witness of our belief, and surety for our salvationⁱ.

Another celebrated writer, contemporary with Tertullian, is Hippolytus. He cites the very form of baptism, in his dispute against Noëtus, (as Tertullian also does against Praxeas,) in proof of the distinct personality of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; but expresses withal his sentiments of the divinity

^c Εὐχαριστεῖν τῷ μόνῳ πατρὶ καὶ νίῳ, νίῳ καὶ πατρὶ, παιδαγωγῶν καὶ διδασκάλῳ νίῳ, σὺν καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι πάντα τῷ ἐνὶ ἐν ᾧ τὰ πάντα.—ὃ ἡ δόξα καὶ νῦν, καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. Clem. Pæd. lib. iii. p. 311.

^d Ἐν γὰρ ἄμφω, ὁ Θεός. Clem. Pæd. lib. i. cap. 8. p. 135.

^e This is further manifest from Clemens's declaring for the worship of God only, protesting against all creature-worship; (see p. 55, 59, 809, 825.) and yet admitting the worship of all the three Persons, p. 84, 311, 851.

^f Pater Deus, et Filius Deus, et Spiritus Sanctus Deus, et Deus unusquisque. Tert. contr. Præz. cap. 13.

^g Pater et Filius et Spiritus, tres crediti unum Deum sistunt. Ibid. cap. 31.

^h Ibid. cap. 31.

ⁱ Fides—obsignata in Patre, Filio, et Spiritu Sancto—habemus per benedictionem eisdem arbitros fidei, quos et sponsores salutis—sub tribus et testatio fidei, et sponso salutis pignorentur, &c. Tertull. de Baptism. cap. 6.

of each Person. The greatest part of the paragraph relating to this head will be worth reciting. "If the WORD was with God, and himself was God, some perhaps may object, What, does the Apostle then make two Gods? No; I will not say two Gods, but one; yet two Persons.—The Father one, but the Persons two, because of the Son; and the third is the Holy Ghost.—Their harmony in operation (or administration) brings all up to one God, for God is one.—The Father above all, the Son through all, the Holy Ghost in all. We can no otherwise think of God as one, but as believing really in the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost.—The Word of the Father, conscious of the economy (of the three Persons), and that it was the will of the Father to be thus (or under this conception) honoured, and not otherwise, gave his disciples orders, after his resurrection, to this purpose: 'Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost:' signifying, that whosoever should leave out any one of the three, should come so far short of honouring God perfectly; for by this Trinity the Father is honoured. The Father gave orders (for the creation), the Son wrought (in it), and the Holy Ghost manifested^k." From this passage of Hippolytus we learn these things: that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are three real Persons; that they are also divine Persons: and that they are not three Gods, but one God, by an ineffable union of power, presence, and operation. We learn also that this very doctrine, of such a Trinity in Unity, was intended by our Saviour in the form of baptism, and given in commission to his disciples, to be by them taught and inculcated as a matter of the utmost importance.

Our next author is Origen, who, speaking of baptism, says, "that it is, by virtue of the invocations there made, the spring

^k Εἰ δὲ οὖν ὁ λόγος πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, Θεὸς ὢν, τὶ οὖν φήσειεν ἂν τις δύο λέγειν Θεούς; δύο μὲν οὐκ ἔρω Θεοὺς ἀλλ' ἢ ἓνα, πρόσωπα δὲ δύο—πατὴρ μὲν γὰρ εἷς, πρόσωπα δὲ δύο, ὅτι καὶ ὁ υἱός, τὸ δὲ τρίτον τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα.—Οἰκονομία συμφωνίας συνάγεται εἰς ἓνα Θεόν. εἷς γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός.—ὁ ὢν πατὴρ ἐπὶ πάντων, ὁ δὲ υἱὸς διὰ πάντων, τὸ δὲ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἐν πᾶσιν. ἄλλως τε ἓνα Θεὸν νομίσαι μὴ δυνάμεθα, εἰ μὴ ὄντως πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ καὶ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι πιστεύσωμεν—γινώσκων οὖν ὁ πατρῶος

λόγος τὴν οἰκονομίαν καὶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς, ὅτι οὐκ ἄλλως βούλεται δοξάζεσθαι ὁ πατὴρ ἢ οὕτως, ἀναστὰς παρέδωκεν τοῖς μαθηταῖς λέγων' πορευθέντες μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη, βαπτίζοντες αὐτοὺς εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ, καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος, δεκνύων ὅτι πᾶς ὁ ἂν ἐν τῷ τούτων ἐκλήπῃ, τελείως Θεὸν οὐκ ἐδόξασεν. διὰ γὰρ τριάδος ταύτης πατὴρ δοξάζεται. πατὴρ γὰρ ἠθέλησεν, υἱὸς ἐποίησεν, πνεῦμα ἐφανερώσεν. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. cap. xiv. p. 16. Fabric.

“and fountain of spiritual graces, to every one that dedicates “himself to the divinity (or Godhead) of the adorable Trinity¹.” All I have to observe upon this passage of Origen is, 1st, That he supposes baptism to be a dedicating ourselves to the service and worship of the whole Trinity, θεότητι, or, as it is otherwise read, θειότητι, to the Godhead, strictly; or, at least, to the divine majesty, of the adorable Trinity. 2ndly, That he supposes the spiritual graces or influences to descend from all the three Persons, by virtue of our invocation of them; which perhaps may mean only by virtue of their being solemnly named; or if it means more, our argument is so much the stronger. The sum is, that in baptism we recognise the divinity of every Person mentioned, and acknowledge our obligations of duty, and thankfulness, and adoration towards all: which cannot be made sense of, if one only of the three be supposed to be God, and the other two creatures.

I shall subjoin to these testimonies from the Ante-Nicene Fathers, a remarkable passage of St. Cyprian, of the third century. Arguing for the invalidity of heretical baptisms, he asks, How any person, so baptized, can be supposed to obtain remission of sins, and become the temple of God? For, says he, “of what God (of which of the divine Persons) is he made “the temple? Is it of (God) the Creator? He cannot be “so without believing in him. Is it of Christ? Impossible that “any one should be his temple that denies Christ to be God. Is “it then of the Holy Ghost? But since those three are one, how “is it possible he should be at peace with the Holy Ghost, “while he is at enmity either with the Father or the Son^m?”

¹ Τῷ ἐμπερέχοντι ἑαυτὸν τῇ θεότητι τῆς προσκυνητῆς τριάδος διὰ τῆς δυνάμεως τῶν ἐπικλήσεων, χαρισμάτων ἀρχὴν ἔχει καὶ πηγὴν. Origen. cit. apud Basil. de Spir. Sanct. cap. 29.

This passage is something differently read in our present copies of Origen, though the sense is much the same.

Τῷ ἐμπερέχοντι ἑαυτὸν τῇ θεότητι τῆς δυνάμεως τῶν τῆς προσκυνητῆς τριάδος ἐπικλήσεων ἐστὶν ἡ χαρισμάτων θείων ἀρχὴ καὶ πηγὴ. Orig. Comm. in Joh. p. 124. ed. Huet.

Compare the following citations from Pamphilus's Apology:

Ex quibus omnibus discimus tantæ et auctoritatis et dignitatis substantiam

Spiritus Sancti, ut salutare baptismum non aliter nisi excellentissimæ omnium Trinitatis auctoritate, id est, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti cognominatione compleatur.—Nunquam utique in unitate Trinitatis, id est, Dei Patris inconvertibilis, et Filii ejus, etiam ipse Spiritus Sanctus haberetur; nisi quia et ipse semper erat Spiritus Sanctus. Pamph. Apolog. p. 232. ed. Bened.

^m Si baptizari quis apud hæreticos potuit; utique et remissam peccatorum consequi potuit. Si peccatorum remissam consecutus est, et sanctificatus est, et templum Dei factus est; quæro cujus Dei? Si Creatoris, non potuit qui in eum non credidit:

From this passage of Cyprian we may remark the following particulars :

1. That being baptized into Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, was being baptized into three divine Persons, or three Persons each of which is God.

2. That whoever is validly and savingly baptized does thereby become the temple of each divine Person, and of consequence the temple of God.

3. The reason why such person is not said to become the temple of Gods, in the plural, but of God, in the singular, is because the three are one, or one God; as Cyprian clearly enough intimates, and his master Tertullian expressly asserts, as before shewn.

4. That the denying Christ (and for the same reason any other of the Persons) to be God, is, in Cyprian's account, making the baptism of no effect: so nearly is the sacrament itself, and the salvation of the recipient concerned in the faith of the divine and adorable Trinity. Upon the whole it is manifest, that St. Cyprian understood the form of baptism, of three divine Persons, all one God: which is utterly repugnant to the faith of such as understand it of God and two creatures. To Cyprian's, I shall add the testimonies of two celebrated bishops of the same age, about the year 259; one of Rome, and the other of Alexandria.

Dionysius, Bishop of Rome, in a letter, (wrote, very probably, with the advice and consent of his clergy synodically convened,) very particularly explains the doctrine of the Trinity, as professed at that time. He calls it the most august and venerable doctrine of the Church; and the Trinity of Persons, the divine Trinity. He blames those who divide the sacred Unity into three separate hypostases, thereby making, in a manner, three Gods; being the opposite extreme to Sabellius, who made but one Person. At the same time he blames those as much, that presumed to make a creature of God the Son, and censures it as blasphemy in a very high degree; understanding the word creature according to the common acceptation, and as all men of plain good sense have ever understood it. The sum of his doctrine he gives us in these words: "The divine Logos must si Christi, nec hujus fieri potest templum, qui negat Deum Christum: si Spiritus Sancti, cum tres unum sint, quomodo Spiritus Sanctus placatus

esse ei potest, qui aut Patris, aut Filii inimicus est? Cypr. ad Jubai. Ep. lxxiii. p. 203. Comp. Concil. Carth. n. xxxix. p. 235.

“ of necessity be united to the God of the universe; and the “ Holy Ghost must abide and dwell in God; and the divine “ Trinity must of necessity be conceived to be gathered “ together, and collected, as it were, into one head, namely, into “ the God of the universe, the Almighty.” From hence it is clear, that the Catholics of that time apprehended that they were baptized into the faith of three divine Persons, not of God and two creatures; and yet that those three were not three Gods, but by reason of their most intimate and ineffable relation to each other, and their union in one head, were one God. The other Dionysius briefly expresses the same thing thus: “ We “ extend the Unity, without dividing it, into a Trinity; and “ again, we contract the Trinity, without taking from it, “ into Unity.” It may be rendered more briefly thus: “ The “ undivided Monad we extend to a Triad; and again, the “ undiminished Triad we collect into a Monad.” It is very plain that those primitive Fathers did not answer the question, how God is one, as some moderns do, by leaving out the Son and the Holy Ghost, and placing the Unity in the Father only: but their way was to take in all the three Persons, and so to make up the Monad of the undivided Triad.

Having traced the sentiments of the earliest writers upon this head, I may now venture to say, with somewhat better reason than the author of “ Scripture Doctrine,” that, “ How this text (of “ St. Matthew) was universally understood in the primitive “ Church cannot be doubted;” there being still extant so many writings of the ancients discovering their sentiments of it: which therefore may serve as the best comment, or paraphrase, not only upon that text, but upon the Creeds too, which ought to be interpreted by the same rule, as I shall shew presently. I shall not add any testimonies of Post-Nicene Fathers, however many and weighty, because their sentiments are well known, and our adversaries will readily give them up to us in the present question. I shall only observe, that the sense which I have ο Ἠνώσθαι γὰρ ἀνάγκη τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν θεῖον λόγον. Ἐμφιλοχωρεῖν δὲ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐνδιατᾶσθαι δεῖ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἤδη καὶ τὴν θεῖαν τριάδα εἰς ἓνα, ὥσπερ εἰς κορυφὴν τινα, τὸν Θεὸν τῶν ὄλων τὸν παντοκράτορα λέγω, συγκεφαλαοῦσθαι τε καὶ συνάγεσθαι πᾶσα ἀνάγκη. Dionys. Rom. apud Athanas.

 vol. i. p. 231.

ρ Ἡμεῖς εἰς τε τὴν τριάδα τὴν μονάδα πλατύνομεν ἀδιαίρετον, καὶ τὴν τριάδα πάλιν ἀμείωτον εἰς τὴν μονάδα συγκε-φαλοῦμεθα. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. vol. i. p. 255.

ἡ The Council of Constantinople, in the year 382, in their Synodical Epistle, speaking of the Nicene faith, do in the main express the sense of given of the form of baptism was, in the fourth century, so well known and undisputed, that the Emperor Julian (called the Apostate) made it an argument against Christ and his religion^r, that whereas Moses and the Prophets had said, "Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve;" Christ in contradiction thereto (for so the Apostate pretended) had ordered his disciples to baptize "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Though from what hath been said I take the point I intended to have been sufficiently proved, yet it may not be improper to throw in two or three general remarks to confirm it still further.

I. The first may be taken from the known custom of the primitive Church, in requiring the competentes, or candidates for baptism, first to make a solemn renunciation of idolatry and false worship^s, under the general title of the Devil and all his pomps, &c., and then immediately^t after to profess their faith in, and adherence to, God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. A profession of faith was, from the beginning, always required of persons before baptism: we have plain examples of, and allusions to, something of that kind, even in Scripture itself^u. Upon these instances the Christian Church proceeded. At first, very probably, the profession of faith went no further than the minutes given in the form of baptism: but in a little time it came to be enlarged, as heresies or other incidents gave occasion. Tertullian derives it from immemorial custom, that the answers in baptism were somewhat enlarged beyond what Christ himself had expressly determined^x. It is not improbable that he intended this of the enlarging of the baptismal profession, all the Post-Nicene Catholics as follows:

Ταύτην γὰρ καὶ ὑμῖν καὶ ἡμῖν καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς μὴ διαστρέφουσι τὸν λόγον τῆς ἀληθοῦς πίστεως, συναράσκειν δεῖ. ἦν μὲν ποτὲ πρεσβυτάτην τε οὖσαν, καὶ ἀκόλουθον τῷ βαπτισματι, καὶ διδάσκουσαν ἡμᾶς πιστεῦειν εἰς τὸ ὄνομα τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ, καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος. δηλαδὴ θεότηρός τε καὶ δυνάμεως καὶ οὐσίας μιᾶς τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ, καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος πιστενομένης, &c. Theod. E. H. lib. v. cap. 9. p. 210.

Particular testimonies of Post-Nicene Fathers may be seen collected in Petavius de Trin.

^r Vid. Cyril. contr. Julian. lib. ix. p. 291, 294.

^s Quid erit summum atque præcipuum, in quo Diabolus et pompæ et angeli ejus censeantur, quam idololatria? Tertull. de Spect. cap. iv. p. 74.

See Bingham, Christian Antiquities, book xi. ch. 7.

^t Vid. Cyril. Hieros Catech. Mystag. i. p. 283. Apostol. Const. lib. vii. cap. 41.

^u Acts viii. 12, 37. 1 Pet. iii. 21.

^x Amplius aliquid respondentem quam Dominus in Evangelio determinavit. Tertull. de Coron. cap. iii. p. 102.

See Wall's Hist. of Infant Baptism, part ii. c. 9. p. 495.

or creed, beyond that form of baptism which our Lord himself had prescribed; and which probably was, at first, the occasion and the subject-matter of the baptismal creed, as well as the rule and measure of it. This I offer only as conjecture. Certain however it is, that a profession of faith in, and adherence to, God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, immediately followed upon the abrenunciation of the Devil, &c. which is a confirmation to us, that as, on one hand, they renounced all idolatry and false gods; so their aggregation, (if I may so call it,) or joining of themselves to these three Persons, was intentionally receiving them as the true and only God.

2. I shall subjoin a second consideration, drawn from the principles and practices of the ancient heretics. No sooner did they alter (many of them) or corrupt the true faith in the blessed Trinity, but they thought of altering the form of baptism likewise; lest it should appear inconsistent with their novel and pernicious tenets. This was remarkably seen in the Tritheists^y, and Praxeans^z, and Valentinians^a, who had all corrupted the true original faith in the Trinity. To conceal their shame and self-condemnation, and to propagate their erroneous principles, they innovated in the form of baptism; which was one of the best fences to the true faith, and a standing bar to most heresies. The like was afterwards practised by Eunomius, who was a thoroughpaced Arian, but a man of shrewd parts, and who readily perceived that it might be an easier matter to bring the very form of baptism into disuse, (though that was very shocking too,) than to root out of men's minds the Catholic and only true sense of it. That form was as great an eyesore to him and his followers, as a Nicene or an Athanasian Creed, or as Doxologies and Liturgies, expressing the Catholic doctrine, are to some now. They were forced at length to alter the instituted and only regular form of baptism for others of their own devising; which might be more consistent with, or favourable to, their novel opinions. Sometimes they chose to baptize in the name of the Father uncreate, the Son created by the Father, and the Holy Ghost created by the Son^b. At other times they were content, more briefly and with less offence, to baptize into the ^y Apostol. Can. 39.

^z Vid. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 26.
Pseudo-Ignat. Ep. and Philip. cap. 1.
Apost. Can. 50. cum Not. Cotel. et Bevereg.

^a Vid. Iren. lib. i. cap. 2. p. 94.

^b Vid. Epiphani. Hæres. 76.

death of Christ^c; or in the name of the Father, by the Son, in the Holy Ghost. All the while, it is observable that the Catholics never varied the form; nor so much as inserted or added any thing by way of explication, or in favour of their principles. Either it must be said that they had no need to do it, the form itself being so plainly and clearly on their side; or else that they were the more pious and modest men, and durst not attempt any the least innovation in a sacred law and institution of Christ. Our modern Arians^d have not yet attempted, that I know of, to alter the form of baptism: but they hope to be able to disguise or elude the ancient Catholic sense of it. I know not whether it might provoke our pity or our indignation most, to find some endeavouring to run down the truly primitive interpretation of it, under the notion of new scholastic hypotheses^e; and, at the same time, vending their own novelties and heterodoxies under the venerable name of antiquity. The pretence is, that the Apostles' Creed (as commonly called) is a professed paraphrase upon the form of baptism. And what if it were, would it do those gentlemen any service? Or is the faith therein contained any thing akin to theirs, or so much as consistent with it? But I shall beg leave to examine this pretence largely and distinctly once for all, and then conclude. It will be necessary to premise some things, first, of Creeeds in general, and, secondly, of that Creed called the Apostles' Creed in particular.

I. Of Creeeds in general. It is a mistake to imagine that Creeeds were, at first, intended to teach, in full and explicit terms, all that should be necessary to be believed by Christians. They were designed rather for hints and minutes of the main credenda, to be recited by catechumens before baptism: and they were purposely contrived short, that they might be the more easily retained in memory, and take up the less time in reciting. Creeeds, very probably, at first, were so far from being paraphrases or explications of the form of baptism, (or of Scripture texts,) that they went no further, or very little further, than the form itself, and wanted as much explaining and paraphrasing, in order to be rightly and distinctly understood, as any other

^c Socrat. E. H. lib. v. cap. 24. Theod. Hær. Fab. lib. iv. cap. 3.

^d Mr. Emlyn, indeed, is for laying baptism itself aside, among the posterity of baptized Christians; which is doing the business at once. (See his Tracts, p. 429, &c.) But I know not whether I am to reckon him in the number of the Arians.

^e See Dr. Clarke's Reply, p. 203.

words or forms could do. Hence it was that the catechumens were to be instructed in the Creed, previously to baptism, for many days together. Jerome says, for forty days^f; and particularly mentions the doctrine of the Trinity as the subject-matter of instruction for all that time. § The author of the Apostolical Constitutions gives us a summary of what the catechumens were generally taught, previously to baptism: and among the heads of instruction there intimated, the first and principal relates to the doctrine of the Trinity. Cyril of Jerusalem has left us a whole course of Catechetical Lectures, which he drew up for the use of those that stood candidates for baptism: and there we find that he is very large and particular in explaining those parts of the Creed, which concern the nature, character, and offices of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Creeds would have been of small use to catechumens, without this method of preparatory instructions: and yet it seems to have been solely for the use of such that Creeds were originally intended; being first used only in the office of baptism, and but by degrees taken in to make a part of the common and daily Liturgies of the Church^h. From hence we see the reason why Creeds were no larger, nor more explicit; being but a kind of recapitulation of what the catechumens had been taught more at large, the main heads whereof were committed to memory, and publicly recited, and so became a Creed. A short summary of credenda might then be sufficient, after the catechumens had been fully and particularly instructed in the sense of every article. I shall observe further, that as Creeds became gradually enlarged, it was rather by the addition of new articles, (new I mean with respect to the Creeds, and their insertion into them, though believed by the faithful from the beginning,) than by a more explicit opening of the older, except in some particular cases. The reason of which seems to be, that explications of former articles might ordinarily be left to the catechists to supply by way of catechetical instruction. It was sufficient for Creeds to have hinted what was most material, and to abound in matter, rather than in words, to answer the use intended. As heresies

^f Consuetudo autem apud nos istiusmodi est, ut his qui baptizandi sunt, per quadraginta dies, publice tradamus sanctam et adorandam Trinitatem. Hieron. ad Pammach. Epist.

xxxviii. p. 314.

§ Apost. Const. lib. vii. cap. 39. p. 378. Cot.

^h See Mr. Bingham's Christian Antiquities, book x. ch. 4. p. 117.

gave occasion, new articles were inserted in, or added to, the Creeds : not that they were originally of greater importance than any other articles omitted, but the opposition made to some doctrines rendered it the more necessary to insist upon an explicit belief and profession of them. To instance in the Jerusalem Creed, the oldest, it may be, of any that is extant¹. The article of the Trinity was undoubtedly in it from the beginning, and perhaps none other; and that expressed thus briefly, "I believe in God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost." Baptism of repentance, remission of sins, Catholic Church, resurrection of the flesh, life everlasting, are so many new articles, probably, added afterwards, as there was occasion. The rest are insertions and explications, giving a more particular description of the nature, character, and offices of the three Persons of the ever blessed Trinity : and probably these additions and illustrations came in gradually, one after another, as occasion served, in opposition to the attempts of those that endeavoured to alter, mutilate, corrupt, or misrepresent the Catholic faith. Other particulars there omitted may be as necessary points of faith, as some there mentioned : but those were more particularly necessary to be insisted on, at that time and in those circumstances. Which I the rather hint, that Creeds may not be taken for complete catalogues of fundamentals, which they are not : (for indeed we shall hardly find two that have exactly the same articles, neither more nor less :) but for such short summaries of the Christian faith, as were most proper to be inculcated before baptism, as an introduction to the right understanding and professing the whole of the Christian religion. I have not room to explain myself so largely upon this head as the thing deserves ; but I shall give one example to illustrate the truth of the observation. The article of life everlasting was, very probably, wanting for some centuries in the Creeds of Rome and Aquileia^k. Yet who can pretend to say, that that was not as necessary and fundamental an article of faith, as any is or can be? But its being so easy, and obvious to every Christian, and hardly at all disputed, might be the reason why, however necessary it was to believe it, it was not thought necessary to make any explicit mention of it in those Creeds. Having premised those few things of Creeeds in general, I proceed next to the Apostles' Creed in particular.

¹ See Bull. Judic. p. 48, 56, &c.

^k Vid. Voss. de Trib. Symb. Dissert. i. Thes. xliii. p. 29. Fell. Not. in Epist. Cyprian. lxx. p. 190.

2. It is well known to learned men, that the Creed, called the Apostles', is no other than the Roman Creed. "It has obtained the name of the Apostolic Creed," as a learned and accurate author observes¹, "for no greater or other reason than this: It was a custom to call those churches in which any Apostle had personally taught, especially if he had resided there any long time, or had died there, Apostolic Churches. Of these there were a great many in the eastern parts; Jerusalem, Corinth, Ephesus, Antioch, &c. but in the western parts, none but Rome.—So that any one that in the western parts of the world spoke of the Apostolic Church, was supposed to mean Rome—and so their Bishop came to be called the Apostolic Bishop; their see the Apostolic see, their faith the Apostolic faith, and, among the rest, the Creed that they used the Apostolic Creed, now called the Apostles'." The Creed then of the Apostles (as it is particularly called, though other Creeeds might as justly have, and really have had the name of the Apostles' Creed) is certainly no other than the Creed of one particular Church, the Church of Rome; and is neither so old, (taken altogether,) nor of so great authority as the Nicene Creed itself: it is but imposing on the unlearned reader to recommend it as a professed paraphrase, and the most early of any, upon the text of St. Matthew, when indeed it is no professed paraphrase at all; or if it be, there is still no reason to prefer it to other, as valuable and as ancient, Creeeds, which have the articles of the divinity of the Son and Holy Spirit more full and express; or to the continued testimonies of Church writers, which, after all, make a better and a juster paraphrase upon the text of St. Matthew, than either the Roman, or any other Creed, or than all the Creeeds put together. For, indeed, the early Creeeds being designedly brief and concise, full of matter, contrived rather to take in many particulars, than to dwell much upon any one, it is not to be wondered at, if they be not so explicit in this or that article; especially considering that some Churches, particularly the Roman, were less infested with heresies than others, and therefore needed not so long a Creed; and considering further, that whatever mistakes might otherwise have happened to arise, through the brevity and conciseness of the Creeds themselves, they were effectually prevented by previous catechetical instructions, explaining more distinctly and fully what was but briefly hinted in the Creeds. To conclude this head: as to the Roman Creed, there is no reason to lay any more stress upon it than upon the Creeds of Irenæus, Tertullian, or Origen; or the Creed of Jerusalem, &c. all of them, probably, as old or older than the Roman: nor is it to be expected that every Creed, or any Creed designed only for the office of baptism, should teach, in explicit terms, all that is necessary to be believed by Christians. Yet, after all, even the Roman (called the Apostles' Creed, short as it is, when rightly understood, is diametrically opposite to the Arian principles; and, if it must be called a paraphrase, is such a paraphrase on the text of St. Matthew as sufficiently confirms the sense which I have given of it. Our Saviour Christ is, in the Roman Creed, characterised under the title of μονογενής, or only-begotten of the Father. The meaning of that title or character was well known to the compilers of that Creed, and to the primitive catechists of the Church, who would not fail to acquaint the catechumens with it. The ancients are unanimous in understanding Christ's sonship of his divine nature. To call him the only-begotten, or the Son, of God the Father, was, in their account, declaring him to be of the same nature with God the Father; as truly God, as the Son of man is truly man^m. Hence therefore it is manifest that the Roman Creed, though briefly, yet fully sets forth the divinity of Christ, as has been shewn more at large by Bishop Bullⁿ. And the learned Stillingfleet, who well understood this matter, had good reason to say, "That although the Apostles' Creed does not in express words declare the divinity of the "three Persons in the unity of the divine essence; yet taking

¹ Mr. Wall's Hist. of Infant Baptism, part ii. ch. 9. p. 507.

^m Unigenitus ut solus ex Deo genitus proprie de vulva cordis ipsius. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 7.

Hunc ex Deo prolatum didicimus, et prolatione generatum, et idcirco Filium Dei et Deum dictum, ex unitate substantiæ. Tertull. Apol. cap. 21.

Πρωτότοκος ὢν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ Θεὸς ὑπάρχει. Just. Mart. Apol. i. p. 123. Comp. Dial. p. 183, 184, 364, 371.

Ὁ θεῖος λόγος ὁ φανερώτατος ὄντως Θεός, ὁ τῷ Δεσπότη τῶν ὅλων ἐξισωθεὶς, ὅτι ἦν υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ. Clem. Alex. p. 86.

Πρῶτον γέννημα εἶναι τῷ πατρὶ, οὐχ ὡς γενόμενον—ἐνὸς ὄντος τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ. Athenag. p. 38.

Θεὸς οὖν ὢν ὁ λόγος καὶ ἐκ Θεοῦ πεφυκώς, &c. Theoph. Antioch. p. 130.

Ut enim præscripsit ipsa natura hominem credendum esse qui ex homine sit: ita eadem natura præscribit et Deum credendum esse qui ex Deo sit. Novat. cap. 11.

ⁿ Bull. Judic. Eccles. p. 36, &c.

“ the sense of those articles as the Christian Church understood them from the Apostles’ times, then we have as full and clear evidence of this doctrine, as we have that we received the Scriptures from them.” If then we are to learn from the Apostles’ Creed how the words of the form of baptism were universally understood in the primitive Church, we must understand the words of that form in the same sense as those articles of the Creed were universally understood in the primitive Church. For to pretend that the form of baptism is to be interpreted from the Creed, as understood by the primitive Church; and at the same time to put a novel construction upon the Creed itself, is such an affront to common sense, and such an abuse of the readers, as one shall seldom meet with among men of letters.

Upon the whole, these things are evident; 1. That the sense of the primitive Church, in the articles concerning Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, may be certainly known otherwise than from the Creeds. 2. That the Creeds themselves ought to be interpreted according to that sense so known, having been so understood from the beginning, or from the time of their compiling^p. 3. That by laying of ancient testimonies together, and comparing of evidences, we have full and clear proof that the primitive Church never imagined baptism to run in the name of the Father only as God, and of the two other Persons as creatures; but in the name of three Persons, every one God, and all together the one God of Christians.

And now, my Christian brethren, what remains but to exhort and warn you, as you tender your everlasting salvation, to abide evermore in that faith whereunto you have been baptized, and which alone can give you any reasonable confidence, or hope of assurance towards God. Remember those who have gone before you, the Apostles and primitive martyrs and confessors, “ whose faith follow, considering the end of their conver-

^o Stillfleet on the Trinity, ch. ix. p. 229.

^p N. B. A late writer (Modest Plea, &c. continued, p. 54.) says, that Dr. W. (speaking of the Creeds) is forced to add, “ as interpreted by those that recite them;” and the reason of it, he says, is, “ because the oldest Creeds mention nothing of those matters,” i. e. the eternity and consubstantiality of God the Son. To which I answer, 1. That I had good reason to refer to the primitive writings for the interpretation of Creeds; especially at this distance, when unlearned readers may the more easily be imposed upon by a novel sense put upon them. 2. That this writer betrays his ignorance of the oldest Creeds; which, if they do not explicitly declare those articles, yet all, or most of them, do it implicitly: Irenæus’s, Tertullian’s, Origen’s, Jerusalem Creed, Apostles’, &c.

“sation. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever. Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive.” What have they done, by reviving antiquated heresies, but disturbed the minds of the simple, raised confusion and distraction amongst many, and given a handle to Libertines, Deists, and Atheists, to insult and to blaspheme? What is there in Arianism, either of truth, or even of probability, to make us amends for these things? I mention not the daily inroads made upon Christian simplicity and godly sincerity; the wiles and artifices, dissimulation and disguises, by which it was at first promoted and propagated, and without which it cannot any where subsist. To this very day the patrons of it have no other way left, but to conceal and cover its deformity as much as possible; stifling of evidences that make against it, misrepresenting the truth of history, taking advantage of ambiguous terms, keeping off in generals, not daring so much as to own the certain and inevitable consequences of their principles, hardly the principles themselves; not trusting either to a fair, open, and regular examination, but shrinking always from the very point in question; opposing, objecting, cavilling perpetually against the orthodox scheme, but taking little or no care, either to answer, or so much as to mention, the main difficulties and inconsistencies visible in their own. For the truth of this I appeal to all who have been any thing curious observers of the rise, and progress, and present state of this heresy amongst us. They must not blame us for calling their doctrine heresy, which it really is, when they have the face so often to call ours new scholastic hypotheses, which it really is not. Names of reproach might have been spared on both sides, had not they began, and set us an example. Had they been contented modestly to propose their doubts, with their reasons for them; had they fairly and ingenuously set forth the arguments on our side of the question in their full strength, and then brought their own to set against them, and balance them; had they been willing to acknowledge, (what is undoubtedly true,) that we have many and great reasons such as must weigh even with wise and good men, for what we believe and profess; much from Scripture, much from antiquity, and countenanced, now many centuries, by the sober and thinking part of the Christian world; had they freely owned this, giving at the same time their reasons on the other side, and leaving impartial men, after a fair and full hearing, to judge which should outweigh: I say, had they took this reasonable and ingenuous method, like modest inquirers after truth, I know not whether any fair and candid man would have condemned, or not have commended them for it. But when nothing less will serve the turn but misrepresenting us, as following only new scholastic hypotheses; when antiquity is searched only to pick out such passages as seem to make for one side, and much art used even to make them seem so; when our main strength from Scripture and from antiquity is, in a manner, totally concealed and disguised, and the principal objections and difficulties of their own scheme passed over in silence; the orthodox, all the while, being represented as a parcel of men overrun with prejudice and bigotry, preferring human and modern decisions, the words of men, before the infallible word of God; full of contradiction and absurdity, and bereft, in a manner, of common sense: I say, when this is the method which some please to take to revive an old heresy, such rude attacks upon our common faith, though we had less to say for it, are never to be justified; nor indeed are they capable of any kind excuse, when the men are so far from proving that we have been mistaken in this matter, that they dare not trust the merits of the cause to a fair, open, and calm hearing. They dare not venture to set their scheme in its true colours and naked simplicity against ours, fearing lest impartial men should too plainly see what advantage we are sure to have upon a just comparison. It is ungenerous and mean in any cause, (in this it is impious,) not to suffer all that can justly be pleaded on the opposite side to appear in its full light and strength. What harm can there be in admitting what is truth and fact, suppose it relate either to Scripture or antiquity? Let the evidences be produced, at least; the weight of them may be considered afterwards. And what if Arianism should not happen to prevail in this so fair and just a method? How can it be remedied? Must it be obtruded upon us, true or false, right or wrong, with or without reason? If there really be not evidence sufficient for it, or if it must be overpowered by contrary evidence, then this we may certainly depend on, either that the Arian doctrine is false, or, at the lowest, that no man can be obliged to think it true: which consideration alone may be enough to satisfy any conscientious man in rejecting it, in its present circumstances.

To conclude all in a few words: one thing we may require and demand in the present case; that before we venture to dethrone our God and Saviour, by bringing him down to the rank of creatures; before we presume to abridge him of those honours, and that worship, which he has held in the Christian Church by a prescription of fifteen, sixteen, or seventeen hundred years; before we run upon what has hitherto been accounted blasphemy, horrid blasphemy, by the wisest, the greatest, and most eminent lights of the Christian Church, in former and in latter ages; before we disclaim our solemn vows in baptism, where we dedicated ourselves to the service and worship of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God blessed for ever; before we go these lengths, let us, at least, have things fairly and impartially examined, in sincerity and singleness of heart; disguising nothing, nor smothering any evidences, but comparing things with things, Scripture with Scripture, reason with reason, and then balancing the whole account: let us know, in some measure, what we do, that we run not blindfold into our own certain damnation. In the mean while, it behoves us to retain steadfastly, what we have hitherto piously believed and professed, in the integrity of our hearts and minds. And may the sacred Three, to whom we once have so solemnly devoted all our services, accept of our sincere endeavours to preserve and keep up that divine honour, which has been hitherto (and we doubt not, justly) paid to each of them. To the same most holy, undivided Trinity, God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, be all honour and glory, adoration and worship, in all churches of the saints, now and for evermore. Amen.

AN ANSWER TO DR. WHITBY'S REPLY: BEING A VINDICATION
OF THE
CHARGE OF FALLACIES, MISQUOTATIONS, MISCONSTRUC-TIONS, MISREPRESENTATIONS,
&c.
Respecting his Book entitled DISQUISITIONES MODESTÆ.
IN A LETTER TO DR. WHITBY.

SIR,

I HAVE read over your Reply, lately published. I perceive you are much disturbed at the freedom I took with you, in that part of my Defence which concerned you : and though you have, for several years last past, been acting the part of a censor, and a severe one too, (if we consider the intention rather than the effect,) upon many great, good, and learned men, ancient and modern ; yet when it comes to be your own case to be animadverted upon, (however justly, and upon a necessary occasion,) you are not able to bear it with due temper of mind. I am very unwilling to give you any further disturbance : and, indeed, were your Reply to be read only by men of letters, I should not have a thought of returning any answer to it. But since the controversy, about the ever blessed Trinity, is now spread among all kinds of readers, I have judged it necessary, in so momentous a cause, to take some notice of what you have done, for the sake of some well-meaning men who might otherwise happen to be imposed upon by it.

You divide your work into two parts, defensive and offensive : the first, to take off (so far as you are able) what I had charged you with ; the second, to retort the charge, and to raise objections from antiquity, chiefly against the Catholic cause, which I have the honour to espouse.

My Answer, accordingly, if it shall be thought needful to carry it through, must consist of two parts : one to shew that you have not been able to take off what I had charged you with ; the other to make it appear that your objections against us are slight and trivial, not capable of doing our cause harm.

PART THE FIRST.

Which is to shew that you have not been able to take off what I had charged upon you.

The Charge was contained under two heads :

1. General fallacies, running through your whole book, entitled Disquisitiones Modestæ.

2. Particular defects, viz. misquotations, misconstructions, misrepresentations, &c.

I do not add the epithets of gross, egregious, or the like, as you are pleased to do, (Reply, p. 100,) because, if I can prove the facts, the reader may be left to judge how gross or how egregious any misconstructions, misrepresentations, &c. are : and because those and the like epithets or decorations, are then only useful, when a writer lies under the unhappy necessity of endeavouring to make up in words what he wants of proof. But to come directly to the matter in hand, I must begin with the charge of general fallacies, which were three, and which I shall take in their order :

1. The first general fallacy charged upon you^a, was, your making essence and person to signify the same. One individual or numerical essence you every where interpret to a Sabellian sense ; understanding by it one individual Hypostasis or real Person. In your Reply, you admit (p. 5.) that the same numerical intellectual essence is, with you, equivalent to same person : so that the fact charged upon you stands good, by your own confession.

Now then, let us see whether you have dealt fairly and justly with Bishop Bull. I observed what influence this one principle, or postulatum, of yours must have upon the state of the general question ; and indeed upon your whole thread of reasoning quite through your book. For, if it appears that you have set out upon a false ground, you must of course blunder all the way, running into a perpetual ignoratio elenchi, (as the Schools call it,) that is, disputing besides the question : which, under pretence and show of confuting Bishop Bull, is really nothing else but confuting an imagination of your own. The question with Bishop Bull was, whether the Ante-Nicene Fathers believed the Son to be of an eternal, uncreated, and strictly divine substance. But with you it is, whether they believed him to be the same numerical intellectual essence (that is, as you interpret it, Person) with the Father. Thus you have changed the very state of the general question, and must of course argue all along wide of the point. So, when you come to particular authors, you still pursue the same mistake that you began with. You state the question relating to Barnabas (Disquis. Mod. p. 7.) thus; Whether he makes Father and Son one numerical essence: which is the same with you, as to ask, whether he makes them the same Person. The question is stated the same way, in respect of Hermas^b, Clemens of Rome^c, Justin Martyr^d, and others. With this kind of grave impertinence you go on confuting Bishop Bull, without so much as attacking him; while the main weight and force of your reasonings (when they really have any) falls not upon any thing which he has asserted, but upon quite another thing, which you have been pleased to invent for him. It is now time to hear what you have to say in defence of this peculiar piece of management. Your excuses for it are reducible to three heads. 1st, That you did not know what Bishop Bull meant. 2dly, That you had interpreted numerical essence as all the present orthodox do, whose cause Bishop Bull is supposed to have espoused. 3dly, That numerical essence does and must signify what you pretend, and nothing else. Though I have not taken your own words, yet, I think, I have here given your full sense; and more distinctly and clearly than you have done. I am next to examine your excuses, one by one.

^a See my Defence, vol. i. p. 507.

1. You did not know what Bishop Bull meant, or in what sense he maintained the consubstantiality. So you pretend in your book^e, and repeat it in your Reply^f, that you are "not certain whether he" (the Bishop) "pleaded for a numerical " or specific unity of essence;" taking it for granted that every numerical Unity is such as you have described; and that there is no medium between numerical, in your sense, and specific; that is, no medium between Sabellianism and Tritheism. This indeed is the πρωτον ψευδος, the prime falsehood which you set out with, and proceed upon; and which makes all your discourses on this head confused, and wide of the point. But of this more presently. As to Bishop Bull, if you had not saga-

^b Disquisit. Modest. p. 9.

^c Ibid. p. 12.

^d Ibid. p. 25.

^e Modest. Disquis. p. 31. Præf.

^f Reply, p. 7.

city enough to perceive what he meant, you might however easily and certainly have known, that he did not mean what you are pleased to put upon him; because he has plainly, frequently, and constantly denied numerical Unity, in the sense of personal identity. His intent was not to prove that the Fathers were Sabellians, (as your way of opposing him every where supposes,) but that they were not Arians. This you could not but know, if you know any thing: and therefore the method and way which you pitched upon, of writing against his book, was, to say the least of it, very unfair and disingenuous. You would have your readers believe that you have confuted the Bishop, when in reality, after granting you all that you have been able to prove, it is not to the purpose, is no confutation of what the Bishop has asserted, but of another proposition which the Bishop himself had disowned, as much as you can do. The charge therefore of mistaking the question stands good against you; and, what is more, wilful mistaking, since you could not be ignorant that Bishop Bull did not intend to assert numerical Unity in that sense wherein you oppose it. This is sufficient for me in defence of my charge. But for the clearer apprehension of Bishop Bull's meaning in relation to this matter, I will next cite you some of his own words:

“As concerning the specific Unity of Persons in the blessed Trinity, such as is the union of supposita, or persons, among things created, (for instance, of three men, Peter, Paul, and John, which are separate from one another, and do not any way depend upon each other as to their essence,) this the Fathers of the first ages never dreamed of. They acknowledged a very different union of the divine Persons, such as there is no pattern of, no resemblance perfectly answering to it, whereby to illustrate it, among created beings. They explain the matter thus: that God the Father is, as I said, the Head and Fountain of divinity, from whom the Son and Holy Ghost are derived, but so derived as not to be divided from the Father's Person, but they are in the Father, and the Father in them, by a certain περιχώρησις, or inhabitation, so called, as I have shewn at large. Defens. Fid. Nic. sect. iv. lib. 4. Petavius himself contends that from this περιχώρησις, inhabitation, a numerical Unity may be inferred, Petav. lib. iv. cap. 16. It is certainly manifest that this explication can no way consist with the Arian hypothesis: and it is also manifest that Tri-

“theism is excluded by it, and the unity of the Godhead made “consistent with a real distinction of Persons.”

Thus far Bishop Bull, in his answer to Gilbert Clarke^ε. He speaks much to the same purpose also in his Defence of the Nicene Faith^h. “As to numerical Unity of substance of Father and Son, (which Huetius says was denied by Origen,) I can make it evident that Origen acknowledged that Unity as far as any of the earlier Fathers, and even Athanasius himself acknowledged it: that is, Origen believed the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, though really three Persons, yet to have no divided or separate existence, (as three men have,) but to be intimately united and conjoined one with another, and to exist in each other, and (as I may so speak) to pervade and permeate one another by an ineffable περιχώρησις, which the Schoolmen call inhabitation: from which inhabitation, Petavius asserts that a numerical Unity must necessarily be inferred.”

From this account of Bishop Bull, it is evident that he neither admitted specific Unity, nor numerical in your sense: and therefore it was very artificial of you to say that you knew not which of the two he intended, as if he must have meant one, when it is so plain that he meant neither, but utterly denied both. He did indeed assert, as you see, numerical Unity, but not in your sense, not in the Sabellian sense of personal identity.

2. The second excuse you make for your impertinent manner of opposing Bishop Bull without contradicting him is, that you interpreted numerical essence as all the present orthodox do, whose cause Bishop Bull is supposed to espouse. So you tell us in the Preface to Modest Disquisitionsⁱ, that you dispute against the consubstantiality, in no other than the numerical sense, as asserted by all the orthodox. Now, supposing it were certainly true, (as it is certainly false,) that all, who at present pass for orthodox, understood numerical essence in the same sense as you oppose it in; yet would it not be fair towards Bishop Bull, to put that sense upon him which he so fully and so constantly disowns and disclaims. All that you should have done in this case, should have been to have observed, that Bishop Bull's book is nothing to the purpose of the present orthodox, who are all Sabellians, inasmuch as he has only shewn that the ⁱ Whitby, Disq. Mod. p. 32. Præf. Reply, p. 4.

^ε Bull, Posth. Works, p. 1004.

^h Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 130.

Fathers were not Arians, has not proved that they were Sabellians. And you might have took notice on this occasion, how weak and inconsistent all the orthodox are, in receiving and applauding Bishop Bull's book, a book which has proved nothing which can serve their purpose; a book which is so far from asserting Sabellianism, that is, orthodoxy, (as it is called,) that it rather stands in direct opposition to it. Now this would have been the fair open way, as well towards the present orthodox, as towards Bishop Bull. Towards the latter, because it is a certain truth that he has by no means served the cause of Sabellianism, or of numerical Unity, in your sense: towards the former, because it might have given them an opportunity of explaining themselves upon this head; and they might take their choice, either to give up Bishop Bull and all the Fathers at once, or else (which is most likely) declare what you say of them to be pure calumny and defamation. For my part, I make no doubt but it is a slander upon them; and that you will be found at length to understand as little of the moderns, as you do of the ancients. I have good reason for what I say, from one particular instance which I meet with in your Reply, p. 102. I am there represented, as having "departed from the general received doctrine of the Church, from the fourth century to this present age," for no other reason but for saying, I mean "a real person and no mode." Is it then really so, that all the orthodox, from the fourth century down to the present, have believed a person to be a mode, that is, in plain English, a manner; and three persons to be three manners? Believe it that can: I have a much better opinion, nay, certain knowledge of them. The Catholics indeed, down from the fourth (I may say from the first) century, have believed that there is no disparity of nature, no division of substance, no difference in any perfection between Father and Son; but that they are equally wise, equally infinite, equally perfect in all respects; differing only in this, that one is a Father, and the other a Son, one unbegotten, and the other begotten, as a third is proceeding: and these three different manners or modes of existence distinguish the persons one from another, perfectly alike and equal in all other respects. The phrase therefore of modes of existing, was not designed to denote the persons themselves, but their distinguishing characters. This is what Dr. South's authorities sufficiently prove, and all that they prove; and, I presume, all that he meant. For, though you are pleased to quote him against me, he is expressly for me, where he utterly denies "k that the three divine Persons " are only three modes of the Deity." However that be, I take my accounts of the ancients from the ancients themselves. If you can find any one, I do not say of the fourth, but even of the sixth, or eighth century, to go no lower, laying it down for Catholic doctrine that a person is a mode, it will be kind to oblige us with the discovery. As to the ancients, I will be bound to answer for them, that what you say of them from the fourth century is pure invention and romance: and as to moderns, I am very inclinable to hope, I make no scruple to believe, that you have misreported them as much as you have done the other.

3. Your third and last excuse is, that numerical essence does and must signify what you pretend, and nothing else: and therefore it was right to fix it upon Bishop Bull, who must be supposed to maintain numerical Unity. This is your meaning, (Reply, p. 4.) though you seldom take care to express yourself clearly and distinctly. To this I answer, first, that admitting that your sense of numerical Unity is the only true and proper sense of it; yet does it not follow, that you have any right to fix your sense upon Bishop Bull in contradiction to his declared sentiments. If any man has a mind to use words in an improper sense, provided he gives but sufficient notice of it, he should not be rigorously dealt with for it, or have a sense imposed upon him which he utterly disclaims. A fair and candid adversary, in such a case, should make allowance for words, and attend to the thing. To make the best of it, it is very unkind and unfair, industriously to mistake an author's meaning, in such a case, and to go about to confute what he certainly never intended to maintain; nay, what he is known to have denied and disclaimed. But to come a little closer to the point; How do you prove, after all, that yours is the only proper sense of numerical? What if you should fail here, in the main point of all, wherein your great confidence lies, and for the sake of which you have raised all this dust upon Bishop Bull, and thrown scandal at large both upon ancients and moderns? It is very certain, that numerical or individual Unity has been and is maintained by Catholics, and Catholics that abhorred Sabellianism. Could you prove that your sense of numerical essence is the only proper sense, yet you can never prove that it is the only sense it has been used in: so that, at length, the dispute about it would be nothing more than a dispute about words.

k South, Animadv. c. viii. p. 290, 291.

But I will give you a plain reason why you can never prove your sense of the words to be the only proper sense: it is because you can never fix any certain principle of individuation. It is for want of this, that you can never assure me, that three real Persons may not be, or are not, one numerical or individual substance. In short, you know not, precisely, what it is that makes one being, or one essence, or one substance. Here your metaphysics are plainly defective; and this it is that renders all your speculations upon that head vain and fruitless. Tell me plainly, is the divine substance present in every place, in whole or in part? Is the substance which is present here upon earth, that very individual numerical substance which is present in heaven, or is it not? Your answer to these questions may perhaps suggest something to you, which may help you out of your difficulties relating to the Trinity; or else the sense of your inability to answer either, may teach you to be less confident in matters so much above you, and to confess your ignorance in things of this nature, as I freely do mine.

You tell us very solemnly, (p. 4,) repeating it several times, that the same numerical essence neither doth nor can signify any more than one essence in number. Which is only telling us, that the same numerical essence is the same numerical essence; aye, that it is: and who doubts it? or who is the wiser for these weighty discoveries? How shall I ever know, from thence, that three real Persons may not be, or are not, one numerical substance, one being, one God? You will suppose, without doubt, that one intellectual essence and one Person are equivalent and reciprocal. And I, on the other hand, will suppose the contrary, and then we are just as we began. You have not proved, nor ever can prove, that three real Persons may not be properly called one numerical substance. If you have all along gone upon the supposition that they cannot, you have shewn that you can mistake, that you can beg the question, that you can wander from the point in hand, can trifle much and prove little, and that is all.

The sum then of what I have pleaded to make good my charge of the first general fallacy is, that you have set out wrong, mistook the very point in question, pursued your mistake all along, and followed your own wanderings, instead of opposing Bishop Bull: that you have no excuse for understanding numerical essence as you do, either from Bishop Bull's book, who never so understands it, or from the Catholic sense of it, ancient or modern, which is different from yours, or from the propriety of the phrase itself; which may, for any thing you know, admit of another sense, and which you have no way of confuting but by begging the question; which is not confuting, but rather tacitly acknowledging that it is not capable of any confutation. So much for the first article: only here I must be so just to you as to observe, that you do not always wander from the point in question. You do sometimes, indeed often, attempt to prove that the Ante-Nicene Fathers were of those principles which were afterwards called Arian. So far is pertinent, and is directly opposing Bishop Bull. But then I must observe further, that lest you should happen, at length, to fail in your first point of proving the Fathers to have been Arians, you reserve the other point, as what you can prove and can never fail of, namely, that they were not Sabellians: and this is what the result of your arguments generally comes to, after you have carried them on as far as they can go. The first point is what you seem most desirous of proving, were it possible to do it: but if you cannot do that, you are content however to prove the latter, rather than seem to have done nothing. I should here conclude this article, but that two or three incidental things should be taken notice of, which must come in here, or no where. I had observed ¹several guards which you had put in, in the general state of the question, as it were with design to secure a handsome retreat. You say, all the Ante-Nicene Fathers; when the most, or the generality might be sufficient. I had reason to observe this, because Bishop Bull had, in a manner, given up Lactantius: besides, that it is not necessary to assert that every writer (suppose Clemens of Rome, or Barnabas) has said enough in a short epistle, from whence it might certainly be inferred that their principles were the

¹ Defence, vol. i. p. 508. The general question is thus stated:

“Whether all the Ante-Nicene Fathers professed the very same doctrine which we ascribe to the Nicene Council; that is, whether all acknowledged the same numerical essence of the Father to have been communicated to the Son and Holy Ghost, and that therefore both are one God “in number with the Father.” Whitby, Proœm. p. 2.

same with those of the Nicene Fathers. It is sufficient, if as many as speak plainly either way are on our side; and that none of the earlier writers contradict it, but are in the main favourable to us, and probably, if not demonstrably, ours. Another guard inserted was, which we ascribe to the Nicene Council, instead of, which was asserted by the Nicene Council. The reason I had to take notice of this is apparent from what hath been said. Numerical essence, rather than same essence, was another guard: and what use you make of it is visible enough. That this essence, the same numerical essence, (or Person, as you understand it,) was communicated to two other Persons, is what you demand to have proved: and you have some pretence for cavil at the word communicated. This I observed before: and your Reply^m is, that what I "call a "pretence to quarrel at the word communicated, is indeed "arguments produced against it, as it is stated by the Bishop, "and which I durst not meddle with nor pretend to answer." The reason of my not answering your cavils against the expression was, because it was foreign to my purpose, and because we were inquiring, whether Bishop Bull had truly and justly represented the ancients, not whether his doctrine (the same with the ancient doctrine) is liable to the charge of contradiction. If you are able to prove any thing of that kind (as you are not) against Bishop Bull, it will hold equally against the ancients and him too; and is of distinct consideration from the point which we are now upon. However, if our readers will pardon a small digression, I shall here examine those weighty arguments, which before, it seems, "I durst not meddle with."

You object, (Præf. p. 21.) "that the communication of "the Father's essence to a Person is inconceivable, because "the Person must be supposed to have it, to be a Person." This is nothing but cavilling at a popular way of expression. In strictness of speech, the Person of the Son is the very thing which is derived, communicated, generated; and the Father, in communicating his essence, generates the Person of the Son.

You object further; "that if the same numerical essence of "the Father be communicated, then it is the same numerical "essence in both, only existing in a different manner." To which I answer, if you mean by numerical essence, the same numerical Person, it is not communicated at all: for the Person of the Father only communicates, the Person of the Son is communicated: and these two Persons, or Hypostases, constitute the same numerical essence; which consequently, as personalized in the Son, is begotten, as personalized in the Father, unbegotten, that is, exists in a different manner. The two Persons exist after a different manner, which two Persons constitute one numerical essence; and therefore I admit that the same numerical essence does exist in a different manner in the two Persons.

^m Reply, p. 5.

You object alsoⁿ, that “the essence of the Father is unbegotten, the essence of the Son begotten, therefore both cannot “be the same essence.” That both cannot be the same Hypostasis, or Person, is very certain, for the reason which you give. But that two Hypostases, one unbegotten, the other begotten, may not constitute one substance, or essence, you have not shewn. All these objections of yours turn only upon your mistaken sense of numerical essence, and amount to no more than a petitio principii; while you take for granted the thing in question, that there cannot be two real Persons in one substance, or essence. I can tell you of some, whose judgment you much rely on, who must, upon their principles, allow, that the same numerical substance is both greater and less than the same numerical substance; is remote and distant from the same numerical substance; is contained in and contains the same numerical substance. (See my Defence, vol. i. p. 448.) They must likewise admit of being and being, in the same numerical being; substance and substance, in the same numerical substance: as also being and being, where they cannot say beings, in the plural; substance and substances, where they cannot say substances; essence and essence, where they cannot say essences. (See my Defence, vol. i. p. 371, 372.) These things, perhaps, may appear new and strange to you; but if you please to consider them, they may be useful to convince you of your fundamental mistake in confining the phrase of numerical substance to one particular sense of your own; and may help to satisfy you that there is nothing absurd or contradictory in the supposition, that one and the same numerical substance may be both begotten and unbegotten.

ⁿ Præf. p. 21.

You may also please to consider that though the Catholics (especially after they came to express themselves accurately) would never, or very seldom, say, two substances, two essences, two spirits, two lights, two wisdoms, or two wills, any more than two Gods or two Lords; yet they never scrupled to say substance of substance, essence of essence, spirit of spirit, light of light, wisdom of wisdom, will of will, in like manner, as God of God. All which is to intimate that the union is not numerical, in the Sabellian, that is, in your sense: and yet it is numerical in another; inso-much that you cannot here speak of substances, or essences, in the plural, as you may of things specifically united, and no more.

You object further^o, “that the same substance cannot be “subordinate to none in the Father, and yet subordinate in the “Son or Holy Ghost.” Yes, it may, if three Persons can be one and the same substance, because these Persons may be subordinate one to another. Here, again, you suppose that three Persons cannot be one substance. And now, is not this shrewd arguing, thus perpetually to beg the question? You have one turn of wit more, and it is against interior production, which you pretend is such a “solid argument as I had the wit to leave un-“answered.” Reply, p. 6. This “interior production,” you say^p, is “either the production of something or nothing.” Wonderful solid! Well, what if it be the production of something? For undoubtedly we do not mean it of a production of nothing, that is, of no production. Then you say it must be the production of something new, for a production is always of something new. Solid again! that an eternal production must be a production of something new. But you cannot conceive, it may be, how any production should be eternal. And what if you cannot conceive how any thing should be eternal? I expect a proof of you that it cannot be. Your supposing it cannot, will give me no satisfaction. I have now run through your little quirks and subtillies upon this head, which yet are not yours, but as old almost as the controversy; despised by men of sense all along, despised even by yourself thirty years ago; when, with honour to yourself, and to the satisfaction and benefit of others, you wrote in defence of that ancient faith, which now you revile and blaspheme.

But to conclude this article, though I have, in civility towards you, considered your arguments drawn from the nature and rea- son of the thing, yet I must repeat my observation, that we may have nothing to do with them, in our present inquiry relating to the ancients; because if they are of any weight, they are as much against the faith of the ancients themselves, as against Bishop Bull, who acknowledges no other numerical unity than the ancients acknowledged. Having made good my first charge, I proceed to a second.

^o Disquisit. Mod. p. 23. Præf.

^p Ibid.

II. A second general fallacy^a was your arguing from the expressions of Arians (famous for dissembling and equivocating) to those of the Ante-Nicene writers; men of a very different stamp and character, and who were not under the like temptation of saying one thing and meaning another. I had observed that you had recourse to this salvo, or fallacy, in order to elude the force of some high expressions (in respect of the Son's divinity) which you met with in the Ante-Nicene writers. To this you reply, (p. 9.)

I. That it "is not fairly suggested, that you do this when you find some expressions run pretty high and strong for the divinity of Christ: for, in all the places referred to, there is no expression of that nature but in the last." If you please to look back to your Prooemium, (p. 4, 5,) you will there find that you have made use of the fallacy which I charge you with, as a general answer to invalidate the force of most, or all Bishop Bull's testimonies. You observe that the acknowledging of Christ to be "God of God," or "God before the worlds," was common to many who were utter enemies to the Nicene faith. You go on to prove this further by the author of the Opus Imperfectum, which author you pronounce an Arian. You proceed to observe from Bishop Bull himself, that the Arians scrupled not any of the Catholic forms of speech, save only the term consubstantial. They would say, for instance, that the Son was "begotten out of the Father himself," and was "true God;" and they rejected with indignation the charge of making the Son a creature. Now, what could be your meaning in these remarks, but to insinuate to your reader, that let him meet with ever so high expressions of the Son's divinity among the Ante-Nicene writers; yet, unless they have the very word consubstantial, they might possibly, or probably, mean no more than the Arians did after by the same or the like expressions? This is the fallacy which I complained of, and which you often occasionally recur to, both in your book and prefaces, to weaken the force of Bishop Bull's authorities. *Some of the places where you do this, I referred to in my Defence, which the reader that has a mind to it may turn to; and I do not yet see that I have suggested any thing but what is both fair and true.

^a See my Defence, vol. i. p. 510.

2. A second evasion you have in your Reply (p. 5.) is, that you said sometimes Arians and Semiarians, whereas I have represented you, as if you had said Arians only. I do not see that this is at all material. If either Arians or Semiarians used Catholic expressions without a Catholic meaning, they come so far under the same predicament of dissembling and equivocating: and that both were notoriously guilty of so doing, is clear from all history of those times. The Semiarians in particular were often charged with it, both by Catholics and Anomæans. You say, further, that you likewise join mostly with them some of the Ante-Nicene Fathers. But you will never be able to shew that those Ante-Nicene Fathers were of different principles from the Council of Nice: so that your joining them with the others was either foreign to the point, or supposing the very thing in question.

3. You reply, thirdly, (p. 10,) that "sure it must be a very uncharitable censure to pronounce of near a thousand bishops convened at Antioch, Seleucia, Sirmium, Ariminum, and elsewhere, that they were a pack of hypocrites and equivocating knaves." To which I make answer, first, that I know not how you will be able to make out near your number. If you add the numbers of the several councils, you may probably reckon many of the same men twice or thrice over. Neither were the men that made up those councils all of them Arians. There were but eighty of the whole four hundred at Ariminum really Arians. So that probably three hundred and twenty were imposed upon by the rest, and the charge of equivocating lies upon the eighty only. And it is evident, not only from Athanasius, but also from Sulpicius Severus, and St. Jerome, and indeed from all the historians, and all the accounts we have of that Council, that the Arians at Ariminum carried their point by equivocation and wile; and that the Catholics, most of them, were imposed upon by double entendres. They went upon those charitable principles which you are pleased to recommend. They could not imagine there was so much latent insincerity and guile, under so many fine words and fair pretences from men of their own order.

* Præf. Disquisit. Mod. p. 8, 9, 40, 90, 109, 153, 157.

2. I answer, secondly, that there may be some difference between charging men with equivocation and calling them knaves. There is a reverend Doctor, whom I scruple not to charge with equivocating. He says, in a preface^s, he has many things which hinder him from receding from the belief of Christ's true divinity: and it is well known what he once meant by Christ's true divinity, when he wrote a Tract^t with that title in defence of it. Who would not charitably believe, from hence, that he still retained the same faith in the same true divinity? But see what he means by Christ's true divinity, (Disq. Mod. p. 25.^u) where he commends Justin Martyr for maintaining Christ's true divinity, making this an argument of it, that Justin's sentiments were clearly opposite to the doctrine of the Nicene Council. Hence it is manifest that the Doctor equivocates in the phrase true divinity. The fact I maintain; but if from thence you will infer that he is an equivocating knave, remember that the inference is yours, and not mine.

4. You reply, fourthly, as from Sozomen, "that when the Arians first appeared, many bishops, a considerable number of the clergy, and no small part of the people——favoured his party; and that two synods convened at Bithynia and Palestine, wrote to their brethren to communicate with those Arians, as being orthodox." And here you ask, "Were all those holy men and able judges, those synods, bishops, clerks, and laity, a pack of hypocritical dissemblers and equivocating knaves?" No; I charitably believe otherwise. The synods, bishops, clerks, and laity, who received the Arians as orthodox, were not, probably, the equivocating knaves, (as you choose to express it,) but the Arians: who, by fair words and artful confessions, appeared to be what they were not, and so were re-

^s Ut verum fatear, multa sunt quæ me impediunt quo minus a sententia de vera Christi Deitate recederem, id solum contendo &c. Whitby, Disq. Mod. p. 3. Præf.

^t Whitby, de vera Christi Deitate: Tractatus, ann. 1691.

^u Magnam admirationem mihi injecit iniqua eorum sententia, qui Jus-

tinum M. Christianæ fidei simplicitatem, in doctrina de Christi præ-existentia, Veraque Deitate, adulterasse suspicati sunt; quo Patrum nemo, (leg. neminem,) meo quidem judicio, vel plura vel clariora adversus Synodi Nicænæ placita docuisse, facile est demonstrare. Whitby, Disq. Mod. p. 25.

ceived as orthodox. You will remember that the principal of those holy men and able judges that promoted Arius's interest in the Synod of Bithynia, was Eusebius of Nicomedia; the same man that afterwards professed his assent and consent to the Nicene Creed, as the true Catholic faith; and excused his not consenting to the anathematizing of Arius upon this foot, that he thought Arius had been much misrepresented, and that he knew from Arius's own letters that he was not the man that the Council took him to be. Now if Eusebius, the principal man of the Synod of Bithynia, was thus imposed upon by Arius's fair pretences, no doubt but he represented Arius's case to the Synod, as favourably as he himself had conceived of it: and then no wonder if a man was received as orthodox, who was really believed to be orthodox. If you think that Eusebius, all the while, knew that Arius was not orthodox, in my sense of the word; admitting that, yet he might, for any thing I know, represent him as such then, as well as he did after: if so, the only equivocating knave might be Eusebius of Nicomedia; the rest might be imposed upon by his representations and colourings. Holy men and able judges can judge no otherwise of facts but as they are reported: and how could it be remedied, if Arius happened to get good testimonials, though himself an ill man? But enough of this matter: as to the Arian custom of equivocating, and thereby imposing upon honest men, the fact being plain, I shall insist no longer upon it, only referring to a few authors^y who give a summary account of it.

III. A third general fallacy, just hinted in my Defence, (p. 511.) was, your arguing against the faith of the Ante-Nicene Fathers, in respect of Christ's real divinity, from this topic; that they often distinguish God from Christ, and call the Father God absolutely.

Here again you complain of me for unfair dealing. But how, or wherein am I unfair towards you? You say (Reply, p. 11,) "that your first instance of this nature is from the epistle of Clemens Romanus, where he constantly separates (distinguishes you mean) Jesus Christ from that God, whom he styles the "true and only God, but never once calls him God." If this answer be any thing pertinent, I suppose your meaning is, that your argument did not turn upon this, that Christ was distinguished from God; but upon these further considerations, that Christ is constantly so distinguished by Clemens, and never once called God. You may, if you please, call all those considerations put together, one argument: but they appeared to me to be distinct and several. You observe ^a of Clemens, that he perpetually distinguishes Christ from God, (Christum a Deo perpetuo distinguit.) This was one consideration, or presumption in favour of your principles. A second you add immediately after, Deum vero ne semel nuncupat, But he never calls Christ God. You proceed to illustrate your first observation by such instances as these following; that Clemens wishes grace and peace to the Corinthians from Almighty God, by Jesus Christ; that he introduces (chap. xx.) the great Creator and Lord of the Universe distributing his blessings by Jesus Christ; that Christ was sent of God, chap. xlii. and that the Apostles had their commission by Christ from God, chap. xliii. Now to what purpose were these several instances produced, except you intended them as so many arguments against Clemens's believing Christ to be consubstantial with him whom alone he calls God, and from whom he distinguishes Christ? But I insist upon it, that there is no weight at all in this argument. Nothing has been more common with writers, who have fully believed the doctrine of a coeternal Trinity, than this manner of speaking; especially when they have been thinking on another subject, and had no occasion to speak of Christ's divinity. And what if Clemens, or Polycarp, or any other writer, in a short epistle, or tract, has spoke of the Father only, under the title of God, and of the Son as Lord, or Saviour, or High-Priest? How often might the same thing be observed in modern treatises, or sermons of very orthodox men! I see no consequence that can be justly drawn against our principles from these premises. And if Clemens called the Father the only God, or only true God, though that be a distinct argument from the former; yet neither does it prove any thing more than the other, as I have shewn in another place^a.

^x Sozom. E. H. lib. ii. cap. 16. Cave's Life of Athanasius. Cave, Epist. Apolog. p. 96. Clerc. Epist. p. 37⁸.

^y Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 293. Crit. ii. p. 52.

But you refer me to some collections of yours in another book^b from Origen: who, it seems, in his book against Celsus, distinguishes and separates (so you say, p. 12.) Christ from him who is

^a Disq. Mod. p. 16.

^a Sermon iv. p. 84, &c. of this volume.

^b Præf. de S. Script. Interpr. p. 34. 35.

God above all; and declares, in the name of the generality of Christians, that Christ is not the God above all. This is not pertinent to the point in hand, having no relation to the fallacy I charged you with, nor belonging to the book which I was animadverting upon. But that I may not stand upon niceties with you, I will give you an answer to this new pretence. It is very certain that Origen never intended to deny that Christ is God above all; because all Catholics^c, (I might say heretics too for the most part,) both before and after Origen's time, as well as Origen himself, understood Rom. ix. 5. of God the Son, there styled ἐν παντί Θεός, or God above all. Yet there is a certain sense in which the ancients have denied Christ to be the God above all; namely, when so understood as to make Christ the very Person of the Father, as the Sabellians understood it^d, or to set him above the Father^e, or above the Creator^f of the world, as some other heretics pretended. In this latter sense it is, that Origen denies the Son to be God above all; as he had reason to do, because it would have been denying his subordination and sonship, and inverting the order of the Persons, to have asserted that Christ was in any sense above the Father, or so God above all, as to have the Creator, or Father, subordinate to him.

Notwithstanding all this, Origen himself, in the very page before that which you refer to, asserts and maintains the Catholic doctrine in full and express terms, the very same doctrine that we contend for at this day. For, having objected to Celsus^g the worship of many Gods, telling him that if he would be consistent with his principles, he should not talk of the kingdom of God, in the singular, but of Gods, in the plural; he then bethinks himself that the argument might be retorted upon Christians, as worshipping two Gods, viz. the Father and Christ. Here was the critical place; here, if any where, we shall see of what principles Origen was. Well, how does Origen get rid of the objection? Not by saying that the Father only is God, in a proper sense: not by saying that the Father is supreme God, and the Son another God under him. No; he was wiser than to

^c See the testimonies in Mills; and my Sermons, p. 142 of this volume.

^d Vid. Apost. Constit. lib. vi. cap. 26. Pseud-Ignat. Ep. ad Tars. cap. 5. Ad Philip. cap. 7.

^e Origen contr. Cels. p. 387. Basil. Epist. lxxviii. p. 892.

^f Vid. Iren. p. 101, 106. edit. Bened. Origen in Matt. p. 476. Huet.

^g Vid. Origen. p. 385, 386.

make himself ridiculous to Jew and Gentile by such a weak answer. But he solves the difficulty by asserting the Unity of Father and Son: and, after he had guarded his assertion from any Sabellian construction, he triumphantly closes up all in these words; "We therefore, as I have shewn, worship one God, the "Father and Son^h." Thus he at once cleared the Christian doctrine from Polytheism, and made good the charge against the Pagans.

From what hath been said it may appear, that Origen has denied no more than all Catholics deny, namely, that the Father is subordinate to the Son; and has asserted as much as any Catholic contends for. We do not say that Christ is that Person who is ordinarily and eminently styled God above all; nor that he is in any sense or respect above the Creator, or above God the Father, being subordinate to him; but we assert that he is essentially one God with him who is the Father, and, as such, is God above all: and this very doctrine is plainly Origen's, as well as ours. You have forced me into this digression, by making your objection in a wrong place; and therefore let that be my excuse to the reader for it. Now I return.

I have run through the three general fallacies which I charged you with. Your feeble endeavours to take them off prove ineffectual: and they now return upon you with the greater force.

I am next to consider the particular defects. But, before I proceed further, it will here be proper to remove a complaint of yours, which you repeat more than once; it is a complaint of my management and conduct relating to your book.

You tell me (p. 2.) that I "have not defended any of the "Bishop's arguments which you had produced and answered; "nor made any reply to those numerous arguments which you "produced from the Ante-Nicene Fathers against mine and the "Bishop's sentiments."—In another place you say thus, (p. 57.) "He is obliged, if he would indeed defend the Bishop, to invali- "date and refute the answers that I have given to all his argu- "ments, and to do this entirely, and not by culling out two or "three instances, and leaving all the rest in their full strength; "that being in all the other cases, to leave the Bishop in the "lurch."

By all this you seem to think that Bishop Bull's celebrated performance is in some danger of sinking in its character, if your Modest Disquisitions be not particularly answered, paragraph by paragraph; and that I ought to have paid so much respect to your Work, as either not to have meddled at all with it, or to have attended you all the way through it. Now, as to this matter, I will here frankly declare to you my real thoughts, in the following particulars:

^h "Ἐνα οὖν Θεόν, ὡς ἀποδεδώκαμεν, τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱὸν θεραπεύομεν. p. 386.

1. In the first place, I am so far from apprehending any danger to Bishop Bull, and his cause, from your book, that I should never have given myself the trouble of remarking at all upon it, had it not been given out to English readers (who must take such things on trust) that Bishop Bull's famed piece would receive an answer, such as should satisfy all learned and unprejudiced persons. I knew that a Latin book could do no harm, but among those that could read Latin: and such I thought might, for the most part, be very safely trusted, having Bishop Bull's book to compare with yours, which alone is sufficient to answer for itself, with men of any judgment. The danger was not from the book itself, but from the reports made of it: and it concerned me to take care that English readers might not be imposed upon; which was one principal motive of my doing what I did.

2. I considered further, that this controversy being of all others the most nice and intricate, and in which it is the easiest for a writer, that has a mind to it, to confound and puzzle such readers as have not been conversant in it; I say, I considered that it might be useful even to some Latin readers to point out the principal flaws and fallacies in your performance, which when done, your whole book is in a manner answered; or however answered as far as is needful, to prevent any honest man's being imposed upon by it.

3. You will give me leave to tell you, with all due respect, (however frankly,) that a writer who begins, and proceeds as you do, has no reason to expect an answer paragraph by paragraph; because there is a shorter and much better way of dealing with authors that are not careful to write pertinently. Who, do you imagine, would be at the trouble of telling you a hundred times over, that this argument is good against the Sabellians, and in such a sense of numerical essence as is not to the purpose; but in Bishop Bull's sense, and in the true sense, the argument is of no weight at all? One short general answer is sufficient in such a case; and is in reality as long as the objection, which is only repetition of the same thing. Had you stated the question fairly, kept close to the point in hand, arguing pertinently at least, if not solidly, all along, directly opposing that, and that only, which Bishop Bull undertook to prove; then indeed it might have concerned us to attend upon you all the way through, and to have defended the Bishop against your attacks. But when instead of this, you set out upon a wrong foot, and wander wide and far from the mark you should have aimed at: when, instead of attacking Bishop Bull directly, you encounter for the most part a phantom of your own, and fight with your shadow: in such a case as this, we have no need to be solicitous about the Bishop. Those formidable preparations, which might be otherwise apt to strike terror into us, are happily diverted another way: all we have now left to do, is to stand by unconcerned, look on, and smile. These are my reasons, why I hold myself excused from making any more particular answer to your numerous arguments, as you are pleased to call them. You may give us leave to judge how far our cause may be endangered by what you have done: and if we who are friends to the Bishop and his cause, are in no pain about either, nor at all afraid of leaving them in the lurch, you may be very easy. Now I proceed to make good the particulars of the charge upon you: misquotations, misconstructions, misrepresentations, reviving of old and trite objections, concealing the answers, &c. These, I think, reach to about twenty particulars, which shall all be considered in the same order as laid down in my Defence.

I. I charge youⁱ with a misquotation^k of Polycarp's Doxology, recorded in the Epistle of the Church of Smyrna. You left out, as I said, the two most material words, ὅν αὐτῶ, on which the Bishop's argument chiefly depended. You acknowledge in your Reply (p. 13.) that you left those words out; and the reason you give is, because "they are neither in the edition of Bishop Usher, nor of Cotelarius, from whom you cited the passage." This answer, give me leave to say, is more unkind to yourself than the charge I made. I had compared the different readings of the Doxology in the two editions, Eusebius's and Bishop Usher's. I considered, that if you should pretend to follow Bishop Usher and Cotelarius, you had falsified in two places, changing μεθ' οὗ into δι' οὗ, and καὶ πνεύματι into ἐν πνεύματι, which are very material alterations. But if you should pretend to copy from Eusebius, there you had left out οὐκ αὐτῷ. The latter being a sin of omission only, and more excusable than putting words into the text, I chose to fix the charge there where it might fall the lightest, and seem rather a slip than any ill design. I had another reason, why I was willing to charge it as an omission out of the text of Eusebius; and that was because Bishop Bull had followed Eusebius's copy. Now if you had a mind to take another reading from Usher and Cotelerius, you should have given notice that Bishop Bull had made use of a faulty copy, before you had triumphed over him; and should have observed that Usher's and Cotelerius's reading was the true one. But not a word do you say of this; and the reason of your deep silence, in this respect, is very evident. Bishop Bull's argument was strong and good, according to Eusebius's reading: and according to Usher's and Cotelerius's, it would have been still stronger and fuller. Since therefore neither of the readings would serve your purpose, you lay aside both, and invent a new one of your own¹: and then you might securely insult over the learned Prelate, having a text and comment both of your own contriving.

ⁱ See my Defence, vol. i. p. 511.

^k Disquisit. Mod. p. 22.

But, you say, the words, "as they lie in Eusebius thus, δι' αὐτοῦ οὐκ αὐτῷ, (you mean δι' οὗ οὐκ αὐτῷ,) want good sense, "it being improper to say by the Son be glory to the Father "with the Son." Be it proper or improper, you ought to cite passages of authors as you find them: besides that very wise men, ancient and modern, have judged the expression very proper: and it will be thought that the compilers of our Communion Office, who scrupled not to say by whom, and with whom, &c. understood what good sense is, as well as the Modest Inquirer.

II. A second misquotation^m I chargedⁿ upon you was of a passage in Athenagoras°. You was pleased to change πρὸς αὐτοῦ into πρὸς αὐτὸν, for no reason that I could see, but to ¹ The readings of the passage.

Δι' οὗ σοι οὐκ αὐτῷ, ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. Euseb. E. H. lib. iv. cap. 15.

Δι' οὗ σοι, ἐν πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. Whitby, Disq. Mod. p. 22.

Μεθ' οὗ σοι καὶ πνεύματι ἁγίῳ. Usher,

Coteler.

^m Whitby, Disq. Mod. p. 62.

ⁿ Defence, vol. i. p. 511.

° Πρὸς αὐτοῦ γὰρ, καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ πάντα ἐγένετο. Athen. p. 38. Ox.

make a weak insinuation against the divinity of God the Son. In your Reply (p. 13.) you say; "Now this, I confess, is casually done, but (you mean and) without design." But these casual slips have an ill appearance, especially in so noted a place as this of Athenagoras. You could not forget that this very πρὸς αὐτοῦ, in Athenagoras, is what we set a particular note and value upon, as shewing that the ancients did not always say δι' αὐτοῦ only, in respect of the Son's part or office in the work of creation, but sometimes πρὸς αὐτοῦ, a phrase which may express the efficient cause, and is not liable to the same exceptions as the phrase δι' αὐτοῦ. Now, to falsify a testimony of this kind, though casually, betrays however great negligence or oscitancy. You observe that ab eo tanquam exemplari, serves as well your turn, as ad eum tanquam exemplar. That is, if we will allow you your construction. But you cannot make the former so easily, or so probably, out of πρὸς αὐτοῦ, as the latter, out of πρὸς αὐτόν: besides that by changing πρὸς αὐτοῦ into πρὸς αὐτόν, you took from us one sense of the words which we might think it proper to insist upon, namely, that of an efficient cause. Πρὸς αὐτοῦ, if it may be construed your way, may also be construed another way, and perhaps more naturally: and therefore we take it not well to be deprived of any advantage which the text gives us. I must however observe, that whatever your design was from these words, they will not answer your purpose, even though we should admit your construction. For no consequence can be drawn against our principles, from the consideration of the Son's being the exemplar, after which all things were made; unless you can imagine that he was an exemplar to himself.

III. The third thing I charged you with^p, was a misconstruction^q of a celebrated passage in Methodius^r. The passage I had produced in my Defence, to prove the eternal generation of the Son, as Bishop Bull also had done^s. You expressed yourself somewhat obscurely in answer to the Bishop. Only this was plain from your words, (frustra præsulè renitente), that you intended something opposite to the Bishop, and insinuated to your reader that this quotation of Methodius proved the very contrary to what the Bishop alleged it for. Now the Bishop

^p Defence, vol. i. p. 511.

^q Disquisit. Mod. p. 75, 76.

^r Method. apud Phot. p. 960. See my Defence, vol. i. p. 357.

^s Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 164, 200.

had cited it in proof of the consubstantiality and coeternity of the Son : to which purposes it is indeed as full and clear as any can be desired. You are pleased however in your Reply (p. 15.) to object as follows :

1. That " to say that the Son of God was preexistent before " the ages in the heavens, is to say no more than all the Arians " and Semiarians have asserted, &c." But the force of the Bishop's argument and mine did not lie in the words πρὸ αἰώνων (though they are not without their weight^t, however the Arians or Semiarians might equivocate;) but in those other words of Methodius, that the Son was, did not become, a Son; that he had no new filiation; that he is always the same; and in Methodius's guarding against the supposition of a temporal generation, by his explaining it of a temporal manifestation only. Why do you overlook and conceal the main points wherein our argument consisted, and make reply only to that which neither Bishop Bull nor I laid any stress upon? But it was prudent, it may be, to pass over what could not be answered.

2. You object to us some other passages of Methodius to confront ours with. He calls the Father ἀναρχος ἀρχῆ, a principium, that had no beginning. So you translate: might you not as well have rendered it, a beginning that had no beginning? But that would not have served your purpose; the true rendering is, a principium or head, that has no principium or head. But you had a mind to the words no beginning, to insinuate as if Methodius had said this of God the Father in contradistinction to God the Son, who had a beginning; though Methodius says no such thing. He says indeed that the Son is ἀρχῆ, a principle or head, after the Father: that is, the Son is the fountain of all things after the Father; not in time, but in order; the Father being always primarily considered as Head and Father of the Son. The sum then of what Methodius has there said is, that the Son has a Father, and that the Father has none. What Catholic would ever scruple to assert the same thing? No one ever doubted but that the Father alone was ἀναρχος, the Son not ἀναρχος in this sense^u.

3. You object, thirdly, the following words, (for I see not the ^t See my Defence, vol. i. p. 355, p. 563. Damascen. de Fid. lib. i. &c. cap. 11. p. 42.

^u Vid. Gregor. Naz. Orat. xxxv.

sense,) "Methodius adds that these words might be congruously "applied to him, (the Son,) In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth; and those of Solomon, The Lord created me the beginning of his ways." Now what can an English reader make of these two passages, as you have represented them and tacked them together? From the last of them, I suppose, he is to understand that the Son was created, according to Methodius. But then what will he make of the text out of Genesis? Is he to understand that the Son was created with the heavens and the earth, in the beginning? So one might think, and you are very indifferent, I perceive, what your English reader may apprehend, provided you may but seem to have something to say, and something that may reflect dishonour on the Son of God. As to the passage in Genesis, Methodius interprets ἐν ἀρχῇ, (which we render in the beginning), in the Principle; understanding by Principle God the Son, in whom all things were created, according to St. Paul, Coloss. i. 17. Now since, according to Methodius, all things whatever were created in the ἀρχῇ, i. e. in God the Son, it is plain that he exempts him from the number of creatures. As to the other text, out of Solomon's Proverbs, you have, without any ground or warrant from Methodius, rendered ἐκτίσσε created, instead of appointed or constituted. The meaning probably is, according to Methodius, that the Father appointed, or constituted, God the Son as the ἀρχῇ, the principium, foundation, or head over all creatures. This kind of construction of that place of the Proverbs, appears to have been known and received in the Church some time before Methodius; as is plain from Dionysius of Rome^x, his comment upon the text: which was afterwards countenanced by Eusebius^y and other Catholic writers^z. Athanasius, much earlier than any of them, must have understood the text nearly in the same sense. For after he had declared expressly against the Son's being made or created, asserting his procession from the Father to be a kind of substratum or support for the world of creatures to subsist in, receiving from thence their proper forms, order, and perfection; he immediately cites this text out of the Proverbs, as confirming his sentiments^a. To return to Methodius: he barely cites the text to prove that Christ was prior to the creation, and that all creatures had their subsistence in him. He is not so particular in explaining the sense of ἐκτισε, as Dionysius of Rome, or Eusebius: but it is more than probable that he understood it much in the same sense. Certain it is, that your construction of him is entirely unwarranted; and not only so, but contradictory to the author's known principles elsewhere. Upon the whole, you have not been able to answer Bishop Bull's citations out of Methodius, nor to make good your own pretences against Methodius's orthodoxy. Instead of taking off one misconstruction which I had charged you with, you have only added to it: and have been so far from acquitting yourself of your first offence, that you have more than doubled it.

^x Ἐκτίσσε γὰρ ἐνταῦθα ἀκουστέον ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐπέστησε τοῖς ἰπ' αὐτοῦ γεγενησὶν ἔργοις, γεγενῶσι δὲ δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ. Dionys. Rom. apud Athanas. p. 232.

^y Ἀρχεῖν δὲ τῶν ὄλων ὑπὸ κυρίου τοῦ αὐτοῦ πατρὸς κατατεταγμένος· τοῦ ἐκτίσσειν ἐνταῦθ' ἀπὸ τοῦ κατέταξεν, ἢ κατέστησεν εἰρημένον. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. iii. p. 151.

^z Non enim ita sapientiam suam condidit, quasi aliquando sine sapientia fuerit—Hoc initium habeat sapientia Dei quod de Deo processit ad creanda omnia tam cælestia quam terrena; non quo cœperit esse in Deo. Creata est ergo sapientia, imo genita, non sibi quæ semper erat, sed his quæ ab ea fieri oportebat. Pseud-Ambros. de Fid. Orth. cap. ii. p. 349.

IV. A fourth thing which I charged^b upon you, was a misrepresentation and misconstruction^c of a passage in Dr. Cave^d. I blamed you for insinuating as if Dr. Cave had said or meant, that many or most of the Ante-Nicene Fathers were against the divinity and eternity of Christ. That you really intended to insinuate as much is confessed in your Reply, where you tell me (p. 26.) that "the natural import of the words" (Dr. Cave's words) "contains a full confutation of the whole design of my book, which is to prove that all the Ante-Nicene Fathers maintained the consubstantiality of the Son with the Father, and the eternal generation of the Son."

I have not mistaken then as to the matter of fact, that you really did insinuate what I had charged you with. That you was to blame for so doing, will easily be made appear as plainly as the other. Two things I before observed; 1st, That Dr. Cave's words ought not, without a manifest necessity, to have been interpreted to a sense directly opposite to his well known and often declared sentiments: 2nd, That there was no such manifest necessity in the case before us; but rather some pro-

^a Vid. Athenag. cap. x. p. 38, 39.

40.

^b Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 512.

^c Whitby, Disquis. Mod. p. 97.

^d Cave, Histor. Liter. vol. i. p. 112.

bable grounds, even from the passage itself, for interpreting Dr. Cave's words otherwise than you have done. Now as to Dr. Cave's real sentiments, relating to the faith of the Ante-Nicene writers, I appeal to the passages appearing in the margin^e. You may there see that Dr. Cave looked upon the eternity of the Son as part of the Christian faith from the very infancy of the Church; that it had been constantly taught by the Catholic Fathers; and that none but mere strangers to antiquity could make any question of it: that the most effectual way to confute Arians, &c. is, after Scripture, to appeal to the constant universal consent of the ancients; with more to the same purpose. Is this the man whom you quote on your side? I may add that his Apologetical Epistle runs much upon this topic, to vindicate the primitive Fathers against such aspersions as you, among others, are too apt to throw upon them: and there needs nothing more to shew that he was perfectly in my sentiments as to that particular, and directly opposite to yours. You may say, perhaps, that Dr. Cave was inconsistent with himself; and at different times, upon different occasions, asserted repugnant propositions. But, with submission, I think it a piece of justice

^e Æternitatem Filii, ejusque σύνδομον τῆ ἀρχῆ τὸ εἶναι (quemadmodum non incite loquitur Cyrillus Alexandrinus) concurrentem cum paterno principio existentiam, constanter docuisse Catholicos Patres, antiquitatis ecclesiasticæ rudis plane sit oportet qui nescire potest; nec pluribus jam probare opus est quod cumulate præstiterunt alii. Hanc ecclesiæ fidem ab ipsis Christianismi primordiis traditam, et perpetuo conservatam, omni quo potuerunt nisu totisque viribus oppugnarunt Ariani. Cav. Diss. 3. ad calc. Hist. Lit. p. 79.

Liquet, non esse efficaciorē hæreses refutandi rationem, quam si post allegatam SS. Scripturæ auctoritatem, constantem et universalem veterum consensum ad patres nostras advoceamus. Expertus est id Theodosius Imperator an. 383. quando Catholicos Episcopos cum Arianis, Macedonianis, Eunomianis, coacta synodo, configere vellet; suadebat potius Nectario et Agellio, qui ipsam consulerant, Sisiniius, ut interrogarent hæreticos istos num admitterent illos doctores atque interpretes Scripturarum, qui ante ecclesiæ dissidium florissent. Cav. Ep. Apol. p. 22. Vid. etiam p. 17. Monebo tantum, in Patrum Scriptis Dogmata Philosophica a fidei articulis probe esse distinguenda. In his, S. Literis et Catholicæ traditioni strictius se alligant, et in REI SUMMA OMNES CONVENIUNT: in illis majori utuntur libertate, et opiniones sæpius adhibent quæ in philosophorum scholis ventilarī solebant; quin et in explicandis fidei mysteriis quandoque voces e schola Platonica petitas admovent, sed ad Christianum sensum accommodatas. Ibid. p. 48.

Profitetur (J. Clericus) se cum Ecclesia Catholica agnoscere, Deum esse essentia unum, Personis trinum, nempe Unitatem in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in Unitate se colere ac venerari; credere se, Jesus Christum verum esse et æternum Dei Filium, Patri vero ὁμοούσιον, et συναΐδιον—tunc demum intelligemus fidem ejus in principibus his doctrinæ Christianæ capitibus, rectam esse, orthodoxam, et tam sacræ Scripturæ, quam primæve antiquitati congruam. Cav. Ep. Apolog. p. 107.

due to every author, especially one that has bore a character in the learned world, to suppose otherwise of him, till it can be evidently made appear, that he has contradicted in one place what he had laid down in another. If there be any room left for a favourable and candid interpretation, it ought to be admitted. I before observed to you, that there was no manifest necessity of interpreting that passage of Dr. Cave, as you do. He recounted about seven errors of Lactantius, referring to others unnamed: and in those, he says, many of the ancients concurred with him. By in those, he might possibly mean in some or other of them, not in every single particular. To make it the more probable that he really meant no more, I observed that de divinitate stood as a distinct article, and might be construed of the Deity. Lactantius held very absurd notions of the Deity, as great errors as any could be. Could Dr. Cave take notice of many smaller slips, and never allude to those which were the greatest of all? And yet you cannot pretend to say that many, or indeed any of the primitive Fathers concurred with Lactantius in those errors concerning the Deity. From whence I justly concluded that the words in quibus, were not to be strictly understood of all and singular the errors noted.

To this you reply, that Lactantius says of God, that he is the Father of all things, "whose beginning cannot be comprehended;" as if this were all that Lactantius had said. Does he not plainly assert that God had a beginning, and that he made himself? You observe further, that this is fully explained by himself lib. ii. cap. 8. where he says, "God only who is not made, is from himself, as we shewed in the first book." And what if he speaks right here? Does it follow that he has not said what he really has said in another place? Besides, if you please to admit the same candour of interpreting one place by another, I can shew you also where he has spoke very orthodoxly of God the Son; and can as easily acquit him of the charge of heresy with respect to God the Son, as you can acquit him of the like charge in respect of God the Father. In a word, his errors and contradictions in both points are visible enough: and give me leave to think that Dr. Cave might see them; and might sit procreatus.—Deus ipse se fecit. Lactant. lib. i. cap. 7. p. 32.

† Verum quia fieri non potest quin id quod sit, aliquando esse ceperit; consequens est ut, quando nihil ante eum fuerit, ipse ante omnia ex seipso

‡ Vid. Lactant. lib. iv. cap. 9.

allude to one in the article de divinitate, and to the other in the words, de aeterna Filii existentia. For, surely, otherwise he would not have put de and de, but would rather have expressed it as one article, thus; de divinitate atque aeterna existentia Filii; and then have proceeded with another de, to a new article. Upon the whole, you can never make good your point from this passage of Dr. Cave, which is not only capable of a different construction from yours, but most naturally and most probably requires it.

You would insinuate (Reply, p. 30.) from another passage of Dr. Cave, where he is speaking of Origen, that Origen's supposed errors relating to the Trinity were not, in Dr. Cave's judgment, contrary to any "article of the Church, or Apostolical traditions:" which again is doing that good man a second injury, instead of making satisfaction for the first. Dr. Cave does not say that his supposed errors relating to the Trinity were not contrary to "any article of the Church;" but only that many of Origen's censured opinions were not: and what sort of opinions Dr. Cave meant, he himself tells us in the very place referred to^h; namely, "intricate questions that had been canvassed "only in the schools of the philosophers, and some notions of "his own invention that were minus commodæ, not so just or "accurate as they should be." Now what is this to our present purpose? See the passages of Dr. Cave before cited, sufficiently shewing that he thought the doctrine of the Trinity to be a fundamental "article of the Church," and an "apostolical tradition." But I am weary of attending you through so many trifling pretences. To conclude this head: the most that can be made out of Dr. Cave's expressions, here or elsewhere, is no more than this, that some of the Ante-Nicene Fathers, in some places of their works, expressed themselves sometimes improperly, incautiously, or, it may be, now and then dangerously, in respect of the doctrine of the Trinity, before the meaning of terms was adjusted and settled; and those articles reduced to a more certain and more accurate form of expression. In the sum of the matter, in the main doctrine, the Ante-Nicene Fathers were agreed. This was Dr. Cave's real judgment; as may be seen by his own words before cited: and, I suppose, he may be allowed to be his own best interpreter. He was not only in those sentiments, but zealous for them, being a true lover and admirer of the primitive Fathers. How would the good man have been filled with indignation to have found his name and his authority made use of, to such purposes as you have done ! But enough.

^h Histor. Liter. vol. i. p. 77.

V. I chargedⁱ you further as reporting falsely, that the titles of τοῦ παντὸς ποιητῆς, and τῶν ὄλων δημιουργός, (that is, Creator or Framer of the universe,) were such as the writers of the second century always distinguished the Father from the Son by. I was indeed so tender in this point, as not absolutely to charge this falsehood upon you : but I observed that either this must have been your meaning, or else you had made a very trifling observation. Those words of yours on which I grounded my remark, I have now thrown into the margin^k, for every Latin reader to judge of. You defend yourself (Reply, p. 16.) with these words : “ The words of Athenagoras there cited are these ; “ One unbegotten and eternal Maker of all things. By which epithets, &c. Now of these epithets thus joined, my words are “ certainly true ; nor had the Doctor any right to separate what “ I had thus joined.” One can hardly forbear smiling at this invented answer. If what you now pretend was really your meaning, how came you to say epithets, in the plural, rather than epithet, in the singular ? Why did you distinguish the several epithets with commas ? Again, why did you take such particular notice of per quem, by whom, which you say was attributed to the Son, to distinguish him from him that was omnium opifex, Maker of all things ? Does not your sense here, and your sense in what went before, (as I have represented it,) answer to each other, like two tallies, exactly ? I defy any man that reads your words in the Latin, to understand you otherwise. But if you will needs have it that you intended only to say that the epithet of “ one unbegotten and eternal Maker of all “ things” was peculiar to the Father, in the second century, you shall have the honour of making a shrewd observation, when you tell me in what century downwards to this day, that epithet ⁱ Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 513.

^k Ex quibus omnibus, ex Athenagoræ sententia, Deum illum unum quem Christiani prædicabant, non alium fuisse quam Deum ingenitum, æternum, τοῦ παντὸς ποιητῆν, τῶν ὄλων δημιουργόν, omnium opificem, liquet.

Quibus epithetis istius sæculi Scriptores Deum Patrem a Filio semper distinguebant, Deumque Filium ab hoc omnium opifice ex eo distingui docuerunt, quod sit ille per quem, aut cujus ministerio Pater fecit omnia. Whitby, Disq. Modest. p. 60.

has not been peculiar to the Father as much as then. I before left you the alternative, either of being found trifling in a peculiar manner, or making a false report; and so I do still. One might think, by what follows in your Reply to this article, that you had a mind to own the report, and to vindicate it from the charge of falsehood.

You say, Justin Martyr made a "difference between the word ποιητής and δημιουργός;" and a little after, that he always "speaketh of the Son as being another, not from the δημιουργός, "the Builder, Framer, or Artificer, but ἀπὸ τοῦ ποιητοῦ τοῦ παντὸς, or τῶν ἄλλων, from the Maker of all things," Reply, p. 17, 18. However that be, I shewed you plainly, from three express testimonies¹, that Irenæus, of the same century with Justin, made no such difference. The Son is ποιητής τῶν πάντων, Maker of all things, according to Irenæus, over and over, in as full and strong words as the Father himself can be: so that your remark, as to the writers of the second century, has no truth in it. What you observe of Justin, is not strictly true. He tells us^m indeed, that Plato made a difference between ποιητής and δημιουργός, understanding by the former one that makes a thing from nothing, and by the latter one that frames any thing out of preexistent matter. Justin takes notice of this, in order to shew that Plato's inferior gods must be corruptible, upon Plato's own principles: for the great God is styled by Plato, not ποιητής, but δημιουργός of the other Gods. Consequently they were made of matter, which is corruptible, and therefore are corruptible themselves. What is this to the purpose we are upon? Or how does it appear that Justin himself always observed Plato's distinction? Besides that if he did, it is certain that Justin Martyr supposes God the Son to be ποιητής, or Maker of man, whom he calls the ποίημα, creature of Christⁿ. And there is no reason to doubt, but that he supposed him to be as truly ποιητής, Maker of all other things, according to the constant doctrine of the Church in that very century, as appears from Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, and others.

You go on, in pursuance of your first mistake, to observe, that "δημιουργός being of an inferior sense to that of ποιητής " τῶν ἄλλων, it is no wonder that the Fathers sometimes give it

¹ See my Defence, vol. i. p. 383.
384.

^m Just. Mart. Paræn. p. 91. Ox. ed.

ⁿ Just. Mart. Dial. p. 187. Jeb.

“ to the Son under one of these distinctions, where they say “ with Origen the Father is πρώτος δημιουργός, the first or chief “ Worker, the Son is so in a secondary sense.” This is writing just as if you had never seen the Fathers. I repeat it, that Irenæus gives both those titles indifferently to God the Son, as do other Fathers after him ; which you might have seen in my Defence, vol. i. p. 384. Yet you are loath to admit even so much as δημιουργός to have been applied to the Son, except with a distinction ; quoting, I would say misquoting, Origen, to countenance your pretences. If you please to look again into Origen^o, the word is πρώτως, not πρώτος, signifying not that the Father is the first Worker, as if there were two workers, but that he is primarily Creator. And, what ruins all your fine airy speculations at once, Origen, in that very place, asserts the Son ποιῆσαι (not δημιουργεῖν) τὸν κόσμον, to make, not frame only, the world : which is as much as if he had called him τοῦ κόσμου, or τῶν ὄλων ποιητής.

You quote Eusebius as styling the Father ἀπάντων δημιουργός, the Son αἰτίος δεύτερος. You should have remembered that the same Eusebius styles the Son ὁ μέγας τῶν ὄλων δημιουργός^p. Had this been applied to the Father instead of the Son, what speculations might we not have expected upon the force of ὁ μέγας, the great Creator? You forget also that Eusebius scruples not to use the title of ποιητής τῶν ὄλων, Maker of all things, speaking of the Son ; as I observed in my Defence^q. This is directly against you : and if there be some expressions in Eusebius which we neither approve nor vindicate ; so there are many others that you cannot approve, or make consistent with your principles : quotations therefore from Eusebius will signify little on either side. What you produce (Reply, p. 18.) out of Methodius has been solidly answered by Bishop Bull^r.

You next cite Tatian as a true disciple of Justin Martyr, saying, that “ matter is produced ὑπὸ τοῦ πάντων δημιουργοῦ, “ from the Maker of all things, but the Son was ἐαυτῷ τὴν ἕλην “ δημιουργήσας, Worker of this matter.” But sure the disciple was strangely forgetful of his master's distinction between ποιητής and δημιουργός : otherwise, when he was talking of God's producing matter, he should have styled him ποιητής, not δημιουργός. And

^o Origen. contr. Cels. p. 317.

^p Euseb. Eccl. H. lib. x. cap. 4.

p. 316.

^q Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 383.

^r Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 165.

you are as forgetful of what you had said but the page before : otherwise you should have made the Father no more than Worker of the matter, as well as the Son ; because of the word δημιουργός. See how strangely you are bewildered in your observations, confuting and contradicting yourself. Nothing succeeds with you ; and I will venture to predict that nothing will, so long as you are espousing the cause of heresy, in opposition to the faith of the Catholic Church.

VI. I charged you, sixthly, with three misrepresentations together : one relating to Basil, the other two to Athanasius^a. Basil you represented as declaring against Unity of essence, where he intended nothing but against unity of Person. To which you make answer, (p. 21,) that you “dived not into Basil’s intentions, but cited his words fairly, viz. that the “Sabellian doctrine was corrected by the word consubstantial.” A pretty way this, to cite authors without considering whether they intended any thing to the purpose they are cited for, or no. You cited †Basil, to prove that two things consubstantial make two essences ; whereas Basil meant no more than that they make two Persons. This you call fairly citing his words. You mean, I suppose, that you fairly transcribe his words, at the same time very unfairly perverting his sense.

As to Athanasius, I observed that you understood what he had said against the ὁμοιούσιον, as if it had been said against the ὁμοούσιον, betwixt which two that accurate Father always carefully distinguished. To this you reply, that you cited Athanasius to confirm this proposition, that “they who say the “essence of the Son is like or equal to that of the Father, do “by that ascribe to him another numerical essence from that of “the Father.” I perceive you do not yet understand a syllable of what Athanasius was speaking about. See his meaning explained in my Defence, vol. i. p. 513. Athanasius is so far from supposing like and equal to be equivalent, or even consistent, that he denies that essence to be equal, which is only like ; and he is not observing that either an equal or a like essence must be another numerical essence, but that an essence which is only like to divine, must be an inferior essence. It is very strange, that after a key had been given you to that passage in Athanasius, you should still go on, as before, to confound yourself and your readers. As to the other misrepresentation of Athanasius, whom you suppose an assertor of numerical identity, (which is making him a Sabellian, according to your sense of numerical,) as to this charge upon you, you are pleased to say never a word. That therefore stands as it did.

^a See my Defence, vol. i. p. 513.

[†] Disquisit. Mod. p. 32. Præf.

VII. In the next place, I blamed you for representing Barnabas's epistle, ἐν νόθοις, interpreting it spurious, though that be not the sense of ἐν νόθοις, as it lies in Eusebius. To this you make answer, (p. 20,) that you "neither there nor elsewhere interpret those words at all." This is another instance wherein you appear to be more unkind to yourself, than I had been to you. You declare, p. 19. of your Disquisitions, that Barnabas's epistle was by the ancients held for spurious. This false assertion appeared to have some colour, supposing that you interpret ἐν νόθοις in Eusebius, to mean spurious: but without that, you have made a misreport of the ancients, and have no pretence at all for it. Shew me what ancients, or where they reckoned Barnabas's epistle spurious^u. If you choose rather to have it thought that you have told us an untruth without any colour for it, than with any, be it so: I was willing to put the most candid construction upon the thing; and I shall do so still, if you will give me leave. For I observe, that after you had said *that Eusebius ranked this epistle ἐν νόθοις, you immediately subjoin these words, "Cotelerius confesses that he inclines to the opinion of those who think it is not the Apostle's." Now, this is so very like commenting on the phrase, ἐν νόθοις, just going before, that hardly one reader in a hundred could ever suspect that you understood by ἐν νόθοις any thing else but spurious; that is, falsely ascribed to Barnabas. In a word, it seems to me very much the same thing, whether you interpret a passage thus, or whether you lead your reader into such interpretation: the reader is equally deceived either way. However, if you insist upon it, that you neither interpreted the words at all, nor intended to lead your reader into any such interpretation, I acquiesce; provided only that you give us any tolerable account of your saying that this epistle was looked upon as spurious by the ancients.

^u Certe quicquid de hac epistola dicant recentiores critici, eam Barnabæ nostro constanter ascribunt veteres. "Nemo certe fuit," inquit ó παρὸς Cestriensis noster, "qui hanc Epi-stolam Barnabæ non tribuerit; neque in ea quidquam apparet, quod eam ætatem non ferat." Cav. Histor. Literar. vol. i. p. 11.

* Disq. Mod. p. 9.

VIII. The next thing which I found fault with^y was, your partial account of the ancient doxologies^z. To this you reply, (p. 19,) that you “freely acknowledge your account of the primitive doxologies to be imperfect, as wanting the doxologies “of St. Paul and St. Jude, which are the best rule and standard “of doxologies.” What? better than St. John’s or St. Peter’s? But this it is to aim at wit. You may please to remember that we were not talking of the Scripture-doxologies, but of those which are to be met with in the writings of the Fathers. You had told us in your Disquisitions a notorious untruth, that the Fathers of the first and second century never used that form of doxology which has been especially called Catholic; but that the Arian form had obtained among the early Fathers. This false account I softly called a partial account; to be as tender of you as possible. It is well known that μετὰ or σὺν, in doxologies, is the same as if the particle καὶ be used to connect the Persons: and all such forms come under the name of Catholic, as opposed to such forms as have only διὰ or ἐν: because, though either of those forms may indifferently be used, and have been used by Catholics both in former and latter times: yet after the Arians had perverted one to an ill sense, the Catholics chose, for the most part, to make use of the other. Now of those called Catholic forms, I referred to Polycarp’s^a, the Church of Smyrna’s^b, and Clemens’s of Alexandria^c, all within the two first centuries, and standing evidences of the falsehood of your report, supposing you meant that neither μετὰ, nor σὺν, nor καὶ, were applied in doxologies to the Son or Holy Ghost. Indeed, if any of them are applied to either of those two Persons, it is a contradiction to the Arian pretence that neither of them should be glorified with the Father, but the Father glorified in or by them. You tell me, by way of Reply, (p. 20,) “that the words “of Polycarp, and the Church of Smyrna, comparing the variation of copies, are certainly against me.” How certainly? I know of no variation there is with respect to the Church of

^y Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 514.

^z Disq. Mod. p. 23.

^a Μεθ’ οὗ σοι καὶ πνεύματι ἁγίῳ ἢ δόξα, &c. Polycarp.

^b Μεθ’ οὗ δόξα τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ καὶ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι. Eccles. Smyrn.

^c Τῷ μόνῳ πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ, υἱῷ καὶ πατρὶ, παιδαγωγῷ καὶ διδασκάλῳ υἱῷ, σὺν καὶ τῷ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι· πάντα τῷ ἐνὶ ἐν ᾧ τὰ πάντα. δι’ ὃν τὰ πάντα ἐν, δι’ ὃν τὸ αἰεὶ. οὐ μέλη πάντες. οὐ δόξα, αἰῶνες· πάντα τῷ ἀγαθῷ, πάντα τῷ καλῷ, πάντα τῷ σοφῷ, τῷ δικαίῳ τὰ πάντα· ᾧ ἢ δόξα καὶ νῦν καὶ εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. Clem. Alex. Pædag. lib. iii. p. 311. Ox. ed.

Smyrna's: Eusebius's copy being but an abstract, wants the latter part of the epistle. As to the variation of Polycarp's, it cannot be pretended to make any thing certain against me, unless it be certain that Eusebius's reading be the better of the two; which is by no means probable. Besides, that at the worst, ὁὐ is applied to the Son, even in Eusebius's copy: I suppose you do not insist upon the variation of your own contriving. Besides these, Clemens's doxology will still stand good against you, and St. Basil's testimony concerning the doxologies of the earlier centuries^d, though the doxologies produced by him reach no higher up than the beginning of the third. But the subject of doxologies having been accurately handled of late by others, I shall content myself with referring to their learned and useful tracts upon it^e.

IX. I censured your account of Justin Martyr, as being one continued misrepresentation^f. I considered what I said; and shall now justify my censure. You are pleased, indeed, to put on a more than usual air of assurance upon this occasion. The brightest evidence of truth is what you pretend to, (p. 31.) You resolve to vindicate yourself from this false imputation, and to make me sensible of my conduct; that I have very artificially, very falsely represented Justin Martyr, (p. 31.) have been guilty of pious frauds and notorious artifices, (p. 37.) such artifice and fraud as you have seldom met with, (ibid.) A crowd of falsehoods and misrepresentations you charge upon me, (p. 40.) Yet, after all these big words and fine flourishes, (the feeble vaunts of a desperate cause that needs them,) I will venture to refer the matter in dispute to any man of tolerable capacity and moderate skill in the learned languages. I intimated in my Defence (vol. i. p. 526.) the drift and design of Justin Martyr's Dialogue, of that part which we are now principally concerned with. It was to shew that there was a divine Person, one who was really God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and was not the Father, but was the Logos, or Christ. This account of Justin I will first demonstrate to be true and right; and next shew how easy it is to take off all your boasted reasons, or rather cavils, to the contrary.

^d Basil. de Sp. S. cap. xxix. p. 218, 222.

^e Seasonable Review of Mr. Whiston's Account of primitive Doxologies.

Second Review by the same hand. Bishop of London's Letter defended. By a Believer.

^f Defence of Queries, vol. i. p. 514.

1. Justin Martyr observes, in the beginning of his Dialogues, that the Christians acknowledged no other God than the Jews did. "There never will be, O Trypho, nor ever was since the world began, another God (ἄλλος Θεός) besides the Maker and Disposer of the universe: nor do we imagine that ours is one God and yours another; but it is one and the same, that brought your Fathers out of Egypt with a mighty hand and stretched out arm: nor do we rest our hopes in any other (for there is none other) but in him whom you hope in, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." From hence may be seen how far Justin is from asserting two Gods. There is not, according to him, nor ever was, nor will be, ἄλλος Θεός, another God besides the God of the Jews, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. Thus far he and Trypho were agreed.

2. It was agreed likewise between Justin and Trypho, that one certain Person, the same that created the world, and who is often spoke of in the Old Testament, as Creator of the universe; who was owned by the Jews under that title, and by Christians more especially under the name of Father; I say, it was agreed that that Person was God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

3. Justin Martyr, over and above, asserts that that Person had another Person with him, a real and proper Son; which Son was also God and Lord, and God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. This was the chief matter in debate between Justin and Trypho; and upon which Justin Martyr spends many pages in his Dialogue, alluding to it also elsewhere. Now, the main point in dispute between you and me is, whether this was really Justin's meaning or no. I must prove every syllable of what I here assert; and therefore must dwell the longer upon this article. Justin, I say, asserts another Person, besides the Father, to be really God, God of Abraham, &c. He maintains that ἄλλός ἐστι Θεός^h, or ἕτερος Θεόςⁱ, another is God, which he elsewhere expresses by ἄλλος τις^j, another who is God, besides the Father; which comes to the same as another Person besides the Father. Instead of saying Father, he generally expresses it by the title of Creator of all things; the reason of which I conceive to be, that both he and Trypho received him under that notion: but under the notion of Father, in Justin's sense, he was not ⁱ Ibid. p. 158, 161, 164.

^h Justin. Mart. Dial. p. 34. Jeb.

^h Ibid. p. 147, 163.

^j Ibid. p. 161, 165.

received by Trypho, the question betwixt them being chiefly this; whether he was a Father in a proper sense, that is, whether he had really a Son. Hence, I conceive, it is, that Justin so often denotes the Father by the title of Maker of all things, rather than by the title of Father. Yet he does sometimes make use of the title of Father, instead of the other. He says in one place, οὐχ ὁ πατήρ ἦν^k, instead of saying, οὐχ ὁ ποιητής, τῶν ὄλων ἦν: which, though not so accurate while disputing with a Jew, serves however to shew that those two titles were only different expressions denoting the same Person. Justin, in his first Apology, where he is again upon the same argument, styles the Father, ὁ πατήρ τῶν ὄλων, Father of all things; in the same place censuring the Jews for not acknowledging that he had a Son^l, that is, not acknowledging him to be a Father, in a peculiar and proper sense. This I take notice of to confirm what I have already observed, that it was not proper for Justin, in dispute with a Jew, to call the Father by a title which the Jews did not own, but rather by another which was acknowledged on both sides; viz. Maker of all things, or however, Father of all things, not Father simply. To proceed: Justin asserts, and often inculcates, that this Maker, or Father of all things, has a Son^m, an *only-begotten Son*ⁿ, begotten before the creation^o, begotten of himself^p, (ἐκ Θεοῦ, and ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ.) without abscission or division^q, strictly and properly^r (ἰδίως and κυρίως) a Son, and really (not nominally) distinct from him^s. He asserts further, and proves at large, that this very Son is really God, not called God only, but is God^t: and Justin never says that he is God by voluntary appointment, or as representative of the Father; but as Son of God, he is God. The same is God of the Jews, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, according to Justin. This last particular is what you and I chiefly differ

^k Justin. Mart. Dial. p. 261.

^l Just. Apol. i. p. 122.

^m Justin. Mart. Dial. p. 296, 371.

ⁿ Ibid. p. 309.

^o Ibid. p. 183, 187, 295, 296, 364, 375, 395. Comp. Apol. i. p. 69, 90, 101, 123. Apol. ii. p. 13.

^p Justin. Dial. p. 183. Apol. i. p. 44.

^q Justin. Mart. Dial. p. 183, 373. Comp. Paræn. p. 127.

^r Justin. Mart. Apol. i. p. 44, 46. Apol. ii. p. 13.

^s Justin. Dial. p. 373.

^t Ἔστι καὶ λέγεται Θεὸς καὶ κύριος ἕτερος ὑπὲρ τὸν ποιητὴν τῶν ὄλων, δε καὶ ἄγγελος καλεῖται. Dial. p. 161. Ἄγγελος καλούμενος καὶ Θεὸς ὑπάρχων, p. 187. Θεὸς καλεῖται, καὶ Θεὸς ἐστὶ καὶ ἔσται, p. 176. Θεὸν ἰσχυρὸν καὶ προσκυνητὸν Χριστὸν ὄντα ἐδήλωσε, p. 231. Θεὸν φησὶν εἶναι, p. 367.

^u Just. Mart. Dial. p. 364, 366, 370, 371. Apol. i. p. 123.

upon ; and therefore I must be the more full and copious in the proof of it.

It is a rule and maxim with Justin, that God the Father never appeared; which, I suppose, I need not prove to you, because you yourself contend for it, and in the title-page of your Reply, recommend the determination of the Sirmian Synod in anathematizing any that should say, the Father appeared to Abraham. Please then to take notice, that Justin Martyr quotes ^xExod. iii. 16. where it is said, “The Lord God of your fathers, the God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Jacob, appeared unto me, &c.” These words Justin, upon his principles, must have understood of Christ: he was the Lord God, the God of Abraham, &c. who appeared. And indeed Justin quotes the text for that very purpose, to prove that Christ is God. Soon after he asks the company, whether they did not yet perceive that he who appeared to Moses had declared himself to be the God of Abraham, &c. This passage I before cited in my Defence, (p. 296,) to prove that, according to Justin, Christ himself was God of Abraham. This you complain of, very ridiculously, (Reply, p. 37,) calling it a piece of artifice, and I know not what, as if I had stopped where I ought not; whereas it is impossible that Justin’s words should have any other meaning than that which I have given: the following words in Justin are so far from confronting this sense, that they do nothing more than repeat and confirm the same thing. For after Justin had thus plainly asserted that Christ was God of Abraham, &c. proving it from the text in Exodus; Trypho objects, that possibly it might be an angel only that appeared, and God (that is, God the Father) might speak to Moses by that angel. To which Justin replies; “Admit that both God and an angel were concerned in that appearance to Moses, “as has been proved from the text cited; yet, I insist upon it, “that the Maker of all things was not the God (or that divine “Person) who told Moses that he himself was God of Abraham, “and God of Isaac, and God of Jacob; but it was he of whom I “have proved to you, that he appeared to Abraham, and “to Jacob, administering to the will of the Maker of all λελαηκέναι αὐτῷ, οὗτος αὐτὸς θεὸς ὃν σημαίνει τῷ Μωσῆϊ, ὅτι αὐτὸς ἐστὶν ὁ θεὸς Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ Ἰακώβ; Just. Dial. p. 179.

^x Just. Mart. Dial. p. 178, 179, Comp. Dial. p. 366.

^y Ὁ ἄνθρωπος νενοήκατε, λέγων, ὅτι ὁ θεὸς λέγει Μωσῆς ἀγγελῶν, ἐν πυρὶ φλογῶς

“ things².” Justin goes on to prove this from the absurdity of supposing that God the Father should appear in that manner: upon which Trypho is convinced that he that appeared to Abraham, and was called God and Lord, and was God, was not the Maker of all things; not God the Father, but another, who was also an angel. Then Justin proceeds to give further proof, that none appeared to Moses in the bush but he only, who is called an angel, and is really God, namely, Christ the Son of God. To these testimonies I shall subjoin one more out of Justin’s first Apology, which in English runs thus: “ Now what was said to Moses out of the bush, I am the I AM, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, and the God of thy fathers, denotes that they, though dead, are still in being, and are men of Christ himself.” In this passage, Christ is plainly asserted to be the $\delta \ \acute{\omega}\nu$, the I am, or God of the Jews, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. By four express testimonies out of Justin, this momentous point is established; and the whole tenor of this Father’s writings confirms it. The sum then of Justin’s doctrine is this: That there is no other God besides the God of the Jews, the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob: that God the Father is God of the Jews, God of Abraham, &c. that there is another besides the Father, who is also God of the Jews, God of Abraham, &c. and this other is the Logos, or Christ, the proper and only Son of the Father, undivided and inseparable from him, though begotten of him. The conclusion from all is, that Christ is God, and yet not another God from the Father, but ἄλλος τις another Person only^b. This is Justin’s true, genuine, certain doctrine, which being thus proved and fixed, all your pretences to the contrary drop at once. However, that I may not seem to neglect any thing you have to say, I shall briefly examine your objections one by one.

1. One is, that Justin often speaks of Θεὸς ἕτερος παρὰ τὸν ποιητὴν τῶν ὄλων, another God besides the Maker of all things.

^a Οὐχ ὁ ποιητὴς τῶν ὄλων ἔσται Θεὸς ὁ τῷ Μωσῆϊ εἰπὼν αὐτὸν εἶναι Θεὸν Ἀβραάμ, καὶ Θεὸν Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ Θεὸν Ἰακώβ, ἀλλ’ ὁ ἀποδειχθεὶς ὑμῖν ὄφθαι τῷ Ἀβραάμ καὶ τῷ Ἰακώβ, τῇ τοῦ ποιητοῦ τῶν ὄλων θελήσει ὑπηρετῶν. Ibid. p. 180.

^a Τὸ δὲ εἰρημένον ἐκ βᾶτου τῷ Μωσῆϊ, ἐγὼ εἶμι ὁ ὢν ὁ Θεὸς Ἀβραάμ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰσαὰκ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς Ἰακώβ, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τῶν πατέρων σου, σημαντικὸν τοῦ καὶ ἀποθανόντος ἐκείνου μείνειν, καὶ εἶναι αὐτοῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ ἀνθρώπου. Just. Apol. i. p. 123. Ox.

^b See my Sermons, p. 141, &c. of this volume.

But I have shewn, from Justin's own interpretation, (besides that in strict propriety the words require no more,) that the meaning is only this, that there is ἄλλος τις, another who is God; besides him whom both sides acknowledged under the title of Maker of all things; that is, besides him whom Christians call the Father. Justin then meant only that there is another Person besides the Father, who is also God. To this you except^c, that the word Person, or Hypostasis, was not known to Justin. And what if he uses not the word, might he not without the word assert the thing? Ἄλλος τις really signifies, and is rightly rendered, another Person. But you except further, that Justin does not only say ἕτερος, another, but ἀριθμῶ ἕτερος, another in number; and how can Father and Son be numerically the same God, if they be numerically differing? To which I answer, that they are different Persons, numerically different: and that this was really Justin's sense is manifest from his opposing the word, ἀριθμῶ ἕτερον, another thing in number, to that which ὀνόματι μόνον ἀριθμεῖται, only differs nominally, not really^d. He did not intend to say that Father and Son were two Gods, but only that they were more than two names of the same thing; as some heretics taught, before Sabellius. In this sense, none of the Post-Nicene writers ever denied that the Son is ἀριθμῶ ἕτερος, or ἕτερόν τι, another, or another thing, really distinct from the Father^e. The same way of speaking you will find in the Church as low as Damascen^f. But you say, (Mod. Disquis. p. 29.) that the Post-Nicene Fathers guarded their expressions by the word hypostasis, which Justin does not. And what if the disputes which happened after Justin's time made it necessary to guard such expressions, as having been used formerly without offence, came at length to be perverted to an ill meaning? There is nothing strange in this. It is well observed by the judicious and learned Du-Pin, speaking indeed of Theognostus, but the remark is applicable to others of the ancients, who may claim the like favour of interpretation. "Photius," says he, "has wrongfully accused Theognostus to "have erred concerning the divinity of the Son, upon the score

^c Disquis. Mod. p. 29.

^d Vid. Justin. Dial. p. 373.

^e Basil. Ep. 300. p. 1070. Athan. Orat. iv. p. 619. Contr. Sabell. p. 41. Cyril. Alex. Thesaur. p. 60, 110.

Ambr. de Fid. lib. iii. cap. 15. Greg.

Nyss. Cat. Orat. cap. 1.

^f Vid. Damascen. lib. i. cap. 6. lib. iii. cap. 6.

“ of a few expressions that did not agree with those of his own “ age; without taking notice that though the ancients have “ spoken differently as to this point, yet the foundation of the “ doctrine was always the same; and that it is an horrid injustice “ to require them to speak as nicely, and with as much pre“ caution, as those that lived after the birth and condemnation “ of heresies.” In a word, though Justin has not used the like guards with the Post-Nicene writers, since he had not the like occasions; yet his sense, without any such guards, is plain enough to any man that duly weighs and considers it.

2. You pretend from Justin, (Disq. Mod. p. 33.) that Christ is not Maker of all things. But this you can never prove out of Justin: for all that Justin meant, by distinguishing Christ from the Maker of all things, was only this, that Christ is not that Person, ordinarily and eminently styled Maker of all things; that is, he is not the Father himself, as some heretics pretended, and as the Jews in effect taught, by applying these texts to God the Father, which Justin interprets of God the Son.

3. You object that Christ does nothing of his own power. This is no where said by Justin of Christ, considered in his highest capacity. Justin indeed admits that both the power and substance of the Son is derived from the Father. But this is a different thing from saying that Christ did nothing by his own power. The Father's power is his power, Christ's own power.

4. You object (Disq. Mod. p. 30, 33.) that Christ is no more than the chief power, (πρώτη δύναμις,) after the chief God, μετὰ τὸν πρῶτον Θεόν. But Justin no where puts those words together as you have done. He does indeed say, that the Son is the principal Power after (that is, next in order to) the Father of all things: which is no more than to say, that he is the next Person to the Father, as all allow. What inference can you draw from thence against our principles? As to the words πρῶτος Θεός, chief God, it is Plato's expression, and, as such, cited by Justin^h.

5. You object that Christ “hath all that he hath from the “ Father.” This is true, and acknowledged by all Catholics, before and after the Nicene Council, from Justinⁱ down to Damascen^k.

^ε Justin. Mart. Apol. i. p. 66.

^h Justin. Apol. i. p. 114.

ⁱ Αἴτιος αὐτῶ τοῦ εἶναι, καὶ δυνατῶ, καὶ κυρίῳ, καὶ Θεῶ. Just. Dial. p. 374.

^k Πάντα οὖν ὅσα ἔχει ὁ υἱὸς καὶ τὸ πνεῦμα ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχει, καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ

6. You object that, according to Justin, (Disq. p. 33.) "Christ could not be saved but by the help of God." This is spoke of Christ, in respect of his humanity; and brought in among the proofs of Christ's being a *man*¹. And it was suitable to Christ's humble state on earth, for an example and lesson to other men, to refer all to God.

7. You object that Christ is "manifestly distinguished from "the God of Abraham." But this is manifestly false, in your sense of it. Christ is plainly God of Abraham, according to Justin; as hath been before shewn. You may say, if you please, that the Father is distinguished from the God of Abraham; which is true, as he is distinguished from the Son, who is God of Abraham: in like manner, I presume, we may allow that the Son is distinguished from the God of Abraham, and leave you to make your utmost advantage of it. You observe, that when the Son is distinguished from the God of Abraham, there is added, "besides whom there is no other God." From thence you may learn, that though the Son be God of Abraham, as well as the Father, yet there are not two Gods of Abraham: the Son is not another God of Abraham, but another Person only.

8. You object further, (Disq. Mod. p. 27, 33,) that Christ "would not suffer himself to be called good, but remitted that "title to the Father only^m." You should have added, as Justin does in the same place, that Christ was a "worm, and no man, "the scorn of men, and the outcast of the people:" and then the reader would have seen plainly what Justin was talking about.

9. You object that Christ is not "called God by Justin, on "account of his having the Father's essence communicated to "him, but because of his being begotten of him before the cre- "ation:" that is, Justin has not said it in terms, though he has in sense. To be the proper Son of the Father, and to be begotten of him inseparably, and without division, (which is Justin's doctrine,) is the same thing as to have the nature or essence of the Father communicated to him. This is clear from Justin's similitudes and illustrationsⁿ. For, I suppose, one fire lighted of another is of the same nature with that other: and thus it is,

¹ ibid. Damasc. de Fid. Orth. lib. i. Comp. 303.

cap. 10.

¹ Vid. Just. Mart. Dial. p. 298.

^m Ibid. p. 298.

ⁿ Vid. Justin. Dial. p. 183, 373.

that the Nicene Fathers supposed the Son to be, as it were, Light of Light; intending thereby to signify his consubstantiality.

10. But you object, that the Son (according to Justin) "is God by the will of the Father." This might be understood in a good sense, had it been asserted by Justin. But the passage which you build this upon does not say so much; as shall be shewn in another place, and as I have before observed in my Defence, vol. i. p. 350.

11. But Christ, you say, is subservient to the will of the Father. And what if it pleased the second Person of the blessed Trinity to transact all matters between God the Father and mankind? be thankful for it, and make not yourself a judge of the divine and mysterious dispensations. I observed in my Defence, (vol. i. p. 442.) that one Person may be delegate to another, without being of an inferior nature: otherwise one man could not be delegate to another. This "thin piece of sophistry" you undertake to answer (Reply, p. 73.) in these words: "One man may be delegate to another, because he is 'another individuum of the same species, but different in his particular essence from him; but dares the Doctor say the second or third Person thus differs from the first?" To which I reply, that, from your own confession, it is manifest that merely from delegation no argument can be drawn to inferiority of nature; which was the point I was upon, and which is sufficiently proved by that instance. As to the Persons differing from each other, as one man differs from another, I readily deny any such difference among the divine Persons: and I leave you to prove at leisure, that all delegation requires it. When you can do that, I shall submit to the charge of sophistry: in the mean time, please to suffer it to lie at your own door.

Having thus considered all, or however your most considerable pretences from Justin Martyr, and shewn them to be weak and frivolous; I hope I may have leave once more to say, that your account of this Father is one continued misrepresentation. You have, under this article, took a great deal of pains to weaken the force of an argument which I had used in my Defence, vol. i. p. 291, &c. It would break my method too much here to attend you in it; to shew how you have left my main arguments and testimonies untouched, and have done little more than endeavoured to confront them with other testimonies; which, notwithstanding, when rightly understood, are nothing at all to the purpose. If the reader pleases but to consider and compare what I have said in my Defence, I am not apprehensive that your pretences can have much weight with him. However, if a proper occasion offers, and if need be, or if I have not sufficiently obviated them already, I may perhaps take some further notice of them, either in a second part to this, or elsewhere, whenever my adversaries shall favour me with a large and particular examination of the whole piece. I shall now proceed, in my method, to another article of the charge.

X. The tenth thing which I charged you with (Defence, vol. i. p. 514.) was, that in your Disquisitions, (p. 61.) you took occasion from the Latin version to misrepresent Athenagoras, insinuating from it, that the Son is not like the Father. Here you are so ingenuous as to plead guilty, and to give me leave to triumph, (Reply, p. 14.) but with this sting in it, that it is “the only argument I attempted to answer.” But whether that be so or no, our readers, I suppose, may be the properest judges; to whom I leave it, and proceed.

XI. I charged you further, (Defence, vol. i. p. 514, 515.) with another misconstruction of a passage in Athenagoras; a very famous one, and of singular use in this controversy. You appeared to me to construe the words οὐχ ὡς γενόμενον^o, not as eternally generated; which is a very new and peculiar construction. You deny the fact, as indeed you may well be ashamed to own it. But I shall literally translate that paragraph of your book, and then the reader may the more easily judge of it. “Hence “it appears that Athenagoras, with the Christians of the same “age, believed the Father only to be Θεὸν ἀγέννητον καὶ ἀίδιον, “God unbegotten and eternal, and the Son of God the Father to “be styled πρῶτον γέννημα, the first offspring, οὐχ ὡς γενόμενον, “not on the account of any eternal generation, properly so “called, such as might constitute the Son ζῶντα καὶ ὑφ'εστώτα, “living and subsisting by himself, in or out of the Father; but “because the Father, being himself an eternal mind, had from “eternity λόγον, reason, in himself, ἀίδίως λογικὸς ὢν, being eternally rational p.” The reader must here observe, that as you intermix Greek with your sentences six times, in the same οὐχ ὡς γενόμενον, ἐξ ἀρχῆς γὰρ ὁ Θεός, 10. p. 38.

^o Πρῶτον γέννημα εἶναι τῷ πατρὶ, λόγον ἀίδίως λογικὸς ὢν. Athenag. cap.
νοῦς ἀίδιος ὢν, εἶχεν αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὸν

P Whitby, Disquisit. Mod. p. 62.

manner, so in five of them, the words immediately following the Greek are plainly intended as the construction or interpretation of it. I had therefore good reason, from parity of circumstances, to take the words immediately following those Greek words, οὐχ ὡς γινόμενον, as your construction or interpretation of them: especially since you begin with the negative particle, just as the Greek does. You seem to be so sensible of this yourself, that when in your Reply (p. 14.) you come to give your English reader a different turn of the passage, you are forced to leave the Greek words οὐχ ὡς γινόμενον quite out: for had they appeared here in your Reply, as they do in your Disquisitions, the reader would have seen at once that my censure was just. But let us, for argument sake, admit your plea, that you did not intend those words following Athenagoras's Greek as an interpretation of it; do you consider how unaccountable a part you have acted in citing the words at all? They are words which we greatly value, and lay a stress upon, as being of irresistible force against the Arians. Ought you not, while you were pleading the cause of Arianism from this very passage, to have attempted some solution of the difficulty arising from those words, which so plainly stare you in the face? Sandius and Gilbert Clerke thought themselves obliged to say something, however weak and unsatisfactory; which was better than to attempt nothing at all. But what do you, if we are to take your own last thoughts upon it? You could not but know that these words, in their obvious natural meaning, are directly repugnant to the conclusion which you are aiming at; you see the very words, you transcribe them, and leave them as you find them, without any interpretation or solution. Now what is this but to shew that you was aware of the objection, and was not able to answer it, nor so much as willing to endeavour it; and yet resolutely persist, even against conviction, to wrest and force the passage to your own meaning? I am persuaded you might more prudently have submitted to the first charge, than have took this way of getting rid of it. But it is frequent with you, for want of considering, to double the fault which you hoped to excuse; and for the avoiding of one difficulty, to run yourself into more and greater.

To conclude this article: if you intended an interpretation of Athenagoras's words, as I conceive you did, then you have, in the whole, misrepresented the author, but with something of colour for it: if you did not, still you have, in the whole, misrepresented him, and without any colour for it. Either way, you have dealt unfairly with Athenagoras, and have endeavoured to impose upon your readers.

XII. The next thing I laid to your charge⁹ was a ridiculous representation of Tertullian; as if Tertullian believed two angels to be as much one, as God the Father and God the Son are. To this you reply, (p. 21,) that you “say nothing of what Tertullian believed: but only from these words (the Son of God is called God from the Unity of substance, for God is a spirit) you think it evident, that Tertullian concludes hence the Unity of the Father and the Son, that they are both spirits; which two angels and two demons also are.” Is there then no regard to be had to what an author is otherwise known to believe? Or is it fair and just to construe an ambiguous sentence (supposing this ambiguous, and not rather plain enough against you) in direct opposition to his certain undoubted principles? But what makes it the more unjust in this case is, that Tertullian, in that very paragraph, within a line or two of the words which you ground your remark upon, resolves the Unity of Father and Son into this; that they are de Spiritu Spiritus, de Deo Deus, de Lumine Lumen; Spirit of Spirit, God of God, Light of Light^s. Can this be said of two angels or two demons, that they are light of light, or spirit of spirit? Have they any such relation to, or intimate conjunction with, each other, as is here plainly signified of Father and Son? Well then, what is the result? You have misunderstood Tertullian, or rather perverted his meaning. He does not say that Father and Son are one, because they are both spirits; any more than he says they are one, because they are both Gods; nor would it be sufficient for one to be Spirit, and the other to be Spirit, or one to be God, and the other God, unless one were also of the other, inseparably united to him, and included in him. Tertullian indeed observes that God the Father is Spirit, as he had before observed of God the Son: and this

⁹ Defence, vol. i. p. 515.

^r Disq. Mod. p. 108.

^s Et nos etiam sermoni, atque rationi, itemque virtuti per quæ omnia molitum Deum ediximus, propriam substantiam spiritum inscribimus, cui et sermo inest prænuntianti, et ratio adsit disponenti, et virtus præsit perficienti. Hunc ex Deo prolatum didicimus, et prolatione generatum, et idcirco Filium was right, that so he might come to his conclusion, that they are Spirit of Spirit; which they could not be, unless each of them were Spirit. This therefore is mentioned, not because it makes them one, but because they could not be one without it. They must be Spirit and Spirit, to be Spirit of Spirit: but the latter contains more than the former; and it is into this that Tertullian resolves the formal reason of the Unity; or rather, both considerations are included in his notion of Unity of substance. This will appear from a bare literal rendering of his words. "We have learned that he (God the Son) is prolated, "and by his prolation generated, and upon that score he is styled "Son of God, and God, from Unity of substance. For even God " (the Father) is Spirit: and when a ray is produced from the "sun, a portion from the whole, the sun is in the ray, because "it is the sun's ray; and the substance is not separated, but extended: in like manner, here is Spirit of Spirit, and God of "God, as Light of Light." You see how Tertullian makes it necessary to Unity of substance, that the substance be not separate: and thus Father and Son are one, not merely because each of them is Spirit, but because both are undivided substance, or Spirit; Spirit of Spirit. When I wrote my Defence, I thought a hint might have been sufficient in things of this nature; little imagining I should ever have the trouble of explaining such matters as these, which appear by their own light, upon a bare inspection into the author.

Dei et Deum dictum est unitate substantiæ. Nam et Deus Spiritus: et cum radius ex sole porrigitur, portio ex summa: sed sol erit in radio, quia solis est radius, nec separatur substantia sed extenditur. Ita de Spiritu Spiritus et de Deo Deus, ut Lumen de Lumine accensum. Tertull. Apol. cap. xxi. p. 202, 203. Lugd.

XIII. In the next place, I charged you^t with a misconstruction of a noted passage in Irenæus. To this you make no reply at all; wherefore it stands as before; and I have, I suppose, your tacit allowance to triumph here, as, in a former place, your express permission.

XIV. I found fault^u with your representation^x of Tertullian; as if that writer believed God the Son to have been, in his highest capacity, ignorant of the day of judgment. To this you make answer, (Reply, p. 22,) that "you only cite his express "words without any descant upon them." It is very true that you make no formal descant upon those very words; but both before and after, you are arguing, with all your might, against Tertullian's belief of the eternity and consubstantiality. I hope it is no affront to suppose that you had some meaning in bringing in the passages about the Son's ignorance; and that you would have your readers think them pertinent, at least, to the point in hand. The whole design of your book, and what goes before and after in the same section, sufficiently shew your intention in citing those passages; and are, interpretatively, a descant upon them. Your meaning and purport in it is so plain that no reader can mistake it: wherefore your pretence now that you have made no descant upon the words, after you find that you are not able to defend your sense of them, is a very poor evasion. There were two citations from Tertullian about the Son's ignorance. I had shewn that one of them plainly relates to Christ's human nature; and I might reasonably judge from thence the same thing of the other also, since both are of the same author. It is not therefore strictly true that I answer nothing, as you pretend, to the first citation: for, by answering one, I have, in effect, answered both. It was your business to prove that either of the passages were to be understood of Christ, in his highest capacity: but for want of proof, you are content to insinuate it only to your reader; and so you leave it with him, trusting to his weakness or partiality. However, instead of asking a proof of you, I gave you a proof of the contrary; demonstrating from the context, (especially from the words exclamans quod se Deus reliquisset, which Tertullian in express words interprets of the human nature), that the supposed ignorance of Christ was understood by Tertullian of Christ's humanity only. Now you say (p. 22.) that "the words, known only to the Father, exclude the "Son in all capacities." Very well then; I had the good fortune to hit your meaning before, though you made no descant upon the words. As to your pretence from the term only, there is no ground for it. No man of any judgment, that is at all acquainted with Tertullian's way and manner of explaining the exclusive terms relating to this subject, would ever draw any such inference from them. But you have a further pretence, that "all the words preceding speak not of the Son of man, "but of the Son of God." The reason is, because he was to prove that the Son of God was really distinct from the Father; and that the Father was not incarnate, as the Praxeans pretended. He proves it unanswerably from this topic, among others; that in regard to the Son's ignorance of the day of judgment, Father and Son are plainly spoken of, as of two Persons; one as knowing, the other as not knowing, though in a certain respect only: wherefore the Father himself was not the Person incarnate, which was to be proved. In this view, Tertullian's argument is just and conclusive; and the text relating to the Son's ignorance pertinently alleged, though understood of Christ's humanity. This I observed before, and explained more at large in my Defence, vol. i. p. 517, 518, &c. You resolve, notwithstanding, to proceed in your own way, and to make a show of saying something, though you find yourself already foreclosed, and every objection obviated. You say thus: "From this mistake of "Tertullian's citing texts relating only to Christ's human nature, he saw this objection would arise, that the Fathers "argued impertinently against the Sabellians." I did indeed foresee, that there might be some colour for such an objection, among those that take things upon the first view, without looking any further. I proposed the objection fairly, and then fully answered it; as the reader may please to see in my Defence. And now, what have you to reply? I had said that Catholics and Sabellians both allowed that God was incarnate, and that the main question (that is, so far as concerns the incarnation, whereof I was speaking) was, whether the Father himself made one Person with Christ's human nature, or no. In answer hereto, you make a show of contradicting me without opposing me at all, except in one particular, wherein you are plainly mistaken. You run off for near a page together, telling us only trite things which every body knows, concerning the dispute between Catholics and Sabellians. If by singular essence be meant the same with Hypostasis, or Person, (as you understand it,) that indeed was the main article of dispute between Catholics and Sabellians, whether Father and Son were one and the same Hypostasis. But when the principles of each side were brought down to the particular case of the incarnation, then the main point in question was, whether the Hypostasis of the Father was incarnate or no. The Sabellians allowing but one divine Hypostasis, and yet admitting God to be incarnate, were of course obliged to assert it: and the Catholics, on the other hand, admitting more divine Hypostases than one, denied it. How the Catholics proved their point, I shewed you distinctly; and you have nothing of moment to reply to it. Only you are pleased to acquaint us with an invention of your own, that the "Sabellians allowed “ in Jesus only flesh ; and by the Spirit of Jesus they understood “ the Godhead of the Father.” But who, before yourself, ever reckoned it among the Sabellian tenets, that Christ had no human soul ? It is very peculiar of you to cite Tertullian in proof of it, on account of these words ; dicentes Filium carnem esse, id est hominem, id est Jesum ; Patrem autem Spiritum, id est Deum : when Tertullian, in the very passage, interprets flesh by man, and Jesus ; and interprets Spirit by divine Spirit, or God. As to the belief of Christ's human soul, it was an established article of faith in Tertullian's time, as appears from several passages^z ; and before Tertullian, as is clear from Irenæus^a and Justin Martyr^b. How then comes it to pass, that none of the Catholics ever took notice of this error of the Sabellians, their denying a human soul ? I mention not how the Sabellian hypothesis must have been very needlessly and stupidly clogged by such a tenet ; for they could never have given any tolerable account of the Son's praying to the Father, of his increasing in wisdom, of his being afflicted and sore troubled, and crying out in his agonies and sufferings, without the supposition of a human soul. What ? Was it only walking flesh, or animated clay, that did all this ? Or was it the Hypostasis of the Father, the eternal God, as such, that did these things ? You allow only these two ; and not caring, it seems, how stupid and senseless you make all the Sabellians, one of these you must, of course, father upon them. It is true that they supposed the Father to have suffered, and they were therefore called Patripassians : that is, they supposed the Father to suffer (as we believe of the Son) in the human nature. But they were never so gross and wild in their imaginations as to suppose the Godhead, as such, to suffer, to be sore troubled, to be in agonies, to cry out, &c. And yet it is ridiculous to apply this to flesh only, without a soul : neither can it be reasonably imagined of the Sabellians, unless they believed of men in general, that they have no such thing as a soul distinct from the body. In short, their retreating at length to this, that there were two Hypostases^c in Christ, a divine and human, in order to solve the difficulties they were pressed with, sufficiently discovers their sentiments. For neither could that sub-

^t Defence, vol. i. p. 515, 516. ^u Ibid. p. 516. ^x Disquis. Mod. p. 147.

† Vid. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 2, 5, 18, 19.

^z Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 16, 30. de Carn. Christi, cap. 10.

^a Iren. lib. v. cap. 1. p. 292. ed. Bened.

^b Justin. M. Apol. ii. p. 26. Ox.

^c Vid. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 27. Comp. Athanas. contr. Sabell. Gregal. p. 39. ed. Bened.

terfuge do them any service, unless Jesus was supposed a distinct Person; nor could they be so weak as to imagine a living carcass, a body without a soul, to be a person. To conclude this article, the Sabellians, when they retired at length to that salvo, taking sanctuary in two Hypostases, understood one of them to be God the Father, the other, the man Christ Jesus^d: which was afterwards the doctrine of Paul of Samosata, and of Photinus, who thus refined upon the Sabellian heresy. But I have been rather too long in confuting a pretence which has nothing to countenance it in history; besides that it is plainly repugnant to good sense.

XV. The next thing I charged you with^e was, your pretending, falsely, that Bp. Bull had not shewn that the Fathers of the second century resolved the Unity into the same principle with the Nicene Fathers. I observed that the Bishop had shewn it, referring you to the place where^f. You now say in your Reply, (p. 24,) "That which the Bishop has done in that section is fully answered and refuted, p. 197, 198." I have turned to those pages in your Disquisitions, and can see nothing like it; except it be your fancy, or fiction, that the Ante-Nicene Fathers, when they speak of the Logos as existing in the Father before his coming forth, mean it of an attribute only, and nothing real. This groundless surmise is at large confuted by Bishop Bull^g: and give me leave also to refer you to what I have observed^h on that head. What you add, relating to Clemens Romanus, is only gratis dictum, and wants to be proved.

XVI. I blamed youⁱ further for referring^k to Basil, as an evidence that Gregory Thaumaturgus believed God the Son to be a creature. You tell me in your Reply, (p. 24,) that you "say nothing of his (Gregory's) faith." Please to look back to your Modest Disquisitions, and revise your own former thoughts, which run thus: "Lastly, it is to be noted that "neither Gregory Thaumaturgus, who, as St. Basil witnesseth, "depressed Christ into the rank of creatures, (in creaturarum consum depressit), nor Dionysius of Alexandria, who, as the same " (Basil) witnesseth, denied the consubstantiality, could have

^d See this expressly asserted in Athanasius, tom. ii. p. 39. before referred to.

^e Defence, vol. i. p. 518.

^f Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. sect. iv. cap. 4.

^g Bull. Def. Fid. sect. iii. cap. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10.

^h Defence, vol. i. p. 360, &c. Sermons, p. 149, &c. of this volume.

ⁱ Ibid. vol. i. p. 518.

^k Mod. Disq. p. 84.

“thought rightly (recte sentire potuisse) of the proper eternity of “Christ.” Is this saying nothing of Gregory’s faith? though he depressed the Son into the rank of creatures, as you tell us he did; and though he could not think (i. e. believe) rightly of Christ’s proper eternity, as you also say; yet you have said nothing of Gregory’s faith. Ridiculous: you have said it, and quoted Basil for it; notwithstanding that Bishop Bull had demonstrated the contrary even from Basil himself; as I before observed, and you do not gainsay. And now, to use your own words relating to this article, “let the reader judge where the “falsehood lies.” Your repeating some things from Petavius and Huetius, upon this occasion, signifies little. Bp. Bull had considered and answered what those two great men had said: and you come up again with the same baffled objections; though you are so sensible that they have been fully answered, that you have not a word to reply, but are forced tacitly to allow that Gregory’s faith was right; however he happened to drop some suspected words, which were made an ill use of.

XVII. I charged you^l with the revival of an old objection, which Bishop Bull had ingenuously set forth in its full force, and as fully answered^m.

To this you reply, (p. 25,) that you have fully confuted this pretended answer of the Bishop’s, in your Dissertation de Scriptur. Interpret. p. 51, 52. and also in the place cited of your Mod. Disquis. p. 87, 88. I have turned to your Dissertation, and find what you point to in the Preface, p. 51, 52. There I meet with two or three exceptions, mostly wide of the point, and scarce deserving notice. We must suppose our readers acquainted with the argument we are upon, which it would be tedious to give at length: and now I will shew you how slight your objections are.

1. First, you say, that the “appearance of Christ’s divine “nature” (to the Patriarchs) “under human form, did not make “the Logos another God from the Father.” No, certainly; nor did any of the Ante-Nicene writers pretend it: but if the Logos appeared in a certain manner and form; and the Father never appeared in any manner or form; the Logos is not the Father: which was the thing to be proved.

2. You object, that “certainly the divine nature of Christ

^l Defence, vol. i. p. 518, &c.

^m Bull. Def. Fid. N. p. 267.

“ was in heaven, when it appeared on earth.” Undoubtedly: and those very writers who represent the Father as being in heaven, and the Son as being on earth, yet acknowledge them both to be equally present every where: and they refer it to the *οικονομία*ⁿ, that the two Persons are represented, as it were, in different places; one here, the other there.

3. You object, that “ those ancients who looked upon it “ as impious to ascribe to the Father such things as they made “ no scruple of applying to the Son, must have thought there “ was some difference between the Father and Son in those “ respects.” I answer, that they thought of no more difference than this, that one was a Father, and the other a Son; and that one was to be incarnate, and the other not. It would have been impious to ascribe to the Person of the Father what was proper to the Person of the Son; not only because the Father was never to be sent, nor to act a ministerial part, any more than he was to be incarnate; but also because the tendency of such pretences was to make Father and Son one Hypostasis, or Person, and was in reality to deny that there was any Son at all. Your citations from Tertullian and Justin Martyr are not pertinent, unless you supposed yourself to be arguing against Sabellians. Having done with your Dissertation, let us next come to Disquis. Modest. p. 87. There, I must observe, you have hardly one word to the purpose. All that you prove is, that Father and Son are not one numerical essence, in your sense; that is, they are not one numerical Person, which is readily allowed: as also that they have not one numerical will, power, &c. in your sense, though they have in another. Voluntas de voluntate, potentia de potentia is the Catholic doctrine, as much as substantia de substantia, or Deus de Deo. In short, if you would do any thing towards confuting Bishop Bull, you should answer the authorities which he brought, to prove that those very Ante-Nicene writers (who argued that it could not be the Father that appeared, and descended, and was found in a place) acknowledged, notwithstanding, that the Son was, in his own nature, invisible and ⁿ Habes Filium in terris, habes Patrem in cælis: non est separatio ista, sed dispositio divina. Cæterum scias Deum etiam intra abyssos esse, et ubique consistere, sed vi et potesomnipresent, as well as the Father; and that the same writers (some of them) expressly interpreted those appearances, &c. of the οικονομία, economy or dispensation, which it pleased God the Son to run through; transacting all matters between God the Father and the world of creatures. As to the οικονομία, and what Bishop Bull intends by it, the reader may see in his Defence of the Nicene Faith, (p. 10.) What you mean by denying it is very hard to conjecture, unless you have some weak evasion (Reply, p. 26.) in the words, "beginning from the fall of Adam:" for you say, and seem to lay some stress upon it, that "it began from the beginning of the creation." Does Bishop Bull deny that? See his own words in the margin°. But, it seems, you are to construe Bishop Bull's saying, that it was as "high as the fall of Adam," (in opposition to such as supposed it to commence at the incarnation, and no sooner,) as if he had said, it began from the fall of Adam: and this you are to do, only to find some pretence for contradicting Bishop Bull, and diverting the reader from the point in hand. I referred you (Defence, vol. i. p. 518.) to authors^p, ancient and modern, who asserted the οικονομία in Bishop Bull's sense. To which you have nothing of any moment to oppose; only you discover a great dissatisfaction that Bishop Bull had so well guarded his point, and vindicated his doctrine, that all your most pompous and plausible pretences fall before him.

tate: Filium quoque ut individuum cum ipso ubique. Tamen in ipsa οικονομία Pater voluit Filium in terris haberi, se vero in cælis. Tertull. adv. Prax. cap. 2.

XVIII. I charged you^q with setting Clemens of Rome and St. Paul at variance; and yet giving the preference to Clemens, as "laying Christianity before us in its naked simplicity." To this article you are pleased to say never a word.

XIX. I took notice also, in another place^r, of your sophistical way of reasoning against the belief of mysteries, or matters above comprehension. I called upon you (vol. i. p. 459, 460.) to explain your meaning, and to let us know distinctly what there is in the doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity to give you such offence, and to raise your zeal against it; whether it be that the doctrine is, in your judgment, contradictory to reason, or only

° Deus Pater, quemadmodum per Filium suum mundum primum creavit; ita per eundem Filium se deinceps mundo patefecit. Bull. Def. F. N. p. 10.

^p Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 2, 3.

Clem. Alex. p. 831, 955. ed. Ox. Tatian. cap. 8. ed. Ox. Hippol. contr. Noët. p. 12, 15. Fabric. Vales. Not. in Euseb. p. 5, 6, 90, 253.

^q Defence, vol. i. p. 519.

^r Ibid. p. 453.

above reason ; or that it is unscriptural only, and no more : but to this also you vouchsafe no reply.

XX. I charged you further (vol. i. p. 350.) with using a bad art, to serve a bad cause : which was the severest thing I had said of you, and which you had given me just occasion for ; as I shewed plainly in the place referred to. In apology for yourself, (Reply, p. 56.) you cite a passage of my Defence, (vol. i. p. 527.) where I say, “ A writer is not to be blamed, in some cases, “ for taking what is to his purpose, and omitting the rest.” To which give me leave to answer in my own words, as they follow in the same page ; “ But, as the case is here, the best, and indeed only, light, to direct the reader to the true meaning of “ what is cited, is left out.” You say, your “ design being only “ to prove from the words of Justin^s, that Christ was God “ κατὰ βουλήν αὐτοῦ, according to the will of his Father, what reason could you have to add that he was also styled an angel? But, do you not yet perceive that the question is, whether Christ be said to be God κατὰ βουλήν αὐτοῦ, according to the will of the Father, in that place of Justin, or no ? The words, literally rendered, run thus : “ Who, according to his (the Father’s) will, is “ both God, being his Son, and an angel, as ministering to his “ Father’s will.” The meaning of the passage is not, as you represent it, that Christ is “ God by the will of the Father,” (though even that might bear a good sense,) but that it pleased God that his Son, who was God already, as God’s Son, should be an angel also. That he was God, was a necessary thing ; but that he should be both, was not so. This I took to be the true sense of the passage. For Justin gives the reason why he was God ; it was because he was God’s Son. He resolves his divinity into Sonship here, as indeed every where ; and Sonship into communication of substance, as I have observed above. Now let us consider what you had done with this passage. The Latin version runs thus : Qui juxta voluntatem ejus, et Deus est, Filius quippe ipsius, et angelus ex eo quod sententiæ illius est ad- minister. Instead whereof you give us this : Qui ex voluntate ipsius, et Deus est et Filius ipsius^t. Here, by putting in the particle et before Filius, and leaving out et angelus, you determine

^s Τὸν κατὰ βουλήν τὴν ἐκείνου καὶ Θεὸν ὄντα, υἱὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἄγγελον ἐκ τοῦ ὑπηρετεῖν τῇ γνώμῃ αὐτοῦ. Dial. p. 370.

Compare the words of Novatian :

Personæ autem Christi convenit, ut et Deus sit, quia Dei Filius ; et angelus sit, quoniam paternæ dispositionis adnuntiator est. Novat. cap. 26.

^t Whitby, Disquisit. Mod. p. 32.

the words to your own sense, though capable of another sense as they lie in the author. This is what I had just reason to complain of, that you should take upon you to leave out and put in what you please, to tie the words down to your own meaning; when the words otherwise may, or rather must, bear a different construction, if you please to let them appear entire, and without any interpolation.

You say, (Reply, p. 56,) that you "had authority from Justin's own words to do this." What! Had you authority from Justin's own words to change both his words and his sense? He does not say that Christ was God and a Son too by the will of the Father; but that he was, according to the will of the Father, both God, as being his Son, and an angel. I insist upon it that the meaning may be no more than this, that it pleased God that he who was already God should not only be God, but an angel also; and that though it was owing to God's good pleasure that he was both, yet it was necessary for him to be one, as he was partaker of the divine substance, being God's Son. You cite other passages of Justin, declaring that Christ was Θεὸς ἐκ τοῦ εἶναι τέκνον πρωτότοκον τῶν ὄλων κτισμάτων, God as being born (or begotten) before all creatures: and that he was Θεὸς, Θεοῦ υἱὸς ὑπάρχων, God, as being the Son of God. Now these and the like passages make against you, as shewing that Justin resolved Christ's divinity into his Sonship, that is, communion of essence, or substance^u, not into voluntary appointment. If it be objected that he was a Son κατὰ βουλήν according to Justin, and that therefore he must be God κατὰ βουλήν, if he be God as God's Son; I answer, that the consequence is not just. For while Justin understands the Sonship of a temporal and voluntary προέλευσις, or coming forth, he supposes the Logos not to have been ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, but from the very substance of the Father; and therefore he was God, as having ever existed before his coming forth, in and with the Father. In a word, he came forth, was not created, and therefore he is God. Had he been produced from nothing, as creatures are, he could not be God: but since he came forth as a Son, of the same divine substance with the Father, therefore he is God. This I take to be the true account of Justin's principles relating to this head; as also of all the other Fathers that speak of a voluntary generation. See my Defence, vol. i. Qu. viii. You see then, how wide a difference there is between your account of Justin and mine. I desire only to have Justin's text fairly represented as it is. To put in or leave out any thing here, and thereby to determine the sense against us, in so critical a place as this, is very unfair and unjust; and deserves the hardest names that I could give it. Let us have no tampering with texts. You may argue and reason for your sense of the passage, if you please; as I do also for mine. Only let our readers see plainly what the words of the author are. To do otherwise is corrupting the evidence, perverting judgment, and giving sentence before the cause comes to a fair hearing. This kind of management, especially in so weighty a cause, wherein the honour of our God and Saviour is so nearly concerned, is what I cannot account for: and if upon this occasion I expressed some wonder and astonishment, that any should be so "resolutely eager to ungod their Saviour, as not to permit the cause to have a fair hearing;" I suppose it might become me much better in defence of my Saviour's honour, than those intemperate words of yours, "impudently false assertion," become you, in your blind zeal for your own.

^u Vid. Justin. Dial. p. 183, 373. Comp. Apol. i. p. 44, 46. Apol. ii. p. 13.

I have now finished what I intended by way of answer to your defensive part. Upon the whole, it does not appear to me, that, of all the things laid to your charge, whether general fallacies or particular mistakes, you have been able to take off so much as one. What you have done, or shall do, in the offensive way, may perhaps be considered hereafter. I think it best to postpone my second part, because you are still going on to supply me with new matter for it: and you have promised the public great things, to appear in due time. I am now pretty well acquainted with you; and may therefore presume to exhibit to the reader, or to yourself, a brief account of your chief materials, with which you are to work in this controversy, and upon which your cause is to subsist.

1. In the first place, you have a strong presumption, that "two or more persons cannot constitute one individual or numerical being, substance, or essence." You produce testimonies of Fathers in great numbers, proving nothing but a real distinction; and by virtue of the presumption laid down, (which stands only upon courtesy,) you persuade yourself, that those testimonies are of some weight, and pertinently alleged, even against those who admit a real distinction, as much as the Fathers do.

2. In the second place, you have another strong presumption, that no kind of "subordination is or can be consistent with such equality, or such union as we maintain." Hereupon you produce a further cloud of testimonies from the ancients, proving nothing but a subordination: which testimonies, by virtue of this your second presumption, (standing only upon courtesy, as the former,) are conceived to be of weight, and to be pertinently cited, even against those who readily admit of a subordination, in conformity with the ancient Fathers. From what I have observed here, and under the former article, you may perceive that, at least, nine parts in ten of your quotations are entirely wide of the point; and it may save you some trouble for the future to be duly apprized of it.

3. Besides this, you have some expressions of Origen, chiefly from those pieces which are either not certainly genuine, or not free from interpolation^x, or wrote in a problematical way^y, or not containing Origen's mature and riper thoughts; published perhaps without his consent, and such as he himself afterwards disapproved and repented of^z. And those you urge against us, notwithstanding that we appeal chiefly to his book against Celsus, which is certainly Origen's, and which contains his most mature sentiments; and from whence it is demonstrable that Origen was no Arian, but plainly Anti-Arian^a.

4. You lay a very great stress upon Eusebius, as if he were to speak for all the Ante-Nicene writers: though we might more justly produce Athanasius (with respect to his two first tracts) as an Ante-Nicene writer; and his authority is, at least, as good as the other's. Eusebius must be of little weight with us, wherever he is found to vary either from himself, or from the Catholics which lived in or before his time. Nothing can be more unfair than to represent antiquity through the glass of Eusebius, who has been so much suspected; besides that we can more certainly determine what the sentiments of the earlier writers were, (from their own works still extant,) than we can what Eusebius's were; whose writings are more doubtful and ambiguous; insomuch that

^x Vid. Ruffin. de Adulter. Librum vol. i. p. 233.

Origen. p. 240. ed. Bened. Huet. Origenian. p. 233.

^y Vid. Pamph. Apolog. p. 221. ed. Bened. Phot. Cod. 117. Athanas.

^z Vid. Hieron. de Error. Orig. ad Pammach. Ep. xli. p. 347. ed. Bened.

^a Vid. Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. sect. ii. cap. 9.

the learned world have been more divided about him and his opinions than about any other writer whatsoever.

5. Lastly, you bring up again, frequently, some concessions of Petavius and Huetius; such as they incautiously fell into before this matter had been thoroughly canvassed, as it hath been since by Bishop Bull, and other great men. From that time, most of the learned men in Europe, Romanists^b as well as Protestants, appear to have the same sentiments of the Ante-Nicene faith which Bishop Bull had. It is therefore now much out of time, and very disingenuous, to lay any great weight upon the judgment of Petavius or Huetius, however valuable and learned, since this matter has been much more accurately inquired into than it had been at that time. Huetius has lived to see Bishop Bull's works, (as we may reasonably presume,) and cannot be ignorant how highly they have been valued abroad: yet we do not find that he has ever complained of any injury done him by the Bishop, or that he ever thought fit to vindicate himself, or his great oracle Petavius; to whose judgment (as he himself laments) he had once dearly paid too great a deference^c.

It may suffice, for the present, to have left these few general hints; by means of which an intelligent reader, without further assistance from me, may readily discover the fallacy of your reasonings, and answer the most plausible objections you have to urge against the received doctrine of the blessed Trinity. If any thing more particular be necessary hereafter, I shall (with God's assistance) endeavour to do justice to the cause which I have taken in hand; and, as opportunity serves, shall proceed in detecting sophistry, laying open disguises, exposing misreports, misquotations, misconstructions, or any other engines of deceit, as long as there appears to me any probable danger from thence arising to honest well-meaning men, less acquainted with this momentous controversy. In the interim, I am with all due respect,

SIR,

Your most humble Servant.

^b See Nelson's Life of Bishop Bull, p. 345, &c. 388.

^c Vid. Huetii Comment. de Rebus ad illum pertinent. p. 70.

THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION CONSIDERED:
AND THE
SEVERAL PLEAS AND EXCUSES FOR IT PARTICULARLY EXAMINED AND CONFUTED.

THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION
CONSIDERED:

AND THE
SEVERAL PLEAS AND EXCUSES FOR IT PARTICULARLY EXAMINED AND CONFUTED.

CHAP. I.

The occasion and design of these papers.

REMARKS have been lately published against a clause contained in a bill which had been brought into the House of Lords, for the more effectual suppressing of blasphemy and profaneness. It has been observed, among other things, that the clause, being intended as a test against Arianism, would be of little use or significancy as to the end designed by it; because those who are now understood to be Arians are ready to subscribe any test of that kind, containing nothing more than is already contained in the XXXIX Articles. The Remarker takes notice, that those gentlemen make no scruple of subscribing to our Church's forms: it is their avowed principle that they may lawfully do it in their own sense, agreeably to what they call Scripture. This he proves from their declared sentiments, not only in common conversation, but in print; and from their constant practice of late years, since the year 1712.

If this be matter of fact, (as I am afraid it is,) it may be high time to inquire, somewhat more particularly than hath been yet done, into the case of subscription. If instead of excusing a fraudulent subscription on the foot of human infirmity, (which yet is much too soft a name for it,) endeavours be used to defend it upon principle, and to support it by rules of art, it concerns every honest man to look about him. For what is there so vile or shameful, but may be set off with false colours, and have a plausible turn given it, by the help of quirks and subtillies? Many, without doubt, have been guilty of prevaricating with state-oaths; but nobody has been yet found sanguine enough to undertake the defence of it in print. Only Church-subscriptions, though of much the same sacred nature with the other, may be securely played with: and the plainest breach of sincerity and trust, in this case, shall find its advocates and defenders. It must indeed be owned, that the pretences for it have not been particularly confuted or examined. The reason is, because they looked more like a wanton exercise of wit and fancy, (though it is dangerous playing with sacred things,) than any serious design to convince the world of the justice of it. Besides that the foundations of moral honesty were thought so deeply rooted in the hearts of men, that every attempt against them must soon fall, and die of itself. However, because the pretences for what I call a fraudulent subscription had been recommended by a person of some character in the learned world; and might possibly gain ground among such as take things implicitly, upon the credit of any great name; I had once prepared a formal Answer to what had been advanced on that head: and I designed to publish it by way of introduction to my Defence. But, before my papers were quite wrought off, there appeared a second edition of "Scripture Doctrine," &c. upon perusal whereof I observed that the most offensive passage of the Introduction, relating to subscription, was left out: and besides that, all those strange and unaccountable interpretations of the Athanasian Creed, &c. (which had appeared in the first edition,) were also prudently omitted; though those were all the author had to depend on for the justifying his subscription. Upon this, I was willing to hope that the learned Doctor had given, or was giving up his former principles, relating to subscription: and I thought it would be ungenerous now to attack him in his weakest hold, after he had himself betrayed a suspicion, at least, that he could no longer maintain it. Wherefore I contented myself with a short remark in my Preface, entering a caveat only, against any one's abusing the Doctor's name hereafter, or misleading his authority, in the case of subscription. It was not long before a nameless writer of the party took me up for the charitable suggestion I had made in favour of the learned Doctor. That writer persisting in the Doctor's first sentiments, and being very unwilling to part with so valuable an authority, was pleased to oppose the conjecture I had made upon the Doctor's leaving out the passage in his Introduction. "I know not," says he, "for what reason Dr. Clarke omitted those words; but, I believe I may say, it was not for the reason Dr. Waterland insinuates, viz. that such subscription is not justifiable; because the same thing is still asserted five or six times, at least, in the Introduction as corrected in the new edition^a." I am not of that gentleman's mind in this particular. Nay, if it might not look vain, I would presume, after a competent acquaintance with the Doctor's books, to have seen a little further into the turn of his thoughts than perhaps that writer has done: and, with his good leave, I will still retain the same opinion of the Doctor's good sense and integrity so far, which I had when I wrote my Preface. I think I could give a tolerable account of the Doctor's not striking out every passage in his Introduction that looked that way: and likewise of his great reserve and caution, in not telling the world plainly that he had changed his mind. However, if I mistake, I am sure it is on the candid and charitable side; and on that which must appear much more for the Doctor's honour, (with all men of sense,) than persisting in an error ever can be. That it is an error, and a very great one, I mean to shew in these papers: and though I must, in appearance, carry on a dispute against the learned Doctor, because the objections, for the most part, must be produced in his words; yet I would be understood, in reality, to be rather disputing this point with the Doctor's disciples, who lay a greater stress upon what he has said than himself now seems to do; thereby making his first thoughts theirs, after they have (as I charitably conceive) ceased to be his. I shall have no occasion to say any thing in defence of our excellent Church, as to her requiring subscription; and requiring it according to her own sense of holy Scripture. This part of the controversy has been judiciously cleared and settled by two very ingenious writers ; Mr. Stebbing in his Rational Enquiry, and Mr. Rogers in his Discourse and Review. My business is only to begin where they end, and to shew that, as the Church requires subscription to her own interpretation of Scripture, so the subscriber is bound, in virtue of his subscription, to that, and that only : and if he knowingly subscribes in any sense contrary to, or different from, the sense of the imposers ; he prevaricates, and commits a fraud in so doing. This is a cause of some moment : it is the cause of plainness and sincerity, in opposition to wiles and subtilities. It is in defence, not so much of revealed, as of natural religion ; not of the fundamentals of faith, but of the principles of moral honesty : and every heresy in morality is of more pernicious consequence than heresies in points of positive religion. The security and honour of our Church are deeply concerned in this question. As to its security, every body sees what I mean : and as to the honour or reputation of our Church abroad, whenever we have been charged with Socinianism or Popery, or any other monstrous doctrines, we had no defence so ready at hand, or so just and satisfactory, as this ; that our subscriptions were sufficient to wipe off all slander and calumny. The good of the State, as well as of the Church, is likewise concerned in this question : because there can be no security against men's putting their own private senses upon the public laws, oaths, injunctions, &c. in contradiction to the sense of the imposers, if these principles about Church subscription should ever prevail amongst us. But of this more will be said in the sequel. I designed only, at present, briefly to intimate the importance of the cause I am inquiring into ; to invite the readers to the more careful examination of it. And I shall enter into the merits of it, as soon as I have laid down the principles of the men I am now concerned with, in order to let us into the true state of the question.

^a Account of Pamphlets, &c. p. 17.

CHAP. II.

The general principles or sentiments of the modern Arians (some of them at least) concerning subscription to our public forms.

THE author of the Remarks observes, that “ it is an avowed “ principle among them, that these Articles” (the XXXIX Articles) “ may lawfully and conscientiously be subscribed in any “ sense in which they themselves, by their own interpretation, “ can reconcile them to Scripture,” (i. e. what they call Scripture ; or their own sense of Scripture,) “ without regard to the meaning and intention, either of the persons who first compiled them, or who now impose them.” He says further, that “ this latitude was expressly asserted in the year 1712, by a learned Doctor of divinity, in a book entitled, ‘ The Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity ;’ and was advanced on purpose to justify their subscribing.” It is very well that the doctrine can be dated no higher than the year 1712 ; as indeed it cannot ; being entirely new : never heard of among sober casuists, at least, before that time. Now, the principal words of the author of Scripture Doctrine (as they stand in the Introduction to the first edition) are these : “ It is plain that every person may reasonably agree to such forms,” (our Church’s forms, or of any other Protestant Church,) “ whenever he can in any sense at all reconcile them with Scripture :” i. e. his own sense of Scripture. It is observable that these words are general ; and somewhat ambiguous. For the Doctor does not say, in any sense whereof the words are capable, and withal consistent with Scripture, but consistent with Scripture only : and if he speaks there of the forms in general, as he seems to do, he might possibly mean, that any man may agree to such forms when he can any way reconcile them : whether by giving no assent to passages irreconcilable, or whether by substituting something else in their room : and this would amount to subscribing so far as is agreeable to Scripture. I know, the Doctor has took pains to reconcile the particular passages in the public forms to his own hypothesis ; from whence one might imagine that he takes every particular expression to be capable of a sense consistent with his scheme. But I know also, and shall shew it in due time, that he has often given a sense of which the words he is there commenting upon are really not capable : which is substituting something else in the room of what he finds in our forms, to reconcile them to his hypothesis. And I do not remember that the Doctor has ever expressly said, that every single expression of the public forms is capable of a sense agreeable to what he calls Scripture. Wherefore I have thought that the Doctor’s real meaning was to subscribe with this reservation, viz. so far as is agreeable to Scripture ; though he chose to word it something differently, and less offensively, by saying, in that sense wherein they are agreeable.

What confirms me in this suspicion is, that several of the Doctor's arguments for subscribing serve equally for one or other; and will either justify both those kinds of reservation, or neither. However this matter be, as to the Doctor himself, it is certain that others of the party have expressed themselves clearly and distinctly on this head; and have condemned the way of subscribing with the reserve of, so far as is agreeable to the Scripture; resting their cause entirely upon the other, viz. in such sense wherein they are agreeable.

The anonymous author of the Essay on imposing and subscribing Articles, after declaring his judgment (so far judging right) that they are not articles of peace only, but of opinion; proceeds to condemn the notion of subscribing so far as is agreeable to Scripture; insisting upon it, that the articles are capable of a sense in which they are agreeable to what he calls Scripture: and he pretends no more than this, that a man may honestly subscribe in any sense of which the words are capable^b, and withal agreeable to Scripture.

We are told in another tract, containing an account of pamphlets relating to the Trinitarian controversy, that subscribing the Articles so far as they are agreeable to Scripture, is very different from subscribing the same in any sense agreeable to Scripture: and that they defend only the latter, having "explicitly^c condemned the former." The sum then of what is pretended is this: It is first supposed that the Articles, &c. are capable of a sense agreeable to what they call Scripture: and then, and not till then, it is supposed they may be subscribed. Their defence of subscription then rests upon two suppositions:

1. That every expression in our public forms is capable of a sense consistent with the new scheme.

2. That their being capable of such a sense is enough; without regard had to the more plain, obvious, and natural signification of the words themselves, or to the intention of those who first compiled the forms, or who now impose them.

If either of these suppositions (much more if both) proves false or groundless, their whole defence of Arian subscription drops of course. I shall shew,

1. That the sense of the compilers and imposers (where certainly known) must be religiously observed; even though the words were capable of another sense.

^b Page 41.

^c Page 20.

2. That, whatever has been pretended, there are several expressions in the public forms which are really not capable of any sense consistent with the Arian hypothesis, or new scheme.

CHAP. III.

That the sense of the compilers and imposers, when certainly known, (as in the present case it is,) is to be religiously observed by every subscriber, even though the words were capable of another sense.

BY compilers, I mean those that composed the Creeds, Articles, or other forms received by our Church. By imposers, I understand the governors in Church and State for the time being. The sense of the compilers, barely considered, is not always to be observed; but so far only as the natural and proper signification of words, or the intention of the imposers, binds it upon us. The sense of the compilers and imposers may generally be presumed the same, (except in some very rare and particular cases,) and therefore I mention both, one giving light to the other. The rules and measures proper for understanding what that sense is, are and can be no other than the same which are proper for understanding of oaths, laws, covenants, or any forms or writings whatever: namely, the usual acceptation of words; the custom of speech at the time of their being written; the scope and intention of the writers, discoverable from the occasion, from the controversies then on foot, or from any other circumstances affording light into it. This is the true and only way to interpret rightly any forms, books, or writings whatever.

The pretences to the contrary shall be considered in their proper place: I shall now hasten to the proof of my first position, and shall be very brief in it; there being little occasion for proving so clear a point: what is most necessary is, to wipe off the dust that has been thrown upon it; and that shall be done in due time and place.

1. I argue, first, from the case of oaths. It is a settled rule with casuists, that oaths are always to be taken in the sense of the imposers: the same is the case of solemn leagues or covenants. Without this principle, no faith, trust, or mutual confidence could be kept up amongst men. Now, subscription is much of the same nature with those ; and must be conceived to carry much of the same obligation with it. It is a solemn and sacred covenant with the Church or government ; to be capable of such or such trusts upon certain conditions : which conditions are an unfeigned belief of those propositions which come recommended in the public forms. To change these propositions for others, while we are plighting our faith to these only, (as is supposed in the very acceptance of trusts,) is manifestly a breach of covenant, and prevaricating with God and man. It is pretending one thing and meaning another ; it is professing agreement with the Church, and at the same time disagreeing with it : it is coming into trusts or privileges upon quite different terms from what the Church intended ; and is, as one expresses it, not “ entering in by the door of the sheepfold,” but getting over it, as thieves and robbers.

2. To make it still plainer that such subscription is fraudulent ; let it be considered what the ends and purposes intended by the ruling powers, in requiring subscription, are. They are expressed in our public laws and canons to this effect ; that pastors may be sound in the faith ; that no doctrines be publicly or privately taught but what the Church and State approve of ; that all diversity of opinions, in respect of points determined, be avoided ; that one uniform scheme of religion, one harmonious form of worship, (consonant to Scripture and primitive Christianity,) be constantly preserved among clergy and people. These are the main ends designed by subscription. But if subscribers may take the liberty of affixing their own sense to the public forms, in contradiction to the known sense of the imposers, all these ends are liable to be miserably defeated and frustrated. Pastors, instead of being sound in the faith, (which is but one,) may have as many different faiths as they happen to have different wits or inventions. Multiplicity of doctrines, opposite to each other, may be publicly taught and propagated : and, instead of any uniform scheme of religion, or form of worship, there may happen to be as many different and dissonant religions in the same church or kingdom, as there are pastors or parishes. These being the natural consequences of that latitude of subscription now pleaded for, it is evident that such a latitude is a contradiction to the very end and design of all subscription ; and is therefore unrighteous and full of deceit.

3. I shall mention but one consideration more; and that is, the great scandal and pernicious influence of such a fraudulent practice. I cannot better express it than in the words of the late pious and excellent Mr. Nelson.

“ I could heartily now have wished,” says he, in a letter to Dr. Clarke, “ that we of the laity had no such handle ever given us, as this your last book hath afforded, as it is to be feared, but to too many who think themselves able to overturn any foundations whatever, if such a method as you there propose be allowable with respect to the most solemn acts and deeds of that Church and community whereof we are members, and to substitute what they please in their room^c.” He observes further, (p. 19,) that “ from a method of this nature, we are threatened with the overturning of foundations both sacred and civil.” And (p. 21.) that “ if the judges, and others learned in the law, shall follow the same method of interpreting the laws of the land, and accommodating the civil oaths and engagements, as Dr. Clarke has taken in interpreting and accommodating the sense of the Church, in her most authentic forms and declarations before God and man, and of the venerable Fathers of the Catholic Church; there are many of opinion, that every thing might easily be leaped over, and that no establishment could be so strong as to last long:” and “ who knows whereabouts his religion, liberty, or property may be, if such a latitude of interpretation be defensible as is avouched in Dr. Clarke’s third part openly; and is therefore suspected in his first and second?” Thus far Mr. Nelson. And there is so much strength of reason and plain good sense shewn in what he says, that all the little distinctions, evasions, and subtilties pleaded on the other side can never shake it. These and the like considerations have ever deterred wise and good men from such a method. No conscientious Protestant would subscribe the Romish Catechism, or Pope Pius’s Creed; no serious Papist would subscribe our Articles; no pious Dissenter would give his assent and consent to such parts of our public forms as he does not heartily approve of, in the plain and intended sense. Thousands have died martyrs to the maxims which I am now asserting; whose great and only misfortune it was not to have been acquainted with those evasive arts and subtle distinctions, which, it seems, might have preserved them. I come next to examine what those pretences and evasions are: and that they may lose nothing in the recital, they shall appear in the very words of their authors; and to every particular plea I shall return a particular answer.

CHAP. IV.

The several pleas and pretences for subscribing, after the new method, examined and confuted.

PLEA I.

“The Protestant Churches require men to comply with their forms merely on account of their being agreeable to Scripture, and consequently in such sense only wherein they are agreeable to Scripture.” Clarke’s Introd. p. 20.

“That this is not highly reasonable among Protestants, and particularly in the Church of England; or that this hath been ever contradicted or censured by any judgment of the Church, I leave him (Bishop Potter) to prove.” Bishop of Bangor’s Postscript, p. 251.

ANSWER.

1. Before ever Popery was known, subscription to creeds, or other forms, has been required: and always in the sense of the imposers.

2. It is allowed that no man is by the Church required to subscribe against his conscience; or, what comes to the same, in a sense which he thinks not agreeable to Scripture. If that be any man’s opinion with respect to the sense of our public forms, he ought not to subscribe at all.

3. The Church indeed requires men to comply with her forms, merely on account of their being agreeable to Scripture: and, for that very reason, must require subscription in her own sense; because that only sense is (according to her) agreeable to Scripture. It is a contradiction to suppose that any church requiring subscription to her own explanations, (as every church does,) should at the same time permit the subscriber to run counter to those explanations. For, since she looks upon her own explanations as the only true sense of Scripture, and requires subscription to the true sense of Scripture; she can never be presumed to allow other explications which are (in her judgment) not agreeable to Scripture; it being her principle to admit nothing but what is agreeable to Scripture. Whoever therefore does violence to the public forms, must be supposed (by that church whose forms those are) to do as much violence to Scripture itself; and consequently, such a church cannot admit of it. This plea then overthrows itself.

4. That it is reasonable for any Protestant church to require subscription in her own sense, is as certain as that it is reasonable to require subscription at all. For whatever church requires subscription, must require it in such a sense as that church believes to be the true sense of Scripture; and not in a sense which that church believes to be false. The sense therefore of the imposers, and none other, must be the sense which is required of the subscriber. The reason of the thing speaks it; and there is no more occasion for any declaration of the Church, in this case, than there is for a declaration of the State in the case of civil oaths. For who knows not that men ought to be sincere; and not to subscribe or swear one thing and mean another?

5. It is neither fair nor just to require any express censure or judgment of the ruling powers against a practice never begun till the year 1712; and which is too absurd in itself to need any formal prohibition. It was always presumed, and taken for granted, that the public forms should be understood as intended by the Church, and not strained or wrested to a foreign sense. King James the First, in his proclamation for the authorizing an Uniformity of the Book of Common-Prayer, hath these words; "Concerning the service of God we were nice, or rather jealous, that the public form thereof should be free, not only from blame but from suspicion; so as neither the common adversary should have occasion to wrest ought therein contained to other sense than the Church of England intendeth; nor any troublesome or ignorant person of this Church be able to take the least occasion of cavil against it."

King Charles the First, in his Declaration prefixed to the Articles, prohibits the least difference from the said Articles, and expressly forbids the affixing any new sense to any Article. And it was the resolution of all the judges of England, ^d that Smith's subscription to the XXXIX Articles, with this addition, (so far forth as the same were agreeable to the word of God), was not according to the statute of 13 Elizabeth. And one of the reasons given is, because the "act was made for avoiding of diversity

^d Coke Institut. iv. cap. 74. p. 324.

“ of opinions, &c. and by this addition the party might, by “ his own private opinion, take some of them to be against the “ word of God ; and by this means diversity of opinions should “ not be avoided, (which was the scope of the statute,) and the “ very act itself made touching subscription hereby of none “ effect.” Now this reason, on which the resolution of the judges was chiefly founded, equally affects the subscription here pleaded for, and is equally strong against it. Wherefore it must be allowed that such subscription has been sufficiently censured and condemned by our laws : and that all wresting or straining of the public forms to any new or foreign sense, different from what the Church intended, is not only against the very end and design of all laws made for the establishing consent and uniformity of doctrine and worship, but has also been expressly prohibited by the ruling powers.

PLEA II.

“ If tradition or custom, if carelessness or mistake, either in “ the compiler or receiver, happen at any time to put a sense “ upon any human forms, different from that of the Scripture, “ which those very forms were intended to explain, and which “ is at the same time declared to be the only rule of truth ; it “ is evident no man can be bound to understand those forms in “ such sense ; nay, on the contrary, he is indispensably bound
 “ not to understand or receive them in such a sense.” Clarke’s Introd. p. 21.

ANSWER.

This plea confounds two very distinct things ; the rule for understanding, and the rule for receiving any forms. It should be proved that an Arian may not be obliged to understand the public forms in a sense contrary to what he calls Scripture, (or, what comes to the same, contrary to his own hypothesis :) but all that is really proved is this only ; that he is not obliged to receive them in that sense, but obliged to the contrary ; that is, to reject them, and not subscribe at all. The argument, reduced to a syllogistical form, would stand thus :

No man ought to receive any human forms in a sense repugnant to what he thinks Scripture.

But the obvious and intended sense of our public forms is a sense repugnant to what some think Scripture.

Therefore such persons ought not to receive them in their obvious, intended sense: neither indeed so to understand them.

Any young logician will readily perceive that here is more in the conclusion than there is in the premises; and that so much of the conclusion as is really just is entirely besides the question: containing nothing but what nobody doubts of; viz. that no man ought to subscribe against his conscience.

PLEA III.

“The sense in which any human forms appear to a man’s self “ to be consistent with Scripture, and not the presumed meaning of the compilers, (add, or imposers,) is to be the rule and “ measure of his understanding them. This is both evident in “ reason, (because otherwise every human government makes a “ new rule of faith,) and is moreover, by all Protestants, agreed “ upon without controversy in practice.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 34.

ANSWER.

The Doctor appears to have been in confusion here, as much as in the preceding; not distinguishing between the rule for understanding human forms, and the rule for receiving. We are first to consider what the true meaning and intent of the forms are: and this we are to judge of from the natural force of the words, and from the scope, drift, and design of the compilers or imposers. After this, we are to consider, by the rule of Scripture, whether we can receive them or no. If, upon such examination, it appears to us that the forms, according to the sense of the imposers, are agreeable to Scripture, we may safely subscribe; if otherwise, we must not do it for the world. What can be plainer?

As to the suggestion that, in this way, every human government makes a new rule of faith; it is mere fancy and fiction. Public determinations (at least generally speaking) are more likely to keep close to the rule of faith, than private conceits. Scripture is still the same rule of faith, only under the prudent guard of public explanations, to obviate the wild uncertainty of private expositions. This is not paying more regard to human forms than to Scripture; but more regard to some human explications than to other human explications; more regard to a select number of wise men than to conceited opiniators: in a word, more regard to the most prudent and most effectual (though not infallible) method of preserving the sacred truths, than to another, which is so far from being infallible for the preserving of the true faith, that it is rather the surest means to destroy it. All Protestant churches have took into this approved way of securing, as far as possible, the true sense of Scripture, by public and authorized expositions. And this is paying the tenderest and most religious regard to the rule of faith; there being no safer or better way than this is to preserve it. But enough in answer to a weak suggestion; which, if it proves any thing, proves the unlawfulness of imposing any forms; not the lawfulness of subscribing in a sense different from that of the imposers.

PLEA IV.

“ With respect to civil matters—there is lodged in every government a legislative power—neither can there in this case be any other rule by which to interpret the law, but only by discovering, from the obvious signification of words, what was in the whole the real sense and intent of the legislators. But now in ecclesiastical matters—the case is very different. The Church in matters of doctrine has no legislative power,” &c. Clarke's Reply, p. 32.

ANSWER.

1. This is only amusement. What has legislative power to do in this question? If an equal, if an inferior proposes me any articles to subscribe, I may indeed refuse subscription, (and so I may when proposed by superiors;) but if I submit to subscribe, I must do it in the sense of him that articles or covenants with me; and according to the plain, usual, and literal sense of the words.

Besides, what shall we think of oaths imposed by an usurper? May I swear to any thing, only because he has no legislative power over me? Here will be a fair way opened for any prevarication in state oaths, as often as any one questions the legality of the powers that impose them.

2. To answer a little more directly; subscription is required by the legislative powers: and there is just the same reason for attending to the sense of the imposers, in the matter of subscription, as in any civil oaths, tests, laws, or the like: and every objection against the one is equally strong against the other also. The legislative powers in a Christian state are under the law of right reason, and also under the law of Christianity. Now, what if the civil oaths, laws, tests, &c. be thought contrary either to the dictates of reason, or to the law of Christ, which the lawgivers pretend to follow and to conform to as their rule? Then, upon the principles of the subscribing Arians, any man may force and strain the civil oaths, laws, tests, &c. to his own private sense, contrary to the meaning of the ruling powers, in order to reconcile them to what he thinks reason or Scripture; that is, to his own principles, fancies, or conceits, whatever they be. The case is parallel in all circumstances affecting the present question; and the plea that is here used for the justifying a fraudulent subscription, with a very little change, will serve as well to justify a fraudulent taking of the civil oaths or tests; and so there will be an end of all trust or mutual confidence, so long as words are capable of being wrested or tortured into more senses than one.

PLEA V.

“ Every man that (for the sake of peace and order) assents to, “ or makes use of, any such forms of human appointment, is “ obliged to reconcile them with what appears to him to be the “ doctrine of Scripture, and take care to understand them in “ such a sense only as is consistent with that doctrine: otherwise “ he parts with his Christianity for the sake of a civil and “ political religion.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 33.

ANSWER.

1. The same plea may serve for Papists, and persons disaffected to the government, whenever (for the sake of peace and order) they may be disposed fraudulently to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy and abjuration. Those oaths, indeed, in their literal and intended sense, are directly repugnant to their sense of Scripture. But they are to take care to understand them in such a sense only as is consistent with their doctrines; otherwise, they part with their Christianity for the sake of a civil and political religion.

2. More directly I answer, secondly, that if any human forms, in their obvious and intended sense, appear not consistent with what some call Scripture; such persons ought not, for the sake of peace and order, neither yet for the sake of a benefice or dignity, nor for any consideration whatever, to assent to such forms.

Nay, they are indispensably bound to refuse assent or subscription to such forms; otherwise they part with their Christianity for the sake of the mammon of this world; or, at best, for the sake of peace and order; which is “doing evil that good may come,” and is an abominable practice in the sight of God and man.

PLEA VI.

“Bishop Pearson saith, ‘that whatever is delivered in the Creed, we therefore believe, because it is contained in the Scriptures; and consequently must so believe it as it is contained there: whence all this Exposition of the whole is nothing else but an illustration and proof of every particular part of the Creed by such Scriptures as deliver the same, according to the true interpretation of them.’” Exposition on the Creed, p. 227.

“And the whole Church of England has made the like declaration, in the sixth, the twentieth, and twenty-first of the XXXIX Articles, before cited; and in the eighth Article, which declares that the Creeds ought to be received and believed, because (and consequently only in such sense wherein) they may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture.” Clarke’s Introd.

ANSWER.

1. What Bishop Pearson has there said relates to the article of Christ’s descent into hell; the sense of which is left indefinite and undetermined by our Church; and therefore this is not pertinent to the point in hand. To let us see how far that good and great Bishop was from countenancing any thing like what the Doctor pleads for, I may transcribe one paragraph from the preceding page, p. 226. “Wherefore being our Church hath not now imposed that interpretation of St. Peter’s words, which before it intimated, being it hath not declared that as the only place of Scripture to found the descent into hell upon; being it hath alleged no other place to ground it, and delivered no other explication to expound it; we may with the greater liberty pass on, find out the true meaning of this article, and to give our particular judgment in it.” Had the Bishop foreseen what ill use might possibly be made of his other words, he could not have guarded more particularly against it than he has here done. Wherefore it was very peculiar to cite him in favour of such a subscription, or such a latitude, as he would have utterly abhorred and detested.

2. As to the doctrine of the Church of England in her 6th, 8th, 20th, and 21st Articles, it is no more than this; that nothing is to be received but what is agreeable to Scripture. And for this very reason she requires subscription in her own sense, because she judges no other sense to be agreeable to Scripture. If any judge otherwise, let them not subscribe. It is but shallow artifice of the pleaders for a fraudulent subscription, constantly to call their interpretations of Scripture, Scripture; and from thence to infer that the Church requires or permits subscription in their sense. The Church surely has as good a right to call her interpretations by the name of Scripture; and then her requiring subscription to that only which is agreeable to Scripture, is requiring subscription in her own sense of Scripture, and none else. Let the Arian sense of Scripture be Scripture to Arians; but then let them subscribe only to Arian expositions; which are nothing akin to those of our Church.

PLEA VII.

“ When in the public forms there be (as there generally are) expressions which, at first sight, look different ways; it cannot be but men must be allowed to interpret what is obscure by that which seems to them more plain and scriptural.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 33.

ANSWER.

What a fanciful representation is here of our public forms; as if they, either at first sight, or at all, looked towards Arianism; when the very strongest words which the wit of man can devise to exclude it occur every where in our public forms. And it is so far from being obscure whether the compilers and imposers intended to exclude it, and to profess the Catholic doctrine up to the height, that it is demonstration they did intend it. This plea therefore has nothing to rest upon but a misrepresentation of fact.

If the meaning be, that the doctrines taught by our Church are obscure, that is, mysterious, and therefore they may claim a liberty of explaining them away into what appears to them more plain and scriptural; I say, if that be the meaning of the plea, then it comes to this ; that whenever any church imposes the belief of mysteries, a subscriber may honestly substitute what he pleases instead of the mystery; or may make no mystery of it, by reducing it (contrary to the intention and meaning of the imposers) to something appearing to himself more plain and scriptural. Upon this foot it will be impossible for any church ever to secure the profession of any mysterious doctrine against secret meanings and subtle evasions: but men may subscribe to as many mysteries as they please, and still believe none of them.

PLEA VIII.

“ In the doctrine of the Trinity, I have no way certainly “ to inform myself what is the sense of the Church. The words “ of the first Article are capable of at least four senses; and “ each of these senses is defended by learned divines of the “ Church.—The four senses I mean are these :

“ 1. That which makes the three Persons to be only three “ modes of one mind ; which I call Sabellianism.

“ 2. That which makes the three Persons to be something more “ than three modes of one mind, and yet not three minds: i. e. “ makes them to be media between entia, and non-entia, some- “ thing and nothing ; which I call nonsense.

“ 3. That which makes the three Persons to be three equal “ minds: which I call Tritheism.

“ 4. That which makes them to be unequal minds, one inde- “ pendent and existing of itself, the other two deriving their “ existence from the first:” (which the author should have called Arianism.) Essay on Imposit. p. 42, 43.

ANSWER.

This writer goes roundly to work ; and gives us a specimen both of his profound sense and his modesty. He first throws dust upon the Article, and then complains that it is dark and confused. The Article is really capable of but one sense; and that sense none of the four, as he has represented them.

It is not capable of the first pretended sense. There is not a word of three modes either in the Article, or any where else in our public forms. The notion is neither expressed nor implied in the Article; and therefore cannot be the sense of it: nay, the notion is a contradiction to the very words of the Article.

Mode, mode, and mode, will never amount to substance: but the Article plainly makes every Person to be substance, as invested with power and eternity, and as being of one substance with the other two Persons, and making therewith one living and true God.

The second sense, when rightly understood, is the true sense of the Article; but not as it lies under the ridiculous representation which this writer has made of it. The sense in it is the Article's, the nonsense is his own. The Article says not a word of a medium between something and nothing: but that the three Persons are neither three modes nor three minds, is indeed plain enough from the Article. Neither is there any nonsense, but a great deal both of sense and truth, in saying, that every Person is substance, and yet they are not three substances; every Person mind, and yet not three minds; every Person God, and yet not three Gods. The union is too close and intimate to admit of the plural expressions of minds, substances, Gods; which can belong only to separate Persons: three Persons so united as these are supposed to be are one substance, one mind, one being, one God; and that in a very just and proper sense.

As to the third and fourth senses of three minds equal and unequal, which would imply three substances, the Article excludes them both; by making the three Persons one substance and one God. Upon the whole, it appears that the first Article is not capable of more senses than one: and yet if it were capable of many senses, unless the Arian sense were one of those many, this gentleman and his brethren could not, honestly and fairly, subscribe.

PLEA IX.

“ Unless this liberty be allowed, nobody can subscribe the “ Articles, Creeds, and Liturgy of the Church of England at “ all. There are several things in these forms which, if taken in “ the most obvious sense, contradict one another: and therefore “ some of them must be understood in a sense which is not the “ obvious one. In the doctrine of the Trinity, it is plain from “ Dr. Clarke’s Collection, chap. i. of the third part of his Scrip“ ture Doctrine, that there are a great number of passages in “ the Liturgy which in the obvious sense make for his opinion:
 “ and therefore must by those who are of a different opinion be “ understood in a sense which is not the obvious one.” Essay on Impos. p. 43.

“ I am sure it is no more a putting of violence upon the expressions cited in chap. ii. of the third part, to make them consistent with Scripture, and with the expressions of the Liturgy cited in chap. i. than it is, on the contrary, a putting of violence upon the Scripture and upon the expressions cited in chap. i. to make them consistent with the expressions cited in chap. ii.” Clarke's Introduct.

ANSWER.

We here meet with the utmost confidence in affirming a matter of fact, which every man's eyes and common sense may immediately discover to be false. The sum of the plea is, that there are many expressions in our public forms, which in their obvious sense contradict the received doctrine of the Trinity: and that those called orthodox must put as much violence upon one kind of expressions to reconcile them to their scheme, as the Arians must put upon others to reconcile them to theirs. The expressions which are supposed in their obvious sense to thwart the received doctrine are such wherein the Father is eminently styled God, and sometimes only God, or such as intimate a subordination of two Persons to one.

Now the question will be, what sense of those passages has the best right and title to be called the obvious sense? Is it not that sense which has been in use and approved, in this mystery, for sixteen hundred years? Is it not that sense which was anciently taught and inculcated before baptism; that which all the churches in Christendom receive and approve; that which the compilers and imposers of our forms certainly intended; that which is so well known and has so long passed current, that nobody almost can mistake it; that which the words will not only bear, (as may be shewn from innumerable instances in approved authors,) but which they really require, when considered together with what goes before or after them, or with other passages in our public forms? Is not that to be looked upon as the obvious sense of those passages, rather than another of yesterday, never before owned by our clergy or people, never suspected to be contained in our forms, never subscribed to till very lately; a new, strange, unheard of sense, (so far as concerns our public forms.) and such as, if admitted, must make our forms nothing else but a confused heap and jumble of the most irreconcilable contradictions? These things considered, I must insist upon it, that the only obvious sense of those passages is the received prevailing sense of them: it being obvious to every man of common understanding, that that, and that only, was ever intended by our Church, or received by our clergy; or understood to be their true sense by Papist or Protestant, Dissenter or Churchman, native or foreigner, from the year 1552 to the year 1712.

Our public forms have been well known to all the churches abroad, to all the learned in Europe. What man ever suspected, till now, that they were tainted with Arianism, or but looked that way? There is no need of putting violence upon any one passage to reconcile it to the received doctrine: all is easy and consistent throughout, formed entirely upon Catholic principles. Sometimes the Father is styled only God, oftener all three: sometimes two of the Persons are introduced in a subordination of order to the first; at other times their perfect equality of nature is as fully and clearly professed. No one that has been tolerably instructed can be at a loss for the meaning of these things. But as to the violence used by the Arian party in torturing our Creeds and Liturgy; it is such, I believe, as was never before practised with any words whatever. The old Arians would have detested such practices: the Ὁμοούσιον alone was such a stumblingblock to them, that very few could get over it; and they would never insert it in their Creeds. And yet they were artists in their way; and had carried the mystery of equivocation and chicane far beyond any thing that had been known in the Church in the ages before them. As to the violence which those gentlemen are forced to use with our Church's forms, it will appear more fully in the sequel. At present, I shall content myself with two observations, which may help to give the reader a just idea of the difference between the orthodox and them in this particular.

1. The first is, that what the orthodox subscribe to, in respect of the Trinity, is no more than what all Catholics, even the most zealous opposers of the Arians, were ever ready to profess, and in the same terms as we do. But (as I have already hinted) what our modern Arians subscribe, is what the ancient Arians would never have admitted. They abhorred the very name and thing of consubstantiality, coequality, coeternity; one Godhead in three Persons, or the like, which are all plainly laid down in our public forms. From hence it is manifest that the violence we are charged with would never have been thought any by our predecessors on the Catholic side: but the violence which we charge the Arians with is such as their predecessors would have allowed to be such.

2. Another observation is, that what the orthodox clergy subscribe to, they are ready also to profess from the press, or the pulpit, or in common discourse, which are all of a piece with their subscription; at least, generally speaking. They scruple not in sermons, in writings, in discourse, to give the title of God eminently, or of only God, to the Father: nor to admit of such expressions as imply a subordination of order in the sacred Trinity. But the Arians, on the contrary, never use any expressions like to some which they subscribe to. They will never say from the press, or from the pulpit, or in common conversation that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, are one God; that they are coequal, coeternal, &c. They allow of these expressions as often as they subscribe; but never else. They understand what such words mean in any other place but in our public forms; and they do not think they can conscientiously make use of them at other times, however conscientiously they may subscribe to them. Should any man of them, in a treatise or sermon, throw out any such shocking assertions, (shocking, I mean, to them,) he would be looked upon as a deserter by the party; and a betrayor of the cause which he had undertaken to defend. But if he subscribes to them, and solemnly gives his unfeigned assent and consent thereto; this, it seems, and this only, is harmless and inoffensive.

I shall confirm what I have said by a remarkable instance. Dr. Clarke did but once declare, in a paper laid before the Bishops, that "the Son of God was eternally begotten by the "eternal incomprehensible power and will of the Father;" (an expression nothing near so strong for a coeternity as forty others which he has subscribed to,) and his Arian friends could not bear it^e. It occasioned a real and sensible grief amongst them. They looked upon it as giving up the cause, in a manner, and made broad hints of his being led by corrupt nature into a very culpable prevarication. See how easily those gentlemen can understand the force of words any where else but in our forms; and how carefully they guard against the use of such expressions, as they scruple not however to subscribe to. Let any man compare this conduct of the Arians with that of the orthodox; and he will plainly see that the former are themselves conscious of the violence they put upon the Church's forms; while the latter are not conscious of any violence, on their side, at all.

^e See Apology for Dr. Clarke, p. 49, &c.

PLEA X.

“By an induction of particular passages there are 186 places wherein our public forms are clearly on his (Dr. Clarke's) side; and 27 only which seem to differ from him. Must not then the smaller number be reconciled to the greater? Or, on the contrary, must the lesser number, and the more modern phrases, be the standard of doctrine, and the rule of interpreting the more ancient phrases, and the larger number?” Modest Plea, p. 120.

ANSWER.

This is pleasant and pretty. Of the 186 pretended places, there is not one either clearly or at all on the Doctor's side, as to the points of difference between him and us. They are passages which may indeed be used by Arians (and so may they by Catholics) consistently with their principles. They are capable of different views, according to what they happen to be joined with. But as they stand in our forms, in company with other passages express and full for the Catholic doctrine, they can reasonably bear no other but the Catholic meaning. I think it not material to inquire into the truth and justice of this writer's calculation, founded only upon Dr. Clarke's arbitrary disposition of his sections or paragraphs; sometimes making one sentence a distinct passage, sometimes crowding many into one; and sometimes only referring to passages omitted. Let the number be as 186 to 27; those 27 do not only seem, but are directly opposite to the Doctor's principles, according to the plain, literal, and natural force of words, as well as the known sense of the imposers. The question then justly stated lies thus: Whether 186 passages which might (if the compilers and imposers had not intended them in a Catholic sense) have been indifferently claimed by either Catholic or Arian, should yield to 27, which are utterly repugnant to Arianism, or the 27 to them. That is, whether those that can bear but one of the senses should yield to those that may fairly admit of either; or the contrary. Imagine 186 men to be indifferent, or but nearly indifferent, in any point of dispute; and 27 resolute on one side. Which is the way to reconcile them, and unite them all in one verdict? Is it to drag over the 27 by force of arms to what they are irreconcilably averse to? Or is it not rather to bring over the 186 to the 27, to whom they have little or no aversion, and to whose side they are no way disinclined? This latter, I think, is the proper and only method to promote harmony and concord in the whole. The application I trust with the ingenious; and here take my leave of this fanciful reasoning of the Modest Pleader.

PLEA XI.

“The Article in the Apostles’ Creed concerning Christ’s descent into hell, is now universally understood in a sense “probably different from what the composers of the Creed “intended.” Clark’s Reply, p. 34.

ANSWER.

How Christ’s descent into hell was understood by the composers of the Creed is uncertain: neither is it certain that it is universally understood in any one sense. However that be, one thing is certain, that our Church has left that Article at large, intending a latitude; and indulging a liberty to subscribers to abound in their own sense. This is not the case of the Articles relating to the Trinity. Their sense is fixed, and bound upon the conscience of every subscriber by the plain, natural signification of the words: and by the known intent of the compilers and imposers. If it be asked from whence we are to learn what was the intent of the imposers, or how it may be known; I answer, first, from plain words; and next, from history and observation, in the like manner as the intent and scope of any writer is to be known.

PLEA XII.

“The damnatory clauses in the Athanasian Creed are now by “very few understood in that sense which, in all probability,

“ the compiler of it in that very dark and ignorant age designed “ to express.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 34.

ANSWER.

1. That the Athanasian Creed (so called) was composed in a “ very dark and ignorant age,” is more than the Doctor knows; and therefore should not be so positively affirmed by him. The Creed, however, has no signs or tokens of darkness or ignorance; but of great accuracy and solid judgment: and is the best exposition (for its compass) of the doctrines of the Trinity and incarnation, that we shall any where meet with.

2. Another thing which the Doctor affirms without knowing is, that “ few understand the damnatory clauses in the sense of “ the compiler.” Let any man shew what sense it is most reasonable to understand them in; and the same reasons (if good) shall serve to shew that that was the sense of the compiler. I know many have strained the damnatory clauses to an unreasonable rigour, on purpose to disparage the Creed: but they have not been able to prove that the compiler so intended it.

3. The compiler’s sense being doubtful, and the imposers having left those clauses without any exposition; the subscriber is at liberty to understand them in such sense as the words will bear; and such as best answers the main intent and design of that Creed; and is most agreeable to Scripture and reason. This instance is nothing parallel to the case of the Articles concerning the Trinity; whose sense is fixed and certain, as before said. Fix, in like manner, the sense of the damnatory clauses; and it shall soon be proved that every subscriber ought to acquiesce in it.

PLEA XIII.

“ The procession of the Holy Ghost set forth in the Nicene and “ Athanasian Creeds, in one sense, is by Mr. (now Dr.) Bennet, “ in his explication of his own sense concerning that point, shewn “ to be now understood by many (without any suspicion of insin- “ cerity) in a different sense.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 34.

ANSWER.

1. This is only argumentum ad hominem, (to make the most of it,) and therefore is not sufficient.

2. The argument comes not up to the point in hand. Dr.

Bennet was of opinion that our Church had determined nothing in this matter ; otherwise he would not presume to interpret the procession in his own way. His words are ; “ If our Church “ had any where determined this matter, and declared in what “ sense she understood the procession in the Athanasian Creed, “ the case would be altered^f.” And again : “ Our Church never “ once adds the epithet eternal to the word procession ; nor has “ she any one passage, that I know of, which may not be as “ well understood of the temporal as of the eternal procession, “ either in her Liturgy, her Articles, or her Homilies^g.” I am not of Dr. Bennet’s mind in this particular ; believing that the Church has determined the meaning of the procession in those Creeds ; or rather, that the meaning is so plain, all things considered, as not to need any further determining. However, it appears to be Dr. Bennet’s principle, relating to subscription, that where the Church’s sense may be known, that sense must be received ; and that there is, in such a case, no latitude or liberty left to the subscriber. Upon this principle, he both does and must condemn Arian subscription ; since both the plain meaning of words and the intent of compilers and imposers exclude Arianism. And it is well known with what zeal and earnestness Dr. Bennet remonstrates^h against that collusion which he takes Dr. Clarke and his partizans to be guilty of in the matter of subscription.

PLEA XIV.

“ The doctrines of predestination and original sin are at this “ day, by all eminent divines, (after the example of Archbishop “ Laud, and of the learned Bishop Bull,) understood in a sense “ which there is no appearance the composers of the XXXIX “ Articles meant to teach ; and which there is all appearance “ the composers of the Homilies intended should not be taught.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 34.

“ I cannot condemn Archbishop Laud, Bishop Bull, and “ others, who departed manifestly from the received sense, not “ of one, but of several Articles ; nor that Declaration of King “ James I. (read Charles I.) by which he openly patronized the “ subscribing the same Articles in several, not only different, but “ contradictory senses : and in effect declared it for the honour

^f Page 292.

^g Page 293.

^h Bennet on the Trinity, p. 226.

“ of the Articles that this should be so ; and that all should “ acquiesce in it without mutual reproaches.” Lord Bishop of Bangor, Postscript, p. 259.

ANSWER.

1. It hath often been pretended by the Calvinists that the compilers and imposers of the Articles &c. intended a sense different (with respect to predestination and original sin) from that which now generally prevails. But this pretence has been often and abundantly confuted by great men ; and particularly by the learned Bishop Bull, in his Apology against Dr. Tully : where he has unanswerably vindicated the present doctrines from the Articles, Liturgy, Catechism, and Homilies of the Church of England¹.

2. A distinction should be made between such Articles as, being formed in general terms, leave a latitude for private opinions ; and such as, being otherwise formed, leave no such latitude. It is ridiculous to pretend that, because some articles are general or indefinite, and may admit of different explications, therefore all may, allowing that either Calvinist or Arminian may subscribe to the Articles, (the Articles being general, and the main points in dispute left undetermined,) would it not be weak to argue from thence, that both Papists and Protestants may likewise subscribe to the Articles of the Church of England ? Now it is no less absurd to pretend that both Catholics and Arians may subscribe to our forms ; some articles being as full and strong tests against Arianism, as others are against Popery.

3. It is not fairly, because not truly, suggested, that when men of different sentiments, as to particular explications, subscribe to the same general words, that they subscribe in contradictory, or even in different senses. Both subscribe to the same general proposition, and both in the same sense ; only they differ in the particulars relating to it : which is not differing (at least, it need not be) about the sense of the Article, but about particulars not contained in the Article. For instance : let two persons assent to a general proposition, This figure is a triangle ; one believing the triangle to be equilateral, the other believing its sides to be unequal : they are directly opposite in their sentiments, as to what kind of triangle it is: but in the general proposition, that the figure is a triangle, both agree, and in the same sense.

¹ See also Dr. Bennet on the 17th Article. Directions for studying, &c. p. 93, &c.

In like manner, imagine the article of Predestination (and the same may be said of any other in like circumstances) to be left in general terms. Both sides may subscribe to the same general proposition, and both in the same sense: which sense reaches not to the particulars in dispute. And if one believes predestination to be absolute, and the other conditionate; this is not (on the present supposition) differing about the sense of the Article, but in their respective additions to it.

4. It is very uncautiously and unaccurately said, that King Charles I. patronized the subscribing the same Articles either in contradictory or different senses. His order is, that every subscriber submit to the Article in the "plain and full meaning thereof," in the "literal and grammatical sense." What! is the plain and full meaning more than one meaning? or is the one plain and full meaning two contradictory meanings? Could it be for the honour of the Article (or of the King) to say this? No: but the royal Declaration, by "plain and full meaning," understands the general meaning, which is but one; and to which all might reasonably subscribe. And he forbids any one's "putting his own sense or comment to be the meaning of the Article," or to "affix any new sense" to it: that is, he forbids the changing a general proposition into a particular; he stands up for the general proposition, or for the Article itself; and prohibits particular meanings, as not belonging to the Article; nor being properly explications of it, but additions to it. This is the plain import of the royal Declaration: and it is both wise and just; free from any of those strange consequences or inferences which some would draw from it.

5. I must further remark, that the present instance has no relation to the point in hand. The propositions concerning the holy Trinity, contained in our public forms, are not general or indefinite, but special and determinate, in the very points of difference between Catholics and Arians, (consubstantiality, coequality, coeternity, &c.) and that in as clear and strong words as any can be devised. This is the reason why the subscriber has no latitude left in this case; and why an Arian can claim no benefit from any latitude allowable in other Articles where circumstances are plainly different. And it must be thought a very peculiar way of reasoning to argue that, because a man may take a liberty where the Church and State have allowed it, therefore he may take the same liberty where they have not allowed it: which is all that this plea amounts to.

I cannot but observe from the disputes and clamours that have been raised about the 17th Article of our Church, what a tender regard has all along been paid to the point of the subscription; and how jealous men have been of any the least appearance, or umbrage of prevarication, in so serious and sacred a thing. What then must be said of those who plead for a plain, open prevarication, in a case which can admit of no dispute with any considering man, and has hardly so much as a colour left for it?

PLEA XV.

“ That Article in the Nicene Creed (of one substance with the Father) is now (through the ambiguity of the Latin and English translation) by most men taken much otherwise than the Council intended it. For the greater part of modern Christians (if we may judge by the writings of eminent divines) understand it (as if it had been ἑνὸς οὐσίως) to signify of one individual substance with the Father, whereas all learned men know that the Greek word (ὁμοούσιος) never had any such signification, and that the Council meant no such thing.” Clarke’s Reply, p. 35.

ANSWER.

Here is little more in this plea than a cavil upon the double meaning of the word individual; which has been sufficiently exposed in another place. It has also been shewn that the doctrine of the Nicene Council is rightly enough understood by modern Christians; and that while the Doctor so magisterially censures the whole Christian world, in a manner, yet no one ever understood this matter less, or talked more crudely of it than the Doctor himself hath done, in this very page of his Reply. See my Defence, vol. i. p. 544. and Reply to Dr. Whitby, p. 203, &c. of this volume.

PLEA XVI.

“ It becomes a sincere man (especially if he varies from notions commonly received) to declare plainly in what sense

“ he understands any words of human institution ; that his “ inferiors and equals may not be imposed upon by him, and “ that his superiors may judge of such declaration.” Clarke's Reply, p. 33.

“ Dr. Clarke, of all men, could least be charged with collusion, “ because he has declared publicly his opinions in this matter.” Modest Plea, p. 221.

ANSWER.

I have reserved this plea to the last, as being of a very different kind from the rest, and withal carrying a more plausible show of frankness and sincerity in it. Nevertheless, this, though it has an appearance of fairness, will by no means serve the purpose for which it is brought.

Suppose any disaffected persons in this kingdom should invent some strange, forced, unheard of interpretation of the civil oaths, to elude and frustrate the intent of them ; and declare in print, that they themselves take the oaths in this new sense, advising their brethren to do the same ; would such declaration be sufficient to salve their honesty, or to make them righteous in the sight of God or man ? would they not be rather thought the more notoriously wicked, as not only venturing upon perjury themselves, but instructing and seducing others into the same crime ?

Their giving notice of the prevarication would not be acquitting themselves of the guilt, but proclaiming it ; and, in some respects, increasing it : as it would not only be doing an ill thing, but, what is worse, boasting of it, and teaching others to do the like. One dishonest act, or more, are not so dangerous or pernicious, as the laying down principles, and contriving subtillties and artificial evasions, whereby to undermine the very foundations of moral honesty.

I am not sensible that there is difference enough between this and the other case, to make one innocent and the other highly criminal. Nothing can be pleaded for it but the presumed consent of the superiors, after declaration made. But that no such presumed consent can have any place in the matter of subscription, may appear from the reasons following :

1. Because superiors may often connive at, or tolerate offences : which are never the less offences for such connivance.
2. Because so long as our superiors continue the same forms, which clearly express such a sense, they must be presumed to intend the same sense, till they declare otherwise. And their permitting the same forms to stand is a much surer argument of their still intending the same thing, than their suffering an offender to escape, with impunity, can be of the contrary.

3. The expressions of our Articles, Liturgies, Creeds, and Laws, are all so plain and full for the received doctrine of the Trinity, and against the new scheme, that a man must have a very mean opinion either of the understanding or integrity of his superiors, to suppose that they can ever allow him to trifle at such a rate in so serious a matter as subscription. And it must be observed that our superiors speak by the public forms, as much as the legislature speaks by the public laws: and no sense can be their sense but the plain, usual, literal meaning of those public forms; till some as public and as authentic declaration alters the case.

If the subscription contended for be in itself fraudulent, as elusive of the law, a man's declaring, or giving notice of it, does not alter its nature, or make it legal. Suppose a man should declare that he subscribes only so far as is agreeable to Scripture; (a method disallowed by our laws, according to the unanimous resolution of all the judges, as before observed :) such declaration would never alter the nature of the subscription; but it would be as much against law as ever, notwithstanding: and, for that very reason, it would be unrighteous and dishonest. But I have also observed, that subscribing in any sense contrary to the plain force of words, and known meaning of the imposers, is equally illegal with the other: and therefore neither can this be justified any more than the other. And since whatever is illegal is of course condemned by our superiors, who speak by the public laws, it is evident that our superiors condemn this kind of subscription; and consequently there is no pretence left for a presumed consent, unless our superiors can be presumed both to allow and condemn the very same thing at the same time.

4. I must add, that our superiors have, from time to time, (as there has been occasion,) sufficiently testified their disallowance of any attempts tending to undermine the Catholic received doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity. His present Majesty's Directions, at this very juncture, are yet fresh in our minds:

where (to the general joy and satisfaction of the kingdom) he has signified his just resentments against those "impious " tenets and doctrines which have been of late advanced and " maintained with much boldness and openness, contrary to the " great and fundamental truths of the Christian religion, and " particularly to the doctrine of the holy and ever blessed " TRINITY." And his royal command is, that "no preacher " presume to deliver any other doctrine—concerning the " blessed TRINITY, than what is contained in the holy Scriptures, " and is agreeable to the three Creeds, and the XXXIX " Articles of religion." Now the 8th Article of our Church expressly affirms that the " three Creeds may be proved by most " certain warrants of holy Scripture." Whosoever therefore gives it out for Scripture doctrine, that "the one God always " signifies the Father;" or that "more Persons than one cannot " be, or are not, one God;" or that "God with any high epithet " always signifies the Father;" or that "the Son or Holy " Ghost is not God, Lord, Almighty, eternal, uncreated, and " incomprehensible, as much as the Father;" I say, whoever pretends Scripture for these, or the like positions, (positions plainly repugnant to the Athanasian Creed, which Creed may be proved from Scripture, according to Article the 8th,) does at the same time act in opposition to his superiors, who have enjoined the observance of the Creeds and Articles. If it be said that such general orders or directions of superiors reach not to this particular case, as not containing any formal prohibition of those newly-devised senses put upon the Creeds and Articles; I answer, that there is no more occasion for a formal prohibition against perverting the plain sense of the Creeds or Articles, than there is for the like prohibition against perverting the sense of the civil oaths. All that have common understanding are supposed to know, that directing us to adhere to the Creeds and Articles, is directing us to adhere to their true sense, that being always implied. To pervert their true and certain sense, is not adhering to our Church's forms, but contradicting them: which, though it be done in an insidious way, and under the false name of explaining them; yet, in reality, means the same thing as the most direct and formal opposition to them. And however the disguise may be serviceable in the eyes of men, yet conscience is not a thing to be played with in that manner; neither will such vain pretences avail any thing in the sight of God. Subscribing in this method is really nothing else but eluding the whole design of the laws, and imposing upon the ruling powers: but it must be doubly rude and absurd, at the same time, to presume, that any man can have their consent for it. So much for this.

I have now run through all the pleas, pretences, or excuses (arguments I will not call them) that I could any where meet with for the new method of subscribing. The reader is not to wonder at the number of them, which is an argument only of a bad cause. Had there been any good reason whereon to found it, there had been no need of running out into such multiplicity. But when men have once left the plain and true way to follow their own wanderings, invention is fruitful; and it is very easy always to have a great deal to say, after a man is gone beyond the rule of speaking to the purpose. I believe, I may now venture to affirm that the cause which those gentlemen have taken in hand is one of the weakest that was ever undertaken by wise men. False facts, groundless surmises, and inconclusive reasonings, are all that it has to subsist upon. And yet I have hitherto allowed them, for argument sake, one supposition; namely, that the expressions in our forms are capable of a sense consistent with their principles: and I have shewn, notwithstanding, that their subscription is fraudulent; because repugnant to the more plain and obvious sense of the words, and the known intention of the imposers. But I must now examine the truth of that supposition which has been thus far allowed them: and if that also proves weak and groundless; there will then be nothing of colour or pretence left for that subscription; but the very men themselves who either use it or plead for it, must be self-condemned. I shall therefore next examine how that case stands; not that I need put the issue of the cause upon it, (for it is a clear point that the subscription pleaded for is unjustifiable, though I allowed them the present supposition,) but ex abundantia, and to shew how miserably weak, and destitute of all support, the opposite persuasion is, I may inquire whether even this their last refuge may not be taken from them.

CHAP. V.

That several expressions in our public forms are really not capable of a sense consistent with the Arian hypothesis, or new scheme.

IT must be owned that words are arbitrary signs of things; and so, in some sense, it may be said that the word white is capable of signifying black, and the word light might signify darkness, if the custom of speech had not otherwise determined. I suppose, those gentlemen will not extend their notion, of words being capable of their sense, thus far. They must have regard to custom of speech, to use of language, to common rules of grammar and criticism, in determining whether words be capable of such a sense or no. And whatever forms are capable of that sense which is contended for, must be conceived capable of being paraphrased into that same sense, by putting other equivalent words into their place. By these rules and measures I shall proceed in the inquiry, whether the expressions of our public forms are capable of an Arian sense or no. Dr. Clarke has reduced the number of those which we chiefly insist on to 27. I shall single out some of them, following the order wherein they lie, in the first edition of "Scripture Doctrine," together with Dr. Clarke's interpretation of them. I shall begin with the Athanasian Creed :

" Whosoever will be saved ; before all things it is necessary " that he hold the Catholic faith.

" Which faith except every one do keep whole and undefiled ;
" without doubt he shall perish everlastingly.

" And the Catholic faith is this, &c.

" He therefore that will be saved must thus think of the " Trinity.

" This is the Catholic faith ; which except a man believe " faithfully, he cannot be saved."

These are what they call damnatory clauses : and it ought to be matter of serious inquiry, in what sense the gentlemen of the Arian persuasion can subscribe them, without subscribing their own damnation. The very lowest sense and import of those damnatory clauses has ever been conceived to intend thus much, that the main doctrine of the Trinity and incarnation, the doctrine of worshipping one God in three Persons, and three Persons in one God; and the doctrine of perfect God and perfect man, united in one God-man, are necessarily to be believed (or however not disbelieved) by all persons of years and discretion, (who have had the opportunity of being duly instructed,) under peril of eternal damnation. As the author of the Creed could not intend less than this, so neither can the words themselves import less. And yet there is just reason to question whether the advocates for the new scheme think it necessary to worship God the Son or God the Holy Ghost at all; it being a principle much contended for amongst them, to direct their prayers uniformly to God the Father; ^k meaning, I suppose, to him, and to him only: and it is certain that they neither believe three Persons to be one God; nor perfect God (in the sense of the Creed) to be united personally with perfect man to make one God-man. Dr. Clarke, in his Comments, takes a great deal of pains to prove that particular explications of all or any part of the doctrine of the Trinity cannot be necessary to salvation. This proceeding of his would be right, if he had been teaching his followers to subscribe with this reserve, viz. so far as is agreeable to what they think Scripture: but since they are to subscribe in some sense whereof the words are capable, as well as agreeably to Scripture, his pains would have been better employed in shewing how the damnatory clauses can be capable of a lower sense than that which has been given.

“ We worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity.” Here it is to be noted, that Dr. Clarke and his adherents always by one God understand God the Father only: and will never allow two Persons in one God, though the words of the Creed plainly include three. Let us see then how these words must be paraphrased, to make them consistent with their principles. It is thus:

“ We worship one God (the Father) in Father, Son, and Holy Ghost: and we worship Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, in one God the Father. That is, by referring all the worship to the Father ultimately, as to the one supreme Head.” Let us consider what can be made of this construction. It may be turned two ways: either thus, We worship one Person in three Persons, and three Persons in one Person, (which is flat enough, and scarce sense;) or else thus, We worship one God, the ^k See Modest Plea, p. 177. Brief Answer to Dr. W. p. 64.

Father, principally, worshipping three Persons; and we worship three Persons, worshipping one God, the Father, principally. This indeed is sense; but such as no one ever did or ever would express in the words of the Creed. It is not said, Unum Deum Patrem præcipue venerantes, Trinitatem veneremur; et Trinitatem venerantes unum Patrem præcipue veneremur: but it is, Unum Deum in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in Unitate veneremur. ἓνα Θεὸν ἐν Τριάδι, καὶ Τριάδα ἐν μονάδι σέβωμεν. Plainly signifying, that the one God to be worshipped is the Trinity, and the Trinity to be worshipped is the one God. We may proceed to what follows:

“Neither confounding the Persons, nor dividing the substance. For there is one Person of the Father, another of the Son, and another of the Holy Ghost. But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost is all one, &c.” Here the meaning of the words is very plain, that the Persons must not be confounded, because Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are distinct Persons: nor the substance of the three Persons be divided, because the Godhead of the three is all one. To paraphrase the words, upon the Doctor’s principles, they must run thus:

“Neither confounding the Persons, nor dividing the Father’s substance: for the three Persons are distinct, but the divinity of the Son and Holy Ghost is no other than what is communicated from the Father.” By this paraphrase, the whole force of the sentence is broken and confused. Understanding substance of the three Persons, the whole is well connected: for here is a reason given why their substance is not divided; viz. because their Godhead is one. But what sense or connection is there in saying that the Father’s substance is not divided; for, or because, the divinity of the Son, &c. is no other than what is communicated from him? No one would ever have expressed the Doctor’s sense in those words of the Creed, or in that manner. Besides, the words Godhead all one, (una divinitas, μία θεότης,) applied here to three Persons, are of known, certain signification; denoting that the substance of the three is one, and that all are one God. So that if either the coherence of the sentence, or the grammatical sense of words, or their constant and customary use in Church writers, be of any weight; the passage now before us is not capable of that sense which the Doctor would wrest it to; but must be construed in another: which other is likewise confirmed by the words following; “the glory equal, the majesty coeternal.”

As to glory equal, the Doctor takes care to tell us, it must not be understood in the same sense as coordinate beings are equal to one another. Well, that we know: but what sense must the subscriber understand it in? The Doctor says, in “such a sense “as he who derives his essence or being from another, can be “equal, &c.” Well, but what if the subscriber, according to his Arian sense of deriving being, &c. thinks that the glory of the second and third Persons can be in no sense equal to that of the first; any more than the glory of a creature can be equal to the glory of the Creator; how then can he subscribe to these words, which are express for equality of glory, in some sense or other? The Doctor’s last shift is, that it may be understood in such a sense as Christ is said to be $\text{\iota}\omega\sigma\ \Theta\epsilon\hat{\omega}\phi$, (or $\text{\iota}\sigma\alpha\ \Theta\epsilon\hat{\omega}\phi$.) as God, or equal with God. But the Doctor’s construction of $\text{\iota}\sigma\alpha\ \Theta\epsilon\hat{\omega}\phi$, (Phil. ii. 6.) is no more than to be honoured as Lord of all things, that is, with honour equal, or suitable to such a God, or Lord, so exalted; not with honour equal to that which belongs to God the Father. But the Creed plainly makes the glory of each Person equal to the glory of any other Person: wherefore the words are not capable of such a sense as the Doctor has put upon $\text{\iota}\sigma\alpha\ \Theta\epsilon\hat{\omega}\phi$, but the subscriber is left to seek out for some other; or else to subscribe the words in no sense at all. The next words of the Creed are, subscribe to the coeternity of the three Persons? The Doctor in his comments admits that the second and third Persons have always been with the first, which he explains by before all ages, and before time. If this comes up to a coeternity, it is well: if not, he does but deceive himself and his followers; for coeternal can bear but one sense, and can admit of no degrees, no difference in point of duration.

“Majesty coeternal.” The word coeternal is of a fixed and known sense in ecclesiastical writers: never used to signify any thing less than absolute eternity, without beginning and without end. How contradictory this sense is to the principles of the party, may be seen from the author of the Apology for Dr. Clarke, who says thus: “Though the generation of the Son, and “procession of the Holy Ghost may, in a sense, be said to be “eternal, as they were $\text{\pi}\rho\delta\ \text{\pi}\acute{\alpha}\nu\tau\omega\upsilon\upsilon$ and $\text{\pi}\rho\delta\ \alpha\acute{\iota}\omega\upsilon\omega\upsilon$, yet what is “this to the absolute eternity of a self-existent Being¹?” We see what the Apologist thought of the great, the infinite disparity between the eternity of the Father and the eternity of either of the other two Persons: nor did the Doctor in his answer to him disapprove of his sentiments; but rather (tacitly at least) acquiesced in them. How then can these gentlemen

¹ Page 50, 51, 438.

The reader should here observe the artful method of explaining away the sense of a creed, or of any other writing: not for the sake of learning it, (for it is not worth it,) but to be armed against it, and to prevent being imposed upon by it. When a word occurs, of a fixed sense, and which is not liked; the way is first to look out for another word that is ambiguous, which may bear the same sense, but may also bear another. Draw but a reader thus far to let slip the first word, and to take this other instead of it, and then the work is half done. Having a word with two senses, drop by degrees the sense you have no mind to, and take the other, still substituting other words which may come nearer and nearer to the sense you aim at; till at length, by several removes, you get quite off from the sense of the word you began with.

Thus in the present instance; from coeternal, a word of fixed sense, and rather too high for the Arian hypothesis, the learned Doctor puts "always with the Father;" which might indeed signify the same thing, but is however capable of a lower sense: and to bring the sense gradually down, the Doctor next substitutes the phrase "before all ages," which again is equivocal, and does not sound quite so high as the former: then, to lower the sense still further, he has another phrase, viz. "before time:" and time, in a restrained sense, may be said to have commenced with the world. So now he is got low enough, and the reader may be supposed, by these several steps, to have lost the sight of coeternal. But to pass on.

"Such as the Father is, such is the Son, and such is the Holy Ghost." The Doctor's interpretation of it is; "such in all senses wherein he that derives his essence or being from another, can be such as is he from whom he derives it." Here again he leaves his subscriber in the dark. For what if he had said, such in all senses wherein a creature can be such as his Creator? which I am afraid is the true meaning of most of his disciples. This would come to the same as saying such in no sense : so that by this limitation, he takes away the plain force of the words ; and teaches his followers to subscribe, not “ in “ such sense as the words are capable of : ” but “ so far as is “ agreeable to what they call Scripture. ” The Creed is positive that the second and third Persons are such as the first ; and immediately after specifies the respects in which they are such. Such in respect of their being eternal ; such in respect of their being uncreated ; such in respect of their being incomprehensible, Almighty, God, and Lord. That is, all the three Persons are equally, and in the same sense, uncreated, eternal, incomprehensible, Almighty, God, and Lord. This is plainly the doctrine of the Creed ; the literal and grammatical sense of the words. Now, to qualify absolute propositions with reserves and limitations, in the manner the Doctor does, is not explaining their sense, but contradicting it. Neither can this be called subscribing in a sense in which the words are capable, but only “ so far as is agreeable to what some call Scripture : ” which rule of subscribing is condemned by those gentlemen.

“ The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate, and the Holy “ Ghost uncreate—And yet not three uncreated, but one “ uncreated. ” The Doctor here teaches the subscriber to acknowledge every Person to be uncreated, (ἀκτιστος,) and yet, to say that there are not three uncreated (ἀκτιστοι) Persons, but one uncreated Person ; which is a staring contradiction : besides, it is owning two of the Persons to be creatures, in some sense, which the Doctor at other times studiously avoids. But he was here in great straits ; and was to venture upon any thing, rather than admit what he has the utmost aversion to, three Persons to be one uncreated Being, or God.

He has no possible way of reconciling the seeming contradiction contained in his comment, but by making a distinction between derived uncreatedness and underived uncreatedness : which would have appeared so odd and fanciful, that he chose not to mention it in terms, but only to hint it in generals. What precludes this, and every other pretence of that kind, is, that the Creed plainly makes the uncreatedness of the second and third Persons to be such as the Father's is, that is, of the same kind, and to be understood in the same sense, there being no difference or distinction in that respect.

“ The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible,

“ and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible—And yet there are “ not three incomprehensibles, but one incomprehensible.” The Doctor takes the same way with this as with the former passage; and runs into the like contradiction to avoid the admitting so shocking a thing to him, as the notion of three Persons being one incomprehensible; which is the certain meaning of the Creed. I shall say no more to this, but refer the reader to what I have observed upon the passage preceding.

“ The Father eternal, the Son eternal, and the Holy Ghost “ eternal. And yet they are not three eternal, but one “ eternal.” Here the words are so express for three Persons being one eternal, (which the Doctor can by no means bear,) that he had no way left but to change they are not into there are not: without considering that the subscriber must give his unfeigned assent and consent to they are not; and must so read in the public congregation. Besides this inconvenience, which the Doctor seemed to be unapprised of; there is another which he was forced to run upon, (contrary to his usual caution,) and that was to say, “ there are not three eternal Persons,” hereby denying the eternity of two of them. And yet the Creed, more than once, expressly asserts the coeternity of all three; and besides plainly teaches that the eternity of the second and third Persons is such as the Father’s is. Nor will the Doctor’s distinction of a derived and underived eternity help him in this matter: for the sense of the word eternity has nothing to do with that distinction, being but one, and importing neither more nor less than beginningless and endless duration.

“ The Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty, and the Holy “ Ghost Almighty. And yet they are not three Almighties, “ but one Almighty.” Here the Doctor again changes they are not into there are not: thereby signifying that the subscriber cannot honestly assent to, or make use of, they are not; though he does not tell him how to avoid the doing of it, solemnly, and in the face of the public congregation.

I take no notice of the Doctor’s choosing τρεῖς παντοδύναμοι, rather than τρεῖς παντοκράτορες, because he will claim the privilege of taking which he likes best: otherwise the Greek copies favour the latter as much as the former; and the Latin original is indifferent to either.

“ The Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is “ God. And yet they are not three Gods, but one God.” We have the same collusion again practised, in changing they are not into there are not, only for the sake of avoiding what the Creed mainly intends to teach, that the "three Persons are one God." I shall not here repeat what I have before said; but shall only observe an omission which the Doctor is guilty of, in not teaching the subscriber how to reconcile the contradiction of every Person being a God, (for so it must be on his principles,) and yet not three Gods. For though there be but one supreme God, (upon the Doctor's hypothesis,) yet one supreme God, and two inferior Gods, are three Gods, in such a sense as neither Scripture nor antiquity can ever allow. The like might be said of the next paragraph, respecting one Lord and three Lords. I shall just take notice of a slight inconsistency of the Doctor, in explaining this paragraph. To account for the Holy Ghost's being here called God, he is forced to admit that he is represented in Scripture as "exercising divine power and authority," p. 435. But if we turn back to Prop. xxv. p. 296. we are there told that the Holy Ghost, in the New Testament, is never expressly styled God, "because he is no where represented as "sitting upon a throne, or exercising supreme dominion, &c." So that it seems the Doctor can make it out either way; that the Scripture has, or has not, given ground enough for styling the Holy Ghost God, just as occasion serves. But to pass on.

"In this Trinity, none is afore, or after other" (Nihil prius aut posterius— or, Nemo primus aut postremus. οὐδὲν πρῶτον ἢ ὕστερον—aliter, οὐδεὶς πρῶτος ἢ ἔσχατος) "but the whole three "Persons are coeternal." The coeternity could not be expressed in stronger words than is here done, both positively and negatively.

If the Doctor and his friends believe it, it is well: if not, it is very certain that they cannot honestly subscribe, even upon their own principles; for the words are not capable of any lower meaning.

"None is greater or less than another; but the whole three "Persons are—coequal."

The Doctor's comment upon the words none is greater, &c. is, that the second and third Persons are every where with the first, as they are always. I doubt not but the sole reason which led the Doctor into this remote and strained construction, was his apprehension that the phrase every where, like the word always, might help him to a double entendre, for the uses above mentioned.

But if every where be capable of two meanings, the words of the Creed are not so; "none greater or less;" and if they must be understood of presence, they can signify nothing lower than this; that all the three Persons are equally omnipresent.

I am content with this meaning; and if it be consistent with the Doctor's hypothesis, am very glad of it: or if it be not, then he must be conceived to advise the subscriber to subscribe in a sense of which the words are not capable.

After I had proceeded thus far, and had looked a little forwards, I was much surprised to find the Doctor interpreting coequal very differently from the words, "none is greater, &c." as if they did not both mean the same thing, first negatively, and then positively expressed. But the Doctor, it seems, stands by no rules of interpreting. They are "coequal" (says he now) "in such a sense as one or more Persons can be equal to another (from whom they derive their being) by a plenary communication of power, knowledge, dignity, &c." He has the like come-off for the words "equal to the Father as touching his Godhead;" that is, says he, equal "in such a sense as a derived being can be." I have before observed something of this general salvo, for some other passages: and indeed it is such a sovereign salvo for every difficulty, that he need not have made use of any other. In reality, it comes to no more than this, that he admits the words, and the sense of them, so far as consistent with his own hypothesis, or his own sense of deriving being. In the same way, a man might subscribe to the decrees of the Council of Trent, or to every article of Pope Pius's Creed. For instance: I believe saints may be worshipped, but in such a sense as worship can be due to saints. I admit transubstantiation, but in such a sense as it can be consistent with Scripture and reason. I admit prayers in an unknown tongue, but in such a sense as can be reconciled with the 1 Cor. xiv. And thus we need not scruple any thing. Apply the same salvo to the civil oaths, and it may serve as well there, to elude and frustrate them: and a man may swear to any king, without acknowledging his just right or title. It is but saying thus; I believe such a person to be the only rightful and lawful king of these realms, in such a sense as he can be rightful and lawful, upon my principles, &c. And what may not a man swear, or subscribe to in this loose method? Now in truth, though this kind of collusion is disguised by the words such a sense, as if there were a certain sense, in which the subscriber might fairly understand the words, consistent with his own hypothesis; yet it really amounts to no more than this, the subscribing so far as is consistent with his own opinions. For a man may make use of the same salvo, whether the words be capable of any such sense, or whether they be not. If they be capable, he is indeed bound up to such sense: if not, he is free, having subscribed to them no further than they can be so understood; which perhaps may not be at all. I cannot but from hence observe, how unfairly and unjustly the very worthy and learned Bishop of Oxford has been treated for confounding (as is pretended) these two things: subscribing so far as is agreeable to Scripture; and subscribing in such sense as is agreeable to Scripture. For however distinct these two things may be in the general, they are really confounded by Dr. Clarke himself in this particular case, as I have often observed. Neither will he ever be able to defend the point of subscription upon the latter only, without taking in the former also. His talking of such sense seems only to be a cover, or plausible disguise, for so far as, (which has deceived his unwary followers who have not seen so deep into this matter as he;) and hence I conceive it is, that he has never explicitly condemned the subscribing with the reserve of so far as is agreeable; though others of the party, being ashamed to stand up for so unaccountable a latitude, have indeed plainly rejected it; not being aware of the need they should have of it. But to return to the Creed.

“God, of the substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds; and man, of the substance of his mother—perfect God, and perfect man.”

The Doctor did not think proper to take any notice of this passage. I know not how any words can be stronger for the Son's having the same divine nature with the Father, as much as he has the same human nature with his mother: perfect God, and perfect man, having all that belongs to the nature of both. This is utterly repugnant to the Arian hypothesis; and can no more be reconciled with it than light with darkness.

We may now take leave of the Creed, (called Athanasian,) and proceed to the Litany.

“O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons, and “one God, have mercy &c.”

Here the three Persons are all together invoked, and under the style and title of one God, directly opposite to the Doctor's principles. The Doctor has no way to evade their force, but by understanding the title of one God to belong to the Father only. His sense is this :

“ O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons, and “ one God, viz. the Father, have mercy &c.” This collusion the subscriber is to practise in his most solemn devotions: excluding two of the Persons from the one Godhead here, though he had addressed them both under the title of God in the two preceding petitions; and though the epithets, holy, blessed, and glorious, are equally attributed to all three, in the very same petition. If this be to “ pray with the understanding,” (as the Doctor pretends it is,) let it rather be the wish of every honest man to have less understanding, and more grace than to trifle in this manner with the tremendous Deity.

In the Collect for the third Sunday in Advent, we thus address our blessed Saviour :

“ O Lord Jesu Christ—who livest and reignest with the “ Father and the Holy Spirit, ever one God, world without “ end.” Any one, at first sight, may here see that the title of one God is not attributed to the Father only, but to all the three Persons: contrary to the Doctor's principles. The Doctor does not attempt to shew that the words are capable of any other meaning. Only he draws up another form suitable to his own hypothesis, and little akin to the words in the Collect; substituting that in the room of the other. If the subscriber can content himself with such shuffling in his solemn prayers, let him look to it.

There is just such another passage in the conclusion of the Collect for Christmas-day, (which the Doctor has omitted,) and there is another in the Collect for the sixth Sunday after Epiphany, (which he has also omitted,) running thus :

“ With thee, O Father, and thee, O Holy Ghost, he (Christ) “ liveth and reigneth, ever one God, world without end.” Here, whether Christ alone, or all the three Persons, (and one of these it must be,) be called one God; it is equally repugnant to the Doctor's principles. And he cannot subscribe to this, “ in such “ a sense as the words will bear,” (for they cannot bear his sense,) but only “ so far as is consistent with his principles:” which is not assenting to the words of the prayer, but to something else of his own inventing. The like may be said of the Collects for Septuagesima, and the first Sunday in Lent, and Good Friday, twice, and Easter-day, and Ascension-day, and the Sunday after; all which the Doctor has omitted out of his collection: an omission indeed not worth the mentioning, were it not that the Modest Pleader has been pleased to object the smallness of the number 27, which, we see, might have been enlarged; and were it not an aggravation of the great sin of prevaricating with God and man, to consider how often it must be repeated in the yearly course of the prayers.

The Doctor takes notice of the Collect for Whitsunday, and shifts it off in a loose manner: and so passes on to Trinity-Sunday, dealing much the same way with that also. He omits the Collect for St. Matthew's day; which is more express and full against his principles than either of the two former. I shall pass over all the other places in our Liturgy or Articles, except one, with which I shall shut up this chapter. It is the proper preface for Trinity-Sunday, in the Communion-Office, running thus:

“ O Lord, Almighty, everlasting God; who art one God, one Lord, not one only Person, but three Persons in one substance. For that which we believe of the glory of the Father, the same we believe of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, without any difference or inequality.”

The Doctor here pleasantly says, that “ there is no passage in the whole Service so apt to be understood in a wrong sense as this;” meaning, I suppose, so apt to be understood in the sense the Church intended, and so hard to be perverted to any other. And it must indeed be thought a very clear and full passage on the orthodox side, when a person of the Doctor's abilities, in this kind, and after he had worked his way through the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds, (besides a great part of the Liturgy,) began at length to feel himself nonplused by it, and almost at the point of confessing it. His first endeavour was to perplex and puzzle the Church's sense; and next to introduce his own.

He pretends that the words “ Lord, Almighty, everlasting God,” are personal, and must be understood of one Person only, though he cannot but know that every one of those words are used in the Athanasian Creed (to say nothing of the Liturgy) of all the three Persons taken together; and they are here expressly declared to belong, not to “ one Person only,” but to “three Persons in one substance.” The words, who art, he thinks, cannot be properly applied to more Persons than one. But that they are so applied here is manifest, and by those who were competent judges of propriety: and if he likes it not, why should he subscribe? When he comes to give us his own meaning, he never attempts to shew (good reason why) in what sense, consistent with his principles, a subscriber may believe “three Persons in one substance,” and that the same glory belongs to all, “without any difference or inequality.” It would be trifling to take notice of what he endeavours to put upon a subscriber, in order to satisfy his conscience in one of the most serious and solemn things in the world. I can never give myself leave to think that he could at all satisfy himself in it, upon second and cooler thoughts. Indeed, I should ask the Doctor’s pardon for dwelling so long upon those extravagant explications; which, I doubt not, he now heartily despises, as well as I. Neither ought they to be any longer imputed to him, who has expunged them, and cast them off, from the time his second edition has appeared. But since his disciples and followers are still proud of his refuse, and set a value upon his trifles, which he has too much sense to do himself; since they insist upon it that all the expressions of our public forms are, at least, capable of a sense consistent with their principles; and appeal, for proof of it, (having indeed nothing else to appeal to,) to the Doctor’s performances on that head; in a word, since they have been pleased to rest the whole cause of subscription upon the Doctor’s explications, it was necessary for me to take under examination those things upon which such a stress was laid; unless the Doctor himself would have been so kind (for which I should have heartily thanked him) as to speak more plainly in this matter than he has thought proper to do. One half-sheet, one small advertisement from his hand, to discountenance this kind of subscription, would have done the business at once, and have saved me the labour of doing any thing. The credit of his name was, in a manner, all it had to stand upon: and had he but pleased to take off the countenance of his authority, his reasons should have been left to stand or fall by themselves. But as the case now is, (and as the author of the Remarks observes,) that the whole party are gone after him, and still persist in the Doctor’s first thoughts relating to subscription; neither has the Doctor took any sufficient care to reclaim them, or to bring them back; the cause is too important to wait his slow motions, or to be left any longer in suspense. The glory of God, the honour of our most holy religion, and the security of Church and State, call for our best endeavours to root out, if possible, those false and pernicious principles, and to reestablish the matter of subscription upon its true and solid foundations. How far I have been able to contribute to so good an end, must be left to the reader's judgment. My design however was well aimed: and this is my apology for disturbing the learned Doctor, late, and unwillingly, on this head.

I shall now briefly sum up the particulars of what has been advanced above, for the reader's clearer apprehending of it, as well as the better retaining it.

1. The Church of England requires subscription, not to words, but things; to propositions contained in her public forms.

2. Subscribers are obliged, not to silence or peace only, but to a serious belief of what they subscribe to.

3. Subscribers must believe it true in that particular sense which the Church intended, (so far as that sense may be known,) for the Church can expect no less; the design being to preserve "one uniform tenor" of faith, to preclude "diversity of opinions," to have her own explications, and none other, (as to points determined,) taught and inculcated; and to tie men up from spreading or receiving doctrines contrary to the public determinations. These and the like ends cannot be at all answered by subscription, unless the subscriber give his assent to the Church's forms in the Church's sense; that is, in the sense of the compilers and imposers.

4. The sense of the compilers and imposers is to be judged of from the plain, usual, and literal signification of words; and from their intention, purpose, or design, however known: the rule for understanding the public forms being the same as for understanding oaths, laws, injunctions, or any other forms or writings whatever.

5. Where either the words themselves, or the intention (much more where both) is plain and evident; there the sense of the imposers is fully known; and there is no room left for a subscriber (as such) to put any contrary, or different sense upon the public forms.

6. If words be capable of several meanings, but yet certainly exclude this or that particular meaning; a subscriber cannot honestly take the forms in that meaning which is specially excluded. For this would be subscribing against the sense of the Church at the same time that he professes his agreement with it.

7. It may be certainly known that any Arian sense of our public forms is such a sense as our Church intended to exclude, and has excluded, in as full and strong positive terms as the wit of man is able to devise. And all men of sense must allow, that when compilers and imposers have done the utmost they could, and as far as any words can reach, to express the Catholic doctrine of the Trinity; they may and must be supposed to mean that very doctrine which they have industriously laboured to express, and none other.

8. And that it may not be pretended by our modern Arians, that their sense is not Arian, (which nevertheless it certainly is,) it is further evident, and hath been shewn, that the main particulars of their scheme (call it what they please) is specially excluded, both by the plain words and undoubted intention of our public forms.

9. Therefore none of the advocates for the new scheme can fairly or honestly subscribe to our Church's forms, though they could invent a sense for them consistent with their own principles; it being evident that any such sense is contrary to our Church's sense, and to the intention of the imposers.

10. The pleas and excuses devised to justify the subscribing in a sense contrary to, or different from, the known sense of the imposers, being founded either on false presumptions or weak reasonings, are of no weight or signficancy; but the Arian subscriber must be blamable for going counter to the known sense of the Church, even though the words were capable of another meaning.

11. Yet, upon examination, it appears that many expressions of our public forms are really not capable of any sense consistent with the new scheme. And therefore, if the patrons of it subscribe to their own sense, (as they must be conceived to do,) they subscribe to a sense which is no sense of our public forms at all, on any supposition.

12. The subscription therefore of those gentlemen, however glossed over with the pretence of subscribing "in such sense as is agreeable to (what they call) Scripture," really amounts to no more than subscribing "so far as is in their opinion agreeable

“ to Scripture.” Which way of subscribing not only defeats every end of subscription, and stands condemned by our laws, and by the express resolution of our judges, but is also absurd in itself; as leaving room for any prevarication whatever, in the matter of oaths or tests; and for subscribing the Romish Confession, or even the Alcoran, or any thing; and is moreover explicitly condemned, even by the generality of those who plead for Arian subscription.

A SUPPLEMENT
TO
THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION
CONSIDERED : IN ANSWER TO A LATE PAMPHLET, ENTITLED
THE CASE OF SUBSCRIPTION TO THE XXXIX ARTICLES CONSIDERED.

A SUPPLEMENT
TO
THE CASE OF ARIAN SUBSCRIPTION
CONSIDERED.

WHEN I drew up the "Case of Arian Subscription," &c. I was apprehensive that so plain a charge, and so home pressed, might exasperate the persons concerned; though I took care to treat them with all the mildness and tenderness that the subject would bear: confining myself to the reasoning part, naming no particular men but such as I was obliged to quote, and candidly exempting the principal man of them, that the charge might be as general and inoffensive as possible; falling rather upon the thing itself, than upon this or that particular person. If the argument be provoking, I cannot help it: the same objection lies against the detecting or reproving any vice or immorality whatever. It is the proper business of a divine to state cases of conscience, and to remonstrate against any growing corruptions in practice, and especially in principles. If Arian subscription be really fraudulent and immoral, (which no considering man can doubt of,) it may concern those gentlemen rather to testify their sincere repentance, than to acquaint the world with their causeless resentments. I shall here say nothing to the abusive flirts of the nameless author, who has been pleased still to persist in the defence of Arian subscription; except it be to remind him, that those assuming strains very ill become either so weak a cause or such a guilty practice. I was once inclinable to take no notice of so mean a pamphlet; concluding that I had said enough, when I had said enough for men of sense and common ingenuity; and it is often not advisable to press things to the utmost. But since this is a cause of very great moment, wherein the very foundations of moral honesty, as well as of Christian sincerity, are deeply concerned; I think it incumbent upon me to proceed somewhat further in it: and if those gentlemen resolve to go on in maintaining an open fraud as long as it is possible to amuse or deceive, though only the weakest and most ignorant readers; I also must resolve (by God's assistance, and for God's glory) to go on in the defence of sincerity and probity, till the very meanest readers may sufficiently understand it. To come to the business.

The pamphlet lately published, is entitled, "The Case of Subscription to the XXXIX Articles considered; occasioned by Dr. Waterland's Case of Arian Subscription." The author is but just, as well as modest, in not calling it an answer to mine: for indeed he has left the most material points untouched, without so much as attempting any thing like an answer. If you will take his bare word for it, the Articles of our Church, so far as concerns the Trinity, are general, indefinite, undeterminate; not particular, special, or determinate. He takes this for granted, and reasons all the way upon that supposition; which is very unaccountable: unless it were because I had demonstrated the contrary, beyond all reasonable reply; and so there was no other way left but to stifle the evidence, to protest against fact, and to bear the reader down with a false presumption. Such a management as this is, in effect, little else but a more untoward way of giving up the cause; where a man does the thing, but loses all the grace and credit of it by his manner of doing it. But let us see how he goes on to give some colour, at least, to his pretences. I had pressed the Arian subscribers with the Athanasian Creed, the Liturgy, and the Articles, to prove that our Church was particular and determinate in the points disputed. Not a single word has this writer to shew, either that the Athanasian Creed or Liturgy is not determinate, as I represented: and as to the Articles, he seems to make no account of any but the first: of which he often intimates, that he has some way of evading it, but he does not care to tell us what, for fear he should be found faltering even there, and lie open to rebuke for it. The first Article alone, is, I am very certain, more than he can fairly deal with : but I must remind him further, that the 2nd and 5th Articles do also require his consideration ; and then there is the eighth, which, unfortunately for him, carries all the three Creeds in the bowels of it : creeds which, as the Article says, (and as this writer says, if he subscribes to it,) “ought thoroughly to be received and believed ; “for they may be proved by most certain warrants of holy “Scripture.”

Well then, we have the Creeds wrapped up in the Articles ; and the subscriber must be content to take in all or none : let us next see to the Liturgy. This gentleman thinks he has a fetch for that : he subscribes not to the truth of every particular, but to the use only, and that “it contains nothing contrary to “the word of God.” Now, says he, “I must freely own that I “see no contradiction, no necessary absurdity, in the use of what “a man may wish to have in some things corrected^a.” I would be as favourable to this writer as possible. I do allow of his distinction, and that it may be proper and pertinent in some cases ; but I can never allow that a man may use a solemn formal lie, in his prayers, and often repeat it, under pretence that we may admit the use of some things which might be corrected. This is arguing from gnats to camels, and widening the rule beyond all measure and proportion. This will best be understood in the sequel, when the reader comes to see what kind of things those are which this gentleman desires to use, without believing a syllable of them. I must observe further, that the subscriber is tied up to believe that the Liturgy “contains nothing contrary “to the word of God.” Does not this pinch a little closer than this writer might wish ? Has he nothing to object against any expressions in the Liturgy, but that they contain things seemingly contrary to natural reason ? Have they nothing contrary to Scripture, to what he calls Scripture ? I should be thankful to him for so obliging a concession. After all, I would advise this writer not to pretend to be wiser than Dr. Clarke. The Doctor had considered these matters much and long : and I have not yet found any disciple of his that has endeavoured to refine upon him, but what has exposed himself in doing it. The wary Doctor was sensible that Articles, Creeds, and Liturgy, must all come into account, and all be reconciled (if possible) to his own hypothesis. He made no distinction between admitting the truth of this, and the use only of that; well knowing, that truth and use are coincident in a case of this high moment; and that he could not submit to the use of those prayers but in such a sense as he thought true. He took the only way of settling that matter for his purpose, had there really been any: but as his failed, the flaw in the architecture is never to be made up by common hands.

^a Case of Subscription, &c. p. 46.

Having shewn that Creeds, Articles, and Liturgy must all come in, to determine in our present question; I would now proceed to cite passages from our public forms, and confront them with select sentences drawn from the writings of the new sect, that every common reader (for to such I now write) may have ocular demonstration of the truth of what I affirm, that the expressions of our public forms are special, precise, and determinate against the new scheme; not general, or indefinite, as this writer wishes, I can hardly say, believes. But I must first take notice of a remark which he has page the 8th, that we are obliged to subscribe only the English Articles, not the Latin. I know not what uses he intends by it; though he intimates there may be some; keeping upon the reserve, as usual, when he suspects an advantage may be taken. Dr. Clarke, to do him justice, openly declared what evasions or salvos he had to justify his subscribing. He considered, I suppose, that without this, it would be subscribing with mental reservations; which is perfect Jesuitism. But this writer, perhaps, thinks there is no harm in it, that it is an innocent practice; and that so long as he can but invent some secret evasion to himself, he need have no concern about satisfying the world. To return to the matter in hand. As to the Articles, English and Latin, I may just observe, for the sake of such readers as are less acquainted with these things, first, that the Articles were passed, recorded, and ratified in the year 1562, and in Latin only. Secondly, that those Latin Articles were revised and corrected by the Convocation of 1571. Thirdly, that an authentic English translation was then made of the Latin Articles by the same Convocation, and the Latin and English adjusted as nearly as possible. Fourthly, that the Articles thus perfected in both languages were published the same year, and by the royal authority. Fifthly, subscription was required the same year to the English Articles, called the Articles of 1562, by the famous act of the 13th of Elizabeth^b.

^b See the particulars proved at large in Dr. Bennet's Essay on the XXXIX Articles.

These things considered, I might justly say, with Bishop Burnet^c, that the Latin and English are both equally authentical. Thus much however I may certainly infer, that if in any places the English version be ambiguous, where the Latin original is clear and determinate; the Latin ought to fix the more doubtful sense of the other, (as also vice versa.) it being evident that the Convocation, Queen, and Parliament intended the same sense in both. For instance, in Article the first, the three Persons are declared to be of one substance; in the Latin, ejusdem essentiae, that is, of the same essence: from hence it is manifest, that one substance is equivalent to same substance, or essence. Again, in Article the second, the English version runs thus: "The Son, which is the Word of the Father, begotten from everlasting of the Father, the very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father, &c." Now in the English, the words, "the very and eternal God," may possibly be referred to the Father just before mentioned: but the Latin Article^d plainly shews that the words are to be referred to God the Son, and could not have been intended of God the Father, in that place. From hence we see how useful it may be to compare the English and Latin together, in any doubtful cases: for there cannot be a more demonstrative proof than this is, (where it can be had,) of the true sense and meaning of compilers and imposers. And let this writer pretend what he pleases, when once the true and full sense of the imposers is fixed and certain, that very sense, and that only, is bound upon the conscience of every subscriber. This I have abundantly proved in my former papers: to which I shall only now add this plain reason; that, since words are designed to convey some meaning, if we take the liberty of playing upon words after the meaning is fixed and certain, there can be no security against equivocation and wile, in any laws, oaths, contracts, covenants, or any engagements whatever: all the ends and uses of speech will hereby be perverted; and there can be no such thing as faith, trust, or mutual confidence among men.

I proceed now to set before the reader the tenets of our new guides, in one column, with the tenets of our Church in another, opposite column; that from thence we may form a judgment of their agreement or disagreement. I shall take my citations of æterno a Patre genitus, verus et æternus Deus, ac Patri consubstantialis, &c. Art. II.

^c Burnet, Preface to the Articles, p. 10.

^d Filius, qui est Verbum Patris, ab

the first column from Dr. Clarke and his professed disciples ; not from Mr. Whiston and his, who are known to be less reserved, and who abhor this kind of fraudulent subscription as much as I do. I shall not scruple citing some passages out of the first edition of " Scripture Doctrine," which are left out in the second ; because, though the Doctor does not own them, yet his disciples must, till they either give better, or yield up the cause of subscription.

The Scripture doctrine of the Trinity, according to Dr. Clarke and his followers.

Dr. Clarke's scheme makes the Unity of the Son and Spirit with the Father to be only figurative, not (necessarily^e) an unity of essence, or individual substance, but of authority and consent. Modest Plea, p. 7.

The Father alone is, absolutely speaking, the God of the universe. Clarke, Prop. 8.

The Scripture, when it mentions the one God, or the only

^e Note, that the two words, necessarily and individual, here stand for nothing but to soften the expression. Necessarily is of no moment, because the subscriber is to acknowledge that the doctrine of one substance is war-

The Scripture doctrine of the Trinity, according to the Church of England in her public forms.

In the Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons of one substance. Art. 1.

The Son—of one substance with the Father. Art. 2.

The Holy Ghost of one substance with the Father and the Son. Art. 5.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, (Art. 8.) that the Son is of one substance with the Father, (Nic. Creed,) and that he is God of the substance of the Father; and that we ought not to confound the Persons, nor divide the substance. Athan. Creed.

In the Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons. Art. 1.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripranted by Scripture, and therefore necessarily to be believed. And as to individual, it signifies nothing here; the Doctor, it seems, denying all unity of substance, and admitting only unity of authority and consent.

God, always means the supreme Person of the Father. Clarke, Prop. 9.

The Apostle says, God is the Father, which is the direct contradictory to your notion, whose definition of God is, that he is—the three Persons. Modest Plea, p. 150.

Demonstration that one God is one Person only—otherwise impossible for one Person to be God. Collect. of Queries, p. 108.

There are not three uncreated Persons. Clarke, Script. Doct. p. 429, edit. 1.

The Father (or first Person) alone is self-existent, underived, unoriginated, independent, made of none^f, begotten of none, proceeding from none. Mod. Plea, p. 5.

If any thing, it is most natural to infer that he (the Son) is not the very God, because he is here so expressly contradistinguished from him.

^f Note, that the Father alone is here said to be made of none; which is directly saying that the other two Persons are made. I had observed the same of Dr. Clarke's fifth Proposition, but had it intimated to me, that the Doctor had put a semicolon at independent; to shew that alone

(Art. 8.) that the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one, that they are not three Gods, but one God. Ath. Creed.

O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God. Lit.

Nothing contrary to the word of 'God contained in this form.

O Lord, Almighty, everlasting God; who art one God, one Lord, not one only Person, but three Persons in one substance, &c. Comm. Off.

Ever one God world without end, frequently applied to all the three Persons in our Church's Collects.

It may be proved by most certain warrants, &c. (Art. 8.) that the Son is uncreate, and the Holy Ghost uncreates: the Son not made, nor created: the Holy Ghost neither made, nor created. Athan. Creed.

One Lord Jesus Christ—begotten, not made. Nic. Creed.

The Son—the very and eternal God. Art. 2.

Very God of very God. Nicene Creed.

reached no further, the rest being to be understood of Father without the restriction of alone. But, it seems, the Modest Pleader was not aware of the significancy of the semicolon, but puts a comma only: wherefore I may justly charge him with making two of the Persons creatures.

The Word, when he appeared in the form of God, and as God, was no more than the minister and angel of God. Mod. Plea, p. 30.

It is without any colour from Scripture, that you affirm each of the three Persons to have the same right of dominion. Mod. Plea, p. 159.

When Dr. Clarke excepted supremacy and independency, he plainly, in reason and consequence, excepted absolute finite powers, so that the objector might well have spared asking in the sixth Query, whether infinite perfection can be communicated to a finite being. Collect. of Queries, p. 57.

The divine attributes of the Son are not individually the same with those of the Father—As to their differing as finite and infinite, there can be but one intelligent Being^h absolutely infinite in all respects. Collect. of Queries, p. 54, 55.

God, when he is styled Father, must always be understood to be (alra) a true and

The whole three Persons are coeternal together and coequal—equal to the Father as touching his Godhead. Ath. Creed.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, (Art. 8.) that such as the Father is, such is the Son, and such is the Holy Ghost—the Father is Lord, the Son Lord, and the Holy Ghost Lord; and yet not three Lords, but one Lord. Ath. Creed.

There is but one living and true God, everlasting—of infinite power, wisdom, and goodness—and in Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons of one substance, power, and eternity. Art. 1.

That which we believe of the glory of the Father, the same we believe of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, without any difference or inequality. Comm. Office.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, (Art. 8.) that the Son is ^ε Note, the word absolute is only to soften the expression. The author, in reason and consequence, plainly intimates that the powers of the Son and Holy Ghost are not infinite, and that they are finite beings.

^h Note, that intelligent Being is with this writer, and the whole party, equivalent to person: so that here two of the Persons are declared to be finite beings.

*proper Cause*ⁱ, really and efficiently giving life: which consideration clearly removes the argument usually drawn from the equality between a Father and Son upon earth. Clarke, Script. Doctr. p. 239, 273. ed. 2nd.

The Father alone perfect in himself. Script. Doctr. p. 273.

Necessary existence is as inconsistent with being begotten, as to have no cause of existence, and to have a cause. Mod. Plea, p. 17.

Self-existent, unoriginate, or underived, properly expressed by necessary existence. Mod. Plea, p. 216, 217.

The Son is not self-existent. Clarke, Prop. 12. Comp. Reply, 162, 230, 231.

—avowedly maintain, that the Son is not necessarily existing^k. Phileleuth. 2nd Letter to Mangey, p. 27.

An angel might strengthen him^l, who was now in that state of humiliation, made a little lower than the angels. Modest Plea, p. 93.

ⁱ Dr. Clarke's notion of a true and proper cause is of a person acting upon choice, or rather, acting; (for acting, with him, implies choice;) so that his meaning here is that the Father might choose whether the Son should exist or no. The latter part of the citation insinuates, that the Son is not as truly equal in nature to the Father, as one man is to another.

^k N. B. To deny the Son's neces-

God of the substance of the Father,—and man of the substance of his mother; perfect God and perfect man.—Equal to the Father as touching his Godhead. Ath. Creed.

The Son begotten, not made, of one substance with the Father. Nic. Creed.

The Son—not made, nor created, but begotten. Ath. Creed.

The Son—the very and eternal God. Art. 2.

Very God of very God. Nic. Creed.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, (Art. 8.) that the Son is Almighty, perfect God,—equal to the Father, as touching his Godhead.

sary existence is the same as to assert him to be a precarious being, depending as much on the will of the Father, for his existence, as any creature whatever, and therefore a creature.

^l Note, this is said of the Son of God, even in his divine nature, and whole Person, nor does this author ever allow the distinction of divine and human nature, but rejects it, as implying a division of person. See p. 97.

The grand principle (of Dr. Bennet) was, that the Word is the very God. When this was once established, it was rightly thence inferred, that the Word cannot be exalted—nay, this supposition will indeed justify those questions, Was the very God exalted thereby? Is it not blasphemy to suppose it?—Our Saviour was highly exalted as the reward of his sufferings—From the Doctor's principle, it is a just inference that the Word never was exalted. But on the other hand the Scriptures are clear, that he who was the instrument of his Father in the work of creation, yet had not a kingdom, and judgment, and dominion, then committed to him—but after his sufferings and death, &c. Mod. Plea, p. 97, 98.

This power and dominion to which Christ is advanced at the right hand of God, is not only the highest character and prerogative of his Sonship, spoken of in Scripture, but is the foundation of his personal Godhead and adoration. Collect. of Queries, p. 75.

The Son hath a relative omniscience communicated to him from the Father; I mean that he knoweth all things relating

The Son—the very and eternal God. Art. 2.

Very God of very God. Nic. Creed.

The Son, which is the Word of the Father, begotten from everlasting of the Father, the very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father. Art. 2.

God, of the substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds. Ath. Creed.

Only-begotten Son of God, begotten of his Father before all worlds, God of God, very God of very God. Nic. Creed.

One living and true God, of infinite power and wisdom: in the Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons, &c. Art. 1.

to the creation and government of the universe: but yet he himself confesseth, Matt. xxiv. 36, of that day and hour, &c. By which all the ancient Antenicene writers^m understand that our Lord, as the Λόγος, or Son of God, did not then know the day of judgment. Collect. of Queries, p. 48, 49. See also Unity of God not inconsist. p. 8.

There are not three eternal Persons. Clarke, Script. Doctr. p. 433. 1st ed.

The eternity of God the Father is revealed in the Old Testament—in the New Testament it is emphatically expressed, Rom. i. 20. But in neither is there any mention of the Son's. Coll. of Queries, p. 50.

The Word incarnate passible according to the express declaration of St. John and St. Paul. — Whether they who—make only the human nature passible, do not shew too little regard to the plain evidence of Scripture? Coll. of Queries, p. 143.

If Dr. Clarke's scheme be right, it seems to follow — that all worship ought to be directed to the Father through Christ: excepting only that such worship may be paid to Christ as Mediator, for which

That which we believe of the glory of the Father, the same we believe of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, without any difference, or inequality. Com. Off.

It may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture (Art. 8.) that the Son is eternal, and that the whole three Persons are coeternal together, and their majesty coeternal, and that they are one eternal. Ath. Creed.

One living and true God without body, parts, and passions (impassibilis) — in the Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons, &c. Art. 1.

The Son—the very and eternal God — very God and very man. Art. 2.

It may be proved by most certain warrants, &c. (Art. 8.) that the Unity in Trinity, and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped. Ath. Creed.

^m Note, that this writer everywhere professes his agreement with the Antenicene writers: and though he is entirely false in reporting their sentiments, yet it cannot be doubted but he here gives us his own.

we have express warrants from examples in Scripture.

Absolutely supreme honour due to the Person of the Father singly, as being alone the supreme original author of all being and power. Clarke, Prop. 43.

O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, &c. Lit.

O Lord, Almighty, everlasting God, who art one God, one Lord, not one only Person, but three Persons in one substance, &c. Com. Off.

From this view of the doctrine of our Church, compared with that of our new teachers, it appears that they are entirely opposite to each other, and are no more to be reconciled than light and darkness. And yet I have not took the advantage of pursuing the doctrine of those gentlemen through its direct, immediate, and inevitable consequences, in order to make the contradiction between that and our Church's forms still more glaring and palpable. Nobody can doubt of their believing the Son and Holy Ghost to be creatures, if either Arius, or Eunomius, or even Mr. Whiston, ever believed it. They undeniably believe them to be what every body means by creature, in common speech and language. This is demonstrable, many ways, from their writings, and from those very passages which I have here selected.

1. If the Father alone be made of none; then it follows that the other two Persons are made, that is, are creatures. The premises are theirs, the conclusion makes itself.

2. If the Father alone be necessarily existing, (as those gentlemen expressly teach,) then is the Son a precarious being, which is only another name for creature. The same will follow of the Holy Ghost.

3. If the Son, even as Son of God, wanted an angel to strengthen him, he must of course be a weak, frail being, that is, a creature.

4. If the Son, as the Λόγος, or Word, was properly exalted, and in such a sense as cannot without blasphemy be asserted of the very God, (as these men teach,) then it is evident that the Son is an imperfect and mutable being, that is, a creature.

5. If God the Son was once ignorant, in his highest nature, (as these men teach,) and ignorance can belong to nothing but creatures, he must of consequence be a creature.

6. If neither the Son nor Holy Ghost is the one true God, but excluded from the one true Godhead, (as these men assert,) they must of course be creatures only.

7. If neither the Son nor Holy Ghost be the one infinite Being, nor have infinite powers, (as these men pretend,) they can be only finite beings; and every finite being is, of course, a creature.

8. If Christ's exaltation, after his resurrection, be the sole foundation of his personal Godhead, (as these men say,) then he was not God before that exaltation; nor since, in any just and proper sense, but a creature only.

9. If Christ be passible, in his highest nature, (as those men teach,) and nothing is passible but a creature; it evidently follows that he is a creature.

Thus may it be demonstrated, nine several ways, (and more might be added,) from their own writings, that the abettors of the new scheme make God the Son, (and so the Holy Ghost of course,) as very a creature as ever did Arius, or Eunomius, or any Arian whatever.

They must not here pretend to run into general declamations against charging men with consequences which they do not own. I allow such a plea to be reasonable in some cases, but not in this. For instance, when a Calvinist is charged with the disbelief of God's holiness, justice, or goodness; or an Arminian with the disbelief of God's prescience, sovereignty, &c. both sides charging each other with consequences respectively, as if they were truly their tenets; such conduct on either side is justly condemned. But why justly condemned? Because it is certain that those consequences, which they draw for each other, are really not their tenets; since they, respectively, disavow and abhor any such tenets; and because they are, respectively, ready, upon every occasion, to declare their full and entire belief of those attributes, which they are said to deny; and would rather give up their main hypothesis, than be really guilty of any such impiety against God's perfections. But now as to the consequences which I charge upon our modern revivers of Arianism, let it be observed,

1. That they are many of them so direct, plain, and immediate from their tenets, that they are hardly so properly consequences, as the very tenets themselves, differently expressed.

2. Those gentlemen, when pressed with those consequences, give but too plain suspicion, that they both see and own them, and only verbally disclaim them. For they express no abhorrence or detestation of the supposition of the Son and Holy Ghost being finite, being precarious in their existence, being dependent on the will of another. Nor do they ever declare (except when they subscribe) that either of those two Persons is infinitely perfect, is strictly omniscient, is all-sufficient, or independent, as to existence, on the will of another. Instead of taking off the suspicious consequences, they do all they can to insinuate them into their readers; avoiding nothing but the name of creature; all the while inculcating the thing. And if they are further pressed, they must at length allow, that they do admit the Son and Holy Ghost to be creatures, in our meaning, in the common meaning of creature; only in some particular meaning of their own, they think they may deny it, of the Son, hardly of the Holy Ghost. For the Holy Ghost must be a creature with them, even upon their own definition of a creature; as being one of those beings brought into existence by the power of the Son of God, in subordination to the will and power of the Fatherⁿ. I say then, since the consequences, wherewith we charge those gentlemen, are plain, certain, and irrefragable; since they are not able to shew where they fail, or that they are no consequences; since they are not solicitous to ward them off by expressing any abhorrence of them, or by any acknowledgment of the divine perfections of the Son or Holy Ghost, in their full extent, as understood of the Father; since they appear only to avoid offensive names, in the mean while insinuating and inculcating, in other words, the very things with which we charge them: such being the case, it is just to charge them with those consequences, as being really their tenets: I say, just, in the way of disputation; as to legal censure, I concern not myself with it.

Having shewn how opposite the new scheme is to our Church's doctrine, it may now be proper to represent, in its true colours, the case of Arian subscription; that every such person, when he presumes to subscribe, may understand how mean and vile a part he is therein acting. Let his own real sentiments be here specified, together with his professions, in the words of our Church, and his evasions to satisfy his conscience, in this sacred engagement.

“ My faith is, that the three Persons are three Beings, and ⁿ See Collection of Queries, p. 60.

“ three substances; two of them differing from the first, as finite “ and infinite: yet I profess with Article the 1st, that they are “ of one substance, (ejusdem essentia.) because the words of one “ substance may either signify I know not what, (see the Case, “ p. 40,) or may be interpreted as Eusebius did the ὁμοούσιον, to “ signify that the Son and Holy Ghost have no likeness at all to the “ things which are made, (therefore not made,) but are like the Father “ in every respect, (see the Case, p. 17.) therefore not differing in- “ finitely, or as finite from infinite.

“ My faith is, that the Father only, in opposition to all other “ Persons whatever, is the very and eternal God; and conse“ quently, that the Son is not the very and eternal God: yet I “ make no scruple to profess, with Article the 2nd, that the Son is “ the very and eternal God: not the same God, but another God;
 “ two very and eternal Gods, the divinity of the latter being “ derived from the former.

“ I believe that the Holy Ghost is no where set forth in Scrip“ ture as God, and that he is not included in the one infinite “ substance, but finite of course: yet I readily profess with Article
 “ the 5th, that the Holy Ghost is of one substance, majesty, and “ glory, with the Father and the Son, very and eternal God: not “ the same God, but another; in all, three very and eternal Gods°, “ by ineffable communication of divine powers and dignity from “ one to the other two.

“ My faith is, that to say, God is three Persons, is the direct “ contradictory to the doctrine of St. Paul. Nevertheless, it “ may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, that “ the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost is “ all one, and that they are not three Gods, but one God. This I “ scruple not to profess, because I can understand there are not,
 “ when I read they are not.

“ My faith is, that the Creed called Athanasian, composed in “ a very dark and ignorant age, has affirmed more than is neces- “ sary, and more than is *true*ᵑ, according to the compiler's sense:
 “ yet I willingly subscribe to Article the 8th, asserting that it “ ought thoroughly to be received and believed, and may be proved “ by most certain warrants of holy Scripture; because I hope,

° See my Defence, vol. i. p. 469, p. 418. 1st edit. and my Case of Arian 476, 476, 477.

ᵑ See Clarke's Scripture Doctrine, volume.

“ some way or other, to wrest it to a meaning suitable to my own hypothesis.

“ I do not believe it at all necessary to salvation, to worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity; or to profess perfect God and perfect man^q united in one Person: yet I readily acknowledge, with Article the 8th, that it, may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, that whosoever does not keep this faith whole and undefiled, shall, without doubt, perish everlastingly.

“ My faith is, that there is but one Godhead supreme, viz. the Godhead of the Father; and that the Godhead of the Son is not the same Godhead, but inferior, and the Godhead of the Holy Ghost still more inferior: yet I willingly allow, with Article the 8th, that it may be proved by most certain warrants, &c. that the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost is all one, the divinity of the two latter being derived from the former.

“ My faith is, that there are not three eternal Persons, and that particularly as to the eternity of the Son, there is no mention at all of it in Scripture: yet it may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture, that the whole three Persons are co-eternal together; that is, so far as an existence before times, or ages, necessarily implies coeternal^r.

“ I do by no means allow that the three Persons are, or can be, one eternal: yet I readily profess it may be proved, &c. that they are not three eternals, but one eternal, because I can put there for they, tacitly supposing one, when I read the other.

“ My faith is, that God the Son is precarious in his existence, that he has no foundation of his personal Godhead, but his exaltation, that he is no more than an angel of God, that an angel might strengthen him, that he was once ignorant in his highest nature, and was properly exalted, (all which it would be blasphemy to ascribe to the very God, or to any thing but a creature, according to the common acceptance of creature;) yet I scruple not to assert that he is very God of very God, and that he is the very and eternal God, neither made, nor created; that is to say, neither made nor created by himself^s, but by the Father only.

^q See my Case of Arian Subscription, p. 297, &c. of this volume.

^s See Collection of Queries, p. 60.

^r See my Case of Arian Subscription,

“ My belief is, that to say, three Persons are one God, is contrary to Scripture : yet I scruple not to declare that the Book of Common Prayer, which frequently asserts and inculcates that very thing, contains nothing contrary to the word of God.

“ I do not believe that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are one God ; it is contradictory to St. Paul : yet I am content to say, O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God, &c. And frequently, in my yearly course of prayers, I call upon all the three, under the style and title of one God : for, though it be delivering a formal lie, before God and man, and in a point of the highest consequence ; yet I make no scruple of it, because I must freely own, that I see no contradiction, no necessary absurdity, in the use of what a man may wish to have in some things corrected.

“ To conclude, I do not believe that the glory of the Son, or of the Holy Ghost, is any way comparable to the glory of the Father : yet I scruple not to be the mouth of the congregation, in saying, That which we believe of the glory of the Father, the same we believe of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, without any difference or inequality. This solemn mockery, in the face of God and man, may lawfully be used ; because, again, I see no absurdity in the use of what a man may wish to have in some things corrected.”

This representation of the import of Arian subscription, I take to be fully supported by what hath been above cited ; though I have not every where used their very words ; thinking it sufficient to give their certain sense. I might easily have drawn it out into a much greater length, but that I am unwilling to be tedious, and incline to think that the very meanest readers may now fully apprehend what a grimace and banter our Arian reconcilers make of their solemn subscription. Yet they stand up for it, even in printed books ; as if the first elements of sincerity were almost lost ; or common sense were extinct among us. This it is that has obliged me to be so particular, and to lay these things plain and open before the eyes of the readers, that they may even see how the case stands, almost without the pain of any thought or reflection.

I might here take leave of this writer, having abundantly confuted his confident assertion about the generality, or lati- tude of expression, supposed in our Church's doctrine of the Trinity. It is, now at least, clear and manifest, that the expressions of our public forms (so far as concerns the points in dispute) are fixed, special, and determinate as possible: nor could the wit of man invent any more particular or stronger expressions against the new scheme, than are already in our Creeeds, Liturgy, and Articles.

† See Case of Subscription to the XXXIX Articles, p. 46.

This writer's main pretence being thus taken off, other occasional or incidental passages may deserve the less notice. But since I have begun, I shall now go through with him, and answer every little cavil, which may either seem to require it, or may give me an opportunity of further illustrating any part of our present argument.

Object. "If the meaning of the Articles be in such a sense one meaning, that they can be subscribed honestly only by such as agree in that one meaning; all, or all but one, of those great men, Bp. Bull, Dr. Wallis, South, Sherlock, Bennet, &c. must have been guilty, &c." p. 5.

Answer. If this writer can shew that any of those great men contradicted any point of doctrine plainly determined by our Church, as I have shewn of him and his party; then I condemn those men, be they ever so considerable, as well as the Arian subscribers: but if they differed in ever so many questions relating to the Trinity, (as there may be a great many,) and none of those questions decided either way by our Church; their differing in such undetermined points does not affect their subscription, any more than their differing about the inhabitants of the moon. Let this gentleman shew what positions of those great men plainly confront the positions of our Church; that so they may be condemned, as they ought to be, and their subscription with them. Or if this cannot be shewn, how impertinent is the objection!

Object. "When any Church requires subscription to its own sense of particular passages of Scripture, which do not contain the terms of salvation, and refuses communion with those who cannot conform to that, it is confessed that such a Church does that which it ought not to do," p. 5.

Answer. This is entirely foreign. Subscription is not a term of lay-communion, but of ministerial conformity, or acceptance of trusts and privileges: so that this gentleman here seems to have forgot what he was upon. Besides that, had the dispute really been about the terms of communion, his pretence is not pertinent; because the Doctrine of a coeternal Trinity is really a fundamental Article, and such as our Church declares to be necessary to salvation.

Object. "The Articles are so composed, that some of them "are on all hands allowed to be left at large, the composers "intending a latitude, &c." p. 8.

Answer. I admitted this, in my papers before, and sufficiently shewed how impertinent the plea is to the point in hand. Undoubtedly, it never was the intent of our Church to determine all questions relating to every subject whereof it treats. Yet she intended to determine, and has determined, many questions; particularly the main questions between Protestants and Papists, between Catholics and Arians. When Franciscus a Sancta Clara^a took upon him to reconcile our Articles to Popery; what did he else but play the Jesuit, and render himself ridiculous? The like has been since done by our Arian reconcilers, with as much wresting and straining, and with as little success. It might be diverting enough, (were not the thing too serious, and full of sad reflections,) to compare the Papist and the Arian together, and to observe which of them has been the greater master in this exercise of wit, and has found out the most ingenious and surprising comment upon an Article. Our Articles however will stand, in their own native light, in defiance to both; so long as gravity, sobriety, and manly thought shall be esteemed and valued above the little arts of equivocating, and playing upon words. The Articles are not general, so far as concerns our present debate; and we need not inquire further. There is a medium, I suppose, between determining all questions, and determining none: one might justly wonder how this writer could be insensible of it, and fall into so unaccountable a way of reasoning.

Object. "We must have some criteria by which we may judge "which these particular Articles are, &c."

Answer. The criteria, in the present case, are plain words, not capable of an Arian meaning. In other cases, any certain indication of the imposer's meaning is a criterion to fix the sense of a proposition. When there are neither plain words, nor any other certain indication of the imposer's meaning; the Article, so far, is left at large, and the point left undetermined.

^a The title is, Expositio paraphrastica Articulorum Confessionis Anglicæ. Published A. D. 1634.

Object. "One man subscribes to the truth of this general proposition, in the Unity of this Godhead—there be three Persons: meaning by this, that each divine Person is an individual intelligent Agent, but as subsisting in one undivided substance, they are altogether, in that respect, but one undivided intelligent Agent.—Another man, who does not understand this notion, nay, that sees a contradiction in it, is convinced that each of the three Persons is an intelligent Agent, whereof the Son and Holy Ghost is subordinate to the Father: what hinders that he cannot subscribe honestly and fairly to the general proposition?" p. 12.

Answer. Here are several mistakes. In the first place, that proposition of the first Article is not general, but special, in respect of the Arian controversy. This Godhead plainly denotes the one divine nature, "the one living and true God," before described in that Article. "In the Unity of this Godhead there be three Persons;" therefore the three Persons are the "one living and true God;" directly contrary to the Arian doctrine, and to the new scheme; which is nothing else but old Arianism revived. As to the explication which this gentleman carps at, it is not properly an explication of the Article, (which meddles not at all with the question of intelligent Agents.) but it is determining a point relating to the subject, more particularly than the Article hath done; and this in answer to an objection raised out of men's over curiosity in those matters. I know no reason this writer has to find fault with that solution, more than this, that it fully answers an objection which the party are apt most to triumph in. Intelligent Agent is understood either of Person or Being. Unus intelligens Agens, or unum intelligens Agens, may be equally rendered one intelligent Agent: the former signifying intelligent Person, the latter intelligent Being. In the former sense, every Person is an intelligent Agent; in the latter, all the three are one intelligent Agent: therefore intelligent Agent and Person are not reciprocal. He that teaches this doctrine subscribes honestly, because he believes all that the Article teaches; and besides, guards it from objections. But he that interprets the Article to mean no more than that there are three Persons, two of which are subordinate to one, is worthy of censure: first, for giving us, at least, a lame interpretation, short of the true and full meaning of the Article: or, secondly, for doubling upon the word subordinate, understanding by it inferior; excluding the two Persons from the one supreme Godhead, and thereby running directly counter to the true sense of the Article, which supposes all the three to be the "one living and true God," and expressly asserts that they are "of one substance, power, and eternity." This writer may now be able to distinguish between an honest and a fraudulent subscriber; if he does but know the difference between one who fully believes the whole of what he professes, and one who either believes it but in part, or really disbelieves the greatest part of it.

Object. "Should any one arise, and declare those men to be prevaricators—who differ from the doctrine he lays down as the meaning of the Article; I ask, whether this be not to put his own sense or comment to be the meaning of the Article?—"The fault which is condemned by the King's Declaration, and which King Charles threatened with displeasure, was, the "drawing the Article aside any way or either way," p. 13, 14.

Answer. I perceive, this author knows little either of the history, design, or meaning of King Charles's Declaration. The design was to put a stop to the quinquarticular controversy, then warmly agitated. The King, to prevent or quiet those disputes, thought it the most prudent way to forbid either party's being more particular than the Articles themselves had been. And we find that, in fact, both sides were censured when they launched out beyond the general meaning of the Articles in that controversy; the King looking upon any meaning beyond the general one, to be a man's own meaning or sense, not the meaning or sense of the Article. What is this to the point we are upon, where the meaning was never thought to be general only, either by that King, or any other, or by any considering man else? He that declares and demonstrates the sense to be special and determinate, against ancient or modern Arians, does not put his own sense upon the Articles, neither does he "draw the Articles aside any way;" but he secures to the Articles their own true and certain meaning, and rescues them from the fraudulent comments of those who really "draw them aside," and most notoriously pervert them. The royal Declaration orders every man to submit to the Article "in the plain and full meaning thereof," which if it be understood to reach to our present case, (though the King seems to have had an eye chiefly, or solely, to quite another thing,) is a clear condemnation of this gentleman, and of every Arian subscriber.

Object. "When Mr. Rogers published his Comment upon the "Articles, his book, says Dr. Fuller, gave very great offence, "because he confined the Articles to too narrow a meaning," p. 17.

Answer. Very right; and I take Mr. Rogers to have been blamable in so doing. But it is not said that Mr. Rogers confined all the Articles, or the Articles concerning the Trinity, to "too narrow a meaning;" nor can this writer shew that we do it, in condemning the Arians as fraudulent subscribers.

Object. "Such a latitude of subscription was allowed by the "Council of Nice," p. 16.

Answer. The fact cannot be proved; but the contrary may, if there be a proper occasion. However, I have no need to insist upon it, at present, because our Liturgy, Articles, and Athanasian Creed are more particular and determinate than the Council of Nice: so that, now at least, the sense of the ὁμοούσιον is fixed and determined, to every subscriber, beyond all cavil or exception.

Object. "Had the compilers or imposers intended to have "been more determinate upon any point, they ought to have "been more explicit and particular," p. 17, 18.

Answer. I defy the wit of man to invent any expressions more particular and explicit, than many of those are, which appear in our public forms; so far as concerns the true faith in the Trinity in opposition to the Arian doctrines. They have guarded against every thing but equivocation, mental reservation, and a violent perverting of their certain meaning. This is enough among men of sense and probity, which is always supposed. No laws, oaths, covenants, or contracts, can ever stand upon any other foot than this, that when they are plainly enough worded for every man to understand that will be honest, it is sufficient; though it were still possible for men of guile to invent some sinister meaning. I desire no other favour than to have our public forms, in this case, tried by the same rule.

I may observe, by the way, how unwarily this writer has furnished us with an argument (which his party perhaps may give him no thanks for) in behalf of our forefathers, for their enlarging of Creeds. He would have told them, even after the compiling of the Athanasian Creed, that "they ought still to "have been more explicit and particular," if they would secure the point they aimed at. I do not altogether differ from him, provided the thing could be done; and upon the supposition that we have been gradually departing, further and further, from the primitive plainness and sincerity. Nevertheless, I can hardly think of any additional security to what is already, except it were such as we have seen added to the abjuration oath; a caveat against any equivocation, evasion, or mental reservation whatsoever: which yet would not bind up those that can leap over any thing; (and honest men are the same, without it or with it;) only it might make them ashamed of ever appearing after, in defence of any equivocating practices.

Object. "Where a man does all that he is commanded to do, "and does it openly, and with all the circumstances enjoined, "he cannot be taxed with any defect in, or breach of, regard to "his superiors," p. 18.

Answer. For the purpose; if a man takes the abjuration oath, openly, with all the circumstances enjoined, only not believing a syllable of it; he is, no doubt, very faithful to, very observant of, his superiors. There is only this circumstance wanting, (which if it be not enjoined, is always supposed necessary, and to need no enjoining.) that the man be sincere: and this one defect turns all his pretended regard to his superiors into a direct affront, rudeness, and iniquity towards them.

Object. "He that thinks the general words, Swear not at all, "to be exclusive of all oaths, and he that thinks it lawful to "swear in some cases, can subscribe to, or give an unfeigned "assent to, St. Matthew's Gospel," p. 21.

Answer. But if either of them as certainly knows that his pretended sense of "Swear not at all," is not the true sense of Christ, as our Arian subscribers know that their sense of the Articles is not the true sense of our Church; such a Person in professing an unfeigned assent to St. Matthew's Gospel, would give himself the lie, and be guilty of a vile hypocrisy and prevarication. This author is forced to allow, in the next page, (p. 22,) that he and his party "take the propositions" (of our Church "in a sense which they know was not the sense of the "compilers and imposers," p. 22.

Object. "If they" (the compilers and imposers) "happen so "to have expressed themselves that their words are consistent “ with Scripture, their propositions may be assented to, though “ in a sense different from what they were originally intended “ by the compilers.”

Answer. They have not happened so to express themselves as that their words may be consistent with what this writer calls Scripture; any otherwise than as a man may happen, after using the plainest and strongest words that can be thought on to express his sense, to fall into ill hands that will industriously pervert it. This indeed may happen, in any laws, oaths, contracts, or engagements whatever, however cautiously worded: nor is there any security against it (as before said) but the common sense and probity of mankind; nor any rule to go by in such cases, if a liberty be once taken of running against the known, certain meaning of the imposers. Get loose from this, and the rest is wild confusion, endless playing upon words, and making a jest and banter of all speech and language.

Object. “ If their words are fairly capable of a Scripture meaning, then a man may subscribe to those words: if they “ are not, it is not lawful to subscribe,” p. 23.

Answer. By Scripture meaning, this writer understands his own Arian meaning. I readily rest the issue of the whole cause upon this very point. If the words of our Church’s forms be fairly capable of such a meaning, it is lawful to subscribe. But it is evident as the light, that they are many of them neither fairly, nor at all capable of such a meaning as the new scheme requires; and therefore, by this gentleman’s own confession, it is not lawful for him or his party to subscribe. Indeed, words are not fairly capable of a false sense, if we are any way certain of the true one; that is, of the sense intended by the speaker or writer. We cannot fairly misconstrue any words, if we are fully conscious of the true construction; though the words themselves might otherwise bear it. This I lay down as a rule of truth, which I think will hold in most, perhaps in all cases. But I have no occasion for it in the present dispute, because the words themselves are by no means capable of an Arian construction, consistent with grammar, or custom of speech. This I have abundantly proved in my former papers, (chapter the 5th.) and now again in these: and this writer himself appears to be sensible of it, with respect to the Liturgy and Athanasian Creed, at least, by his profound silence on that head; never attempting to confute that part, though the most material in our present controversy.

When therefore this gentleman says, that he pleads not for subscription with such reserves as, "so far as is agreeable to "Scripture," he only betrays his want of reach. Dr. Clarke never yet discarded that principle, so far as I know, though his disciples have; and perhaps he is the wiser in not doing it. However, I never directly charged the Doctor with holding that principle, as this writer falsely pretends, page the 24th; but I shewed that the Doctor must have that, or nothing, to retreat to at length, and that he had expressed himself in such a manner as to create just suspicion that he really gave into it; having never expressly condemned it, and having used such arguments for subscribing, as will either justify both kinds of reservation, or neither.

Object. "It is a shallow artifice indeed, in controverted points, "to assume that a man's interpretations of Scripture are Scripture, and that his adversary's are not so: but it is the artifice, "shallow as it is, that runs through the Doctor's book, and "makes him treat his adversaries with so much insolence," p. 25.

Answer. This writer appears here to have been much out of humour: the reason is, I had unravelled a piece of sophistry whereon a mighty stress was laid; which is very provoking. The sophistry was this:

"The Church of England permits the subscriber to receive and "believe whatever is agreeable to Scripture.

"We of the new scheme are ready to receive whatever is agreeable to Scripture, as by us interpreted.

"Therefore the Church of England permits us to subscribe in "our own sense of Scripture."

The fallacy, I observed, lay here, that the Church of England, by Scripture, must mean her own sense of Scripture, as to points by her determined: and therefore the argument really concluded for the Church's sense, which they made to conclude for the Arian sense, though not the Church's. "The Church surely," said I, "has as good a right to call her interpretations by the name of "Scripture, as the Arians have to call theirs so; and then her "requiring subscription to 'that only which is agreeable to Scripture,' is requiring subscription in her own sense of Scripture, "and none else. Let the Arian sense of Scripture be Scripture "to Arians; but then let them subscribe only to Arian expositions; which are nothing akin to those of our Church^x."

^x See my Case of Arian Subscription, p. 276, 277, of this volume.

Now, this angry gentleman, either not understanding (for what is so blind as passion?) what I was talking about, or industriously dissembling it, represents me as not allowing the Arians to call their own sense of Scripture Scripture: notwithstanding that I had allowed it, in full and express words. But I suffer them not to think that they subscribe according to the true intent and meaning of our Church, by subscribing to their own sense of Scripture, which is not the Church's, but repugnant to it. I suppose only that the compilers of our forms, and imposers, were not bereft of common sense, were not downright idiots; intending a subscription to bind men up, and at the same time leaving every man as much at liberty as if there were no subscription. They that can suppose the governors of Church and State so weak and silly as this comes to, must not take it amiss, if we remove the undeserved reproach from wise, great, and good men, and return it to the proper owners.

Object. "It is an unaccountable method of arguing, in Dr. Waterland, that because state oaths, which are contrived and penned without ambiguity, and on purpose to guard against some particular things or persons, ought not to be taken in any sense but that of the imposers—that therefore subscriptions in cases which are not parallel, are fraudulent. Such arguments are only arguments of calumny and slander; and only prove that he that urges such, wants nothing but "power to persecute," p. 19.

Answer. This gentleman is again pressed somewhere very hard, to make him forget his temper. I have told the world nothing but the plain truth, that the case of oaths and subscriptions is parallel. I now appeal to the passages above cited: and, let every reader judge whether they be not as directly opposite to the new scheme, as the abjuration oath itself is against a Popish successor; saving only the caveat in the close, against equivocations. Which proviso, however, is always to be understood (though not particularly expressed) in all subscriptions, contracts, covenants, oaths, &c. Our courts of justice have not judged it necessary to add the like caveat upon the taking of every oath, because the age is not, at present, thought wicked enough to want it: what it may be in a while, if such loose principles as I am here confuting, prevail, I do not say. But to proceed: it will not be a harder matter to elude and pervert any oath whatever, than it is to evade the many strong expressions of our Church in favour of a coequal and coeternal Trinity. This is what the gentleman is so angry at, that he has no way to avoid the force of the argument but by a confident avowal of a false fact; as if our public forms, as well as state oaths, were not penned, in this case, without ambiguity, and on purpose to guard against some particular things or persons. He that calls this plain argument calumny and slander, commits the very fault which he condemns, in calling good, evil: and as to the mean insinuation about persecuting, I suppose it needs no answer.

Object. "If the Archbishops and Bishops, or even the Legislature itself, cannot determine what shall be judged agreeable " or disagreeable to the Articles, the insolence of a private man " must be intolerable, who shall presume to dictate to others, " and to charge men with prevarication and fraudulent subscrip- " tion, &c." p. 32.

Answer. Softer words might have served as well, and have never hurt the argument, if it be any: the world will easily see the difference between reasoning and railing. I take not upon me to determine what the Bishops or Legislature may do: nor is it my province to make authentic interpretations valid in the courts of law. But, I humbly conceive, it lies within my compass to state a plain case of conscience, to detect loose casuistry, and to remonstrate against it. I know of no insolence there is in determining, that coequal signifies coequal, or coeternal coeternal; that one God does not signify three Gods, nor one substance three substances; or that the word they is something more than a different spelling for there. These and the like plain things common sense had determined long ago; I only repeat: deciding for the court of conscience, not the courts of justice, as this gentleman, by mistake, seems to apprehend.

Object. "Dr. Waterland indeed refers us to the writers of " the time when the Articles were compiled—To send a man " to the writers of that time to know the meaning of the " Articles, when no man wrote by authority, is to make those " writers the standard of the Church of England, and not its " own words or declarations," p. 34, 35.

Answer. It is pleasant to observe how this author strains to make me say something which he thinks he may tolerably answer, diverting the reader from the main point. I referred to the scope and intention of the writers, in order to know the meaning of their writings; which I hope is no unreasonable method: and I was there speaking of writings in general. But as to the particular case, now in hand, I no where send a man to the writers of that time; nor does so plain a matter require it. The words themselves are sufficient, and carry their own interpretation with them. I desire no further postulatum than this, that our language has not been quite reversed; that light does not now signify darkness, or a triangle a square. I can wave abundance of niceties which might occur on the subject of subscription, and might be properly brought in, upon more doubtful cases. In the mean while, I may observe, that this author's argument is ridiculous enough, that the writers of the time may not be useful to discover the scope and intention, (suppose of a law or an article,) because those writers were not law-makers, or men in authority. It is well for the historians, that they do not often meet with such hard measure.

† See my Case of Subscription, p. 267 of this volume.

Object. "Let Dr. Waterland vindicate the Arminians from " the charge of unrighteousness and deceit, and I will venture
 " then to acquit even his adversaries from the same charge, by " the same arguments.—All the world must own (our Articles)
 " to be formed upon Calvinistical principles; and to have been " deemed Calvinistical Articles by our own Archbishops, and by " whole Convocations in England and Ireland.—Has that " learned Bishop (Bull) proved unanswerably, that the sense of " the compilers of our Articles was not Calvinistical? It is one " thing to say, that the Articles are so expressed, as not neces" sarily to oblige men to profess Calvinism: but it is another to " say, that the sense of the compilers was not Calvinistical.
 " Did Archbishop Whitgift know the sense of the compilers of our " Articles? Did Archbishop Usher? Did our Universities in " Whitgift's times? Did the Irish Convocations which settled " their Articles? Did our Divinity Professors in Queen Elizabeth's " days?"

Answer. Before I come directly to the matter, I must observe that this writer here seriously delivers his persuasion, that our Articles are Calvinistical, and formed upon Calvinistical principles; at the same time, as I conceive, acknowledging himself an Arminian; which I suppose may be true of the rest of the party. If this be really the case, I must come upon them with a double charge of prevaricating in their subscription. The Calvinists, agreeably to their principles, have indeed often pretended that the Articles are Calvinistical: the Anti-Calvinists, on the other hand, have as constantly pleaded that the Articles are not Calvinistical, but rather Anti-Calvinistical; that they are not against them, but rather on their side. And thus the contending parties have gone on, endeavouring to justify their subscriptions, respectively, by their different persuasions. But here, it seems, is a new set of men, believing the Articles to be Calvinistical, and subscribing in Arminianism: and they are the first that ever boasted of so unaccountable a conduct. To excuse one fault they commit another, heaping sin upon sin, and proclaiming their own condemnation. Let them get off from the charge as they can: as to others, who understand the nature of our Articles too well to think them Calvinistical, they are very excusable in their avowal of Arminianism; so far as our divines do really avow it: for I know not that they have ever adopted the whole Arminian system. The historical hints given by this writer carry so little of argument in them, that if he has not a great deal more to urge, he will never be able to prove that our Articles are Calvinistical. When he speaks of all the world's owning it, he betrays nothing but his unacquaintedness with books and men. Has he never seen Dr. Bennet's Directions, or Bishop Bull's Apologia, or Heylin's Quinquarticular History, or Plaifere's Appello Evangelium, or Mountague's Appello Cæsarem, to name no more? Does all the world own that these great men were mistaken; or that they have not sufficiently shewn that the pretence of the Calvinists is entirely groundless?

For my own part, I think it has been abundantly proved, that our Articles, Liturgy, &c. are not Calvinistical; but I have no need to insist upon the negative: let this writer, or any man else, prove the affirmative, that they are Calvinistical, as is pretended. What he means by whole Convocations in England, determining the Articles to be Calvinistical, I do not at all understand. When he tells me what Convocations, and when, the thing may be considered: in the mean while, let it pass for a slip of his pen. His other historical hints may be thrown into order of time, and in such order I shall here briefly consider them. His vouchers are,

1. Archbishop Whitgift.
2. Our Divinity Professors in Queen Elizabeth's days.
3. Our Universities in Whitgift's time.

4. The Irish Convocations.

5. Archbishop Usher.

These are the particulars of the evidence, hinted rather than produced, to prove that our Articles are Calvinistical, or formed upon Calvin's principles.

As to Archbishop Whitgift, the Universities, and their professors, they all fall within the same compass of time; and their judgment in this matter was discovered chiefly in the year 1595: in the two famous cases of Mr. Barret and Dr. Baro. At that time Calvinism appears to have prevailed at Cambridge beyond what it had formerly done^z. The seeds had been sown by Cartwright some time before, while he was Margaret Professor there; and the learned Whitaker, who was made Regius Professor in 1580, very much promoted and furthered their growth. Yet Dr. Baro, of Anti-Calvinistical principles, was Professor (Margaret Professor) before Whitaker, about 1571; and had for many years gone on in his Lectures, without any censure or disturbance. Calvinism however by degrees prevailing, and especially under the influence and authority of Whitaker, the opposite opinion, of course, lost ground. But there were several considerable men, notwithstanding, who approved not the Calvinian tenets; and among the rest, Mr. Barret, then Fellow of Caius College. In the year 1595, he took the freedom, in a Sermon ad clerum, to censure the Calvinian tenets, and even Calvin himself, very smartly. This gave offence to the Vice-Chancellor (or deputy Vice-Chancellor) and Heads, who proceeded against him, and forced him at length to sign a feigned retractation, which they had drawn up for him. It appears from the form of retractation, that the Heads who drew it up, or enjoined it, thought our 17th Article to favour them. Within a while, this matter was laid before Archbishop Whitgift, who, in a letter to the Lord Burghley, expresses his great dislike of the proceedings against Barret, for that some of the points which the Heads had caused him to recant, were "such as the best learned Protestants, then living, varied in judgment upon; and that the most ancient and best divines in the land were in the chiefest points in opinion, against their resolutions^a," the resolutions of the Heads, in Barret's case. Hitherto then we have little reason to believe that our Articles favoured Calvinism, if Archbishop Whitgift was any judge of it. But besides this, the Archbishop had sent a letter to the Heads^b, wherein he tells them that in some points of Barret's Retraction, they had made him to affirm "that which was contrary to the doctrine holden and expressed by many sound and learned divines in the Church of England, and in other churches likewise, men of best account; and that which, for his own part, he thought to be false, and contrary to the Scriptures. For the Scriptures were plain, that God by his absolute will did not hate and reject any man. There might be impiety in believing the one; there could be none in believing the other. Neither was it contrary to any Articles of religion, established by authority in this Church of England, but rather agreeable thereto."

^z See Mr. Strype's Life of Whitgift, p. 435.

^a Ibid. p. 450.

He goes on to ask, upon this and that point maintained by Barret, against "what Article of religion established in this Church was it?" and some opinions of Barret which the Archbishop thought untrue, yet, he said, had no "article directly against them." Thus far the Archbishop. Next it is observable that Whitaker, in his Answer to the Archbishop^c, specified no Article of the Church to justify the proceedings against Barret. "For the points of doctrine," saith he, "we are fully persuaded that Mr. Barret hath taught untruth, if not against the Articles, yet against the religion of our Church, publicly received; and always held in her Majesty's reign, and maintained in all sermons, disputations, and lectures." This plea of Whitaker's is false in fact, though he might not be aware of it. For, to say nothing of Harsnet's Sermon at St. Paul's Cross, in 1584, and of Hooker's at the Temple, in the year 1585, both condemning absolute reprobation; Dr. Baro, at Cambridge, had held lectures, preached sermons, and determined in the schools against the Calvinian tenets, for the space of fourteen or fifteen years before: as may be inferred from a letter of the Heads to the Lord Burghley, their Chancellor, extant in Heylin^d, bearing date March 8, 1595. But, however this matter be, it is observable, that though the Heads in Barret's case had appealed to Article the 17th, and the Archbishop had particularly demanded of them to make good their proceedings by any Articles of the Church; yet Dr. Whitaker then thought it the wisest

^b See Strype, p. 440.

^c See Strype's Appendix, p. 199.

^d Heylin's

Quinquarticular Hist. p. 624.

and safest way to drop further appeals to the Articles, and to rest his cause rather upon the current doctrine of divines. Now, though it were ever so true that Calvinism had obtained many years in the pulpits, and professors' chairs, it no more follows from thence that Calvinism was the doctrine laid down in our Articles, than that the Cartesian philosophy was there, for the time it prevailed. All that can be justly inferred from it, is, that the generality of our divines thought the Calvinian tenets to be consistent with our Articles; and they might mistake even in that also. But to proceed in the story of Barret.

The Heads of the University, afterwards, make their humble suit to the Archbishop, to favour and countenance their proceedings against Barret. ^eThey allege that several positions of Barret were contrary to the Articles, Catechisms, and Common Prayer; but they neither specify those positions, nor at that time point to any Article, or particular passage of the Catechisms or Common Prayer; so that this general charge is of little or no moment. Some time after, Dr. Whitaker charged Barret upon the Articles of the Church, and particularly on the 11th, of Justification. But the Archbishop still declared that he did not yet perceive^f how such a certain position of Barret's, which he had been charged with as impugning the Articles, did really differ from any Article of our Church. And as Dr. Whitaker had particularly charged him upon the Article of Justification, the Archbishop was not satisfied with it; but desired that further inquiry might be made of those points "wherein they thought he "varied from the book of Articles." ^gAt last a favourable retractation was by the Archbishop appointed for Barret; and so this matter ended. From the whole proceedings nothing certain can be gathered as to any Calvinism being taught by our Articles. The Calvinists were willing to claim them, and made some pretences that way; but, at length, rather dropped than pursued it; not being able to make that point good, though often insisted on by the Archbishop.

It may be said, that the Archbishop however, upon this occasion, countenanced and authorized the Lambeth Articles, drawn up by Whitaker on the foot of Calvinism. This is very true, though it is not so certain that the Archbishop understood them in so strict a sense as Whitaker did: for that they were thought capable of a milder and softer construction, appears by Baro's orthodox explanation^h of them, which he sent to the Archbishop, vindicating his own sentiments to be consonant to the doctrine of the Church of England, in her avowed Articles, and urging that the Lambeth Articles were not to be understood so as to thwart the old Articles of the Churchⁱ. However, admitting that the Archbishop was so far a Calvinist, at last, as really to countenance the Lambeth Articles in their most rigid sense; yet this does not prove that he thought the same doctrine to be taught in the Articles of our Church. For had that been the case, what occasion was there for drawing up nine new Articles? Might not the old ones have served for quieting all differences? It is plain from hence, that the old Articles were not thought sufficient to end the dispute, or to condemn the Anti-Calvinists; but new ones were devised to supply that defect: which new ones might indeed be thought, by some, consistent with the old ones; and that is all. We see however, that the Lambeth Articles, in their strictest sense, appeared to others not very consistent with the doctrine of our Church. And it is well known that the Queen and Court disliked them^k, that they thought them destructive of piety and government; and the Archbishop, for countenancing them, narrowly escaped a præmunire.

^e See Strype, p. 450.

^f Ibid. p. 456.

^g Ibid. p. 455.

I have but just touched upon Baro's prosecution, not thinking it necessary to relate that whole affair, which may be seen at large in our historians. He was an Anti-Calvinist, and had been so for many years in his sermons and lectures; was never called to account for it before the year 1595, then defended himself handsomely, and had the favour and countenance of Lord Burghley, who reprimanded the warm proceedings of the Heads against him, and told them that "as good and as ancient were "of another judgment," and that "they might punish him, but "it would be for well-doing^l." This discountenance from Court stopped the prosecution; and Baro enjoyed his professorship some time longer, till his resignation of it.

Mr. Strype^m mentions four considerable men of that University, that favoured Baro and his cause: Mr. Overal, Dr. Clayton, ⁱ Strype's Life of Whitg. p. 466.

^h Strype's Append. p. 201. Vid. etiam Hist. Attic. Lamb.

^k See the Letter to the Duke of Buckingham in Heylin's Life of Laud,

p. 131. and Collier's Ecl. Hist. vol. ii. p. 734.

^l Strype's Life of Whitgift, p. 473.

^m Ibid. p. 473.

Mr. Harsnet, and Dr. Andrews. Overal succeeded Whitaker in the Regius Professorship soon after : so that I think the writer of the pamphlet had no occasion to boast of the Divinity Professors of that time. Baro, an Anti-Calvinist, was Margaret Professor before Whitaker was Regius : and the immediate successor to Whitaker was of the same sentiments, in the main, with Baro. Here I may take leave of Whitgift and the University in Queen Elizabeth's time. Nothing yet appears to make our Articles Calvinistical.

The next thing pretended is the Irish Convocations. The fact is this : Calvinism had got footing in Ireland before the year 1615. In that year they drew up a confession of their own, (not approving of the English Articles,) and they inserted the Lambeth Articles into their confession. Dr. Usher, then a professed Calvinist, drew up the confession. I see nothing in this matter to prove our Articles Calvinistical ; unless their being rejected by the Calvinists can amount to a proof of their being Calvinistical. In the year 1634, the Irish Convocation, with Usher, now Lord Primate, received the XXXIX Articles, without formally laying aside the Lambeth Articles. This shews that Archbishop Usher and the Convocation thought those two kinds of Articles consistent : which they might be, though there were not a syllable of Calvinism in ours, if they were not plainly Anti-Calvinistical. So that here is nothing like a proof of the pretended Calvinism in our Articles, either in the judgment of Usher, or of the Irish Convocations. Usher, some years after, renounced his Calvinian principles, as is well attested by three good hands : but I do not find that he therewith renounced our Articles.

Having thus answered every pretence of this writer for his imaginary Calvinism ; I may now, ex abundanti, throw in a few brief remarks which seem to me to plead strongly on the opposite side.

It has been often pleaded by learned men, and I think well proved, that our Articles (in the year 1552) were not drawn up by Calvin's scheme, but, next to Scripture and antiquity, upon the platform of the moderate Lutherans, the Augustan Confession, Melancthon's Doctrine, and the Necessary Doctrine and Erudition of a Christian Man, compiled about nine years before the passing of our Articles, and by many of the same hands ⁿ ⁿ See Heylin's Quinqu. part ii. chap. 13. sect. 3.

that concurred with these in 1552. Our Articles therefore, in their original composition, were not Calvinistical: how they could come to be so afterwards, being still the same Articles, I cannot devise. I do not find that the Calvinian rigours had obtained here in king Edward's time, except among the Gospel-lers, (as they were then called,) "who were a scandal to the doctrine they professed," as Bishop Burnet^o says of them; and who were often smartly reflected on by Hooper, and other the most judicious Reformers. There were some disputes upon those heads, among the confessors in prison, in Queen Mary's time^p. But none of them yet appear to have run the lengths of Calvinism in all the five points. The refugees from Geneva, in Queen Elizabeth's days, began to propagate Calvinism pretty early; but it does not appear that they then claimed any countenance for it from our Articles; which still continued the same in those points after the revisal in 1562, and again in 1571. In the year 1572, the Calvinists themselves complain of some of our Bishops as also of the Articles. The authors of the Second Admonition, as Plaifere^q observes, do accuse some Bishops as suspected of the heresy of Pelagius, and say, "for free-will, not only they are suspected, but others also: and indeed the book of Articles of Christian religion speaketh very dangerously of falling from grace, which is to be reformed, because it too much inclineth to their error." We have the like complaint of theirs, not long after, taken notice of by Dean Bridges^r, in the year 1587, whereby it appears that the Calvinists then made no difference between the justified falling away finally, and the elect: though the doctrine of our Church is plain that the regenerate, or justified, may so fall. But as to the elect, if that be strictly understood, it is a contradiction to say, they shall finally perish. The Calvinists, at that time, were very far from boasting of our Articles being clear on their side: they suspected the very contrary, being sensible how the doctrines of universal redemption, and of departing from grace, bore hard upon their scheme.

In the years 1584 and 1585, we find Mr. Harsnet, and the judicious Hooker, both of them condemning the Calvinistical ^o Burnet, Hist. of the Reform. vol. ii. p. 107.

^p Heylin, Quinqu. Hist. part viii. ch. 17.

^q Plaifere, Appello Evang. part iii. ch. 10.

^r Bridges, Defence of the Government established, &c. p. 1308.

doctrine of irrespective reprobation; and both of them received and countenanced by Archbishop Whitgift.

In the year 1603, was the famous Hampton-court Conference. The Calvinists then moved that the book of Articles might be "explained in places obscure, and enlarged where some things were defective;" that the Lambeth Articles might be taken in, and that in the sixteenth Article, after the words, "depart from grace," might be added, "but not totally, nor finally;" which would have defeated the whole intent and meaning of the Article^s. It seems, the Calvinists were not yet confident of our Articles being plainly, or at all on their side; as indeed they had no reason. Yet nothing was done to satisfy their scruples, or to relieve their uneasiness on that account.

In the year 1618, our divines, at the Synod of Dort, had commission to insist upon the doctrine of universal redemption, as the doctrine of the Church of England, (though they were out-voted in it,) which one doctrine, pursued in its just consequences, is sufficient to overthrow the whole Calvinian system of the five points.

In the year 1624, Mr. Mountague (then Prebendary of Windsor) openly disclaimed the Calvinistical tenets, as being the positions of private doctors only, not of the Church in her public forms. His "Appello Cæsarem," wrote in vindication thereof, was approved by King James; and Dr. White ordered to license it with this approbation; "that there was nothing contained in it but what was agreeable to the public faith, doctrine, and discipline established in the Church of England." This is a very considerable testimony that our Articles are not Calvinistical. And it is very observable, that when the Commons, the year after, drew up their charge against Mountague^t, they could find no Article of the Church to ground their complaint upon (so far as concerned the five points) but the seventeenth: which yet they so understood as to make it, in sense, directly repugnant to Article the sixteenth. For they charge him with maintaining and affirming, in opposition to Article the seventeenth, "that men justified may fall away and depart from the state which once they had," and that "they may rise again, and become new men possibly, but not certainly, nor necessarily:" which is the plain and manifest doctrine of Article the sixteenth, which does not say shall, or must rise again, but may only; intimating plainly enough, that it is neither certain nor necessary.

^s See Plaifere, Appello Evang. part iii. chap. 16.

^t See it in Collier's Eccl. Hist. vol. ii. p. 736, &c.

Such as desire to see more of Mountague's case may consult the historians of that time. I concern myself no further than to relate such particulars as give light to the present question, about the sense of our Articles in the five points. And I would have it observed, that I am not inquiring whether Calvinism was the more prevailing doctrine of those times, but whether it was generally thought to be contained in and professed by our Articles, or other public authorized forms of our Church. Many ran in with Calvinism, who did not pretend to find the whole of their doctrine in our public forms; nay, who suspected that our Articles were not only defective in those points, but even contradictory, in some measure, to them. This, I think, sufficiently appears from the complaints of the earlier Calvinists in Queen Elizabeth's time; from Whitaker's confession to Whitgift; from the conduct of the Heads, in Barret's case; and from the story of Baro; from Whitgift's procedure in the Lambeth Articles, and his frank confessions in favour of Barret; from Dr. Reynolds' proceedings at the Hampton Conference, and the resolutions taken thereupon; and lastly, from the Irish Convocation of 1615, and from the case of Mountague.

I shall proceed a little further into Charles the First's reign, and then conclude this article.

In the year 1626, the King put out a Proclamation to quiet the disputes on the five points; forbidding new opinions, and all innovation in the doctrines or discipline of the Church; commanding all to keep close to the doctrines and discipline established. This Proclamation seems to have been chiefly levelled against the Calvinists, who were then labouring to introduce innovations in doctrine and discipline.

In the year 1628, the King prefixed his famous Declaration to a new edition of the Articles: which Declaration was designed chiefly to bridle the Calvinists, but indeed to silence the Predestinarian controversy on both sides. The Calvinists made loud complaints against it: the King had confined them to the general meaning of the Articles, the plain and full meaning; had prohibited any new sense, and the drawing the Article aside. This they interpreted to be laying a restraint upon them from preaching the saving doctrines of God's free grace, in election and predestination. (See Collier, p. 747.) But why so, if Calvinism had been before incorporated into our Articles; or if it were not a new sense, and beside their plain and full meaning? This complaint, from that quarter, looks like a confession that our Articles were not, in themselves, Calvinistical; and that Calvinism could not be taught without introducing a new sense, and drawing the Articles aside; or however, not without being more particular than the Articles had been.

Soon after the King's Declaration, the Commons drew up a kind of Anti-declaration, "avowing" (as they say) "that sense of the " Articles—which by the public acts of the Church of England, " and the general and current exposition of the writers of our " Church, had been delivered to us; rejecting the sense of the " Jesuits and Arminians."

For an answer to which, I refer the reader to Archbishop Laud's short Notes, or Scholia, upon this Anti-declaration, recorded by Heylin in his Life. I may observe that the Commons laid no claim to the literal or grammatical meaning, in favour of Calvinism; and that they appealed only to extrinsic evidence: first, to the public acts of the Church, when there were really none such, properly so called; next to the current exposition of writers, wherein they appear not to have distinguished between the current doctrine of writers, and the current exposition of the Articles; as if it were necessary that the whole body of the current divinity should have been contained in our Articles. Besides that even the current doctrine was not entirely on the side of Calvinism. Absolute reprobation had been generally condemned all along by our most judicious divines: and the doctrines of universal redemption, and of departing from grace, as generally approved: which doctrines, if pursued in their consequences, (though many might not be aware of it,) tend to overthrow the Calvinian doctrines in the five points.

I may further hint, that even the Article of Predestination has been vainly enough urged in favour of the Calvinistical tenets. For, not to mention the saving clause in the conclusion, or its saying nothing at all of reprobation, and nothing in favour of absolute predestination to life; there seems to be a plain distinction (as Plaifere^u has well observed) in the Article itself, of two kinds of predestination; one of which is recommended to us, the other condemned. See that part of the Article in the margin^x. Predestination rightly and piously considered, that is, considered (not irrespectively, not absolutely, but) with respect to faith in Christ, faith working by love, and persevering; such a predestination is a sweet and comfortable doctrine. But the sentence of God's predestination, (it is not here said in Christ, as before,) that sentence, simply or absolutely considered, (as curious and carnal persons are apt to consider it,) is a most dangerous downfall, leading either to security or desperation; as having no respect to foreseen faith and a good life, nor depending upon it, but antecedent in order to it. The Article then seems to speak of two subjects; first, of predestination soberly understood with respect to faith in Christ, which is wholesome doctrine; secondly, of predestination simply considered, which is a dangerous doctrine. And the latter part seems to be intended against those Gospellers whereof Bishop Burnet^y speaks. Nor is it imaginable that any true and sound doctrine of the Gospel should, of itself, have any aptness to become a downfall even to carnal persons; but carnal persons are apt to corrupt a sound doctrine, and suit it to their own lusts and passions, thereby falsifying the truth. This doctrine, so depraved and mistaken, our Church con-

^u Plaifere's Analysis of the 17th Article, p. 387, alias 198.

^x As the godly consideration of predestination, and our election in Christ, is full of sweet, pleasant, and unspeakable comfort to godly persons, and such as feel in themselves the working of the Spirit of Christ, mortifying the works of the flesh, and their earthly members, and drawing up their mind to high and heavenly things; as well because it doth greatly establish and confirm their faith of eternal salvation, to be enjoyed through Christ, as because it doth fervently kindle their love towards God.

So, for curious and carnal persons, lacking the Spirit of Christ, to have continually before their eyes the sentence of God's predestination, is a most dangerous downfall, whereby the devil doth thrust them either into desperation, or into wretchlessness of most unclean living, (impurissima vitæ securitatem.) no less perilous than desperation.

^y The doctrine of predestination having been generally taught by the Reformers, many of this sect (the Gospellers) began to make strange inferences from it; reckoning, that since every thing was decreed, and the decrees of God could not be frustrated, therefore men were to leave themselves to be carried by these decrees. This drew some into great impiety of life, and others into desperation. The Germans soon saw the ill effects of this doctrine. Luther changed his mind about it, and Melancthon openly writ against it. And since that time, the whole stream of the Lutheran churches has run the other way. But both Calvin and Bucer were still for maintaining the doctrine of these decrees; only they warned the people not to think much of them, since they were secrets which men could not penetrate into. But they did not so clearly shew how these consequences did not flow from such opinions. Hooper and many other good writers did often dehort the people from entering into these curiosities; and a caveat to the same purpose was put afterwards into the Article of the Church about Predestination. Burnet, Hist. of the Ref. vol. ii. p. 107.

demns: that is, she condemns absolute, irrespective predestination, not the other. This appears to be the most probable construction of the seventeenth Article; for vindication whereof I shall refer to the margin^z, and to Plaifere before cited; who accordingly, in the close of his Analysis, appeals to this very Article of our Church, in favour of conditionate predestination. Nevertheless, it is sufficient to my purpose, if neither absolute nor conditionate be affirmed or denied in the Article; as hath been the opinion of many, and as I have been before (to prevent needless disputes) willing to allow. Let it be supposed that Calvinism is not directly contrary to the Articles; which is civil enough in all reason.

Now, to return to our writer. To justify Arminian subscription, I plead first, that the words themselves, of our public forms, do not determine on the side of Calvinism: nor secondly, any known intention of compilers or imposers: nor thirdly, any authentic interpretation of our superiors. On the other hand, the presumption rather lies against Calvinism, from express words in some Articles, (as particularly the 16th and 31st, besides several other things in the Catechism and Liturgy,) from the probable construction of other Articles, from the original

^z 1. De æterna prædestinatione recte erudiri ecclesiam summopere necessarium est: nam ut nulla doctrina uberiorum consolationem piis conscientis afferre solet, quam doctrina prædestinationis recte explicita, ita nihil periculosius est quam recta prædestinationis ratione aberrare.

2. Nam qui vera deflectit, in præcipitium fertur, unde se recipere non potest.

3. Sunt quidam, qui cum audiunt nostram salutem in Dei electione et proposito sitam esse, et modum verum haud observant, somnia stoica, et fabulas Parcarum fingunt.

4. Modus autem prædestinationis verissimus est, quem Paulus nobis comonstrat, cum ad Ephe. scribit, Elegit nos in Christo. In hoc modo, conditio fidei includitur, nam cum fide inserimur Christo, ejus membra efficitur, et ideo electi quia Christi membra sumus. Hemmingius apud Plaif.

Judicamus haud dubie electos esse eos, qui misericordiam propter Christum promissam fide apprehendunt, nec abjiciunt eam fiduciam ad extremum.

Melancth. loc. Theol. de Prædest.

Here you see how you shall avoid the scrupulous and most dangerous question of the predestination of God: for, if thou wilt inquire into his councils, thy wit will deceive thee—But if thou begin with Christ, &c. this simple question will not hurt thee—Christ is the Book of Life, and all that believe in him are of the same Book, and so are chosen to everlasting life; for only those are ordained that believe. Latimer, Sermon on Septuages. p. 214.

Bishop Bancroft, at the Hampton Conference, observes, that many grew libertines by relying too much on predestination; that this proposition, If I shall be saved, I shall be saved, is a desperate doctrine, a contradiction to orthodox belief; and that men ought not to rest their happiness on any absolute, irrespective decree; citing the latter part of the 17th Article relating to God's general promises. All which shews that he thought that Article rather to condemn than favour absolute predestination.

composition and design of the Articles, and from some considerable testimonies of our most judicious divines; besides the confessions of the more early Calvinists themselves. This writer has promised me to defend Arian subscription by the same arguments, p. 38. If it might not look too like insulting, I would now call upon him to make his words good.

The reader, I hope, will excuse the length of this part, which could not easily have been crowded into a shorter compass. I have omitted a great deal purely for the sake of brevity; and because I would not enter further into a distinct controversy, than the objection necessarily required. I may now pass on.

Object. "Would an Arminian have expressed himself in the language of the Articles, about predestination and original sin?"

Answer. Would a Calvinist have expressed himself in the language of the Articles, about the five points? Compare the Lambeth Articles, or the decrees of the Synod of Dort, or the Assembly's Confession; and see whether they, or any of them, speak the moderate language of our Articles. As to original sin, I know not whether any of our considerable Divines go the lengths of the Arminians in that Article. As to predestination, Dr. Bennet^a and Mr. Plaifere^b have both appealed to Arminius himself, as teaching the very same doctrine with our 17th Article: which may well deserve this author's special notice. But it is enough for me, if the Article has but been expressed in the middle or moderate way, in such general terms as come not up either to Calvinism or Arminianism: which is a supposition I have been willing to admit, for the waving of all needless controversy; though I am rather of opinion that the Article leans to the Anti-Calvinian persuasion.

I have heard it objected to the supposition of the Article's being general, and indifferent to either side, that it would make the Article useless, as deciding and determining nothing. But I beg leave to observe that the Article may be exceeding useful, notwithstanding such a supposition.

1. To prevent the suspicion of our Church's running in with the Gospelers on one hand, or the Pelagians on the other; and so the Article is a fence against slander and calumny.

2. Supposing the Article to be general and indefinite, in respect of the controversy between Calvinists and Arminians; it is yet special and determinate against the opinion of Samuel Huber, who taught an universal election, (which in reality is no election.) and that all men by the death of Christ were brought into the state of grace and salvation. The Article confines the election to those that believe in Christ, and live up to that belief, persevering to the end.

^a Bennet's Directions for studying, &c. p. 95, &c.

^b Plaifere, Appello Evang. p. 38. alias p. 27.

The Article is also special and determinate against the opinion fathered upon Origen, that all men, even wicked men, and devils, shall at last be received to mercy. The Article is further special and determinate against the Socinians, who deny God's prescience of future contingents, and admit no special predestination from all eternity. There may be other false opinions particularly condemned by this Article: but these now specified are enough to shew the use of the Article; though we should suppose the main points, between Calvinists and Arminians, to be left in medio, undetermined.

Object. "I know of no obligation upon any one to subscribe " to this, that the ideas which the compilers of the 11th Article " had of justification and faith, &c. were consonant to the true " ideas which were expressed by these words in Scripture," p. 42.

Answer. The subscriber must assent to the propositions laid down by the compilers and imposers; which propositions are made up of ideas: and therefore, in subscribing to their propositions, we subscribe so far to their ideas. I do not say that we subscribe to any of their private sentiments or ideas, such as they have not expressed, or intended not to express, in the public forms. But their declared public sentiments contained in our forms, those, so far as we are certain of them, we subscribe to.

As to the meaning of the 11th Article, our Church refers us not to Scripture, (for such as disbelieve the Article might pretend Scripture,) but to the Homily delivering the Church's sense of Scripture, in regard to that Article.

Object. "There are a great many passages of Scripture interpreted in the Homilies; but yet our Church no where supposes, " that whoever differs from its explications offers violence to " Scripture itself," p. 44.

Answer. Neither do I suppose it, however this writer may love to mistake or misrepresent plain things. But wherever our Church has tied us up to the profession of any doctrine, the subscriber, as such, must interpret Scripture conformably to that doctrine, and not in opposition thereto. He must not, for instance, interpret Scripture in favour of purgatory, infallibility, worship of saints, or the like; at the same time condemning those Popish tenets by his subscription: neither must he interpret Scripture in favour of the Son's or Holy Ghost's inferiority, inequality, &c. while he subscribes to their coequality and coeternity. He is tied up to the Church's sense of Scripture in all points determined by the Church, so far as to believe that her explications are, in the general, just and true; that whatever she proposes as Scripture doctrine is Scripture doctrine; and that no sense of Scripture which runs counter to her decisions is the true sense of Scripture, but a violence offered to Scripture. This is all I ever meant, or now mean, by our being bound up to the Church's explications.

Object. "No law requires any man to explain the Articles by the Liturgy, or to subscribe the Articles in the sense of the Liturgic expressions," p. 45.

Answer. The law of common sense obliges us to make the Articles and Liturgy consistent, at least, if we admit both; and to believe that both, in reality, mean the same thing, being established by the same authority.

Object. "The Articles may be general—the Liturgy more special and determinate," p. 45.

Answer. This might have been the case; but in fact it is not; for the Athanasian Creed, contained in Article the 8th, to say nothing of other Articles, is as special and determinate as the Liturgy itself. The same evasions will not, it may be, indifferently serve for every expression to be met with in both: but a man that takes into that loose way, may, when his hand is in, find some evasion or other for any thing whatever. It seems to be purely accidental, that the Doctor appeared to be more confounded and nonplused in the Liturgy, than in the Creeeds and Articles: invention will sometimes flag, and even the keenest wit cannot bear to be always kept upon the stretch.

Object. "What advantage, real advantage, would it be to the Church of England to eject out of its communion such men as Dr. W. plainly points at?" p. 46.

Answer. It is unfortunate for the men who are to new model our divinity, and to reform our faith, that they should betray, at every turn, a strange confusion of thought even in clear and plain things. This writer cannot distinguish between ejecting and not admitting; nor between Church-communion and Church-trusts. I said not a word about ejecting any man out of communion: I pleaded only against admitting any into Church-trusts, that must come in by iniquity, or not at all; and I am not sensible that I was either deceived in my reasoning, or out in my politics. However high an opinion this gentleman (or I) may have of the valuable abilities of the Arian subscribers; whatever advantage or credit we might propose, by having so considerable men amongst us; yet our misfortune is, that we cannot have them but by sinful means, and at the expense of sincerity; and we dare not promise ourselves any real or lasting benefit from so notorious a breach of God's commandments. On the other hand, since I am here publicly called upon to declare what advantage it may be to us, to have a stop put to this unrighteous practice of subscribing, I shall briefly hint it in a few particulars:

1. It will be much for the honour of God, and of our most holy religion, to have no more such offences seen, or once named amongst us.

2. It will be taking away one great reproach from our country, heretofore famed for its gravity and good sense; and for breeding up divines and casuists, as judicious, solid, and accurate as any upon the face of the earth.

3. It may be much for the advantage of the common people, not to be under such guides as are themselves remarkably deficient in the first principles of morality and Christian simplicity; and who may be presumed the less qualified to direct the consciences of others, while so manifestly faulty in the conduct of their own.

4. It may be a further advantage, for Christian people, to be under the care and guidance of none but orthodox teachers; such as will instruct them in the fundamentals of Christianity, and lead them in the way everlasting.

These are some of the advantages we may reasonably propose, along with God's blessing; which must be had in God's own way, and in the doing of what is just, honest, and upright. If there be any greater advantages on the other side, let this gentleman name them, and they shall be considered.

Object. "They disclaim Arianism; yet notwithstanding that, "they are injuriously and unchristianly called Arians," p. 46.

Answer. God forbid that we should ever demean ourselves injuriously or unchristianly towards any man. Here is a mistake somewhere ; and it is no hard matter to perceive where it lies. This gentleman should have said, that they disclaim the name of Arianism : they do indeed disclaim the name, but not the thing. We think ourselves as proper and as competent judges of what Arianism is, as others may be : and we cannot help judging, as long as we can read. When we have found the thing, being plain and sincere men, we immediately give the name. For the purpose ; if we meet with any man teaching the doctrines of purgatory, transubstantiation, and other distinguishing badges of Popery ; we never stay for his leave ; but we have, upon such evidence, a very clear and undoubted right to call such a man a Papist, till he has purged himself of those positions. By the very same rule, we pretend to give the name of Arians to as many as we find the Arian tenets upon : and their denial of it signifies nothing, being only protesting against fact ; which, in all parallel cases, is highly ridiculous. If they are Arians, and do not know it, they are indeed the more pitiable : but as their ignorance is no rule to those that know better ; so we hope there is nothing injuriously or unchristian in calling either men or things by their right names.

Object. “ They are charged with fraud and prevarication, because they subscribe : which is the severest reflection on their “ characters possible,” p. 46.

Answer. All the severity lies in the truth and evidence of the charge. If the charge cannot be fully proved, the man that makes it is in reality the sufferer, by exposing himself. But I have took care to proceed upon none but the clearest and most evident grounds : and now I may lay claim to those gentlemen’s thanks, for kindly shewing them both their sin and their danger. Principles are valuable and precious, and must not be parted with, in compliment to any man’s character. Besides, it is to be hoped that men of their education and abilities do not want to be told, that there are some things which they ought to be infinitely more tender of than of a shortlived character, (built upon self-flattery and delusive shows,) and those are, the honour of God, the simplicity of the Gospel, and the salvation of men. One way still there is left, and indeed but one, whereby to retrieve their characters ; which is to repent, and amend. If they will accept of this plain and frank admonition, it may not perhaps be altogether unserviceable to them : if not, let it stand as a testimony against them, for the benefit of others, lest they also fall into the same condemnation.

Object. "Men who have never wrote a word in the Trinitarian controversy, who have had no occasion, no design to write on that subject, yet are represented to the world under the same invidious name. Is this the conduct of a Christian and a Divine?—What must every man conclude when he sees the running title—The Case of Arian Subscription, &c. and Pleas for such Subscription examined; and yet the very first of these pleas is partly taken out of the book of one who has never written any thing about Arian subscription! Is this becoming a Protestant Divine?" p. 47.

Answer. The reader, I hope, will excuse it, if for want of arguments to reply to, I am forced sometimes to condescend to take notice of mere declamation. This gentleman has before shewn his over officiousness in defending Dr. Clarke against a supposed injury done him; though I dare be confident, the Dr. himself knows that I have not injured him at all. Now he is offering a helping hand to a person of an higher character and station in the Church; who, I doubt not, is too wise a man to think that I have any where failed in point of strict justice, or even of decency and respect towards him. My business was to examine every the most plausible plea that had been brought for that subscription which I condemn, under the name of Arian subscription. I never represented that person under the invidious name of an Arian; nor was it ever in my thoughts to do it. But it was my professed design, not to dissemble any thing that might look favourable to the cause of Arian subscription; not to conceal either the strongest pleas or the greatest names that might appear to countenance it. And to me it seems that this writer, had it been his manner ever to weigh things with candour or judgment, might have thanked me for so fair and so unexceptionable a conduct; in allowing his cause all the advantage or credit that could possibly be given it. But enough: this gentleman should be advised, the next time he is disposed to stand up an advocate for greater men than himself, either to do it more pertinently, or to stay for their commission: otherwise he may happen, by his officious zeal and indiscreet conduct, to do them a real injury, while he is labouring to take off such as are purely imaginary.

Object. "The principles which the ingenious Dr. Bennet “ contends for, are the same with those I have laid down,”

p. 49.

Answer. I am very glad to hear so much from this gentleman. To complete the character of a careless writer, he shall now be condemned out of his own mouth. Dr. Bennet’s principle, relating to subscription, is to allow no liberty but where the words themselves do allow it, where they are fairly capable of such a sense as we take them in, “ without doing violence to the words, “ or contradicting what our Church has elsewhere taught.” I desire no more than this, in our present question. If this be our writer’s principle, he has effectually condemned himself and every Arian subscriber.

Let the reader only turn back, and review the passages above cited from our public forms ; and then try whether it be possible to reconcile them fairly, and without violence, or indeed at all, to the new scheme. Now, since this gentleman has here bound himself to stand or fall by the same rule of subscription which Dr. Bennet contends for ; I leave him to apply it at leisure : and as he has thereby entangled himself sufficiently and beyond all recovery ; it would be unmerciful, and even cruel, to press him closer.

It may not be here improper to cite Dr. Bennet’s application of his own rule, to this particular case ; addressing himself to Dr. Clarke, in these words :

“ As I am firmly persuaded, you are a person of so great integrity, that you will not venture (notwithstanding your attempt for explaining) to repeat your subscription, &c. till you have altered your sentiments touching these points, (which I pray God may be speedily effected,) so I hope, none of those persons who espouse your present sentiments will be influenced by what you have written, to think your sense of those passages tolerable. I really tremble at the apprehension of that guilt, which such a collusion must pollute them with : and I cannot but earnestly entreat you to do what lies in your power, in the most public manner, for preventing such an interpretation of our Liturgy, as must (I fear) necessarily lay waste the consciences of the compliers, and pave the way for a man’s subscribing and using such forms of devotion as thwart the sense of his own mind.” Bennet on the Trin. p. 265.

Thus far the ingenious Dr. Bennet, who, I suppose, well understands both his own principle and the application of it. Whether his rule and mine differ, is a question which concerns not our present debate: either of them effectually condemns Arian subscription. My rule appears to be rather the stricter of the two: it is this, that wherever we are certain of the imposer's meaning, that meaning we are bound up to, by our subscription. Perhaps, Dr. Bennet may think that we are never certain but where the words themselves necessarily require such a meaning. I think, there are some possible cases where we may be certain, though the words themselves might otherwise admit of two senses; and that the imposers in such cases have sufficiently done their parts, though there may be some ambiguity remaining in the expressions, so long as there is but any certain way left for a reasonable man to come at their real and true meaning. But I shall not dwell longer on this nicety, since our present debate about Arian subscription is in a great measure unconcerned in it; and we need not go further than the words themselves to confute and condemn it.

I shall conclude with the honest sentiments of Mr. Whiston, which are really and truly the same with my own: and his testimony, in this case, is the more considerable, because it comes from one, who lay under the same temptation with others, to prevaricate in this sacred engagement. His words in the first Appendix to his fifth volume are these:

“ The great latitude Dr. Clarke allows, that every person may reasonably agree to modern forms, under a Protestant settlement, which owns the Scripture as the rule of faith, whenever he can in any sense at all reconcile them with Scripture, if it be with a declaration how he reconciles them; even though it be in a sense which is owned to be plainly forced, and unnatural; seems to me not justifiable, but contradictory to the direct meaning and design of those forms; and of the most pernicious consequence in all parallel cases. Nor do I see, at this rate, that the same liberty can be wholly denied to a Protestant, as to the Popish doctrine and practices; since there also, it is supposed that those forms are intended to oblige men to nothing but what is agreeable to Christianity.

“ If to this observation the Doctor should reply, that complying with the Church of Rome, and joining with a Protestant Church, in the manner and with the declarations he does, are quite different things on these two accounts, (1.) “ Because the Church of Rome will not permit any of her

“ members to make such declaration concerning her doctrines, “ but positively insists upon every one’s implicit submission to “ them, in the sense that Church and her Councils receive them, “ without examining them by the rule of Scripture ; and (2.) “ Because many of the doctrines of the Church of Rome, such “ as the invocation of the Virgin Mary, and of saints, &c. with “ the worship of images, can in no sense be reconciled, but are “ directly contrary to it, as setting up other mediators instead “ of Christ, and teaching men to apply to such beings as have “ no power or dominion over them ; whereas the invocation of “ the Holy Ghost, and so of the whole Trinity, as used in the “ Church of England, (some of the most suspicious of all the “ things allowed by him,) may be understood, and declared, to “ be only a desiring him to bestow those gifts upon us, in subor- “ dination to the Father and the Son, which we are sure from “ Scripture it is his proper office, and in his power, to distribute : “ if, I say, the Doctor shall make this reply, I must answer ;

“ 1. That I doubt, our Church does not properly allow her “ members to make any such declarations, as is here intimated, “ but expects their submission in that sense she and her synods “ have imposed her doctrines and devotions : and though it be “ not under the notion of implicit faith, and without examination, “ yet as acquiescing in her judgment, interpreting the Scripture “ according to the Articles and Creeds, and submitting to her “ authority in controversies of faith.

“ 2. That there are even in the Church of Rome few or no “ such doctrines or practices, but persons well disposed to it can, “ in some sense or other, reconcile them with Scripture ; or at “ least think they can, which is here almost the same case, with- “ out dreaming of setting up other mediators instead of Christ, or “ doubting of some degree of power and authority in the beings “ so invoked. So that if we, without all sacred or primitive “ command or example, may follow our Church in the invoca- “ tion of the Holy Spirit, and so of the whole Trinity, from “ some uncertain reasonings of our own, I do not see how we “ can condemn the Papists for following their own Church in “ the invocation of angels, nay, hardly in that of saints also, and “ of the Virgin Mary herself.

“ Nor can any explications of forms directly against the known “ sense of words, and of the imposers, be other than protestatio “ contra factum ; and so wholly unjustifiable.

“ Nor indeed, if this were somewhat tolerable in some particular cases of small moment, can it be at all so in the most sacred Articles and Offices of religion.

“ If this way be allowable, then is the offence of the cross ceased; then the martyrs have commonly lost their lives without sufficient cause; and those Jews who would die rather than eat swine’s flesh, and those Christians that would suffer the like punishment, rather than cast a little incense on the heathen altars, were very unfortunate, as having suffered without necessity.

“ What will become of all oaths, promises, and securities among men, if the plain real truth and meaning of words be no longer the measure of what we are to profess, assert, or practise; but every one may, if he do but openly declare it, put his own strained interpretation, as he pleases, upon them? Especially if this be to be allowed in the most sacred matters of all, the signing Articles of faith, the making solemn confessions of the same, and the offering up public prayers, praises, and doxologies to the great God, in the solemn assemblies of his worship. This, I own, I dare not do, at the peril of my salvation: and if I can no way be permitted to enjoy the benefit of Christ’s holy ordinances in public, without what I own would be in myself gross insincerity and prevarication, I shall, I believe, think it my duty to aim to enjoy that benefit some other way, whatever odium or sufferings I may bring upon myself thereby.”

I have transcribed this whole passage from Mr. Whiston, being full and clear to my purpose, unanswered, and unanswerable: and it may appear from hence that the hardest names which I have given to Arian subscription are in reality no severer than had been before given, by a known friend to the Arian cause: so that this writer may, with equal justice, charge Mr. Whiston also with slander, calumny, and persecuting principles, for his declaring such subscription to be gross insincerity and prevarication. The pious and candid Mr. Nelson and the very judicious and learned Bishop of Oxford had both expressed their abhorrence of it, before I wrote; as the anonymous author of the Case of Addressing, &c. has also done since. And indeed, who is there of any tolerable measure of good sense, or breathing any thing of the true spirit of piety, that does not utterly detest it?

I have now done with this writer, and, I hope, with this cause too: it is high time for those gentlemen, at length, to see their error, and correct it. They may succeed tolerably, for a while, in the Trinitarian controversy, which few, in comparison, understand thoroughly; and they may go on, for a season, in perverting Scripture and Fathers, without rebuke from the generality, who will not readily observe it, or be at the pains to search into it. But if they think to practise in like manner with our Articles and Liturgy, where every English reader can judge; or if they pretend to put off their sophistry in a plain point of morality, where every man, of any common discernment, can both detect and confute them; they will disoblige and disserve their own characters extremely; and will, at length, make but a very mean, not to say contemptible figure, in so wise and knowing an age. We did not indeed expect that any greater geniuses should rise up in the Arian cause, than had embarked in the same cause many ages upwards: but it was a reasonable presumption, that none would undertake the reforming of our faith, and the new stamping our whole system of theology, but such as would not (especially after notice given) betray a weakness and slowness of apprehension, even in the plain and self-evident principles of common honesty.

A SECOND VINDICATION
OF CHRIST'S DIVINITY: OR, A SECOND DEFENCE OF SOME QUERIES, RELATING TO
DR. CLARKE'S SCHEME OF THE HOLY TRINITY, IN ANSWER TO THE COUNTRY CLERGYMAN'S REPLY.
WHEREIN THE LEARNED DOCTOR'S SCHEME, AS IT NOW STANDS, AFTER THE LATEST CORRECTION, ALTERATION, AND EXPLANATION, IS DISTINCTLY AND FULLY CONSIDERED.

Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. Coloss. ii, 8, 9.

Quid tibi visum est, homo Ariane, tam multa dicere, et pro causa quæ inter nos agitur nihil dicere: quasi hoc sit respondere posse, quod est tacere non posse? Augustin. contr. Maxim. p. 677. ed. Bened.

P R E F A C E.

IT is now about three years and a half since I offered to the world a Vindication of Christ's Divinity, or, A Defence of some Queries, in answer to a Country Clergyman. Within a few months after the publication, some notice was taken of it in an anonymous pamphlet, entitled, Modest Plea, &c. Continued; or, A Brief Answer (not to my Defence, but) to my Queries. To which I replied, soon after, as much as I thought needful, in a Preface to my Eight Sermons. I was promised, in an Advertisement at the end of Modest Plea, &c. a large and particular answer to my Defence: and this, I presume, is what has now lately appeared, entitled, A Reply to Dr. W.'s Defence, &c. under the name of A Clergyman in the Country. To this the following sheets are intended for a full and distinct answer: how far they are really so, or how far they come short, is submitted to the judicious reader.

The book, which I here profess to examine, may be allowed to contain, in a manner, the whole strength of the Arian cause, real or artificial; all that can be of any force either to convince or to deceive a reader. And if there appears to be a great deal more of the artificial than there is of the real, there is certainly a fault in the men; but, at the same time, some great defect in the cause too, which wanted to be thus supplied. For whether we consider the hands supposed to have been employed in drawing up the Reply, or the time and pains spent in revising and polishing, we may be confident, that had it been possible to find out any real and firm foundation for Arianism to rest upon, it would never have been left to stand upon artificial props, or to subsist by subtilty and management.

This is not the place to give the reader a full list of all the artificial advantages made use of by those gentlemen in support of Arianism: a few hints may here suffice. Their disclaiming the name all the while they are inculcating the thing; to keep their readers in ignorance, and to steal upon them by surprise: their wrapping up their doctrine in general and confuse terms; to prevent its being narrowly looked into, or pursued in its remote, or even immediate consequences: their elaborate and studied prolixity in proving such points as nobody calls in question, and then slipping upon the reader, in their stead, something very different from them, without any proof at all: their avoiding as much as possible the defensive part, where the main stress lies, and keeping themselves chiefly to the offensive; perpetually objecting to the Catholic scheme, instead of clearing up the difficulties which clog their own: their bending their main force against our consequential doctrine, of three Persons being one God, instead of directly attacking our premises, that the Divine titles and attributes belong equally to every one; as to which the Scripture is very full and express: these and other the like artifices will be easily seen to run through their whole performance. But their masterpiece of subtilty lies in contriving a set of ambiguous and equivocal terms, to put the main question into; such as may be capable of a Catholic sense, or at least look very like it, in order to claim some countenance from Catholic antiquity; but such as may also be drawn to an Arian meaning, that so they may secure the point which they intend. Thus, betwixt the two senses or faces of the same words, chosen for the purpose, they shall never want pretence or colour from antiquity, even while endeavouring to prove things the most opposite and repugnant thereto in real sense and significancy. Such is the convenient use of equivocal words or phrases, when ingeniously made choice of, and managed by rules of art.

In the following papers, I have particularly endeavoured to clear the sense of the Ante-Nicene Church; and to vindicate the same from misrepresentation. All that remains to be done in this Preface is to obviate two objections, of very different kinds, which have been lately made by men of very opposite principles. One^a pretends that we are very singular, in claiming the suffrage of the Ante-Nicene Church in favour of the Athanasian doctrines: the other^b is for entirely waving all searches into antiquity, in relation to this controversy, as being either needless or fruitless.

1. As to the first, we are confidently told, "that few of the truly learned and impartial Athanasians themselves, from the very days of their founder, till our late writers of controversy, Bp. Bull, Dr. Grabe, Dr. Waterland, have denied the truth of this fact; that the Ante-Nicene Fathers were generally against the Athanasian, and for the Eusebian doctrines^c." To countenance this pretence, a long and pompous detail of Athanasian Confessions (as they are called) are packed together, and laid before the English reader.

^a Mr. Whiston in his Reply to Lord Nottingham.

Whiston.

^b The author of Two Letters, one to Lord Nottingham, the other to Mr.

^c Mr. Whiston's Reply to the Earl of Nottingham, p. 3.

It will be proper here, in the entrance, to examine what truth or justice there is in this strange report; that so, prejudices being removed, the reader may come with the greater freedom to the examination of what is offered, in the following papers, on the head of antiquity.

We must trace this matter down from the first beginnings of the Arian heresy, about the year 319. It may be known from Alexander, Bishop of Alexandria, what opinion the Catholics in general then had of the novelty of the Arian or Eusebian^d doctrines.

In the year 321, he with his Clergy, in their circular letter^e, represents the Arians or Eusebians as fallen into a great apostasy, and as forerunners of Antichrist. They exclaim against the Arian doctrines in this manner and in these words; "Who ever heard such things as these? or who, that now hears them, is not astonished at them, does not stop his ears for fear of polluting his ears with such impurity of doctrine? Who that hears St. John declaring that in the beginning was the Word, does not condemn those that say that he once was not?" &c. In conclusion of the Epistle, they compare them with Hymenæus and Philetus, and the traitor Judas: and they anathematize them as enemies to God, and subverters of souls. Now can we well suppose that Alexander, a very pious and good man, with great numbers of his Bishops and Clergy, would have gone these lengths in their cause, had they had the least suspicion that the Arian doctrines were at all agreeable to the faith of the Ante-Nicene churches?

Two years after this, in the year 323, the same Alexander, in his letter^f to Alexander of Constantinople, persists in the same warmth of zeal against the Arian doctrines. The abettors and favourers of them he ranks with the Ebionites, Artemonites, and Samosatensians^g, (condemned heretics,) brands them as novellists of late appearing^h, as men that thought none of the ancients worthy to be compared with them, pretending to be the only wise men themselves, and to be *inventors of doctrines which never before entered into man's head*ⁱ. This was what Alexander thought of the Arians at that time. Little did he suspect that the Ante-Nicene Church had been at all favourable to their notions.

In the year 325, as is well known, the Arian doctrines were proscribed and anathematized in the famous Council of Nice, consisting of three hundred and eighteen Bishops, very unanimous in their resolutions, excepting a few reclaimants. In their Synodical Epistle^k, ^d Note, They were called Eusebians from Eusebius of Nicomedia, one of the chief promoters of the Arian cause.

^e Extat apud Athanas. p. 397. ed. Bened. ap. Socrat. Eccl. Histor, lib. i. cap. 3.

^f Extat Theodorit. E. Hist. lib. i. cap. 4.

^g Theodoret. E. H, p. 15. ed. Cant.

^h Ibid. p. 16.

ⁱ Ibid. p. 17.

^k Apud Socrat. E. Hist. lib. i. cap. 9. Compare Athanas. vol. i. p. 283.

they declare that they had condemned the Arian doctrines of the Son's being from nothing, and that he once was not, as full of blasphemy and madness, and such as they had not patience to hear. So far were they from any apprehension that the Arian or Eusebian doctrines had been held by the ancient Church. This was the year before Athanasius (our founder, as Mr. Wh. calls him) was Bishop of the Church, and about fifteen years before he drew his pen in defence of the doctrines established in that Council.

Much about the same time, the good Emperor Constantine, after a fair and full hearing of the cause in the Nicene Council, bears his testimony against Arius, as being the first broacher of that doctrine, by the instigation of the Devil^l. And he makes an order to have the Arians branded with the name of Porphyrians^m, as being followers of the Pagan Porphyrius, either in their avowed opposition to Christ, (as some think,) or in their adopting the Platonic gradations into the Christian Trinity, as others conjecture.

In the year 335, Marcellus and Eusebius engaged on opposite sides : from which time Mr. Whiston begins the date of the Athanasian Confessions. What he produces from Eusebius himself is not to the purpose, since he reckons not him with the Athanasians, about whom our present question is. However, it is of no great moment, if Eusebius could ever so justly appeal to the ancient Doctors against Marcellus's particular tenets ; many of which (as Eusebius was pleased to understand them) were undoubtedly novelties. As to Marcellus, he charges the Eusebian or Arian heresy, as a thing then newly inventedⁿ. He gives up nothing in respect of the Ante-Nicene Fathers in general, but in respect of Origen only : whom he supposes to have been, in some points, not very consistent^o. Neither does he confess that Origen was entirely in the sentiments of the Eusebians ; but only that he agreed with them in making the Son a second Hypostasis^p : which Marcellus scrupled to allow, not considering that Origen's sense of a second Hypostasis (intended only in opposition to the Noëtian heresy) was a quite different thing from what the Eusebians or Arians were contending for. It is to be noted, that Marcellus and the other Eustathians were, for some time, too nice and scrupulous about admitting three Hypostases ; differing therein from the wiser and more judicious Athanasians.

About the year 352, Athanasius wrote his Epistle concerning the decrees of the Nicene Council. What he thought of the doctrine of the Ante-Nicene Church may appear sufficiently from one passage, running thus :

^l Socrat. E. H. lib. i. cap. 9. p. 30.

^m Ibid. p. 31.

ⁿ Euseb. contr. Marcell. l. i. c. 4. p. 20.

^o Euseb. contr. Marcell. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 22.

^p Id. ibid.

“ We give you demonstration that our doctrine has been handed down to us from Fathers to Fathers. But you, ye revivers of Judaism, and disciples of Caiaphas, what writers can you bring to father your tenets? Not a man can you name of any repute for sense or judgment: all abhor you, excepting only the Devil, who has alone been the Father of such an apostasy,” &c.

Many other passages^r of the like import may be produced from Athanasius, who every where appeals to constant tradition, along with Scripture, for the truth of his doctrine, against the Arian novelties. Neither are the pretended Confessions, which Mr. Whiston alleges out of him, of any the least moment; amounting to no more than his proposing of some Arian objections; which he abundantly confutes in the very places, shewing them to be nothing else but misrepresentation and calumny.

In the year 355, Hilary, one of the greatest Bishops of the west, and who may be justly called the Western Athanasius, wrote his first letter to Constantius the Emperor; in which we have the following testimony relating to our present purpose.

“ After four hundred years almost, since the only begotten Son of God vouchsafed to take pity on lost mankind, as if there had been no Apostles before, or as if after their martyrdoms and deaths there had been no Christians, now at length is come abroad the Arian pestilence, novel and direful, not a plague of infected air, but of execrable blasphemies. Have they then, who believed before, entertained false hopes of immortality? It is but late, we know, that these imaginations have been invented by the two Eusebiuses and Narcissus, and Theodorus, and Stephanus, and Acacius, and Menophantus; and the two ignorant and immoral youths, Ursatius and Valens, whose letters are published, and who are further convicted by credible witnesses, such as have heard them, not so much disputing, as barking against us.” In another treatise, published three years after, the same Hilary, having shewn how he had received his faith from the Prophets, Evangelists, and Apostles, goes on thus: “ By these have I been taught to believe as I do: in this faith am I imbued beyond recovery. Pardon me, O God Almighty, that I cannot be moved from this belief; but I can die for it. This age is tardy, I conceive, in bringing me these most impious teachers: these masters are too late for my faith, a faith which thou hast taught me. Such was my faith in thee, before ever I so much as heard of these names: by thee was I thus regenerated, and from that time forwards thus am I ever thine! ” Such is the constant strain of this blessed saint; who every

^q Athanas. de Decret. Syn. Nicæn. 676, 723. ed. Bened. p. 233.

^r Hilar. ad Constant. lib. i. p. 1220.

^r Athanas. p. 111, 262, 412, 502,

^t Hilar. de Trin. lib. vi. p. 892.

where brands the Arian doctrine as the new, novel, upstart heresy, folly, madness; and the broachers of it as the new apostolate, emissaries of Antichrist, blasphemers, and the like. Little did he suspect, though a knowing and a learned man, that any such doctrine had been received or taught by the Ante-Nicene Churches.

About the year 360, Basil entered the lists in this controversy. We shall often^a find him appealing to the tradition of the Fathers for the Athanasian doctrine. His confession, (in Mr. Whitson's phrase,) relating to Gregory of Neocæsarea, amounts only to this, that Gregory had made use of some expressions which evil-minded men had perverted to a false and bad sense, directly contrary to Gregory's true meaning. Basil himself bears full and clear testimony to Gregory's orthodoxy; as Bishop Bull has largely demonstrated^x, beyond contradiction.

As to what Basil says of Dionysius of Alexandria, that he was the first who laid the seeds of the impiety of the Anomæans: thus much, at least, may be gathered from it, that, in Basil's judgment, none of the writers before Dionysius (who wrote against Sabellius, about the year 259) had any tincture of that impiety; but that the Ante-Nicene Church in general was very free from it. And as to Dionysius himself, (however hardly Basil might once think of him,) he has been abundantly vindicated by Athanasius among the ancients, and by several learned moderns.

What Basil is said to confess of Origen, shews that in his opinion, custom and common consent was, in Origen's time, on the side of the doctrines called Athanasian; and that Origen himself, sometimes at least, conformed to it. But I shall vindicate Origen at large in a proper place.

Nazianzen, a contemporary of Basil's, in more places than one, bears testimony to the antiquity and uninterrupted succession of the Nicene faith, from the times of the Apostles. As to a pretended Confession of his looking the other way, it will be considered at large in the following sheets.

Epiphanius, about the year 375, says, that the apostolical faith (that is, the Athanasian in his account) continued pure and uncorrupted till the time of Arius, who divided the Church^y: and who by the instigation of the Devil, and with an impudent forehead, let his tongue loose against his Lord^z: so little did he imagine that Arianism was primitive Christianity. He observes further, that had it not been for the subtle practices of Eudoxius, Bishop of Constantinople, in perverting and corrupting the most pious Emperor Valens, the very

^a Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. i. p. 5. De Spir. S. p. 167. Ep. 79.

^x Bull. D. F. sect. ii. cap. 12.

^y Epiphanius. contr. Hæres. lxi. p. 728.

^z Ibid. p. 736.

women and children, and all that had been in any tolerable measure instructed in Christian principles, would have reproved and routed the Arians, as blasphemers and murderers of their Lord^a, &c. Such was the assurance the Athanasians then had, that their faith was the settled and standing doctrine of the primitive churches all the world over, till the time of Arius.

As to Epiphanius's opinion of Lucian and Origen, (two single men,) it was severe enough, and indeed not just; as Bishop Bull hath abundantly proved. Yet, from Epiphanius's censure of Origen, one may perceive plainly, that he thought the Ante-Nicene Church in general, both before and after Origen, to be of a very contrary judgment to that which he condemns in Lucian and Origen, that is, to Arianism.

At this time lived Gregory Nyssen; who about the year 381 encountered Eunomius, the shrewdest and sharpest Arian of that age. In his reply to him, he takes notice that the Church had been in possession of this doctrine, that God the Son is essentially true God, of the essence of the true God: and that if Eunomius should undertake to confute that doctrine, he ought to fix upon some firm and certain principles whereon to proceed, and trace them down by just and regular deductions, in order to come at his conclusion. After he had said this, he goes on in these words:

“ Let no one here tell me, that we ought also to give rational demonstration of what we profess: it is sufficient demonstration of our doctrine, that we have a tradition coming down to us from our fathers; a kind of inheritance successively conveyed to us by the primitive saints from the Apostles themselves. They that have changed those doctrines for the present novelty, will have very great need of the succours of reason and argumentation, if they mean to convince, not the grovelling herd or giddy populace, but the grave and staunch men, men of sobriety and firmness. While they offer us discourses without any argument or demonstration to support them, it is only playing the fool, and is even brutishly stupid: as if greater regard should be had to empty talk, void of all proof, than to the doctrine of the Evangelists and of the Apostles, and their successors, the lights of the Christian churches^b.”

Here we see with what confidence Nyssen appeals to constant tradition for the truth of the Athanasian doctrine: so little did he imagine that the Ante-Nicene faith was any way different from, much less repugnant to, his own.

I may next mention a famous case which happened in the year 383. The Arians, Eunomians, and Macedonians were then formally and solemnly challenged by the Catholics, to refer the matter in dispute to the concurring judgment of the writers that lived before the controversy began : but they declined the offer ; refusing absolutely to put their cause upon that issue. This is decisive in the case, that the Athanasians had all the assurance imaginable as to the faith of the primitive churches ; and that the Arians were very sensible that their doctrine could never bear so fair and just a trial. The story is thus told in Socrates, lib. v. cap. 10.

^a Ibid. p. 737.

^b Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. lib. iii. p. 125, 126.

“ The Emperor (Theodosius) sending for Nectarius, the Bishop “ (of Constantinople), conferred with him about the properest method “ of putting an end to the dissensions, and restoring the unity of the “ Church. He proposed to have the matter in dispute, which had “ divided the churches, to be fully canvassed ; that, removing the “ causes of their differences, the churches might be reduced to concord.
 “ Upon the hearing of this, Nectarius was under some concern : and “ calling for Agelius the Novatian Bishop, of the same faith with him“ self, he acquainted him with the Emperor’s design. He, (Agelius,) “ though otherwise a very worthy man, yet having no talent for dis“ putation, recommended Sisinnius, his Lector, to engage in a con“ ference. Sisinnius was a man of great wisdom and experience, well “ versed in Scripture, and also in philosophy : but being very sensible “ that disputations generally are so far from healing differences, that “ they rather foment and inflame them ; he suggested to Nectarius
 “ this method. He very well knew that the ancients had ever avoided “ the ascribing any beginning of existence to the Son of God, believ“ ing him to be coeternal with the Father : he advises therefore to set “ aside all logical wranglings, and to produce the testimonies of the “ ancients ; leaving it to the Emperor to put the question to the heads “ of the several sects, whether they would make any account of the “ Doctors of the Church who lived before the difference began ; or “ whether they would reject them also, as strangers to the faith of “ Christ. For if they should reject them, let them also pronounce an “ anathema upon them : which if they should dare to do, they will be “ immediately detested by the generality, and truth will thus be mani“ festly victorious. But if they reject not the ancient Doctors, then “ will it be our business to produce the writings of the ancients, by “ which the truth of our doctrine shall be attested.”

Thus far Socrates : who further relates that Nectarius and the Emperor well approved of the design, and immediately put it in execution. Whereupon the heads of the several sects were at first much confounded, and divided among themselves ; some commending what the Emperor had proposed, and others not ; but in conclusion, they all chose rather to rest the cause solely on logical disputation, than upon the testimonies of the ancients. Thus the design came to nothing. This we may learn from it, that at that time of day, when many primitive writings, since lost, were extant, the Athanasians were very willing and desirous to have their cause tried by the verdict of the ancient writers; being confident of victory in that method: and that the Arians, as being sufficiently sensible of the same thing, prudently declined it.

Mr. Whiston did not care to give more than short, general hints of this famous challenge, and the issue of it: but he endeavours to wind and turn himself every way to evade its force^c. He pretends, first, that the question between the Athanasians and their adversaries was not whether the ancients admitted the coeternity of the Son, but whether they admitted his existence to have been without any limitation of time: as if the Athanasians intended no more than that the ancients never assigned any particular point of time for the Son's beginning. But not to mention how silly such a challenge had been, and how unserviceable such a discussion to the Athanasian cause, which required a great deal more than that comes to; I say, not to mention this, Socrates' and Sozomen's account of that affair sufficiently obviates every such weak surmise or insinuation. Both say, that Sisinnius well knew that the ancients never durst ascribe any beginning at all to the Son: and why? because they thought or believed him to be coeternal with the Father^d. The question then was not, whether the ancients had assigned any particular time of the Son's beginning to exist: but whether they ascribed any beginning at all to him. And Sisinnius was ready to maintain that they ascribed no beginning to him, but believed him to be coeternal.

Mr. Whiston has another very extraordinary evasion, that the ancient Doctors appealed to were not those of the three first centuries, but only such as Father Eustathius, Father Marcellus, Father Alexander, &c. about or a little before the Council of Nice. A very likely matter indeed, that the Emperor should ask the Arians whether they would be tried by the verdict of those who had before condemned the Arians by name; or that the Arians should be at all afraid of pronouncing an anathema upon such as Father Eustathius or Father Marcellus, who had been deposed and condemned by the Eusebians or Arians before; one in a synod at Antioch, A. D. 329, the other in a synod at Constantinople, A. D. 335. Socrates observes, that the heads of those parties durst not anathematize those ancient Doctors, lest the people should abhor them for so doing; or as Sozomen expresses it, lest their own party should take offence, and desert them^e: is it at all

^c Whiston's Reply to Lord Nottingham, Append. p. 63.

^d Εἰς ἐπιστάμενος ὡς οἱ παλαιοὶ ἀρχὴν ὑπάρξεως τῷ υἱῷ τοῦ Θεοῦ δοῦναι ἀπέφυγον· κατελιήφεισαν γὰρ αὐτὸν συναλθίων τῷ πατρὶ. Socrat. lib. v. c. 10. p. 273.

Εἰ γὰρ ᾔδει, ὡς οἱ παλαιοὶ συναλθίων τῷ πατρὶ τὸν υἱὸν εὐρόντες, οὐκ ἐτόλμησαν εἰπεῖν ἕκ τινος ἀρχῆς τὴν γένεσιν αὐτὸν ἔχειν. Sozom. lib. vii. c. 12. p. 292.

^e Ἐπὶ τῶν οἰκείων ἐξελαθῆσονται. Sozom. p. 292.

likely that their own party should take such offence in this case, or should pay any great respect and deference to the memory of Eustathius, Marcellus, &c. ? Besides this, those ancient Doctors are styled οι παλαιοι, a word not very proper for such as lived but about fifty or sixty years before ; and some of them alive within twenty, nay within ten years of the time ; as is particularly true of Marcellus, who died A. D. 374. Add to this, that Socrates and Sozomen are express that the ancient Doctors appealed to were those that lived before the rise of the differences, (as common sense also must tell us they ought to be :) and who could those be but the Ante-Nicene Fathers ?

Come we now down to the next century, beginning with 400, where we find Ruffinus a strenuous advocate for the faith of the Ante-Nicene Church as conformable to his own. The pretended Confessions, which are partially represented from him, amount to little more than this, that Origen's and the two Clemens' works were originally orthodox, but had been afterwards corrupted, and interpolated by heretics in some parts of them. This shews what Ruffinus really thought of the orthodoxy of the Ante-Nicene writers themselves, that they were of the same faith with the Athanasians. And though Jerome endeavours to expose Ruffinus's account with all the keenness and satire of an adversary ; yet he himself was forced to allow it in the main, and almost to say the same thing. " It may be," says he, " that they erred in their simplicity, or wrote with a different meaning, or that their writings have been corrupted by little and little, by unskilful transcribers ; or however, that before the rise of the meridan demon, Arius, they might speak some things innocently and incautiously."

The pretended Confessions out of Jerome relate chiefly to Origen, whose case will be considered at large in the following sheets : and so I need not here say more of it. The like may be said of Theophilus.

We may now come down to St. Austin who delivers his mind in the words here following, in his Treatise of the Trinity, finished in the year 416 :

" All the Catholic interpreters of the Old or New Testament, that I could read, who have wrote before me on the Trinity which is God, intended to teach, in conformity to Scripture, that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost do, by the inseparable equality of one and the same substance, make up the Unity divine." Surely St. Austin must have reckoned the Ante-Nicene Doctors among his Catholic interpreters, of whom he gives this full and plain testimony. What he has said of Origen will be considered in another place.

† Τῶν πρὸ τῆς διαίρεσεως, ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ προσαρμοσάντων διδασκάλων. Socrat. p. 273.

Πρὸ τῆς διαίρεσεως τῆς ἐκκλησίας, καθη-γητάς καὶ διδασκάλους τῶν ἱερῶν λόγων γενομένους. Socrat. p. 292.

‡ Augustin. de Trin. lib. i. cap. 3. p. 753.

I pass over Anastasius, and Justinian's pretended Confessions, as respecting none but Origen.

Photius is an author of the ninth century; who is known to have been often too severe in his remarks upon the Ante-Nicene writers: not considering the difference of times, or how unreasonable it is to expect that those who lived before the rise and condemnation of heresies, should come up to every accurate form of expression, which long experience afterwards found necessary, to guard the faith against the subtle practices or provoking insults of its adversaries. Bishop Bull has abundantly shewn, how easy it is to vindicate the Ante-Nicene Fathers against every thing that can be objected out of Photius.

Leaving the ancients, we may now descend to moderns, to see what judgment they have made in the present question.

Cardinal Perron, no longer ago than the reign of King James I, (A. D. 1620,) began the pretence, that the Arians themselves would readily submit to be tried by the doctrine of the Ante-Nicene writers. The occasion of it was this: the Protestants having well studied the Fathers, were now willing to rest their cause, not upon Scripture only, but Fathers too; so far at least as the three first centuries. And they thought that a much greater deference was due to the judgment of those early ages of the Church, than to that of the ages succeeding: while the Romanists were used to value the latter equally with the former, or even to give them the preference. The Cardinal, being pressed in dispute on this head, could think of no better an answer than that before mentioned. What Mr. Whiston calls his confession is, in truth, nothing else but a poor pretence, or subterfuge, made use of in a case of extremity, only to serve the interests of the corrupt Church of Rome.

Fisher, the Jesuit, in the year 1626 seconded the Cardinal in the same plea and upon the same views: but still little notice was taken of it, till a greater than both, the Jesuit Petavius, (who in the year 1622 had intimated something of it, in his notes upon Epiphanius,) did by his learned writings on the Trinity, (A. D. 1644,) give new countenance and credit to it. And if we consider well the time when Petavius first began to talk in that manner, (a very little after Cardinal Perron had opened the way to it,) or the use that was to be made of it in regard to the interests of the Romish cause; he may be suspected, by Protestants, to have had some bias in this matter, without any breach of charity^h. Some learned Romanists, such as Huetius, and Valetius, scrupled not to join in some measure (after so great an authority) in the like charge against the Ante-Nicene writers; referring to Petavius for proof of it. This passed for a while, till the Unitarians began to take advantage of it, and to triumph upon it. In the year 1658, and 1662, Daniel Zwicker made his boasts of the Ante-Nicene Fathers as favouring Arianism: and though Comenius and Hoornbeckius entered the lists against him, they were hardly thought a sufficient match for him. In the year 1676, Sandius seconded Zwicker in the Arian cause: in the year 1678, our countryman Dr. Gardiner professedly undertook to clear and defend the orthodoxy of the Ante-Nicene writers: and several controversial letters passed between him and Sandius. The next that engaged in the same cause was the learned Le Moyne, in the year 1684. Soon after, in the year 1685, followed Bishop Bull, then a private clergyman; who so learnedly and so effectually defended the Ante-Nicene faith, that the Arian cause has been sinking under the weight of his elaborate pieces ever since.

^h See Bull. Proem. sect. 8. p. 6. Nelson's Life of Bull, p. 287. Grab. Præfat. ad Bulli Opera.

When Bishop Bull's books came to be known abroad, they met with the universal esteem of the learned in Europe, as well Papists as Protestants; who from that time at least have appeared generally well satisfied in the faith of the Ante-Nicene writers, and have stood up in defence of it. As to Protestants, I might mention our own countrymen, Bishop Stillingfleet, Dr. Cave, and many others, to whom I take leave to add the very pious and learned Dr. Grabe, who long resided among us. As to the foreign Reformed, Fabricius and M. Bayle, two very learned men, have declared themselves in favour of the same sentiments: as also have several other learned Protestants abroad, whose names and treatises are recited by Fabriciusⁱ; as to Romanists, I might mention M. Bossuet, late Bishop of Meaux, with the Clergy of France^k, and even the best learned men amongst them. Du Pin is one who has taken all occasions of answering the objections made to the Ante-Nicene writers in the article of the Trinity: Noel Alexander and Lewis Thomassin have done the same. So also has M. Massuet as far as concerned Irenæus; whereof he is editor. Montfaucon has done the like, so far as properly came in his way; though he gives up Eusebius, who is not in strictness to be reckoned with the Ante-Nicenes. But the learned Le Nourry has exceeded them all, in his Apparatus ad Bibliothecam maximam; where he is so zealous in defending the Ante-Nicene writers in general, that he will scarce allow Bishop Bull to have done justice to some of them; particularly to Tertullian and Lactantius, whom therefore he undertakes to vindicate even beyond what the Bishop had pretended. Thus stands the matter of fact among the learned moderns; to whom I might add several now living amongst us, whose names I am willing to spare. What then can be meant by the strange report made of the Athanasians, from the days of their founder? a report without truth; and I had almost said, without any sobriety or modesty. Enough hath been said to take off the pretended singularity of our appeal to the Ante-Nicene writers in this controversy. It remains only to throw in a word or two, in answer to another objection of a very different kind.

ⁱ Fabric. Biblioth. Græc. vol. viii. p. 312, &c.

^k Nelson's Life of Bull, p. 344. 385.

II. There was a pamphlet published the last year, entitled, Two Letters, &c. one to the Earl of Nottingham, the other to Mr. Whiston. The author writes on the orthodox side, and has said many excellent things, which deserve commendation. But as he has took the freedom to pass his censure upon others, he will give me leave, I doubt not, to use the like freedom with him. What I most find fault with is his narrowing too much his own bottom, and his unwary sapping the foundation on which he stands. To avoid perplexities and uncertainties, (as he is pleased to call them,) he is for waving all searches into antiquity, and is for confining the debate to Scripture alone: and because many texts made use of in this controversy have not been perfectly settled to the satisfaction of both parties, as to readings, translations, or interpretations, and it requires some learning and critical skill to fix and ascertain them; these texts therefore are to be laid aside also, and the merits of the cause left to be tried by those only that remain; "such as have never yet been disputed by the adversaries, or "against which they have nothing to say." Pref. p. 8. He does not consider,

1. The difficulty of finding out any texts, of real weight in this controversy, which have not been controverted, either as to their reading, or translation, or interpretation.

2. That the strongest and most important texts are those which have been controverted; and for that very reason, because they are the strongest, &c. For it was worth the while for the adversary to rack invention, and to call in all the succours of learning and critical skill to assoil them, if possible, and to wrest them out of our hands. Thus the first chapter of St. John has had more pains and art spent upon it, by our adversaries, than any other part of Scripture.

3. That if once the issue of the cause be put upon other texts which have been more neglected, it will be as easy, nay much easier, to invent some pretence or other against the reading, version, or construction, to defeat every argument built upon them.

4. That therefore the method which this author proposes is in reality (without intending it) laying the weight of the dispute upon what least deserves it, and can least of all bear it. It is deserting our strong holds, and engaging the adversary upon unequal ground, and at the greatest disadvantage: in a word, it is to expose and betray the cause which we are endeavouring to support.

What I have here observed in relation to our use of Scripture texts is in some measure applicable to the testimony of the ancients. The reason why this also has been so warmly and resolutely contested with us, is because it is of real weight, and of very considerable moment for determining the main question. It would be a very weak thing to give up so momentous a point as that is, only because it has been contested; that is, because it is worth the contending for. If the illiterate vulgar be not competent judges of this branch of the dispute, (as indeed they scarce are of any dispute through its whole compass, though confined to Scripture alone,) yet there are others, whom the vulgar will take for their guides in this matter, (and they ought to do so,) who can understand and judge of it.

The Author had but little reason to be concerned at Mr. Whiston's followers boasting of his performance as a victory, in regard to the ancients: it was natural for them so to do, either through ignorance or through prejudice, where they had no manner of reason. Knowing and impartial judges will easily see the difference between obtaining a victory and giving the last word. I must do my Lord Nottingham the justice to say, that he effectually performed his part, with great integrity, learning, and acuteness; with the exactness of a scholar, and the judgment of a complete Divine. Had Mr. Whiston, in his Reply, confined himself (as he ought to have done, and as my Lord very justly had required of him) to those points and those citations only which were before in debate, instead of pouring in new impertinencies, and many foreign matters, to conceal and cover his defeat; the very meanest reader must have seen plainly on which side the advantage lies. But to return.

The low notion which this gentleman every where, through both his Letters, appears to have conceived of the primitive saints, may, I hope, be corrected by his more careful perusing them, when disposed to it. His chief argument against them (viz. that the adversaries have been able to raise cavils and to perplex their meaning) will carry him further than he is well aware; even to the laying aside, not some texts only, and those of the greatest weight, as it hath already done; but those very texts on which he would at length have the whole stress of the controversy laid. If this gentleman be of opinion, as he declares in his preface, that the gates of hell should never prevail over that foundation, over the doctrine of Christ's Divinity; and if he thinks it of such moment that later ages have universally adhered to it, (a point which would be disputed with him as well as the other, were it of half the moment or concern as the other,) certainly he must think it of some importance to clear and vindicate the faith of the most pure and primitive churches in this article; lest otherwise what he calls the foundation (if it cannot be proved to have been constantly upheld) appear at length not to be the foundation, but rather so much wood, hay, or stubble built upon it. To conclude, as I would not detract from the merit of whatever this worthy gentleman has well urged in proof of our Lord's Divinity; so neither were it advisable in him to detract from those who, in defence of the same cause, and to very excellent purpose, have laboured in searching both Scripture and antiquity.

To the law and to the testimony let the appeal be in the first place; and next to the united suffrage of the primitive churches, as the best and safest comment upon the other. On these two pillars will our faith for ever stand, firm and unmovable, against all attempts; whether of vain philosophy, to batter the doctrine, or of vainer criticisms to corrupt or stifle the evidence: and "the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

I should here advertise the reader, that in the following papers I have endeavoured always to express myself fully and particularly in the most material points: but as to incidental matters of slighter moment, I have sometimes, purely for the sake of brevity, passed them off in general hints only; such as will not be perfectly understood without looking into the Reply which I am answering, or sometimes into my former Defence.

I suppose the inquisitive, and such as have leisure, will not think it much trouble to compare all the three together as they read; especially where any thing occurs which may appear obscure by reason of its brevity. As to others, they will be content with a more confuse and general perception of such parts as are of least concernment, and require a little more pains and care in the examining than they have leisure or inclination to spend upon them.

THE ANSWER TO THE PREFACE.

YOU begin with big words: you have, you say, "clearly shewn, that Dr. W.'s notion is entirely contrary to reason, Scripture, and all primitive antiquity." Your design, no doubt, is to magnify your work, and to help it forwards in the opinion of the reader. But wise men will not expect much from a performance that needs a proclamation in the entrance: had your arguments been just, and your proofs clear, a reader might have been trusted to find them out.

You proceed to complain of my "manner of writing," as being "greatly fitted to deceive." You apprehend, it seems, that it may still have some influence, notwithstanding that you have so clearly and so entirely confuted it: which, if it does not betray a great degree of mistrust, is a very ill compliment to the understanding of your readers.

After this general charge, you go on to particular complaints, drawn up in form.

The first is, my entitling my book "A Vindication of Christ's Divinity;" being so rude as to insinuate, that the men I have to deal with, are impugners of Christ's divinity. I confess the charge; and am so far from thinking it a fault, that I have a second time very deliberately done the same thing in this very treatise. Till you give us a better account of our Lord's divinity than you have hitherto done, I must persist in it: because it is very proper that the world be made justly sensible of your prevarication, and indeed shameful banter, in a momentous article of the Christian faith. I use the word divinity in the plain and usual sense of it, as the Christian Church hath long done. I know of no divinity, but such as I have here defended. The other, falsely so called, is really none. While you maintain the principles you do, I must look upon you as impugners of Christ's divinity; well knowing, that the Christian Church in all ages would have thought the same of you, and that your doctrine was condemned as blasphemy long before Arius appeared; and that, upon his first appearance, he and his adherents were charged, as you now are, and very justly, with denying the divinity of their God and Saviour^a.

You have invented a very soft name for it: it is not denying the divinity of Christ; but it is differing about the "particular manner of explication of that doctrine," p. 4. Which pretence, like many others, has a great deal more of art than of solidity in it. Explaining a doctrine is one thing, explaining it away is quite another. There is some difference, for instance, between explaining the doctrine of the resurrection of the body, and explaining the texts relating to it in such a manner, as to make void the very doctrine itself. When Basilides, Valentinus, Cerdo, and Marcion, so interpreted Scripture, as wholly to destroy the supreme divinity of the Creator, or God of Israel; was this, think you, no more than differing concerning the "particular manner of explication of his divinity?" They acknowledged, indeed, his divinity still; that is, in words, and in Scripture words too; but in a sense peculiar to themselves. The plain truth is, you and we differ about the sense of Scripture, in the question of Christ's divinity. We find Christ's divinity in our Bibles: you find not the doctrine there. Accordingly, we assert Christ's divinity, and you deny it; that is, you deny the thing, and retain nothing but the name. The difference then is, not concerning the manner of explaining our doctrine, (which with you is no doctrine,) but concerning the manner of explaining the texts which relate to it. You speak of Christ's divinity however; you have some awe and reverence for the language of the Church, though you have left her faith. Some concern you have also for your own characters, and for the interest of the cause you are engaged in; which can never prevail, no not with the populace, but under the benefit of a mask. If it be asked

^a Τὴν θεότητα τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν ἀρνούμενοι. Alexand. Epist. apud Theod. E. H. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 10.

Ἄρνούμενοι τὴν θεότητα τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ—πανταχόθεν ἄθεοι γεγόνασιν, ὥστε μήτε θεογαυτὸν ἐπιγινώσκουν, μήθ', &c. Athan. ad Adelph. p. 912.

why we have no such doctrine as that of the divinity of angels and of magistrates, (called Gods in Scripture,) or why the divinity of Christ should be asserted, while the other is absolutely denied, I am persuaded you will be much at a loss for any satisfactory answer, upon your principles. It will be a vain thing for you to plead, that you assert as much of Christ's divinity as Scripture hath asserted. For, were the fact really so, (as it certainly is not,) then indeed Scripture might justify you in your denial of Christ's divinity; but it can never justify you in calling that divinity which, according to the language of the Church, and just propriety of speech, you yourselves, as well as we, know to be none.

You tell me, that the "whole and only design of the authors " I oppose, has been, soberly, and in the fear of God, to collect " and consider what it is that our Saviour himself and his " Apostles have in Scripture taught us, concerning that doctrine, " separate from the metaphysical hypotheses of fallible and contentious men." Now, to pass by the extraordinary civility of these reflections upon others, and the modesty of assuming so much to yourselves; as if you had no hypotheses, no metaphysical fancies, were never contentious, scarce fallible, like other men: waving this, yet give me leave to say, that be your designs ever so good, your intentions ever so sober, and your searches directed in the fear of God; if the result of all be, that you cannot find Christ's divinity (properly so called) in Scripture, you ought not to pretend, either that you are advocates for Christ's divinity, or that any man is to blame for charging you as impugners of it.

You say further, that by the divinity of Christ, I mean my own particular metaphysical explication of it. A suggestion as false as it is mean. For neither is my sense any particular sense, but the common sense of all men, learned or unlearned, that know the difference between God and creature: neither is there any thing of metaphysics in it, more than there is in the declaration of the God of Israel, as often as he proclaimed himself to be God, (in opposition to such as were no Gods,) on the score of his almighty power, wisdom, greatness, and other divine perfections. However, supposing my account of the Son's divinity to be metaphysical, is not your account of the Father's divinity as metaphysical as the other? And if you, through your false metaphysics, exclude the Son from the one Godhead, I shall not be ashamed of making use of true metaphysics to correct your errors, and to establish the Son's divinity, upon the same foot whereon Scripture has fixed it. You might be ashamed to mention metaphysics, when every body knows that you have little else to rely upon, for the support of your novel doctrine^b. Who sees not what a stress has been laid upon a false notion of the self-existence of the Father, to degrade and separate his beloved Son from the one true Godhead? What batteries have you not raised against a proper sonship, from metaphysical reasonings, should I say, or reveries? That generation implies division, and necessary generation outward coaction; that generation must be an act, and every act must mean choice; that necessary agents are no agents, and necessary causes no causes; that nothing individual can be communicated; that three persons must be three intelligent agents, and three intelligent agents, reciprocally, three persons; that three agents cannot be one being, one substance, one Lord, or one God; that there can be no medium between being and not being; that inseparable union, without identical life, will not suffice to make two Persons one God; and that if there be identical life, then they are no longer two Persons; nor can there be any equality or subordination; that the same living God necessarily signifies the same individual intelligent agent, or Person; that God the Son must be either the same identical whole substance, or an homogeneous undivided part of the infinite substance, upon my principles; and that he can be neither; and therefore not one and the same God with the Father. Here are metaphysics in great plenty, sufficient, one may think, to furnish out an ordinary schoolman. Nevertheless, we should not, on this account, be so unreasonable, as to censure either Dr. Clarke or his friends, for procuring all the real assistance they can from metaphysics; true metaphysics being nothing else but true divinity: let but your reasonings be clear, solid, and pertinent, and we shall never find fault with them for being metaphysical. The truth is, you have pretended to metaphysics; but have betrayed very great mistakes in that part, as you have also done in your other pretences, relating to Scripture and antiquity. To return to the business of the title.

You observe, very shrewdly, that you could with "much greater justice" (and yet you did not think it reasonable so to do) "have entitled your Reply, A Vindication of the Divinity of God the Father Almighty." Truly, if you had done it, you would not have found me complaining of the injustice of it: for, what hurt could you have done to me or my cause, by making yourself ridiculous? I hope, therefore, you do not expect any thanks from me upon this head. You go on, however, seriously to shew, how you could have defended so conceited a title. You could have pleaded, that the "denying the Father to be alone" "supreme in authority and dominion over all," (in which consists the true notion of his divinity,) "is denying his divinity." That is to say, you could have begged the main question, and have thereupon founded a charge against me, with the same, nay, greater justice, than I charge you with a plain matter of fact, no part of the main question between us. The question is, Whether the one true Godhead be common to Father and Son, or proper to the Father only? You have determined for the latter; therefore you have struck the Son out of the one true Godhead, previously to our dispute; therefore you have denied his proper divinity: and the question now is, not whether you have denied it, (which is out of question,) but, whether you have justly denied it? If you see no difference between the two cases, I can only pity your confusion. Whether divinity, strictly so called, can be common to more Persons than one, remains to be considered. In the mean while, it is evident that you, by making it proper to the Father only, have denied the divinity of all besides.

^b See my Defence, vol. i. pp. 448, 449, 461.

2. A second complaint is of a motto in my titlepage: "I am "Jesus whom thou persecutest: it is hard for thee to kick "against the pricks." Now, I thought a writer might be at liberty to follow his judgment or fancy in such a trifle as a motto, without being so solemnly called to account for it. But, it seems, this must be now brought to the bar, and deliberately scanned. "As if," say you, "the not receiving Dr. W.'s notions in meta"physics was persecuting Christ." As if, say I, the abusing of metaphysics, to the destruction of a plain Scripture doctrine, and the undermining the Christian faith, were not, by a very easy figure, justly called the "persecuting of Christ," "crucifying the "Son of God afresh," and "putting him to an open shame."

Since I am called upon in this case, I will tell you, so far as I remember, what I principally intended by the motto.

1. One thing was, to intimate the great awe and dread which every man ought to have upon his mind, when he takes pen in hand to write in opposition to his Saviour's Godhead, and with a formed design to deprive him of that worship and those divine honours which have been constantly paid him by innumerable martyrs and confessors, by the whole Church of Christ for fourteen centuries at least, I doubt not to say seventeen. Whatever may be pleaded for disputing points of an inferior nature, and less set by; this particularly is a cause not to be entered into without "fear and trembling," by any pious man; lest haply he be found to "fight against God." You may think, perhaps, you have no need of such caution: but for that very reason, I should be apt to conclude you have.

2. Another thing intended by the motto was, to insinuate, how impracticable and vain (in all probability) any attempt must be to defeat the doctrine of our Lord's divinity; which has now stood the test for a long tract of centuries, though all imaginable endeavours and artifices have been from the beginning employed to overthrow it. A late writer^c very well observes, that "this foundation has been so upheld, that where the first institution were, as it were, sunk out of memory, by the weight of impure mixtures, as in the Greek Church; and where every other article of faith had received wounds by the innovations of error, as in the Roman Church; yet all of them have adhered to and preserved this main and fundamental point to this day." The same is likewise true of all the Churches of the Reformation: and God has visibly blasted and defeated all attempts against the eternal Godhead of our blessed Saviour. "It is hard for thee to kick against the pricks." So said a pious Father of the Church, applying it to this very case^d, (one would think with a prophetic spirit,) thirteen hundred years ago. Such were then the sentiments of the wisest and best men of those times. They were fallible, they were men: but if posterity, fallible as they, grow bold and daring, where the other would have trembled, let them look to it. They had the same Scriptures we have, and better helps for the understanding them: they had their faculties of discerning no less than we; and they spared no pains or care in their searches. This is a consideration of some moment, especially in a fundamental article. We should not, at least, go rashly into contrary sentiments, nor without plain Scripture to warrant it. We may be apt to flatter ourselves too much, and think we see λόγον σεαυτὸν ἀλίσκεις, καὶ οὐ τὸ πνεῦμα σεαυτὸν ἀπαλλοτριούς ἀπὸ τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ χάριτος, καὶ οὐ τὸν υἱὸν ἀπὸ πατρὸς, οὐδὲ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἔγιον ἀπὸ πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ. Επιρῆφαν. Ancoor. cap. xiv. p. 20.

^c Two Letters to the Earl of Nottingham and Mr. Whiston. Pref. p. 19.

^d Τί γὰρ κενόδοξε, πολεμείς τὸν ἀκαταπολέμητον; τί μάχη τῷ ἀκαταμάχητῳ; σκληρὸν σοι πρὸς κέντρα λακτίσειν σεαυτὸν σκανδαλίζεις, καὶ οὐ τὸν further than those before us ; when in reality, perhaps, it is not that we have more sense than they, but that we want their piety.

You tell me how carefully the men of your way have “ studied “ the Scripture,” and how sincerely they have “ made use of all “ the helps God has given them, to understand it rightly.” Be it so : and I do not know any one that can lay it to the charge of St. Paul, that he had not, in such a sense, sincerely studied the Scripture, or had not sincerely made use of the helps God had given him, though still a persecutor of Christ. However sincere you may have been, yet believe also that others, as sincere as you, have carefully studied the same Scriptures ; and that the most eminent lights of the Christian Church in all ages, have as sincerely thought it their indispensable duty to pronounce an anathema upon the doctrine you give us, as you do that you ought to receive and follow it. We have nothing to do to inquire after your sincerity, of which God is judge. Neither civil judicatures, nor ecclesiastical courts, ever proceed upon that bottom. Our business is not to consider the sincerity of the men, but the nature, quality, and tendency of the doctrine. There have been sincere Photinians, sincere Samosatensians, sincere Sabellians, sincere Papists, sincere Jews and Mahometans. And indeed, what sects are there that have not sincere men amongst them ? The more sincere you are, the better it will fare with you at the great day of account. In the mean while, give us leave to be sincere too, in condemning heartily what we heartily disapprove. And let the sincerity of each be tried by the nature and quality of the cause you and we are engaged in, and by the strength of the evidence on either side ; on which, as I conceive, chiefly hangs the proof of our sincerity. You proceed to invective. “ It “ concerns those who thus affect to sit in the seat of God, and to “ equal their own disputable notions with the express word of “ God, to consider a little more seriously what spirit they are “ of.” But, laying aside childish wrath, let us argue this matter coolly and sedately with you. Is it “ affecting to sit in the seat “ of God,” that we are doing our bounden duty in condemning false doctrine, or what we take to be such ; and in “ contending “ earnestly for the faith which was once delivered to the saints ?” And how is it “ equalling our own disputable notions with the express word of God,” when we stand up for the “ express word of “ God,” against those who appear to us to contradict and pervert it, in favour of their metaphysical conceits and ill-grounded hypotheses ? What right have a few private men to claim express Scripture, and to equal their own disputable notions with the "express word of God," in opposition to the Christian world, as capable of judging what Scripture is, as they that so vainly boast of it? Charge us no more, so fondly, with "affecting to sit in the seat of God," lest it be told you, in return, that there appears to be infinitely more pride, vanity, and arrogance, in a few private men sitting in judgment upon whole Churches, and throwing their hasty, ill-grounded censures upon Fathers, and Councils, and all the greatest and wisest men that have lived in past centuries, than any can be imagined in those whom you so injuriously reflect on; for no cause, but for honestly declaring their abhorrence of your novel and dangerous opinions. Surely we may presume, without "affecting to sit in the seat of God," to think some very fallible men liable to errors: and when in fact it appears that they are so, we may presume, according to our bounden duty, to take all proper care to prevent such errors spreading. But enough has been said in vindication of a motto.

3. A third complaint is of my unrighteous use of the term Arians, and Arianism. But that this censure of yours is very unrighteous may appear sufficiently from what I have elsewhere demonstrated^e, and may again, as occasion offers. In truth, it is complimenting you, to call you Arians; for you really come short of the old Arians, in more points than one, (as I shall observe hereafter,) and have not so honourable thoughts of God the Son, as the generality of the ancient Arians had. As to what you pretend about the "particular tenets of Arius," I shewed you long ago^f, that yours differ not in any thing material from them. You are pleased to say, that by my "way of consequential deductions the Fathers of the Council of Nice, and all their Catholic predecessors, may with equal justice be charged with Arianism." You mean, I suppose, provided in drawing consequences, no regard be had to what is plain or obscure, right or wrong, true or false. Such a consequential way as this, never was my way; and, I hope, never will be: whether it be yours, we shall see. You are to prove, that the Council of Nice is chargeable with Arianism, upon my principles. I perceive, you are sanguine enough to undertake it; we are now to examine how you perform.

^e Supplement to the case of Arian Subscription, p. 313, &c. of this vol.

^f Defence, vol. i. p. 400.

^g See my Supplement, p. 325, &c. of this volume, where I justify my charging our adversaries with consequences, and also intimate in what cases such a conduct is allowable or otherwise.

I must abridge your long tedious train of argument, to bring the parts nearer together, and to save myself the trouble of transcribing. But I will take care that your argument shall not lose a tittle of its force or strength; having indeed none to spare.

“ The Council of Nice, by asserting that the Son was not (ποιηθεὶς ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων) made or formed out of nothing, but (γεννηθεὶς ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς) generated from the substance of the Father—confessedly, did not mean either, that the Son was (which is the first of Dr. W.’s two senses of the term individual) the same identical whole substance with the Father—or (which is the Doctor’s other sense of the term individual) that he was a homogeneous undivided part of that infinite and inseparable substance which is the Father’s—But their meaning evidently was, that as one fire is lighted from another without any division, abscission, diminution, &c. so the Son was generated from the Father without any division, abscission, &c. of the Father’s substance, or of his alone supreme authority and dominion over all. And this notion of theirs, because it supposes the Son to be—not the substance of the Father, but from the substance of the Father: and because it supposes the generation of the Son to be an act of the Father—and because it reserves inviolably to the Father his ἀθερρία, his alone supreme authority and dominion over all, which makes him to be in the absolute sense, the one God: therefore, I say, this notion Dr. W. is pleased to rank, among other things, under the head of Arianism.”

This is the consequential thing, which you have been pleased to bring forth. The sum is thus: If Dr. W. supposes the Son to be a part of the Father’s substance, (which he does not,) and if the Nicene Council denies the Father and Son to be one undivided substance, (which it doth not,) and if the Council supposes the eternal generation to be an act, in the sense of free choice, (which is a false supposition,) and if the Council supposes the Father alone to have supreme dominion over all, (which is another false supposition,) if these several false and groundless suppositions be evidently true; then Dr. W. by charging some persons with Arianism, who deserve it, has consequentially charged others also, who have not deserved it. That I may be certain of doing you justice, as to this marvellous thread of reasoning, I will come to particulars.

In the first place, where do you find me saying that the Son is either the "same identical" (that is, same, same) "whole substance with the Father," or an "undivided part of that substance which is the Father's?" I leave whole and parts^h to those gentlemen of strong imagination, who consider every thing in a corporeal way, under the notion of extension. All that I say is, that Father and Son are one undivided substance; which is also the sense of the Nicene Fathers. For,

2. Where do you find that the Nicene Council ever supposes the Father and Son not to be one and the same undivided substance? They say, ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας, from the substance of the Father: this is all you have to ground your cavil upon. But the Council supposes the Son to be both from the substance of the Father, and of the substance of the Father, and but one substance in both, because of the inseparable union and connection of both. The doctrine is plainly this, God of God, and both one God; light of light, and both one light; substance of substance, and both *one substance*ⁱ. This is the Catholic doctrine, which it is much easier to carp and cavil at, than to confute. I should take notice of your words, not ποιηθῆις ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, not made or formed out of nothing. Why do you here insert ποιηθῆις, and pretend to give the sense of the Council in a way wherein they never expressed it? Is it not to insinuate, that the Council imagined the Son to be made, or formed, only not out of nothing? One may believe that this was in your head, by your slyly remarking, presently after, that Tertullian, Origen^k, and Laetantius affirmed the same thing of angels and souls, as the Nicene Fathers did of the Son. Your report of every one of them is utterly false, (as shall be shewn in a proper place;) but were it true, what is it to the Nicene Fathers, who were wiser men than to countenance any such detestable doctrine? What they meant by ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς, is very plain from the Creed itself, and has been fully

^h Κυρίως Θεὸς ὡσπερ οὐκ ἔστι μέρος, οὕτως οὐδὲ ὄλον, ἐπεὶ τὸ ὄλον ἐκ μερῶν ἐστὶ. καὶ οὐκ ἐρεῖ λόγος παραδέξασθαι τὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεὸν εἶναι ἐκ μερῶν, ὡν ἕκαστον οὐ δύναται ὅπερ τὰ ἄλλα μέρη. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 18.

ⁱ Quemadmodum lumen de lumine, et utrumque unum lumen, sic intelligatur sapientia de sapientia, et utrumque una sapientia: ergo et una essentia, quia hoc est ibi esse quod sapere — Pater et Filius simul una sapientia quia una essentia, et singillatim sapi-entia de sapientia, sicut essentia de essentia. August. de Trin. lib. vii. cap. 1, 2. p. 855.

Consilium de consilio, et voluntas de voluntate, sicut substantia de substantia, sapientia de sapientia. Ibid. lib. xv. cap. 20. p. 994.

See other examples of the same way of speaking, collected by Petavius de Trin. lib. vi. cap. 10. p. 351.

^k See Origen fully vindicated in this respect by Huetius Origenian. p. 30, 93.

explained and vindicated¹ from misconstructions. The sum of what they intended was, that the Son was not from nothing, nor from any extraneous substance, but from the substance of the Father; as light streaming out from light, but without division, or abscission, or diminution; being eternally in the Father, as well as from him, and inseparably included with him. Indeed, the Arians invidiously charged them with making the Son a part of the Father's substance^m, as you also are pleased to charge me. Which is to me an argument that my notion is still the same with that of the Nicene Fathers, and yours not different from that of the Arians.

3. Where do you find that the Council ever supposes the generation of the Son to be an act, in your sense of act? The Council has not a word about act, that I know of: nor, if it had, would it be at all to your purpose. The question about act will depend upon another question, viz. Whether the Council intended an eternal or temporal generation? Upon either supposition, I can allow the generation to be an act; but not in your novel sense of act, in both cases. Suppose it eternal, then the generation was an act; but in the ancient sense of act and necessary agency: as the sun was supposed to act in generating rays; fountains to act in generating streams; the mind to act in generating thoughts; trees to act in generating branches; bodies to act in generating effluvia, vapours, or perfumes; the earth to act in generating fruits; and the like. No matter whether, in strictness, these kinds of generations should be called acts: they are such as the ancients called so; and when we are interpreting the ancients, we must attend to the ancient ¹ See my Defence, vol. i. p. 544, 545. Bull. D. F. p. 114. Athanas. p. 224, 895. Eusebius of Nicomedia may be an evidence of the meaning of ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας, (while he is endeavouring to expose it,) by what he uses as parallel, and what as opposite to it.

Parallel.	Opposite.
'Εξ αὐτοῦ, ἀπ' αὐτοῦ, ὡς ἂν μέρος αὐτοῦ, ἢ ἐξ ἀπορροίας τῆς οὐσίας.	Τῆς φύσεως τῆς ἀγεννήτου μὴ μετέχων.
"Ἐχειν τὴν ταυτότητα τῆς φύσεως.	"Ἐτερον τῇ φύσει καὶ τῇ δυνάμει.
Φύσις ἐκ τῆς φύσεως.	Κτιστόν.
	"Υπ' αὐτοῦ γεγονός.
	Βουλήματι γενόμενος..

Euseb. Nicomed. apud Theod. lib. i. cap. 6. p. 24.

Some of these expressions which Eusebius uses as parallel, are put invidiously and injuriously. But still, we may see what in the main was the Catholic sense of the phrase, through the false colours whereby he hoped to expose it.

^m See Arius's Letter. Apud Theod. E. H. lib. i. cap. 5. And Eusebius of Nicomedia. Theod. lib. i. cap. 6.

sense of words. Necessary acts were then called acts; and therefore no wonder if eternal generation was looked upon as an eternal act. But, suppose the Council intended only temporal generation, (as some have thought, and it seems not improbable,) then I readily allow it to be an act, even in your sense of choice; as much as was the Son's generation of the blessed Virgin. But then I insist upon it, that the Nicene Fathers maintained the Son's eternal and necessary existence, antecedent to the generation; which is a doctrine opposite to yours, as light to darkness.

4. In the last place, where do you find one word of the Father's alone supremacy of dominion in the Nicene decrees? This is purely a fiction of your own, without the least shadow of a reason for it. Do you find the Nicene Fathers telling you of a sovereign producing to himself a subject, or of a lord and master producing a servant? Is it subject of sovereign, very subject of very sovereign; instead of God of God, very God of very God? You will see that one is of the other, not that one is above the other. If the Father be there called Almighty, (παντοκράτωρ,) yet they understood the Son to be Almighty of Almighty, (παντοκράτωρ ἐκ παντοκράτορος;) as well as God of God: all perfections common to both, only not coordinately; the Father having his perfections from none, the Son having the same perfections from him; equal in every thing, but still deriving that very equality. If this be the αὐθεντία you speak of, the thing is true, but not pertinent; if you mean more, it may be pertinent, but it is not true; nor have you a syllable of proof for it, either in Scripture or antiquity.

We have now seen how well you have acquitted yourself in the consequential way, under this article; not quite so well, I think, as before in your charge upon me as denying the Father's divinity. I must do you the justice to say, that you can sometimes manage an argument to greater advantage: or if you could not, I should have made it my resolution not to exchange a word more with you. How you came to perform so much below yourself, here in your Preface, I know not; except it be, that your passions were more deeply engaged in this part than in the rest. To proceed.

4. A fourth head of complaint is, that I have "talked about calling in question a fundamental article of religion." I have so; and, I pray, where is the offence of so doing? Your

^a Παντοκράτορα ἐκ παντοκράτορος. ρεῖ, ἄρχει καὶ κρατεῖ καὶ ὁ υἱός. Ἀθανάσιος. Fid. p. 99.
 πάντων γὰρ, ὡν ἄρχει ὁ πατήρ καὶ κραfirst reason against it lies in these words ; “ as if the first article “ of the Creed was not as fundamental as the second.” But who are they that set the first and second articles at variance with each other, when for fourteen centuries, and more, they have agreed most amicably together ? Do not be surprised, when I tell you, that you are the men that impugn the first article, by impugning the second. I have learned from the first article, that God is a Father : which, in the sense of the Christian Church, and according to the intention of the compilers of the Creeds^o, supposes him to have a Son^p ; a coeternal, coequal, and coessential Son, of the same nature with him. And I readily submit the case to the pious and considerate reader to judge of, whether I, who, among the other perfections and glories of the Father, reckon this for one, that he has always had with him so great and so divine a Son^q, equal to himself ; or you, who, out of the abundance of your metaphysics, contrive to rob him of that superlative glory, shew the greater zeal and concern for the honour of God the Father. The Pagans, I know, thought it very much for the honour of their supreme God, to have other Gods under him. This they looked upon as an article of grandeur, and the very top of magnificence^r. But Christians never talked at this rate : they thought it most for the honour of the supreme Father to have a Son, equal to him in nature, and one God with him. You go on to another exception : “ As if an “ article’s being fundamental, was a reason why—even the “ most learned and able men should by no means be suffered to “ consider or inquire what this fundamental article is.” You have very little reason to use this kind of talk with me ; because, when I first entered into conference with you, my whole design and desire was, to have the thing amicably debated betwixt us, ^o See my Sermons, p. 138 of this volume : Bull. Judic. Eccl. p. 36, &c. ; Stillingfleet, Trin. cap. ix. p. 229.

^p Πατέρα τὸν Θεὸν ὀνομάσαμεν, ἵνα ἅμα τῷ νοεῖν πατέρα, νοήσωμεν καὶ τὸν υἱόν. υἱὸς γὰρ καὶ πατὴρ οὐδὲν ἐστὶ μεταξὺ τῶν ὄντων. Cyril. Hieros. p. 114. Bened.

Ecclesiae fides solum verum Deum Patrem confessa, confitetur et Christum. Hilar. p. 1006. Bened.

Patrem cum audis, Filii intellige Patrem, qui filius supradictae sit imago substantiae. Ruffin. Symb. p. 540.

^q Δόξα υἱοῦ ἐκ τιμῆς πατρὸς αὐτοῦ· καὶ πάλιν υἱοῦ δοξαζομένου, μεγάλως τιμᾶται ὁ τοῦ τοσοῦτου πατὴρ ἀγαθοῦ. Cyril. Hieros. p. 87. Bened.

Σέβομέν γε τὸν πατέρα, θαυμάζοντες αὐτοῦ τὸν υἱόν, λόγον, καὶ σοφίαν, καὶ ἀληθειαν, καὶ δικαιοσύνην, καὶ πάντα ἅπερ εἶναι μεμαθήκαμεν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὕτω δὴ καὶ τὸν γεννηθέντα ἀπὸ τοῦ τοιοῦτου πατρὸς. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 387.

Honor Filii dignitas sit Paterna ; et glorioeus auctor sit, ex quo is, qui tali gloria sit dignus, extiterit. Hilar. p. 832.

^r Onatus apud Stob. Eccl. Phys. cap. 3. Plotinus Enn. ii. lib. ix. cap. 9. p. 207.

and with equal freedom on both sides, in a private way, without troubling the press. And though the article I am defending be a fundamental one, yet it was never such to me, till I had well examined it: nor do I expect it should be such to you, without the like method. However, there is a great deal of difference between settling one's own private faith, and undertaking to publish and propagate the same among others. While a man pretends no further than to judge for himself, he ought to rest unmolested, to enjoy the freedom of his own private sentiments, wherein others are not concerned. But when he endeavours to draw disciples after him, the case is altered; and it then becomes the common concern of all that have truth at heart, and more especially of those who are the appointed guardians of the Christian faith, to be upon the watch against seducers, and to interpose their seasonable offices to prevent the growth of any dangerous error. There must be some public restraints to hinder conceited men from venting crudities; as well as a just and due regard to the interests of truth, if any man, with sobriety and modesty, has any new thing to offer. Where to fix the true medium between liberty and restraint is not my business here to inquire: I think, our governors in Church and State have already fixed it, beyond all reasonable exception. But to return.

Let those learned and able men you speak of consider and examine, that they may find out the truth; and when they have done, defend it. But if the result of their inquiries is the embracing and propagating of errors; be they ever so learned or able, they must be rebuked and reprov'd for it. What if a learned Jew or a deist, after examining and considering, thinks it right and just to reject, and openly to vilify the Christian revelation? May he not therefore be told that his labours have been ill laid out, and that his infidelity is a very great, a very unpardonable crime? And if another, after inquiry, sets himself publicly to oppose any momentous article of the Christian faith; it is the duty and the business of those that know better, and of those that are in authority, to stand up for the true religion, and to use all proper means for its preservation. What would have become of the Christian faith, if such learned and able men as Praxeas, Noëtus, Paul of Samosata, Photinus, Arius, Eunomius, Apollinarius, &c. had not been vigorously opposed, and expelled the Christian Church? Errors once entered have been sometimes kept in by the same methods, as truth hath been preserved ; just as the banks intended to keep out the waters, if once overflowed, serve afterwards to keep them in : which is yet no argument, I suppose, for having no banks at all, or for throwing all open to inundations. You add, “ as if taking great pains — to find out the sense and meaning of a doctrine, was “ calling in question the doctrine itself : ” which I have answered above. In your next words, you betray an unbecoming heat, which should be avoided always, if you desire to see clear. “ Wonderful,” you say, “ that the very foundations of all “ religion and of all truth should be thus turned into ridicule by “ men of learning, without their perceiving what they are doing ! ” A heinous and heavy charge ; not upon me, not upon a few private men, but upon the Church of Christ in all ages, and upon the best men of it. For, what is it, I beseech you, that you are here so severely declaiming against, under the opprobrious name, of “ turning all religion into ridicule ? ” I say, what is it, but the Church’s acknowledging that there are fundamentals in religion, and her defending those fundamentals, in such a way as Christ and his Apostles have taught her, against all opposers ? Be you ever so able or so learned, (which I dispute not,) yet we know, that if an angel from heaven comes to teach us any other doctrine than what we have received from Scripture, we have St. Paul’s warrant for pronouncing an anathema upon that and him. You will say, no doubt, that you have truth and Scripture on your side. Well : that is saying something, if you can make it good : it is the very point which we are going to try. In the mean while, argue not against the properest methods of defending and preserving the truth, (which are undoubtedly right and good, in the general,) but shew, if you are able, that there is something particular in the present case, to put a bar to the general rule.

5. The last article of complaint is, my “ artificially concealing “ from the reader the true and indeed only material point in “ question, and amusing him with matters of a quite different “ kind.” In this affected charge, (which, I am unwilling to say, you do not believe one word of,) I blame not so much the injuriousness of it, since it is too weak to do hurt, as the indiscretion. Might you not have been content to set out upon a new foot, and, as it were, silently and unobserved, to alter the terms of the question ; but you must begin with laying your sin at my door, and charging me with the very fault which you are, that instant, committing ? I will shew you, first, that my manner of stating the main question was right: and I shall afterwards tell you what I have to say to yours; which in reality (when stripped of its ambiguity) is not different from mine. All my labour and endeavour was, to bring the dispute to this short question, Whether the Son of God be a precarious being, that is, a creature or no? This was the only point I was concerned for; being that upon which all the rest turn. There therefore I laid the stress; making it my business to confute whatever I could find in Dr. Clarke's pieces tending to degrade the Son of God into precarious existence, or to make a creature of him. If this point be but once secured, that the Son is no creature, but necessarily existing; the Doctor may go on talking of supremacy, and whatever else he pleases; they are incidental points only, and must either fall of course, or else be understood in a sense consistent with the resolution of the other question.

You are sensible of this yourself; and therefore you all the way resolutely dispute with me the point of the Son's necessary existence, as much as the other point of the Father's supremacy: you are as resolute in denying the Son to be one God with the Father; you are scrupulous as to calling him Creator, and never directly assert his creating of the world by his own power, or his coeternity. In short, you dispute every thing with me that is pleaded to exempt him from the number of precarious beings, or creatures. Were it not for this, you should be permitted to talk of the Father's supremacy as much as you pleased, and to make sense of it at leisure. Indeed, the determining of the point of supremacy, and how it is to be held, depends entirely upon the other question; which is therefore the main question betwixt us. Do but allow me, that the Son is no creature, that he exists not precariously, but necessarily, that he is one God with the Father, that he is properly Creator, and by his own power, with other the like things; and you shall then go on, without let or hinderance, in your talk of the supremacy. Now then, will you please to answer me: Do you understand the supremacy in a sense which you believe consistent with the points which I maintain, viz. the Son's necessary existence, uncreatedness, &c.? If you do, the dispute is ended; go on and prosper with so Catholic a notion of the supremacy. Or do you understand the supremacy in a sense not consistent with those other points which

* See my Supplement, p. 324. &c. Clarke, and his disciples, that they do by immediate and necessary consequence make the Son a creature.

I maintain! If this be the case, (as I presume it is,) then do not pretend that those other points are not material; for, by maintaining them, I overthrow your pretended supremacy, as much as you, by maintaining the supremacy, design to overthrow the Church's faith: and so it matters not, whether the main question be put into your terms or mine; since both, in reality, come to the same thing. Only there is this difference in the case; my way of stating the main question is plain and clear; yours, obscure and ambiguous: mine is fitted to instruct and inform; yours, to perplex and confound a reader: mine is proper to bring the debate to a short and clear issue; yours, to protract and lengthen out a dispute: in a word, mine is sincere and open, like that of a man that knows his cause is good; yours is fallacious and disguised, as of one that is diffident of his cause, and is retiring behind the curtain. You will have the question put thus: Whether the Father alone hath supreme authority, sovereignty, and dominion over all? When this is stripped of ambiguity and chicane, I suppose it will fall into mine. You determine in the affirmative. The Son then is naturally a subject of the Father, and the Father is his sovereign Lord and Ruler. He has an absolute right over him, to call him to account, to reward him, if he does well, to punish him, if he does amiss. This all men understand to be implied in supreme dominion; a right and power over subjects, to compel, constrain, and punish, as occasion serves; and in short, to bridle them at pleasure. Is this your meaning? Pray then, where is the difference between saying it, and calling God the Son a creature?

And, do you imagine that you have any the least syllable of proof of such alone dominion, either in Scripture or antiquity? Yet there is certainly no medium between this and what I assert of the equality of Father and Son. They are either naturally and strictly equal; or else one is infinitely superior to the other, as God and creature. Well; be the consequences what they will, you are attempting to prove your point syllogistically after this manner:

“ If the Father never acts in subjection to the will of any other person, and every other person acts in subjection to his will; then the Father alone is the one supreme Governor of the universe.

“ But it is fact that the Father never acts in subjection, &c. and that every other person acts in subjection, &c.

“ Therefore, &c.”

This is the wonderful demonstration; lame and deficient in every part. To prove that the Father alone hath supreme dominion, &c. you should shew, not only that all other persons act in subjection, (for an equal may act in subjection to an equal, or even to an inferior, as our Lord acted in subjection to Joseph and Mary, and washed his disciples' feet.) but that they are really subject, and under his absolute power and authority. Your reasonings therefore on this head amount only to what the Schools call ignoratio elenchi; proving beside the question, or talking wide of the purpose. And how easy is it for a man to fill a book with quotations, as you have done, that can be content with any thing, however foreign to the question! You have proved, that the Son acted sometimes a ministerial part, or that he submitted to an inferior office: this is all that you have proved; and it is no more than I would have readily granted you, without quoting so much as a single Father for it. You are not advanced one tittle towards the proof of what you intend, that the Father and Son naturally have not one common dominion. I affirm that they have; and that at the very same time that the Son is executing any inferior office, he is still Lord of the whole universe, in common with the Father; and that their dominion over all is one and the same undivided dominion, as they are one God and one Lord. You would gladly slip upon us supremacy of dominion, instead of supremacy of order, or office. Instead of saying that the Father alone has his supreme dominion from none, you pretend that he alone has supreme dominion; to make two dominions where there is but one. You play with the ambiguous word authority, that you may have something to blind the readers with: while you quote Fathers who affirmed it in one sense, and you intend it in another. Auctoritas is often no more than paternitas, with the Latin Fathers, as auctor is pater: but you are wresting it to the sense of dominion. The like use you make of the equivocal word dignity; which is of order, or office, or dominion, or nature; and you artificially blend and confound all together. None, I hope, can be imposed upon by such weak fallacies, but they that want their faculties of discerning. Let the reader carefully distinguish three things, and he will then be able of himself to unravel all your pretences, and to throw off that studied confusion which you are labouring to introduce in a plain thing.

1. Supremacy of nature, or supremacy of perfection, is to be possessed of all perfection, and the highest excellency possible : and this is to be God. There is nothing of this kind but what is common to Father and Son ; who are therefore one God supreme. And as supremacy of dominion and sovereignty (properly so called) over all creatures (as soon as they exist) is included in it, and consequent upon it ; Father and Son have one common and undivided sovereignty over all ; the constant doctrine of antiquity.

2. Supremacy of order consists in this ; that the Father has his perfections, dominion, &c. from none ; but the Son from the Father. All that the Son has, is referred up to the Father, and not vice versa. This kind of supremacy is of the Father alone : and the Son's subordination, thus understood, is very consistent with his equality of nature, dominion, perfection, and glory, according to all antiquity.

3. Supremacy of office. This by mutual agreement and voluntary economy, belongs to the Father : while the Son out of voluntary condescension submits to act ministerially, or in capacity of mediator. And the reason why the condescending part became God the Son, rather than God the Father, is because he is a Son, and because it best suits with the natural order of Persons, which had been inverted by a contrary economy. These things being fixed and settled, there will be no difficulty in replying to any thing you have offered, or can offer in this cause. You may amuse us with Scripture and Fathers : but every man sees, before this time, where the whole pinch of the controversy lies ; you think the Unity of the Godhead, as we teach, is not consistent with the distinction of persons, order, and offices. While you pretend to be disputing against me, you are really disputing against the standing doctrine of the ancient churches, from some concessions which they made, and in which I agree with them. And your way is to wrest and strain some principles, maintained both by them and me, to a sense repugnant with their other known doctrines. If you can prove any thing, we are ready to hear you : if you cannot, it is high time to desist from an impracticable attempt, that can bring nothing in the end, but shame and confusion to as many as engage in it. I take no notice of your reflections upon my hardiness, as you call it, (in denying what no good Catholic ever affirmed,) and my metaphysical excursions, and my fixing names of reproach. It will be seen in the sequel who are most remarkable for hardiness, who make excursions, and who reproach, not their brethren only, and the whole Church of Christ, but the Lord of heaven and earth, the living God; to whom be honour and glory, now and for ever.

That the reader may not imagine our dispute to be any thing new, or that you have advanced any thing beyond what the ancient Arians and Eunomians vainly endeavoured in the same cause; I shall just give him a specimen of what some of the Fathers of that time answered to the same pretences which you are now reviving. When Eunomius had been magnifying the Father, as alone subject to none, on purpose to degrade and depress the Son, under the notion of a subject; the great Basil rebukes him, for thereby reducing God the Son to the condition of a creature, in these words: "Forasmuch as there are two " things, the creature and the Godhead, and the creature is " ordained to subjection and servitude, while the Godhead is " regnant and paramount; is it not manifest, that he that de- " prives (the Son) of the honour of absolute dominion, (δεσποτείας,) " and casts him down to the meanness of servitude, does at the " same time rank him with the rest of the creation^t?"

Gregory Nyssen thus more at large answers the Eunomian pretence, of the alone supremacy. I shall give it in English only, because of its length, and to save myself trouble.

" He (Eunomius) says, that the Father has no sharer (μερίτην) " in glory with him: wherein he says the truth, though he " knows not what he says. For the Son doth not share (or " divide) the glory with the Father; but he has the Father's " whole glory, as the Father has also the whole glory of the Son. " For thus he said, speaking to the Father, All mine are thine, " and thine are mine, John xvii.—He who is heir of all things, " who is Creator of the worlds, who shines out from the glory of " the Father, and together with it, and in himself, carries the " express image of the Father's hypostasis; he has all things " whatsoever the Father himself hath, and is also Lord of all " power. Not that the majesty passes away from the Father; " but it abides with him, and at the same time rests upon the " Son. For while he is in the Father, he is together with his " whole power, in the Father: and as he hath the Father in " himself, he must contain the whole power and authority of the ^t Δύο γὰρ ὄντων πραγμάτων, κτίσεως τι καὶ θεότητος· καὶ τῆς μὲν κτίσεως ἐν δουλείᾳ καὶ ἵπακοῇ τεταγμένης, ἀρχικῆς δὲ οὐσης καὶ δεσποτικῆς τῆς θεότητος· ὁ ἀφαιρούμενος τῆς δεσποτείας τὸ ἀξιωμα, καὶ εἰς τὸ τῆς δουλείας ταπεινὸν καταβάλλον, οὐχὶ δῆλός ἐστι καὶ διὰ τοῦτο συστοιχοῦντα αὐτὸν τῇ πάσῃ κτίσει δεικνύς; Basil. contr. Eun. lib.

ii. p. 73.

“ Father. For, he has the entire Father in himself, and not a “ part only: wherefore having the Father entire, he must have “ his authority also entire. What then does Eunomius mean “ by pretending that the Father has no consort in (power or) “ authority?—He says, there is one only God, Supreme Ruler “ (παντοκράτωρ). If he means a Father, by the name of Supreme “ Ruler, he says the same as we do, and nothing contrary: but “ if he means it of any Supreme Ruler that is not a Father; he “ may preach up circumcision, if he pleases, along with his other “ Jewish tenets: the faith of Christians looks to a Father. “ The Father indeed is all and every thing, he is Most High, “ Supreme Ruler, King of kings, and Lord of lords; whatever “ titles sound high or great, they are the Father’s own: and all “ things that are the Father’s belong to the Son. Allow but “ this, and we admit the other. But if, instead of a Father, “ he introduces another kind of Supreme Ruler; his doctrine is “ Judaism: or he strikes in with Plato’s sentiments. For they “ say, that that philosopher also taught that there is a certain “ supreme Creator and Maker of some inferior Gods. As there- “ fore a Jew or a Platonist, though he admits a supreme Governor, “ is yet no Christian, as not believing in a Father: so also Eu- “ nomius does but belie his profession, while, when his doctrine “ is either Judaism or Paganism, he pretends to the name of “ Christianity.”

I have recited thus much out of Gregory Nyssen, (who in the same place^u has a great deal more to the same purpose,) to give the reader a just notion of Christian and Catholic principles. For this acute writer has really hit the true point of difference between the Catholics and their adversaries; whether Pagans, Jews, or heretics. It lay chiefly in the acknowledging, or the not acknowledging a true and proper Father in the Godhead. Pagans, Jews, Sabellians, Samosatensians, Arians, Eunomians, &c. all denied it: while there was no true Catholic but strenuously contended for it. Hence it was manifest, that the Arians were the innovators, in endeavouring to introduce a Creator and a creature, a Sovereign and a subject, instead of a Father and a Son. They professed the relation in words, but in reality they disowned it. The considering God as a Father, in a just and proper sense, (as the ancients always did,) is breaking the neck of Arianism at once. It gives a quite different turn, from what they aim at, to all their pretences of the Father being the only God, the highest, &c. For none who believed God to have a Son, (properly so called,) could ever be fools enough to imagine that such expressions were intended in opposition to him. On the contrary, they always understood, that magnifying the Father was at the same time magnifying the Son too: their relation being so close and intimate, that whatever perfections belonged to one, must of course be supposed common to both. He who reads the Fathers that lived before or after the Council of Nice, with this key, will find them clear and consistent throughout; and will the less wonder at the exceeding great offence taken against Arius, for attempting to divide Father and Son; and indeed to divest the one of his Paternity, (according to the Catholic sense of it,) and the other of his Filiation. Fulgentius is a late writer, of the fifth and sixth centuries; but a judicious man, and well instructed in the true and ancient principles of the Christian Church; especially in regard to our present subject: wherefore I shall close this, with an account from him^x; not because of his authority, but because what he says is true and just, and very well expressed, in his comment on the Creed, written in opposition to the Arians of that time. The sum is this, that whatever high things are said of the Father in the Creed, are to be understood to belong equally to the Son: and there was no need of any more particular application, since the very name of Son is sufficient.

^u Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. Orat. i. p. 13, 14, 15.

^x Inaniter tibi visum est, male intelligendo, ad tuum sensum velle recitandam symboli retorquere, et inde præscribere sanctæ fidei Catholicæ, quia in symbolo non omnia dicta sunt de Filio, quæ sunt dicta de Patre: cum utique propterea plenitudo divinitatis, quantum oportebat, debuerit in origine commendari, quia non debuit aliter in prole cognosci. Cum enim quisque se dicit credere in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, hoc ipsum quod in Deum Patrem dicit, sicut in eo veritatem naturalis divinitatis, ita veritatem naturalis quoque Paternitatis, et ex hac veritatem naturalis etiam generationis ostendit.—Totum igitur

in se habet illa generatio divina, quicquid in se habet Dei Patris æterna substantia. Proinde sufficiebat ut diceretur de Patre solo, quicquid æqualiter intelligendum esset in Filio. Pater enim sic omnipotentem Filium genuit, sicut est ipse Pater omnipotens; sic universorum Creatorem, sicut ipse universorum Creator est; sic regem seculorum, sicut ipse rex seculorum est; sic immortalem et invisibilem, sicut ipse immortalis est et invisibilis. Omnia igitur, quæ Deo Patri dantur in symbolo, ipso uno Filii nomine naturaliter tribuuntur et Filio. Fulgent. Fragm. xxxvi. pag. 652, &c.

A SECOND DEFENCE OF SOME QUERIES

RELATING TO
DR. CLARKE'S SCHEME OF THE HOLY TRINITY :

IN ANSWER TO THE COUNTRY CLERGYMAN'S REPLY.

Compare the following Texts :

I am the Lord, and there is none else, there is no God beside me, Isa. xlv. 5.

Is there a God beside me? yea, there is no God; I know not any, Isa. xlv. 8.

I am God, and there is none like me; Isa. xlv. 9. Before me there was no God formed, neither shall there be after me, Isa. xliv. 10.

The Word was God, John i. 1.

Thy throne, O God, Heb. i. 8.

Christ came, who is over all, God blessed for ever, Rom. ix. 5.

Who, being in the form of God, Phil. ii. 6.

Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, Heb. i. 3.

QUERY I.

Whether all other beings, besides the one Supreme God, be not excluded by the texts of Isaiah, (to which many more might be added,) and consequently, whether Christ can be God at all, unless he be the same with the Supreme God?

YOUR general answer to this Query is, that the texts of Isaiah expressly and uniformly speak of a Person; and therefore all other persons, besides the He, the I, the Me, are excluded from being what He, who there speaks, declares himself alone to be. To which I reply, first, that the exclusive terms need not be interpreted with any such rigour: and secondly, that they ought not, because such interpretation leads you into absurdities which you have not been able to answer.

1. I say, exclusive terms are not always to be interpreted with such rigour, as to leave no room for tacit exceptions, such as reason and good sense will easily supply.

Matth. xi. 27. speaking of the Person of the Son, says, "No one knoweth the Father but the Son." Doth it therefore follow, that no Person but the Son, no, not the Father himself, knows the Father?

So, 1 Cor. ii. 11. "The things of God knoweth no one, but the Spirit of God;" no Person but he. Doth it therefore follow, that neither the Father nor the Son knoweth the things of God as much as the Holy Spirit?

Rev. xix. 12. it is said of the Son of God, that he had a name written, that "no one (οὐδείς) knew, but he himself." Doth it therefore follow, that neither the Father nor Holy Ghost knew it? See more instances of like kind in my fourth Sermon. I say then, that exclusive terms are not always to be interpreted up to the utmost rigour: and there are many reasons why they should not be so interpreted in this particular case; as I have shewn at large in the same Sermon.

2. I am next to observe, that such interpretation, in the present case, has led you into absurdities which you have not been able to answer. For, if the Son be excluded at all, by those texts of Isaiah, and others of like kind, he is entirely excluded. He cannot be another God, all other Gods being excluded by those texts; and you will not admit that he is the same God: since therefore he is not another God, nor the same God, it follows, upon your principles, that he is no God. That the texts exclude not only all other supreme Gods, but absolutely all other Gods, I prove, not barely from the force of the exclusive terms, but from the scope, drift, and intent of those texts; which was to exclude inferior as well as supreme Deities; and to leave no room for idolatry; which might be consistent with paying sovereign worship (to use your phrase) to the God of Israel. You take a great deal of pains to wind yourself off; or rather, to shew how much you can have to say, when you have nothing to reply. You tax me with quibbling in the word beings, as standing in the Query: which is a rebuke that comes late, now you are answering, not my Queries, but my Defence. However, since all other Gods are by me shewn to be excluded, and not all other Persons, the expression is just, and no other but what should be. You observe, next, that the Son cannot be the same God with the Father on any but Sabellian principles: which is begging the question. It is sufficient to say, that the Fathers in general (as we shall see hereafter) acknowledged both to be one God, and not one Person. You cite Eusebius^a as your voucher, that the words of Isaiah, (“besides me there is no God,”) denote one Person. When you look again into Eusebius, you will find that the words are Marcellus’s not Eusebius’s: though little depends upon them either way. You have another piece of a quotation from Eusebius, p. 4, where he makes it Sabellianism, to say that the Father and Son are ἐν καὶ τ’ αὐτὸν, one and the same thing. Add, as Eusebius there does, ὀνόμασι μὲν διαφόροις, &c. under different names only; and then I condemn it for Sabellianism, as well as Eusebius. Your quoting Tertullian in this case is very extraordinary; when every body knows that he makes Father and Son one God, in the very same treatise where he is confuting the Sabellians; that is, the Praxeans, men of the same principles with those of Sabellius. Was Tertullian then a Sabellian? Ridiculous! You have a further shift, (but still in the way of retorting, not answering,) that I myself when I come to explain, do not in reality make the Son to be the same God, but only to be in his substance undivided. Add, from the Father as his Head, and consubstantial with him; and then I insist upon it, that he is therefore the same God with the Father, upon the certain and standing principles of all Catholic antiquity.

But what becomes of the difficulty all this while, which it concerned you to answer? You were to tell us, whether the Son (since he is not the same God) be another God, or no God. You say, he is not another God, in that sense wherein the Father is: that is your meaning. But if he be received as an object of worship, he is then God in such a sense, as none but the God of Israel was, and must either be the same God, or another God. By your argument, the Jews might have admitted as many inferior Gods as they pleased, consistent with the first commandment; for that would not have been admitting other Gods, because not Gods in the same sense. So you leave a gap open to all manner of idolatry. You say further, that the texts do not exclude Moses from being a God unto Pharaoh, nor magistrates, nor angels, from being Gods. But the texts do exclude Moses, and angels, and magistrates, and all creatures whatever, from being adorable Gods: and therefore they can be no more than nominal Gods; that is to say, no Gods. The Jews might have had nominal Gods what they would: but they were to pay worship to one only; which comes to the same as having no other Gods but one. The receiving more adorable Gods than one, is making another God. Well then, will you cast off the worship of God the Son, or will you frankly own that you make of him another God? You discover a great inclination to own him for another God: you do not scruple in one place, to call him another Lord^b: and yet, when you come to the pinch, you pause, you hesitate, you are at a loss what to resolve on: another God, or two Gods, sounds very harsh; no Scripture, no Fathers ever ventured upon it; and Christian ears cannot bear it. What then must be done? You at length put on an air of assurance, and intimate to us, (p. 6,) that an inferior God besides the supreme is not another God; and that two Gods, in the nature of language, must signify two coordinate Gods, or Gods in the same sense. But, as the nature of language hitherto has been always different, and you can give no examples in any writings, sacred or profane, of this new kind of language; that any two Gods, and each of them received and adored as a God, were not two Gods, as well as one God, and another God^c; you must give us leave to think that this kind of answering is really saying nothing. All the heathens that acknowledged one supreme God, over many inferior deities, will, by your way of reasoning, stand clear of the charge of admitting more Gods than one. Strange! that you should appeal to the nature of language, in a case where the language of mankind, Jews, Pagans, and Christians, hath been always contrary.

^a Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. ii. cap. 19. p. 133.

You have two or three references at the bottom of the page; which I pass over, as not coming up to the point in hand. If you have any countenance from Eusebius, it will amount to no more than that great man's contradicting himself, and the Catholics before him, as well as those of his own time: his authority therefore, especially for a plain blunder and solecism in language, will be very inconsiderable, and weigh little with us.

As to my argument, concerning Baal, and Ashtaroth, and the Pagan deities ; you answer it by telling me, you know not how to excuse it from profaneness. You should have said, (for that the reader will see to be plainly the case,) that you knew not how to evade its force. A rebuke is much easier than a solid reply ; which was here wanted. Tell me plainly, if the first Commandment excludes only other supremes, and not inferior deities ; why Baal, or Ashtaroth, or any Pagan deity might not have been worshipped along with the God of Israel, without any violation of that Commandment ? The Law indeed says, you shall have no other Gods before, or besides me ; that is, according to you, no other supreme God, or Gods. How then are inferior and subordinate deities, how many, or whatsoever, at all excluded by that law ? Here lay the pinch of the difficulty ; which, because you could not take it off, you are pleased to dissemble, and to run to another point. You represent it, as if I had intended a comparison between Christ and the Pagan deities ; and you remind me of the difference betwixt them ; which is only solemn trifling. I made no comparison, nor did my argument imply any : but this is plain, that the texts which exclude only supreme deities, do not exclude any that are not supreme, or not considered as supreme : and so you, by your interpretation of those texts, have, in a manner, voided and frustrated every law of the Old Testament against idolatry. If the very mention of this evident consequence be a thing so profane, what must your doctrine be, that involves this very consequence in it ? I shewed you, in my Defence, vol. i. p. 412. how, upon your principles, any man might easily have eluded every law of the Old Testament, relating to worship, or sacrifice. One plain and direct answer to that difficulty would have been more satisfactory to the reader, than all your studied diversions.

^b Page 197.

^c See the Preface to my Sermons, p. 5, &c. of this volume.

You proceed to a tedious harangue about mediatorial worship ; which shall be considered in its place, but is here foreign, and not pertinent. You should have shewn how, by the force of these texts, (which declare the Unity, and ascribe the worship to God alone,) inferior deities can be excluded, but upon this principle, that the texts are to be understood as excluding all other Gods absolutely, and not with your restriction of all other supremes only. You have indeed contrived a way, such as it is, to bring in the worship of Christ : but it is by making so wide a breach in the laws of the Old Testament, that had it been discovered by the Jews of old, there had been room enough to let in all imaginable kinds of inferior deities. They might easily have pleaded, that the texts were intended of one supreme God ; and that he alone was to be worshipped as such : but as to subordinate deities, as the texts did not reach them, so neither need they be scrupulous about the worship of them. This is the pressing difficulty, to which, after sufficient time to consider, you have not been able to make any tolerable answer. Wherefore it may fairly be concluded, that the argument is unanswerable ; and that this Query having borne the test, will now stand the firmer. You seem to think that you have done your part, when you have found out a reason why Christ should be worshipped : but the main thing wanting was, to give a reason (upon your principles) out of the Law, why any inferior deities, along with the supreme, might not be worshipped also. You do well to plead for the worship of Christ : it is a doctrine of the Gospel, and I think of the Law too. But you had done better, if you had contrived to make the Law and the Gospel hang together ; and had not entirely frustrated the main intent and design of one, in order to maintain the other.

You have some observations, p. 9, 10, 11, which seem to me foreign to the business of this Query : they may deserve some notice in a more proper place.

QUERY II.

Whether the texts of the New Testament (in the second column) do not shew, that he (Christ) is not excluded, and therefore must be the same God.

THE sum of my argument is, that since all other adorable Gods are excluded by the texts of Isaiah ; and yet it appears from the same Scripture, that Christ is adorable, and God, it must follow, that he is not another God ; but the same God with the Father.

This Scripture argument I confirm from testimonies of antiquity, declaring,

1. That other Gods only, (not God the Son,) or idols, are excluded by the texts which concern the Unity.
2. That God the Son is not another God.
3. That he is the same God, or one God, with the Father.
4. That the one God of Israel (confessedly God supreme) was Christ, speaking in his own Person ; being God, not as God's representative, but as God's Son, of the same substance with the Father.

This is the sum of what I endeavoured to make out, under the second Query. I am first to consider what you have to offer, in order to take off the force of my evidence; and next, to examine any counter-evidence which you may have produced to balance mine. In this method I design to proceed: and let the reader, who desires to see distinctly into the merits of the cause, take it along with him. My Scripture argument was formed upon the following texts: John i. 1. Heb. i. 8. Rom. ix. 5. Phil. ii. 6. Heb. i. 3. Let us now examine them in their order.

JOHN i. 1.

My argument here is, that the Λόγος, Word, is called God, not in any improper, or loose, figurative sense; but in the proper and strict sense of the word God. Therefore he is not excluded among the nominal Gods; therefore he is one and the same God with God the Father.

You reply, p. 15, that God the Word, is not God in as "high a sense as the Father himself." The reason why he is not, or cannot, you assign, because by him, or through him, "all things were made; which cannot," you say, "be truly affirmed of the one supreme God and author of all." On the contrary, I affirm, that since "all things were made by him," he is not of the number of the things made; therefore no creature; therefore God in the strict sense; and, since God is one, the same God.

The most which you can justly infer from the Father's creating all things by or through Christ, is only this; that they are two Persons, and that there is a priority of order betwixt them; not that the Son is not God in as high a sense, or in the same sense as the Father.

What you cite from Eusebius signifies little; except it be to expose the weakness of a great man: whose authority is of no value with me, any further than he is consistent with himself, and with the Catholics before, and in, and after his own times. Not to mention that his authority is late; and I may almost as well produce Athanasius, Hilary, and the elder Cyril against you, as you produce Eusebius against me: who, after all, is so different from himself, in different places of his works, that, upon the whole, it is extremely difficult to know what judgment to make of him. To return to John i. 1.

In my Defence, vol. i. p. 281, I give the reader a view of your real and intended construction of St. John. The Word was with the one supreme God, another God inferior to him, a creature of the great God.

This representation, you say, is unjust, p. 45. It seems, your own real sense, when put into plain terms, is too frightful for yourself to admit. You endeavour therefore to wrap it up, and disguise it, in these words: "The Word was with the one " supreme God and Father of all; and the Word was himself a " divine Person,—in subordination to the one supreme God, and " by him did the one supreme God and Father of all make all " things." All the difference between this and mine is, that I spoke out your whole sense, and you insinuate it, or mince it; being ashamed to say all that you mean. This divine Person you speak of, you own to be God, neither dare you say otherwise; you do not allow him to be the same God; therefore your meaning is, and must be, that he is another God: so far my representation is manifestly just. But further, this same divine Person you, with your whole party, deny to be necessarily existing; therefore you make of him a precarious being, which is nothing but another name for creature; therefore he is, upon your principles, a creature of the great God: and so my interpretation, or representation of your reserved and real meaning, is true and just to a tittle. Your next attempt is, not to represent, but to corrupt and mangle my construction of St. John. I refer the reader to my Sermons, for a full view of my sense in that particular. Let us see what you can make of it by the help of chicane and cavilling. "The Word was with the one " supreme God—himself the same one supreme God, (yet " meaning another supreme God in the same undivided substance,) " and by the same one supreme God, did the one supreme God " make all things." That is to say, "The Word was with the " Father the one God supreme, and was himself, though not the " same Person, yet one and the same God^d supreme, and by the " Son, who is God supreme, and Creator^e, the Father, supreme " God also, made the worlds." What is there absurd or contradictory in all this? I have given you three Ante-Nicene writers (Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, and Hippolytus) interpreting St. John in the same way as I do. Shew me one that ever ^d Dei verbum, imo magis ipse Deus. Iren. p. 132.

* Ἐν γὰρ ἄμφω, ὁ Θεός. ὅτι εἶπεν, ἐν ἀρχῇ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος. Clem. Alex. p. 135. conf. p. 86.

Εἰ δὲ οὖν ὁ λόγος πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, Θεὸς ὦν, τί οὖν φήσευεν ἂν τις δύο λέγειν θεός; δύο μὲν οὐκ ἐρῶ θεός, ἀλλ' ἡ ἓνα, πρόσωπα δὲ δύο, &c. Hippol. contr. Noët. cap. xiv. p. 15.

^e Mundi enim factor, vere verbum Dei est. Iren. p. 132.

Θεὸς καὶ δημιουργός· πάντα γὰρ δι' αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο, καὶ χωρὶς αὐτοῦ ἐγένετο οὐδὲ ἓν. Clem. Alex. p. 156.

interpreted him in your manner. You are forced to disguise the matter, and to give your meaning but by halves; because you know you have not one Ante-Nicene or Post-Nicene Catholic writer on your side, so far as concerns your construction of St. John. You pretend, that I make of the Son another supreme God; not the same God. But as this is only said, not proved, it must pass for nothing but a trifling begging of the question. Prove you that, as plainly as I have proved that you make the Son another God, a creature God; or else acknowledge the difference between a just representation and an injurious misrepresentation. So much for John i. 1. The second text is,

HEB. i. 8.

My argument here is, that Christ, who in his text is declared to be God, must be the same God with the Father, because Scripture admits but one God; and expressly declares against every other God. To which you reply, p. 13, that the Apostle sufficiently explains himself by the words, "God, even thy God;" verse the ninth: and that I "ought not to have omitted it." But I had abundantly answered that pretence, by interpreting the words of Christ considered in his human capacity, referring to Dr. Bennet for a vindication of it: which is what you ought not to have omitted. This text will come up again under Query III.

ROM. ix. 5.

From this text I form my argument after the same manner as in the two former. You pretend it "dubious, whether it may not possibly be meant of the Father;" referring to Dr. Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 75. 2nd edit. On the contrary, I maintain, that no reasonable doubt can be made of its being meant of Christ; referring to such as have proved it^s.

But allowing the words to be intended of Christ, (which is no great courtesy,) you have still something further to say, viz. that the meaning of this text "is distinctly explained," 1 Cor. xv. 27. and Eph. i. 22. But how explained? so as to make the Son another God? I see nothing like it: neither does God's being the head of Christ, nor his "putting all things under him," conclude any thing against what I assert, that both together are one God supreme. See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 139. A distinct personality, together with a supremacy of order, or office, are sufficient to account for all, upon my principles. You remind me of Hippolytus's comment on this text, in these words: "Christ is God over all: for thus he himself says plainly, All things are given me "from the Father^h." But why did you overlook the words immediately following; "Who being over all God blessed, was be"gotten (of the Virgin), and becoming man, is God for ever?" You see, Hippolytus supposes him to have been God before the commencing of his mediatorial kingdom, before the time when all things were said to be given him; and therefore Hippolytus may reasonably be supposed to mean no more, than that all things were intrusted with him, because he, so great and so divine a Person, was the most proper to sustain so great a charge. The consideration thereof leads back to his antecedent dignity and excellency, which qualified him for so great and so endearing a charge. Wherefore it was right in Hippolytus to make mention of it, in order to confirm what was said, Rom. ix. 5, that he is "over all God blessed for ever." Epiphanius, who cannot be suspected of Arianizing, scruples not to argue upon the same text, just as Hippolytus does, and almost in the same wordsⁱ. And they did not quote Matt. xi. 27, (or Luke x. 22,) to shew how, or when, Christ was appointed God; they had no such thoughts, believing him to have been always God; but to confirm what was said in Rom. ix. 5. so as to shew withal, that he was distinct from the Father, not the same Person with him, as Noëtus pretended.

^f Defence, vol. i. p. 307.

^s My Sermons, p. 138 of this vol. Grabe, Not. in Bull. D. F. sect. ii. cap. 3. Grabe's Instances of Defects,

&c. p. 24. Second Review of Doxologies, p. 15, 16. Dr. Calamy's Sermons, p. 38.

You bring up Hippolytus^k again, to confirm, as you imagine,

^h Οὗτος ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς ἐστίν, λέγει γὰρ οὕτω μετὰ παρρησίας· πάντα μοι παραδέδοται ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς. Ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς εὐλογητὸς γεγένηται, καὶ ἄνθρωπος γενόμενος Θεὸς ἐστὶν εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. Hippol. contr. Noët. p. 10.

ⁱ Ὁ ὢν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεός, θαυμαστῶς διηγείται. οὗτος γὰρ ὁ ὢν, ἐστὶν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεός. ἐπειδὴν γὰρ αὐτὸς διδάσκει ἡμᾶς, λέγων· πάντα μοι παρεδόθη ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς μου· διὰ τοῦτο ἐπὶ πάντων ἐστὶ Θεός. Epirh. Hær. lvii. p. 487.

^k Καλῶς εἶπεν παντοκράτορα Χριστόν — μαρτυρῶν γὰρ Χριστὸς ἔφη, πάντα μοι παραδέδοται παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πάντων κρατεῖ, παντοκράτωρ παρὰ πατρός κατεστάθη Χριστός — πάντα ὑποτέτακται αὐτῷ ἕκτος τοῦ ὑποτάξαντος, πάντων κρατεῖ, αὐτοῦ δὲ ὁ πατήρ, ἵνα ἐν πᾶσιν εἰς Θεὸς φανῇ, φὶ τὰ πάντα ὑποτάσσεται ἅμα Χριστῷ. φὶ τὰ πάντα πατήρ ὑπέταξε παρὲξ ἑαυτοῦ. Hippol. contr. Noët. p. 10.

Καὶ πάλιν φησὶν ἐν τῇ Ἀποκαλύψει· ὁ ὢν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς, καὶ ὁ ἐρχόμενος παντοκράτωρ, καλῶς κατὰ πάντα εἶπε· καλῶς γὰρ εἶπε, πάντα μοι παρεδόθη ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς μου — ἐπὶ πάντας μὲν ὢν Θεός, ἔχων δὲ ἴδιον αὐτοῦ πατέρα, &c. Epirh. Hær. lvii. p. 488.

Omnipotens Christus appellatur. Si enim omnia Patris Filii sunt, et ut ipse loquitur in Evangelio, "data est mihi "omnis potestas in cælo et in terra;" "omnia mea tua sunt;" cur non etiam omnipotentis nomen referatur ad Christum: ut sicut Deus Dei, et Dominus Domini; sic omnipotens omnipotentis Filii sit? Hieronym. in Isa. tom. iii. p. 13.

Nec

your fancies upon 1 Cor. xv. 27. Hippolytus answering the objection of Noëtus, drawn from Rev. i. 8, where Christ is styled παντοκράτωρ, (and from whence Noëtus inferred, that Christ must be the very Father himself incarnate;) I say, Hippolytus, in his answer, hath the words which you recite: "If therefore all things are put under him, excepting him that did put all things under him, he hath dominion over all, and the Father over him; that in all things may be made appear one God, to whom all things are subject, together with Christ, to whom the Father hath subjected all things, himself only excepted."

Hippolytus here speaks not of the Λόγος, but of God incarnate, Christ Jesus; shewing that Christ, since his incarnation, has been subject to the Father, and will be so also, in his human capacity, after he has delivered up his mediatorial kingdom. From whence it is manifest, against Noëtus, that the Father himself was not incarnate, was not Christ; for then whom could Christ be subject to, but to himself? which is absurd. This I take to be the sense of Hippolytus, and his full sense; his argument requiring no more: besides that, it is not consistent with Hippolytus's other writings, to make the Son, in his highest capacity, subject to the Father, and under his dominion. For, not to mention that Hippolytus, in this very tract, plainly teaches that the Son is of the same substance with the Father, and one God with him, (as shall be shewn more fully hereafter,) he concludes his treatise with ascribing glory and dominion to the Son with the Father and the Holy Ghost. Now it would be very absurd thus to join sovereign and subject together, ascribing the same glory and dominion to both¹. And in the words going before, speaking of Christ, he says, "He being God, became man for our sakes, to whom the Father subjected all things^m." Which shews that all his discourse before, relating to the subjection of things to the Son, and of the Son to the Father, is after his incarnation; and is to be understood of the θεάνθρωπος, the God-man; who, as God, had all things under him; as man,

Neo mirum si Christus dicatur omnipotens, cui "tradita est omnis potestas in celo et in terra." Et qui dicit; "omnia quæ Patris sunt, mea sunt." Si autem omnia, id est, Deus ex Deo, Dominus ex Domino, lumen de lumine; ergo et ex omnipotente omnipotens: neque enim fieri potest ut, quorum una natura est, diversa sit gloria. Hieron. in Zach. tom. iii. p. 1718.

¹ Αὐτῷ ἡ δόξα καὶ τὸ κράτος ἅμα παρὰ καὶ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι, &c. Hippol. contr. Noët. p. 20.

^m Οὗτος ὁ Θεός, ὁ ἄνθρωπος δι' ἡμᾶς γεγονώς, ᾧ πάντα ὑπέταξεν πατήρ. Ibid.

was himself under the Father. To confirm which, we may observe that Hippolytus interprets Christ's praying to the Father, as being done οικονομικῶς. These are his words: "Christ made all these prayers economically, as man, being himself very Godⁿ." Does this look as if Hippolytus believed God the Father to have sovereign dominion over Christ, in his highest capacity? Might not any subject of God have prayed to God, as such?

You say (p. 16.) that the "doctrine which I allege this text (Rom. ix. 5.) to prove, is a contradiction to the whole stream of antiquity." And here again you quote Hippolytus, (the spurious and interpolated Hippolytus, according to you,) as a just interpreter of the ancients. It seems, you are willing to admit him, when he says any thing that looks for your purpose. The words you chiefly value are παντοκράτωρ παρὰ πατρὸς καταστάθη Χριστός: Christ was constituted Ruler over all by the Father. On occasion whereof, let me observe a thing to you which you are not aware of; that though the ancients scrupled not to say, that Christ was constituted by the Father, Ruler, or Lord, or even Creator, (according to Prov. viii.) or any thing coming under the notion of office, (the Father being ever looked upon as first in order, and, in virtue thereof, the Fountain of every office, according to his own voluntary appointment,) yet you will never find it said by the ancients, that the Father constituted Christ a God, or appointed him to be God. Which observation is highly deserving your special notice; as it may discover to you a fundamental flaw in your hypothesis, and may shew that you have took a great deal of pains with the ancients, upon a very wrong view, and (give me leave to add) to very little purpose. Had you found ever an ancient testimony, declaring that Christ was constituted God over all, you would have done something: the rest are impertinent, and come not up to your point. The word God was never looked upon as a word of office or dominion, but of nature and substance: and hence it is, that the ancients never speak of Christ's being constituted God. One use indeed you may make of your observation from Hippolytus, that παντοκράτωρ, though it be often in the LXX the rendering of יהוה צבאות Lord of hosts, yet the Fathers sometimes used it in a lower sense, such as comes not up to the strength of the

ⁿ Ταῦτα δὲ πάντα Χριστὸς οἰκονομικῶς ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἤθετο, Θεὸς δὲ ἄληθινός. Ἄλλ' ὡς φθάσας εἶπον, ἡ μορφή

τοῦ δούλου ἦν ταῦτα λέγουσα καὶ πάσχουσα. Hipp. contr. Jud. p. 3.

Hebrew : and therefore I readily acknowledge to you, that such passages of the Fathers as style Christ παυτοκράτωρ are not pertinently alleged to prove him to be the Jehovah in the strict sense of that name, according to those Fathers. But enough of this. Upon the whole, it may appear that you have not been able to take off the force of Rom. ix. 5.

PHIL. ii. 6.

My argument from this text runs thus: He that was in the form of God, that is, naturally Son of God, and God, and as such equal with God^o, is God in the same high sense as the Father himself is; and since God is one, the same God. To this you only reply, (p. 14,) that “nothing can be more directly against “me” than this text. Which decretory sentence, void of all proof, and coming from a man fallible as myself, deserves no further notice. You have a great deal more upon this text from p. 50 to p. 64, but put together in so confused a manner, with a mixture of foreign matters, that I shall not spend time in pursuing you; but refer the reader to my fifth sermon upon this very text: where all that you have material is already answered, or obviated. Your incidental pleas and pretences relating to Novatian, and other ancients, will be answered in their place. I proceed to another text.

HEB. i. 3.

My argument here is, that he who is “the brightness of his Father’s glory, and the express image of his person,” cannot reasonably be supposed to be excluded among the nominal Gods. But if he be not excluded, he is included in the one supreme God. Therefore, &c. Now, in page the fourteenth, you are content only to say, which I can as easily gainsay, that this text is directly against me. But you resume it again, p. 65, out of method; and thither I must attend you. There you talk much of by his Son, and by whom, and of the Father’s being his God: which kind of reasoning I have sufficiently answered above. But you add, that “the image of the one supreme God cannot be “himself that one supreme God, whose image he is.” But what mean you by the words “that supreme God?” Plainly, “that “supreme Father, who is God:” and thus I readily allow, that he cannot be himself that very Person whose express image he is. But why do you thus perpetually quibble with the phrase “that “supreme God;” as if there were two Gods, this and that, and making the supreme God a name for one Person only? This, you must be sensible, is taking the main point for granted; and poorly begging of the question: which is a thing beneath the character of an able disputant. To proceed: I had been pressed with a passage of Eusebius, relating to this text; and I returned a clear and full answer to it in my Defence, vol. i. p. 285, 286. You bring another passage out of Eusebius, in his Demonstratio Evang., though you know that even Bishop Bull, who otherwise is a defender of Eusebius, yet makes no account of what he wrote before the Nicene Council: as neither do I. I shall not therefore give myself the trouble of attending you, as often as you fill your margin with that author. I had said however, what was true, in relation to the passage brought against me before, that by δύο οὐσίαι, Eusebius might mean no more than what Pierius, Methodius, Alexander, and Tertullian, meant by the like expressions; that is, two Persons. To which you reply, (p. 68,) that I, “by adding what the ancient writers constantly “disclaimed,” (viz. an equality of supreme authority in the two Persons,) “do necessarily make, what they never did, two supreme Gods, however inseparable or undivided, as to their substance.” But you are under a double mistake; first, in imagining that the ancients did not acknowledge an “equality of “supreme authority,” as much as I do; and next, in fancying that they and I (for the charge affects both, or neither) thereby make “two supreme Gods.” The ancients, and I conformable thereto, always suppose a headship, or priority of order of the Father, referring his consubstantial Son to him as his head. And “this origination in the divine Paternity” (as Bishop Pearson speaks^p) “hath anciently been looked upon as the assertion of “the Unity: and therefore the Son and Holy Ghost have been “believed to be but one God with the Father; (N. B.) because “both from the Father, who is one, and so the Union of them.” If you ask how the authority, or dominion, (for so I understand you here, and not as authority sometimes signifies Paternity, and auctor is Pater;) I say, if you ask how it can be supreme in both, if it be original here, and derivative there; I answer, because it is the same in both, only existing in a different manner:

^o See my fifth Sermon, p. 102, &c. of this volume.

^p Pearson on the Creed, p. 40.

Φύσις δὲ τοῖς τρισὶ μία, Θεός ἕνωσις δὲ ὁ πατήρ ἐξ οὗ καὶ πρὸς ἃν ἀνάγεται τὰ ἐξῆς. οὐχ ὡς συναλείφεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὡς ἔχεσθαι. Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxii. p. 520.

In illa quippe una substantia Trinitatis, Unitas est in origine, æqualitas in prole, in caritate autem Unitatis æqualitatisque communio. Fulgent. ad Monim. lib. ii. cap. 11. p. 37.

neither are there two dominions or two sovereignties, any more than two essences, substances, or Gods. The question from whence the Son's dominion is, is one point, and how great, or how high, is quite another. If you ask from whence the Son's dominion is, I say from the Father, as his essence also is: if you ask from whence the Father's dominion is, I say, from none, as I say also of his essence. But if you ask me, what, or how great, or how high; I say *equal*⁹ in both, and indeed one undivided same, just as the essence is. Thus your charge of two Gods, which you so frequently repeat, through your abounding in false metaphysics, is proved a fallacy, and a groundless calumny.

You proceed to examine my authorities for my construction of Heb. i. 3. one by one. This being but a very small and incidental part of the controversy, I could be content to pass it over, for fear of being tedious to the reader. But I will endeavour to be as short as possible. You begin with rebuking me for citing Origen out of Athanasius; who lived, you say, above a hundred years after Origen's death. It was not quite a hundred when Athanasius wrote the piece from whence I cited the passage. But no matter. I question whether you can bring any thing of Origen's, that is of better, or indeed so good authority; considering how carefully Athanasius's Works have been preserved, how negligently most of Origen's, and how much they have been corrupted; as the best critics allow. Will you produce me any MSS. of Origen, above the age of Athanasius? Or will you assure us that later scribes were more faithful in copying than he? To pass on; you think however that the passage cited from Origen is "nothing to my purpose;" it does not shew that the Son is the one supreme God. But it shews enough to infer it, though it does not directly say it. It shews that, in

⁹ Æqualem ergo Patri credite Filium; sed tamen de Patre Filium, Patrem vero non de Filio. Origo apud illum, æqualitas apud istum. August. Serm. cxi. tom. 5. p. 681.

Quod si dixeris, eo ipso major est Pater Filio, quia de nullo genitus genuit tamen æqualem; cito respondebo, imo ideo non est major Pater Filio, quia genuit æqualem, non minorem. Originis enim quæstio est, quis de quo sit: æqualitatis autem, qualis aut quantus sit. August. tom. viii. p. 718.

Cum sit gloria, sempiternitate, virtute, regno, potestate, hoc quod Pater est; omnia tamen hæc non sine auctore, sicut Pater, Deus ex Patre tanquam Filius, sine initio et æqualis habet: et cum ipse sit omnium caput, ipsius tamen caput est Pater. Ruffin. in Symb.

Cum Pater omnia quæ habet gignendo dedit, æqualem utique genuit, quoniam nihil minus dedit: quomodo ergo tu dicis, quia ille dedit, ille accepit, ideo æqualem Filium Patri non esse; cum eum cui data sunt omnia et ipsam æqualitatem videas accepisse? August. contr. Maxim. lib. ii. cap. 14. p. 707.

Origen's opinion, the image must be perfectly like the prototype; both alike invisible, and like eternal^r: so far he is express; and his premises infer a great deal more, by parity of reason. Wherefore Origen, in his book against Celsus, carries the argument up to a formal equality in greatness. His words are^s, "The God and Father of all is not, according to us, the only one that is great. For he hath imparted even his greatness to his only begotten, begotten before the creation: that he being the image of the invisible God, might keep up the resemblance of the Father, even in greatness. For it was not possible for him to be (if I may so speak) a commensurate and fair image of the invisible God, without copying out his greatness."

Now to me it seems, that this and the other passage of Origen are both very much to my purpose. For Origen was never weak enough to imagine that there were two Gods, equal in invisibility, in eternity, in greatness: but that the Father and Son, thus equal to each other, were together the one God supreme. If you have any passages to allege to the contrary, out of Origen's less accurate, or perhaps interpolated works, they are by no means to be brought in competition with those I have cited: besides that most of them may admit of a fair and candid construction, as meaning no more than that the Father is naturally prior in order to the Son, or in office superior by mutual concert and agreement.

Nor shall I think myself obliged (which I mention once for all) to answer such testimonies as have been before completely answered by Bishop Bull; unless you have something new to add upon the subject. We shall have more concerning Origen in another place.

You proceed to Dionysius of Alexandria, (p. 71,) whom I had also cited in relation to Heb. i. 3. You call it citing at second hand, because out of Athanasius. May not any writings whatever be almost with equal justice said to be cited at second hand? They must be conveyed to us by some hand or other: and we cannot be more certain of any parts of old writings than we are

^r Εἰ ἔστιν εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ἀοράτου, ἀόρατος, εἰκὼν. ἐγὼ δὲ τολμήσας προσθεῖην ἂν, ὅτι καὶ ὁμοίτης τυγχάνων τοῦ πατρὸς, οὐκ ἔστιν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν. Orig. apud Athan. p. 233.

^s Οὐ μόνος δὲ μέγας καὶ ἡμᾶς ἐστὶν ὁ τῶν ὄλων Θεὸς καὶ πατήρ· μετέδωκε γὰρ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τῆς μεγαλειότητος τῆ μονογενεῖ καὶ πρωτογένει πάσης κτίσεως· ἵν', εἰκὼν αὐτὸς τυγχάνων τοῦ ἀοράτου Θεοῦ, καὶ ἐν τῷ μεγέθει σώζη τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ πατρὸς· οὐ γὰρ ὁμοί' ἦν εἶναι σύμμετρον (ἵν' οὕτως ὀνομάσω) καὶ καλῆν εἰκόνα τοῦ ἀοράτου Θεοῦ, μὴ καὶ τοῦ μεγέθους παριστάσαν τὴν εἰκόνα. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 323.

of these parts especially which were long ago cited, higher up than any MSS. now reach. But enough of this trifling. You bring up again the stale pretence about what Basil and Photius said of Dionysius: which has been answered over and over, by considerable writers^t. This is what you ought not to have concealed from your reader. You observe further, that Dionysius does not draw the same inference from the text that I do, viz. that the Son is the "one supreme God." Very true: neither should I draw that inference, if I was only proving the eternity of God the Son; but I should stop there. However, if there be occasion to advance further, nothing is easier than from the co-eternity to deduce all that I desire, viz. that the Father and Son are together the one God supreme: which is indeed the plain certain doctrine of the same Dionysius, in the same treatise. "The undivided Monad we extend to a Triad, and again the "undiminished Triad we contract into a Monad^u." Now, I beseech you, what is his Monad, but the one God supreme? And what does it consist of, but of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, according to this excellent writer?

My next authority was Alexander of Alexandria^x; whom, you say, I cite out of Athanasius. You should have said, out of Montfaucon's edition of Athanasius's works, into which he has inserted this epistle of Alexander. The reader perhaps otherwise may suspect that this was again at second hand, as you would call it, from Athanasius. Well, what have you to say to the thing? It amounts, you think, to no more than what Arius himself might have said, viz. that the Son is not (ἀνόμοιος τῇ οὐσίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς) of unlike substance to the Father. You should have added the other words by me cited, εἰκὼν τελεία καὶ ἀπαύγασμα τοῦ πατρὸς, the perfect image and shining forth of the Father. Which I believe neither Arius nor yourself would be willing to admit. However, Arius had denied that the Son was ὁμοιος τῇ οὐσίᾳ, of like substance with the Father; as appears from that very epistle^y. And neither Arius nor you would have said ἀπαύγασμα τοῦ πατρὸς, but ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης τοῦ

^t Bull. Def. Fid. Nic. p. 142. Mr. Thirlby's Answer to Mr. Whiston's Suspicions, p. 91, &c. Ruinart. Act. Mart. p. 181. Le Moyne, Not. ad var. Sacr. p. 235. Athanasius de Sententia Dionysii.

^u Οὕτω μὲν ἡμεῖς εἰς τε τὴν τριάδα τὴν μονάδα πλατύνομεν ἀδιαίρετον, καὶ τὴν τριάδα πάλιν ἀμείωτον εἰς τὴν μον-ἀδα συγκεφαλαιούμεθα. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. vol. i. p. 255.

^x Πῶς ἀνόμοιος τῇ οὐσίᾳ τοῦ πατρὸς, ὁ ὢν εἰκὼν τελεία καὶ ἀπαύγασμα τοῦ πατρὸς; Alexand. Alexand. Ep. inter Op. Athanas. p. 399.

^y Among Arius's tenets, this is one. Οὐτε δὲ ὁμοιος κατ' οὐσίαν τῷ πατρὶ ἔστιν. Ibid. p. 398.

πατρός, which kind of expression Dr. Clarke contends for in opposition to the other. You proceed to cite a pretty large passage from Alexander's other epistle in Theodoret, to shew, as you pretend, that "he has nothing agreeable to my notion;" though the whole epistle is exactly agreeable to my notion, and indeed contains it. Alexander no where says, with you, that the Father alone has "supreme authority, sovereignty, and do"minion:" he was too wise and too good a man to divide the Son from the Father. He expresses their inseparability^z in all things, in very full and express terms; together with the Son's necessary existence^a, and supreme divinity^b; blaming the Arians for laying hold of Christ's acts of submission, and condescension, in order to sink and lessen it. All you can find in this writer that looks for your purpose is, that the prerogative of unbegotten belongs to the Father, (which I also constantly maintain,) and that the Son was neither unbegotten, nor created, but between both: which Alexander observes, in opposition to the Arians, who pretended there was no medium, but that the Son must be either unbegotten or a creature. You cite part of this passage, but omit what would have shewn fully the sense of the author; which runs thus:

"For these inventors of idle tales (the Arians) pretend, that we, who reject their impious and unscriptural blasphemy against Christ, as being from nothing, assert two unbegotten Beings: alleging, very ignorantly, that one of these two we must of necessity hold; either that he (Christ) is from nothing, or that there must be two unbegotten Beings. Unthinking men! Not to consider the great distance there is between the unbegotten Father, and the things created by him out of nothing, (as well rational as irrational,) betwixt which two comes in the intermediate onlybegotten nature of God the Word, by whom the Father made all things out of nothing^c."

^z Ἀλλήλων ἀχώριστα πράγματα δύο, τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱόν, &c. Alexand. Epist. Ap. Theod. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 12. Μεταξὺ πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ οὐδέν—διάστημα, οὐδ' ἀκριτινὸς ἐννοίας τοῦτο φαντασιῶσαι τῆς ψυχῆς δυνάμενης. Ibid.

^a Ἄτρεπτον τοῦτον καὶ ἀναλλοίωτον ὡς τὸν πατέρα, ἀπροσδεῖ καὶ τέλειον υἱόν—μόνῳ τῷ ἀγεννήτῳ λειπόμενον ἐκείνου. p. 18. Τὸ γὰρ ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης μὴ εἶναι λέγειν, συναίρει καὶ τὸ πρωτότυπον φῶς, οὐ ἐστὶν ἀπαύγασμα. εἰ δὲ καὶ ἡ εἰκὼν τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐκ ἦν αἰεί, δῆλον ὅτι οὐδὲ οὐ ἐστὶν εἰκὼν, ἔστιν αἰεί. p. 14.

^b Ἡ υἱότης αὐτοῦ κατὰ φύσιν τυγχάνουσα τῆς πατρικῆς θεότητος, &c. p. 14. Τῆς ἀνωτάτω καὶ ἀρχῆθεν αὐτοῦ θεότητος, p. 16.

^c Φασὶ γὰρ ἡμᾶς οἱ φληγάφων ἐφευρεταὶ μύθων, ἀποστρεφόμενους τὴν ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἀσεβῆ καὶ ἀγραφον κατὰ Χριστοῦ βλασφημίαν, ἀγεννητα διδάσκειν δύο, δυοῖν βῆτερον λέγοντες δεῖν εἶναι οἱ ἀπαίδευτοι, ἢ ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων αὐτὸν εἶναι φρονεῖν, ἢ πάντως ἀγεννητα

I see nothing in this passage, but what I can heartily assent to; understanding by nature, person, as Alexander himself understood it; which Valesius observes. One thing the reader may remark, that the main principle upon which you and your friends found all your opposition to the doctrine of a coequal and coeternal Trinity, is no other than what you have borrowed from the ancient Arians; and which Alexander, in this passage, severely condemns; namely, that God the Son cannot be God in the strict and proper sense, unless he be unoriginate and self-existent, as the unbegotten Father himself; there being, as you conceive, no medium between self-existence, in the highest sense, and precarious existence: that is, in plain words, (though you love to disguise it,) between being unbegotten and being a creature. And thus we have done with Heb. i. 3. Some Post-Nicene writers I had added, not to "make a show," as you frowardly and falsely suggest; but, as you very well knew, to correct your wonder, and your representing it before as strange, and new, to offer this text in proof of Christ's divinity.

You have not been able, we see, to invalidate the force of those few texts, laid down in this Query, with design to prove that Christ is not excluded, by any texts of the Old Testament, or New, from being one God with the Father, but necessarily included in the one God supreme. To these I might add many other texts, signifying that the Father and Son are one; that the Son is in the Father, and the Father in him; that he who hath seen one, hath therein seen the other also; that the Son is in the bosom of the Father, and as intimate as thought to mind; that all things which the Father hath are the Son's; and that whatsoever the Father doth, the Son doth likewise; that they are represented as one temple, Rev. xxi. 22. and as having one throne, Rev. xxii. 1. and as making one light, Rev. xxi. 23. These and many other considerations, suggested in Scripture, serve to confirm and illustrate the same thing. But it is now time to examine your pretended counter-evidence drawn from Scripture: after the discussion of which, we may come regularly to our inquiry into the sense of antiquity upon this head.

You had produced John xvii. 3. 1 Cor. viii. 6. Eph. iv. 6. which prove that the Father is styled, sometimes, the one God, λέγειν δύο· ἀγνωσύντες οἱ ἀνάσκητοι, ὡς μακρὸν ἂν εἴη μεταξύ πατρὸς ἀγεννήτου, καὶ τῶν κτισθέντων ὑπ' αὐτοῦ ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, λογικῶν τε καὶ ἀλόγων. ὃν μεσιτεύουσα φύσις μονογενῆς, δι' ἧς τὰ ὅλα ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐποίησεν ὁ πατήρ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου, &c. p. 17, 18.

See Bull, sect. iii. cap. 9, n. 11. Animad. in Gilb. Clerke, p. 1027.

or only true God; and that he is God of the Jews, of Abraham, &c. I asked, how those texts proved that the Son was not? You say, (p. 26,) “very plainly.” Let us hear how. You add, “Can the Son of the God of Abraham, (Acts iii. 13.) be himself that God of Abraham, who glorified his Son?” But why must you here talk of that God, as it were in opposition to this God, supposing two Gods; that is, supposing the thing in question? If I allow that there is a this God and a that God, or two Gods; you can prove, it seems, that two Gods are not one God. Very ingenious! But if I tell you that this divine Person is not that divine Person, and yet both are one God; the quibble is answered. You are very often at this kind of play: and therefore it may be here proper to say something more to it. Let us make trial of the like argumentation in another case. It is the Doctor’s principle, as hath been observed, that the divine substance is infinitely extended, and yet the same substance every where. Let us now argue much after the same manner as you do against me; this divine substance here on earth is not that divine substance which fills heaven: for this and that cannot be the same. It is but repeating the argument, and one may prove that the Divine Being, according to the Doctor, consists of an infinite number of different substances, no two parts whatever being the same substance. Such is the force of your logic, by the help of this and that. But if the Doctor, on the other hand, can allow that the substance may be the same, where there is a distinction of this and that; then give us leave to take the benefit of the Doctor’s own principles; and to conclude in the present case, that Father and Son may be one substance, one Being, or one God, notwithstanding the distinction of this Person and that Person. Having once fully answered your quibble, you will not, I hope, expect that I should do it again and again, as often as you get into this trifling way. It will be sufficient just to hint to the reader, that you are again playing, as usual, with this and that; and so to dismiss it. Now let us proceed. You ask further, upon Acts iii. 13, “Can the one “supreme God be exalted or glorified by another?” In answer to which I refer you to my fifth Sermon. You add, is it not true, that “the less is blessed of the greater?” But what has benediction to do with exaltation and glorification? I am weary of answering such things.

You come to take off the answer I had made to such texts as style the Father the only God, &c. I had said, he was not so styled in opposition to the Son, or to exclude him from being the one God. That is, say you, "The Father, though expressly distinguished, is still both Father and Son." That is your mistake: we do not say, that in these, or the like instances, both persons are included in the term Father; but that the exclusive terms, alone, or only, are not to be so rigorously interpreted, as to leave no room for tacit exceptions. To make this a little plainer to you.

Rev. xix. 12. it is said of the Son, "He had a name written, which οὐδείς, no person, knew but himself." This was not said in opposition to the Father, or as excluding him from that knowledge: for, it is still tacitly supposed, that he knew as much as the Son; and no question could be made of it. This is not including Father and Son under the term Son; but is speaking of one only, abstracting from the consideration of not excluding the other. I had said, that the Father is primarily, not exclusively, the one true God. You do not understand primarily: I am sorry for it. First in order, first in conception, God unbegotten and proceeding from none, as distinguished from God begotten and proceeding. You add, that "when one person is in any respect declared to be the only, &c. he must needs be so, exclusively of all others, in that sense wherein he is declared to be the only, &c. otherwise there is no certainty or use in language." That is to say, since no one knoweth the Father, but the Son, the Father must be excluded from knowing in the same, or in so high a sense: and if no one knoweth the things of God but the Spirit, both Father and Son are excluded from knowing in so high a sense, or in the same sense. And if no one knew the name written but the Son himself, both the Father and the Holy Ghost must be excluded from knowing; "otherwise there is no certainty or use in language."

And if Christ be styled by the primitive Fathers, as he often is, (see my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 96.) the only Judge, the only Lord, the only God, the only King; the Father must be excluded from being Judge, Lord, King, or God, in such a sense as those authors intended of God the Son: "otherwise there is no certainty or use in language." But I think the use of language and custom of speech, in all authors I have met with, has gone upon this rule, or maxim, that exclusive terms are always to be understood in opposition only to what they are opposed to, and not in opposition to what they are not opposed to: and there is both use and certainty enough in language, in this way, so long as men are blessed with any tolerable share of common sense, and are but capable of understanding the design, drift, or purport of any speaker or writer. I see where your confusion lies: and if you will bear a while with me, I will endeavour to help you out of it. I consider the matter thus: the God of Israel (be it Father, or Son, or both, or the whole Trinity) is styled the one God, God in the strict and emphatical sense of the word God, in opposition to creature-Gods; which are none of them Gods in the same sense of the word God. Here you will observe that I lay the emphasis upon the sense of the word God: and in this very highest and most emphatical sense of the word, I suppose as well Son and Holy Ghost, as the Father, to be God.

Again, the Father may be emphatically styled the only God, because of his emphatical manner of existing. Here I lay the whole emphasis upon the manner of existing, existing from none. Either Son or Holy Ghost is God in the very highest sense, in the same sense of the word God, but not in the same emphatical manner. If therefore the emphasis be laid upon the sense of the word God, every person of the three is emphatically God, in opposition to creature-Gods: but if the emphasis be laid upon the manner of existing, the Father only is God in that emphatical manner, and for that very reason is most frequently styled, in Scripture and antiquity too, the only God. I perceive, you do not distinguish between being God in a different sense of the word God, and being God in a different manner, though in the same sense of the word: and hence arises your perplexity upon this head. I will give you one example, out of many, which may help to illustrate the case. The Father is Spirit, and the Son is Spirit; but yet the Holy Ghost is emphatically the Spirit. Not that he is Spirit in any higher, or any different sense of the word Spirit; but upon other accounts, the name of Spirit is emphatically and more peculiarly attributed to him. In like manner, the Father is God, the Son God, and the Holy Ghost God; yet the Father is emphatically the one God. Not that he is God in any higher, or any different sense of the word God: but upon other accounts, (either as he is first known, or as being most universally acknowledged^d, or chiefly as being first Per- sic illos Christus alloquitur: “Est Pater meus, qui glorificat me, quem vos dicitis quia Deus vester est, et non cognovistis eum.” Itaque de hoc ipso Deo, quem Judæi animo capiebant, son^e, and head of the other two,) the name of God, or only God, has been emphatically and more peculiarly appropriated to him. These things being cleared, and set right, let us now pass on. What you have, p. 27, 28. about the Son's being sent, considered even in his divine nature, I readily admit, and never doubted of. Neither do I dispute but that he that sends, is for that very reason greater than him that is sent; greater in respect of office voluntarily entered into; and greater in respect of natural order of priority, which made it proper for one to submit to the inferior office rather than the other. And therefore I have not scrupled, after Cyprian, Novatian, Athanasius, Basil, and others, in my Sermons^f, to admit that the Son is greater than the Holy Ghost; of which, if you please, see a full and brief account, in a book referred to in the margin^g.

^d Quin et illud observatione dignum est, Judæos per id tempus, ut erant rudes et occæcati, solum Deum agnovisse quem Patrem suum esse Christus docuerat—idcirco Joh. viii.

Your testimonies therefore upon that head might have been spared, as containing nothing contradictory to me: unless perhaps Eusebius, or the Council of Sirmium (neither of which are of any great authority with me) might strain the notion rather too far; as it is certain you do.

You go on to 1 Cor. viii. 6, where you say the Son is in the most express words excluded. Excluded from being one God with the Father? Where? Shew me the express words, if you can. I say, the Father is there emphatically styled the one God; and the reason of it is intimated, because of him are all things; whereas in respect of the Son, they are only by him: which shews a difference of order betwixt them, in existing and operating. And this is all you can make of 1 Cor. viii. 6. However, as all things are by the Son, as well as of the Father; it appears from that very passage, that they are both one Creator, one joint-cause of all things. But of this text I have said more in my Sermons^h. You wonder I should not see in 1 Cor. viii. 6. "that if the one Lord is included in the one God," (there spoken of, you should have added,) "the whole reasoning of the Apostle is quite taken away." But it is necnon Judaizantes hæretici plerique, ad quos deducendos vel refutandos Johannes ista scribebat, loqui sic necesse habuit, ut diceret verbum erat πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, hoc est apud illum Deum, quem vos, O Judæi et hæretici, solum novistis. Petav. Dogm. Theol. tom. v. part. 2. p. 352. lib. xvi. cap. 4.

^e Salvo enim Filio, recte unicum Deum potest determinasse, cujus est Filius. Non enim desinit esse qui habet Filium ipse unicus, suo scilicet nomine, quotiens sine Filio nominatur. Sine Filio autem nominatur cum principaliter determinatur ut prima persona, quæ ante Filii nomen erat proponenda, quia pater ante cognoscitur, et post patrem filius nominatur. Tertull. contr. Praz. cap. 18.

^f Sermon VI. p. 122 of this vol.

^g Leo Allatius's Notes upon Methodius, p. 102. in Fabricius's second volume of Hippolytus.

^h Sermon II. p. 51, 52, &c. of this vol.

easy to answer, that one God there is taken personally: and so I do not pretend that it there stands both for Father and Son, but for Father only; as one Lord is also taken there personally for the Son only. Nevertheless, the giving the name sometimes to one singly, is no argument that the same name may not also justly belong to both together. On the contrary, it is certain, that if both are joined in the same one common Godhead, either of them singly has a right to be called the one God, not excluding the other from the same right.

What you add about Sabellianism, I pass over here as foreign. Your quotation from Bp. Pearson is shamefully abusing your reader, while you conceal what would have shewn that the Bishop's notion was diametrically opposite to yours. I have set down his words aboveⁱ. As to Origen's way of solving the Unity, it will be seen hereafter to be directly contrary to yours; as are also the Ante-Nicene Fathers in general, as will be seen presently. Eusebius I reckon not with the Ante-Nicenes; unless you will take in Athanasius too, who has two treatises written before any books now extant of Eusebius. What I had said of Novatian, stood corrected in my two later editions of my Defence, which you might have been so fair as to look into. I say, if Novatian did not mean that Christ was God in the same sense with the Father, and only God as well as the Father, it will be hard to make 'out the sense or connection of his inference^k from John xvii. 3. His reasoning is plainly this; that when our Lord said, "They might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent," his joining himself to the Father in that manner shews that he must be God also. The strength of his argument lies only in the conjunction and: there are but two constructions of it; either thus, Know thee, and also know Jesus Christ, (according to which there is nothing like an argument, at least not according to Novatian,) or else thus, Thee the only true God, and also Jesus Christ. Thus indeed the text does afford an argument of Christ's being God, and only God too. For it comes to this,

ⁱ Page 417.

^k Si noluisset se etiam Deum intelligi, cur addidit, et quem misisti Jesum Christum, nisi quoniam et Deum accipi voluit: quoniam si se Deum nollet intelligi, addidisset, et quem misisti hominem Jesum Christum; nunc autem neque addidit, nec se hominem nobis tantummodo Chris-tus tradidit, sed Deo junxit, ut et Deum per hanc conjunctionem, sicut est, intelligi vellet. Est ergo credendum in Dominum, unum verum Deum, et in eum quem misit Jesum Christum consequenter: qui se nequaquam patri, ut diximus, junxisset, nisi Deum quoque intelligi vellet. Novat. cap. 14.

that the Father, and also Christ, is the only true God. And thus Ambrose^l reasons upon that text, much after the same way with Novatian: as also do Athanasius^m and Austinⁿ. Wherefore I do not see that I have at all misrepresented the sense of Novatian. What you further pretend from other parts of his treatise is by no means made out: all being easily reconciled upon the foot of the Son's subordination as a Son, or his voluntary condescensions, without the least diminution of his supreme authority, naturally and essentially adhering to him. But Novatian shall be more distinctly and accurately considered in the sequel. You tell me, p. 36, that the Nicene Creed professes the Father to be the one God; as if any one questioned it, or thought it of any weight in the controversy! Do not I also profess the same thing? You add further, that even the Post-Nicene writers referred the title of ὁ μόνος ἀληθινὸς Θεός, the only true God, to the Father only, (which is a mistake^o;) but what if they did? Then they reserved some peculiar titles to the Father, by way of eminency, to distinguish the first Person of the Godhead: and that is all. And if the Post-Nicene writers, notwithstanding their reserving some peculiar and eminent titles to the Father, yet believed all the three Persons to be the one God; why should the reserving of the same, or like titles to the Father, among the Ante-Nicenes, be made any argument against their having the same faith with those that came after? What you say of Epiphanius, (p. 37.) that he understood the words τὸν μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεόν, in John xvii. 3.

^l "Ut cognoscant te solum verum Deum, et quem misisti Jesum Christum;" conjunctio illa Patrem utique copulavit et Filium, ut Christum verum Deum a majestate Patris nemo secernat: nunquam enim conjunctio separat. Ambros. de Fid. lib. v. cap. 1. Compare Hilary, p. 815.

^m Athanas. Orat. iii. p. 558.

ⁿ "Et quem misisti Jesum Christum." Subaudiendum est, "unum verum Deum; et ordo verborum est, "ut te et quem misisti Jesum Christum cognoscant unum verum Deum." August. de Trin. lib. vi. cap. 9. p. 849.

Petavius remarks, that Novatian's was the same with St Austin's. Petav. de Trin. lib. ii. cap. 4.

^o I think it not worth while to search particularly for a thing of little or no weight. But so far as I remember, the title of only true God is very often applied by the Post-Nicene writers to all the Persons together; though perhaps rarely to any single Person, except the Father. Two instances of the latter may here suffice.

Ὁ γὰρ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος μόνος Θεός ἀληθής, διὰ καὶ μονογενής διὰ τὸ μόνος εἶναι Θεός ὡς ὁ πατήρ. Athanas. in Psal. Nov. Collect. p. 83.

Est ergo solus et verus Deus Filius; hæc enim et Filio prærogativa deferatur. Ambros. de Fid. lib. v. cap. 2. p. 556.

As to the want of the article, it is of no moment, since the words without the article are as full and expressive of the Catholic sense of the Son's divinity as possible.

of the Father only, is true; but you are prodigiously out in your account, when you pretend from the same Epiphanius, that $\delta \alpha\lambda\eta\theta\iota\omega\delta\varsigma \Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, the true God, in 1 John v. 20, "was in his time universally understood of the Father." Athanasius quotes the words seven times; constantly understanding them of God the Son: Basil applies them in the same manner^p. So also do Ambrose, Jerome, Faustinus, and Didymus. These were all contemporaries of Epiphanius. And I have not yet met with so much as one ancient writer that ever understood those words in 1 John v. 20. of God the Father. Cyril of Alexandria, Austin, Fulgentius, Vigilius, Eugenius, and the rest that wrote in the age next to Epiphanius's, interpret the text the same way: and if Epiphanius did otherwise, he is very singular in it, and his judgment of very little weight, against so many considerable authors his contemporaries. But it is as wild a consequence as ever was drawn, that because Epiphanius did not insist upon this text, where he had occasion, therefore all the other Fathers, (though we have their own words to vouch the contrary,) understood that place of God the Father. Mr. Whiston, whose zeal sometimes transports him, yet did not care to come up to your lengths in this matter; being content only to say, that "Epiphanius was utterly a stranger to the Athanasian exposition ^q:" which perhaps may be very true; and to the Arian exposition also. For I will frankly own, I am inclinable to suspect, that Epiphanius made use of some faulty copy which had not the word $\Theta\epsilon\delta\varsigma$, but $\alpha\lambda\eta\theta\iota\omega\delta\varsigma$ only; though I have not observed that any other Greek writer had any such faulty copy. But it is certain, that some Latins read, hic est verus, et vita aeterna. Hilary^r for one: and probably Faustinus, though the present editions have Deus: and there is a Latin treatise among the supposititious pieces ascribed to Athanasius^s, which reads the text the same way. The author, probably, Idatius Lemicensis, about the year 458.

You have something more to say on 1 Cor. viii. 6. in page 38. But, I think, I need not add any thing to what I have before said, referring also to my Sermons.

The next text we are to consider is Eph. iv. 6. "One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all:"

^p See the places referred to, Serm. VI. vol. ii. p. 133.

^r Hilarius, p. 908. ed. Bened.

^q Whiston's Reply to Lord Notingham, p. 35. Append. p. 47.

^s Athanasii Opera Suppos. p. 608. ed. Bened.

a passage which, I said, had by the ancients been generally understood of the whole Trinity. Upon which you say, "a man must have a strange opinion of the ancients, who can think so." Your reason is, because he is there distinguished from the one Spirit and the only Lord. And what if the one Lord and one Spirit be there first distinctly named, I see no absurdity in afterwards mentioning and summing up the three Persons in the one God, under a threefold consideration of above all, through all, and in all. But we are not now inquiring into the sense of the text, but into the sentiments of the ancients upon it, whose testimonies I have now given in one view in the margin. As to Irenæus, you deny that he understands the text of the Trinity; referring to Dr. Clarke's Reply to Mr. Nelson, p. 71. In return for which I refer to "True Scripture Doctrine continued," p. 67, 103. Nor is there any thing more absurd in this construction of Irenæus, than there is in his often reckoning the Son and Holy Ghost to the Father, as being his very self in a qualified sense. Indeed, nothing is more common than for the head of a family, suppose Abraham, to be understood in a stricter or larger sense; either as denoting his own proper person, or as denoting himself and all his descendants considered as contained in him, and reckoned to him. There is therefore nothing strange or absurd in it, if the ancients sometimes considered God the Father, the Head of both the other Persons, either in a more restrained, or more enlarged signification: it is fact that they did so, as will be seen presently.

You proceed to Hippolytus, and speak of his spuriousness with as much confidence, as if you were able to prove it: of which more in the sequel. You tell me also that "he is against me;"

† Unus Deus Pater ostenditur, qui est "super omnia, et per omnia, et in omnibus." Super omnia quidem Pater, et ipse est caput Christi: per omnia autem Verbum, et ipse est Caput Ecclesiæ: in omnibus autem nobis Spiritus, &c. Iren. p. 315.

Οικονομία συμφωνίας συνάγεται εἰς ἓνα Θεόν, εἰς γὰρ ἐστὶν ὁ Θεός. Ὁ γὰρ κελεύων πατήρ, ὁ δὲ ὑπακούων υἱός, τὸ δὲ συνερίζον ἄγιον πνεῦμα. Ὁ δὲ πατήρ ἐπὶ πάντων, ὁ δὲ υἱός διὰ πάντων, τὸ δὲ ἄγιον πνεῦμα ἐν πᾶσιν. ἄλλως τε ἓνα Θεόν νομίσαι μὴ δυνάμεθα, εἰ μὴ ὄντως πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ καὶ ἁγίῳ πνεύματι πιστεύσωμεν. Hippol. contr. Noët. p. 16.

Εἰς Θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ κηρύττεται, ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων, καὶ διὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐν πᾶσιν ἐπὶ πάντων μὲν ὡς πατήρ, ὡς ἀρχὴ καὶ πηγὴ, διὰ πάντων δὲ διὰ τοῦ λόγου, ἐν πᾶσι δὲ ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ. Athanas. p. 676.

Diversitas autem præpositionum, in quibus dicitur; "unus Deus, et Pater omnium, qui super omnes, et per omnes, et in omnibus," diversam intelligentiam sapit. Super omnes enim est Deus Pater, quia Auctor est omnium. Per omnes Filius, quia cuncta transcurrit, vaditque per omnia. In omnibus Spiritus Sanctus, quia nihil absque eo est. Hieron. in locum, tom. iv. part. 1. p. 362.

though I think he is clearly for me, and that the Father who gives orders, the Son who executes, and the Holy Ghost who finishes, are, with him, one God, as plainly as words can make it, both before and after: which I leave to the learned reader to judge of. Only I may add, in confirmation of Hippolytus's comment on Eph. iv. 6. that he^u, as well as Tertullian^x and Irenæus, considers the Father sometimes in a restrained sense, for the Person of the Father, and sometimes in a larger, as containing both the other Persons. Neither is Athanasius against me, as you pretend, but directly for me, when he is justly translated, without your interpolations. "In the Church, there is preached one God, who is above all, and through all, and in all. Above all, as Father, as Head, and Fountain; and through all by the Word; and in all by the Holy Spirit." You, by putting in he in one place, and his twice, have endeavoured to pervert the author's true meaning; as if Athanasius had been speaking of the Father all the way, when the one God is his subject, and he is shewing how the one God is considered in the several Persons of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

What you have further in page 40, 41. betrays either such strange confusion of thought, or such a peculiar talent at misrepresenting, that I hardly know what to say to it. But I must make some short strictures upon it. I had said, some texts are meant of Christ as Mediator; upon which you gravely tell me, that the one Mediator is not a part of Christ, but the same Christ, the same Person incarnate, and Mediator in respect of both natures. I hope you will remember this, when we come to speak of mediatorial worship, which by this account will appear to be strictly divine worship; since a Mediator is God, as well as man. But that by the way. I must however observe, that a Mediator is considered two ways, by nature or by office, as the Fathers distinguish. He is Mediator by nature, as partaking of both natures, divine and human: and Mediator by office, as transacting matters between God and man. The submitting to this office is a great instance of the Son's condescension; and if any low things be said of him considered as executing an inferior office, voluntarily undertaken, they affect not his real inherent dignity, or his essential equality in all things with the Father.

^u Τὸ δὲ πᾶν πατήρ, ἐξ οὗ δύναμις λόγος. Hipp. p. 14.

^x Unus omnia, dum ex uno omnia, per substantiæ scilicet unitatem. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 2.

Pater tota substantia est; Filius vero derivatio et portio totius. Ibid. c. 9.

It is not that he is really a servant, or subject, under the Father's dominion; but that he has been pleased to take upon him a ministerial part: so that now you may see how little pertinence or sense there is in your wide and loose talk (p. 41.) about two Persons in Christ, and about Cerinthus, or whatever else came into your head; to give you a handle to fill your margin with strange, frightful, impertinent quotations, to prejudice weak readers.

Your 43d, 44th, and 45th pages, containing little but declamation, I pass over: when you have any thing that looks like serious reasoning, I will attend you.

I have, I hope, sufficiently made it appear, that the texts which you brought to exclude the Son, prove nothing like it; as I before shewed, that you could not answer the texts alleged to prove the contrary. I should now be willing to go regularly on to antiquity, after the method laid down above. But in your 25th page, you have thrown some metaphysical jargon in my way, and of which you are so confident as to say, that unless I can reply to it "all other things are to no purpose." This is the man that builds nothing upon metaphysics. Indeed, I cannot but wonder at your unaccountable conduct in this controversy. If you really think the received doctrine of the Trinity to be absurd in itself, and therefore impossible to be proved, why do you amuse us with Scripture and Fathers; as if the stress of the question lay there, when, according to you, it doth not? You should rather have wrote a philosophical dissertation to shew, that the notion itself is contradictory, and such as no Scripture or Fathers can prove. This is really your meaning. And as the first question always is, whether a thing be possible, and next whether it be true; you should have begun with the point of the possibility, without meddling at all with Scripture or Fathers: which are impertinently brought in, while the question of the possibility remains in suspense. But if you resolve to put the cause upon Scripture and Fathers, then your metaphysics, which relate to the possibility of the doctrine, are very impertinent, and come out of place: because the possibility is to be always pre-supposed before we join issue upon Scripture and antiquity. But to leave you to take your own way, however peculiar or preposterous, let us examine a little into those marvellous subtilties, which you lay such weight upon. Your design is to prove that the same God is and must be the same Person, and that therefore two or more Persons cannot be one God. If you can make this out, the business is done at once ; and our dispute is at an end. Several ways have been attempted by Dr. Clarke before, which now seem to be given up as unsatisfactory. It was once a principle, a maxim with him, that a person is a being, and that two individual beings cannot be one individual being. I have heard no more of this, since the Doctor has been apprised, that his own hypothesis of the divine substance being extended, could not stand with his famed maxim ; every part of that substance being considered as Being, and yet all but one Being. The Doctor however, and you, still resolve to hold to your conclusion against the Trinity ; and to seek for new premises, wherever you can find or make them. After some deliberation, comes out this syllogism :

There must be identicalness of life, to make the same God.

But three different Persons cannot have identicalness of life.

Therefore three different Persons cannot be the same God.

This afterthought, which has took you up so much time and pains, is at length good for nothing ; except it be to set weak persons a musing upon the new thing, called identical life. Whatever it be, you might as well have formed twenty syllogisms as one, and all of the same value. For you might have argued, that three persons cannot have identicalness of power, or identicalness of will, or identicalness of wisdom ; or, to say all in a word, identicalness of essence, which includes every thing. But when you have done your utmost, the main question, viz. what is or is not identical, stands just where it did, and you are not advanced a tittle further than before. There is the same rule for life, and for every thing else you can invent, as there is for the essence. The life is common to all the Persons, as the essence is ; and it is identical in all, \forall just as the essence is identical. So much for syllogism : pity it could be no more serviceable, in a case of extremity.

You are often puzzling your reader, and yourself, upon a very abstruse and intricate question ; whether any thing, or what, can make two persons or more one God. The short of the case is this ; the Christian Churches have collected from Scripture, that three Persons are one God : and believing the thing to be fact, they have, according to the best of their judgment, resolved

\forall Propter unam eandemque naturam, atque, inseparabilem vitam, ipsa Trinitas—intelligitur unus Domi-

nus Deus noster. August. Epist. x. ad Max. p. 609.

the Unity into consubstantiality, inseparability, and Unity of origination; finding, (or at least believing that they had found,) that Scripture had also signified the three things now mentioned. This account appears as probable as any; neither perhaps can human wit invent any thing beyond it. But still it must be said, that little depends upon stating the manner how the three Persons are conceived to be one God: the fact is the one material point. If Scripture really makes them expressly, or by necessary consequence, one God; I know not what men have to do to dispute about intelligent agents, and identical lives, &c. as if they understood better, than God himself does, what one God is; or as if philosophy were to direct what shall or shall not be Tritheism. Jews, and Pagans, and Heretics of several denominations, have often charged the Christian and Catholic doctrine of the Trinity with Tritheism. The Fathers of the Church have as constantly denied the charge; giving such reasons as I have mentioned, why it is not, and therefore should not be called, Tritheism. One general reason might have sufficed for all, viz. That the Unity of the Trinity is too strict and close to admit of the name or notion of Tritheism. This is ending the dispute at once, without further inquiry into the nature of that Unity; unless the adversary can shew (which is impossible) that no Unity whatever can be sufficient to make more Persons than one, one Being, one Substance, one God. If we are to build our faith on Scripture, such an Unity there may be, because there really is. Philosophy, falsely so called, may reclaim against it; but having no certain principle of reason to go upon, no rule whereby to judge, whether the one God be one Person or more; it is evident, that this point must at length be determined by Scripture alone; and that must be the true Unity of the Godhead, which Scripture (according to its most reasonable and natural construction) has given us for such.

But it is high time now to come to antiquity; which has been so long staved off, and yet must make a great part of our discourse under this Query. I shaped out my method into four particulars, which may be seen above.

1. The first particular is, that the ancients have in accounting for the texts relating to the Unity, declared their judgment, that idols only, or other Gods, are thereby excluded, and not God the Son.

I cited Irenæus for this purpose, where he says, that the holy Scriptures declare, that the alone God, excluding others, made all things by his Word^z. That is, other Gods are excluded, not God the Son, who is not another God, according to Irenæus; as we shall see under the next article. I observed further, that the Son and Holy Ghost are the very self of the Father, according to Irenæus; as the Father is also the self^a of them: wherefore it can never be imagined that either of them is excluded from the one God.

Let us go on to Clemens of Alexandria, who frequently teaches the same thing. He says, that “the Father of all things is “alone perfect;” immediately adding, “for in him is the Son, “and in the Son the Father^b.” This writer could never believe, that the exclusive terms were intended in opposition to God the Son. In another place, he says, “he that is the alone God, “is also the alone just:” and soon after adds, that “he, (the “Father) considered as Father, is called that only which he is, “good; but as the Son, who is his Word, is in the Father, “he is styled just, on account of the mutual relation to each “other^c.” A few pages lower, he observes that “no one is “good, but the Father;” adding presently after, that “the God “of the universe is one only, good, just, Creator, the Son in the “Father, to whom be glory^d, &c.” What a stranger must Clemens have been to your novel divinity, whereby you would exclude the Son from being one God with the Father!

Tertullian’s doctrine in this point is very well known, and that he expressly interprets the exclusive terms in opposition to idols only, or false Gods, or other Gods; not to God the Son, who is not another God^e. And so now I may come to the proof of my second article.

^z Universæ Scripturæ—unum et solum Deum, ad excludendos alios, prædicent omnia fecisse per verbum suum, &c. Iren. lib. ii. cap. 27. p. 155.

^a Si enim existens in Patre cognoscit, hunc in quo est, hoc est semetipsum, non ignoret. Iren. p. 139.

Fecit ea per semetipsum, hoc est per Verbum et Sapientiam suam. p. 163.

Fecit ea per semetipsum: hoc est per Verbum et Sapientiam suam. Adest enim ei semper Verbum et Sapientia, Filius et Spiritus, per quos et in quibus omnia libere et sponte fecit. p. 253.

^b Ἀπεδείξαμεν—μόνον δὲ εἶναι τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὄλων ἐν αὐτῷ

γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς, καὶ ἐν τῷ υἱῷ ὁ πατήρ. Clem. Alex. p. 129.

^c Αὐτὸς μόνος ὢν Θεὸς, καὶ δίκαιός ἐστιν ὁ αὐτὸς καὶ μόνος—καθὸ μὲν πατήρ νοεῖται, ἀγαθὸς ὢν αὐτὸ μόνον ὃ ἐστὶν κέκληται ἀγαθός, καθὸ δὲ υἱός, ὢν ὃ λόγος αὐτοῦ, ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἐστὶ, δίκαιος προσαγορεύεται, ἐκ τῆς πρὸς ἄλληλα σχέσεως. Clem. Alex. p. 140.

^d Οὐδεὶς ἀγαθὸς εἰ μὴ ὁ πατήρ αὐτοῦ—καταφανές τὸ τῶν συμπάντων Θεοῦ εἶνα μόνον εἶναι, ἀγαθὸν, δίκαιον, δημιουργόν, υἱὸν ἐν πατρὶ, φ᾽ ἣ δόξα &c. Clem. Alex. p. 142.

^e See my Defence, vol. i. p. 288, 289.

Itaque præter semetipsum non esse alium Deum; hoc propter idololatriam

2. That the ancients always declared against admitting another God, and denied constantly that the Son was another God.

Justin M. in his Dialogue with Trypho^f, declares, that there never was nor will be (ἄλλος Θεός) another God besides the Maker of the universe. And in a fragment cited by Irenæus, he says, he could not have given credit even to our Lord himself, had he preached up any other God (ἄλλον Θεόν) besides the Creator ε.

Irenæus is very express to the same purpose in more places than one, declaring against admitting another God^h. And if you would know, how then he could consistently admit another Person to be God, besides the Father; he will tell you, as before seen, that the Son is considered as the very self of the Father, and that they are not another and another Godⁱ.

Tertullian is another voucher of the same thing. "There is," says he, "one God, the Father; and there is none other besides "him. By which he does not mean to exclude the Son, but "another God; now the Son is not another besides the Father^k."

Origen shall be our next evidence; who in his famous piece against Celsus, (the most to be depended on, both for the uncorruptness of the copies, and the accuracy of the thoughts contained in it,) does in a very remarkable manner teach the same doctrine.

He having charged his adversary with the worship, not of one God, but of Gods^l, (N.B.) though all the inferior deities were supposed subordinate to one supreme, comes afterwards to answer the like charge, retorted by Celsus^m; the charge of worshipping ἄλλον (Θεόν), another God, besides the one supreme God. Now, tam nationum quam Israelis: etiam propter hæreticos, qui sicut nationes manibus, ita et ipsi verbis idola fabricantur, id est, alium Deum, et alium Christum. Tert. contr. Prax. cap. 18.

^f Just. M. Dial. p. 34. ed. Jeb. See this explained at large in my Reply to Dr. Whitby, IX. 1. &c. p. 235 of this volume.

^g Just. M. Fragm. p. 408. ed. Jeb.

^h Alterum Deum, præter eum qui est, non requiremus. Iren. p. 156.

Alterum Deum minime possitis ostendere, p. 157.

Nec tunc quidem oportuit alterum Deum annuntiari, p. 233.

^l Non ergo alius erat qui cognoscebatur, et alius qui dicebat, nemo cognoscit Patrem, sed unus et idem, omnia subjiciente ei Patre, et ab omnibus accipiens testimonium, quoniam vere homo, et vere Deus, &c. p. 235. Vid. Massuet. Dissert. Præv. p. 131.

^k Unus Deus, Pater, et alius absque eo non est: quod ipse inferens, non Filium negat, sed alium Deum. Cæterum alius a Patre Filius non est. Tert. contr. Prax. cap. 18.

^l Εκείνος δὲ πολλοὺς ἡμᾶς διδάσκων σέβειν θεοὺς, θεῶν μᾶλλον ὄφειλεν λέγειν βασιλείαν, ἢ περ Θεοῦ. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 385.

^m Εἰ μὲν δὴ μηδένα ἄλλον ἐθεράπευσον οὗτοι πλὴν ἑνα Θεόν, ἦν ἂν τις αὐτοῖς ἴσως πρὸς τοὺς ἄλλους ἀνεησέτο λόγος· νυνὶ δὲ, &c. Ibid.

how does Origen answer it? Plainly, by denying the fact, that the Christians did worship ἄλλον, another, (i. e. God,) besides the God of the universe. His reason is, because Father and Son are *one*ⁿ. This was the only way he had to get off the charge of worshipping another God, besides the Father, by taking both into one, and considering both as one in the worship. Wherefore he concludes, a little after, “we therefore worship, “as before said, one God, the Father and the Son.” This was Origen’s resolution of the grand point in debate, between Christians and Pagans, as to the charge of Polytheism; in answer to one of the sharpest adversaries the Christians ever had, in a solemn and accurate treatise, wrote in the name and in defence of the Church, wrote by the author then above sixty years old; and (as critics now agree) after he had been admonished by Fabian of Rome, for his want of caution at other times, and therefore was the more likely to keep strictly up to the sense of the Church, in an article especially of so momentous importance. He did not pretend that a subordinate God, purely because subordinate, would not be another God, or would not make two Gods: the Pagans, in that silly way, might have cleared themselves of the charge of Polytheism; as Origen well knew. He did not pretend to say, that the Father only was God, because God in a high sense, (which the Pagans could also have said of their one supreme God, and so have got clear of Polytheism,) but he answered upon the true and standing principles of the Christian Church, that Father and Son were one God, and the Son not another God. This acquitted the Christians of Polytheism, and left the charge fixed and unremovable upon the Pagans.

We have seen then that the ancients never would own another God, that they constantly declared against it; and even in the particular case of God the Son. It is to the same purpose, that ⁿ Δεκτίον δὲ καὶ πρὸς τοῦτο, ὅτι, εἰπερ μενοήκει ὁ Κέλσος τὸ, ἐγὼ καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἑσμεν· καὶ τὸ ἐν εὐχῇ εἰρημένον ὑπὸ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν τῷ, ὡς ἐγὼ καὶ σὺ ἐν ἑσμεν· οὐκ ἂν ᾤετο ἡμᾶς καὶ ἄλλον θεραπεύειν παρά τὸν ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεόν. N. B. After ἄλλον must be understood Θεόν: for Origen could not pretend to say, that the Christians worshipped no other Person, besides the Father, (when immediately after he owns, that they worshipped both Father and Son,) but only that they worshipped not another God: Son and Father being one God, as he also in the same place expressly asserts.

I may here add a passage out of the Acts of Pionius’s Martyrdom; which have the appearance of being true and genuine.

Polemon (rogat). Quem Deum colis? Respondet (Asclepiades), Christum. Polemon. Quid ergo? Iste aliter est? Respondit: Non; sed ipse quem et ipsi paulo ante confessi sunt. Ruinart. Act. Martyr. p. 144.

they as constantly denied two Gods, or three Gods: as may appear from many testimonies: which being well known, I shall only refer to one or two in the margin^o. Nay, it was a principle so fixed and riveted in the heart of every pious Christian, that they would rather have died than have ever admitted Gods, or Lords; as is plainly intimated by Tertullian^p.

Hitherto, perhaps you tell me, that you and the ancients can agree, (that is, in words,) for neither do you assert another God, or another Lord, nor two Gods, or two Lords. 'To which I answer, that as to another Lord, you have said it in terms: and by necessary consequence, you assert another God; yea, two Gods, and two Lords. Nor have I ever met with a more deplorable example of self-contradiction, and resolute opposition to the most evident truth, than your pretending that Father and Son are not two Gods, while you affirm each to be a God, and deny their being both together one God. But we will go on with the ancients; who, like wise and honest men, as they would not admit another God, or two Gods, so, consistently with themselves,

3. They as constantly taught, that Father and Son were one God, or the same God: and thus they settled that grand article of the Christian faith. I will shew this plainly by clear and express evidence, and shall answer your exceptions to every writer as I go along. I have, in some measure, anticipated myself upon this head, in my Sermons^q, and elsewhere: and therefore shall sometimes content myself with references. Let us take the authors in order of time, fixing also the time of their writing, according to the latest and best accounts.

A. D. 145. JUSTIN MARTYR.

As to Justin Martyr, I do not here produce him as one, who, in express terms, has ever styled Father and Son one God. But that he believed the thing may be made out two ways. 1. As he declares for the worship of God alone, at the same time admitting the worship of all the three Persons: which is implicitly ^o Εἰ δὲ οὖν ὁ λόγος πρὸς τὸν Θεόν, Θεὸς ἄν, τί οὖν φήσειεν ἂν τις δύο λέγειν θεούς; δύο μὲν οὐκ ἐρῶ θεούς, ἀλλ' ἢ ἓνα, πρόσωπα δὲ δύο &c. Hipp. contr. Noët. p. 15. Vid. Epist. Synod. Antioch. contr. Samoat. Labbé tom. i. p. 845.

^p Cæterum si conscientia nostra, qua scimus Dei nomen et Domini, et Patri, et Filio, et Spiritui Sancto convenire, Deos et Dominos nominaremus; extinxissemus faces nostras, etiam ad martyria timidiores, quibus evadendi quoque pateret occasio, jurantibus statim per Deos et Dominos, ut quidam hæretici, quorum Dii plures. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 13.

^q See my Sermons, p. 178, &c. of this volume.

including all the three in the alone God. (The pretence of inferior worship shall be answered in its place.) 2. As declaring that God the Son is not another God, besides the Maker of all things, (that is the Father,) as hath been remarked above^r. You have some things to object to what I produce from Justin, under another article: and there I shall consider them as I come to them.

A. D. 170. LUCIAN, a pagan writer.

The famous testimony out of Lucian's Dialogue, inscribed Φιλόπαρις, I produced in my eighth Sermon^s, to prove that, at that time, the Christians believed three in one, and one in three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God supreme. It is so noted a testimony that I need not here repeat it.

There has been some doubt, as I intimated in my Sermons, whether Lucian was the author of the Dialogue; but all agree, that it was either Lucian himself, or a contemporary, if not a more ancient writer^t; which serves our purpose as well.

A. D. 177. ATHENAGORAS.

I produced also, in my Sermons^u, this ancient and excellent writer, as a voucher for the truth of this doctrine, that Father and Son are one God. I shall not repeat what I there said, or in my Defence, vol. i. p. 289, 290. but referring the reader thither, shall proceed to answer your objections. You begin with lessening the credit of the author, (p. 105,) as being "full of very "obscure notions;" a character you would give to any writer that is full of the doctrine of a coeternal and consubstantial Trinity. You object, that "he describes this very doctrine in "a way directly condemned by Justin Martyr, and even by "Athanasius himself, for Gnostic or Sabellian; making the "Holy Ghost an emanation, like a ray shot forth from the sun, "flowing from it, and returning to it." But Athenagoras's doctrine is far from being the same with that which Justin condemns. He always speaks of the Son and Holy Ghost as real and permanent, not as the heretics in Justin did, who supposed them to be dissolved, and in a manner extinct^x. And Athenagoras did not teach a nominal distinction only of the ^r See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, IX. 1, &c. p. 235 of this volume.

^s Sermon VIII. p. 178, &c. of this volume.

^t Vid. Bull. Def. F. p. 73. Jud. 32.

Fabricius Bibl. Græc. lib. iv. cap. 16. p. 504. and Le Moyne, Varia Sacra. vol. ii. p. 187.

^u Serm. VIII. p. 178 of this vol.

^x Justin. M. Dial. p. 102, 372. Jeb.

Persons, but a real distinction of *order*¹; which is directly opposite to the tenets of those heretics described in Justin. Athenagoras always speaks of the Spirit as united with the Father and the Son: and as he took the Father and Son for real Persons, he must of consequence think the same of the Holy Spirit; so that there is little or no resemblance between the two notions. Besides that, if you had carefully observed the passage on which you ground your remark, you might have perceived that nothing more is meant, than that the Spirit was sometimes sent to the Prophets, and again returned to him that sent him. As to the use of the word ἀπόρροια, and the doctrine of emanation, it was neither simply approved nor condemned in the Christian Church, but according as it was understood; just as προβολή, or prolatio, was condemned by Irenæus and Tertullian in one sense, admitted in another: and as the notion of a λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, or προφορικὸς, was either approved or condemned, according to its various construction and acceptation; as I have remarked in my first Sermon². You find fault with my construction of νοοῦμεν γὰρ καὶ υἰὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ. For we understand, or tacitly include, God's Son also, in God before spoken of^a. That this is the true meaning, I prove first from the words immediately preceding. Athenagoras having declared, that the Christians could not be atheists, because they acknowledged one God, who had made, adorned, and preserved the universe by his Logos, or Word, immediately adds, νοοῦμεν γὰρ καὶ υἰὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, referring to the λόγος he had just before mentioned, as contained in God, that did all things by him.

2. This sense is also confirmed by what follows; where he says, “Father and Son are one; the Son being in the Father, and the Father in the Son, by the Unity and power of the Spirit b.”

3. The same thing is further proved from Athenagoras's joining (when he is again answering the charge of atheism)

¹ Λόγῳ δεδημιούργηται, καὶ τῷ παρ' αὐτοῦ πνεύματι συνέχεται τὰ πάντα. Athen. p. 28.

Συνάδει δὲ τῷ λόγῳ καὶ τὸ προφητικὸν πνεῦμα—καὶ τοὺ καὶ αὐτὸ τὸ ἐνεργοῦν τοῖς ἐκφωνοῦσι προφητικῶς ἁγίου πνεύματος ἀπόρροια εἶναι φημέν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀπορρέον, καὶ ἐπαναφερόμενον ὡς ἄκτινα ἡλίου, p. 40. Δεικνύντας αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ ἐνώσει, δύναμιν, καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ τάξει διαίρεσιν, p. 40. Vid. p. 46, 96.

² Serm. I. p. 32, 33 of this volume.

^a Ὑφ' οὗ γεγέννηται τὸ πᾶν διὰ τοῦ αὐτοῦ λόγου, καὶ διακεκύσμηται, καὶ συγκρατεῖται, Θεὸν ἄγοντες ἰκανῶς μοι δεδεικται' νοοῦμεν γὰρ καὶ υἰὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, &c.

^b Ἐνὸς ὄντος τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ ὄντος δὲ τοῦ υἱοῦ ἐν πατρὶ, καὶ πατρὸς ἐν υἱῷ, ἐνότητι, καὶ δυνάμει πνεύματος, p. 38.

Father and Son together : and as before he had the phrase of Θεὸν ἄγοντες, speaking of the Father singly, now he applies the same phrase to both^c.

4. I further vindicated this construction, in my Defence, vol. i. p. 290, by parallel expressions of Athanasius and Tertullian : wherefore, I conceive, it may still stand.

But, though you seem to allow that Athenagoras comprehends both in one God, yet you say, he does “ not so comprehend both “ in the one God, as that one is as much the one supreme God “ as the other :” which I cannot make sense of. “ Nor does “ he,” say you, “ any where suppose the Son, as such, but only “ the internal Reason of the Father to be ἀίδιος, eternal.” But if Reason or Wisdom be only a different name of the same Person, the Person of the Son, considered in different circumstances, and at different times, (as Bishop Bull has fully demonstrated,) then the Son is ἀίδιος according to this writer. “ On “ the contrary,” you say, “ that Athenagoras expressly affirms “ the unbegotten God alone to be eternal.” But the reading there should be ἀγένητος with single ν, as I shall shew hereafter, and in the one unmade, or necessary existing God, is contained God the Word^d.

You go on, (p. 108,) to charge Athenagoras with the ridiculous notion of the Son's being nothing (before his generation) but the Father's internal Reason; that is, nothing but an attribute. I hope you do not expect an answer to these pretences, so long as Bishop Bull's confutation of them stands untouched. The English reader may see what is sufficient on that head, in my Defence^e and Sermons^f. Bishop Bull, you say, acknowledges Athenagoras meant that the “ Son is the same with respect to “ the Father, as the internal reason is to the mind of men.” Bishop Bull says no such thing. How shall we trust you in your reports of the Fathers, when you scruple not to misrepresent even a modern author, which is in every body's hands?

Bp. Bull only says^g, that Athenagoras meant that the relation ^c Οὐκ ἔσμεν ἄθεοι, Θεὸς ἄγοντες τὸν ποιητὴν τοῦδε τοῦ παντός, καὶ τὸν παρ' αὐτοῦ λόγον· Θεὸν νοτ θεοὺς.

“ We are not atheists, inasmuch as “ we receive the Maker of the world “ as God, and also his Word.”

^d Ὅστε τὸν λέγοντα ἀγένητον, καὶ παντοκράτορα τὸν πατέρα, νοεῖν ἐν τῷ ἀγενήτῳ, καὶ τῷ παντοκράτορι, καὶ τὸν τοῦτου λόγον καὶ σοφίαν, ἣ τις ἐστὶν ὁ viós. Athanas. Decret. Syn. Nic. p. 236.

Ὁὐ γὰρ τὸ ὄνομα τοῦτο παραιρεῖ τὴν τοῦ λόγου φύσιν, οὐδὲ πάλιν τὸ ἀγένητον πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν ἔχει τὸ σημαϊνόμενον, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὰ διὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ γενόμενα. Ibid. p. 235.

^e Defence, vol. i. p. 360, &c.

^f Sermon VII. p. 150, of this vol.

^g Ita ut Filius Dei intelligatur verbum Patris, quod nempe se habeat ad of thought to mind resembles the relation of the Son to the Father in several respects, which he there mentions. I have said the same thing, and explained the resemblance at large elsewhere^h. After some pains taken to falsify and misrepresent Athenagoras, (which pains had been much better spent in replying to Bp. Bull,) you come at length to charge me home with running counter to Athenagoras's notion, in "two fundamental points." I must give you the hearing in things more trifling than these; so let us inquire what they are.

1. You say, his notion makes the Son's generation an act, which mine does not. If that will please you, I will allow a double act in the Son's generation, according to Athenagoras. One of the Father in sending forth his Son, another of the Son in going forth; viz. to create. Did I ever deny the procession of the Son, which Athenagoras and several others intend by generation? But I assert eternal generation, which Athenagoras does not: there, I suppose, is the main difference. Yet Athenagoras acknowledges the λόγος to have been eternally of and in the Father, and referred up to him as his head and source: which is acknowledging the selfsame thing which other Catholics intended by eternal generation; so that the difference lies only in words, as I before intimated in my Defenceⁱ.

2. You say, that Athenagoras's notion "never supposes two Persons of equally supreme authority and worship, but ascribes every thing the Son does to the supreme authority and will of the Father." But where do you learn that Athenagoras ever excludes the Son from supreme authority (properly so called) or from supreme worship? Athenagoras indeed is express, that there is a difference of order among the divine Persons: but where do you find a difference of dominion or worship? You could not have chose an author more directly opposite to your sentiments, or more favourable to mine, in the very point of dominion; on which you are pleased to lay so much stress. For Athenagoras, addressing himself to the emperors Marcus Antoninus, and his son Lucius Commodus, styles them both equally μέγιστοι Αὐτοκράτορων, which I might translate supreme Rulers. And he observes, that all things were under their common rule and dominion^k; and from thence draws his com-

Patrem, ut ad mentem humanam verbum ejus interius, quod et Spirituale est, minimeque per se cadit in sensus; et in mente, unde procedit, manet, nec ab ea sejungitur, &c. Bull. p. 203.

^h Sermons, p. 31, &c. of this vol.

ⁱ Defence, vol. i. p. 365, &c.

^k Δεήσομαι δὲ ἐμῶν, μέγιστοι Αὐτοκράτορων, πρὸ τοῦ λόγου, ἀληθεῖς παρεχομένη τοὺς λογισμοὺς συγγνώμαι—parison for the illustration of the one common rule and government of God the Father and the Son; to whom, as being inseparable, all things are subject. Is this making the Father alone supreme Governor? Or is it likely that a Creator and creature should be thus familiar, and rule all things equally and in common? Where were your thoughts? To be short, all that you can possibly extract out of Athenagoras is no more than a priority of order, as the Father is Head and Fountain to which the Son and Holy Ghost are referred. The dominion, the authority is equal, is supreme in all: only in the Father primarily, in the other two derivatively; the same thing under a different order and manner. After you had endeavoured to puzzle and perplex Athenagoras, you go on (p. 110.) to do the like with Tatian, Theophilus, and some others. I shall not attend you now, but proceed in my method. If you have dropped any thing that is worth the notice, it shall be considered in a more proper place, under Query VIII, which you have often robbed to fill up this.

A. D. 187. IRENÆUS.

Irenæus is the next author cited to prove that “the Father and the Son are one God.” He asserts it in sense, and indirectly many ways; some of which have been hinted above; see also my Sermons¹. He does it also in terms more than once^m. I must now attend your exceptions to the evidence.

ἔχοιτε ἀπ’ ἐαυτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐπουράνιον βασιλείαν ἐξετάζειν ὡς γὰρ ἡμῖν, πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ πάντα κεχρίρωται, ἀνωθεν τὴν βασιλείαν εἰληφόσι—οὕτως ἐν τῷ Θεῷ καὶ τῷ παρ’ αὐτοῦ λόγῳ υἱῷ νοουμένῳ ἀμεριστῶ, πάντα ὑποτάσσεται. p. 64.

“Before I enter upon discourse, I beseech you, O ye greatest of Emperors, to bear with me, while I offer true reasonings—From your own-selves you may form a notion of the heavenly empire. For like as all things are in subjection to you, being Father and Son, (having received your empire from above,) so also to the one God and to the Word who is with him, considered as a Son inseparable, are all things subject.” Vide Le Moyne, Var. Sacr. Not. et Observ. p. 169.

¹ Serm. VIII. p. 179, &c. of this vol.

^m Ita ut is, qui omnia fecerit, cum Verbo suo juste dicatur Deus et Dominus solus. Iren. p. 183.

Qui igitur a prophetis adorabatur Deus vivus, hic est vivorum Deus, et Verbum ejus, qui et loquutus est Moysi &c.—Ipse igitur Christus cum Patre vivorum est Deus, qui loquutus est Moysi, &c. p. 232.

Propter hoc manifestissime Dominus ostendit se et Patrem quidem suis discipulis, nescilicet quererent alterum Deum præter eum qui plasmaverit hominem. p. 311.

Quoniam autem in ventre plasmatus nos Verbum Dei, &c. p. 312.

“He who made all things, he alone with his Word, is justly styled God and Lord.

“He who was adored as the living God by the prophets, he is the God of the living, and his Word, who also spake to Moses, &c.—Christ therefore himself, with the Father, is the God of the living that spake to Moses.

“For this reason our Lord mani-

To what I had observed from Irenæus, in my Defence, you say, (p. 92,) "The sense then of Irenæus, according to you, is, the "one and only God, the Father and Son, made all things by his "Word, or Son:" No; but, if you please to leave off this vein of cavilling, (which is below the character of a grave writer,) the sense is not that the Son was included under the term Father, which undoubtedly there stands for the Person of the Father singly, (and therefore the Son is excluded from being the Person of the Father,) but that he is not excluded from doing what the Father alone is said to do, or from being God, though the Father alone is said to be so; because the exclusive terms are not intended in opposition to God the Son.

You are often imposing this kind of sophistry upon us; wherefore I would once for all endeavour to shew you the weakness and absurdity of it, when our Saviour told his disciples that they had left him alone, he did not mean by this to exclude the Father, but others: will you therefore say, that Father and Son both are meant by the him left alone? When our Saviour is said to have a name given which no one knew but himself, the Father is not excluded by the term οὐδείς: will you therefore plead that he is included in the Person of the Son, and that both are one Person? How ridiculous is it, that you cannot distinguish between being not excluded with respect to the predicate of a proposition, and being included in the subject of it. In this proposition, "The Father is the only God," we say the Son is not excluded: how? not with respect to the predicate; not from being only God, as well as the Father, because the exclusive term affects him not. But we do not therefore say that he is included in the subject of the proposition; or that Father means both Father and Son. So much in answer to this cavil, which had deserved no notice, but for your so often repeating it. Now to return; you pretend it absurd that all things should be made by or through the one supreme God. But you have not shewn that all ministration is inconsistent with any supremacy, but a supremacy of order or office; which I admit. What you add from Irenæus, about the Father's commanding the Word, I have answered in my Sermonsⁿ, and shewn it to be, as understood by the ancients, directly opposite to your principles. You are next labouring to take off the force of what I had pleaded in

"fested both himself and the Father "to his disciples, that they might not "look for any other God but him that "formed man—The Word of God

 "forms us in the womb, &c."

ⁿ Sermon II. p. 63, &c. of this vol.

respect of Irenæus's making the Son and Holy Ghost the self of the Father. But this was too hard a task: I will trust the reader with what you have said, to compare it with mine; and to see if he can make sense of your immediate obedience: as if any obedience, mediate or immediate, were a reason sufficient for styling the Person obeying, one's self. You refer to Irenæus^o saying, that by the Son and Spirit, (that is, per semetipsum, by himself, as he says in the same chapter,) he made all things freely, and of his own will. And so he well might, when the Son and Spirit are so much his self, as to have but one and the same will with him. Others might have contrary wills: they could not. You misconstrue his next immediate words: he "produced," you say, "the substance of the creatures from himself, i. e. from his own original underived power." But himself means there, the Son and Spirit; as is plain from exemplum factorum; (which you took care to leave out:) God the Son being the exemplar by which things were formed ^p. And Tertullian may serve to explain Irenæus's meaning in the other article^q.

You next tell us of his citing a remarkable passage of Hermas: as if there were any thing so very remarkable, in respect to our present purpose, in Hermas's saying that there is but one God. But Irenæus, you observe, adds presently after, that the Son "receives the power of all things from him who is the one God the Father, &c." And what wonder if he receives all things from him, from whom he receives his essence? We are not inquiring whence the Son's power or dominion is, but what it is; and whether it be not of the same quality and extent with the Father's, the same being common to both. But you say, "this power and dominion became plenary over all things both in heaven and earth, when he had been incarnate." Plenary, did you say? and over all things? I think not; nor is even the Father's dominion yet so plenary as this comes to. (See 1 Cor.

^o Ipse est qui per semetipsum constituit, et elegit, et adornavit, et continet omnia—Adest enim ei semper Verbum et Sapientia, Filius et Spiritus per quos, et in quibus omnia libere et sponte fecit. Lib. iv. cap. 20. p. 253. Vid. Bull. D. F. p. 87.

Ad quos et loquitur dicens, "Faciamus hominem ad imaginem et similitudinem nostram;" ipse a semetipso substantiam creaturarum, et exemplum factorum, et figuram in mundo ornamentorum accipiens. Ibid.

p. 253.

^p Vid. Iren. lib. v. cap. 16. p. 313. comp. p. 163. and Clem. Alex. p. 78.

^q Si necessaria est Deo materia ad opera mundi, ut Hermogenes existimavit, habuit Deus materiam longe digniorem—Sophiam suam scilicet—Quis non hanc potius omnium fontem et originem commendet, materiam vero materiarum—quali Deus potuit eguisse, sui magis quam alieni egens? Tertull. contr. Hermogen. cap. 18.

xv. 28.) But what strange thing are you here discovering, that Christ became Lord in a sense which he was not before! So did the Father become Lord over the Jews in a sense he was not before, when he made them his peculiar people. He became their Lord, first, when he created them, and again, in a more peculiar sense, when he chose more immediately to govern them. In like manner, Christ who was Lord of all men in right of creation, became Lord again, in a more special sense, in right of redemption^r; and will be their Lord again, in a still more plenary sense, after the day of judgment; as will also God the Father. What difficulty is there in these plain common things? But, I suppose, the force of your argument lies in the words accipiens potestatem, and tradita sunt^s. And yet you will think it no argument against the Father's supremacy, that he is to receive a kingdom, which is to be delivered to him by the Son, 1 Cor. xv. 24, though I need not insist upon it here, being ready to admit, that while all power and authority is common to both, yet it is primarily considered in the Father, and referred up to him: and it was the more proper for our Saviour, during his state of condescension and humiliation here on earth, to refer all to the Father; as Irenæus intimates in another case, of his referring the knowledge of the day of judgment. I might further observe to you, that though Irenæus sometimes represents the power and authority of the Son as descending from the Father, he at other times represents the Son as assuming it himself, and making himself^t the head over the Church, &c. which is also very true, and much in the same way, as he is sometimes said to have raised

^r See my Sermons, p. 114, &c. of this volume.

^s No one ever better understood this matter than the great Athanasius, who wrote a tract on purpose to shew how all things are said to have been delivered to God the Son. The sum is, that when all things, in a manner, were lost and sunk, and no one ready at hand to undertake their recovery and restitution, in this exigency, Christ stepped in to redeem those whom he had at first created. To him therefore were they delivered; into his hands were they committed, who alone was both able and willing to recover and restore them; and who accordingly took flesh upon him, and wrought their redemption for them.

Πάντα δέδωκεν ἐν τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ—ὡς ὥσπερ δι' αὐτοῦ τὰ πάντα γέγονεν, οὕτως ἐν αὐτῷ τὰ πάντα ἀνακαμίσθηται δυναθῆ. Athanas. vol. i. p. 104.

Eusebius's account of the same thing is not much different.

Ὁ μὲν Θεὸς ἐδίδου, καὶ παρεδίδου ἐπὶ βελτιώσει, καὶ ὠφελείᾳ οἷα Σωτῆρι καὶ λάρφῃ, καὶ κυβερνήτῃ τῶν ὄλων, &c. Euseb. de Eccl. Theolog. lib. i. cap. 19. p. 88.

^t Uti sicut in supercælestibus, et spiritalibus, et invisibilibus, princeps est Verbum Dei; sic et in visibilibus, et corporalibus, principatum habeat, in semetipsum principatum assumens, et apponens semetipsum caput Ecclesiæ, universa attrahat ad semetipsum apto in tempore. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 16. p. 206.

himself from the dead, and sometimes to have been raised by the Father: for what one does both do, diversely considered as to the order and manner of acting.

I had cited a plain passage^u or two, to prove that the Son is the only God, according to Irenæus, as well as the Father. You reply, that, in the first passage, “ true and only God is evidently “ meant of the Father,” which I readily allow: and so you may see in Clemens, cited above, how he applies the like title to the Father, and yet immediately, in the same breath, makes Father and Son together the only God. The reason is, that neither he, nor Irenæus, nor indeed any of the ancients, ever had a thought of excluding the Son by the word only, or the like. How have you read the Fathers, not to see these plain things? You go on, endeavouring to elude and perplex Irenæus’s meaning. But your attempts are so feeble, and your efforts so weak, that I am almost ashamed to make any reply to them. You would have it, that Irenæus does not call the Son God in the supreme and absolute sense; though you can never shew that Irenæus had two senses of the word God as applied to Father and Son. The Son, you imagine, is not God in the absolute sense, but as being God’s anointed, our Lord, and our God, (p. 98.) I read of the Father’s anointing, and the Son’s being anointed, (that is, to his office;) but could you have shewn, that he was anointed to his Godship, (pardon the oddness of the word, it contains your sense,) that would have been a discovery indeed. You refer to several passages, (I could add many more,) where the Father is styled the only God. But to what purpose is it? Irenæus never meant thereby to exclude the Son from being, with the alone Father, Deus et Dominus^x, God and Lord, or from being with the Father, vivorum Deus, God of the living, or from being the self of the Father, or from being Deus ipse^y, God himself: nor would he ever allow, that the Son was not God in the definitive, or absolute sense, or that he was another God. What can you do with such a man as Irenæus, all the way contrary to your prin-

^u Nunquam neque Prophetæ neque Apostoli alium Deum nominaverunt vel Dominum appellaverunt præter verum et solum Deum. Multo magis ipse Dominus, qui et Cæsari quidem quæ Cæsaris sunt reddi jubet, et quæ Dei sunt Deo. Iren. p. 182.

Neque igitur Dominus, neque Spiritus Sanctus, neque Apostoli eum, qui non esset Deus, definitive et absolute Deum nominassent aliquando, nisi esset vere Deus, p. 180.

Compare the following words:

Utrosque Dei appellatione signavit Spiritus, et eum, qui ungitur, Filium, et eum, qui ungit, Patrem, p. 180.

^x See above.

^y Dei Verbum, imo magis ipse Deus. Iren. p. 132.

ciples, directly for mine? He styles the Father only God, in opposition to the Valentinian Æons, or other monstrous deities; never, not once, in opposition to God the Son.

After what hath been said, the reader, I hope, will not be surprised, to find me quoting another passage of Irenæus^z to the same purpose as before. It is where he proves our Lord to be the Word of God, and God, from his remitting of sins; upon the strength of this maxim, that none can forgive sins but God alone. I take the argument to lie thus: None can forgive sins but the God of Israel, the true and only God, (so the Jews understood and intended it:) Christ forgave sins: therefore Christ is God, in the same sense as intended, i. e. God of Israel, &c. I defy any man to come at Irenæus's conclusion from that passage any other way: and though he words it, Verbum Dei, it is plain from the following words, that the phrase is with him equivalent to Deus; the Word of God being necessarily God, or, as he elsewhere expresses it, Deus ipse. What you have to object is, that solus Deus is there predicated of the Father; I grant it: and yet Irenæus's argumentation necessarily infers, that Christ is Deus too, in the same sense; and therefore with the Father, solus Deus; the only God that can remit sins; and he received this power because he is God of God. Irenæus plainly enough intimates, that if he had not been God, he could not have had the power; which shews that he is speaking of such a kind of remission, by inherent power and right, as is proper to God alone^a; otherwise there is no sense in the argument.

^z Peccata igitur remittens, hominem quidem curavit, semetipsum autem manifeste ostendit quis esset. Si enim nemo potest remittere peccata nisi solus Deus, remittebat autem hæc Dominus, et curabat homines; manifestum est quoniam ipse erat Verbum Dei. Filius hominis factus, a Patre potestatem remissionis peccatorum accipiens, quoniam homo et quoniam Deus: ut quomodo homo compassus est nobis, tanquam Deus misereatur nostri, et remittat nobis debita nostra, quæ factori nostro debemus Deo. Iren. p. 314.

"Remitting sins, he healed the man, and at the same time plainly shewed who himself was. For if none can forgive sins, but God alone, and yet our Lord forgave sins, and healed men; it is manifest that he was the Word of God, made Son of man, receiving from the Father the power of forgiving sins, because man, and because God: that as he suffered with us, being man, so he might also have mercy upon us as he is God, and might forgive us our debts, which we owe to God our Maker."

^a Bene igitur Verbum ejus ad hominem dicit, "Remittuntur tibi peccata;" idem ille in quem peccaveramus in initio, remissionem peccatorum in fine donans. Aut si alterius quidem transgressi sumus præceptum, alius autem erat qui dixit, "Remittuntur tibi peccata tua;" neque bonus, neque verax, neque justus ex hujusmodi. Quomodo enim bonus, qui non ex suis donat? Aut quomodo

You here (p. 101.) take notice of another passage of Irenæus, which I incidentally brought in (p. 306. of my Defence, vol. i.) to prove that, according to Irenæus, none that has any superior, any God above him, can be justly styled God^b. A famous passage, and directly opposite to your principles; while you pretend to ascribe divinity to the Son, at the same time subjecting him to a superior God, and putting him sub alterius potestate, under the dominion and power of another. You do well to labour to take this off; but how, we shall see presently. You pretend, that Irenæus, in “numberless other passages, expressly asserts the “superiority of the Father to the Son.” I deny that he ever does it, so much as in any single passage, in your sense of superiority. Nay, to see how consonant to himself Irenæus is, I will shew you where^c he, by necessary consequence, declares the Son to have no superior.

The argument will stand thus:

“He that is the God of the living, and who spake to Moses out “of the bush, has no other God above him.

“Christ is the God of the living, and who spake to Moses out of “the bush.

“Therefore Christ has no other God above him.”

The premises are both of them Irenæus’s own: and the conclusion from them is evident. We see then, that Irenæus does not only lay down the general maxim, that whoever is God, justus, qui aliena rapit? Quomodo autem vere remissa sunt peccata, nisi ille ipse in quem peccavimus donavit remissionem? Iren. p. 313. Vid. Grab. in Bull. D. F. p. 85.

“Well therefore did his Word say “to the man, Thy sins are forgiven thee; he the same against whom we “had sinned in the beginning, in the “end vouchsafes remission of sins. “Otherwise had the precept against “which we transgressed come from “one, and it had been another that “said, Thy sins are forgiven thee, he “could neither have been good, nor “just, nor true in doing it. For how “can he be good, who gives what is “none of his own? Or how can he be “just, that assumes what belongs to “another? Or how could sins be “really forgiven, if he that forgave “them were not the very same against “whom we had sinned?”

^b Qui super se habet aliquem su-periozem, et sub alterius potestate est, hic neque Deus, neque Rex magnus dici potest. Iren. p. 229.

^c Is qui de ruho loquutus est Moysi, et manifestavit se esse Deum Patrum, hic est viventium Deus. Quis enim est vivorum Deus, nisi qui est Deus super quem alius non est Deus?—Qui igitur adorabatur Deus vivus, hic est vivorum Deus, et Verbum ejus, qui loquutus est Moysi, qui et Sadducæos redarguit, &c.—Ipse igitur Christus cum Patre vivorum est Deus, qui loquutus est Moysi—. Iren. p. 232. Vide Bull. sect. ii. cap. 5.

“He that spake to Moses out of the “bush, and manifested himself to be “the God of the Fathers, he is the “God of the living. For who else can “be the God of the living, but the “God that has no other God above “him?—Christ with the Father is “the God of the living, who spake to “Moses, &c.”

properly so called, can have no other God above him: but in the particular case of God the Son, he applies the very maxim, and declares that there is no other God above him. What will you say to these manifest truths, which so directly strike at your whole hypothesis? You endeavour to find some shelter, by turning Deus into Greek, making it $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$, which will not do, because it is frequent with Irenæus to give the Son the title of $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ ^d. And if he did not, yet he never appears to lay any such stress upon an article. Nor will the occasion of Irenæus's maxim at all serve you. For though the discourse there is of God the Father, yet his reasoning, whereby he proves that the Person, there styled $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$, could have "no other God above him," will prove the same thing of every other Person so styled, or prove nothing. You produce some citations from Irenæus to prove the "Father superior in authority" (another God above him, you should have said, because you mean it) "to the Son, and the Son subject to him." None of them prove any thing like it, in your meaning of superiority and subjection.

The Father commanded, the Son executed. What then? I answered this above^e. Another pretence is from the words, "conditionem simul, et Verbum suum portans:" which I may leave as I find it, till you make out the consequence: or I may oppose to it, "mensura enim Patris Filius, quoniam et capit eum." Iren. p. 231. Porto may as well signify to bear, or contain, as sustain. Besides that the creatures are said, in the very same place, portare eum; to sustain him, you will say. And much will you make of it, that the Creator of them, mundi Factor, (Irenæus's own words of God the Son, in the same chapter,) was sustained by his creatures. You proceed to observe, that the Son ministered to the Father: you might have observed further, that "he washed his disciples' feet." But see Bishop Bull, who had fully answered these pretences, before you produced them. You further take notice out of Irenæus, that the "Word incarnate hung upon the cross." Who doubts it? You should have took notice likewise of what Irenæus says, in the very same chapter, that this Word was really "Maker of the world, and containeth all things^f." But I am weary of ^d Vid. Iren. p. 211, 215, 271. ed. Bened.

^e See also Bull. D. F. p. 80.

^f Mundi enim Factor vere Verbum Dei est—et secundum invisibilitatem continet, quæ facta sunt omnia.

Lib. v. cap. 18. p. 315.

"The Word of God is really Maker of the world—and in respect of his invisibility, (or invisible nature), contains all things which are made."

pursuing trifles. If Irenæus had had a mind to express the subjection of the Son, and superior dominion of the Father, he knew how to do it. See how he expresses himself, where he declares the subjection of all things to God the Son, and the Holy Spirit, at the same time speaking of their ministration (not subjection) to the Father: which may be sufficient to shew you how wild your hypothesis is, and how little countenance for it you can reasonably hope to find among the ancients.

A. D. 192. CLEMENS ALEXANDRINUS.

I have already produced one plain and express passage, wherein Clemens includes the Father and the Son in the only God. He has more to the same purpose, where he says, "both are "one, namely God^h;" and where he addresses both as *one Lord*ⁱ, and the whole Trinity as one^k. Which I took notice of in my eighth Sermon^l.

You are forced to confess, (p. 80,) that in Clemens's first writings, there are "some sublime expressions, which, if taken "literally, would favour either my notion or the Sabellian," A pretty fair confession; but it would have been still fairer to have said, (which is what the reader must see,) some expressions, too plain and strong to admit of any evasion. All you have to say is, that they are highly rhetorical; which is saying nothing. You are next to oppose other passages of Clemens, to take off their force. Upon which, I may observe, by the way, how disingenuous your claim to the ancients is, in comparison with ours. You think it sufficient, if you can but find any passages which look at all favourable to your scheme, however contradictory (as you understand them) to other clear and express testimonies of the same author. On the other hand, we think ourselves obliged to reconcile the seemingly opposite passages, and to make an author consistent with himself: which if we cannot do, we give him up as neuter, and make his evidence null; unless there be reason to believe, that the author, upon better consideration, had changed his mind, or that some parts of his works are more ¶ Ministrat enim ei ad omnia sua progenies, et figuratio sua, id est, Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus, Verbum et Sapientia; quibus serviunt, et subiecti sunt omnes angeli. Iren. p. 236. Comp. p. 183.

ⁱ His own offspring, and figure, "that is, the Son and Holy Ghost, the " Word, and Wisdom, to whom all " the angels are subject, and do obeisance, minister to him (the Father) " in all things."

^h Ἐν γὰρ ἄμφω, ὁ Θεός. Clem. Alex. p. 135.

ⁱ Ἰὲ καὶ πατὴρ, ἐν ἄμφω Κύριε. p. 311.

^k Clem. Alex. p. 311.

^l Sermons, p. 180 of this volume.

certainly genuine than others. But to proceed, you begin with attempting to deprave the sense of a celebrated place in Clemens, which I shall transcribe into the margin^m. In English it runs thus: "The divine Word, who is most manifestly true God, who "is equalized with the Lord of the universe, because he was his "Son, and was the Word in God." This is a passage very little favourable to your invention of a superior dominion of the Father, and a subjection of the Son: for the Son is here said to be equalized, that is, proclaimed equal to the Lord of the whole universe. You say, equalized implies an exaltation, a delegation, &c. Ridiculous. Can any thing or person be made equal to God the Father, exalted to a parity with him? But a person may be proclaimed equal; which is only shewing what he was before. And Clemens assigns two substantial reasons, why the Son was thus proclaimed; it was his natural and essential dignity that demanded it; for he was God's *own Son*ⁿ, of the same nature with him; and he was the Word that existed in God^o himself; most manifestly therefore true God, and accordingly equalized with God, as he had a right to be. You give us two or three words of Eusebius, as expressing the sense of Clemens. But let Clemens speak for himself, who is a plainer man, and a more consistent writer, than Eusebius; and of whom it is easier to pass a certain judgment. Suppose the words in Clemens to signify equalized in honour, or advanced to equal honour and glory: still, would you have a subject thus equalized with his sovereign? If Christ was equalized in honour and glory, the inference will reach to an equality of nature; which alone could be any sufficient reason or foundation for honouring him so highly. You would have it only, receiving dominion (you do not care to say equal dominion) from the Father. But this comes not up to Clemens's strong expression of equalizing; nor to his reasons assigned for it; the very reasons which he elsewhere gives, why the Father and Son are the one God, ὁ Θεός, abso-

^m Ὁ θεῖος λόγος, ὁ φανερώτατος ὄντως Θεός, ὁ τῷ δεσπότη τῶν ὄλων ἐξισωθεῖς· ὅτι ἦν υἱὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ. p. 86. Adm. ad Gent.

Vid. Bull. D. F. p. 88. Anim. in Gillb. Clerke, p. 1010.

ⁿ Υἱὸς τοῦ νοῦ γνήσιος, ὁ θεῖος λόγος, φωτὸς ἀρχέτυπον φῶς. Clem. Admon. p. 78.

^o Τὸν λόγον τέλειον ἐκ τελείου φύντα πατρὸς. Pædag. p. 113.

^o Compare the following passages of Clemens, explanatory of the phrase ἐν τῷ Θεῷ.

* Ὁ τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ· ὁ τοῦ τελείου παιδίου· υἱὸς ἐν πατρὶ καὶ πατὴρ ἐν υἱῷ. Pæd. lib. i. cap. 5. p. 112.

Τῶν συμπάντων Θεὸν ἓνα μόνον εἶναι, ἀγαθόν, δίκαιον, δημιουργόν, υἱὸν ἐν πατρὶ. Pædag. lib. i. cap. 8. p. 142.

* Ἐν γὰρ ἅμφω, ὁ Θεός· ὅτι εἶπεν, ἐν ἀρχῇ ὁ λόγος ἦν ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος. Clem. Alex. p. 135.

lutely so called, and jointly the one only God and Creator of all things.

Next, you are to search out some other expressions of Clemens, to be pleaded in the way of abatement. Clemens, it seems, says in the same page, that “ he sprung from the will of the Father.” But let the reader see the whole sentence, that he may be apprized of your unrighteous method of citing authors. “ Being “ with utmost celerity diffused upon all men, rising swifter than “ the sun, out of the very will (or heart) of the Father, he most “ readily darted forth God upon us p.” Would you have your reader here deceived into an opinion that Clemens is speaking of the Son’s existing by his Father’s free choice and pleasure? No doubt but that is your meaning, or something very little better; though Clemens is only speaking of his mission to mankind. Elsewhere, you say, he calls him inspector of our hearts by the will of the *Almighty*⁹. But you are as unfortunate in this place as in the other; misconstruing the words, and perverting the sense; as I have elsewhere^r shewn. Παντοκρατορικῶ θελήματι signifies by his own sovereign, all-containing will. That there is no impropriety in applying the epithet παντοκρατορικὸς to will, I proved by parallel instances from other authors; and shall now add one more of the like kind^s. You appear very unwilling to have the Doctor’s criticisms on this passage taken from you: and therefore you endeavour, feebly, to prop them up again, in a note, p. 227. You tell me, that the parallel passages I alleged, do not signify that God is omnipresent or omniscient by his will, but by “ his active governing wisdom.” Be it so: then let the same answer serve for the expression of Clemens; and let Christ be omniscient by his “ active governing wisdom,” and now all is right again. I am not contending for God’s or Christ’s knowing all things by his will, in the Doctor’s sense: but why must Clemens be tied up to the Doctor’s strict sense of will, in the word θελήματι, more than other authors, who have likewise used the phrase of all-containing will, as well as Clemens? The Doctor’s fanciful speculations against the phrase (Script. Doctrine, p. 294.) are of as much weight against the phrase in other authors,

^p Τάχιστα δὲ εἰς πάντας ἀνθρώπους διαδοθεῖς, θάπτον ἡλίον ἐξ αὐτῆς ἀνατείλας τῆς πατρικῆς βουλήσεως, ῥάστα ἡμῖν ἐπέλαμψε τὸν Θεόν. Clem. p. 86.

^q Τὸν κύριον Ἰησοῦν, τὸν τῷ παντοκρατορικῷ θελήματι ἐπίσκοπον τῆς καρδίας ἡμῶν. p. 611.

^r Defence, vol. i. p. 338. Sermons, p. 160 of this volume.

^s Τοῦ θεοῦ καὶ παντοκρατορικοῦ καὶ ἀλύτου τῆς ἀγαθότητος αὐτῆς ἔρωτος. Pseudo Dionys. Areop. de Divin. Nomin. cap. x. p. 829.

as in Clemens ; that is, of no weight at all, but to shew the folly of interpreting phrases by speculation and fancy, instead of looking into authors, to see how they have been used. You was to say something, it seems, however wide, rather than give up a favourite criticism.

You say, Clemens calls the Son θέλημα παντοκρατορικόν which is true ; but it does not there signify the same as πατρικόν θέλημα, but all-containing wisdom, or will again ; as is plain from the very place itself, where Clemens also styles him δύναμις παγκρατῆς, all-containing power^t. And it is the very reason given by Clemens, why he may be known to all, even to those that have not acknowledged him ; he is παγκρατῆς, and παντοκρατορικὸς, present to all, or containing all. Had Clemens intended your sense, he would rather have expressed it by πατρικῶ θελήματι, as usual^u ; or θελήματι τοῦ πατρὸς ^x, or the like. Nor can you give any instance out of Clemens, of παντοκρατορικὸς, but where it either must, or however may, bear the sense I have given. The phrase παντοκρατορικὸν βούλημα (p. 857.) comes the nearest to the other. But it is there manifest, from the context, that it ought to be interpreted in the same way as I have construed θέλημα παντοκρατορικόν. I much question whether παντοκρατορικὸς is ever used for τοῦ παντοκράτορος, in the way that Dr. Clarke contends for. It is certain, that the other which I contend for is most proper, and is most usual and customary in Greek writers. This, I hope, may be sufficient to put an end to a weak criticism, which has nothing in it. Now let us go on.

As to the Son's ministering, I have before answered : and as to the passages you have selected, one would think you had took them out of Bishop Bull ; only leaving out the Bishop's solutions^y : which is a very unfair way of protracting a controversy.

As to second cause, you do not meet with it in Clemens ; δεύτερος αἴτιος^z signifies no more than secondary causer, τάξει δεύτερος, second in order in causal operations. Besides that, if it strictly meant more, allowance must be made for Clemens, while he is adapting the Platonic to the Christian Trinity, if he uses the Platonic terms ; though they may not quadrate exactly.

^t Σοφία δὲ καὶ χρηστότης φανερωτάτη τοῦ Θεοῦ, δύναμις τε παγκρατῆς, καὶ τῷ ὄντι θεία· οὐδὲ τοῖς μὴ ὁμολογούσιν ἀκατανόητος, θέλημα παντοκρατορικόν. Clem. p. 647.

^u Vid. Clem. p. 99, 150. Comp. p. 86, 125.

^x Vid. Clem. p. 156, 710.

^y Vid. Bull. Def. F. p. 90.

^z Clem. Alex. p. 710.

You next cite Clemens for styling the Father μόνον ὄντως Θεόν, and introducing the Son as joining in hymns of praise to him. As to μόνος, or other the like exclusive terms, Clemens made no account of them, in exclusion to the Son, as before seen; besides that, the Son is not only ὄντως Θεός, truly God, with Clemens, very frequently^a, but even μόνος Θεός, only God^b, and only Judge^c, and only Master^d. All authors I have met with thus use exclusive terms; it being a rule of common sense, and custom of language, that such exclusive terms are to be strained no further than they are intended in opposition to such or such things. As to the Son's joining in hymns of praise, you should have told your reader, that he is supposed by Clemens, in that very place, to do it as in capacity of High-Priest^e. I can scarce without indignation find such things as these offered by men pretending to letters, or the least ingenuity.

You run on, about Clemens's styling the Father the one God, supreme over all; though every body knows it never was intended in opposition to God the Son, but to Pagan deities: as is plain from what hath been said. You next come to observe that Clemens styles the Son Πρωτόκτιστος^f. This indeed was worth remarking, and a thing fit to be offered in the way of objection; though Bishop Bull had given a good answer to it long ago^g. It is an allusion to Proverbs viii. 22. where Wisdom is said to have been created, that is, appointed head over the works of God^h; which I shall shew, in due time and place, to have been the ancient and Catholic sense of that text: nor can any Ante-Nicene Father be produced for the other sense of creation, in regard to that text. The stale pretence about Photius and the hypotyposes, hath been answered over and overⁱ. However, it is a mere fancy of yours, that Photius's censure upon the hypotyposes was grounded upon a passage found in his Stromata. I

^a Clem. Alex. p. 86, 647, 690.

^b Clem. Alex. p. 84, 142. See also another passage of his Pædagogus, where he seems to be speaking of God the Son: the words are, ὁ ὄντως Θεός, ὁ ὢν αὐτὸς τὰ πάντα, καὶ τὰ πάντα ὁ αὐτός, ὅτι αὐτὸς Θεός, ὁ μόνος Θεός. p. 150. Compare a passage of the Stromata, l. 4. οὐ γίνεται ἀτεκνῶς ἐν ὧς ἐν, οὐδὲ πολλὰ ὡς μέρη ὁ υἱός, ἀλλ' ὡς πάντα ἐν, ἔνθεν καὶ πάντα.

^c Clem. p. 99.

^d Ibid. p. 309.

^e Ἀμφὶ τὸν ἀγέννητον (leg. ἀγέννητον)

καὶ ἀνώλεθρον, καὶ μόνον ὄντως Θεόν, συνυμνοῦντος ἡμῖν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου. ἁβδίου ὄντος, Ἰησοῦς εἶς, ὁ μέγας ἀρχιερεὺς Θεοῦ τε ἐνός, τοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ πατρὸς, ὑπὲρ ἀνθρώπων εὐχεταί, καὶ ἀνθρώποις ἐγκελεύεται. Clem. Alex. p. 92, 93.

^f Clem. p. 699.

^g Bull. D. F. p. 90.

^h Ὁντος ἀπάντων τῶν ἀγαθῶν, θελήματι τοῦ παντοκράτορος πατρὸς, αἴτιος ὁ υἱός καθίσταται, πρωτοουργὸς κινήσεως δύναμις ἀληπτος αἰσθήσει. Clem. p. 833.

ⁱ Bull. Def. F. p. 91. Grabe, Instances of Defects, p. 13, &c.

have now said enough in vindication of Clemens; and he must be a very orthodox writer indeed, when in so large a volume, and wrote before the Arian controversy was started, he appears to have been so well guarded as to leave room only for very frivolous exceptions; such, perhaps, as might most of them be found even in many of the Post-Nicene writers, or in Athanasius himself.

What you say after in p. 83. is worth the taking notice of, for the peculiar turn of it; and because it may let the reader into the true state of the dispute between us. You tell me, I am "forced into the absurd inconsistency of confounding a priority of mere order (which expresses a perfect coordination "of persons equally supreme in authority) with a subordination of "authority and dominion." You are troubled, it seems, that I will not suffer two of the Persons to be thought really subjects, or servants, that is, creatures of the first. I am very earnest and serious in it; nor will I yield that momentous point to you, till you are able to prove it. As to inconsistency, you shall see that there is none of mine, it is all your own. I have sometimes wondered with myself, how I came to be charged by the modest Pleader, &c. with making a coordination of the Persons; when I every where admit a priority of order in one, a subordination in the other two. But now the secret is out: a coordination is not a coordination, and a subordination is not a subordination, if it be only of order; though I was so weak as to think that the words coordination and subordination, strictly and properly, respected order, and expressed an equality or inequality of order. But you have a mind to use the word coordination for what an accurate man would call coequality: and so I am charged with holding a coordination. I confess the charge: I always held a coequality of the Persons, though I never before knew that it must be called coordination. And while I profess a subordination, I as constantly declare against inequality. If this does not content you, I cannot help it: it is not my fault, nor indeed yours, (for you have done your utmost,) that your arguments demand no more. I will still maintain a priority of order, together with coequality. And if you insist upon it, that priority of order is no priority of order, but a coordination; every reader, I suppose, may see whose is the inconsistency, yours or mine. Besides a subordination of order, which is natural, I have also allowed a subordination in office, which is economical. Is this also nothing more than a "mere position and order of words?" True, it is not making the Father a sovereign over the Son as his natural subject, because I never intended it: nor will you ever be able to prove any thing like it. But let us proceed.

A. D. 206. TERTULLIAN.

Tertullian is so full and clear for all the three Persons being one God, that I need not again produce things so well known. You yourself have confessed it: but now you come in to plead for abatements; which, if you have ever so good a right to them, will not, however, make Tertullian an advocate on your side, but a neuter at most, as being inconsistent, and of no credit. But let us see: perhaps he may prove a consistent evidence for us; though it is utterly impossible he ever should for you. You remind me of his being a Montanist when he wrote against Praxeas; which was scarce worth your observing, when you allow in the same page that Tertullian makes Father and Son one God, even in his *Apology*¹, wrote very probably before he was a Montanist: and I should be content to try the merits of the cause by that Treatise alone, which would furnish you with few or no pretences against his orthodoxy in this article. But to come to the business.

You first fall upon him for making the Son no more than a “small part of the Father’s substance.” To which I answer, that if Tertullian indulged his fancy too far in explaining the doctrine, yet he may be a good evidence of the Church’s general doctrine, that Father and Son are one God. However, I think this objection has been well answered by Bishop Bull^m and Le Nourryⁿ; whither I refer the reader. All I shall add is this; that if Tertullian, as I have shewn above, sometimes used the term Father in a large sense, (as a head of a family sometimes stands for the whole family together with their head,) then it is no wonder, if God the Son might be called Portio totius, being but one Person of the Trinity, not all; as he styles the Father, unus omnia, dum ex uno omnia^o. This might be illustrated from ^k See my Sermons, p. 181, &c. of this volume.

Pater et Filius et Spiritus, Tres crediti, unum Deum sistunt. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 31.

¹ Quod de Deo profectum est Deus est et Dei Filius, et unus (suppl. Deus) ambo. Apol. c. xxi. p. 203.

^m Bull. D. F. p. 95.

ⁿ Nourrii Apparatus ad Bibl. Max.

vol. ii. p. 1305.

^o The like way of speaking obtained among the Pagans, in respect of their supreme Jupiter, father of the other gods.

Jupiter omnipotens regum rerumque deumque

Progenitor, genitrixque deum, Deus unus et omnis.

August. de C. D. lib. vii. cap. 9. p. 170.

the case of Abraham, considered as the father of many nations, and containing, in a certain sense, all his descendants. Thus was Abraham tota familia, and Levi only derivatio et portio totius; that is, of Abraham, considered in capacity of head and fountain. I do not pretend to be confident, that Tertullian had this thought in his mind: but I suppose it as a probable conjecture, to be further inquired into, to make Tertullian appear the more reasonable and consistent; who was certainly no downright idiot, such as your representation would make of him. Allowing such a supposition as I have here offered, there will be no difficulty in accounting for Tertullian's saying, that the Father is major Filio, greater than the Son, in the manner that he does. For it will amount only to this, that the head, considered as such, is major singulis, as containing all; though it cannot be said of any but the head, because the rest are considered only as single Persons. In the other way, it is certainly downright nonsense to suppose the Father, in his own proper personal capacity, to be the whole: for however small a part you suppose the Son to be, that part must go in to make up the whole; and no single Person, barely considered as such, can be called the whole. But consider the Father in capacity of Head, in the sense before intimated, and then the notion is just, and has nothing absurd, or strange in it. I may further argue against Tertullian's making the Son a small part, as you say, of God's substance, from what he says of the omnipresence of the Son, in as full and ample terms as can be used of the omnipresence of the Father himself^p.

You go on (p. 77.) to speak of the Son's exercising the Father's power: right; because the Father's and his are one^q.

^p Habes Filium in terris, habes Patrem in cælis: non est separatio ista, sed dispositio divina; cæterum scimus Deum etiam intra abyssos esse, et ubique consistere, sed vi et potestate: Filium quoque, ut individuum, cum ipso ubique. Tamen in ipsa œconomia, Pater voluit Filium in terris haberi, se vero in cælis. Tertull. adv. Prax. c. xxiii. p. 514.

"The Son you have upon earth, and the Father you have in heaven. This is no separation, but a divine economy. Furthermore, we are certain that God is even in the abysses, and present every where, but in virtue and power; the Son also, as individual, (or undivided), is with him every where. But, according to the economy, the Father would so have it, that the Son should be considered as being upon earth, and himself as "being in the heavens."

^q Omnia, inquit, Patris mea sunt. —Suo jure omnipotens, qua Sermo Dei omnipotentis, quaque omnium accipit potestatem. cap. 17.

Pater omnia tradidit in manu ejus — a primordio tradidit. Ex quo, a primordio Sermo erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Sermo, cui data est omnis potestas in cælo et in terra — Omnem enim dicens potestatem — et omnia tradita in manu ejus, nullam excep-

You add, "by the Father's will:" yes, and by his own too, for both are the same, because their substance is one^t. You say indeed in your Preface, p. 6, 7. that Tertullian affirmed the same thing even of angels, or rational souls, that "they were generated " from the substance of the Father:" and to shew that you really believe it, you quote (p. 55.) three places of Tertullian, to prove it. Had this been the case, I would have given you up Tertullian for a madman. But it is your misfortune, in two of the places, very innocently to give us Marcion's tenet for Tertullian's own. And as to the third place, out of his book against Praxeas, it is very wide of the purpose; being no more than this, that God breathed into man the breath of life, a peculiar privilege of man above all the animal creation. See below^s what he says of angels.

But to proceed; You talk of the Son's subjection, as from Tertullian: concealing from your reader that it is of a subjection posterior to the incarnation, an economical subjection: and that Tertullian denies any subjection, such as you are aiming at, in full and express terms^t. You add, "upon this disparity of the Son " to the Father, (directly contrary to your notion of an equality " in supreme authority,) as well as upon his notion of consubstantiality, does he ground his denial of two Gods." False every word: how can you let your pen loose, to write at this rate? Tertullian's notion of one common supreme authority is exactly the same with mine^u: that the three Persons are of one state, one substance, one divinity, one supreme power and authority, as being one God. When Tertullian says, non statu sed gradu, by gradus he means order, as Bishop Bull hath observed, D. F. p. 96.

And where does Tertullian found his denial of two Gods upon the disparity of Father and Son? Or where does he resolve the Unity, as you do, into the Father alone, casting out God the Son from the one Godhead? His constant way is to take in both, tionem temporis permittit; quia omnia non erunt, si non omnis temporis fuerint. cap. 16.

^r Quale est ut Deus divisionem et dispersionem pati videatur in Filio et Spiritu Sancto—tam consortibus substantiæ Patris, &c.—Cæterum, qui Filium non aliunde deduco, sed de substantia Patris, nihil facientem sine Patris voluntate, omnem a Patre consecutum potestatem, &c. Adv. Prax. cap. 3, 4.

^s Angelorum—alienorum a sub-stantia Patris. Contr. Prax. cap. 3.

^t Sophiam—non sibi subditam, non statu diversam, &c. Tert. contr. Hermog. cap. 18.

^u Tres autem non statu sed gradu, nec substantia sed forma, nec potestate sed specie: unius autem substantiæ, et unius status, et unius potestatis, quia unus Deus. Contr. Prax. cap. 2.

Trinitas, unius divinitatis, Pater, Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus. De Pædicat. cap. 21.

and thus he makes of both but one God. What you cite from his 13th chapter is not at all to your purpose. He plays a while with Praxeas, telling him, that if he would be so hard, as to insist upon it that Father and Son must be two Gods, on the Catholic scheme, then let them be so; and let him at least grant, that Father and Son may be two Gods, the Son having certainly as good, or much better right to be called God, than many others whom scripture has so styled. But after he had thus argued a while ad hominem, and ex hypothesi, he returns to his position, that they are not two Gods^x, but one God, because of unity of substance and original. His reasoning, in short, comes to this, that if the Catholic doctrine, as Praxeas insisted, must be Ditheism, then let it be so; so long as it is Scripture Ditheism, and the doctrine certainly true, whatever name it be called by: but still a very good reason may and has been assigned why it is not, and therefore ought not to be called Ditheism; because Father and Son are really one God, as being of one substance, and the Son referred up to the Father as his head and source. This is the sum of Tertullian's thoughts on that head; which are as contrary to yours, as light to darkness.

You have another little shift grounded upon Tertullian's blaming Praxeas for making the Father incarnate, whom he there calls ipse Deus and Dominus omnipotens; as if Tertullian might not emphatically style the Father God, without denying it of the Son. Those phrases there are nothing but so many periphrases for God the Father, and do not at all relate to your purpose: unless denying the Father to be incarnate, be denying Christ's supreme divinity; where I see nothing like a consequence.

As to Tertullian's asserting a temporary generation, it is common to him and many Catholic writers, both Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene^y; and has no difficulty in it, when rightly ^x Duos tamen Deos et duos Dominos nunquam ex ore nostro proferimus — Nam etsi soles duos non faciam, tamen et solem et radios ejus tam duas res et duas species unius indivisæ substantiæ numerabo, quam Deum et sermonem ejus, quam Patrem et Filium. Tert. contr. Prax. cap. 13.

Si Filium nolunt secundum a Patre reputari, ne secundus duos faciat Deos dici, ostendimus etiam duos Deos in Scriptura relatos, et duos Dominos; et tamen ne de isto scandalizentur, ra-tionem reddidimus; qua Dei non duo dicantur, nec Domini, sed qua Pater et Filius duo: et hoc non ex separatione substantiæ, sed ex dispositione, cum individuum et inseparatum Filium a Patre pronuntiamus, nec statu sed gradu alium; qui etsi Deus dicatur, quando nominatur singularis, non ideo duos Deos faciat sed unum, hoc ipso, quod et Deus ex unitate Patris vocari habeat. cap. 19.

^y Hilarius in Matt. p. 742. Zeno Veron. ap. Bull. p. 200. Phœbadinus.

understood. What you add from Tertullian's Tract against Hermogenes, is indeed of some weight, and the most material objection that his works can furnish you with. Yet you should not have concealed from your reader, that Bishop Bull^z has spent a large chapter particularly in answer to it: and it must appear very strange, that Tertullian, who at other times speaks so highly of God the Son, should designedly contradict so many clear and plain passages of his works, by denying the coeternity of the Son, and reducing him to a creature. Is the divinity, subsisting in three, similar with itself, one only, and capable of no degrees, (the express doctrine of this writer,) and yet made up of eternal and temporary, Creator and creature, differing infinitely? Is eternity and immutability contained in the name and notion of God, and particularly as applicable to God the Son^a, and yet the Son have neither eternity nor immutability? In a word, can Tertullian pretend, that an inferior God is nonsense and contradiction^b, and at the same time assert a creature, a being of yesterday, to be God, nay, and one God with the Father? These are such glaring and palpable absurdities, that a man of any tolerable capacity or thought (and Tertullian was a man of no mean abilities) could scarce have been capable of admitting them. Wherefore they are to be commended, who have endeavoured to bring Tertullian out of these difficulties, and to reconcile, if possible, the seeming repugnances. There was one way left for it, which the excellent Bishop Bull, and after him the learned Le Nourry, has taken. Tertullian is known to have distinguished between Ratio and Sermo, both of them names of the selfsame Λόγος, considered at different times, under different capacities; first as silent and unoperating, alone with the Father, afterwards proceeding, or going forth from the Father; to operate in the creation. With this procession he Bibl. Patr. tom. 4. Prudentius. Hymn. xi. p. 44. Rupertus Tuitiensis. Pseud-Ambros. de Fid. Orthod. cap. ii. p. 349.

^z Bull. D. F. sect. iii. cap. 10.

^a Deum immutabilem et informabilem credi necesse est, ut æternum. Transfiguratio autem interemptio est pristini. Omne enim quodcumque transfiguratur in aliud, desinit esse quod fuerat, et incipit esse quod non erat. Deus autem neque desinit esse, neque aliud potest esse. Sermo autem Deus; et Sermo Domini manet in ævum, perseverando scilicet in sua forma. Adv. Prax. cap. 27. Vid. Bull. p. 245.

^b Neque enim proximi erimus opinionibus nationum, quæ si quando coguntur Deum confiteri, tamen et alios infra illum volunt. Divinitas autem gradum non habet, utpote unica. Contr. Hermog. cap. 7. Deus non erit dicendus, quia nec credendus, nisi summum magnum. Nega Deum quem dicis deteriorem. Contr. Marc. lib. i. cap. 6.

supposes (as do many others) the Sonship properly to commence. So that though the Logos had always existed, yet he became a Son in time; and in this sense there was a time when the Father had no Son; he had his Λόγος, his living substantial Logos, his Σοφία, with whom he conversed, as his Counsellor: but the Logos was not yet a Son, till he came out to create. This notion of a temporal Sonship was what Tertullian endeavoured to make some use of in his dispute with Hermogenes, who asserted matter to be eternal, unmade, and unbegotten; in short, self-existent in the highest sense. Tertullian thought it might be an argument ad hominem, against Hermogenes, that he hereby made matter in some sense higher than even God the Son; while he supposed it absolutely underived, and in no sense derived or begotten at all; which was more than could be said of God the Son, who was begotten, and proceeded of the Father. This appears to have been Tertullian's real and full meaning, however he happened, in the prosecution of the argument, to run some expressions rather too far; as is often seen in the heat of dispute, in very good writers. Allowing him only the favour of a candid construction, he may at length be made consistent; and his other expressions stand without contradiction: and he has the greater right to it, upon the principles of common equity; since one obscure passage ought never to be set against many, and plain ones.

You proceed to obviate a passage which we are wont to cite for the equality. I have cited others stronger and fuller, which you have not took notice of. Your correction of patrem for parem, is what I had met with before, and it seems to me very just. But your quotation from his book de Jejunis, to take off the force of the words æquat et jungit, does not so well satisfy me: because there is a great deal of difference betwixt æquat when used absolutely, and when only in a certain respect. However, as I never insisted upon the force of the word æquat in that place, nor have any occasion for it, after so many other more certain and less exceptionable evidences of Tertullian's making Father and Son one God supreme; so I shall not be at the trouble to inquire further about it.

Our next author is,

A. D. 240. HIPPOLYTUS.

This writer you bear somewhat hard upon: spurious and interpolated are the names you give him. I must first see upon what grounds; and then proceed with him, if we find him genuine. In a note to p. 39, you are pleased to favour me with your reasons. We need say nothing of Dr. Mill, who I presume had never seen the Greek of Hippolytus against Noëtus. Neither need we lay any great stress upon Photius's calling the whole piece against heresies βιβλιδάριον, a little book, as you say, since we know not by what rules and measures Photius judged of the greatness or littleness of a book, or to what kind of tracts he confined the name of βιβλιδάριον. These things are slight, and such as critics would scarce mention. I find that some very good judges, as Tillemont and Fabricius, (I do not know how many more,) take the piece to be genuine: and nobody can doubt but it is at least so in part; as one may perceive by what is borrowed from it by Epiphanius. The only question is about interpolations. Mr. Whiston was so sanguine as to say, he had evidently demonstrated^c, that it was one half of it interpolated, and by an Athanasian; because Theodorit and pope Gelasius had both of them quoted a passage out of it, which appears much shorter there than in Hippolytus, as now published. You are so wise as to drop Theodorit, being apprized, perhaps, that Theodorit's quotation was not from this treatise against Noëtus, but out of another work of Hippolytus, upon the second Psalm^d: and what great wonder is it, if an author, in two distinct tracts, borrows from himself; expressing the same thought here more briefly, there more at large? Gelasius indeed refers to the Memoria Hæresium: but as his quotation is exactly the same with Theodorit's, and probably taken from him, at second hand; Theodorit is the more to be depended on, as being the elder, and as being a Greek writer, and noted for his accuracy; and his works preserved with greater care than Gelasius's. Whether the mistake of Memoria Hæresium was Gelasius's own, or his transcriber's, an easy account may be given of it; since Hippolytus's piece against heresies was the most noted of any, and was preserved entire for a long season, and besides really had in it a passage very like that other out of his Comments on the Psalms; and it might seem no great matter, which of the pieces they referred to. These considerations shew how little your critical censure of a book is to be depended on: I will therefore still continue to quote Hippolytus as genuine, till I see some better reasons against it than you have here offered. What you hint of its being changed into a homily in latter times, is sufficiently answered by Fabricius, vol. ii. p. 6. Let us now see what Hippolytus has to offer in relation to our main dispute.

^c Mr. Whiston's Answer to Lord Nottingham, p. 10.

^d Τοῦ ἁγίου Ἰππολύτου, ἐκ τῆς ἐρμηνείας τοῦ β. ψαλμοῦ. Theod. Dial. ii. p. 167.

I produced the passages which I most insist upon (to prove that Father and Son are one God) in my Defence, first briefly, (vol. i. p. 287.) and afterwards more at large in my Sermons, above, p. 182, &c. whither, to save myself the trouble of repeating, I beg leave to refer the reader. You have some pretended counter-evidence to produce, as usual, in order to evade the force of what I offered. You say, (p. 90,) that “ though he seems to “ aim at including the Son and Spirit; in some sense in the one “ God,” (it is well however that he does not aim at excluding them, having quite other intentions than you have,) “ yet he “ expressly ascribes to the Father, not a priority of order only, “ but a real supremacy of authority and dominion.” Where are your proofs? The first is, that he talks of the Father’s commanding, the Son obeying: so did Athanasius, Basil, Cyril, Hilary, Marius, Victorinus, and others^e, who notwithstanding would have detested your notion: for they never suspected any thing of subjection or servility in it, but only a different order or manner of operating, so far as concerns the work of creation; and a voluntary condescension, or οικονομία, as to other matters. But Hippolytus says, by this Trinity the Father is glorified. No doubt of it, since nothing can be more for his glory, than to have two such divine and glorious Persons proceeding from him, and ever abiding with him: and they that lessen this glory, lessen him; who, in a certain sense, is the τὸ πᾶν. You add, as from Hippolytus, that the Father “ begat the Son” (that is, sent or shewed him to the world, which is Hippolytus’s meaning^f) “ when he willed, and as he willed.” Undoubtedly in Hippolytus’s sense, just as he sent him to be incarnate of the blessed Virgin, “ when he willed, and as he willed.” All you have further material, I have answered above. You will never be able to shew, that either subordination, or ministration, or the Son’s condescending to become man, and in that capacity a servant to the Father, is at all inconsistent with the notion of both the Persons being one God supreme. You make a show of ^e See my Sermons, p. 63 of this volume.

Or Bull. D. F. p. 80. et alibi.

Or Petavius de Trin. lib. ii. cap. 7.

^f Ὅτε ἠθέλησεν, καθὼς ἠθέλησεν, ἔδειξε τὸν λόγον αὐτοῦ—λόγον ἔχων ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ἀοράτων τε ὄντα τῷ κτισμένῳ κόσμῳ, ὁρατὸν ποιεῖ—φῶς ἐκ φωτὸς γεννῶν προῆκεν τῇ κρίσει κύριον, τὸν ἴδιον νοῦν, αὐτῷ μόνῳ πρότερον ὁρατὸν ὑπάρχοντα, &c. Hipp. contr. Noët. p. 13.

producing the ancients against me; whereas, in reality, you can pick nothing from them more than I am ready to allow, as well as they: and you endeavour to turn what they and I agree equally in, against them, as well as me, by the imaginary strength of two or three false maxims, which you have laid down to yourself, as so many principles of reason. It might be pleasant to observe, what a dance you are leading us through Scripture and Fathers, and all for amusement; while the true secret of the business is kept behind the scenes.

The case lies here. Scripture and Fathers agree in these three things, as I also do. 1. That the Son, from the time of his incarnation, was really subject, in one capacity or other, to God. 2. That before his incarnation he ministered to the Father; as well in the creation, as in all transactions between God and man. 3. That, as a Son, he is subordinate to the Father, referred to him as his Head. Now your way is to take one or more of these three premises, and from thence to draw your inference against the Son's being God suprema. This inference you draw from these premises, first, as found in Scripture. The same inference you draw from the same premises, as found perhaps in Justin Martyr; the same inference again from the same premises, as found in Irenæus; and so quite through the Fathers. But a man may ask, since the premises are taken for granted on both sides, might it not be a much shorter and clearer way, to wave further proof of the premises from Scripture and Fathers, and to lay all the stress upon making out the inference, in a set dissertation to that purpose? Right: but then every body would see (what is not to be told) that it is not Scripture or Fathers you depend on, but philosophy; which, while you mix it all the way with Scripture and antiquity, is not thought to be, what it really is, the true source and spring of the opposition you make to us; and which, while it is behind the curtain unperceived, is yet the only thing that raises all the disturbance. But to proceed.

A. D. 249. ORIGEN.

Origen, one of the most learned and considerable writers of his age, was another voucher I had produced for the truth of the doctrine that Father and Son are one God^f. I have before vindicated the true construction of the passages, and have observed, ^f "Ἐνα οὖν Θεόν, ὡς ἀποδεδώκαμεν, τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱὸν θεραπεύομεν. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 386.

"We therefore, as we have shewn,

"worship one God, the Father and "the Son."

^g See what I have said above; and compare my Sermons, p. 182. of this vol.

from the circumstances, of what moment such a resolution as that of Origen, in so critical and nice a point, (on which depended the grand question of Polytheism between Christians and Pagans,) is, and ought to be, when duly considered. You pretend, p. 82, it is not clear that Origen's words must bear my sense. I do not wonder at your holding out in such a place as this: it must trouble you to find yourself condemned in the most important article of all; and that by Origen too, whom you would have to be a favourer of you, as he is much a favourite with you. But as to the sense of his words, it is so exceeding clear, from the whole scope and context, that nothing can be more so. See what I have said above. What then must be done next? Still you say, admitting my construction, it is not to my purpose. What! not to my purpose that Father and Son are one God; which is what I quoted it for? And if they are one God, they are one God supreme. You add, that Origen, in that very place, "explains at large how the Father and Son are one, "and also what sort of worship is to be paid the Son." The sense, you pretend, is, "that Christians still worshipped but one "God," (the Father, I suppose, you mean,) "because they worshipped the Father by or through the Son." Ridiculous: for so Celsus and all the wiser Pagans worshipped but one God; because they worshipped the one supreme, by and through all their other deities. How then did this answer clear the Christians from the worship of Æeods, Gods, more than the Pagans? Was Origen no wiser than to expose himself and his cause to ridicule, by so weak a reply? The strength of his solution rests entirely upon this, that Father and Son are but one God; and therefore the Christians worshipped not many: he takes in both, to make the æv, the unum, the one thing worshipped: otherwise there was no occasion for saying that they were one; one in nature, (as I understand by this instance of believers, who were all of the same nature, and as such equal), and one also in concord, agreement, and sameness of will: which is the very account which Post-Nicene Fathers also give of the Unity; as Hilary, Epiphanius, Cyril of Jerusalem, Gregory Nyssen, and Austin, referred to in my Defence^h. I shall here only cite the last of themⁱ, who may speak for all the rest. I shall have occasion

^h Defence, vol. i. p. 485, &c.

ⁱ Hi tres, quia unius substantiæ sunt, unum sunt; et summe unum ubi nulla naturarum, nulla est diversitas voluntatum. Si autem natura unum essent, et consensione non essent; non summe unum essent: si vero natura dispares essent, unum non essent. Augustin. contr. Max. lib. ii. p. 698. Etiam nos quippe incomparabilem hereafter to discourse you fully upon the head of worship, and to vindicate Origen from your misrepresentations. It may suffice, for the present, to say, that the considering the two Persons under distinct offices (a good rule for the regulating the direction of our prayers) is no argument either against the Son's being supreme God, (which is no word of office,) or for two worships, sovereign and inferior, which you contend for.

The other passages of Origen which you refer me to (in pages 4, 5, 10, 23, 28, 31, 49, 56, 70.) are most of them taken from Origen's less accurate, or interpolated writings; which are of no weight, any further than they agree with his piece against Celsus. And what you have out of that very piece has been mostly answered by Bishop Bull, and is not to your purpose.

The passage you quote (p. 10.) shews one advantage the Christians had, that they could plead a command for the worship of Christ, which the Pagans could not for their deities: not that this was all they had to say, but it was something, and too considerable to be omitted. What you cite, p. 24, I answered in my Defence, (p. 488,) referring also, in my later editions, to Bishop Bull and Mr. Bingham^k. What you have, p. 28, is only that God the Son was sent. Your citation, p. 31, is answered by Bishop Bull^l. What you have, p. 49, is full for a perfect equality of all essential greatness^m, and therefore is directly against you. And I must charge it on you as a false and groundless report of Origen, when you say (p. 83.) that he is one who in his whole works does "most fully, clearly, and " expressly insist on the direct contrary to my notion." So far from it, that in his latest, best, and most certainly genuine work, he is all the way directly contrary to your notion, and conformable to mine; as Bishop Bull has abundantly demonstrated: nor have you so much as pretended to confute what the Bishop has said.

A. D. 256. CYPRIAN.

I cited Cyprian in my Sermonsⁿ, in proof of the three Persons consensus voluntatis, atque individuae caritatis, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, confitemur; propter quod dicimus, Hæc Trinitas unus est Deus. August. contr. Max. lib. ii. p. 720. See my Defence, vol. i. p. 488.

To the same purpose speaks Theodorit, or Maximus.

Εἰς Θεὸς οὐχ ὡς τριώνυμος, ἀλλ' ὡς οἱ ἐν Χριστῷ κατηγορημένοι, εἰς τῷ λόγῳ τῆς συμφωνίας καὶ τῆς φύσεως. Theod. Dial. IV. ad Maced. tom. v. p. 373.

^k Bull. Def. F. p. 121. Bingham, Orig. Eccl. lib. xiii. cap. 2. p. 45.

^l Bull. Def. F. p. 262.

^m See above, p. 414.

ⁿ Sermon VIII. p. 183 of this vol.

being one God. He does not use the very words, but he sufficiently intimates the thing. I shall not here repeat what I said, but refer the reader to it.

A. D. 260. DIONYSIUS of Rome, with his clergy.

This author I also cited in my Sermons^o. We have but a small fragment of him preserved by Athanasius: but it is of admirable use for shewing the doctrine of the Trinity, as professed by the Church of Christ at that time. Sabellius, who had started up but a few years before, gave occasion to the Church to reconsider and to clear this article.

One may see from Dionysius, not only what speculations some at that time had, but also what were approved, and what not. We have no less than four hypotheses there intimated: and all condemned but the one only true one.

1. One was the Sabellian, making the Son the Father, and the Father the Son^p; which Dionysius condemns.

2. A second was of those who, in their extreme opposition to Sabellianism, made τρεις αρχας, three principles; and, of consequence, τρεις υποστασεις ξενας αλληλων πανταπασι κεχωρισμενας, three independent, separate Hypostases, unallied to each other, and not united in one head. This is condemned as Tritheism; and as being near akin to the Marcionite doctrine of three principles; (against which I presume the Canon, that goes under the name of apostolical^q, was first made;) and which Dionysius censures as diabolical^r doctrine. Here it is observable, that we meet with three Hypostases, first introduced in the third century, in opposition to the Noëtian and Sabellian doctrine of one Hypostasis, and thought very proper to express the sense of the Church; provided the Hypostases were not made separate, as so many heads, or principles. For the Church has always condemned the notion of τρεις αρχικαι υποστασεις^s. Origen is, I think, the first writer now extant that makes mention of two or more Hypostases in the Trinity.

3. A third opinion which some were likewise apt to fall into, in opposition to Sabellius, was to make the Father only the one God; reducing the Son, and, of consequence, the Holy Ghost, to ^o Sermon VIII. p. 184 of this vol.

^p Ὁ μὲν γὰρ (Σαβέλλιος) βλασφημῆι, αὐτὸν τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι λέγων τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἐμπάλιν. p. 231.

^q Apost. Can. 49. ubi damnatur quisquis baptizavertit in τρεις ἀνάρχους.

^r Μαρκίανος γὰρ τοῦ ματαιόφρονος δίδαγμα, εἰς τρεῖς ἀρχὰς τῆς μοναρχίας τομῆν καὶ διαίρεσιν, παιδεύμα ἐν διαβολικόν, &c. Dionys. p. 231.

^s See Basil. de Sp. S. p. 130.

the condition of precarious beings, or creatures. But this also is condemned by Dionysius, in smart terms, as blasphemy^t in a very high degree.

4. After rejecting the former three false and heretical tenets, he at length gives us the true faith of the Church, to this purpose. "Therefore it concerns us by all means not to divide the "venerable divine Unity (or Monad) into three Deities, nor to "lessen the superlative majesty and greatness of our Lord by "making him a creature ; but to believe in God the Father "Almighty, and in Christ Jesus his Son, and in the Holy Ghost ; "and that the Word is united with the God over all: for, he "says, 'I and my Father are one;' and 'I am in the Father, "and the Father in me.' So shall the divine Trinity, as also "the sacred doctrine of the Unity, be preserved^u." This was his decision of that important article ; which he had also expressed before in words to the same effect, which may here also be cited. "The divine Word must of necessity be united with "the God of the universe, and the Holy Ghost abide and dwell "in God ; and the divine Trinity be gathered together and "united into one, as into a certain Head, I mean the God of the "universe, the Almighty^x."

You will observe how the Unity is solved by Dionysius, not by making the Son and Holy Ghost subject to the Father, but by including them in the Father ; not by the Father's governing them, but by his containing and comprehending them. And though Dionysius styles the Father the God of the universe, and emphatically παντοκράτωρ, he at the same time declares the Son to be strictly God, or no creature : and he does not afterwards weakly retract what he had said of the Son, by throwing him again out of the one Godhead ; but wisely and consistently takes him in, as "one with the Father," included in him, and reckoned to him. These were true and Catholic principles sixty

^t Βλάσφημον οὖν, οὐ τὸ τυχόν, μέγιστον μὲν οὖν, χειροποίητον, τρόπον τινα, λέγειν τὸν κύριον. εἰ γὰρ γέγονεν υἱός, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν—ἀποπάτατον δὲ τοῦτο. Dionys. p. 232.

^u Οὐτ' οὖν καταμερίζειν χρή εἰς τρεῖς θεότητας τὴν θάυμαστήν καὶ θεῖαν μονάδα· οὐτε ποιήσει κωλύειν τὸ ἀξίωμα, καὶ τὸ υπερβάλλον μέγεθος τοῦ κυρίου· ἀλλὰ πεπιστευκέναι εἰς Θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα καὶ εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, ἠνώσθαι δὲ τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν λόγον· ἐγὼ γὰρ, φησὶ, καὶ ὁ πατήρ, ἔν ἑσμεν· καὶ ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατήρ ἐν ἐμοί· οὕτω γὰρ ἂν καὶ ἡ θεία τριάς, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον κήρυγμα τῆς μοναρχίας διασώζοιτο. Dionys. p. 232.

^x Ἠνώσθαι γὰρ ἀνάγκη τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν θεῖον λόγον· ἐμφιλοχερεῖν δὲ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐνδιαυτᾶσθαι δεῖ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· ἦδε καὶ τὴν θεῖαν τριάδα εἰς ἓνα ὥσπερ εἰς κορυφήν τινα, τὸν Θεὸν τῶν ὄλων τὸν παντοκράτορα λέγω, συγκεφαλαιούσθαι τε καὶ συνάγεσθαι πάσα ἀνάγκη. p. 231. Athan. vol. i.

years before Arius was heard of; and they will be such while the world stands.

I might here add the other Dionysius of the same age, and witness of the same faith. But, having produced him twice before, once in my Sermons^γ, and again in these papers^z, I shall here pass him over.

A. D. 318. LACTANTIUS.

I had barely referred to this author, as an evidence of the Church's faith, that Father and Son are one God, and that the Son is not excluded by the texts of the Unity: and of this he is as full and plain an evidence as it is possible for a man to be, however he may differ in other points; as I never pretended to say he did not. But here you exclaim, (p. 83,) of the "strange abuse made of quotations and second-hand representations." One would think you had had some such book as Scripture Doctrine before you; which would indeed have furnished you with "variety of strange abuses^a." And had you found one, by chance, in me, you might have spared the exclamation for the Doctor's sake. But to proceed: we may learn this from Lactantius, that the common way of answering the charge of Tritheism was, not by excluding the Son from being one God with the Father, but by including both in the one God^b. We learn further, that they are consubstantial to each other, and to be adored together as one God. Nevertheless, since Lactantius had elsewhere dropped some expressions which appeared hardly, if at all defensible, I never laid much stress upon Lactantius's ^γ Sermon VIII. p. 185 of this vol.

^z See above, p. 419.

^a See the Doctor's manner of quoting exposed in my Defence, vol. i. p. 533, &c.

^b Cum dicimus Deum Patrem, et Deum Filium, non diversum dicimus, nec utrumque secernimus, quia nec Pater sine Filio esse potest, nec Filius a Patre secerni: siquidem nec Pater sine Filio nuncupari, nec Filius potest sine Patre generari. Cum igitur et Pater Filium faciat, et Filius Patrem, una utriusque mens, unus Spiritus, et una substantia est. Sed ille quasi exuberans fons est, hic tanquam defluens ab eo rivus; ille tanquam sol, hic tanquam radius a sole porrectus: qui quoniam summo Patri et fidelis et charus est, non separatur, sicut nec rivus a fonte, nec radius a sole, quia et aqua fontis in rivo est, et solis lumen in radio: æque nec vox ab ore sejungi, nec virtus aut manus a corpore divelli potest. Cum igitur a prophetis idem manus Dei, et virtus, et sermo dicatur, utique nulla discretio est: quia et lingua sermonis ministra est, et manus in qua est virtus, individue sunt corporis portiones. Lact. lib. iv. cap. 29.

Filius et Pater, qui unanimes incolunt mundum, Deus unus est; quia et unus tanquam Duo, et Duo tanquam unus—Unum Deum esse tam Patrem quam Filium Esaias ostendit, &c. Ad utramque personam referens, intulit, præter me non est Deus, cum posset dicere præter nos—merito unus Deus uterque appellatur, quia quicquid est in Patre ad Filium transfuit, et quicquid est in Filio a Patre descendit. Lib. iv. cap. 29.

authority, as to the main question : though I might with a much better right have done it than you generally lay claim to Fathers, while you think it sufficient if you can but cite a passage or two which you imagine to be on your side ; never regarding how to reconcile many other much stronger ones against you. I am persuaded, if I have been to blame, it has been on the modest side ; not insisting so far upon Lactantius as I might justly have done. I shall now examine whether you have not claimed a great deal too much, and I too little, in respect of this author.

It is certain you can never make him a consistent evidence on your side. You can never reconcile his consubstantiality, and his doctrine of the two Persons being one God, to your principles ; so that you have little reason to boast of an evidence which at best is not for you, but either against you, or else null and none : and could you have been content to have had him set aside, without insulting me upon it, I might perhaps have let you pass. But now I shall examine what right you have to him. You say, p. 55, and again, p. 86, that his sense of una substantia is not clear, and that it might not perhaps be taken in the metaphysical sense. But nothing can be clearer than his sense of una substantia, both from his similitudes (as that of the same water in fountains and streams, and the same light in the sun and its rays,) as also from the name of Manus given to the Son of God, and his observing that the tongue and hands are individua corporis portiones, undivided parcels of the same body. Where, though the comparison be gross, and the explication savouring too much of corporeal imaginations ; yet the meaning is evident, that he intended the selfsame substance, both in kind and in number, to belong to Father and Son ; as much as you design the same substance in kind and in number, of any two parts of the one extended divine substance. You observe also, (p. 55,) that Lactantius makes angels to be from the “substance of God.” If he did, he has disparaged a certain truth relating to the Son of God, by mixing with it a foolish Manichæan error about angels ; having been imposed upon by some heretical books. Yet Lactantius has no where said what you affirm of him. He has no where said that angels are “of God’s substance,” as he has said plainly of God the Son. You can only collect it from obscure hints and dark innuendos. He uses some coarse comparisons about God’s breathing out angels, and speaking out his Son. But he never pretends that angels are one substance, or one God with the Father. He says of the Son, that he was conceived in the mind of the Father, (mente conceperat;) which he never says of angels. He says of angels, that they were “created for “service:” of the Son, he only says, that he proceeded^c. In a word, allowing only for his including the Son and angels together under the general name of breathings, which may mean no more than productions, and differing infinitely in kind, though agreeing in the common name; (as γενετὰ likewise is a name comprehending things that proceed by creation or generation, in time or eternally,) I say, allowing only this, there appears nothing in Lactantius but what may fairly stand with his other principles, above recited^d. For if, according to Lactantius, God breathed, that is, produced his Son from his own substance, but breathed, or produced angels not from his own substance, but from nothing, as he breathed into man a soul^e; (Gen. ii. 7.) then there is no further ground for your censure upon him. That this was really his meaning, and all his meaning, I incline to think, as for several reasons before hinted, so also for this, that in the very chapter of the Epitome (cap. 42.) you refer to^f, he makes a manifest difference between the production of the Son and of angels. The Son was de æternitatis sue fonte, and de Spiritu suo. There was not only breathing, but breathing from the very “fountain of his eternity;” that is, from his own substance: whereas angels are only said to be de suis spiritibus, from his breathings. So he makes it the peculiar privilege of God the Son, that he was breathed out, tanquam rivus de fonte, and ex Deo Deus^g: which he never says of angels, any more than of human souls; which he also derives de vitali fonte perennis Spiritus^h, from the fountain of his breathings, but not from his substance; as I have also remarked of Tertullian above. Indeed most of the Fathers laid great stress upon the text in Genesis

^c Ad ministerium Dei creabantur. Ille vero, cum sit et ipse spiritus, tamen cum voce et sono ex Dei ore processit, &c. Lib. iv. cap. 8. Comp. cap. 6.

^d Vid. Nourrium, Appar. ad Bibl. vol. ii. p. 798.

^e Vid. Lactant. lib. ii. cap. 13.

^f Deus in principio, antequam mundum institueret, de æternitatis sue fonte, deque divino ac perenni spiritu suo, filium sibi progeniit, incorruptum, fidelem, virtuti ac majestati patriæ respondentem—Denique ex omnibus angelis quos idem Deus de suis spiritibus figuravit, solus in consortium summæ potestatis adscitus est, solus Deus nuncupatus. Lactant. Epit. cap. 42. p. 104, 105.

^g Lactant. Instit. lib. iv. cap. 8.

Quoniam pleni et consummati boni fons in ipso erat, sicut est semper, ut ab eo bono tanquam rivus oriretur, longeque profunderet, produxit similem sui spiritum, qui esset viribus Patris præditus, lib. ii. cap. 9.

^h Lactant. Instit. lib. ii. cap. 12. p. 182.

ii. 7. God's breathing into man's nostrils the "breath of life;" a privilege peculiar to man above the animal creation¹: something of God's own infusing and inspiring, something of a purer and diviner substance, spiritual and enduring; the breath of the Almighty, a resemblance, a shadow, an imperfect copy of the Divinity itself. Thus far the Fathers carried the notion: and you seem to have mistaken it for the Marcionite and Manichæan notion of souls being the very substance of God: a notion which the Fathers detested; and I doubt not, Lactantius among the rest.

Your next objection against Lactantius is, that he supposed the Son to be only mentally contained in God, and afterwards begotten into a Person. You ground your conjecture upon a passage which you cite p. 88. and again, p. 120. I have certainly a better right here to say that the sense is not clear, than you had with relation to una substantia: and the liberty you take of translating comprehendit in effigiem, (or ad effigiem, as some editions have it,) formed into a real Person, is pretty extraordinary. The learned Le Nourry gives a quite different construction of that obscure passage; and which to me appears more probable than yours. But supposing the author to have expressed himself somewhat crudely in this place, in relation to the Son's generation, (which he at the same time professes to be inexplicable,) you very well know that the same author elsewhere speaks as crudely even of the Father himself; whom he supposes to have had a beginning, and to have made himself. His words are, "Since it cannot otherwise be, but that whatever exists must have sometime begun to be, it follows, that since nothing was before him, he must have sprung from himself, Deus ipse se fecit, God made himself." Lactant. lib. i. cap. 7.

¹ Τὰ μὲν ἄλλα κελύων μόνον πεποίηκεν, τὸν δὲ ἄνθρωπον δι' αὐτοῦ χειροῦργησεν, καὶ τὴν αὐτῷ ἴδιον ἐμφύσησεν—ὅπερ ἐμφύσημα λέγεται Θεοῦ. Clem. Alex. p. 101.

"Ὅς γὰρ καὶ τοῦ ἐμφύσηματος ἐν τῇ γενέσει μεταλαβεῖν ἀναγέγραπται, καθαρωτέρας οὐσίας παρὰ τὰ ἄλλα ζῶα μετὰ τῶν. Clem. Alex. p. 698.

Incorporales animæ, quantum ad comparisonem mortalium corporum. Insufflavit enim in faciem hominis Deus flatum vitæ.—Flatus autem vitæ incorporalis. Sed ne mortalem quidem possunt dicere ipsum flatum vitæ existentem. Irenæus, p. 300.

Animæ suæ umbram, Spiritus sui auram, oris sui operam. Tertull. de Resurr. Carn. cap. 7.

Intellige afflatum minorem Spiritu esse; etsi de Spiritu accidit, ut aurulam ejus, non tamen Spiritum—capit etiam imaginem Spiritus dicere flatum, nam et ideo homo imago Dei, id est Spiritus. Deus enim Spiritus—. In hoc erit imago minor veritate, et afflatus Spiritu inferior, habens illas atque lineas Dei, qua immortalis anima, qua libera et sui arbitrii, &c. tamen in his imago, et non usque ad ipsam vim divinitatis. Tert. contr. Marc. lib. ii. cap. 9.

This is strange divinity: but the author was a novice; and he at other times talks in a soberer manner. He ought therefore to be interpreted with candour, and with some grains of allowance. If you take advantage of every obscure or uncautious expression, you will make him as heterodox in respect of the real divinity of the Father, as you suppose him to be with regard to the Son. But if you please to interpret him with candour, and to explain any obscure or incidental passage by what is plain, and is expressed more at large; he may then perhaps be found, upon the whole, sound and orthodox in relation both to the Father and Son. You next speak (p. 89.) of the Son's entire subjection and obedience to the will and commands of the Father: yet taking no notice of Lactantius vindicating to both the same inseparable honour, as being one God^k. The subjection you mention is intended only of what was since the incarnation, and therefore nothing to the purpose. And as to Christ's not setting himself up for another God, (which appears to be Lactantius's real and full meaning in the passage you cite^l), I suppose it may be admitted without any scruple. Or at most, it can amount to no more than this; that in the opinion of Lactantius, Christ (during his state of humiliation) never called himself God, lest he should thereby give offence, and be misconstrued as preaching up another God. How otherwise shall the Apostles or Lactantius himself be justified (by that way of reasoning) in giving the title and character of God to Christ?

I conclude with repeating what I before said, that admitting some things in Lactantius (a catechumen only, and not fully instructed) to be such as do not perfectly agree with Catholic principles; yet on the other hand it must be confessed, that there are many other things taught by him, which can never be tolerably reconciled with yours^m: so that you have the less ^k Duo esse dicentur, in quibus substantia, et voluntas, et fides una est. Ergo et Filius per Patrem, et Pater per Filium. Unus est honos utrique tribuendus, tanquam uni Deo, et ita dividendus est per duos cultus, ut divisio ipsa compage inseparabili vinciat; neutrum sibi relinquit, qui aut Patrem a Filio, aut Filium a Patre secernit. Lactant. Epit. cap. 49. p. 140, 141.

^l Fuisset enim hoc non ejus qui miserat, sed suum proprium negotium gerere, ac se ab eo, quem illustratum venerat, separare. Lactant. lib. iv. p. 354.

Vid. Nourrii Apparat. vol. ii. p. 799.

^m Solus habet rerum omnium cum Filio suo potestatem: nec in angelis quicquam nisi parendi necessitas. Lact. Inst. lib. ii. cap. 16. p. 197.

"The Father alone, with his Son, has dominion over all: nor doth any thing belong to the angels, but the necessity of obeying."

Here Lactantius plainly ascribes one common dominion to the Father reason to boast on that head. You are pleased to observe, (p. 120,) that Bishop Bull gives up "this author as not reconcilable to his opinion:" you should have said, not reconcilable, upon the whole. For the Bishop suspected some passages to have been foisted in, being not reconcilable with others; or else that the author himself, being a very raw divine, had fallen into gross contradictions. But Bishop Bull insisted upon it that some passages of Lactantius were directly opposite to the men of your principles, and not reconcilable with Arianism: as they certainly are not.

A. D. 335. EUSEBIUS.

We now come to a man that lived after the rise of the Arian heresy; and who is supposed by all sides and parties to have had a tincture of it more or less; and especially in his writings before the Council of Nice. A testimony therefore from him in proof of the Father and Son being one God is the more considerable; since nothing could extort it from him, but either the force of truth, or the strength of tradition, or the currency and prevalence of that persuasion in his time. And which soever of these it were, it is very much to my purpose, though Eusebius might at other times contradict it. I cited Socratesⁿ for the truth of the fact, that Eusebius himself confessed one God in three Hypostases: nor do I see any reason to suspect his credit. He had his account, as he declares, from original letters which passed at that time. And whatever Eusebius might privately write, he might not have assurance enough, in public debate, to gainsay a thing which all Catholics allowed. Any one may see, by Eusebius's oration before Constantine, how tender he was of dropping any thing like Arianism in the face of the Catholics, who, he knew, would not bear it. He there speaks as orthodoxly of the blessed Trinity as a man can reasonably desire. His words are: "The ternary number first shewed justice, teaching equality; having equal beginning, middle, and end: and these are a representation of the mystical, most holy, and majestic Trinity; which compacted of a nature that had no beginning, and is uncreated, contains in it the seeds, reasons, and causes of all things that have been made. And the power of the and the Son; and intimates, that God between him and angels.

 the Son is exempt from any necessity ⁿ Socrat. Eccles. Hist. lib. i. cap.
of obedience by the opposition made 23.

“ number Three is rightly styled the ἀρχή, the source of all “ things.”

Thus far Eusebius: and he that could say this, (which is really stronger,) may very well be supposed to say the other, which Socrates reports of him. Now, either Eusebius was sincere in what he has here said, or he was not. If he was, then he is an evidence on my side, and I have a right to claim him as such: if he was not, still it shews what the prevailing doctrine was, and which Eusebius durst not but comply with in his public speech; and this is an additional confirmation of Socrates's report, which relates to what Eusebius acknowledged in public conferences. The same also is confirmed by his subscribing the Nicene faith, drawn up upon the same principles which I am here defending.

Let this suffice in proof of my third article, that the ancients have all along believed and taught, that Father and Son are one God; and therefore God the Son was never thought to be excluded from the one Godhead by the texts which concern the Unity. I have waved all disputable authorities: but because there are some considerable testimonies in Ruinart's select Acts of Martyrs, which though not so certainly genuine as those before given, have yet no certain mark of spuriousness, I may throw them into the margin ^p, for the reader to judge of as he sees cause. There can hardly be any clearer, or less contested point than this I have been mentioning. It runs, in a manner, quite through the Fathers down to the times of Arius. The only writer I have met with within this compass, that can with any show of reason be thought to make an exception, is Novatian, Presbyter of Rome; who, with Novatus of Carthage, in the year ° Πρώτη δὲ τριάς δικαιοσύνην ἀνέδειξεν, ἰσότητος καθηγησαμένη: ὡς ἂν ἀρχὴν, καὶ μεσότητα, καὶ τελευταίην ἰσην ἀπολαβοῦσα: εἰκὼν δὲ ταῦτα μυστικῆς, καὶ παναγίας, καὶ βασιλικῆς τριάδος· ἡ τῆς ἀνάρχου καὶ ἀγενήτου φύσεως ἡρτημένη, τῆς τῶν γενητῶν ἀπάντων οὐσίας τὰ σπέρματα, καὶ τοὺς λόγους, καὶ τὰς αἰτίας ἀπειλήφε· καὶ τριάδος μὲν δύναμις εἰκότως ἂν ἄρα παντὸς ἀρχῆς νομοθείῃ. Euseb. Orat. Paneg. cap. 6. p. 730.

Conf. Jobium, apud Photium. Cod. 223. p. 605, 612.

Τῆς τοῦ ὀρθογωνίου τριγώνου δυνάμεως, ἅπερ ἔστιν ἀρχὴ τῆς τῶν ὄλων γενέσεως. Phil. de Vit. Contempt. p. 899.

^p Christum cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto. Deum esse confiteor. Act. Epipodii Mart. A. D. 178. Ruin. p. 76.

Dominum enim Christum confiteor, Filium altissimi Patris, unicum unicum. Ipsum cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto, Unum solum Deum esse profiteor. Act. Vincentii Mart. A. D. 304. apud Ruinart. p. 369.

Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum adoro: Sanctam Trinitatem adoro, præter quam non est Deus. Acta Euplii Mart. A. D. 304. apud Ruin. p. 407.

Adorem Trinitatem inseparabilem, quæ Trinitas Unitas Deitatis est. Id. p. 408.

251, began the schism called after his name; and in the year 257, or thereabout, (it could not well be sooner by his mentioning Sabellius,) wrote a tract upon the Trinity, still extant. That he was in the main orthodox, as to the point of the Trinity, I think plain enough from the tract itself; as has been shewn also by Le Moyne, Gardiner, Bull, and other great men. But his way of resolving the unity of Godhead into the Father alone, (not very consistently with his comment on John xvii. 3, if it is to be made sense of,) appears to me somewhat particular, and not very agreeable to the Catholics of that time. He seems to me (which I speak however with submission to better judgments) to have taken much such a method in explaining the doctrine of the Trinity, as some very worthy men^q amongst ourselves did about thirty years ago, when the controversy was rife in England. It was to admit of a higher and a lower sense of the word God; the higher supposed to have nothing above the other but self-existence or unoriginateness: the Father then was supposed to be God in the highest sense as unoriginate, but still the Son and Holy Ghost each God in a sense infinitely higher than any creature can be; being necessarily existing, and wanting nothing but unoriginateness. This, I say, was the scheme which some worthy men amongst us at that time took into; and which Dr. Clarke has endeavoured to make some advantage of, as falling partly in with his scheme; though differing in the main point of all, the necessary existence. This method of solving the Unity was thought the more plausible, as most easily accounting for the Father's being so often styled the one, or only God: and there was this thing further to recommend it, that it seemed very happily to stand clear of the most considerable difficulties raised about one being three, and three one. The main charge it lay liable to, was that of Tritheism: which yet neither Arians nor Socinians could with any face object to it; their respective schemes being equally liable to the like charge; and whatever evasions they should contrive, the same would, with a very small change, serve as well this, or better. But after all, to say the truth, this scheme can never be perfectly cleared. Tritheism may be retorted upon an Arian, as Ditheism upon a Socinian, and so they may throw the charge back one upon another; while a Sabellian, a Jew, or a Pagan might maintain the charge against them all. Nor is there any way of avoiding it, but the same which the ancient Church in general went into, viz. the including all the three Persons in the one God. I have shewn however, what may be justly pleaded for Novatian's orthodoxy, in the main point, the essential divinity of all the three Persons; though he otherwise took a way somewhat peculiar, and almost dropped the Unity: Unity of Godhead, I mean; for as to Unity of substance, he is clear enough for it: and therefore he seems to have supposed Father and Son to be two Gods in one substance; though he never so called them, but endeavoured, in his way, to fence off the charge as well as he could, not very judiciously nor consistently. Upon the same scheme perhaps Eusebius's orthodoxy so far may possibly be defended, especially as to God the Son; notwithstanding what the learned Montfaucon has objected, in a dissertation to that purpose. But this by the way only; I shall have another opportunity, lower down, of saying more of Eusebius. Having cleared three of the points which I undertook, viz. that the ancients in general never thought the exclusive terms to affect the Son, never admitted another God, or two Gods; but constantly supposed Father and Son together one God; there remains now only my fourth article, to complete the demonstration of what I intend; namely,

^q Bishop Fowler and others.

4. That the ancients applied such texts of the Old Testament as undoubtedly belong to the one God supreme, to God the Son; considered in his own Person, and as really being all that those texts in their fullest sense imply. The authors by me cited for this purpose, in my Defence, vol. i. p. 291, &c. are Justin Martyr, Theophilus, Irenæus, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertullian, Hippolytus, Origen, Cyprian, Novatian, the Antiochian Fathers, Lactantius, and Eusebius. Most of these have been before considered under the former article, but must now be traversed over again upon this article also, distinct from the other.

Before you come directly to attack the general argument, you have some previous considerations thrown in to prejudice the reader against it: these I must take some short notice of, in the entrance, following your method.

1. You say, my asserting Father and Son to be the "one supreme God, not one in Person but in substance, is directly affirming two supreme Gods in Person, though subsisting in one undivided substance," p. 126. To which I answer, that this is directly begging the question. One substance, with one Head, cannot make two Gods, upon the principles of the primitive churches: nor are your metaphysics strong enough to bear up against their united testimonies, with Scripture at the head of them.

2. You ask, "How comes it to pass that the ancients never say that Christ is the one, or only God?"

Ans. They do say it sometimes of Christ singly^r, often of Christ with the Father; as hath been shewn under the last article: besides that the making Christ the "God of Israel, &c." is saying the same thing; unless there be two Gods of Israel.

3. You ask, "Why do they expressly condemn the applying the title of the one supreme God" (God over all, you mean) "to Christ?"

Ans. They never do condemn the applying the title of God over all to Christ, but the applying it in a wrong sense, and under a false meaning^s, as some heretics applied it. Your references I have answered above.

4. You object, that "all the texts I allege style the Son "Angel, or Messenger." Right: and so the ancients came to know that the texts were not meant of God the Father. The Son is an Angel and Messenger; not by nature^t, but by office, and voluntary condescension.

5. You object, that the ancients thought it "absurd and "blasphemous to suppose that the supreme God should appear, "be styled an angel, &c."

Ans. Blasphemous only for the supreme Father to appear; who could not submit to an inferior office (as they thought) without inverting the order of the Persons. See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, above, p. 251, &c. And I may observe that the Post-Nicene writers, who undoubtedly believed the essential divinity of Christ, yet talked the same way upon that head^u.

^r See my Sermons, p. 96, 97 of this volume.

^s See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, p. 216 of this volume.

^t Dictus et quidem Magni Consilii Angelus, id est Nuntius; officii, non naturæ vocabulo.—Non ideo tamen sic angelus intelligendus ut aliqui Gabriel aut Michael. Nam et Filius a Domino vineæ mittitur ad cultores, sicut et famuli, de fructibus petitur. Sed non propterea unus ex famulis deputabitur Filius, quia famulorum succedit officio. Tertull. de Carn. Christ. cap. 14.

"He is called, indeed, the Angel of "the great Council; that is, the Messenger; which is a name of office,

"not of nature.—He is not therefore "to be thought an angel, like any "Gabriel or Michael. For even the "Son is sent to the husbandmen by "the Lord of the vineyard, as the "servants are, to gather the fruits. "But we must not therefore reckon "the Son as one of the servants, because of his succeeding to their office."

^u Pater non dicitur missus; non enim habet de quo sit, aut ex quo procedat—Si voluisset Deus Pater per subjectam creaturam, visibiliter apparere, absurdissime tamen aut a Filio quem genuit, aut a Spiritu Sancto qui de illo procedit, missus diceretur. August. de Trin. lib. iv. cap. 28, 32.

Vid. Prudentium, p. 165, 168.

I may further take notice to you, that the Catholics, in their charge of blasphemy upon the Sabellians, did not go upon any such principle as you imagine; that the difference of the natures of Father and Son made it blasphemy to ascribe that to one which might be innocently ascribed to the other, but upon quite another foundation; namely, that they thought it blasphemy to ascribe any thing to the Father, seemingly derogatory, or lessening to his Majesty, beyond what Scripture had warranted. And as to their ascribing some inferior offices and services to the Son, they did not justify it by alleging the inferiority of his nature or person, but by shewing that Scripture had ascribed those things to him, and without blaspheming. For the truth of what I say, I appeal to Tertullian in the margin ^x; who was one of those that argued in the manner you mention: and his answer to Praxeas, in relation to this very charge of blasphemy, in a similar case, plainly and evidently discovers what was meant by it; and how little there was of what you suspect in it. For when Praxeas, replying to the charge of blasphemy, had said that there was no blasphemy in supposing the Father to suffer, on his hypothesis, any more than it was blasphemy to make the Son suffer, on the other hypothesis, since neither of them imagined the divine nature to suffer, but the human only; how does Tertullian answer! Not by telling Praxeas of the great disparity between Father and Son; not by insisting upon any inequality; but only by alleging that Scripture warranted their ascribing sufferings to the Son, and did not warrant their ascribing any such to the Father.

6. You add, that the “absurdity of the supposition (in the manner the ancients express it) evidently arises always not from the consideration of paternity, but of the Father’s supremacy, his being the one supreme, self-existent, independent “God of the universe,” (p. 128.)

Ans. This being a secret piece of history which will want proof, we may pass it over: you have told us what you would ^x Ergo, inquis, et nos eadem ratione Patrem mortuum dicentes, qua vos Filium, non blasphemamus in Dominum Deum: non enim ex divina, sed ex humana substantia, mortuum dicimus. To which Tertullian thus answers:

Atquin blasphematis, non tantum quia mortuum dicitis Patrem, sed et quia crucifixum. Maledictione enim crucifixi quæ ex Lege in Filium competit, (quia Christus pro nobis maledictio factus est, non Pater,) Christum in Patrem convertentes, in Patrem blasphematis. Nos autem dicentes Christum crucifixum, non maledicimus illum, sed maledictum legis referimus; quia nec Apostolus hoc dicens blasphemavit. Sicut autem, de quo quid capit dici, sine blasphemia dicitur; ita quod non capit, blasphemia est, si dicatur. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 29.

have said in such a case; but the ancients, I think, had “not so learned Christ.” Let us now proceed to see what those good men say; and how handsomely they can plead for the divinity of their blessed Lord.

A. D. 145. JUSTIN MARTYR.

My argument from Justin stands thus: (see my Defence, vol. i. p. 291.) The Jehovah mentioned, Gen. xviii. 1, 13, and Gen. xix. 24, 27. The God (ὁ Θεός) speaking, Gen. xxi. 12. The “Lord God of Abraham, and God of Isaac,” spoken of, Gen. xxviii. 13. “The God of Bethel,” (Gen. xxxi. 13.) God, (ὁ Θεός) absolutely so called, Gen. xxxv. 1. God calling out of the bush, and saying, “I am the God of Abraham, &c.” Exod. iii. 4. 6. and “I AM that I AM,” the “Lord God, &c.” Exod. iii. 14, 15. “God Almighty,” mentioned Exod. vi. 3. “Lord of hosts,” Psalm xxiv. 8, 10. The Jehovah spoken of, Psalm xlvii. 5. The God mentioned, Psalm lxxxii. 2. and xcix. 1. is the one true God, the one eternal God of the universe, supreme. But, according to Justin Martyr, our blessed Lord is what hath been said, and all that hath been said, in his own Person. Therefore, &c.

Now let us consider what you can have to except against this plain and evident demonstration. I have indeed already answered, or obviated, all you have to say, in another place^y: and therefore shall be so much the shorter now.

You plead, that according to Justin, it were presumption to say that the “Maker and Father of the universe left the super-celestial mansions, and appeared here in a little part of the “earth.” Right; because the Father, upon their principles, was never to be sent, or to act a ministerial part, any more than he was to be incarnate; so that the appearing, even by visible symbols, (which was the only kind of appearing they ascribed to God the Son,) was not thought suitable to the first Person of the Trinity; who, as he is from none, could not, without inverting the order of Persons, be sent by any. It was therefore proper, in that economy, to assign heaven as the seat of residence to the Father, though filling all things, and the earth to the Son, though at the same time filling all things as well as the Father^z.

I must further remind the reader, that you have not a syllable here to plead beyond what Bishop Bull had fully and completely answered long ago^a. And therefore the fair way would have been, not to bring up again those obsolete, and now stale things, fit only to be offered to very ignorant readers, but to have set yourself to answer what the Bishop has said; which might have been an employment worthy of a scholar.

^y Answer to Dr. Whitby, p. 238, &c. of this volume.

^z See Tertullian above, p. 458.

You pretend it to be undeniably certain, from Justin, that "the divine person" appearing was not the "supreme God," &c. whereas it is undeniably certain, that he was the supreme God, only not the supreme Father; another Person from him, not another God, but the same God. See above.

You bid me take notice, (p. 134,) that "the beginning and conclusion of every argument is to shew that Christ is not [ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς, ὁ Κύριος τῶν ὄλων, ὁ ποιητὴς τῶν ὄλων,] but "always subordinately Θεὸς καὶ Κύριος, γεγραμμένος Θεὸς, Ἄγγελος καὶ Θεὸς, καὶ Θεὸς καὶ Κύριος." You may fancy there is something of weight in what you say: but all that know any thing of Justin, know there is nothing in it. Justin uses the several phrases you have mentioned to denote the Person of the Father; and they amount to no more than if he had said ὁ Πατήρ; only there was a cause, a very just one, as I have elsewhere^b intimated, why he chose the other generally, rather than that of ὁ Πατήρ,

There was therefore good reason for Justin's forming his conclusion in the terms he did: and it had been ridiculous to do otherwise. Yet you will find that the titles given to God the Son in those texts which Justin cites, are as high and strong as the highest you have mentioned, and are indeed the very same, many of them, by which Scripture sets forth the supreme majesty, dignity, and perfections of God the Father.

What you say of the title of Κύριος δυνάμεων, Lord of hosts, applied to Christ in Psalm xxiv. by Justin, is rightly observed. And therefore I have hinted above, that the title is understood by Justin, as a name of office; not of nature, as in the Hebrew original: and so we cannot draw so cogent an argument from that title, considered by Justin, as we may from the same title as it signifies in the Hebrew. This I allow, and also that every office is justly referred to the Father, as being first in order, and therefore first considered in every economy and dispensation.

You further argue, that Christ was "made παθητὸς, passible, "by the will of God, for our sakes." Very true, because he was made man for our sakes: not that his divine nature was possible, any more than the Father's. Such is Justin's own account of it, possible as man^c. None of the Fathers ever thought him possible any otherwise. But I am ashamed to remind a scholar of those known things.

^a Bull, D. F. sect. iv. cap. 3. p. 267, &c.

^b Answer to Dr. Whitby, p. 235 of this volume.

You come next to misreport Bishop Bull. You say, (p. 135,) that "to all the places in Justin's unquestionably genuine writings, which thus declare the Word to be the minister of God's will, the learned Bishop Bull opposes one single passage "out of an epistle to Diognetus judged to be spurious." Who would not from hence imagine that the whole cause, in a manner, depended on a single passage of a spurious epistle? But this is a most unjust representation. Let that passage or that epistle be spurious, though if it be not Justin's, yet it is certainly very ancient, and about the same age with Justin; and you yourself have quoted it, without scruple, as Justin's own, (p. 27.) The cause stands very safe without it: and Bp. Bull has defended Justin admirably, and unanswerably from his other certainly genuine pieces^d. All the service that passage does, is only to shew that Justin once expressly denies the Son to be ὑπέρτης. And has he not done the same thing twenty times over, and more, by making him the Jehovah, and God of Israel, God Almighty, &c. But still he allows him to be ὑπέρτης, as he does ἄγγελος, a minister and angel by office, which has nothing absurd or improper in it; since he condescended much lower, even to become man.

You next give us a long passage of Bishop Bull, which shews the great ingenuity of that excellent Prelate. You produce the objection, which the Bishop frankly proposed, at length; but you mangle and misrepresent his solution of it. You say, "he thinks "they meant no more than, &c." Thinks? He has demonstrated that they meant no more. Bishop Bull's own last account of this matter, in answer to Gilbert Clerke, is as follows:

"The sum of my answer is this. Those Doctors of the Church "who wrote before the rise of Arius's heresy, as oft as they "reason thus, It was not God the Father but the Son that "appeared under the Old Testament, and became incarnate in "the fulness of time; the Father is infinite, and cannot be included in a place; is invisible, and cannot be seen by any; "they did not intend to deny the Son of God to be immense and ^c Σαρκοποιηθείς, καὶ ἄνθρωπος αἰδιός, ἅπιμος, καὶ παθητός ὑπέμεινε γενέσθαι. Just. Dial. p. 255. Sylburg.

^d See Bull. D. F. p. 269.

“ invisible, as well as the Father, but only signified barely that “ both all those appearances of God, and even the incarnation “ itself, had relation to the economy which the Son of God had “ taken upon him; which economy could no way suit with the “ Father because of his having no principle from whence he is, “ nor deriving his authority from any besides himself. That “ this was the certain intent and opinion of those ancients, I “ have made appear upon these two accounts. 1. Because, “ upon other occasions, they in many places all confess God the “ Son to be, as well as the Father, in his own nature, immense, “ omnipresent, and invisible. 2. And again, because some of them “ do themselves expressly interpret these their sayings of the “ economy. What therefore has Mr. Clerke to say to this? ”

The short of the matter then is, that it did not suit with the Father to act a ministerial part, or to be subject to any, (as Bp. Bull expresses it elsewhere, meaning the same thing,) because he is from none, and therefore sent from none; lest it should be inverting the order of the Persons.

To this you object, (p. 139,) “ the impossibility of the Father’s “ being a visible messenger is not founded upon his Paternity, “ but upon his absolute supremacy; upon his being subject to “ none, which is inseparable from his being the unoriginate “ Author.” But why do you change the terms? Who ever said that it was absolutely or physically impossible for the Father to act as the Son did? All that is said is, that he could not do it suitably, as not being consistent with that priority of order which as Father he is possessed of. And it is ridiculous of you to found his being subject to none upon his being subject to none, which is idem per idem. But his being subject to none, that is, his never acting a ministerial part, is founded upon this, that he is Father, first Person, Head, from whom every thing descends; which order would be inverted, if the Son were to be at the head, and the Father minister to him. Such ministration therefore is a contradiction to his Paternity, but to nothing else.

You add, “ Nor do the primitive writers ever lay the stress of “ this argument upon the relation of Paternity, but upon the “ supremacy.” That is to say, they do not lay it upon the Paternity, but upon the Paternity: for laying it upon the supremacy of order, which he is possessed of as Father, and no otherwise, is laying it, I think, upon the Paternity. And when you add, (p. 140.) that the Fathers, in ascribing omnipresence to the Son, did not intend thereby "to infer any equality of supreme independent authority;" you only shew how much you are at a loss to make any thing like an answer to Bp. Bull's solution of the main difficulty. For so long as the Son's omnipresence is secured, (which seemed most to be affected by that argument,) the rest is all taken off at once, by allowing a supremacy of order, or, if you will, a paternal authority; which comes to the same, and is no way inconsistent with the Son's equality, either of nature or dominion.

• Bull. Op. Posth. p. 972, &c.

Your quotation out of Clemens, in these words, ("This is the greatest excellency of the Son, that he orders all things according to the will of the Father,") is contrived, as your custom is, in a way very proper for the deception of a thoughtless or ignorant reader. Who would not imagine from the words, as you cite them, that the highest honour of the Son is only to be obedient, and to serve? The reader will be surprised to find how very different the thought is from what Clemens is there upon. His words run thus :

"The most perfect, most holy, most lordly, most princely, most kingly, and most beneficent, is the nature of the Son, which is most intimately allied to the alone Almighty. This is that greatest excellency which orders all things according to the will of the Father, and steers the universe in the best manner, and worketh all things by his indefatigable unexhausted power, &c.^f"

Does not the reader see, by this time, what a cheat you would have put upon him, under the name of Clemens? I mention not, that the Greek will not bear your construction: or if it would, the whole context serves to discover your fraud in it. But perhaps you did not look into the author.

A. D. 181. THEOPHILUS.

Theophilus, in his little piece, afforded me but one text, (Gen. iii. 8, 9.) where God the Son is (according to him) twice styled "the Lord God;" that is, as I understand it, the one true God, the Creator of man, (Κύριος ὁ Θεός,) God absolutely so called, the Jehovah.

^f Τελειωτάτη δὴ, καὶ ἀγνωτάτη, καὶ κυριωτάτη, καὶ ἡγεμονικωτάτη, καὶ βασιλικωτάτη, καὶ εὐεργετικωτάτη ἢ υἱοῦ φύσις, ἢ τῷ μόνῳ παντοκράτορι προσεχιστάτη. αὐτὴ ἢ μεγίστη ὑπεροχὴ, ἢ τὰ πάντα διατάσσεται κατὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ τὸ πᾶν ἄριστα οἰακίσει, ἀκαμάτω, καὶ ἀτρίτῳ δυνάμει πάντα ἐργαζομένη, &c. Clem. Strom. vii. sect. 2. p. 831.

You cite (p. 142.) a passage of Theophilus, which you say (according to your usual style) is “directly contrary to what I refer to him for.” I humbly conceive not. But let us see: Theophilus argues after the same way with other ancients; that the Lord God there spoken of could not be the Father; who never appears because never sent, and is never sent because he has no Father to send him: which is the sum of what all the ancients thought in that matter. The Father was not to be in a place, even by visible symbols; which yet the Son might be, because a Son.

You observe that Theophilus speaks of the Father, not under the character of Father of Christ, but as being $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}\varsigma \kappa\alpha\iota \Pi\alpha\tau\eta\rho \tau\acute{\omega}\nu \delta\lambda\omega\nu$, the God and Father of all things. Right; because he was talking to a Pagan; to whom therefore he adapted his style, calling the Father by such a name as Pagans gave to their “supreme Father of gods and men.” So Justin Martyr, in his Apology, written to the Pagans, gives the Father that title; but in his Dialogue he generally gives him another, more proper to the Jews, because he had then to deal with Jews: and it would not have been proper to give him the name of Father, in the Christian sense, while disputing against those who would not yet own him a Father in that sense; for it would have been begging the question^ε. You have therefore drawn strange consequences from an imagination of your own, which never entered into the head of Theophilus.

But you observe further, that the Son (according to Theophilus) “assumed the Person (not of the Father merely, but) of “(τοῦ Θεοῦ) God absolutely.” That is again not of the Father, but of the Father: for it is the Father he means, the Person of the Father, by τοῦ Θεοῦ, the same whom he had just before called the “Father and God of the universe,” in compliance with the Pagan style. And what cuts off all your criticisms at once, Theophilus observes there, that the Son being God^h as God’s Son, appeared to Adam: as much as to say, that if the Son had not been God, he could not pretend to assert, that he was the Person styled in Genesis, Κύριος ὁ Θεός, the Lord God. But being really God, as God’s Son, there was nothing in that title but what very well suited his Person; and so it was right to interpret Gen. iii. 8. of him. This is evidently the train and πεφυκώς, ὅτι ἂν βούλεται ὁ πατὴρ τῶν ὄλων, πέμπει αὐτὸν εἰς τινα τόπον, &c. Theoph. p. 130.

^ε See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, p. 235 of this volume.

^h Θεός οὖν ἄν ὁ Λόγος, καὶ ἐκ Θεοῦ

course of Theophilus's thoughts in that place; gradually to introduce Autolyohus to admit God's Son; and therewith the Christian religion. This may further shew, that when Theophilus speaks of the Logos's assuming the "Person of God," he means this, and only this; that he acted in the character and capacity of the eternal God: which he might very well do, being himself very God, as well as that other Person, his Father, called "God and Father of the universe:" and it was under this very character he appeared to Adam as his Creator, that is, as "God and Father of all things;" which is not a stronger expression than Κύριος ὁ Θεός, the Lord God applied to him by Theophilus. I shall only add, that Theophilus certainly never intended to assert two Lord Gods, as your hypothesis requires, but one only, the Father with the Logos: and so all concludes in *one God supreme*ⁱ; agreeably to my principles.

A. D. 187. IRENÆUS.

My argument from Irenæus runs thus: "Jehovah that rained upon Sodom," (Gen. xix. 24.) God calling at the bush, and saying, "I am the God of Abraham, &c." (Exod. iii. 4, 6.) "The mighty God" spoken of, Ps. l. The God known in Judah, (Ps. lxxvi. 1,) ὁ Θεός absolutely; God (ὁ Θεός) standing in the "congregation," (Ps. lxxxii. 1.) "The Jehovah reigning," Ps. xcix. 1. The God and Jehovah mentioned, Is. xii. 2. xxxv. 4. Joel iii. 16. Amos. i. 2. God, who has none like him, Mich. vii. 18. "God (ὁ Θεός) that came from Teman," Hab. iii. 3. He that is all this, is the "one God supreme." But such is Christ, according to Irenæus: therefore, &c.

You have little here but repetition of the same threadbare things: that Christ "was not the one supreme God," that is, not the "one supreme Father," which you constantly confound with the other; that he ministered, which I do not dispute, for he died too; that "he fulfilled the Father's commands," which I never questioned; that the Son is "never called by Irenæus the one God," which I much question, and have proved to be false, though the point is not material; that the Son "received power to judge," that is, from whom he received his essence.

ⁱ Theophilus speaking of woman being made from the rib of the man, represents it as an emblem of the divine Unity, in these words:

Οὐ μὲν ἀλλὰ καὶ διὰ τούτου δειχθή τὸ μυστήριον τῆς μοναρχίας, τῆς κατὰ τὸν Θεόν ἄμα δ' ἐποίησεν ὁ Θεὸς τὴν γυναίκα αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔσονται οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν. Theophil. p. 145.

"To signify the mystery of the Unity (or Monarchy) of God, he "made for him a wife, (saying,) And they two shall be one flesh."

What force is there in these trite things? You add, (p. 141,) that Exod. iii. 4, 8. is applied by Irenæus to the "Father only." I know not where; but I am sure that he applies verse the 8th to the Son thrice^k. And if he has any where applied it to the Father also, the reason may be, that since both are the same God, the application may be proper to either; which may be likewise answer sufficient to what you observe of Exod. iii. 14, 15. As to what you have further, p. 142, I refer to what hath been said under a former article, to prove that Father and Son are (according to Irenæus) both together one God.

A. D. 192. CLEMENS ALEXANDRINUS.

My argument from Clemens is to this effect:

He who is "Jehovah," "Almighty God," (Gen. xvii. 1, 2,) "Lord God of Abraham," (Gen. xxviii. 13,) "God of Bethel," ὁ Θεὸς, (Gen. xxxi. 13,) and "Lord God," (Exod. xx. 2,) is the "one God supreme." But such is Christ, according to Clemens: therefore, &c.

Here you tell me (p. 144.) of the Pædagogus being a "juvenile" piece, (which is more than you know^l), or if it be, it is of never the less authority, if not contradicted by his riper thoughts, as it is not. You refer to what you have said above; and I refer to what I have said in answer above. But you further take me to task for what I had said in my Defence, vol. i. p. 295, that Christ spoke the words, "I am the Lord thy God," Exod. xx. 2, in his own Person, according to Clemens^m. This observation, which, it seems, tenderly affects you, you call "absurd" and "perfectly ridiculous." It is easy to give hard names; let us hear your arguments. All you have to plead is this, that "Christ is there observed to speak in his own Person, not "in opposition to his being the representative of the Person of "the Father, but in opposition to his being elsewhere spoken "of in the third Person." Now, I grant it was not intended in opposition to an opinion which nobody at that time was wild enough to hold: but while he is aiming at another thing, he

^k Loquente Filio ad Moysem; Descendi, inquit, eripere populum hunc. Ipse enim est qui descendit, &c. Iren. p. 180.

Nescientes eum qui figura loquutus est humana ad Abraham, et iterum ad Moysem, dicentem, Videns vidi vexationem, &c. Hæc enim Filius, qui est Verbum Dei, ab initio præstruebat, p. 236.

Ipse est qui dicit Moysi, Videns vidi, &c. ab initio assuetus Verbum Dei ascendere et descendere, p. 241.

^l See Grabe's Instances of Defects, p. 10.

^m Πάλιν δὲ ὅταν λέγῃ διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου προσώπου, ἑαυτὸν ὁμολογεῖ παιδαγωγόν· Ἐγὼ Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς σου, ὁ ἐξαγαγὼν σε ἐκ γῆς Αἰγύπτου. Clem. p. 131.

might accidentally drop a sentence which quite overthrows that opinion; which is the truth of the case. For what can be plainer than the words, διὰ ἰδίου προσώπου, in his own Person, and ἑαυτὸν ὁμολογεῖ, he professes himself to be παιδαγωγὸν, the Leader forth, because of his saying, "I am the Lord thy God, who led forth thee out of the land of Egypt?" I translate leader forth, to make the English answer, as the Greek παιδαγωγὸν and ἐξαγαγὼν do. Is there any sense in what Clemens says, if the Person there speaking was the Person of the Father, or any other Person but the Son? But you was to say something to amuse, and was to fill up the rest with hard words. The opposition you have took notice of does not at all alter the case. For whether the Scripture speaks of the Son in the third, or he of himself in the first Person, it is still the Person of Christ.

A.D. 206. TERTULLIAN.

My argument from Tertullian stands thus :

"The Lord God" mentioned, Gen. iii. 8, 9. Jehovah appearing to Abraham, Gen. xviii. 1, 13. and xix. 24. The "God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob," Exod. iii. 4, 6. The "I AM," Exod. iii. 14. The God spoken of, Is. xxxv. 4. "The God, besides whom there is no God," (Is. xlv. 14, 15.) he is the "one true God supreme." But this is Christ, according to Tertullian : therefore, &c.

You have here (p. 145.) two or three little cavils which I have answered above. You next tell me that Tertullian always "declares Christ to have appeared, not in his own name, but in the name of the one supreme God." But where does Tertullian say that he appeared not, or conversed not in his own name? He says indeed in the Father's name, but in his own name too, the name and nature of either being common to bothⁿ. He took no name but what he had a right to : nor said any thing of himself but what was true of himself. And therefore he never said I am the Father, though he often said I am God, or Lord, or Almighty : which deserves your special notice. I allow that he acted in the Father's name, coming with all the authority of the Godhead, common to both, unoriginately in the Father, derivately in the Son. This is coming in the Father's name, and with his authority, to exhibit in and through himself all the majesty and dignity and perfections of the Godhead : being himself a full, perfect, and adequate transcript or image of all that the Father is.

ⁿ Omnia, inquit, Patris mea sunt : Prax. cap. 17. See my Defence, vol. i. cur non et nomina? Tertull. contr. p. 299, &c.

You would have it thought that the Father was "absolutely invisible" (according to Tertullian) "on account of his supreme majesty, but the Son visible, as a comprehensible part;" and yet you very well know, that Tertullian did not allow even the Son to be visible in his divine nature^o, but only by visible symbols voluntarily chosen. And all the peculiar majesty of the Father lay only in this, that he was not to be visible in any way at all; because he was not to minister or to be incarnate. But will you persist in offering the most palpable abuses upon your readers?

A. D. 240. HIPPOLYTUS.

Hippolytus I had cited for one text only, his applying the words "that stretcheth out the heavens like a curtain" (Is. xl. 22.) to Christ. Whoever looks into that chapter, will see that the Person of whom those words were spoken is described all the way in characters peculiar to the one true God. That Person therefore being Christ, according to Hippolytus, the consequence is evident. You have little to say in answer, but what has been abundantly replied to or obviated before. So I pass on.

A. D. 237—244. ORIGEN.

I cited Origen but for two texts, Exod. iii. 4, 6. Psal. xxiv. 8, 10. According to him therefore Christ is "God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob;" "Jehovah," and "King of glory." "You see not," it seems, "how this proves that Origen thought Christ to be the one supreme God." It either proves that, or else that Origen thought there were two Gods of Abraham, two Lords of hosts: which yet Origen, as we have before seen, absolutely denies. So much for Origen.

A. D. 256. CYPRIAN.

My argument from Cyprian runs thus:

He that is "God of Bethel," Gen. xxxv. 1. "The Lord strong and mighty," "Lord of hosts," Psal. xxiv. 8, 10. He that said "I am God," (Psal. xlvi. 10,) and who is called "mighty God," ^o Dicimus enim et Filium suo nomine eatenus invisibilem, qua Sermo et Spiritus Dei: ex substantiæ conditione, jam nunc, et qua Deus, et Sermo, et Spiritus. Visibilem autem fuisse ante carnem eo modo quo dicit, &c. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 14.

"For we say that the Son also, in his own Person, was invisible, so "far as he was the Word, and Spirit of God: and he is so also now, as God, and the Word, and Spirit: the condition (or quality) of his substance requiring it. But he was visible before his incarnation, in such a way as he says," &c.

Vid. Bull. D. F. p. 88. Nourrii App. vol. ii. p. 1310.

and "our God," Psal. l. 1, 3. The God arising, Psal. lxxviii. 1. "God standing in the congregation," Psal. lxxxii. 1. "The God beside whom there is none else," Is. xlv. 14, 15. He that said, "I am God, and not man," Hos. xi. 9. The Jehovah spoken of, Zech. x. 12. "The God in comparison of whom none other shall be accounted of," Baruch iii. 35. He that is all this, is the "one true God supreme." But such is Christ, according to Cyprian: therefore, &c.

In answer hereto you tell me (p. 146.) that "Cyprian has not one word to my purpose." But let the reader judge as he finds, and not give too hasty credit to your blunt sayings. You tell me of Cyprian's styling the Father "the one God, who is Lord of all, of unequalled majesty and power:" but you have not shewn that this was said in opposition to, or exclusive of, God the Son. Nay, it is certain it was not, because Cyprian, in his application of the texts above cited to Christ, has really said as high and as great things of him. What can run higher than that of Baruch? "This is our God, and there shall none other be accounted of in comparison of him." You have nothing further to say, but that "Christ" (i. e. during his humiliation here on earth) "called the Father his Lord and God," by him "prayed to be glorified," and the like. Sure you do not expect an answer as often as you bring up those poor things.

A. D. 270. ANTIOCHIAN FATHERS.

The texts which these Fathers apply to Christ are Gen. xviii. 1, 13. xxxi. 13. Exod. iii. 4, 6. Isa. xxxv. 4. xlv. 14, 15. Hos. xi. 9.

The argument from them will be much the same as that of others before recited. You plead, that "these Bishops are so far from declaring the Son to be the one supreme God, that they expressly, on the contrary, say, that he fulfilled the will of the Father in the creation of all things." Wonderful! So far from declaring it, that they say nothing but what is very consistent with it, or what serves to confirm it. For what is there contrary in his "fulfilling the will of the Father in the creation?" Or what creature could ever be able to execute so high a charge? But here again you discover what it is you rely on; not Scripture or Fathers, but two or three fancies of your own, among which this is one: that the doctrine of the q See my Sermons, p. 63, &c. of this vol.

P Labbè, tom. i. p. 845.

Unity, as held by the Church, is not consistent with a distinction of Persons, order, and offices. Might you not therefore better plainly own to the world that there lies all the difficulty, rather than amuse them with Scripture and Fathers, only to draw such premises as are readily granted; at least by me, who dispute only your conclusion? You repeat some things about the absurdity of the Father's appearing, the Son's being an angel, and the like; which have been before answered, and need not any further notice.

A. D. 257. NOVATIAN.

This author, according to order of time, should have come in before: but I was willing to postpone him, as you had done; because I take him to be somewhat particular, and therefore of distinct consideration; as before hinted.

My argument from this writer will stand thus:

The Jehovah appearing to Abraham, (Gen. xviii.) and raining upon Sodom, (Gen. xix.) The God speaking to Abraham, (Gen. xxi.) "The God of Bethel," (Gen. xxxi.) "The God standing in the congregation," (Ps. lxxxii.) The God mentioned, Is. xxxv. 4. The Jehovah from Zion, (Joel iii. Am. i.) He is the "one true God." But such is Christ, according to Novatian: therefore, &c.

I have intimated my doubts of Novatian before, as to his way of solving the Unity: in which he appears to be various, and not very consistent with his own principles; though orthodox in the main, as to the Son's essential divinity. The Sabellian abuse of the phrase one God, I suppose, might make him the more scrupulous. I have sometimes wondered at it, considering the known principles of that age, appearing in the authors above mentioned. But he was none of the most judicious, nor without his singularities: as is plain from the schism begun by him. I shall now see what you have to say to this writer. You bring up (p. 148.) the whole pretence of God the Father being "immense," and "contained in no place," whereas the Son might be contained, &c. A general answer has been already given to this out of Bishop Bull; which answer is so full and certain, that you know not how to gainsay it. The meaning of the Fathers was no more than this, that God the Father never appeared in a place, no, not by visible symbols, which yet the Son did: and it was by such visible symbols only, that the Son was contained in a place, and not in his divine nature. Novatian himself is a proof of this matter; for he expressly asserts the omnipresence or immensity of God the Son^r. Your other objection is, that Novatian speaks of the Son as being subditus, subject to the Father; which is meant only of the Son's ministering to the Father by voluntary condescension, according to the economy entered into from the creation: so that this is far from proving the subjection which you are aiming at, viz. a natural and necessary subjection of a precarious being to his God and Creator. Novatian would have abhorred the thought. He reserves to the Father solely and exclusively the title of the one God, on account of his supremacy of order and office, (which I think a false way of speaking,) at the same time allowing the Son to be of the same nature and substance; which is plainly making the Son God supreme, and God in the strict sense, according to just propriety of speech. In words then, he may seem in some measure to agree with you: but in reality, he agrees more with me; differing only loquendi modo, or citra mysterii substantiam, from the Catholic doctrine, as Petavius himself confesses of him. Prof. in T. ii. c. 5.

A. D. 318. LACTANTIUS.

There are only three texts cited from this author: Isa. xlv. 6. xlv. 14, 15. Baruch iii. 35. But they are wonderful strong and expressive, "I am the first, and I am the last; and besides "me there is no God:" this he understands of the Father and Son together. "Surely God is in thee; and there is not another God besides thee:" (so he expresses it in his Epitome:) this he understands of Christ; and the other text, out of Baruch, is as full and strong^s. One thing is evident, that Lactantius never dreamed of that strict force of exclusive terms, which you are used to insist upon. For if he had, he must have excluded ^r Si homo tantummodo Christus, quomodo adest ubique invocatus; cum hæc hominis natura non sit, sed Dei, ut adesse omni loco possit? Novat. cap. 14.

"If Christ be only a man, how comes he to be present as invoked every where; when it is not the nature of man, but of God, to be present to all places?"

^s Unum esse Deum tam Patrem quam Filium, Esaias in illo exemplo quod superius posuimus, ostendit cum diceret: Adorabunt te, et te deprecabuntur, quoniam in te Deus est, et non est alius præter te. Lact. Inst.

lib. iv. cap. 29. Epitom. cap. 44.

Sed et alio loco similiter ait. Sic dicit Deus rex Israel, et qui eruit eum Deus æternus: Ego primus et ego novissimus, et præter me non est Deus. Cum duas personas proposuisset Dei regis, id est Christi, et Dei Patris—ad utramque personam referens, intulit, et præter me non est Deus, cum posset dicere præter nos: sed fas non erat plurali numero separationem tantæ necessitudinis fieri. Lib. iv. cap. 29.

Item Jeremias. Hic Deus noster est et non deputabitur alius absque illo, &c. Lactant. Epit. cap. xlv. p. 116.

the Father himself from being God, in virtue of the text of Baruch.

You have nothing of moment to say to Lactantius's citations, which are directly opposite to your principles: but with your usual air, when you are entirely at a loss, you would seem to condemn what you cannot answer. All you can pretend is, that Lactantius styles the Father Deus summus^t, God supreme: and yet it is certain that he supposes the Son to have the same nature and substance with the Father, and to be one God with him; which is what I call making the Son God supreme: and the author cannot be more plainly opposite to my principles in the former part, than he is to yours in the latter. If the parts are not reconcilable, his evidence is null, and of no account on either side. But I conceive, the author may be reconciled by a candid construction of Deus summus; either considered as opposed only to Pagan deities, or as being an inaccurate expression for summus Pater, the supreme Father, by which the author himself interprets it, and meaning no more than that he is supreme in order or office; which I allow. See Le Nourry, Apparat. vol. ii. p. 353.

A. D. 335. EUSEBIUS.

What you were deficient with respect to Lactantius, you endeavour to make up in regard to Eusebius. Here you insult unmercifully: a plain sign that your forbearing to do the like upon other writers, is not owing to your civility or modesty, but to something else. The "learned world" must be called in, and stand "amazed" at my "presumption:" as if none of the learned world had ever taken Eusebius to have any thing orthodox upon the Trinity. I gave a caution in my Defence, vol. i. p. 293, note^m, in regard to Eusebius: and it so stood in three editions

^t Unus est enim solus liber Deus, summus, carens origine; quia ipse est origo rerum, et in eo simul et Filius et omnia continentur. Quapropter cum mens et voluntas alterius in altero sit; vel potius in utroque una, merito unus Deus uterque appellatur: quia quicquid est in Patre ad Filium transfuit, et quicquid est in Filio a Patre descendit. Lact. Inst. lib. iv. cap. 29.

The words et omnia here seem to come in very strangely. Lactantius must think the omnia to be contained in the Father much otherwise than the Son is: else how should he prove the Son one God with the Father, without proving the same of every thing else, as well as of him, by the same argument? Qu. Whether rerum and omnia may not be understood of things divine? all that is divine or adorable in such a sense as Tertullian speaks:

Unus omnia, dum ex uno omnia, per substantiæ scilicet unitatem.

Here omnia stands only for the divine Persons. Arnobius says, In hoc omne quod colendum est colimus.

before you published your piece. This was on purpose to intimate, that I did not pretend to claim Eusebius as entirely on my side; but only so far. And with the like moderation I have always spoke of Eusebius, in my Sermons, and elsewhere, because I would not deceive my reader, nor be confident where a point is disputable. Learned men know how both ancients and moderns have differed in their opinions of this man. Hilary, Jerome, Photius, two Nicephoruses, the second Council of Nice, Baronius, Perron, Petavius, Noris, Sandius, Le Clerc, and others, and at length Montfaucon, have charged him with Arianism: on the other hand, Socrates, Theodorit, Gelasius Cyzicenus, Camerarius, Chamier, Calovius, Peter du Moulin, Florentinus, Valesius, Bull, Cave, Fabricius^u, defend, or at least excuse him. Athanasius^x seems to have thought that he was once an Arian, but at length came over to the Catholic side. Epiphanius says, he was too much inclined to the Arian way; and the learned Pagi (as an ingenious gentleman^y, from whom I have borrowed part of this account, has observed) confesses he knows not what to make of him. Now, in such cases as these, however firmly persuaded a man may be, on this or that side; yet in pure modesty and deference to men of name and character in the learned world, one would speak with caution and reserve: and there cannot be a surer argument of a little mind, than to be insulting and confident on such occasions. After all, the main question is very little concerned in this other about Eusebius; who cannot justly be reckoned among the Ante-Nicene writers, (to whose indifferent judgment we appeal,) as living and writing after the time that Arius had broached his heresy, and raised a faction against the Church; to which Eusebius, by affinity and party, (and perhaps upon principle too,) appears to have leaned. He may however be a good evidence of what the Church taught, in those very points which he endeavoured, by a novel turn, or by some private constructions of his own, to warp from their ancient intendment and significance. And though I cannot pretend to say that he comes entirely into that scheme which I defend, yet sure I am that he can never be reconciled, upon the whole, to yours.

It would be tedious to run through all you have cited from him: it might fill a volume to discuss this single question about Eusebius. I shall content myself therefore with a few strictures, ^u Fabricius, Biblioth. Græc. vol. vi. p. 32.

^x Vid. Athanas. Ep. ad

Afros, p. 896.

^y Mr. Thirlby, Answer to Mr. Whiston, p. 79.

just to abate your excessive confidence. I have admitted that Eusebius did (as some other very worthy men have also done) magnify the glory of unoriginateness rather too far; as if it were a distinct perfection, and not a relation only, or mode of existence, as the Catholics taught: yet you will not find that Eusebius denies the necessary existence or eternity of the Son; however not after the Nicene Council. If you have a mind to gain Eusebius to your side, do not endeavour it by false reports and manifest untruths; lest the reader suspect you even in what you may justly plead from him. You scruple not to say, (p. 150,) as from Eusebius, that the Son is “ styled God and Lord on account of his having received all power and authority from the Father, and ministering to all his commands:” which, in effect, is making a Photinian or Samosatene of him. He nowhere, that I know of, says any such thing: nor do the places you refer to prove any thing like it; unless saying that Christ is God, as being our Creator^z, be the same as saying he is God on account of receiving authority, &c. Eusebius’s constant way of accounting for the Son’s being God, is by resolving it into his being God’s Son^a, and his thereby copying out a perfect resemblance of the Father: and he makes him “ by nature great God^b” on that very account. In one place more besides that before mentioned, he calls him God, as being our Creator, or Maker^c: unless it be there meant of the Father; which if it be, it shews that Eusebius’s looking upon Christ as God because Creator, was no lessening consideration. The reader may well wonder, after this, what could move you to make so strange and false a representation of an author. I may further hint, that, according to Eusebius, the Son could not be God, if he were produced ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων from nothing, or did not participate of the Father’s divinity^d. How does this suit with your notion of his Godship being owing to his receiving of authority? You next produce a passage where Eusebius is arguing that the Father, or God over all, could not have appeared, because it is “ impious to ^z Ὅτε δὲ γενητῶν ἀπάντων καθηγείται τῶν δι’ αὐτοῦ γεγενημένων, ὡς ἂν ἀπάντων ὑπάρχων σωτῆρ, καὶ κύριος καὶ δημιουργὸς—τηνικαῦτα, καὶ Θεός, καὶ δεσπότης, καὶ σωτῆρ, καὶ βασιλεὺς ἀναγορεύοιτο ἂν. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. ii. p. 111.

^a Euseb. Dem. Evang. p. 146, 213, 227.

Contra Marc. p. 7, 62, 68, 69, 72,

111, 123, 127.

Comm. in Psalm. p. 534, 634.

^b Φύσει μέγας ὢν Θεός, καὶ μέγας τυγχάνει βασιλεὺς, ἅτε μονογενὴς ὢν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος. Euseb. in Psalm. p. 629.

^c Κύριος ἡμῶν ἐστὼν ὡς δούλων, καὶ Θεός ὡς πλάστης. Euseb. Com. in Psalm. p. 645.

^d Euseb. Eccl. Th. p. 69. See below, p. 500.

“say God was changed:” and this you leave with your reader. You add another passage of like kind to it: “It can no way be said that the unbegotten and immutable essence of God supreme was changed into the form of a man.” This also you leave for any simple reader to imagine, that Christ, who took upon him human form, is not, according to Eusebius, of immutable essence, but subject to change. Yet Eusebius certainly meant no more than that it was not so suitable to the majesty of the first Person, (whom he calls indeed supreme God, in contradistinction to the Son,) to submit to take upon him any visible symbols, or to be incarnate. As to the nature and essence of the Son, he believed it to be absolutely immutable^e, and liable to no change, as well as the Father’s. Wherefore though Eusebius does insist on the supremacy of the Father, more than other writers before him, (which might bring him under the suspicion of Arianizing,) this is in a manner all he can be said to agree with you in, being directly opposite to you in the main points of your scheme. Such men as Dr. Cudworth, Bp. Fowler, and others amongst us, might perhaps have claimed Eusebius as their own: you and your friends are quite of another stamp; though you are willing to seek some cover and countenance from the few things wherein they agreed with you. The next passage you cite (p. 152.) proves no more than that Eusebius strained the point of the Father’s supremacy too high, in calling the Son a second Lord; which second however was, in his opinion, in a manner infinitely higher and more excellent than your scheme makes him, by depriving him of necessary existence, and reducing him thereby to a creature, which Eusebius declares against more than once. And though I will not undertake to clear Eusebius of Tritheism, or Ditheism; yet it appears plainly enough to me, that he was very far from Arianism; at least, after the Nicene Council.

As to the next text, about which I appeal, you pretend that ^e Μένων αὐτὸς πάλιν αὔλος οἶος καὶ πρὸ τούτου παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ ἦν ὅτε μεταβαλὼν τὴν οὐσίαν.—οὐδὲ τὴν οὐσίαν ἔπασχεν ὁ ἀπαθής, &c. Euseb. Orat. Paneg. cap. xiv. p. 761.

Σχήματι εὐρεθεὶς ὡς ἀνθρώπος ἀλλοίωσιν οὐ τὴν τυχοῦσαν ἔδοξεν ὑπομένειν, ἀναλλοίωτος ὢν καὶ ἀπρεπτός ὡς Θεός. Euseb. in Psal. p. 185.

“He performed all things by the man he had assumed—Continuing “immaterial in himself, such as he had been before this, with the Father, without any change of his substance. Nor did he suffer any thing in respect of his substance, being impassible.

“Being found in fashion as a man, he might seem to undergo no small change, though unchangeable and unvariable as God.”

Eusebius is expressly against me. Why? Because he says that the Son is not $\delta \epsilon \pi \iota \pi \acute{\alpha} \nu \tau \omega \nu$, that is, he is not the supreme Father: which is all you could make of many the like places in Eusebius; were there not others still stronger elsewhere. I could shew you where Eusebius styles the Son $\Theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma \tau \acute{\omega} \nu \delta \lambda \omega \nu^f$, and $\delta \Theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma \tau \acute{\omega} \nu \delta \lambda \omega \nu \xi$, and might translate supreme God, as you do $\delta \epsilon \pi \iota \pi \acute{\alpha} \nu \tau \omega \nu$, were there nothing else to be considered in this matter. But I will not deceive my readers. Nor is there any such peculiar force in the words $\delta \epsilon \pi \iota \pi \acute{\alpha} \nu \tau \omega \nu \Theta \epsilon \delta \varsigma$, that Eusebius might not, as well as the Phrygian martyrs, apply them to the Son^h. But I attend to the sense, not to the phrase. To proceed:

You grow bolder in your next page, (154.) pretending to tell me, from a passage in Eusebius, that “the ancient Church worshipped Christ, not as being the one supreme God, but to the glory of the Father who dwelt in him, and from whom, says Eusebius, he received the honour of being worshipped as God.”

The reader will easily see the drift and purport of these rash words; for which you have not one syllable of proof. Whatever may be thought of Eusebius, the ancient Church stands perfectly clear; as shall be shewn in due time and place. As to your cavil upon the words of Eusebius, (Eccl. Hist. lib. i. cap. 3.) I refer to Valesius’s Notes for an answer. Nothing more certain, than that Eusebius ordinarily founds the worship of the Son upon his being naturally Son of God, or *very God*ⁱ. If he contradicts this in his comment on Isa. xlv. 15, he is the less to be regarded, as being inconsistent: and it is one great prejudice against the notion, that among fifteen Christian writers who have considered and quoted that text^k, he is the only one that ever drew so wild a consequence from it. But the truth is, Eusebius never had a thought of what your words insinuate of him. Let him but explain himself, and all will be very right. It depends upon Eusebius’s notion of the Father’s ^f Euseb. contr. Marc. p. 67, 70.

^g Euseb. Dem. Evang. p. 11.

^h Τὸν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸν Χριστὸν ἐπι-βοιμώμενος. Euseb. Eccl. Hist. lib. viii.
cap. 11.

ⁱ Ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων, καὶ διὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐν πᾶσιν ὁρωμένους τε καὶ ἀφάνεις, ἐπιπορευόμενος τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος. Euseb.
Orat. Panegy. cap. i. p. 719.

^k Οἷα τοῦ καθόλου Θεοῦ παιδαγῆσιον, καὶ αὐτόθεον προσκυνέσθαι. Euseb.
Eccl. Hist. lib. x. p. 468.

Vid. Eccl. Theolog. p. 69, 111.

^k Hippolytus contr. Noët. cap. iv.
p. 8. Cyprian. adv. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 6.
Tertullian. contr. Prax. cap. 13. Patres Antiocheni, p. 845. Lactantius Epit. et Institut. Hilarius, p. 849.
Cyrilli Catech. p. 156. Athanasius, p.
491, 686. Hieronymus in loc. Epiphaninius, vol. i. p. 486. Ambros. de Fid.
lib. i. cap. 2. Marius Victorin. lib. i.
p. 261. Gregor. Nazianz. p. 733. Zeno Veronens. de Nativ. Christi, 1250.

inhabitation; which he fully lays open in another place^l: where he tells us, that the Father in the generation of the Son communicated of his fulness, the fulness of his Godhead, without division or separation; and it is in this respect that in him “dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead:” so that the worshipping of Christ as having the Father dwelling in him, comes to the same with worshipping him as being God of God, eternally begotten^m of the Father; which is Eusebius’s doctrine. And thus Eusebius agrees well with Hilaryⁿ, and other Catholic Fathers.

You go on in triumph (p. 155,) in the most extraordinary manner, imputing to me whatever first comes into your head. All I was to prove from Eusebius was, that the texts there cited were applied to Christ; “determining nothing of his other principles,” as I expressly noted in p. 293. vol. i. Yet neither you, nor any man else, can ever clear Eusebius of the charge of Polytheism and self-contradiction, if, notwithstanding the applying these texts to Christ, he did not think him the one true God. And if he had learned of the Arians a novel way of eluding an argument which the Catholics before him knew nothing of, nor ever used; he is still a witness of the Church’s application of those texts, (which is what I cited him for,) though it be against his own principles. But I am not yet satisfied that Eusebius differed in any main doctrine, except it were in the manner of expressing the Unity; still believing the essential divinity of God the Son. You cite Montfaucon as charging Eusebius with Arianism; at the same time telling us, that he erroneously calls it Arianism. But if that learned man did not know what Arianism is, he might more easily mistake in determining of Eusebius’s doctrine; which is a much more intricate business. The truth is, that learned and judicious man understood very well what Arianism is, and is guilty of no error in that respect: but as to his judgment of Eusebius, it is not so entirely to be depended on. After he has given us a sketch of Eusebius’s doctrine, as being Arian, he does not yet pretend to reconcile all Eusebius’s doctrine to that scheme, to make him, in the whole, a consistent writer: but he still seems to suspect that he may be found various and repugnant; which at last is rather ^l Euseb. contr. Marcell. lib. i. cap. 2. p. 62.

^m Τῆς ἀνάρχου γεννήσεως. Euseb. in Psal. p. 15. Αἰδιον γέννησιον. Euseb. contr. Marc. p. 73.

ⁿ Deus enim in eo est: et in quo est Deus, Deus est. Non enim Deus in diversæ atque alienæ a se naturæ habitaculo est, sed in suo, atque ex se genito manet, Deus in Deo, quia ex Deo Deus est. Hilar. de Trin. lib. v. cap. 40. p. 851.

making him a neutral, than clear for any side°. Nor do I think it would be difficult to acquit Eusebius of the charge of Arianism, at least from the time of the Nicene council.

It is plain enough that he does not ordinarily (for I must except a passage before cited) make Father and Son one principle, or one God; upon which chiefly Montfaucon founds his charge of Arianism. He did not consider that a man might assert the eternity and necessary existence of the Son, and yet throw the supremacy and Unity of Godhead upon the Father alone, as self-existent and God in a higher sense; which others have done besides Eusebius; though, I think, not very judiciously or consistently. Montfaucon takes too much advantage of Eusebius's Demonstratio Evangelica, or other pieces, wrote before the Council of Nice, and contradicted or corrected in several points afterwards by the same Eusebius. I will give two or three examples. In his Demonstratio he makes the Son to be δημιούρημα^p. In his dispute with Marcellus he plainly retracts and contradicts it^q. In his Demonstratio^r, he pretends that nothing can be properly said to be ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, without doubt to gratify the Arians, that they might in a certain sense deny the Son to be ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων. But in his piece against Marcellus he asserts plainly that creatures are ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων^s, meaning that they come from non-existence into existence, (which is the true signification of the phrase,) at the same time denying that the Son is ἐκ μὴ ὄντος, in the same sense of the phrase^t. Wherefore the learned Montfaucon does not do justice to Eusebius, when he imputes to him the opinion of the Arians, that the Son passed from non-existence to existence: for Eusebius plainly denies the Son to be ἐκ

° Quod si in his Eusebius secum pugnare deprehenditur; id sane proprium erroris est, ut consistere non valeat, sibique ipsiadversetur. Prælim. in Euseb. p. 28.

^p Τέλειον τελείου δημιούρημα. Demonstr. lib. iv. cap. 2.

^q Τοῦ δὲ ἐξ αὐτοῦ φύντος υἱοῦ οὐκ ἂν δημιουργὸς λεχθεῖη. Euseb. contr. Marc. p. 68.

^r Μηκέτι εὐλόγως φάναι δεῖν ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων εἶναι τὶ τῶν ὄντων. Euseb. Dem. lib. iv. cap. i. p. 145.

^s Euseb. contr. Marcel. p. 68, 150, 152, 166.

^t Ibid. p. 67, 68, 69, 150.

I shall here cite one passage, being a pretty remarkable one.

Οἱ δὲ δύο δότες ὑποστάσεις, τὴν μὲν ἀγέννητον, τὴν δ' ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων κτισθεῖσαν, ἓνα μὲν Θεὸν ὑφίστανται. ὁ δὲ υἱὸς οὐκ ἐτ' αὐτοῖς, οὐδὲ μοιογενὴς ἔσται, οὐδὲ μὲν κύριος, οὐδὲ Θεός, μηδὲν μὲν ἐπικοινωνῶν τῆ τοῦ πατρὸς θεότητι, τοῖς δὲ λοιποῖς κτίσμασι, καθ' ὃ ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ὑπέστη, παραβαλλόμενος. Æccl. Theol. lib. i. cap. 10.

“ They that admit two Hypostases, “ one unbegotten and the other created “ from nothing, do indeed make one “ God; but in their scheme, the Son will “ be no Son, nor only-begotten, no, “ nor Lord, nor God; having no “ communion of the Father's God- “ head, but being likened to the rest “ of the creatures, as having existed “ from nothing.”

τοῦ μὴ ὄντος, in the same sense that he affirms it of creatures; and therefore must deny his passing out of non-existence to existence, unless he were the greatest prevaricator and shuffler imaginable. If it be said that he intended that creatures were not made out of any thing preexisting, he must then affirm that the Son was out of something preexisting: and then let any man tell me what he could mean by it; except it were that he existed before his generation, having been eternally in and with the Father; of the same homogeneous divine substance that the Father is. But my persuasion is, that Eusebius believed eternal generation; and if so, it is plain enough what he meant by denying the Son to be ἐκ μὴ ὄντος. It does not appear to me that Eusebius denied the Son to be ἀίδιος, though I know Montfaucon charges him with it; and there are more passages than one^u that say something very like it. Eusebius was very earnest in his charge against Marcellus, and was ready to put any the most invidious construction upon his words. As often therefore as Marcellus had made the Son ἀίδιος, Eusebius construes it ἀγέννητος, that he might reduce him to an absurdity; and believing perhaps that ἀίδιος and ἀγέννητος, upon Marcellus's hypothesis, went together and resolved into one. In this sense only I conceive Eusebius to have denied the Son to be ἀίδιος. And if any one narrowly examines the passages, he may find good reason to believe that this is real fact.

It may be questioned whether ever Marcellus asserted the Son to be ἀγέννητος. But Eusebius charged it upon him as a consequence of his hypothesis; and laid hold of ἀίδιος as implying it, and meaning as much with Marcellus, who denied any antemundane generation. But to return. To shew me how low an opinion Eusebius had of God the Son, you quote part of his comment on Ps. cix. (which I cannot find there,) intimating that "by the laws of nature the father of every son is his lord;" and therefore God the Father is Lord and God of the Son. Admitting this rule, I suppose by the same laws of nature, every Son is of the same nature with his Father, and as such equal; and so let the similitude serve equally, if you please, for both. But since you produce one testimony, as you say, from that book, (from Eusebius on the Psalms,) give me leave, in my turn, to produce some few of a very contrary strain to what you would wish.

^u Euseb. contr. Marcell. p. 35, 106, 119.

1. I shall first remind you of Eusebius's accounting for Christ's praying, praying as man for things which himself could bestow, or dispose of as God^x. This seems to run cross to two of your principles. One of which is, that Christ being a subject is to refer all grants entirely to his Sovereign: the other is, that the speaking of Christ in two distinct capacities, in the manner Eusebius does, you would call absurd, (as in p. 233.) as if part of Christ prayed, and another part did not pray; which is your profane way of ridiculing a distinction universally made use of by the primitive churches, and held sacred amongst them.

2. I must next observe to you, that, according to Eusebius, Christ is Creator of all things, (ὁ πάντων δημιουργός^y;) not only so, but ὁ ποιητής^z also, and he created all things by his own power^a. This is a step beyond what Dr. Clarke is yet advanced to; who often talks of the Son's creating by the power of the Father, and interprets Heb. i. 3. "the upholding all things by "the Word of his power," of the Father's power; but is not yet come to say, that it is by the Son's own power. If he does not here contradict Eusebius, he is however vastly short of him; and has not yet discovered any such honourable thoughts of God the Son as Eusebius has done.

3. Eusebius does not scruple to give the Son the title of only God^b, believing it to have been him that so called himself, in opposition to strange Gods, and challenging the Jewish worship as his own due upon that very score. How does this suit with your doctrine about the exclusive terms, and the texts running personally, I, thou, he? By which doctrines, upon Eusebius's principles, you must exclude the Father. I do not therefore cite these and the like passages of Eusebius to prove that Father and Son are one God; but to shew that there is no force (according to him) in your argument drawn from the personal and exclusive terms.

^x Αἰτεῖ μὲν γὰρ ὡς ἄνθρωπος, δίδωσι δὲ τὴν αἴτησιν ὡς Θεός· εὐδοκούντος δηλονότι καὶ συνεργούντος τοῦ οικείου πατρὸς. Euseb. in Psal. p. 53. Vid. p. 142, 366, 698.

^y Ὁ πάντων δημιουργός ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ υἱός. Euseb. in Psal. p. 89. Vid. p. 90, 125, 634.

^z Τοῦ κυρίου καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν ἰδιαυγαχάνει· αὐτὸς γὰρ ἦν ὁ ποιητὴς αὐτῶν. Euseb. in Psal. p. 630.

^a Ὁ τὰδε καὶ τὰδε τῆ σαυτοῦ δυνάμει μεγαλοργήσας, &c. Euseb. in Psal.

p. 318. Vid. p. 616.

^b Λέγω δὲ τὸ μὴ εἰδωλολατρεῖν^b ἐμὲ δὲ μόνον Θεὸν εἰδέναι παρεκλευσάμην — οἷς ἐπιλέγει, ἐγὼ γὰρ εἰμι κύριος ὁ Θεός σου, παριστὰς ἐαυτὸν ὅτε ζῆνον, ὅτε ἀλλότριον, ὅτε πρόσφατον ὄντα Θεόν^c ἦν γὰρ εἰς καὶ ὁ αὐτὸς ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγος, καὶ ὁ πάλαι διαφόρως τοῖς παλαιοῖς χρηματίζων, ὁ δὴ καὶ Θεός Ἰακώβ ἐπικεκλημένος — διόπερ παρακαλεῖται λέγων· Ἐγὼ γὰρ εἰμι κύριος ὁ Θεός σου, &c. Euseb. in Psal. p. 503, 504. Vid. p. 533.

4. Eusebius, in this same book, fully and significantly expresses the immutable eternity^c of God the Son. For applying the words of the 92nd (alias 93rd) Psalm, "Thy throne is established of old, thou art from everlasting," to our Saviour Christ, he takes particular notice of the force of thou art, σὺ εἶ, as denoting immutable existence; agreeably to his explication of the same phrase elsewhere^d.

5. I have above took notice of Eusebius's styling God the Son, "great God by nature," which is a very high and strong expression. I shall here further observe how he interprets the name of Hand of God, given to the Son. Not after a low disparaging manner, as you are used to interpret it, but as Christ is the all-creative power of God^e.

6. I may add a few more observations from Eusebius's Commentary on Isaiah. His comment on Isa. xlii. 8. is pretty remarkable^f; "I will not give my glory to another." Where he takes notice, that it is not said, that "I will give my glory to no one," (for the Son, says he, has the Father's glory), but that it will not be given to another. Now, though Eusebius here comes not entirely into the common and Catholic way of construction, yet he differs very much from you in several particulars, as that the Father's glory is also the Son's glory, and that the exclusive terms do not affect God the Son. I may also take notice how magnificently Eusebius sets forth the Son's omnipresence, both here^g and in his Comment upon the Psalms^h, in words as expressive and full as any can be. Here also Eusebius keeps closer to the sense and language of the Church, in relation to the one Godhead, than he has at other times been observed to do; except in his Oration before Constantine, taken notice of above. His words areⁱ: "There being but one Head, there will be no more than one Godhead, with which is taken in what των δύναμις αὐτοῦ, οὐχ ἑτέρα οὐσα τοῦ δι' οὗ γέγονε τὰ πάντα τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου. Euseb. in Psal. p. 701.

^c Οὕτως γοῦν ἦν ἔτοιμος ὁ θρόνος σου, ἐφ' ὃν σὺν αὐτῷ καθέζεσθαι ὁ γενήσας σε πατήρ παρακείμετο. Καὶ ἔτοιμος ἦν ἀπὸ τότε, ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος, ἐπεὶ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος σὺ εἶ. ἀλλ' οὐκ ἦς, φησὶν, ἀλλ' εἶ. μόνον γὰρ αὐτῷ, σὺ εἶ, λέγεσθαι ἀρμόττει. διὸ καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις εἴρηται· σὺ δὲ ὁ αὐτὸς εἶ, καὶ τὰ ἔτη σου οὐκ ἐκλείψουσι—ἦν μὲν σὺν ἔτοιμος ὁ θρόνος σου ἀπὸ τότε, ἀφ' οὗ δηλαδὴ παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ ἦς, ἐπεὶ καὶ αὐτὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ αἰῶνος σὺ εἶ.

^d Vid. p. 584.

^e Χεὶρ γὰρ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἡ ποιητικὴ ἀπάν-

^f Ἐπιστήσαι ἄξιον ὡς οὐκ εἴρηται τὴν δόξαν μου οὐδεὶν δόσω· δεικνύται γὰρ ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ πατρὸς ἔχων τὴν δόξαν· &c. Euseb. Com. in Isa. p. 520.

^g Euseb. Com. in Isa. p. 428.

^h Euseb. Com. in Psal. p. 707, 708.

ⁱ Ἐγὼ ὁ Θεός, καὶ οὐκ ἔστι παρὲς ἐμοῦ σώζων. μίᾳ γὰρ οὐσῃ ἀρχῇ, μία εἷη ἢ ἡ θεότης ἢ συμπαραλαμβάνεται καὶ ἡ τοῦ μονογενοῦς αὐτοῦ θεολογία. Euseb. in Isa. p. 524.

“concerns the divinity of his only-begotten.” It is much to the same purpose with what he elsewhere says^k, that the Son is partaker of the Father’s Godhead, and is, as it were, to be reckoned to him.

Upon the whole, you will find Eusebius much more favouring my principles than yours; though not fully coming in to either: and you ought hereafter either to reconcile such things as I have here cited out of him, besides many others, to your hypothesis, (which can never be done,) or to leave off boasting on that head. It should be considered that Eusebius lived and wrote at a time when the Arian pretences, being mostly new and untried, appeared therefore the more specious and plausible: and his familiar acquaintance and friendship with the heads of the party contributed to give them the greater force with him. They received an additional strength from the injudicious solutions which had been offered by Marcellus and other weak defenders of the Homoousian doctrine. Athanasius, Hilary, and other judicious advocates of the Catholic faith, had not then wrote their immortal pieces, to clear the doctrine from misrepresentation, to set it in a due light, and to unravel the main objections brought against it. No wonder if, in these circumstances, Eusebius might incline too much towards the Arian cause, and give too far into it. Yet, even under these disadvantages, he kept himself free from the grosser tenets of the Arians; and he retained so much of Catholic principles, that had he but attended to the true and certain consequences of many of his own positions in that behalf, he could not have failed of being entirely orthodox and Catholic. He had not so clear a judgment as Athanasius, Hilary, Basil, Gregory Nazianzen, and other eminent defenders of the Nicene faith: nor did he live to see how easily the Arian sophistry was defeated and baffled after it had passed the scrutiny of such masterly hands. In the mean while he seems to have had no consistent set of principles, but a confused mixture of Catholic and Arian tenets^l, such as could not stand with each other in true and just reasoning.

You have certainly no right to claim him as yours.

If you would look among the ancients for your scheme, it must not be in Eusebius, nor in any Ante-Nicene Father, or Post-Nicene; but in such Fathers as Arius, Aetius, Eunomius, or Philostorgius: and yet you come short even of them in some points; particularly in the part you assign the Son in the creation of all things by the Father's power; (you do not yet say by his own, which several of the ancient Arians would never have scrupled;) and in the account you give of Christ's being appointed "God over all" after his resurrection; and your resolving his worship into the power then given him: doctrines proper only to a Samosatenian^m or Socinian.

^k Τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς θεότητος κοινωνός, &c. Euseb. in Psal. p. 534.

^l See my Sermons, p. 81. of this volume.

Having shewn, from Father to Father, down to the Arian times, that our Lord Jesus Christ was supposed by them to be the Jehovah, the Almighty, the one true God, God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, acknowledged as the one true God, and worshipped by the patriarchs as such: having proved this to have been the ancient Catholic doctrine of the Church, without any exception; unless of Novatian, who yet differs not from it in the main, but in expression rather; not in the doctrine of the Son's real and essential divinity: this foundation being laid, it remains now only to take off some pretences you have offered to invalidate the force of the evidence.

Your pretence is, that though God the Son was "God of Abraham, God of Israel, &c." yet he was such only in a "sub-ordinate sense," because he was "representative" of God the Father, p. 159. To which I answer, that had the ancients supposed him to be styled God and Lord, purely in virtue of such representation, there would then be some force in your reasoning: but that they did not, will appear most evidently from the following considerations:

1. None of the Fathers ever put the Godhead of the Son upon that foot; they never say nor insinuate, that he is God on the account of any such representation.

2. They are so far from doing it, that their whole drift and method of arguing supposes and implies the utmost contradiction to it. For if the Son were supposed to be God on the score of the representation, then any angel might be God also on account of such representation; and then it could never be proved (in the way that the Fathers tookⁿ) that there was any God the Son at all; but the whole force of their reasoning would be vacated and null. On the contrary, they presumed that none could either represent God, or personate God, or use the style of God, that was not really God: and upon this presumption their whole reasoning

^m See my Defence, vol. i. p. 434, &c.

ⁿ See my Defence, vol. i. p. 297, 298, 526.

turns. If therefore they are any where to be understood of a representation, they must mean a full and adequate representation, such as none could exhibit or sustain, who was not himself every thing that he represents. For as nothing but man can fully and adequately represent man; so nothing but God can perfectly and suitably represent God.

3. Add to this, the ancient Fathers always suppose the Son to be God antecedently to the supposed representation; which is decisive in the case. They suppose him God as being God's Son, of the same nature and substance with God. This is what all the Fathers expressly, or in words equivalent, resolve the Son's divinity into: which consideration cuts off all your pretences at once; as I before intimated^o, and you take no notice of it. The reason why you did not must be visible to the meanest reader.

In proof of the fact, that the Fathers did so resolve the divinity of Christ, (though it be what no scholar can be ignorant of,) I shall, for the sake of common readers, here recite their testimonies.

Justin Martyr, in his first Apology, says of God the Son, "Who being the Word, God's first-begotten, is also God^p." In his Dialogue he often repeats the same thing. He is "God, on account of his being his Son begotten before all creatures^q." In another place, "Had you but understood what is said by the prophets, you could not have denied him to be God, being the Son of the only, the uncreated, the ineffable God^r."

To the same purpose he elsewhere styles him God; immediately adding, "as being Son of God^s." And Justin is known to represent the Son as begotten from, or out of God^t, (ἐκ Θεοῦ and ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ,) without abscission or division^u, as one fire from ^o Defence, vol. i. p. 302.

^p Ὁς καὶ λόγος πρωτότοκος ὢν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ Θεὸς ὑπάρχει. Apol. i. p. 123. Ox.

^q Θεοῦ δὲ ἐκ τοῦ εἶναι τέκνον πρωτότοκον τῶν ὄλων κτισμάτων. Just. Dial. p. 364.

^r Εἰ νεοήκατε τὰ εἰρημένα ὑπὸ τῶν προφητῶν, οὐκ ἂν ἐξηρνεῖσθε αὐτὸν εἶναι Θεόν, τοῦ μόνου, καὶ ἀγενήτου, καὶ ἀρρήτου Θεοῦ υἱόν. Dial. p. 366.

N. B. I read ἀγενήτου with single v, for a reason which will appear more fully afterward: and I understand μόνου in opposition to creatures only, or false gods, not to the Son, who is always to be tacitly understood to belong to, and to be included in, the alone God. And I take this of Justin to be nearly equivalent to these other of Philo and Cyril of Alexandria.

^s Ὁς τοῦ αἰδίου λόγος ὢν, ἐξ ἀνάγκης καὶ αὐτὸς ἴστων ἀφθάρος. Phil. de Conf. Ling. p. 326.

^t Ὅπερ ἂν ἐξ ἀγενήτου καὶ ἀφθάρτου γεγέννηται, τοῦτο πάντως ἀφθαρτον καὶ ἀγενήτον. Cyrl. Thesaur. p. 34.

^u Θεὸν ὄντα, υἱὸν αὐτοῦ. p. 170. Θεός, Θεοῦ υἱὸς ὑπάρχων. p. 171.

^v Just. Dial. p. 183. Apol. p. 49.

^w Just. Dial. p. 183, 373. Paræn. p. 127.

another, and as being strictly and properly^x (ιδίως and κυρίως) Son of God. All which together expresses the consubstantiality, sameness of nature, and most entire and perfect Unity imaginable. Such is Justin Martyr's account of Christ's divinity; never speaking of his being appointed God, or being God by I know not what representation; but of his being God by partaking of the one true Godhead, naturally Son of God.

The same account, but more briefly, we have from Theophilus, Bishop of Antioch, a little lower in the same century; who speaks of Christ being God, as God's Son. The same we have also from Clemens of Alexandria, in a very remarkable passage above cited. The same also from Tertullian, who says, "that which is derived from God is God, and Son of God, and both one God." Novatian speaks as plain, in these words; "As nature herself has made it a rule that he must be accounted man, who is of man: so the same rule of nature prescribes, that he must be accounted God who is of God^a."

I forbear to cite more. It is a ruled case in antiquity, that Christ is God, (not by appointment, deputation, representation, or any thing of like kind,) but by his Sonship; deriving the same divine nature from the Father as is in the Father. Nor was the name of God ever thought by them to denote an office, or any relative character, but nature and substance, as the word man. It will now be easy to answer those little pleas and exceptions which you have remaining. You have, in the main, but one argument, which you repeat over and over: viz. that Christ cannot be supreme God, because he was an angel, or messenger of God: which is as much as to say that Peter, for instance, could not be man, if sent by man. The whole strength of your argument lies in the artificial confusion of ideas. Christ could not be supreme in office while executing an inferior office, that is very certain: but what has supremacy of office to do with the notion of supreme God? God is a word expressing nature and substance: he is supreme God, or God supreme, that has no God of a superior nature above him. Such is Christ, even while he submits and condescends to act ministerially: and thus all your speculations on this head, arising only from confusion of ^x Just. Apol. i. p. 45, 46. Apol. ii. p. 13.

^y Θεός οὖν ἦν ὁ λόγος, καὶ ἐκ Θεοῦ πεφυκώς, &c. Theoph. p. 130. Ox.

^z Quod de Deo profectum est Deus est, et Dei Filius, et unus (suppl. Deus) ambo. Tertull. Apol. cap. 21.

^a Ut enim præscripsit ipsa natura hominem credendum esse qui ex homine sit: ita eadem natura præscribit et Deum credendum esse qui ex Deo sit. Novat. cap. 11.

ideas, drop at once. I submit sometimes to your phraseology, of supreme God, though it be improper, and rather Pagan than Christian. Supreme God has generally a tacit reference to an inferior God; and so it was used in the Pagan theology. But Christians, who acknowledge but one God, should never talk of a supreme God; the more proper name being rather the one God, the true God, the God of the universe, God supreme, and the like. But you, to introduce your Polytheism, are perpetually telling us of the supreme God; and every time you meet with ἐπὶ πάντων Θεὸς, or ὁ Θεὸς τῶν ὅλων, you falsely and corruptly render it, the supreme God, (instead of the God of the universe,) to serve your hypothesis. I do not find that the Fathers were used to style God the Father supreme God; except when disputing with Pagans, or the like, they accommodated themselves in some measure to their style, reserving to themselves the Christian sense. And it is but very rarely they use πρῶτος Θεὸς, or Deus Princeps, for the Father; and when they do, it is, as I said, to express the supreme Father in a style not proper to Christian principles, only in condescension to the Pagans, to be the better understood.

To return. I perceive the subordination is what you lay the main stress upon, in order to overthrow the Church's doctrine of Christ's real divinity. You will now be reduced to this single maxim, (which you are sensible you can never prove, but every where suppose,) that the unity or equality which we teach is not consistent with any distinction of order or offices. Whenever you are disposed to try the strength of your metaphysics, that point may be debated with you. At present you have thought it the wiser way only to speak your wishes, and to deliver out dictates instead of proofs: a method which may be thought rather too assuming in private, and withal very fallible men; to expect that their bare affirmations should have any weight against the united verdict of all the Christian churches, ancient and modern.

I shall take but little notice of the "incidental errors" which you are pleased to charge me with, p. 160, &c. because the reader will have seen, before this time, that they are imaginary only, founded upon your own mistakes. I may just observe that, p. 164, you give a character, or description of God the Father, calling it, very absurdly, "the signification of the word God, when applied to the Father." You might as well have given a description, or character of Adam, calling it the signification of the word man, when applied to Adam. To say what the Father's Person is, is one thing: to say what is signified by the name God, is another. Your testimonies none of them come up to the point: which was to shew, that unbegotten, or that particular manner of existing, is necessarily included in the signification of the word God. There is nothing more under this Query, but what I have before sufficiently answered or obviated. But since this Query has been drawn out into a very great length, so as almost to take in the whole of the controversy; it may be for the ease and conveniency of the reader, to subjoin a brief recapitulation or summary of what has been done in it.

It has been shewn, first, from Scripture, that God the Son is not excluded by such texts as speak of the Unity; not excluded from being God, and one God with the Father. The texts that prove this have been explained and vindicated; and the pretended contrary evidence from Scripture has been shewn to be null, and of no account.

It has been further proved, that the ancients in general teach the same thing, by understanding the exclusive texts to affect idols only, or other Gods; by declaring against admitting any other God besides God the Father, yet admitting God the Son; by their asserting Father and Son together to be one God, or the one God: and, lastly, by their believing God the Son to have been that very Person, who declared himself God of Israel, God of Abraham, &c. besides whom the Jews were to have no God; declaring this of himself, in his own proper Person, (not excluding the Father or Holy Ghost, one with him,) as being really God, because Son of God, of the same divine nature and substance with God the Father. These things have been proved to have been unanimously taught by the ancients; saving only some little difference in Novatian, a schismatic at that time, and of no considerable authority, (though he also agrees in the main doctrine of the Son's essential divinity;) allowing also for some dissent in Eusebius, (a late writer, and a familiar acquaintance of the leading Arians,) in which he is not consistent with himself, or with the Creed which he subscribed, or with his public speeches and debates.

Upon the whole, one can scarce desire fuller or better evidence of what I advanced in this Query than has been produced for it. And, as I formerly told you, so I again repeat it, (though perhaps you may be the last to believe,) that "the Fathers “ stand pointed against you, and you are certain to expose your cause as often as you hope for any relief or succour from them.” Which shall be yet more fully evidenced in the sequel.

QUERY III.

Whether the word (God) in Scripture can reasonably be supposed to carry an ambiguous meaning, or to be used in a different sense, when applied to the Father and Son in the same Scripture, and even in the same verse? See John i. 1.

YOUR new answer to this Query is, that the word God, when applied to the Father, “ denotes him who alone has all “ perfections, &c. in and of himself, original, underived, &c.” but when applied to the Son, it denotes one who has not his perfections of himself, but derived, &c. and so the word God is used in different senses, supreme and subordinate. You might as well say that the word man, when applied to Adam, denotes the person of Adam, who was unbegotten; but when applied to Seth, it denotes the person of Seth, who was begotten; and therefore the word man does not signify the same thing, or carry the same idea in both cases, but is used in different senses. What I assert is, that the word God signifies or denotes absolute perfection, whether applied to Father or Son; and is therefore applied in the same sense to both. He that is possessed of all perfection (whether originally or derivatively) is God; all that God is, God in the highest and fullest sense of the word God. You are to shew that unoriginateness, or paternity, is contained in the idea or definition of God; or that the word God necessarily implies it. By your account, the word God, in one sense, signifies as much as God and Father together. You have no ground for this fancy, either in Scripture or antiquity. The truth is, God denotes all perfection, and Father denotes a relation of order, and a particular manner of existing: all which you confusedly blend together, as if signified by the one word God. Hitherto then you have brought no proof of two different senses of the word God, when applied to Father and Son.

I must observe, that here appears to be a very great change, a very material alteration in your scheme since your writing before. God was then a mere relative, a word of office, and always so, in Scripture: so the learned Doctor had told us^b, and that it was never intended to express metaphysical attributes. But now it is to signify all perfections, original, undivided, (by which you mean necessary existence, as you elsewhere explain it.) So that you now come into my notion of the true and proper sense of the word God; excepting that you confound unoriginateness with necessary existence, which I keep distinct: and as I take the necessary existence into the definition of God, I as constantly throw out unbegotten, as having nothing to do in it. What kind of a divinity you have left to God the Son, you may do well to consider; having excluded him from the one necessarily existing Godhead, and from being God in the most usual and scriptural sense of the word; which you had some pretence to before, while you supposed the word God a mere relative, whether applied to Father or Son.

^b See Clarke’s Script. Doctrine, p. 296. 1st edit. Reply, p. 119, 290.

Our dispute about dominion is now at an end; though it before made a great part of this Query. I allow that the phrase, our God, expresses some relation of God to us, as well as what he is absolutely in himself. I admitted as much before^c; so that you need not now have mentioned it as any discovery.

You do not tell me in what sense you make Christ God, after you have struck him out of that sense which occurs ordinarily in Scripture, and which is indeed the only true and proper sense of the word; all the rest being loose and figurative only, as I shewed at large^d. Instead of answering difficulties, which was the part you undertook, you turn objector; thereby to hide and cover, if possible, the many flaws in your scheme.

Why do you not tell me plainly in what sense the Son is God, that I may argue the point with you, and do justice to the common readers, who want to be satisfied in so important a question?

You object to me thus: "If none can properly be styled God, who has not all perfections, how come you to leave out the principal of the essential perfections of the first Cause and Author of all things?" p. 173.

To which I answer, that I leave out no perfections at all. I suppose the Son, with the Father, to be the one Cause and Author of all creatures; and there is no need of saying first where there is never a second. At the same time, I suppose the Father to be Father of his Son; which expresses a relation of order, and mode of existence; not any difference in any essential perfection.

^c Defence, vol. i. p. 306.

^d Ibid. p. 304, &c.

Neither is there any greater perfection in being a Father, in this case, than in being a Son ; but both are equally perfect, equally necessary in respect of existence ; all things common but the personal characters : and self-existence, as distinct from necessary existence, is expressive only of the order and manner in which the perfections are in the Father, not of any distinct perfection. With this answer the Catholic Fathers baffled the Arians and Eunomians, objecting in the same way you now do : and as you might have known this, it might have been more for your credit to have shewn the answer to be insufficient, than barely to repeat a stale objection. You have little else but repetition in pages 174, 175. One argument, in a manner, is to serve quite through your book. The Son cannot be supreme God ; no, he cannot, because he is a Son, because he is subordinate, because he has acted, or still acts ministerially. Repeat this ever so often, it proves nothing but a distinction of Persons, order, and offices ; no difference of nature, or perfections, or Godhead. And what has the question about supreme Godhead, relating to nature and substance, (as God is a word denoting substance, and he is God supreme that knows no nature superior to his own,) to do with order or offices ? The Son is God supreme for that very reason, because he is a Son, of the same nature and the same divine perfections with the Father. But you say, the word “ nature is of very uncertain, various signification : ” and you return me the same loose answer which Dr. Clarke gave to Mr. Nelson^e, which I sufficiently exposed in my Defence^f. The plain fact is, that you are pinched, and you see where, and have nothing to retreat to but insignificant words.

What is there in the words equality of nature, more than what every peasant or child may understand ? Man is in nature equal to man ; angel to angel ; any individual to another of the same kind : a very little metaphysics may suffice in so plain a thing. This then is what I assert, that a supremacy of order or of office is consistent with equality of nature ; and if the Son be in nature equal to the Father, he is also equal in Godhead, which is a word expressing nature ; and if equal in Godhead, equally God supreme. Q. E. D. This I took to be sound and true reasoning before : and you have been pleased to confirm it by your tacit confession : while you avoid replying to it.

To prove that Christ is God in the same sense as the Father

^e Clarke's Reply, p. 17.

^f Defence, vol. i. p. 448.

is, I appealed to his name Jehovah; as I have also elsewhere ϵ , more at large. To this you have little to answer, besides what I have abundantly replied to above, about Christ's being a messenger and representative, &c.

As to what you add of inferior angels speaking in the style of their principals; you will consider, that it is a notion directly opposite to all the ancients; whose general argument for the divinity of God the Son, drawn from the appearances under the Old Testament, would be entirely eluded and frustrated by it: neither could they have proved, in that way, the existence of God the Son, but upon a supposition directly contrary to you. This therefore is one great prejudice against your notion, and such as ought to have weight with you, while you make your boasts of antiquity. Besides, I thought you had before allowed that God the Son was Jehovah, God, Lord, &c. in his own Person, though in a subordinate sense: and I think you then gave me a rebuke, p. 159, for supposing the contrary. Are you now altered of a sudden, and become another man? But be it so, this new answer will serve no better than the former: for as to any pretended instance you can bring from the Old Testament, it will be answered, that the angel was the Logos, for that very reason, because he used the style of God; as it was customary for him to do. And as to your instance from Rev. xi. 1, 3. I own it so runs in the English; but a scholar should have looked into the Greek, where he will not find it. This you had notice of long ago^h.

Your example given of the Roman facialis is as little to your purpose as the other. For in the words, Ego populusque Romanus, I and the Roman people; I does not denote the senate, as you imagine, but the facialis, the herald himself coming in the name of the Roman people, considered in their large collective sense, comprehending all the Romans, senate and people. And so you find, in Rosinus, the herald saying, Ego sum publicus nuncius populi Romani: not, Ego sum populus Romanus, or, Ego sum senatus; as your supposition would require. However, I do not pretend that no instance can be given of such a thing as a proxy, in any case whatever. But that God should thus permit a creature to be his proxy, (as man may permit man,) appears by no means proper or congruous, because of the infinite disparity; and because of the inevitable danger it would bring men into, of mistaking the creature for the Creator, and misplacing their worship, which would be idolatry. You proceed (p. 178,) to weaken the force of what I had said in relation to the name or appellation of Jehovah.

ϵ Sermons, p. 44, &c. of this volume.

^h True Script. Doctr. continued, p. 194. See also Mr. Wade, p. 33.

Our dispute is in a great measure superseded, since you no longer insist upon the relative meaning of the word God; against which I was then arguing.

It is very indifferent to me whether Jehovah be ever an appellative, (as Bishop ⁱPearson thinks,) or always a proper name, as others ^kteach; provided only that it be looked upon as a name expressive of an intrinsic perfection, and not of an outward relation, like king, governor, &c.

And that it is expressive of necessary existence, the best critics, ancient and modern, agree. I had said (vol. i. p. 310, of my Defence) that its primary signification is Being; to which you answer very strangely, that "the name Jehovah signifies neither "primarily, nor at all, Substance, or Being, but Person." This is little more than equivocating upon the word signify; which is low employment. Let it denote a Person, which is what you mean by signify, (for I hope you do not intend to say that the word Person is the English for the Hebrew Jehovah,) still it signifies the nature of that Person to whom the name is given, to be existing, in the emphatical sense, or necessarily existing: and if it be applied to more Persons than one, it still signifies the same also. You are fallen into such a road of talking, without any distinct meaning, that I am sometimes at a loss to know what it is you would say. Jehovah, you observe, does not signify substance, but the "Person, whose the substance is." I beseech you, what is Person but substance? Is it intelligent, agent nothing? Person, as I take it, is intelligent, acting substance; (though that is not a full definition;) and so the sense of what you have said amounts to this; that Jehovah does not signify substance, but the intelligent acting substance, whose that substance is. Readers will be much edified by these very curious and deep remarks. The truth may be said at once, in a very few words, that the name Jehovah denotes the necessary existence of as many Persons as it is applied to; and being applied to Christ, it is a proof that he is necessarily existing as well as the Father, and one Jehovah with him; since Jehovah is *one*¹. You say, Father and Son being two agents will be two Jehovahs: but that, you will remember, is begging the question. The Father is intelligent substance, and the Son intelligent substance; and both one substance, one Jehovah, one God. You add, (p. 180,) "being consubstantial with Jehovah will no more make another Person to be the same Jehovah, than being consubstantial with the Father will make him the same Father." For want of arguments, I am forced to take your sayings, where there is no argument. I never put the Unity upon consubstantiality alone^m: one man is consubstantial to another, and yet they are not one man, nor one substance. But if the Son be not only consubstantial, but also one substance with the Father, (styled Jehovah,) as proceeding from him, and inseparably contained in him; then he is also one Jehovah with him. You have a further pretence, that if the Son be Jehovah, or $\delta \delta\nu$, he will be "unbegotten, unoriginate, &c." But your reasoning is lame; because you have not proved that $\delta \delta\nu$ either signifies unbegotten, or ever necessarily implies it. The Father indeed is $\delta \delta\nu$, and is unbegotten; but not $\delta \delta\nu$, because unbegotten, but because necessarily existing.

¹ Pearson on the Creed, p. 150. ed. 10. ^k Brocklesby's Gospel Theism, p. 347. ¹ See my Sermons, p. 140 of this volume.

Page 181, you come to inform the reader what it is I mean by the Son's being supreme God: it is, you say, supreme in the strict sense; God in the same sense, and in as high a sense as the Father himself; and yet, strange contradiction! "referring all to the Father as Father, Head, Fountain, &c." Now here is no contradiction at all, but what you have made to yourself, through your confusion of thought, and your want of distinct perception. For when I apply supreme to the word God, I mean as I ought to mean, that the Son is God supreme, (knowing no superior God, no divine nature greater, higher, or more excellent than his own,) not that he is the supreme Father: who, though superior in order, is not therefore of superior Godhead; for a supremacy of order is one thing, a supremacy of nature or Godhead, another. These are plain things to all that have ever dipped in this controversy.

But you come a little closer up to me in your following words, which will indeed deserve notice; because it is running your argument up as far as it can possibly be carried. You say, that upon my principles "there is no impossibility but the Father (if the economy had been so laid) might as well have exercised the authority of the Son, executed his orders, &c." nay, and "have been begotten also of the Son, and from him have received his being." But do not blend things together which ought to be kept distinct; and then we shall see clearly into this matter, so far as is needful.

^m See my Defence, vol. i. p. 543, 544.

If you ask, why that Person called the Son might not have been Father; I have nothing to say, but that in fact he is not: so it is written, and so we believe. The Father is Father, and the Son is Son; and because of this relation of Father and Son, there is a natural priority of order, (I say, natural, not economical;) by which the Son is referred up to the Father as his Head, and not vice versa.

As to the Son's acting a ministerial part, that indeed is purely economical; and there was no impossibility, in the nature of the thing, but the Father himself might have done the same: but it was more congruous that he who is first in order should be first in office too: and had it been otherwise, it would have been inverting the order of the Persons; which, I think, is reason sufficient against it. To which purpose Bp. Pearson very justly observes: "Upon this preeminence, (of the Father,) as I conceive, may safely be grounded the congruity of the divine mission. We often read that Christ was sent, from whence he bears the name of an apostle himself, as well as those whom he therefore named so; because as the Father sent him, so sent he them. The Holy Ghost is also said to be sent, sometimes by the Father, sometimes by the Son: but we never read that the Father was sent at all; there being an authority in that name which seems inconsistent with this mission." All this is very right in the Bishop's sense of authority; not in yours, as signifying power and dominion over a subject; which is neither excellent nor true divinity, but false and blasphemous.

You proceed to consider my argument for one and the same strict sense of the word God, drawn from John i. 1, which argument the reader may see briefly summed up in my first Sermon, above, p. 45.

I argued, as is usual^o, from the word God occurring twice in the same verse, without the least hint of any different sense. You pretend, on the contrary, that "for that very reason it must ⁿ Pearson on the Creed, p. 36.

^o Si—evangelista Deum alium majorem et supremum hic indicat, alium vero minorem et longe inaequalem; incogitanter admodum Johannes, ut ait plerumque Athanasius, res adeo disparatas, sine ulla distinctione, uno eodemque vocabulo utramque copulans, significavit: et Verbum, ait, erat apud

Deum, et Deus erat Verbum. Nam quis non voci Deus conjunctim repetitæ eandem utrobique significationem statim aptaverit? Quis eandem vocem, bis eodem loco enuntiatam tam disparata significare putaverit? Montfaucon, Prelim. Dissert. in Euseb. Comment. in Psalm. p. 21.

“bear a different sense, because it is used in the very same sentence by way of contradistinction,” p. 183. By what kind of logic you draw this strange inference, I see not. Suppose it were said, Seth was with the man, (i. e. Adam,) and Seth was man; doth it follow that the word man carries two senses? or God the Father was with the Spirit, (meaning the Holy Ghost,) and the Father was Spirit; does it follow that the word Spirit bears two senses? Would it not be rather manifest in both cases, that the words so repeated, and so near one another, are interpretative of each other? “The Son,” you say, “is styled God the Word, or Messenger;” which is more than you know. See my Sermons as to the meaning of the name Word^p. But suppose him so styled by way of prolepsis, (being here considered antecedently to the creation,) as one that was to be sent to create the world, and to reveal the Father to mankind; how is this at all repugnant to the doctrine of his being the one God supreme? I have so often answered this pretence, that I am afraid of nauseating the reader with repetition. You say, “he is distinguished from him who of his own original supreme authority sends the message.” Very true; he is distinguished from the Person of the Father, who has his authority from none: and yet the Son having the same supreme authority (if you mean power and dominion) from the Father, is one God supreme with him. He is distinguished, you say, from the “first Cause, of whom are all things,” because “through him” are all things. He is distinguished in Person, and in the manner, or order of operating; but not as one cause from another cause: for as all things are of one, and by the other, both together are one Cause of all things^q; their operations undivided, their nature, power, perfections, and glory one.

I had argued, that the Son was God before the creation. You say (p. 183.) this infers not supremacy. Yes it does: he was before all creatures, therefore no creature, therefore no precarious being, therefore necessarily existing, therefore equal in nature and Godhead with the Father; therefore God supreme as well as the Father. The link is never the worse for its length, if it be but well connected.

I had said, that the Son could not be called God, in the sense of dominion, John i. 1, because he is there considered antecedently to the creation, and before any dominion commenced.

^p Sermon I. p. 31, &c. of this volume.

^q See my Sermons, p. 54, &c. 66, 80, 82. of this volume.

This, I think, is self-evident. But you have a mind to dispute the point. Your argument is, that God was merciful, good, and just, before the creation, therefore also he was possessed of dominion, p. 183, 184.

That is to say, he was disposed to acts of goodness, mercy, and justice, and likewise to have dominion in his own appointed time; therefore he had dominion before he had it. Does not every body know, that dominus and servus, master and servant, are relatives, as much as father and son, husband and wife, and always suppose and imply each other, commence and fall together? Tertullian therefore was very right and accurate in his distinction about God and Lord^r; that the Father was always God, God denoting nature, substance, and perfections; but became Lord in time, as soon as the creation commenced; Lord expressing his relation to his creatures. To proceed:

I had argued for Christ's real and supreme divinity, from his part in the creation, according to John i. Here you have only the same thing over again, about the distinction of of whom and by whom; which is nothing to the purpose.

I allow, that the Father is primarily Creator, and Son secondarily, or subordinately; and both one Creator. There is a difference of order, or manner, which yet makes no difference of power or Godhead: so that this is mere trifling, unless you could prove that the Unity of Godhead is not consistent with the distinction of Persons, order, or offices; which you have not done. I dispute not whether διὰ may express the primary efficient cause; it expresses as much efficiency as ὑπὸ or ἐκ, which is all I am concerned for: and as to the different order or manner of the two Persons concurring in the same thing, it neither makes them two Causes, nor two Creators, nor two Gods; nor is it any argument against the Son's being Cause, Creator, or God, in the same high and full sense of those words as the Father.

You have something to say to two instances given, (Rom. xi. 36. Heb. ii. 10.) where διὰ is applied to the Father. You interpret the texts of his providential care: not that things are created, but preserved, through him. Allowing you this construction, (which is perfectly precarious,) yet you have only seemed to say something, as usual, when, upon the matter, you have really said nothing. For if διὰ may be applied even to the Father, who, with you, is the original efficient Cause of the preservation of all things, and whose is the original governing Providence, (a work and business not less considerable than the work of creation;) what can you infer merely from διὰ being applied to God the Son? He might, notwithstanding what you have here said, be efficient, and even originally too, either in creation or conservation; for they are near akin to each other: and so conservation has been sometimes styled continued creation, being a continuance of the same power. Might you not therefore have been content with my granting you more than you can fairly prove from the bare force of διὰ, instead of labouring a needless point; where, at last, you can make nothing out? I have allowed you (which I may now call a courtesy) a priority of order: make your advantage of it. You say it is in words; that is, because you make a difference in order to be no difference in order; and confound coordination with coequality. I desire no greater advantage over an adversary than to see him reduced to self-contradiction and plain defiance to common sense, only to keep up an hypothesis. I admit a difference of order, not of nature: but that word nature is so very obscure and metaphysical; I would say, that distinction is so plain and obvious, carrying in it so entire a confutation of all you have been saying or doing, that you cannot endure the least mention of it. You have thought it material to observe, (p. 186,) that things are said to have been created for the pleasure of God the Father, (Rev. iv. 10, 11,) which is no where said of the Son. To which I answer, nor twice of the Father. However, nobody can doubt but the world was created for the Son's pleasure as well as the Father's; and to me it seems that the expression of St. Paul ("All things were created by him, and for him") is as strong and significative as the other. I am the more confirmed in it, because I observe that you translate, or construe, εἰς αὐτὸν τὰ πάντα in Rom. xi. 36. (the very same phrase here used in Coloss. i. 15,) "To his glory they all terminate," (p. 185,) which is as much as terminating in his pleasure^s.

^r Dei nomen dicimus semper fuisse apud semetipsum et in semetipso, Dominum vero non semper. Diversa enim utriusque conditio. Deus substantiæ ipsius nomen, id est, divinitatis: Dominus vero non substantiæ, sed potestatis: substantiam semper fuisse cum suo nomine, quod est Deus; postea Dominus, accedentis scilicet rei mentio. Nam ex quo esse ceperunt in quæ potestas Domini ageret, ex illo, per accessionem potestatis, et factus et dictus est Dominus. Tertull. contr. Hermog. cap. 3.

We are now to hold a debate about ὁ Θεὸς, which is very needless in the main, because I had really admitted (to shorten our dispute) more than you could prove, either from Scripture or antiquity. I had allowed δ Θεός to be the ordinary title of God the Father, and rightly reserved to him, in most cases, as his distinguishing personal character^t, in the sense of αὐτόθεος. Yet I very well know that this is more than you can prove from the Fathers, except from Origen; and that not from his latest and best writings. Might you not then have thought it sufficient to build upon my concessions, rather than to make your cause appear the weaker, by endeavouring to give it more strength than belongs to it? It is demonstration, that the Fathers in general made no account of the distinction between Θεός and δ Θεός, in our present case; because of their applying a multitude of texts to Christ, where there is δ Θεός, as before shewn. Your pretence of his being considered as representative only, has been fully answered above: besides that you are fluctuating and inconsistent in your accounts of that matter; sometimes allowing Christ to be what he is there styled (viz. δ Θεός) in his own Person; and again retracting it, by supposing the title to belong only to the other Person, whom he represented. In short, you seem not to know what to determine, or where to fix; so various and unconstant a thing is error. It being certain that the Fathers, in general, so interpreted Scripture as to make no account of your distinction; it will be of less weight if they appear to make more of it in their own writings: for why should they fix a rule to themselves which Scripture (by their own account) had not observed, but the direct contrary? Indeed, you have two writers, before the Nicene Council, to produce for it, Clemens and Origen: as to Clemens, how little he made of the distinction, as to our present question, may be observed from his manner of styling the Father and Son together δ Θεός, as hath been noted above. Besides this, I took notice that he often gives the Son, singly, the title of δ Θεός: and I referred to the places^u: you have something to say to every one of them, to shew how resolute you can be in defending any thing you have once pretended to lay a stress upon. To the first passage^x, you say it is only an allusion to Psalm xxxiv. 8. And what then? Is it ever the less true, that δ Θεός is there applied to Christ? To the second passage^y you say, the Λόγος is spoken of, as per-

^s See my Sermons, p. 58 of this volume.

^t See my Defence, vol. i. p. 315.

^u Clemens Alex. p. 72, 132, 251, 273, 436, 832.

^x Ἴδετε ὅτι Χριστὸς δ Θεός. Clem.

p. 72.

^y Ἐτι δὲ καὶ ἀνονόμαστος ἦν δ Θεός δ Κύριος μηδέπω γεγενημένος ἄνθρωπος. Clem. p. 132.

sonating the Father. Not a word does Clemens say of personating, but of the Son's being the face of the Father^z: so that in seeing one, both were, in a manner, seen; one being the perfect resemblance of the other, and representing him, (not in your low sense of personating,) but exhibiting him, as in a lively mirror, by exhibiting himself. Besides, that it is plain from Clemens, that the same Person who was to be man, was δ Θεός. Was this the Father, think you, or the Son? To the third passage^a, you say, that the δ Θεός "is not the Λόγος, but a sanctified Christian." But your better retreat is to the various lection; not only because your construction is at least dubious, but because if it were certain, it were still an instance of δ Θεός applied by Clemens contrary to your criticism. To the fourth and fifth passages^b, you reply, that "τὸν Θεὸν and τῷ Θεῷ may be understood of the Father." To which I need only say, they cannot without straining, and making the construction forced and unnatural. To the sixth^c, you say, "the limitations added are strongly against me." That is only a fancy of your own: but was not the question, whether δ Θεός was applied to Christ by Clemens? An ingenuous man would either have confessed plain fact, or have said nothing. None of the passages, you say, "give to the Son the title (δ Θεός) in the absolute and unlimited construction." And might you not have had this reserve, if I had produced a thousand passages with δ Θεός applied to Christ? I do not expect you should grant them to be understood in the unlimited construction: you have resolved against it: and if there were as many instances in Scripture as in the Fathers, you might still have some pretence against an unlimited construction. In the mean while, what becomes of your criticisms upon δ Θεός, if we are to judge from other rules, whether it is to be understood with limitation, or otherwise? Doth it not appear, even from yourself, that the insisting on the article is very trifling? I had likewise produced Clemens for styling the Son, δ παντοκράτωρ^d. Here you tell me it is not in an absolute construction. And what if it is not? The instance is sufficient to shew that Christ is true God, upon Clemens's principles, because he is δ παντοκρά-

^z Πρόσωπον δὲ τοῦ Θεοῦ ὁ λόγος, ὃ φωτίζεται ὁ Θεός, καὶ γνωρίζεται. τότε καὶ Ἰσραὴλ ἐπωνόμασται, ὅτε εἶδε τὸν Θεόν, τὸν κύριον οὕτως ἔστιν ὁ Θεός, ὁ λόγος, &c. Clem. Ibid.

^a Clem. Alex. p. 251.

^b Ibid. p. 273, 436.

^c Ἄγνοια γὰρ οὐχ ἄπταια τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ πρό καταβολῆς κόσμου συμβούλου γενομένου τοῦ πατρὸς. Clem. p. 832.

^d Ἀνευδεῖς γὰρ ὁ τὸν παντοκράτορα Θεὸν λόγον ἔχων, καὶ οὐδενὸς ἔω χρηστῆ, ἀπερεὶ ποτε Clem. p. 227.

τωρ^e, for Clemens makes no distinction about absolute construction. But neither can you prove that Clemens does not use the words τὸν παντοκράτορα, in the passage cited, in an absolute construction, (if one can know what you mean by absolute,) nor if you could, would it at all change the sense of the word παντοκράτωρ, or make it signify any thing less than when applied ever so absolutely. Clemens reasons from it in the same manner as he would have done from the same word, or title, understood in the fullest and highest sense that παντοκράτωρ, or Almighty, can come up to. It is to little purpose for you to shew that Clemens sometimes styles the Father μόνος ὁ παντοκράτωρ. It is not Clemens's way to use the exclusive terms, in such instances, in any opposition to God the Son, but quite the contrary; as hath been observed above. As to Origen, you will be able to make no more of the place cited^f than this; that as the Λόγος excels all other his inferiors, so also the Λόγος is excelled by the Father; not in the same degree, but in a certain sense, as the Father is αὐτόθεος, God from none, the Son God by partaking of the Father's Godhead.

However, if Origen or his interpolators have any where in these comments dropped any unwary expressions; you will remember that they are of no moment any further than they are consistent with Origen's certain, well-weighed doctrine, in his treatise against Celsus.

As to Eusebius, your last authority for the distinction between Θεός and ὁ Θεός, (whatever his principles were,) all the use he makes of the distinction is only to prove against Marcellus, that the Son was not the Father. For he perpetually charges Marcellus with Sabellianism; as making the Son to be the Father, and vice versa. His words, literally and justly rendered, (not as you render them,) run thus: "The Evangelist could have said, the Word was ὁ Θεός, with the addition of the article, had he thought the Father and Son to be one and the same thing, and that the Word himself was the God over alls." The sense of this passage will entirely depend upon a right consideration of what it was that Eusebius charged Marcellus in Joh. p. 46, 47. Vid. Huetii not. p. 93, 94.

^e Οὐ γὰρ Θεὸν ἀπλῶς προσεῖπεν ὁ τῆ τοῦ ἄρθρου προτάξει τὸν παντοκράτορα δηλώσας. Clem. p. 548.

^f Δεκτέον γὰρ αὐτοῖς ὅτι τότε μὲν αὐτόθεος ὁ Θεός ἐστι—πᾶν δὲ τὸ παρὰ τὸ αὐτόθεος μετοχή τῆς ἐκείνου θεότητος θεοποιούμενον, οὐκ ὁ Θεός, ἀλλὰ Θεός κυριώτερον ἂν λέγοιτο. Orig.

^g Δυνάμενος γοῦν εἰπεῖν, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ λόγος, μετὰ τῆς τοῦ ἄρθρου προσθήκης, εἰ γε ἐν καὶ ταυτὸν ἡγήτο τὸν πατέρα εἶναι καὶ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτὸν τε εἶναι τὸν λόγον τὸν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεόν. Euseb. contr. Marc. p. 127.

with ; or how he understood Marcellus to affirm the Father and Son to be the same thing, or same God.

Now this will easily appear from divers places in Eusebius's treatise against him. He charges Marcellus with making the Word a mere notional thing, fleeting and vanishing, like a human word, nothing living and subsisting^h. He charges him with taking it in a Jewish sense, and making no more than a nominal difference between the Father and his *Word*ⁱ: one Essence and one Hypostasis too, in the way of Sabellius. He charges him with taking away the very existence as well as Hypostasis of the Son ; with making one Hypostasis with three names^k, having no more than a nominal, not a real distinction. Hence it is plain what Eusebius, in the passage above cited, meant by ἐν καὶ τὰυτόν, one and the same thing ; as also by making the Λόγος to be τὸν ἐνὶ πάντων Θεὸν, the God over all. It was making Father and Son one Person, as we now term it ; and so confounding both in one, as to take away all real distinction. You have therefore no reason to think I had partially represented Eusebius, when I said, (Defence, vol. i. p. 315,) that he made no further use of the observation about the article, than to prove against Marcellus, that the Λόγος is a distinct real Person, and not the Father himself. It is you that have partially represented Eusebius, either to serve your hypothesis, or for want of considering the drift and scope of Eusebius's treatise, and in what sense he uses his terms.

What then is the result of your inquiries about the distinction between Θεὸς with the article and without it ? 1. You have not been able to prove that the Ante-Nicene writers in general took any notice at all of it : two only are found, Clemens and Origen. The former never applies it at all to the text of St. John, nor makes any use of it to shew the preeminence of the Father above the Son : so far from it, that he gives the title of δ Θεὸς indifferently to Father, or Son, or to both together, according as occasion offers. The latter has indeed, in an unaccurate work, or perhaps corrupted, mentioned the distinction, and applied it to prove some preeminence of the Father as being God of himself, or unbegotten. But in his later and more certainly genuine works, he has nothing of this kind, but resolves the Unity in a very different way from what he had done in his Commentaries ; answering the objection of Ditheism upon quite another foot.

^h Euseb. p. 4, 19. p. 5.ⁱ Euseb. p. 33, 35, 36.^k Ibid. p. 167, 175.

2. You have not been able to shew that the Fathers ever imagined the Scripture style to be at all conformable to that distinction: nay, the contrary is evident from their citing a multitude of texts of the Old Testament, and applying them to Christ as therein denoted by the title of $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$. 3. You have not been able to shew, that the Father ever invariably or carefully followed any such rule in their own style, (though you confidently affirm they did, p. 188.) For, besides what hath been shewn from Clemens, examples may be given to the contrary out of the other ancient writers¹. 4. If it could have been proved that this distinction had been ever so constantly observed; yet no certain consequence in favour of your principles could be drawn from it: nothing but what (for the sake of shortening a dispute) I would have admitted, without your producing any ancient writer for it; namely this, that the Father is emphatically $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$, as first Person, though the Son be $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ in the same sense: almost in like manner as the Holy Ghost is emphatically $\tau\acute{o} \piνε\acute{\upsilon}\mu\alpha$, though the Father or Son be $\piνε\acute{\upsilon}\mu\alpha$ in as strict and proper a sense of $\piνε\acute{\upsilon}\mu\alpha$ as the other.

You at length bring me a quotation from Theodorus Abucara, a very orthodox man of the ninth century, allowing that in Scripture style $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ is a title appropriate to the Father. This is more than the ancients would have allowed; except the observation be confined to the New Testament. However, you may perceive that, in the judgment of very orthodox men, our cause is in no danger from this famed distinction^m: they knew the difference between allowing $\delta \Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ to be an appropriate title, and making the sense of $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ depend upon an article.

As to John i. 1. where the want of the article before $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ is made an objection against us, it should be considered that the expression, $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s \eta\nu \delta \lambda\acute{o}\gamma\omicron\varsigma$, is just what it should be on our principles. The want of the article determines $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ to be the predicate, ascertains the construction against the Sabellians, and is the very expression which any accurate Greek writer would

¹ Irenæus, p. 211, 215, 271. ed. Bened. Hippolytus, vol. i. p. 267. ii. p. 15, 20. Melito, cit. a Grab. Not. in Bull. p. 86. Origenes contr. Cels. p. 85, 162.

^m Petavius, where he cites the passage you mention, cites also another of the same author; which deserved your notice.

$\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$ δὲ ἐξαιρέτως λέγεται, ἐπειδὴ ἡ ἐνωσις, ἥτοι ἀνάπτυξις καὶ ἀνακεφαλαιώσις τῆς τριάδος ὁ πατήρ ἐστίν, ὡς εἶπεν ὁ θεολόγος. Petav. Trin. lib. iv. cap. 15. p. 262.

“He is emphatically styled God, “because the Father is the Union, or “folding up, or recapitulation of the “Trinity; as (Gregory) the divine “has observed.”

choose, rather than the other, to signify what we understand by it.

Having done with criticisms, you return to your logical subtleties. I had admitted a priority of order, yet denying the Son to be God in a subordinate sense: upon which you remark, "then he is God in a coordinate sense; and what becomes of "the priority of order?"

To which I answer, that though he be God in a coordinate, or rather the same sense of the word God, yet he is God in a subordinate manner, as being God of God: and now what becomes of the subordinate sense of the word God?

You pretend, that subordinate has necessarily a relation to government: which I deny. And if you could prove it, (as you cannot,) all that would follow is, that God the Son is not subordinate. And then, instead of saying that he is subordinate, we would only say that he is a Son, or that he is of the Father; changing the phrase, but still retaining the doctrine under other terms. But it is ridiculous to assert, that a difference of order does not make a subordination, or an equality of order a coordination. To my instance of Adam and Seth, you say, that "to Adam, considered as a governor, Seth was subordinate." Yes, and subject too. But to Adam, considered merely as a Father, he was only subordinate, and not subject.

You add, that "man being the abstract name of a species, "all men are equally men." In like manner, God being a name for as many Persons as have the divine nature, every Person having that nature is equally God. You go on: "Among men "a son does not derive his being from his father—but God, "when he is styled Father, must always be understood to be "a causa, a true and proper cause, really and efficiently giving "life." This is the philosophy of Dr. Clarke": and it is to intimate, that though every son of man has the "nature of man," and is equal in nature to his father; yet the "Son of God" must not have the "nature of God," nor be in nature equal to the Father. Excellent doctrine! And yet you are affronted to be called Arians. The answer is, that God the Father is not the cause of his Son, in Dr. Clarke's sense; who admits no necessary causes. Neither can the Doctor prove, either from Scripture or Fathers, that ever the Son was so caused by a voluntary act, or choice. In the old sense of cause, as the sun is the cause of light, the root of its branches, the fountain of streams, and the like, the Father was ever believed to be the cause of his Son, and no otherwise.

ⁿ Clarke's Script. Doct. p. 239, 273. ed. 2nd.

What you hint from Novatian about power, means only paternal authority, and priority of order on that account. You conclude with saying, that I might have argued that "the Son " is included in the one unbegotten God." But I do not find Scripture speaking any thing of the one unbegotten God. It mentions the one God, and excludes all other Gods; wherefore the Son being included, is not another God, but the same God. And though I like not the expression of "the unbegotten God, and "the begotten God," because it comes too near the language of Ditheism, (which you are every where inculcating,) yet I shall make no scruple of saying, that the Father, God unbegotten, and the Son, God begotten, are both one God°.

QUERY IV.

Whether, supposing the Scripture notion of God to be no more than that of the Author and Governor of the universe, or whatever it be, the admitting of another to be Author and Governor of the universe, be not admitting another God; contrary to the texts before cited from Isaiah, and also to Isa. xlii. 8. xlvi. 11. where he declares he will not give his glory to another?

IN defence of this Query, I charged you with Ditheism, as professing one Author and Governor to be a God, and another Author and Governor to be a God likewise: not the same God with the other, but another, consequently two Gods; which is undeniably evident in your scheme.

You say, in answer. that my "defence of this and of the " following Query is in reality (without intending it) an attempt " to expose and render ridiculous the express doctrine of St. John " and St. Paul, and to make it appear inconsistent with the Old " Testament," p. 195.

The reader, I doubt not, will be surprised at this high flight of extravagance. Hitherto I thought I had to do with a sober man, however mistaken in many things. But you are now giving yourself liberties of such a kind, as can scarce be thought consistent with that character. What I expected of you was, that you should clear your hypothesis of the charge of "two Gods;" every man taking it for granted, that neither St. John nor St. Paul, neither Scripture nor antiquity, ever taught two Gods.

° See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, p. 209, &c. of this volume.

But the charge being so full and plain, that you can no way evade it, you are resolved, it seems, to carry it off with an air of assurance, and to charge even St. John and St. Paul with the same. You do well to put your authorities very high and strong; because, I remember, Justin Martyr and Irenæus have said, that they could not have believed even our Lord himself, had he preached up another God beside the Maker of all things. However, if you are able to make your point good from Scripture, I shall think it sufficient. And suffer me once more to dispute it with you; not to expose or render ridiculous St. John or St. Paul, (God forbid!) but men of a much lower class; who, when their cause is most desperate, are used to put on the greatest confidence for a blind to the readers. Let us hear what you have to say: and do not tell me that I am “not arguing against “Dr. Clarke and you, but against plain Scripture;” as if Scripture were plain for two Gods.

You begin with your old pretence, that the texts of Isaiah are all “expressly personal.” Be it so: so also are many expressions in Scripture and antiquity, indeed in all writers; where yet the exclusive terms exclude those persons only whom they were intended in opposition to. It is a rule of language common to all kinds of authors; whereas your rigorous interpretation of the exclusive terms has nothing in the nature of the thing, or in custom of speech, to support it. You can scarce dip into any writer, but you find exceptions against it.

You endeavour further to shift off the charge of Ditheism, by retorting it upon me. But how wide a difference is there in the two cases! As I maintain that the Son is not another God, nor both two Gods, so I consistently teach that both are one God: you maintain, that God can be a name for no more than “one Person,” that each of the Persons is “a God,” and that they are not together “one God.” What is this but saying directly that they are two Gods? I may mistake in my hypothesis, (which yet has not been shewn,) but you are plainly self-condemned. You have recourse to St. Paul, (p. 197,) who favours your notions as little as I do. You ask, whether he “was a teacher of “Polytheism?” I verily think not: and if your doctrine stands as clear as St. Paul’s, all will be well with you. But do not father your conceits upon the blessed Apostle. He directs us, you say, “to the one true God, of whom are all things.” Yes, he tells us that the “Father, of whom are all things,” is the “one God,” in opposition to false ones, to nominal gods and lords:

and it is plain, that he meant it not in opposition to God the Son, because he reckons him "God to us," (Rom. ix. 5,) which none of the nominal gods are. Now, since the same St. Paul says that "there is no other God but one," (1 Cor. viii. 4,) it is manifest that though the Father be emphatically styled one God, yet he and the Son together are not two Gods, but one God^p.

You ask, whether when St. Paul tells us that "God our Saviour—saved us—through Jesus Christ our Saviour," he does thereby preach two Saviours? (Tit. iii. 4, 6.) Yes certainly, unless both be one Saviour. Wherefore you by denying them to be one, make two Saviours, as you do also two Gods. To your other question, I answer, that Jesus Christ is the same God and the same Saviour, though not the same Person with him styled "God our Saviour," Tit. iv. You go on: "Did our Saviour himself introduce heathen Polytheism, when he said, (Mark xii. 29,) The Lord our God is one Lord, and yet immediately after mentions another Lord, ver. 36?" But who has taught you to call that other, another Lord? This did not our Saviour: you are the Polytheist, (and not he,) by your strained and false comments upon his words.

This is what you call producing express Scripture.

What you have further, p. 198, about Bp. Pearson and Bp. Bull, (who are both directly against you,) is marvellous; as also your account of antiquity, which has been answered. Your pretence, that no ancient writer ever argued against Polytheism, by alleging that Christ is the "one supreme God," or individually the "same God," is a shameful misreport, a manifest untruth; unless you have some poor equivocation in the words. Tertulian, Origen, Hippolytus, Lactantius, &c. as many as resolve the Unity of Godhead into Unity of substance, (as the ancients in general do,) are so many evidences of your falsehood. For if Christ be one substance with the Father, he is one God supreme, God being a name of substance.

Your telling me that I make "one substance," but never "one God," is just as if you had said, I make one God, but never make one God: or else it is a weak begging the question. You pretend, the Unity of God is secure by making one original Cause. Right; if you take in God the Father and God the Son into the one Godhead: otherwise, by excluding one of your Gods, you make a supreme God and an inferior God, after the way of Pagan Polytheists; and so Ditheism is unavoidable. I asked, where the sacred writers ever limited the sense of the texts relating to the Unity by the word supreme? Where do they say there is but one supreme God, instead of one God? You have not one text to produce out of the laws against idolatry: a plain sign that Scripture went upon quite other principles than yours. And the reason of it is evident, because the design was to intimate that no other God but the God of Israel was to be admitted.

^p See my Sermons, p. 53, &c. of this volume.

To have made him supreme God only, would have left room for any inferior deities to be taken in with him. The place of the Psalms (Ps. xlvii. 2.) declaring God to be ὑψιστος, or most high, reacheth not the point; unless it had been said, you shall have none other most high God but him, to leave room for lower deities. There is a great deal of difference between saying, there is one most high God, and there is one God who is most high: as much as between saying, there is one supreme King of Great Britain, and there is one King of Great Britain who is supreme. Your instance is the more unfortunately chosen, because the very Person there styled ὑψιστος, most high, is by some of the ancients (Justin Martyr particularly) understood to be God the Son; which I infer from their interpreting verse the 5th, &c. of him. Your other instances are as little to your purpose: but it is pretty remarkable, that while you are confidently glorying of nothing less than plain and express Scripture, you are talking in a style unknown to Scripture, but very well known to the Pagans, that there is one only supreme God; intimating that there are inferior Gods, or one God at least, besides him. As to your several what-think-you's, p. 200, I refer you to my Sermons ⁹.

You tell me, that ὁ Θεός, in Scripture, &c. signifies the supreme God. Does it so? Then according to all antiquity, applying ὁ Θεός to Christ in their citations of the Old Testament, Christ is the supreme God. But I beg leave to say, that it signifies only God; and there is no need of saying supreme God, when there is no reference to an inferior God: and therefore Scripture, and generally antiquity, say nothing of a supreme God, because they acknowledged no inferior God; to which such expressions have a tacit reference. It was from the Pagans that such language was at first borrowed, and used at length by some Christian writers, (as Arnobius and Lactantius,) though by them very rarely; and with such cautions as might be sufficient to prevent misconstruction.

⁹ Sermon VII. p. 167 of this volume.

As St. Paul was willing to adopt the name of unknown God, in compliance with the Pagan phrase, to lead them into a belief of the God of the Christians: so some of the Fathers were inclinable to take the name of πρώτος Θεός, or princeps Deus, and to apply it, in a Christian sense, to draw the Pagans insensibly to the worship of the true God, under such a name as they had given to a false one. Otherwise this kind of phrases is not properly Christian, nor to be used by Christians.

It is one thing to say God is supreme, is παντοκράτωρ, is over all, or the like; and quite another to say, there is one supreme God; which, in propriety of speech, implies that he has another God under him. We say of the King, that he is supreme in his dominions; but who ever talks of the supreme King of Great Britain, as if there were any other king of Great Britain? Supreme moderator and governor, we say, because there are subordinate moderators and governors. You do well to quote Nebuchadnezzar for the phrase of "God of Gods," Dan. ii. 47. It was a very proper expression for an idolatrous king to use; and was well suited to a Pagan hypothesis. And if the like phrase occurs elsewhere^r, in the sacred writers, the intent is not to signify that any inferior God was admitted under the supreme, but that the God of Israel was far superior to all the reputed gods of the nations.

Your comment upon Isa. xlii. 8. xlviii. 11. is very extraordinary, that God will not give the glory of being undervied (that is all your comment amounts to) to any. Certainly he will not do what he cannot. But was it suitable to the divine Majesty to acquaint his people, that he will not (with reverence be it spoken) do the most staring contradiction and palpable absurdity? It is evident that his glory is his worship, all religious worship, (which might be taken from him, and placed upon false gods,) and he would not suffer it with impunity to be transferred from him to other objects. As to your pretended "mediate" worship, it shall be considered hereafter.

My saying that God has engrossed all divine honour to himself, you call "a most presumptuous contradiction to the whole "New Testament." But as it is no great presumption to dispute with men fallible as myself, about the sense of the New Testament; so I hope the reader will not take you to be in earnest, but will rather kindly excuse a few passionate words, such as men are apt to throw out in great extremities.

^r Esdras v. 8. Nehem. viii. 6. Vid. Cleric. in loc.

You appeal to John v. 22. to prove that God has given honour and worship to Christ as "Son of man." This will be distinctly debated hereafter. At present, it is enough to say, that Christ, rather than the Father, is to execute judgment upon man, because he himself is man, (which the Father is not,) and that so high and great an office is an evident token of what he is, very God, as well as very man; and therefore all men are to "honour him even as they honour the Father." You have taken a great deal of fruitless pains to shew, that the particular glories belonging to the Son, on account of his offices, are distinct from the glories belonging to the Father. You might, in the same way, have shewn, that the particular glories due to the Father under this or that consideration, are distinct from the glories of the Father considered under another capacity. For instance, the glory of the Father considered as King, is one glory; as Judge, another glory; as God of the Jews one thing, as God of Christians another, as God of angels another. And thus you may multiply the worship of the Father into a thousand several worships, by as many distinct considerations. But as all these several glories arise from the display of his attributes of wisdom, justice, goodness, &c. and all his attributes are founded in the excellency of his nature; so all the particular worships are reduced to one, as being an acknowledgment of that one divine nature, the root and source of all. The same I say of God the Son: all the particular glories belonging to him on account of his offices, relative to us, are but partial considerations of his attributes, of his goodness, mercy, wisdom, &c. which attributes have their root and foundation in the excellency of his nature, which nature is the same with the Father's; and thus all the particular glories, or worships, resolve into one glory, or worship, paid to that nature which is common to Father and Son. But of this I shall treat more distinctly in the sequel.

To conclude this article, you have not been able to clear yourself of the charge of believing and professing two Gods: but after a great many big words, and only words, about St. John, and St. Paul, and plain Scripture; you appear to have been doing nothing else but perverting Scripture, and depraving Christianity, and teaching us a new language, as well as a new faith, in asserting a supreme God and an inferior God, instead of one God.

QUERY V.

Whether Dr. Clarke's pretence, that the authority of Father and Son being one, though they are two distinct Beings, makes them not to be two Gods, as a king upon the throne, and his Son administering his Father's government, are not two kings, be not trifling and inconsistent? For if the King's son be not a king, he cannot truly be called king; if he is, then there are two kings. So, if the Son be not God, in the Scripture notion of God, he cannot truly be called God; and then how is the Doctor consistent with Scripture or with himself? But if the Son be truly God, there are two Gods upon the Doctor's hypothesis, as plainly as that one and one are two: and so all the texts of Isaiah cited above, besides others, stand full and clear against the Doctor's notion.

YOU go on here in the same confident way, (your confidence always rising as your arguments fall,) telling me that I "condemn Scripture for giving the Son the title of God:" because, forsooth, I condemn you for giving him the title, and denying him the thing; while Scripture allows him both. You have nothing to reply, but that there is "one first Cause," &c. and therefore but "one God." If a man were to admit this, you would still never be able to come at the conclusion you intend. For suppose the Father were allowed to be one God, as the first Cause, but God the Son God notwithstanding, as necessarily existing; this hypothesis is every whit as defensible as yours, or more so: only it is liable to the charge of Ditheism, as yours also is; and the like solutions would serve equally for either. This I hint, that you may not imagine yourself ever able to gain your point in that way of reasoning. But I proceed in my charge of Ditheism upon your scheme. You own the Son to be a God, though not included in the one God; therefore you make two Gods. You have no hopes of evading the charge yourself: but you think it may be some relief to bring me in to share with you in it; and so you feebly endeavour to retort it. I will not transcribe all you have trifled on this head: your argument, or rather no argument, but calumny, is, that I make "two supreme Gods." Shew me how. You tell me they are "two Gods," (in my hypothesis,) though "undivided in substance." But this is a miserable begging of the main question, that two Persons cannot be one God: whereas my charge of Ditheism upon you is founded upon this plain maxim, as plain as that two and two are four, that one God and another God are two Gods: or that two Persons, each of which is a God, and not together one God, are two Gods. Learn at length to submit to a self-evident maxim, and either confess two Gods, or throw out the Son from being God at all. You talk, in your usual deceitful way, of the ancient Christians making the “origination in the divine Paternity to be “the assertion of the Unity:” which is a thing directly and fully to my purpose, and as directly contrary to yours. For the ancients from this principle concluded that all the three Persons are one God, (which Bishop Pearson observes;) and you, in contradiction to the ancients, infer from the same principle, that they are not “one God.” Was there ever a more shameless abuse upon the ignorant readers? I have recited the passage of Bishop Pearson (which you refer to) once before, and shall now again (if it be possible to make any impressions upon your modesty) cite it to your shame, for thus imposing on your readers.

“This origination in the divine Paternity hath anciently been “looked upon as the assertion of the Unity: and therefore the “Son and Holy Ghost have been believed to be but one God “with the Father, because both from the Father, who is one, and “so the Union of them^s.” This is a true account of the ancients, worthy of that great man; while yours is so entirely false, that were it not that you have the privilege of writing without a name, one might think, that pure regard to your character might deter you from these liberties.

How have you the assurance to represent my notion as different from Bishop Pearson’s, when every body that has seen my books knows that Bishop Pearson’s and mine are exactly the same? Do not I every where assert the Paternity, and resolve the Unity, as the Bishop with all the ancients does, into Unity of substance and original? All the three are one God, because two are referred up to one Father, to whom they adhere, and from whom they derive their substance, the same divine substance with his. I had reduced you to this dilemma, either to assert two Gods, or to make no God of the Son; which I called ungodding him. Instead of an answer, you give me a rebuke; as usual, when sore pressed. You pretend, that you declare the Son to be God as much as Scripture does: and so will any Socinian or Samosatene say, while he supposes him never to have existed before he was man. By the same or the like argument you may make a God of every angel, inasmuch as angels are called Gods in Scripture. But while, notwithstanding, you deny the necessary existence of an angel, and make his title nominal, who sees not that you deny him to be God? And thus do you with God the Son. The case is manifest: and an ingenuous man would rather give up so plain a point, than expose himself by inventing little quibbles to make things appear what they are not, and to keep up a show of believing what he believes not.

^s Pearson on the Creed, p. 40.

But I am next to be charged as “ungodding the Son.” Let us hear how: you have been hitherto very unhappy in the way of retorting. I assert him to be God in as high a sense as the Father. Well, how is this ungodding him. Here you are silent. But I acknowledge him to be derived, sent to execute the Father’s orders, &c. Shew me then that either his being a Son, or being sent, is any way inconsistent with equality of nature or Unity of Godhead: here you are lost again. But you come trembling to tell me, “I ungod the Father.” You ought to tremble at such false and unrighteous accusations. Well, how do I do it? By asserting another independent, another supreme Lord, &c. Wonderful; when my business is to maintain, that he is not another independent supreme Lord, but the same Lord. “I deprive him,” you say, “of his original independent supremacy.” What! of his Paternity? but I own him to be Father, and first considered in every thing common both to the Son and him. You have made nothing out in the way of retorting. Come we next to Tertullian and Athenagoras; to see whether they agree with you or me, in resolving the Unity. The criterion is this: if they take Father and Son both into the one God, they are mine; if they separate the Son from the Father, making another God, or no God of him, then they are yours. Tertullian, you say, founds the “Unity of God upon the “supremacy of the Father alone, in the government of the “universe.” That is false; for Tertullian makes all the three Persons of one authority, one state, one substance, because one God. They are his very words cited above^t. Neither are you able to prove any thing contrary to it, out of all his Works. I referred you to a passage of Tertullian, where he rejects the notion of an inferior God as a Pagan dream^u: and to shew how consistent

^t See above, p. 459.

^u Neque enim proximi erimus opinionibus nationum, quæ si quando coguntur Deum confiteri, tamen et alios infra illum volunt. Divinitas autem gradum non habet, utpote unica.

Contr. Hermog. cap. 7. Deus non erit dicendus, quia nec credendus nisi summum magnum. Nega Deum quem dicis deteriorem. Contr. Marc. lib. i. cap. 6.

he is with himself, he makes the Son not an inferior God but the same God with the Father; and he applies the general maxim to the particular case of Father and Son^x, as having the same divinity, same power, &c. Your pretence of Tertullian's making the Son subordinate, is meanly equivocating upon a word. He makes him subordinate, as I also do, in order, or office, not in dominion: and you are very sensible that while you are pleading Tertullian's expressions in favour of your notions, you make him all over inconsistent, and contradictory to his own plain and avowed principles. You might at this rate quote all the Post-Nicene Fathers, who allow of a subordination as much as Tertullian. You run out (p. 211.) upon the history of his dispute with Marcion, as if that were any secret. After a great many words, you have nothing to elude his testimony against an inferior God, but a precarious fiction, or conjecture, that he would not have owned the Son to be summum Magnum, the supreme Being; though he plainly does own it in making his substance the same with the Father's, and ascribing the same divinity, power, and quality (unius status) to him. Your cavils about derivatio and portio have been considered above, (p. 458.) But you lay great stress upon Tertullian's supposing the summum Magnum, the supreme Being, to be unbegotten, which you think must exclude the Son. But, under favour, it is never Tertullian's way to exclude the Son. Father and Son together, upon his principles, were the one unbegotten eternal substance, till the generation of the Son: and then the Son was begotten, the Father unbegotten, and both still the same substance as before, under a different economy. You would insinuate, as if the Son was (according to Tertullian) begotten into a Person, just before the creation, by the good pleasure of the Father. I refer the reader to Bp. Bull, for a confutation of this weak and groundless charge. I may however take notice of it, as a thing very particular, that, till you have made the ancients the most stupid men that ever lived, you presume not to claim them as advocates for your opinions. Is it a fair way of dealing with authors to strain and wrest their expressions to a sense directly repugnant to their known and standing principles? Could not you do the same by Athanasius himself, if you were so disposed, and claim all the quia unus Deus. Contr. Prax. cap. 2. Trinitas unius divinitatis, Pater, Filius, et Spiritus sanctus. De Pudic. cap. 21.

^x Tres autem non statu sed gradu, nec substantia sed forma, nec potestate sed specie: Unius autem substantiæ, et unius status, et unius potestatis,

Post-Nicene Fathers, as well as Ante-Nicene, by the help of the like chicane? The question, you say, "is not whether Tertullian "always speaks consistently:" and you "are not" you say, "indicating Tertullian's reasoning," but such "plainly is his notion." In this way of talking, I know not why you should not put in your claim to all the orthodox men that ever wrote upon the Trinity. For, as you think them all inconsistent, it is only taking those principles which you may be able to strain to a sense agreeable to your notions, and then you may claim their countenance and authority; much in the same way as Dr. Clarke has shewn you, in respect of our Creeeds and Liturgy. The reader, I hope, sees, by this time, what your boasts of antiquity amount to; little more than the same game over again with the ancients, which the Doctor had before practised with our Church's forms.

You are next finding fault with my account of Tertullian, vol. i. p. 321, 322. of my Defence. The objection, I said, as Tertullian resolved it, was, that the authority would not be one. I thought my putting in the parenthesis (as Tertullian resolves it) might have been hint sufficient to a man of ordinary acumen. I knew what the objectors meant by monarchia; and I knew also to what sense Tertullian turned it in his answer: which, it seems, you did not attend to. He tells you, from his knowledge of Greek and Latin, that monarchia ought to signify singulare et unicum imperium, one singular government, or authority; and under this view he proceeds to answer Praxeas's objection about monarchia. But you say this instance of Tertullian may serve to shew that Father and Son are not "two Monarchs, but that "the one Monarch must be he only in whom the authority is "original." But then you will consider that hereby you make the Son no Monarch: and so, instead of making the Father and the Son one God, (which this example was intended to illustrate,) you make the Son no God at all; or else you make a supreme God and an inferior God, that is, two Gods, which you pretend to disown. Nor can you ever come off from so evident a dilemma.

I say then, that Tertullian's similitude, though it answered his purpose, does not at all serve yours. And therefore I observed to you, that Tertullian resolved the Unity of God, not into the Father's being sole Monarch, which would have been giving up the divinity of God the Son, but into Unity of power, substance, Godhead, common to both; taking both into the one Godhead, and one God. Had you done so too, you had done wisely, and might then have claimed some countenance from antiquity ; which your novel scheme is directly opposite to.

“Unity of substance,” you say, “can never make two equally “supreme Monarchs one God.” But it may make two Persons, considered as equally supreme over all, to be but one Monarch, and one God ; and that is as well.

I had said of Athenagoras, that he resolves the Unity of God-head into Unity of substance and original. “As if,” say you, “Unity of substance and Unity of original were the same thing.” I do not say they are precisely the same ; for then I need not have mentioned both. But this I say, that no Unity of substance, unless the original was one, so as to make the substance, as it were, of the same stock, would be sufficient upon the principles of the ancients.

I very well knew what I was talking about. Two unoriginate divine Persons, however otherwise inseparable, would be two Gods, according to the ancients. But if one be not only consubstantial, but also of the other, and referred up to him as a head or fountain, two such Persons were believed to be one God. This was the Catholic method, not of making the Father singly, but Father and Son one God ; which was their pious care and truly Christian concern, and which they expressed on all occasions against Jews, Pagans, and heretics.

Your observations on Athenagoras are answered above. You have in this page (p. 216.) and the following one, the shrewdest way of talking I have yet met with. You have discovered, it seems, that my principles and yours are the very same ; and that we need not dispute longer. Indeed, I was wondering at your dulness in not making the discovery sooner. For I very well knew that you could never bring over the ancients to your principles, but you must at the same time take me also along with them : and the very same arguments which you make use of to draw them in as advocates to your cause, must of course draw me in too, being inviolably attached to them. You have therefore here done me justice, undesignedly. I am really on your side as much as ever the ancients were : and you are very consistent in taking me in with them. But the misfortune is, that the pretty way you have of fetching any thing, or any man you please, into a side, and forcing them into your service, is become greatly contemptible ; especially after the attempts made upon such men as Bishop Pearson and Bishop Bull, and upon our Creeeds, Articles, and Liturgy. You have carried the wile too far : and now every body sees through it.

But let us hear, at length, how it is that I am brought over to countenance your principles ; and let the reader, from this instance, make a judgment of the rest. You proceed thus : “ If the Unity of the Godhead is to be resolved into one head, root, fountain, and Father of all, the Son who is not the head, root, fountain, &c. cannot be himself that one supreme God which “ is the Father, head, root, and fountain of all.” Thus, after you have swelled yourself up with assurance, and your reader with expectation, you produce nothing but the silly sophism about this and that ; which I before (p. 318.) promised to dismiss, wherever I should find it.

My “ own hands,” you tell me, “ have entirely destroyed my “ own scheme.” Happy for me, that I am here to answer for myself ; when with Bishop Pearson, Bishop Bull, and almost all the ancients∇, I am called in to countenance such notions as I had not only detested, but formally confuted. You tell me, “ had I rested here,” (that is, in asserting the Father to be head, root, &c.) “ the controversy had been at an end.” Now, if it may contribute any thing to end one of the idlest disputes, to say no worse, that ever was begun amongst us, I beg leave to assure you that I do rest there : and, by so doing, I have at once taken from you, as I humbly conceive, all your pretences both from Scripture and antiquity ; leaving you nothing but your metaphysics to trust to ; which, after repeated experiments, you have found very unserviceable, and lighter than vanity itself.

After you had taken notice of what I had granted, as to the Father’s being root, head, fountain, &c. you say, “ if this be true, “ as I have fully proved, &c.” and you refer to what you had done above, adding some other authorities in the margin. The reader here cannot but observe how unaccountably you have ∇ You scruple not, p. 218, to cite Athanasius, Hilary, and Gregory Nazianzen, as making the Father the only God ; as if they also intended to exclude the Son from the one God-head. Such as have ever looked into those writers themselves, instead of taking up scraps at second-hand, cannot want an answer to such weak pretences. I shall think it sufficient to refer you to a few places of these three writers, to give you a just notion of their principles upon this head : Athanasius, p. 556, 878. in Peal. p. 75. Hilarius, p. 836, 859, Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxxvi. p. 586. As to your pretence that you “ cannot find that any “ even of the Post-Nicenes of the 4th “ century said that the Son was equal “ in authority and in all perfections ;” it is either a poor quibble upon the word authority, or else betrays your great want of reading.

spent your time and pains in an elaborate proof of what I had readily before granted. This is what commonly, and very justly, goes under the name of impertinence; and is a method almost peculiar to those who, having once espoused a bad cause, have an after-game to play for their own reputation, more than for the sake of the cause they are entered into, to carry on the appearance of a dispute after the dispute is really ended. What other account can be given of your filling so many tedious pages with quotations from the ancients, really proving nothing but what I had ingenuously admitted before, leaving it to you to make all the advantage you possibly could of it?

The reader here may again plainly see, that your pretended arguments against me are not more against me than against the ancients, by whose principles mine must either stand or fall. And while you are charging me with contradictions, the charge falls equally upon them; whose faith I follow, and whose principles I here maintain. It may be seen, with half an eye, that you deal with the ancients just as you do with me. You pretend first to split their notion into contradictory principles; and then you take one part of the pretended contradiction and play it against the other part; crying out, the ancients, the ancients, all the way; with much the same justice as you can, when you have a mind to it, cry out, the Creeeds, the Articles, the Liturgy, and what not.

You tell me, (p. 217,) of my "perpetual self-contradiction." Now, if you are able to prove it, you will do something; if not, you only betray your own want of judgment or fairness, in making the charge. As to the perfection you imagine in the Father as such, more than in the Son, I deny any, except what is contained in a mode of existing, or relation of order. You go on cavilling, in a childish manner, against Unity of substance, individual, numerical, &c. which kind of cavils I abundantly answered again and again in my Defence, and shall not repeat. Homogeneous substance and inseparability amounts with you to substances united. You should have avoided this, because you hereby charge your friend the Doctor with making the divine substance a heap of substances united. If there cannot be substance and substance without substances, the Doctor and you are in a lamentable case, while you suppose the divine substance to be extended: for you thereby suppose him compounded of innumerable substances. Learn hereafter to have your thoughts more about you, when you are charging contradictions.

I had said in my Defence, vol. i. p. 323. that the Fathers believed God to be a word denoting substance^z, not dominion only. You are unwilling to let this pass, notwithstanding that you have changed your mind in this point of God's denoting dominion only, since your last time of writing. Now the word, you say, denotes the Person "whose the substance is:" that is, the substance whose the substance is; for Person denotes substance. As to θεότης, which before signified, with you, "divine dominion," it now signifies "divine dignity and authority." And it is pleasant to observe how you can change the sense of a word, and yet give the very same reason for the new sense, as before for the old one. We were before told, that "θεότης, like "ἀνθρωπότης, and all other words of the like formation, always signifies divine dominion^a." Now "θεότης, like ἀνθρωπότης and all other words of the like formation, always signifies divine dignity and authority." That is to say, once upon a time, it always signified an outward relation, expressed by the word dominion; but now it always signifies some intrinsic perfection, expressed by the word dignity. I hope, the next time you write, it will always signify divine nature, like ἀνθρωπότης, (which signifies the human,) and "all other words of like formation." I gave many plain examples of this signification, by references in the margin of my Defence^b. One would think that you, in your Reply, had a mind only to divert the reader. You tell me in the passage of Melito, θεότης is expressly opposed to ἀνθρωπότης. I know it, and I choose it for that very reason; because, as ἀνθρωπότης there undoubtedly signifies human nature, in concreto, so it determines the signification of θεότης to the divine nature. Besides that your own notion of dignity (if you have any sense in it) falls in with mine of substance. For whatever expresses intrinsic dignity (and not mere outward relation) expresses the nature and substance, the seat and ground, of that intrinsic dignity.

You pass over a page or two of my Defence, till you find something to carp at: and it is my saying that the Sabellian singularity consisted in making the Godhead μονοπρόσωπος, one single Hypostasis. To which you reply, that the "contrary is

^z See Tertullian above, p. 518.

Κατὰ τὰς τῶν πολλῶν δόξας φύσεως ἐνδεικτικόν ἔστι τὸ τῆς θεότητος ὄνομα. Bas. Ep. 80.

Ὁ ὢν, καὶ ὁ Θεὸς τῆς οὐσίας ὀνόματα. Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxvi. p. 586.

Οὐδὲ ἑτέρα ἡ οὐσία παρὰ τὴν θεότητα, οὐδὲ ἑτέρα ἡ θεότης παρὰ τὴν οὐσίαν. Epiph. vol. ii. p. 11.

^a See Dr. Clarke's Replies, p. 283.

^b Defence, vol. i. p. 323, 504.

“notoriously true, that the Sabellians supposed God to be μία ὑπόστασις τριπρόσωπος.” Now, of all things, there is nothing more contemptible among men of sense, than pedantry about words. Men of learning know that the word πρόσωπον has been sometimes used to signify only an appearance, or manifestation, or character: in this sense, the Sabellian tenet is, that the Godhead is μία ὑπόστασις τριπρόσωπος, one Hypostasis under three Persons, that is, names, appearances, characters; the same being either Father, or Son, or Holy Ghost, according to his several manifestations, or different appearances. But then the word πρόσωπον has been likewise used to signify the same with Hypostasis, a real Person^c: in this sense the Sabellian principle makes the Godhead μονοπρόσωπος, or ἐν πρόσωπον, one single Person^d. But I am weary of instructing you in such κνοιον things as you ought to have been well versed in, before you engaged in this controversy. I excuse your telling me, that I “manifestly contradict all antiquity, by supposing πρόσωπον and “Hypostasis” (sometimes, for I never pretend they do always) “to mean the same thing.” I charitably believe you spoke it in your simplicity, not designing any misreport, but for want of knowing better.

Upon inquiry into this matter, the truth appears to me to lie thus. Upon the first broaching of the Praxean and Noëtian heresy, which charged the Catholic doctrine with Tritheism, the use of the terms substance and persons came in: the Catholics pleaded, that they did not assert three Gods, but three Persons only; meaning by Persons, real Persons, as is plain of Hippo-

^c It is thus used as early as Hippolytus, contr. Noët. cap. 7, 14. in which sense also Tertullian frequently uses the Latin word Persona. Gregory Nazianzen makes it indifferent whether to say ὑποστάσεις or πρόσωπα, provided the meaning be secured. Orat. xxxix. p. 630. By degrees the words came to be indifferently used, one for the other, as Damascen has observed to have been common with the Fathers.

Χρῆ δὲ γινώσκειν, ὡς οἱ ἅγιοι πατέρες ὑπόστασιν καὶ πρόσωπον, καὶ ἄτομον τὸ αὐτὸ ἐκάλεσαν. τὸ καθ' ἑαυτὸ ἰδιοσυστάτως ἐξ οὐσίας καὶ συμβεβηκότων ὑφιστάμενον, καὶ ἀριθμῷ διαφέρον, καὶ τὸν τινα δηλοῦν, οἷον Πέτρον, καὶ Παῦλον. Damasc. Dialect. p. 46.

^d Σοφίαν λέγοντες, ὁμοίαν εἶναι λέ-γουσι τῇ ἕξει τῇ ἐν ψυχῇ τῶν πεπαιδευμένων συνισταμένην καὶ διὰ τοῦτο πρόσωπον ἐν πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ, &c. Basil. Homil. xxvii. p. 602.

Πρόσωπον is many times used in this Homily to signify the same with ὑπόστασις.

Οὐδὲ πάλιν υἱοῦ καὶ πνεύματος ἐν πρόσωπόν ἐστιν. Ibid. p. 606.

Μίαν ὑπόστασιν ἔφησεν εἶναι τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱὸν καὶ τὸν ἅγιον πνεῦμα, καὶ ἐν τριώνυμον πρόσωπον. Theodor. de Sabellio. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 9.

Sabellius—cum veram Trinitatem intelligere non voleret, unam eandemque credidit sub triplici appellatione personam. Leon. M. Serm. xxiii. p. 155. ed. Quenell.

lytus and Tertullian. Such was the ancient Catholic sense of πρόσωπον and Persona. Afterwards came Sabellius, who, reviving the Praxeian and Noëtian doctrine, yet thought it prudent to adhere to the Catholic terms of one substance, or one God, and three Persons. But then he misinterpreted Person, understanding it of a manifestation or representation, only, and nothing real, or substantial.

Thus, after the manner of heretics, he kept to the Church's language, but depraved and corrupted the Church's sense. From this time one God and three Persons became an ambiguous phrase, capable either of a Catholic or Sabellian sense. As to the truth of the fact, I ground it chiefly upon what I have observed out of Hippolytus and Tertullian; and that it does not appear that either Praxeas or Noëtus ever talked of three Persons, as Sabellius did after. He was the first that introduced the theatrical sense of person into Christianity, making the τρία πρόσωπα to be ἀνυπόστατα, while the Catholic notion was of τρία πρόσωπα ἐνυπόστατα. There was but a very small variation in the words, but a very great one in the sense and application. One thing however I may remark, that there is a slight difference between ὑπόστασις and πρόσωπον, that the former may be applied to inanimate or irrational things, the latter to rational only: when therefore I say that they are of the same import, I would be understood to mean only when applied to rational or intelligent things.

You proceed to mention an incidental thing, which, in common prudence, you might better have omitted. In order to vindicate your notion of there being but one God, while you suppose another God under him, you had asked me whether "Herod the Great was not King of Judæa, though the Jews had no king but Cæsar?" To which I civilly answered, that Herod the Great had been dead above thirty years before the time when it was said that the Jews had no king but Cæsar. You had here committed a chronological slip; such as ingenious men, through haste, may be sometimes apt to fall into. But you are pleased to quarrel with me for putting when the Jews, instead of though the Jews. I own the fact: for I supposed you to mean, being a man of sense, that the two kings were alive, when it was said the "Jews had no king but Cæsar." For otherwise you must be sensible of a great inadvertency in your argument; which was intended to prove that there may be two kings (as two Gods) at the same time; and yet the name of king (or God) devolved entirely upon the superior. Now whether you will submit to a slight slip in chronology, or to a gross blunder in the argument, is all one to me: but a prudent man would have passed a matter over quietly, which could not be called up again but to his own confusion. You tell me now, that Herod was king under Augustus. Very right: but how do you prove that, at that time, the "Jews had no king but Cæsar?" There lay the pinch of the difficulty; which it is a wonder a man of your acumen should not be able to perceive.

We have nothing more, that is material, under this Query. The charge of professing two Gods remains still unanswered; and must remain, till you think proper to discard God the Son from all religious worship. Then indeed he will be no longer God to us, any more than angels, or magistrates, or other nominal Gods: and you may then rest consistently in one God, and no more; namely, in God the Father.

QUERY VI.

Whether the same characteristics, especially such eminent ones, can reasonably be understood of two distinct Beings; and of one infinite and independent, the other dependent and finite?

YOUR new answer to this Query is,

1. That the characters "can no more be understood of two distinct Persons, than of two distinct Beings."

To which I answer, that it may be proved from Scripture that the characters belong to two Persons: it cannot be proved that they belong to two Beings, much less that they belong to two such disparate and unequal Beings as you suppose Father and Son to be.

2. You answer, secondly, that "the characters are not the same, because powers derived and underived are not the same."

This answer is very contrary to the sentiments of wiser men, who have argued the other way, that if the powers had been equally underived, they had not been the same in the two Persons^e: but as one of the Persons is derived from the other,

^e In duobus ingenitis diversa divinitas invenitur: in uno autem genito ex uno ingenito, naturalis unitas demonstratur. Fulgent. contr. Arian. p. 59.

Si ambo vocarentur Patres, essent profecto natura dissimiles. Unusquisque enim ex semetipso constaret, et communem substantiam cum altero non haberet; nec Deitas una esset, quibus una natura non esset. Idem. p. 52.

Si verus Deus est, et de Patre non est, duo sunt habentes singuli et voluntates proprias et imperia diversa. Greg. Nazianz. p. 729. Pseud. Ambros. p. 348. Confer Eugenii Confess. ap. Vict. Vit. p. 37. Chiffi.

“ being Light of Light, God of God, substance of substance,” both together are “ one God, one substance, &c.” And the same powers are common to both; as there is the same life in root and branches, the same light in the sun and its rays, the same virtue in the centre and what proceeds from it. And though no comparisons are sufficient to illustrate infinity, and there must be a great deal more than we are able to conceive; yet there is no principle of reason to contradict this notion, that the same powers, properties, perfections, may be diversely considered in the fountain from whence they flow, and in the streams to which they descend.

You yourself can give no tolerable account how the same powers, attributes, &c. are equally diffused to infinitely distant parts of the divine substance, as you conceive it under extension: nor is our notion of the same powers being common to three Persons at all more unconceivable or inexplicable than yours is of the other^f. So that here let us be content to stop where it becomes us, and not pretend to measure infinity. You say, the “ powers are no more the same than the Persons are:” nor, certainly, less the same than the substance is. All this will depend upon the settling the sense of sameness, and the several kinds of it.

When you are able to explain to me how the wisdom residing in one part of the divine substance (on your hypothesis of extension) is the same, and yet not the same with the wisdom residing in any other part; I may then be able to account for the degree of sameness in the powers belonging to the three Persons.

3. In the third place, you tell me of an “ invidious insinuation,” couched under the words finite and infinite. This you borrow, as you do many other things, from the author of Modest Plea, &c. Continued. I returned a brief answer to it in the Preface to my Sermons^g. There is nothing invidious in the case. But you ought, if you have none but fair and honest designs, to come out of ambiguous terms, that we may fall directly upon the question. You are the less excusable for continuing your disguises, while you write under cover and conceal your name. It looks now as if you were afraid only of having your cause exposed, while there is no danger of your persons. Dr. Clarke, even in books which he has set his name to, is hardly more reserved than you are without a name. What is the meaning of this, but to protract a controversy, and to run from the question ; being sensible that your cause is not really defensible ?

^f See my Defence, vol. i. p. 375.

^g Page 9 of this volume.

But to proceed. You say, "you set no limitations to the "perfections of the Son of God, more than the Scripture has "done : " which is saying nothing ; because you tell us not what "Scripture has done," according to your sense of it. But you add, "by declaring them to be derived : " which in my sense of derived is no limitation at all ; you should tell me whether it be in yours. "Self-existence," you say, "is a perfection." Prove from Scripture, or any other way, if you can, that self-existence, as distinct from necessary existence, is any perfection : it is a relation of order, a mode of existing^h, and that is all.

Aye, but you say it denotes "positive greatness," (p. 226,) and you refer me to the Modest Pleader, who makes it the same with *necessary existence*ⁱ. If this be indeed your meaning, I own it, in that sense, to be as great a perfection as possible, and the sum total of all perfection : but then I assert it to be common to Father and Son, who are, in this sense, equally self-existent. Only, the Father particularly is unbegotten and underived ; under which conception, self-existence, as peculiar to him, is negative and relative. We had long been amused with Dr. Clarke's denying the self-existence of the Son and Holy Ghost ; by which he was supposed to mean no more, than that they were begotten and proceeding, which every body allows : but now, it seems, he meant to deny their necessary existence ; which is directly reducing them to creatures. You see now what you have to do : either prove that the mere character of underived expresses any positive perfection ; or that necessary existence belongs not equally to all the three Persons : and then you will shew yourself an able disputant.

You need not now be scrupulous about "dependent" and "independent : " you have said enough. Whatever is not necessarily existing is precarious and dependent, as much as any creature, which is enough in all reason ; we understand you. You say, that you suppose the Son "dependent in no other "sense than is implied in the notion of being begotten." It may be so, according to your notion of begotten, (I suppose, very little differing from created ;) but you will have a hard task to shew

^h Ἐνάργειας τρόπον τὸ ἀγέννητον, οὐκ οὐσίας ὄνομα. Basil. contr. Eun. lib. iv. p. 763. Vid. Damascen. vol. i. p. 135, 140, 143, 210, 409. ii. p. 817.

Pseudo-Just. Exposit. Fid. Mich. Psell. apud Fabric. vol. v. p. 56.

ⁱ Modest Plea, p. 217.

that either Scripture or antiquity favours any such notion of be-gotten, as to make the Son precarious, or not necessarily existing. The voluntary generation mentioned by the primitive writers will not serve you at all in this matter, as will be seen in the sequel : and as to Scripture, you have not a single text to help you, but what must first be racked and tortured with metaphysical glosses, to make it speak what it never meant. You have a surprising piece of subtilty (p. 224.) to bring yourself off from the just and well-grounded suspicion of making the Son a precarious being. It is a difficult matter to force logic against common sense; but you are resolute enough to try. Your words, speaking of the Son's existing by the Father's free act and choice, (which is Dr. Clarke's known sense of this matter,) are these: " Which yet
 " no more implies the Son to be a precarious and mutable being,
 " than those perfections of God, his power, justice, goodness, " veracity, and the like, (the exercise whereof always implies
 " the notion of action, and consequently depends wholly on the " will of the agent,) are therefore more precarious or uncertain
 " in their effects, than those other perfections, (which imply in " them nothing of action, and consequently have no dependence " upon the will of the agent,) such as eternity, omnipresence, " omniscience, or the like."

Here, if one may presume to understand such obscure reasoning, God the Son is proved to be no precarious being, because the acts of God's justice, goodness, &c. are certain in their effects: which they undoubtedly are, whether God pleases to annihilate or to bring into existence. Therefore, most evidently, the Son is no precarious being: nor is any creature whatever at all precarious or mutable, by the same way of reasoning. A mighty honour done to God the Son, to make him no more precarious than the rest of the creation. Certain however it is, that, upon your principles, there is no natural necessity for his existing: he might either never have existed, or may even cease to exist, (as much as may be said of any creature,) if it should please God so to order it. This is the proper and full notion of a precarious being, a being having no necessary foundation of existence, but depending entirely upon the free-will and choice of another being. All the subtilties imaginable can never bring you off here, any more than they can bring together both ends of a contradiction.

Our readers may now see plainly what you have been doing. You set out with general and ambiguous words of the Father's being alone supreme in "authority, dominion, &c." But, at length, you can make nothing of it, without interpreting this supremacy by the perfection of self-existence, and self-existence by necessary existence; thereby depressing God the Son into precarious existence. Now indeed you have made the Father sole Governor very effectually: for who will ever be so mad as to dispute, whether a precarious being, a creature, be subject to his Creator? But let us return to the Query, and consider whether those eminent characteristics, specified in the texts cited, are such as at all suit with a finite, dependent, precarious, created being.

You pretend (p. 225.) that "no distinguishing character of "the one supreme God is ascribed to the Son in Scripture." But let the reader see the texts which ascribe omniscience, knowledge of the heart, eternity, to the Son; attributes by Scripture appropriated to the one true God: besides some titles, appearing in these texts, applied to Christ, and appropriate likewise to the one God. As to two or three other characters, which you mention as appropriate to the one God, and which are not applied (as you pretend) to the Son; see my Sermons^k, and what I have said above: I do not love to fill my paper with repetition as often as you do yours. You come next to lessen the characters given to God the Son. He is "Searcher of the heart;" but as "received of the Father:" which the text says not one word of. Only, four verses lower, it is said, that he received "power over the nations," of the Father; which is very wide of our present purpose. You have some pretences to elude the force of the title "First and Last;" which see answered in my Sermons^l. As to "mighty God," you pretend the Father is so absolutely, the Son with limitation; and here you refer to the Son's being (μεγάλης βουλῆς ἄγγελος) angel of his great council; which is not according to the Hebrew, and so is of no account while I am arguing from Scripture, not from the Fathers. The Father is "Lord of all," you say, "absolutely:" and so is the Son, for any thing that appears; though the Father "put all "things under him." Let it be shewn that the Father has any natural subjects, which are not equally subjects of the Son too. There is therefore no ground for your imaginary limitations in respect of the powers and perfections ascribed to the Son.

You add, (p. 228,) that nothing can be "communicated to "the one supreme God." The force of this lies only in the ^k Sermons, p. 167 of this volume.

^l Ibid. p. 143, 144.

terms. The first Person may eternally communicate to the second, and both be one God. "He can have nothing," you say, "of himself:" well; if he has it but in himself, and of the Father, it suffices. The question is not whence he has his perfections, but what he has. It is remarkable, you say, that the "throne, kingdom, &c. is never ascribed to Christ upon account of his "part in the work of creation," p. 230. And what if it is not? The Father is recommended to us principally as Creator, the Son as Redeemer, to keep up a more distinct notion of their Persons and offices. What a stress do you lay upon common things taught in our Catechism! Besides, I had obviated this cavil in my Defence^m. It is remarkable again, you say, "that "the descriptions of the Word, in the Old Testament, always "represent him as the Angel or Messenger." You should only have said generally: and there is good reason why; because by that criterion chiefly, we know that it was God the Son, not God the Father. He is at the same time represented also as God, and as Lord, Jehovah, &c. What use you can make of this remarkable thing has been shewn. I pass over your speculations on Dan. vii. 13, 14, as carrying no argument in them. You go on in speaking of Christ's receiving dominion; which relates only to the economy or dispensation: according to which God the Father will receive a kingdom at the last day, and enlarge his dominion over his subjects. As to Phil. ii. 6, I refer to my fifth Sermon; where I had obviated your pretences before you made them. You insist upon your construction of ἀλλά: which if admitted, yet you can never ascertain your whole construction, (as I shewed in my Sermonⁿ;) but the words will still naturally bear a meaning opposite to yours. However, as to your criticisms about the use of ἀλλά in that place, they appear to me of no manner of force. The sense is exceeding clear and unbarrassed, running thus: "Who, being in the form of God, thought it not "robbery to be equal with God:" (see how great, how divine a Person he was:) "yet, notwithstanding, he humbled himself^o, " &c." You pretend that the words, "thought it not robbery," would be the example proposed. No; but they are part of the ^m Defence, vol. i. p. 433, 434.

ⁿ Sermon V. p. 110 of this vol.

^o Clemens understands it in the same way as I do. *Ὁς ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ἰπάρχων, οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ· ἐκένωσεν δὲ ἑαυτὸν ὁ φιλοκτίρμων Θεός, σώσασαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον γλιχόμενος. Clem. Alex. p. 8. Ox.

That Clemens here interprets the place as I do, appears from his changing ἀλλά into δὲ, from his making a pause after ἴσα Θεῷ, and from his choosing a new subject of his proposition, ὁ φιλοκτίρμων Θεός, instead of δὲ preceding.

preface to it, to make the example the more forcible and the more endearing: so that I may return you the compliment of inattention.

In my Sermons, you tell me, “I most absurdly interpret God’s highly exalting Christ, in the same sense as men in their prayers highly exalt God.” No; but if you had not had a strong propensity to misrepresentation, you would have said in the same sense as men in preaching, or the like, exalt God by proclaiming and publishing his praises. And now where is there any the least appearance of absurdity, after taking out the idea of praying; which you improperly threw in, to abuse the reader, and to give some colour to your accusation? I always suspect a magisterial censure to have no weight at the bottom: it is to make up in the manner what it wants in the substance. Shew me one instance in the Scripture and Apocrypha together, of your sense of ὑπερυψώω, and I will give you above thirty of mine. Indeed, I know but of a single place where it can bear such a sense as you are contending for; which is Psalm xxxvii. 35. And yet there it may as well bear mine. Please to tell me why ὑπερυψώω may not as well be so used as δοξάζω, and why one should be thought more absurd than the other, and I will stand corrected. I shewed you that I was not singular in interpreting ὑπερυψώω by δοξάζω in that place. The context favoured it, the words would well bear it; and an ancient Greek writer, under the name of Dionysius, as well as a Latin writer, under the name of Ambrose, were beforehand with me in it. And what if your own favourite Eusebius^p should be found to chime in with both? I love not to be positive where I may be mistaken: but it appears to me extremely probable, from Eusebius’s manner of speaking of it, that his sense of ὑπερυψώω was the same with mine: and the rather, because Origen (of whom Eusebius was a great admirer) would never have admitted ὑπερυψώω in your sense of the word, understanding it of Christ in his highest capacity; as Eusebius plainly does. Nor do I think that Eusebius ever had so low an opinion of God the Son, as to think him capable of being exalted in any other sense but that of being glorified, or having his glory manifested. It is observable, that Eusebius does not interpret the text of constituting our Saviour Lord, King, and God; but recognising, or manifesting him as such: and it is certain that Eusebius resolves all the Son's real and essential greatness into his *Sonship*⁹, and not into any subsequent exaltation. It was as Son of God that he acknowledged him Lord, and Saviour, and King, and God: wherein Eusebius's theology, however you may boast of him, very far exceeds yours. You charge me with interpreting ἐχαρίσατο most absurdly. I suppose, if you had had any reason to assign, you would have obliged us with it. I see no absurdity in interpreting giving a name to be giving a name; which is all I have done. But it is very absurd of you to imagine that God may not glorify his Son, as well as his Son may glorify him; by spreading and extolling his name over the whole creation.

^p Ὁ δοξάζων αὐτὸν, ὁ ὑπερυψῶν, ὁ ἀναδείξας βασιλεὶα τῶν ὄλων—ὃν οὕτω δοξάζοντα τὸν ἑαυτοῦ Πατέρα, ἀμοιβαίως ἀντιδοξάζων ὁ Πατήρ, καὶ Κύριον, καὶ Σωτήρα, καὶ Θεὸν τῶν ὄλων, καὶ σύν-θρονον τῆς ἑαυτοῦ βασιλείας ἀνέδειξε. Euseb. contr. Marcell. p. 70. Conf. Josh. iii. 7. ἀρχομαι ὑψῶσαι σε κατάνωπιον πάντων.

You go on to Heb. i. 2. "Whom he hath appointed heir of all things;" by which you intend, I suppose, to prove that he was not Lord before: though in the very same verse it is said, "by whom also he made the worlds." Might not this shew you that the Apostle is only speaking of that peculiar and special right founded in the merits of Christ's redemption; by which he became, in a more special sense, Lord of all he had redeemed; just as God the Father became, in a more special sense than before, Lord of the Jews, upon his choosing them as his peculium, or upon his delivering them from Egyptian slavery? What you are here endeavouring, it is hard to devise; unless you are coming directly into the Socinian scheme; for which only, your present discourse is calculated. You observe, "Then it was that God said, Thou art my Son, this day have I begotten thee." What then? Was he not the begotten Son long before? If he was, then you are proving nothing more than that the Son's glory was manifested in time; which is certainly true both of the Father and Son: if you mean otherwise, you run directly into Socinianism; as I before hinted. You add, "Then it was, that God commanded, Let all the angels of God worship him." And why did you not add, that then it was, that "he laid the foundation of the earth," and then it was, that the "heavens were the works of his hands?" Do you imagine that St. Paul, in that chapter, had no other design, but to describe the manifestations of Christ's glory subsequent to his incarnation? You find, that he was the Lord, who in the "beginning laid the foundations of the earth:" which is a stronger character than all the rest put together; and may convince you that he was Lord long before his incarnation, as John i. 1. declares him God before the creation. To your pretences about the Son's "receiving power, glory, &c." I had answered, with many of the Fathers, that he received in capacity of man, what in another capacity he had before ever enjoyed. This is not the only good answer to the difficulty proposed: I have myself made use of another, which may as effectually serve to take off the imaginary force of your argument. But let us hear what you have to say to it. You "no where find this distinction in Scripture." What! Do not you find that he was God, and that he was also man? When you have found this, you have found the distinction. But you "no where find in Scripture any thing "given to Christ, or any thing ascribed to him, but what is "applied to his whole Person." We say, whatever is applied, is applied to his whole Person; but considered secundum quid, or in a certain capacity, not in every respect which goes in to make up the Person. And can you pretend to deny this? Let us see what you are like to make of it. Jesus increased in stature: Will you say, that the Word (for that you certainly allow to be constitutive of the Person) grew taller and larger, because this is applied to the Person? He sweat, as it were, great drops of blood: Was the Λόγος in a sweat? He died, and was buried, and he lay in the ground: according to you, the whole Person, the Λόγος, it seems, as well as the body, suffered all this; for you know of nothing that was ever applied to part of the Person, but to the whole Person. When you consider this matter again, learn to form your argument with a little more judgment: for you seem not, at present, to know how to oppose us in the best method, nor how to give your cause the advantage it is really capable of. You should not have found fault with us for applying any thing to a compound person, in such respect or capacity only as is suitable thereto; for this is the commonest thing imaginable, and is done every day, as often as we say Peter or John is fat, lean, low, tall, well, sick, or the like: but you should have laid your argument against our taking so much in as we do into the Person of Christ, (the Λόγος, the soul and the body,) and then you might have shewn some degree of acuteness. But it is not my business to point out to you the properest way of defending your heresy, which is every way indefensible: it may suffice, if I reply to such things as you have to produce.

⁹ Καθὸ δε μόνος αὐτὸς, ὁ ἐξ αὐτοῦ γεινηθεὶς τοῦ Πατρὸς ἐν μορφῇ ὑπῆρχε τοῦ Θεοῦ τοῦ ἀοράτου, καὶ πρωτότοκος ἀπάσης κτίσεως: διὸ καὶ τιμᾶν, καὶ σέβειν, καὶ προσκυνεῖν μόνον αὐτὸν οἷα Κύριον, καὶ Σωτῆρα, καὶ Θεὸν ἐναντὶς μαμαθήκαμεν. Euseb. contr. Marcol. p. 69.

You say, "judgment was not given to part of him which is "the Son of man; but to him, because he is the Son of man." There is nothing at all in your argument: for, suppose a wound or a plaster, to be given to Peter, that is, to the whole Person; yet, I suppose, it may be understood with respect to one part only of him, viz. his body. But I have allowed you that the authority of executing judgment was economically devolved upon Christ (considered in both capacities) as the properest Person for it; being equal to the charge as God, and over and above peculiarly fitted for it as being also man; and so a more suitable judge of man^r. The reason then why, out of three divine Persons, Christ is peculiarly appointed to the office of judging us, is because he had to his divinity superinduced the humanity, and thereby familiarized himself the more to us. You see then, that your ingenious argument about parts, however it might affect another hypothesis, (though it can really hurt none,) does not at all concern my account of that matter.

As to the place of Hermas, which I produced in my Defence, I refer the reader to Bishop Bull and Dr. Grabe. All you have to object, is the expression of corpus, by which you understand a human body; I, the whole human nature, consisting of body and soul. Nothing more common in writers than to express the whole man by flesh, or body^s; and by the latter especially, when considered as a servant: so that your construction is at least very precarious; and is what neither the expression itself, nor what goes along with it, gives any reasonable ground for. But I leave that matter to be considered by the learned; there being some difficulties as to the text of Hermas, not yet fully adjusted by the manuscripts.

You are insinuating the same thing of Novatian which you had before of Hermas; as if he imagined the Word to have assumed flesh only, without a soul: which, if true, we would give you up Novatian for a very silly man, and withal a heretic. The point of Christ's having a human soul was a thing so settled in Novatian's time, and long before; so universally maintained

^r Pater Verbum suum visibile effecit omni fieri carni, incarnatum et ipsum, ut in omnibus manifestus fieret rex eorum. Etenim ea quæ judicantur oportebat videre judicem, et scire hunc a quo judicentur. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 9. p. 184.

^s See Suicer's Thesaurus in σάρξ and σῶμα.

from the very beginning of Christianity, by all the Fathers, without exception; that had Novatian taught otherwise, he could not have passed for a schismatic only. You may see what Socrates^t says to that point, who was himself of the Novatian sect, and his testimony therefore the more material; as disciples seldom vary in any thing very considerable from their leaders. He declares, that all the ancients (sure he did not exclude the head of his own party) believed that Christ had a human soul, and asserted it as a doctrine universally received. He mentions Irenæus, Clemens, Apollinaris of Hierapolis, Serapion Bishop of Antioch, the Synod that met about the case of Beryllus, Origen, Pamphilus and Eusebius: and it is evident still from their own works, of as many as have left us any. To those he has named, may be added Clemens Romanus^u, Justin Martyr^x, Melito^y, Hippolytus^z, Tertullian^a, and perhaps several more which may have escaped my notice. Now, what will Novatian's single testimony signify against such a cloud of witnesses? But the more universal the doctrine was, the less probable is it that Novatian should dissent from it. And indeed you have no foundation for any such suspicion of him, more than what lies in the use of the word caro, flesh; which is a very common expression for man (body and soul) in Scripture itself, as well as in ecclesiastical writers. Besides that Novatian interprets Christ's being made flesh, by his assuming of man, hunc hominem, b this man: which is a name he would scarce have given to mere body or flesh; well knowing that man is made up both of body and soul. Your pretence about Son of God and Son of man being two Persons, (upon my scheme,) hinted only, without any reason to support it, may be passed over. The clearing of that matter will require a large discussion of the true notion and definition of a person; which you have not attempted: I, perhaps, may, in a proper place. What you add further is of more weight, that I seem to suppose that the "glory which Christ had before the world was, is the very same with that authority and power of judgment" (so you express it) "wherewith he was invested after his resurrection." But that authority and power of judging, as you call it, ^t Socrates Eccl. H. lib. iii. cap. 7. p. 178.

^u Clem. Rom. Epist. cap. 49. p. 169. Cant.

^x Apol. ii. cap. 10. p. 26.

^y Melito apud Cav. Hist. Lit. tom. ii. p. 33.

^z Hippolytus contr. Noët. cap. 17. p. 18.

^a Tertullian contr. Prax. cap. 16, 30. de Carn. Christi, cap. 10.

^b Caro fit, et habitat in nobis, hoc est, assumit hunc hominem, &c. Novat. cap. 16.

is what our Lord had before his resurrection, as himself declares, John v. 28, &c. And what I suppose, is this; that all the powers, glories, honours, given to the Son, were nothing but so many declarations, indications, or manifestations of the dignity and divinity of his Person: which dignity and divinity had been celebrated in heaven before, and were now to be recognised after his incarnation and humiliation: so that in the main, this was no more than receiving the same honours he before had, and returning, as it were, to the same state of glory; only now clothed with humanity, which before he was not.

You have something further to observe of Hermas, in respect of coheir. How can the divine nature, say you, be heir of any thing? But I hope a Son may, without offence, be said to be heir to all his Father's glories, in allusion to what passes among men, though the similitude may not answer in every circumstance. It is a lively and elegant way of conveying to us a notion of divine things; and is to be understood, like many passages of Scripture, θεοπρεπῶς, though spoken ἀνθρωποπαθῶς.

You conclude with a passage of Irenæus, which I have cited in my Sermons^c; whither, to save myself trouble, I refer the reader; who may there also find a sufficient explication of it. What you infer from it is, that the "Word received an additional power and glory upon his resurrection." Power is an ambiguous word: but he received an additional manifestation of his glory; as God the Father also did at the very same time, as well as often before. And he became Lord and Proprietor of mankind, under a more peculiar title and stricter alliance: just as God the Father, when he had by his many deliverances, favours, and blessings, made the people of the Jews more peculiarly his own, became their Lord in a strict and special sense. Thus both Father and Son will (we hope) receive daily additions of external honour, and increase of dominion, by the coming in of Jews, Turks, Pagans, and Infidels. God's full kingdom is not yet come; we pray for it: and if the Father himself be not yet completely King, in the fullest sense, what wonder is it, if we hear of our Lord's receiving a kingdom, or dominion, in time. External relations may accrue to any of the divine Persons, such as dominion, &c. But your great misfortune is, that you can no where find divinity accruing to God the Son. (except it be by eternal generation;) you can no where find, that he was ever constituted God^d, (as he might be Lord;) or that he became, by any new accession, more truly or more fully God than he was ever before. This consideration at once shews the weakness of your hypothesis, (as I hinted above,) and is alone sufficient to unravel all your fallacies.

^c Sermons, p. 114, 115 of this volume.

QUERY VII.

Texts applied

To the one God.

Thou, even thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men, 1 Kings viii. 39.

I the Lord search the hearts, I try the reins, Jer. xvii. 10.

I am the first, and I am the last; and beside me there is no God, Isa. xlv. 6.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, Rev. i. 8.

King of kings, and Lord of lords, 1 Tim. vi. 15.

The mighty God, Is. x. 21.

Lord over all, Rom. x. 12.

To the Son.

He knew all men, &c. John ii. 24.

Thou knowest all things, John xvi. 30. Which knowest the hearts of all men, Acts i. 24.

I am he that searcheth the reins and the heart, Rev. ii. 3.

I am the first, and I am the last, Rev. i. 17.

I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, Rev. xxii. 13.

Lord of lords, and King of kings, Rev. xvii. 14. xix. 16.

The mighty God, Is. ix. 6.

He is Lord of all, Acts x. 36. Over all, God blessed, &c. Rom. ix. 5.^e ^d Novatian is the only ancient writer I have observed to say any thing like it; in the words

Universæ creaturæ et Dominus et Deus constitutus esse reperitur. Nov. cap. 15.

Yet his constant way, at other times, is to resolve the Son's divinity into his Sonship:

Deum credendum esse qui ex Deo sit. cap. 11. Deus quia Dei Filius comprobatur. cap. 16. Hoc ipsum tamen a Patre proprio consecutus, ut omnium et Deus esset, et Dominus esset, et Deus ad formam Dei Patris ex ipso genitus atque prolatus. cap. 17. Deus, sed qua Filius Dei natus ex Deo. cap. 18. Deus ergo processit ex Deo, dum qui processit Sermo, Deus est qui processit ex Deo. cap. 22. Unum potest dici, dum ex ipso est, et dum Filius ejus est, et dum ex ipso nascitur, dum ex ipso processisse reperitur, per quod et Deus est. cap.

23. Quoniam ex Deo est, merito Deus; quia Dei Filius dictus sit. cap.

26. Personæ Christi convenit ut et Deus sit, quia Dei Filius. cap. 26. Est ergo Deus, sed in hoc ipsum genitus ut esset Deus. cap. 31.

These passages considered, it is manifest that Novatian, in the former place cited, either used the word constitutus improperly, for positus, that is, declaratus: (see chap. xii.) or else, which appears to me most probable, that arguing there against the heretics, who would not allow Christ to be more than man, he was content at first to bring them so far, at least, as to admit Christ to be God in a higher sense than Moses, and so by degrees, to bring them up to Catholic principles.

^e N. B. These texts should have been inserted in Query vi.

Whether the Father's omniscience and eternity are not one and the same with the Son's, being alike described, and in the same phrases?

HERE you answer, that underived and derived are not the same. To which I answer, that wisdom of wisdom is one wisdom, omniscience of omniscience one omniscience; just as substance of substance is one substance, Light of Light one Light, and God of God one God; because of the inseparable Unity of the Persons, and their mutually including and containing each other. As to the degree of sameness, I before intimated that it is inexplicable; and is no more to be accounted for than your supposing the same wisdom, &c. to reside in innumerable infinitely distant parts of the same substance. This controversy (whatever you imagine) is not to be decided by metaphysics, but by Scripture and antiquity; where we may find some footing, which we cannot in the other.

Your next answer therefore is more sober, could it but be proved to be just. You deny that the Son's omniscience and eternity are alike described, and in the same phrase. It lies then upon you to shew the difference; as I have shewn the resemblance. It is not necessary that every phrase which is used of the Father be also used of the Son. I singled out some of the strongest, fullest, and most expressive; shewing that they are applied to both: and if they were not the strongest, yet if they are such as Scripture has declared peculiar to the one God, my argument is just, and it would have become you first to answer it, and then to call it a quibble.

You interpreted the texts which concern the Son's omniscience of a relative omniscience: upon which I blamed you for speaking of a relative omniscience, instead of saying plainly, that the Son was not omniscient; that so we might have come directly to the question. Here, by a peculiar kind of turn, proper to yourself, you tell me how ill I treat Scripture. Why so? Are you so perfectly wrapped up in Scripture, that the justest rebuke imaginable cannot reach you, but through the sides of the Scripture? "Our Lord," you say, "told his Apostles, that the Holy Ghost should teach them all things, and guide them into all truth: might he not better have said," (so you go on,) "that he should not teach them all things, and not guide them into all truth?" Now, at length, it is out: and thus I have maltreated Scripture. Was there ever a wilder inference? You should have considered, that there was no question raised about the Apostles and their omniscience: if there had, I doubt not but our Lord would have readily said, what was true, that the Apostles were not omniscient. He would not have disguised his sentiments, nor have deceived his hearers with ambiguous terms, when they wanted to be resolved in an important matter, and honestly desired to have the truth fairly examined and scanned. And therefore your asking, "Had he not better have said," and repeating it again and again, is mere trifling; unless you can shew that our Lord or the sacred writers had been called upon (in such manner and in such circumstances as Dr. Clarke and you have been) to declare what they meant, and to let truth have a fair trial. But by this roundabout way you would insinuate, I presume, (for still you are shifting, and do not care to speak out,) that the texts speaking of the Son's omniscience are of no force, because something of like kind has been said of the Apostles, whom all allow not to be omniscient. To this I answer, 1. That the expressions relating to our Saviour are much stronger than the other: such as knowing all men, knowing the hearts of all men, searching the reins and the heart: a kind of knowledge peculiar to God alone. 2. Considering that our Lord was Son of God, and likewise God, such expressions would very probably be taken in their most obvious and literal sense: and therefore they should not have been applied to him, (without guard and caution,) unless really so intended, as the words appear to declare. As to the Apostles being no more than men, there could be no danger in a few general expressions of their knowing all things, being taught all things, or the like: since nobody could mistake the meaning of the words when so applied.

Your next attempt is to make some advantage of Matt. xxiv. 36. and Mark xiii. 32. relating to Christ's not knowing the day of judgment; of which I have fully and distinctly treated elsewhere^f: where I have also added other strong and clear proofs of Christ's omniscience; which you take no notice of, though you quote the Sermons. You like not my ascribing the ignorance to the human nature: you ask whether "any nature can with any sense be said to know or do any thing?" Yes, why not? You charge me (p. 238.) with inconsistency, for interpreting the text of the human nature, and yet saying that Irenæus, upon that text, is to be understood of the Λόγος. As if both might not be true, that Irenæus understood the text of the Λόγος, while I think it better to understand it of the human nature: I am weariness of such trifling. You proceed to shew that Irenæus, in his Comment on these texts, ascribed ignorance to God the Son. You take not the least notice of the several weighty and substantial reasons given by Bishop Bull, and referred to by me^b, against your opinion from other places of Irenæus's works. It is not your way to be at all solicitous about making any writer consistent with himself. If you can but meet with a passage seemingly favouring your opinion, it must be presently forced into your sense, however contradictory to the author's known principles elsewhere. I must desire the reader to consider well what I have said upon this passage in my Defence; and not to take it from your representation, which is extremely partial. And he may also compare M. Massuet's account of the same passage in his Previous Dissertationsⁱ to his edition of Irenæus. I shall here content myself with transcribing so much of Irenæus as may be sufficient to clear his meaning, and to take off that confusion which you have been industriously throwing upon it, either in translating or commenting. The literal rendering is thus, much the same as I before gave in my Defence :

^f Sermon VII. p. 162, &c. of this volume.

“ If one inquires into the reason why the Father, though communicating in all things to the Son, is yet set forth by our Lord as alone knowing that day and hour; he cannot, at present, find any fitter, or more decent, or indeed any other safe answer than this, (seeing our Lord is the only teacher of truth,) that we are to learn of him that the Father is above all; for the Father, saith he, is greater than I. And therefore the Father is declared by our Lord to have the preference in knowledge, to the end that we also, while we live in this world, may refer the perfection of knowledge, and such intricate questions to God^k.”

Now, that Irenæus's design was not to represent the Son as ignorant, but quite the contrary, may appear from this very passage duly considered. For the question, with him, was not why the Father is more knowing, but why, since both are equally

^f Bull. D. F. N. p. 82. Animadv. in G. Cler. p. 1056.

^b Defence, vol. i. p. 334.

ⁱ Massuet. Præv. Diss. in Iren. p. 133.

^k Si quis exquirat causam propter quam in omnibus Pater communicans Filio, solus scire et horam et diem a Domino manifestatus est, neque aptabilem magis, neque decentior, nec sine periculo alteram quam hanc inveniat in præsentibus; (quoniam enim solus verax Magister est Dominus) ut discamus per ipsum, super omnia esse Patrem. Etenim Pater ait, major me est. Et secundum agnitionem itaque præpositus esse Pater annuntiatum est a Domino nostro, ad hoc, ut et nos, in quantum in figura hujus mundi sumus, perfectam scientiam et tales questionum concedamus Deo. Iren. lib. ii. c. 28. p. 158, 159.

knowing, our Saviour made such a declaration as gave the preference to the Father as alone knowing. He puts the question, why the Father though communicating in all things (absolutely, not in all other things) is yet set forth, or alone declared, to know. So that the question is not about his knowledge, but about our Lord's declaration, why, or on what account, he made it, seemingly contrary to truth; since all things are common to Father and Son. What then could be meant by such a declaration? It must be true some way or other, our Lord being a teacher of truth; what then is the case? Irenæus tells us, that it is true in respect of the Father's having the preeminence in every thing, and so alone knowing every thing in the first place, or primarily: and therefore it was upon this account that our Lord gave him the preference, and referred that knowledge to him solely, as the sole fountain of it; which it well became him to do, especially during the state of his humiliation, while in figura mundi, conversing below: though at the same time the Son also has the same knowledge, but derived, all things being communicated to the Son, as Irenæus had observed. Basil's and Nazianzen's accounts of this matter will clear it up further, and will fix Irenæus's real meaning beyond all reasonable exception.

Basil, in answer to the doubt about our Lord's not knowing that day, says, he will give the solution which from a child had been taught him by the Fathers before him: and which he represents in these words: "As to what is said, no one knows that day, we understand it as ascribing to the Father the primary knowledge both of things present and things to come; and as signifying to us that he is in all things the primary cause!" Nazianzen chooses rather to refer Christ's not knowing that day to his humanity; yet he mentions also this other construction of Christ's not knowing it originally, or in that high manner, as the Father may be said to know it. His words are to this effect. If the first construction be not sufficient, we may give this for a second: "As every thing else, so also the knowledge of the greatest things is to be referred up to the cause itself, for the honour of the Father."m."

Every one may see that Irenæus's construction falls in with this of Nazianzen and Basil; who perhaps might both borrow it from him: nor is it possible from Irenæus's words to prove that he meant any thing more. Nay, the words themselves most easily and naturally resolve into this sense, as I had abundantly before proved from the context, and from Irenæus's main scope and design in the whole.

¹ Τὸ, οὐδεὶς οἶδε, τὴν πρώτην εἶδησιν τῶν δὲ ὄντων καὶ τῶν ἐσομένων ἐπὶ τὸν πατέρα ἀνάγοντος. Καὶ διὰ πάντων τὴν πρώτην αἰτίαν τοῖς ἀνθρώποις ὑποδεικνύσθαι εἰρησθαὶ νομίζομεν. Basil. Ep.

391. p. 1168.

^m Ὡσπερ τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστον, οὕτω δὲ καὶ ἡ γνώσις τῶν μεγίστων ἐπὶ τὴν αἰτίαν ἀναφερέσθω τιμῇ τοῦ γεννήτορος. Greg. Naz. Orat. 36. p. 588.

You call it pleasant for me to add, consequently in all knowledge, where Irenæus says, that the "Father communicates in all things to the Son." But is it not more pleasant of you to understand by all things, all other things, which Irenæus does not say, nor does his argument require it, but the contrary?

I took notice of Dr. Clarke's slipping over some words through inadvertency: which words he has since added in his second edition. And here, to shew your inclination to find any little fault, you blame me for taking no notice of the amendment. Indeed the thing was very slight, scarce worth remembering. Yet in two later editions of my book, which you might have seen, I was so just to the Doctor as to leave my former words out. And now, I think, you ought to have inquired before you took this needless handle for complaint. As to manifestatus, which you construe expressly declared, I, set forth, represented, or said, (which you weakly call "deceiving the reader,") it is not very material which be taken, provided only the question were why, or in what sense, our Saviour declared it; not, why the Father only knew the day. Which question Irenæus resolves in saying, Præpositus esse Pater annuntiatu est. It was in this sense he declared him to be alone knowing, as declaring him præpositum, set before, preferred to the Son in knowledge, on account of his being alone first in every thing. So that the sum of all is, that Irenæus does not suppose the Father more knowing, but knowing every thing in the highest manner; as having it primarily, and from none; which was also the sense of Basil and Nazianzen. But enough of this. You go on to Origen; whom I had cited, after Irenæus, Ignatius, and Clemens of Alexandria, to confute your round assertion, that all the Ante-Nicene writers believed the Λόγος to have been ignorant, &c. when you could not prove it of so much as one. Irenæus may now stand; as also Ignatius and Clemens. As to Origen, you have nothing to object against what I cited him for, namely, that the Son knows as much as the Father, or all that the Father knows; which is omniscience in the highest and fullest sense, not your relative omniscience, no where found among the ancients. But you oppose another passage of the same comment, saying, that the Father is greater than the truth, that is, than the Son: which nobody doubts: greater as Father, which is all that Origen means. And what is that to the purpose? Your other quotation out of Jerome (then a vehement Anti-Origenist, and straining every thing to the worst sense) is of very slight moment. Let the reader consult Bishop Bullⁿ in defence of Origen against Jerome's invectives; for I have no inclination to repeat: or let him turn to Origen's treatise against Celsus, where Origen directly contradicts that very doctrine which you, upon Jerome's authority, endeavour to ascribe to him; he asserts, that the Son knows the Father κατ' ἀφίαν, suitably to his dignity°.

From the slender opposition which, after long deliberation, you have been able to make against the Son's omniscience, it ought now to pass as a thing concluded and determined, being fully supported by Scripture and by all antiquity. For besides the particular testimonies before mentioned, I gave you also a general argument, to prove that the Son's omniscience must have been a ruled case, a settled point with the Ante-Nicene Church: to which argument you make not a word of reply. Only you single out an expression of mine, relating to Sabellianism, which you think is not just, and which you call "abusing the reader;" though you have not yet been able to produce any one instance where I have done it. I have discovered many in you, and shall many more as I pass on. What you blame me for, is, for supposing that the Greek word hypostasis signified person, during the time of the Sabellian controversy. I do assert that it did, and could very easily prove it: but Bishop Bull has already done it to my hands^p. And it is something hard, that as often as you forget yourself, or happen to be ignorant of what every scholar should know, I must be charged with abusing my reader. As to the Sabellian notion of μία ὑπόστασις τριπρόσωπος, I have before shewn how it is to be understood: and that Eusebius himself so understood it is plain to every man that can read him. But I suppose, the secret reason of all this was for the sake of a translation of yours, "one single individual substance under three personal distinctions:" which though literal, is a very false translation, as substance and personal distinctions are now understood: and therefore this was meanly applying to the populace. The true sense of the words, as we should now express it, is, one person under three nominal distinctions: which is mani-ⁿ Bull. Def. F. Nic. p. 121.

^p Bull. D. F. sect. ii. c. 9. p. 103,

° Origen. contr. Cels. p. 287.

&c.

festly what Eusebius meant by it; as may appear from the account I have given of him above (p. 522,) Your referring me to Dr. Cudworth is pretty extraordinary; when it is well known that that great man was mistaken, and that his account of that matter (espoused also by Curcellæus) has been at large confuted by Bishop Stillingfleet⁹; not to mention what has been done also by Dr. Wall^r, and others, since that time.

The truth is, had Dr. Cudworth but distinguished between substance of substance, (which supposes no division, but one substance;) and saying substances, or essences, which implies division, his account had been, in the main, very just: for the Fathers knew nothing of a Trinity of modes, such as seems to have been taught by some of the later Schoolmen. But I pass on.

The eternity of God the Son comes next under consideration. You tell me, it “is not alike described” with the Father’s, because the Father’s is unoriginate and underived: but where do you find unoriginate or underived at all mentioned in the texts wherein the Father’s eternity is described? You may collect it perhaps by inference: but still the Scripture phrases for the eternity, whether of Father or Son, are the same: neither does the distinction of derived and underived signify any thing as to the sense of eternity, which imports neither more nor less than beginningless and endless duration. You next endeavour to find some difference in the manner wherein the texts are applied to each Person. As to the phrase first and last, it has been vindicated already. As to Rev. i. 8, which you understand of the Father, it is to be interpreted (with all antiquity) of God the Son^a. I know how much it concerns you to contend for the application of this text to God the Father; and therefore it is that you plead so strenuously for it towards the latter end of Query xvii. It will be of some service to settle that text here; and therefore I shall stop a while to consider the strength of your reinforcement. In my Sermons,

1. I pleaded from the context.
2. From antiquity.
3. I shewed the weakness of the Doctor’s reasons for applying the text to the Father.

As to the context, you make no reply at all; though it is certainly of very great moment, for the ascertaining the con-

⁹ Stillingfleet on the Trinity, p. 76. Doctrine continued, p. 239. to 252. to p. 100.

^r Wall’s Hist. of Infant Baptism, p. 337. to p. 354. True Scripture ^a See my Sermons, p. 141, &c. of this volume. Defence, vol. i. p. 537, &c.

struction. As to antiquity, never were men more unanimous than the ancients were in this matter; there being no one exception, on record, against it. And though you may make slight of Post-Nicene writers, (Athanasius, Ruffinus, Gregory Nazianzen, Phœbadius, Ambrose, Epiphanius, Jerome, Austin, Andreas Cæsariensis,) yet their concurring voices in the case are really very considerable; and amount to a probable proof, at least, of the universal sense of the Ante-Nicene Church; especially where nothing can be brought to confront it. I observe, it is pretty frequent with you, upon the citing of Eusebius singly, immediately to cry out the ancient Church, even in points wherein Eusebius stands alone, or runs counter to the ancients. I have certainly a much better right to claim the verdict of the ancient Church, upon the strength of so many evidences, (and few of them either much later or less considerable than Eusebius,) in a matter which the ancients have no where contradicted. But I appealed also to two Ante-Nicene writers, (Hippolytus and Tertullian, to say nothing now of Origen,) and I observed further, that their testimonies in the case were not to be looked upon merely as the private judgment of two writers, but as shewing that the Praxeans and Noëtians had all along taken it for granted, that the Church applied Rev. i. 8. to God the Son; and that Hippolytus and Tertullian, however pressed in dispute, presumed not to question it. A proof of this kind amounts to more than many testimonies of single Fathers, in relation to their own interpretation of a text. As to Hippolytus, you call him (p. 509.) as usual, a “spurious or interpolated” author; your pretences for which have been answered. But we have Epiphanius^t here stepping in to confirm the same thing, viz. that Noëtus urged that text, as applied to God the Son, against the Catholics: and he answers as Hippolytus had done, by admitting the text to be understood of Christ; borrowing his answer (as will be plain by comparing) from this very piece of Hippolytus, which you call spurious or interpolated. It is therefore manifest, that the part we are now concerned in is no interpolation.

As to Tertullian, you say, “He does not suppose this text to “be spoken of the Son,” (p. 508.) What, does he not? Surely you never looked carefully into Tertullian. He observes of the Praxeans^u, (just as Hippolytus does of Noëtus,) that they had ^t Epiphanius. vol. i. p. 488.

^u Interim, hic mihi promotum sit responsum adversus id quod et de Apocalypsi Joannis proferunt: Ego Do- cited and urged this text against the Catholics; applying it to God the Son: and Tertullian, in his answer, admits that application. Wherefore it is a clear case, that the Ante-Nicene Church universally understood this text of the Son, and not of the Father; which I am now proving. What you throw in to lessen the sense of παντοκράτωρ, when applied to the Son, I pass over here, as not affecting our present question. Origen I insist not upon, because of the doubtful credit of his translator. Yet, considering that the text was certainly so applied before Origen's time, and constantly after, it is more than probable that that part at least is Origen's own. However, I want not his testimony, having abundant proof of what I assert, without him.

Since therefore the context, and all antiquity, pleads on my side for understanding that text of God the Son, I must have strong reasons for the other application, before I admit it. Dr. Clarke's principal reason, drawn from verse the fourth of that chapter, I answered at large in my Sermons^x. It is no more than this; that the title, "which is, and which was, and which is to come," is given to the Father, ver. 4, therefore the same title, ver. 8, must belong to him also: as if the same title were not often in Scripture, and in the Apocalypse too, given to both. I instanced in the title of Alpha and Omega, &c. being applied by St. John, sometimes to the Father, and at other times to the Son. All you have to say by way of reply, is, that the title of Alpha and Omega is indisputably given to the Son in other places; whereas this other is never given to the Son any where else but here; where it is disputable whether it be given him or no. To which I answer, that there is very little force in this argument, provided we have other good reasons for understanding the text of God the Son in this one place; as we certainly have both from the context and from antiquity: and there is still the less force, if Scripture, and even St. John himself, has elsewhere applied, if not this very title, yet equivalent titles to God the Son; which he undoubtedly has. For brevity minus qui est, et qui fuit, et venit omnipotens; et sicubi alibi Dei omnipotentis appellationem non putant Filio convenire. Quasi qui venturus est, non sit omnipotens, cum et Filius omnipotentis tam omnipotens sit quam Deus Dei Filius. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 17.

N. B. The Praxeans could not imagine that any such high title could belong to the Son, unless the Son was the very Father himself: which therefore they concluded him to be from this and the like texts.

^x Sermons, p. 141 of this volume.

sake, I refer only to St. John's application of Isa. ix. 6, 9. to God the Son, "Holy, holy, holy Lord God of hosts:" which St. John expresses (Rev. iv. 8.) by Κύριος ὁ Θεὸς ὁ παντοκράτωρ, much the same with what we have Rev. i. 8.

There is therefore no force in your reasoning against the application of Rev. i. 8. to the Son.

The Doctor's other reason drawn from the ancients, as generally applying the title ὁ παντοκράτωρ to the Father, is ridiculous; when we have plain positive proof that they understand this very text of God the Son. Whatever use may be made of the general observation, (as there cannot much^z;) it does not affect the question about the application of this text to the Son.

Having sufficiently vindicated our application of Rev. i. 8, I may proceed, and make my proper use of it, as occasion may require. I may now venture, by your allowance, to call God the Son supreme over all; which is your own rendering of ὁ παντοκράτωρ. And let us not presume to deal partially and unequally between the Father and the Son, in this important question. We may now return to the point of the Son's eternity.

I observed, in my Defence^a, that by eluding the proof of the Son's eternity, you had scarce left yourself any for the eternity of God the Father: or if you had, I desired you to shew in what manner you could (consistent with your principles) prove the eternity of the Father. You make a doubt whether I intended it for sober reasoning or banter. You do well to put the matter off with as good a grace as you can: but I was very serious in it; that you had come very near defeating every proof that could be thought on in the case; if you had not entirely done so. And indeed, I am still of opinion, that, through your imprudent zeal against the divinity of God the Son, you have really betrayed the clearest and best cause in the world to the first bold Marcionite, or Manichee, that shall deny the eternal Godhead both of Father and Son, and assert some unknown God above them both. You will remember, the question was, whether that particular Person, called the Father, be the eternal God, or how you could prove it upon your principles. His being called God ever so often would amount to nothing; that being no more than a word of office. His being Creator was nothing, that you could elude. His being Jehovah was of no weight, meaning no more than a person true and faithful to his promises. As to his eternity, none of the texts were strong enough for it, but might bear a limited sense. I may now add, that the title of παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, or God over all, or the strongest words of like kind in the Old Testament, signify nothing; being capable of a subordinate sense. Well then; what have you at length reserved, to prove so momentous an article? Only this: that he is the Father, or first Cause, of whom are all things. But first Cause is no where said, that is your own. All that is said is, "To us there is one God the Father, of whom are all things," 1 Cor. viii. 6. And you know how to elude the force of the word all things, when you are disputing against God the Son: so that creating all things may mean no more than creating some things; as Christ's knowing all things, according to you, means some things only. The utmost therefore of what you have proved is no more than that he is Creator; and being Creator, you had told me long ago, did not imply eternity, nor an infinite subject^b. You have not then been able to prove, that the particular Person, called the Father, is the first Cause of all things; or that there is not another God above him; who is really, and truly, and in the metaphysical sense, the eternal God. You may proceed as you think proper, to make up the apparent deficiency of your pretended demonstration. By loosening the proof of Christ's divinity, you have loosened every proof of the divinity of God the Father also; which perhaps you was not aware of. For my part, I shall always think, that his being so often called God, and true God, and his being Creator, and Almighty, and Jehovah, and he that is, and was, and is to come, are clear incontestable proofs that he is the one necessarily existing God, whose existence my reason assures me of: and when I am got thus far, I will prove, by the same topics, that God the Son is so likewise: and thus the same artillery shall serve both against Manichees and Arians; while you, by pleading the cause of one, have insensibly given up a greater cause to the other.

^y See my Sermons, p. 43 of this volume.

^z Ibid. p. 142.

^a Defence, vol. i. p. 341, &c.

I must however do you the justice to observe, that since your first writing, you seem to be drawing off, with the Doctor, from some of your former principles. You do not now make the word God to be always a word of office: nay, you assert it to be very "improper to say, that the supreme God has an office," (p. 220,) which makes a great alteration in your scheme, and is jumping from one extreme to another; overlooking, as usual, the truth, which lies in the midway. I do not know, whether you can yet prove that particular Person, called God the Father, to be the one eternal God. You suppose the word God, when applied to him, to denote his Person; and you suppose that Person to be the one eternal God. But supposing is one thing, and proving another: and I do not see how you have proved it, or ever can prove it; unless you allow the title of God to carry the notion of necessary existence in it, allowing the same also of Jehovah. Then indeed you may prove your point as to the divinity of God the Father: and as soon as you have done it, by the same arguments we will also prove the divinity of God the Son. So choose you whether to take in both, or give up both: for I see no remedy but that the divinity of Father and Son must stand or fall together.

^b See my Defence, vol. i. p. 342.

To proceed: you pretend now, that “you was not arguing against the eternity of the Son, but shewing the weakness of “my arguments to prove his independent eternity.” You shall have the liberty of recanting and growing wiser, whenever you please. But the truth of the fact is, that you were then arguing against the eternity of the Son, in these words quoted in my Defence, vol. i. p. 343. “This office and character (of a Redeemer) relative to us, presupposes not, nor is at all more “perfect for, the eternal past duration of his being.” It was the eternity, you see, not independent eternity, against which you were disputing. I asked, how you came to take for granted what you knew nothing of; viz. that any power less than infinite might be equal to the work of redemption. And what do you say to this? My argument is, if you cannot shew that it did not require infinite power, you cannot shew that it did not require an eternal agent. You say, that “an office commencing in time, “does not require an eternal duration of him that executes.” Right: every office does not: but we are speaking of an office which may (for aught you know) require infinite, and therefore eternal powers, because nothing infinite can be in time. You say, “Infinity of powers is not a consequence of eternal duration.” Suppose it be not, (which you know nothing of again,) yet my argument is vice versa, that eternal duration is a consequence of infinity of powers; which you did not attend to. At length you are forced to give up the point; not being hardy enough to pronounce that the work of redemption did not require infinite powers.

But you attempt to prove it another way. A “mediator,” you say, "cannot be himself the one supreme God." You should have said, (for it is all that you can prove,) that a mediator cannot be the same person whom he mediates to. And this is what Eusebius shews in the passage produced by you; which was very needlessly brought to prove what every man's common sense teaches. The whole force of Eusebius's reasoning lies only in this, that the two persons could not be one person: or if he meant any thing more, (which I am not sensible he did,) his arguing is low and trifling. I had pleaded, that by your reasoning, you had entirely frustrated the argument drawn from the acts of creation, to prove the divinity of God the Father: for the office of creating commenced in time. You are pleased to allow my consequence, (however scandalous it may appear upon you,) and to tell me, that the "perfections of God the Father appear not barely and immediately from the act of creating, but from the consideration of the nature of a first Cause." I am glad to find you begin to be reconciled to that metaphysical word, nature, which you will hardly allow us to use. But I must tell you further, that by weakening and destroying so many clear and undeniable proofs of the Father's divinity, you have not left yourself enough to prove him to be the first Cause. This perhaps you was not aware of, being entirely bent upon destroying the Son's divinity; and taking it for granted, that the Father's would be admitted without proof. It is a dark business: but disputants will sometimes overshoot. Dr. Clarke, I believe, began to be sensible of his error in this respect, as having undermined every Scripture proof of the necessary existence of God the Father. By an after-thought, in the second edition of "Scripture Doctrine^c," he was pleased to allow, that the Father's self-existence and independent eternity were taught in Rev. i. 8.

I am very glad he pitched upon that text, because we can easily vindicate it to God the Son: and so we shall have an express proof of the necessary existence of the Son; and leave you, with shame, to make out the Father's, by some other as express texts, or by consequence only. I have before hinted, that 1 Cor. viii. 6. will do you no service directly, or by itself; because all things may mean some things, and God to us, may not mean absolutely the God of the universe. But if the Son's necessary existence be once admitted, according to Rev. i. 8, the consequence will be clear and certain for the necessary existence of the Father also. Thus, as you had once lost the proof of the Father's divinity, by denying the Son's; so, by asserting the latter, you may again recover the former, and then all will be right.

^c Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 264. ed. 2nd.

QUERY VIII.

Whether eternity does not imply necessary existence of the Son ; which is inconsistent with the Doctor's scheme ? and whether the Doctor hath not made an elusive equivocating answer to the objection ; since the Son may be a necessary emanation from the Father, by the will and power of the Father, without any contradiction ? Will is one thing, and arbitrary will another.

WE have many important matters to debate under this present Query, which will require the reader's most careful attention.

You begin with telling me, that eternal generation does not imply necessary existence, nay, that it is contradictory to it. Let us hear your reason. "Generation is an act, and all actions "spring from the will only ; and an act of the will (that is, free "choice) cannot be necessary," p. 251. Your argument is undoubtedly just, according to your own novel sense of the word act. But it is ridiculous to imagine, that giving new names to old truths can ever alter their nature. Either argue against generation being an act in the old sense of act, or confess your trifling, in bringing the whole to a dispute about words and names only. In the old sense of act, generation is an act ; in your novel sense of act it is not : and where are you now, but where you at first set out ?

You tell me, after the Modest Pleader, (to whom I briefly replied in a Preface,) "that I have not been able to produce one "single passage out of any one Ante-Nicene writer" (you should have added Post-Nicene too, it being equally true of all the Fathers) "wherein the Son is affirmed to have emanated, or been "emitted, from the Father, by necessity of nature."

Will you please to shew me, where either Scripture or Fathers (Post-Nicene or Ante-Nicene) ever said, that God the Father existed by necessity of nature. They have never said it ; though they have, in other terms, asserted the same thing, which we now mean by necessity of nature : and this may also be the case as to the necessary generation of the Son : and it certainly is so. To clear this momentous point I shall here shew,

1. Why neither Father nor Son were ever said, by the ancients, to exist by necessity of nature, but the contrary.

2. I shall shew that the ancients, notwithstanding, believed the very same thing which we now differently express; namely, the necessary existence of God the Son, as well as of God the Father.

3. I shall inquire in what sense, or by whom, necessary generation or emanation was held, and in what words they expressed it: where I shall also account for the Son's being said to be generated by the will of the Father.

1. I am to begin with observing, why neither Father nor Son were ever said, by the ancients, to exist by necessity of nature, but the contrary. None of the ancients durst have said, that God exists by necessity, because it would have been the same as to say, that he was compelled by a superior force, and against his will, (such was their sense of the word necessity,) to exist. The Greek ἀνάγκη had been much used among philosophers in this hard sense. Some had made νοῦς and ἀνάγκη^d, mind and necessity, the two causes, or sources of all things. Some made necessity alone the first and highest cause^e. Plato meant the same as ἕλη, or first matter, by necessity^f, following therein Timæus Locrus. Some made necessity the mother of the fates, and the first among the deities^g. Many made their gods all subject to necessity; as is particularly true of the Stoics. I forbear to cite passages which might be given in great numbers. Such being the use of the word necessity, no wonder, if the Fathers forbore saying, that God existed by necessity, or if they even denied it.

Plotinus, a famous Platonist, of the third century, denies that God exists ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης^h, by necessity, being no other than what he would choose to be.

Lactantius hints at the same thoughtⁱ. And upon the same principles, the Fathers were always very careful to remove every thing of necessity^k from God; and would never say that he

^d Vid. Timæum Locrum de Anim. Mund. p. 543. Amst.

^e Vid. Phurnutum de Natura Deorum, p. 19. alias 155.

^f Vid. Platonis Timæum. Chalcid. in Timæum, p. 377. ed. Fabric.

^g Vid. Proclum. Theolog. Platon. p. 405, 406. Pausan. lib. ii. p. 93. Theodorit. de Provid. Dei Serm. vi. p. 562, 563.

^h Μῆτε ἂν ἐαυτῷ τι μέμψασθαι ὡς ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης τοῦτο ὄν, ὃ ἐστὶ τοῦτο, τὸ αὐτὸς εἶναι ὅπερ αὐτὸς αἰεὶ ἠθέλησε καὶ θέλει. Plotin. Enn. vi. p. 748.

ⁱ Ex seipso est, ut in primo diximus libro, et ideo talis est qualem se esse voluit. Lact. Inst. lib. ii. c. 8. p. 161.

^k Τίς ὁ τῆν ἀνάγκην ἐπιβαλὼν αὐτῷ; εἰ δὲ ἀποπὼν ἐστὶ λέγειν ἐπὶ Θεοῦ ἀνάγκην, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο φύσει ἀγαθὸς ἐστίν. Athanasius, 611.

Bonus Pater, non aut ex voluntate est, aut necessitate, sed super utrumque, hoc est, natura. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. c. 9. p. 540.

Non ex voluntate, nec ex necessitate, quia Deo nulla manet necessitas. Supra voluntatem et necessitatem est existed, or was God, by necessity. Damascen well expresses the thoughts of them all in these words :

“ God being by nature good, and by nature endued with “ creative powers, and by nature God, is not any of these by “ necessity: for, who has laid any necessity upon him?” I render δημιουργός, endued with creative powers, that being the sense of it ; though otherwise, literally, it is Creator.

As low then as Damascen, who lived in the eighth century, we have no instance, that I know of, of the use of necessary existence, or of necessity of nature in the modern sense. They that would seek for it, must look among the later Schoolmen, and not among the Fathers of the Church. When it first came in is no great matter, nor worth my search : so I leave it to those who have leisure. But I must complain of it as a great instance of unfairness, after I had given you the hint of this in the Preface to my Sermons¹, (which you have read,) for you to bring up this pretence again, that the Ante-Nicene writers did not allow the Son to exist, or to be generated by necessity of nature. Which pretence amounts to no more than a poor quibble upon an expression : and you might have used the very same argument against the necessary existence even of God the Father. The ancient writers, I conceive, for eight centuries (I know not how much lower) would have denied, or did deny, that God was God by necessity: well therefore might they deny, or never assert, that the Son was generated by necessity. Yet they asserted the very same things which we do, in respect of Father or Son, under other terms ; as I come next to shew.

2. The ancients believed and taught the necessary existence of God the Son ; expressing it in such manner and in such phrases as were suitable to their own times. The most usual way of expressing what we call necessary existence, was by saying, that any thing was this or that, φύσει or κατὰ φύσιν, by nature : another pretty common way was by ὁ ὦν, τὸ ὄν, ὄντως ὦν, and the id quod est Deitas. Vigil. Taps. de Trin. lib. x. p. 273. Conf. Toletan. Concil. xi.

Φύσει γὰρ ὦν ἀγαθὸς ὁ Θεός, καὶ φύσει δημιουργός, καὶ φύσει Θεός, οὐκ ἀνάγκη ταῦτά ἐστι· τίς γὰρ ὁ τὴν ἀνάγκην ἐπάγων. Damasc. de Fid. Orth. lib. iii. p. 228.

Εἰ γὰρ κατ' αὐτὴν τὸ φυσικὸν πάντως καὶ ἠμυκασμένον· φύσει δὲ ὁ Θεός, Θεός, φύσει ἀγαθός, φύσει δημιουργός· ἀνάγκη ἔσται ὁ Θεός, Θεός, καὶ ἀγαθός, καὶ δημιουργός· ὅπερ καὶ ἐνοεῖν, μῆτι γε λέγειν ἐσχάτης ἐστὶ βλασφημίας· τίς γὰρ ὁ τὴν ἀνάγκην ἐπάγων ; Maxim. Disp. cum Pyrrh. tom. ii. p. 163. Combesis.

Ὁ τῶν ὄλων Θεός οὐ κατὰ φύσιν ἅγιος, δίκαιος, ἀγαθός, ζωή, φῶς, σοφία, καὶ δύναμις ; ἀρ' οὐν καὶ αὐτὸς ἀβουλήτως καὶ ὡς ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἐστίν, ἅ ἐστιν. Cyril. Alex. ad Anathem. 3. contr. Theodor. p. 213.

¹ At the beginning of this volume.

like, existing emphatically. Several other ways of expressing the same thing will occur as I go along, in tracing the sense of the Fathers upon this head, the necessary existence of God the Son.

A. D. 116. IGNATIUS.

I begin with Ignatius, one of St. John's disciples, whose words are these: "There is one physician, both fleshly and spiritual, made and unmade, though in flesh God, in death true life, both of Mary and of God; first passible, then impassible, Jesus Christ our Lord^m." The word which I here lay the stress on, in proof of the Son's necessary existence, is ἀγέννητος, not made: a word but seldom, if ever, used, in this manner, to signify any thing less. Thus Athanasiusⁿ, and Pope Gelasius^o, long ago, understood this place of Ignatius: you pretend (p. 295.) that the reading is ἀγέννητος, unbegotten, and that it is "plainly set in opposition only to human generation." But this which is so plain to you, is by no means plain to any man else: the contrary is rather so from many considerations. You must mean, I suppose, that he was unbegotten, as having no human father, born of a virgin. Against which construction there lie these several reasons. 1. That no other Catholic writer ever styled Christ ἀγέννητος on this account. 2. That Ignatius is plainly speaking of two several natures in the same person of Christ, as appears by the antitheses all along. Call it the flesh only, if you please, (though he meant by flesh human nature entire,) yet you see the opposition carried on quite through, flesh and spirit, flesh and God, death and true life, one of Mary, the other of God, one passible, the other impassible; so that the plain sense is, that one was made, the other unmade: unless you will say, that as the flesh was begotten, the Λόγος, the God was unbegotten: which can bear but two senses, one of which will not suit with your principles, nor the other with Catholic principles. You will not say, that the Λόγος was unbegotten of the Father, nor would Ignatius, that Christ, as God, was not begotten of Mary. It being a Catholic maxim, that Mary was θεοτόκος: that is, the doctrine was always held, though differently ex-

^m Εἰς ἰατρός ἐστιν, σάρκικός τε καὶ πνευματικός, γενητός καὶ ἀγέννητος, ἐν σαρκὶ γενόμενος Θεός, ἐν θανάτῳ ζωὴ ἀληθινή, καὶ ἐκ Μαρίας καὶ ἐκ Θεοῦ, πρῶτον παθητός καὶ τότε ἀπαθής, Ἰησοῦς

Χριστός ὁ Κύριος ἡμῶν. Ign. Eph. ad Ephes. c. vii. p. 14. Ox.

ⁿ Athanas. de Synod. Arim. p. 761.

^o Gelasius de duabus Naturis, p. 690. Bas. ed.

pressed; and it is the express doctrine of Ignatius^p himself. Since then Ignatius was undoubtedly speaking of what Christ was in two distinct natures, or capacities, to one of which γενητός is applied, and ἀγέννητος to the other; you may readily perceive, that your construction of him is entirely wide and foreign. 3. I shall add, thirdly, that I have some reason to doubt whether there was any such word as ἀγέννητος so early as the time of Ignatius. This will lead me into a long but useful inquiry; useful upon many other accounts besides the present. You are of opinion, that the ancient Christian writers, wherever they style God ἀγέννητος, meant the same as ἀγέννητος, unbegotten, p. 294. My opinion is, that it was late before they styled him ἀγέννητος at all^q; and that when they styled him ἀγέννητος, they never meant precisely unbegotten, but either unmade, or undervived absolutely. We must trace this point up to the old philosophers. Thales is the first of them: and he uses the word ἀγέννητος^r, to signify either unmade or eternal.

Parmenides^s, about a hundred years after, uses the word ἀγέννητον, as is plain from the metre; and not in the sense of unbegotten, because he supposes the same thing to be μονογενές, begotten.

Clemens understands the passage of God: but Eusebius and Theodorit more rightly of the world: though perhaps both may be consistent, as some have imagined God and the world to be the same, and proceeding from a chaos. But I incline to understand it rather of the world distinct from God, as the only begotten of God; μονογενής being a title given to the world by Timæus Locrus^t, and Plato^u, who are imitated by Philo^x.

Here then ἀγέννητος can only signify unmade, eternal, or necessarily existing.

^p Χριστοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, τοῦ γενομένου ἐν ὑστέρω ἐκ σπέρματος Δαβὶδ καὶ Ἀβραάμ. Ignat. ad Rom. c. vii. p. 40.

^q Patri novum innascibilitatis nomen ecclesia imposuit. Cum enim Sabelliana hæresis genitum ex virgine Patrem voluisset asserere, ingenitum contra. Hanc confitendo ecclesia tradidit Patrem, et utique in divinis Scripturis ingenitum nunquam legimus Patrem. Vigil. Taps. Disq. Not. 21.

^r Πρεσβύτατον τῶν ὄντων Θεός· ἀγέννητον γάρ. Diog. Laert. lib. i. p. 21.

Τί τὸ θείον; τὸ μίτη ἀρχὴν ἔχον, μίτη τελευτήν. Thales apud Diog. Laert. p. 22.

^s Πολλὰ μάλ' ὡς ἀγέννητον εἶναι καὶ ἀνώλεθρόν ἐστιν,

Ὀῦλον, μονογενές τε, καὶ ἀτρεμές, ἢ δ' ἀγέννητον. Apud Clem. Alex. p. 716. Euseb. Præp. Ev. p. 43. Theod. tom. iv. p. 504, 528.

^t Timæus Locrus, p. 4. Gale. alias p. 545. Amsl.

^u Plato Tim. c. 16. p. 239. Fabric. Vid. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 308.

^x Philo, p. 244, 298, 876.

Ocellus Lucanus^γ uses it to express beginningless and endless existence: or what we should call necessary existence; always and unvariably the same.

Timæus Locrus applies it to ideas and to duration: where he seems to mean no more than eternity and immutability^z. I read the word with single ν in both places; there being no reason for making it double. There is a passage of Timæus^α, cited by Clemens, where the copies have ἀγέννητος. Sylburgius had observed it should be ἀγένητος rather. But I believe the true reading is ἀγένητος, to answer the dialect. I suppose Timæus must have meant νοῦς, by his μία ἀρχή, one of his two principles: ἀνάγκα was the other. And I must note, that ἀγένητος here seems to be used in the sense of undérived absolutely.

We may now descend to Plato, about 360 years before Christ. It is frequent with him to use the word ἀγένητος to express eternal, immutabile existence, that is, necessary existence. And though he derived his νοῦς and ψυχή, mind and soul, from the τὸ ἀγαθόν, yet he supposed them ἀγένητα, necessarily existing; as Athanasius^β hath observed: and the like is observed of him by Eusebius^γ. Dr. Clarke tells us, in his Demonstration of the Being, &c. that, according to many of Plato's followers, the world was supposed to be "an eternal voluntary emanation from "the all-wise and supreme Cause^δ." But I know not whether the Doctor will be able to prove this of them, in his present sense of voluntary. Plotinus, who is one of his authorities, makes God's will to be the same with God's essence: and he derives the very being of God from his will, that is, from himself^ε. You seem therefore to be under a great mistake when you tell me, (p. 254,) that the Platonists expressly affirmed the world to be ^γ Τὸ πᾶν ἀνώλεθρον καὶ ἀγένητον ἀεί τε γὰρ ἦν καὶ ἔσται. Ocell. Lucan. p. 8. Gale. al. 506.

^α Ἀγένητος καὶ ἀφθαρτος ὁ κόσμος ἀναρχος καὶ ἀτελεύτητος. Id. p. 16, 28.

^z De idea, τὸ μὲν ἀγένητόν τε καὶ ἀκίνατον, καὶ μένον τε. Tim. Locr. p. 2. ἀγενάτω χρόνω δι αἰῶνα ποταγορούμεος, p. 10.

^α Μία ἀρχή πάντων ἐστὶν ἀγένητος (leg. ἀγένητος) εἰ γὰρ ἐγένετο, οὐκ ἂν ἦν ἔτι ἀρχή, ἀλλ' ἐκείνα ἐξ ἧς ἡ ἀρχή ἐγένετο. Clem. Alex. p. 718. Plato in his Phædrus applies this reasoning to the soul. Phædr. p. 344. Vid. Cicero. Tusc. i. p. 45.

^β Ὅν λέγουσιν ἐκ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ νοῦν, καὶ τὴν ἐκ τοῦ νοῦ ψυχὴν, καίτοι γνώσκοντες τὸ ἐξ ὧν εἰσὶν, οὐκ ἐφοβήθησαν ὁμῶς καὶ αὐτὰ εἰπεῖν ἀγένητα. Athanas. de Decret. S. N. p. 234.

^γ Νοητὰς οὐσίας—ἀγενήτους εἶναι φάσκων αὐτὰς ὡσπερ καὶ πάσαν ψυχὴν ἔπειτα ἐξ ἀπορροίας τῆς τοῦ πρώτου αἰτίου συστήναι λέγων. Οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος αὐτὰς γεγονέναι δίδόται βούλεται. Euseb. Præp. Ev. l. 13. c. 15. p. 694.

^δ Dr. Clarke's Demonstration, &c. p. 31. 4th ed.

^ε See Cudworth, p. 405.

eternal, and by the will of God, and not by necessity: as if will in their sense (because it is in yours) must needs be opposed to necessity, in your sense also of necessity; when neither their sense of will nor of necessity was the same with yours ^f.

To Plato we may subjoin Aristotle, who is known to make the world ἀγένητος, necessarily existent; which you (because you affect singularity) will needs call self-existent. But as there is certainly a different idea from that of self-existent fixed to the word ἀγένητος, when applied to the thing caused, we will, with your good leave, give the different ideas different names. Simplicius, quoted by Dr. Cudworth ^g, observes of Aristotle, that while he makes God the cause of the world, he yet supposes the world to be ἀγένητος, necessarily existing. You say, Dr. Cudworth justly charges Aristotle with making the world self-existent. But Dr. Cudworth was a wiser man, than to charge Aristotle with it. He observes, that neither Aristotle, nor any of the Pagan theologers, from his time, ever supposed the world or the inferior Gods to be self-existent ^h; but to proceed eternally from a cause. You allow the same thing (p. 294.) of the Stoics their ἀγένητοι θεοί, eternal and necessarily existing Gods, produced from the substance of God. So that now we have the sense of three famous sects of philosophers, (Platonists, Aristotelians, and Stoics,) all distinguishing between self-existence and necessary existence; and all using the word ἀγένητος to express the latter singly, as often as they applied it to things produced.

From the whole we may make this observation, which will be useful to us in our reading the Fathers, that there is nothing strange or uncommon in giving the title of ἀγένητος to what is supposed to have been produced, or begotten. To the ancient instances already given from profane writers, I shall add a few more of something later date; one is from the Hermaic books, quoted in Cyril ⁱ, where the Λόγος is styled ἀγένητος, and yet ^f Basil gives a very different account of these philosophers and their sentiments, that they supposed the world eternal, and not by the will of God.

Καὶ καθότι πολλοὶ τῶν φαντασθέντων συμπάρχειν ἐξ αὐτοῦ τῷ Θεῷ τὸν κόσμον, οὐχὶ γεγενῆσθαι παρ' αὐτοῦ συνεχώρησαν· ἀλλ' οἰοεὶ ἀποσκίασμα τῆς δυνάμεως αὐτοῦ αὐτομάτως παρρηπιστῆναι. Καὶ αἴτιον μὲν αὐτοῦ ὁμολογοῦσι τὸν Θεόν, αἴτιον δὲ ἀπροαιρέτως, ὡς τῆς σκιάς τὸ σῶμα, καὶ τῆς λαμπη-δότος τὸ ἀπαναγίζον. Basil. in Hexaem. Hom. 1. p. 10.

So also St. Ambrose:

Quamvis causam ejus Deum esse fateantur, causam tamen volunt non ex voluntate, et dispositione sua, sed ita ut causa umbrae corpus est. Ambrosius in Hexaem. 1. 1. c. 5.

^g Τὸ αἴτιον τοῦ οὐρανοῦ Θεὸν λέγων, ὁμῶς ἀγένητον αὐτὸν ἀποδείκνυσι. Cudworth, p. 253.

^h Ibid.

ⁱ Ὁ κόσμος ἔχει ἄρχοντα ἐπικείμενον γνήσιος υἱός. More may be cited from Plotinus^k, and other Platonists; who call things ἀγένητα, eternal and necessarily existing, though proceeding from another. All the while it is observable, that ἀγένητος was sometimes used in a higher sense, when applied to what those philosophers called the first Cause, or supreme God: for it might then signify both necessary existence and self-existence, that is, underived absolutely: though it might often signify no more than necessary existence, abstracting from the consideration of self-existence: which may best be judged of by observing what the word is opposed to. I meet not however with the word ἀγένητος to denote particularly self-existent: nor does it seem to have been in use so high as Philo's time. For when Philo had a mind to express how the Λόγος was necessarily existing, but not self-existent, (so I understand him,) he had no way of doing it but by saying that he was not ἀγένητος in the highest sense as God is, nor γενητός in the low sense as creatures are, but between both^l. If he had had the two words ἀγένητος and ἀγέννητος, he might much more easily have expressed the thought: as many of the Christian Fathers did after. I take the word ἀγέννητος to have been first brought in by the Christians, to distinguish the Father from the Son; that is, unbegotten from begotten. But when, or by what degrees it came into use, is not easy to determine. Hardly so early as Ignatius; or if it had, he would not have applied it to God the Son in any sense: wherefore it is highly improbable that ἀγέννητος should be the word in the place cited. But ἀγένητος was a common word, and very applicable; and the more likely to be applied by him to God the Son, whom he also styles, as the Word, αἰδιος^m, δημιουργόν, λόγον τοῦ πάντων δεσπότου, ὃς μετ' ἐκείνου πρώτη δύναμις, ἀγένητος, &c.—Ἔστι δὲ τοῦ παντελείου πρόγονος, καὶ τέλειος, καὶ γόνιμος γνήσιος υἱός. Arnd Cypil. Alex. contr. Jul. lib. i. p. 33.

^k Γενητά μὲν γὰρ τῷ ἀρχῆν ἔχειν ἀγένητα δὲ ὅτι μὴ χρόνον τὴν ἀρχῆν ἔχει, ἀλλὰ αἰεὶ παρ' ἄλλου ὄντα αἰεὶ. Plotin. Enn. ii. lib. 4. p. 161, 162.

Αἱ τῶν θεῶν οὐσίαι οὐδὲ ἐγένοντο· τὰ γὰρ αἰεὶ ὄντα οὐδέποτε γίνονται—οὐδὲ τῆς πρώτης αἰτίας, ἢ ἀλλήλων χωρίζονται· ὡς περ οὐδὲ ψυχῆς αἰ ἐπιστῆμαι. Sallust. de Mund. c. ii. p. 245.

Αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν κόσμον ἀφθαρτὸν τε καὶ ἀγένητον εἶναι ἀνάγκη—εἰ γὰρ μὴ φθείρεται, οὐδὲ γέγονεν.—καὶ ὅτι ἀνάγκη διὰ τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ ἀγαθότητα ὄντος τοῦ κόσμου αἰεὶ τε τὸν θεὸν ἀγαθὸν εἶναι, καὶ τὸν κόσμον ὑπάρχειν, ὡς περ ἡλίω μὲν, καὶ πυρὶ συνυφίσταται φῶς, σώματι δὲ σκία. Ibid. c. vii. p. 256.

^l Ὅτε ἀγένητος ὡς θεὸς ὄν, οὕτε γενητός ὡς ἡμεῖς, ἀλλὰ μέσος τῶν ἄκρων, ἀμφοτέροις ὀμηρέων. Philo, p. 509.

^m Ὅς ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ λόγος αἰδιος, οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθών. Ignat. ad Magnes. p. 23. N. B. 'Αἰδιος here looks backwards, and is to be understood a parte ante, as the Schools speak. Compare what Irenaeus says; Ubi est sige non erit Logos; et ubi Logos non utique est sige. Iren. l. ii. c. 12. p. 129.

of like signification with ἀγένητος, and frequently joined with it in ancient writersⁿ. I have nothing further to add, but that the Arian interpolator well understood the force of ἀγένητος in that place of Ignatius; and therefore craftily enough altered the passage, applying it to the Father only; suitably to Arian principles, which allow not either ἀγέννητος or ἀγένητος to be applied to God the Son.

I should take notice, that Theodoret lays it to the charge of Saturnilus, that he asserted our Saviour to be not only ἀγένητος, but also ἀγέννητος^o, therein contradicting himself, since he owns him to have a Father. But it is difficult to know whether Theodoret drew this from Saturnilus's own expressions, or only expressed what he took to be Saturnilus's sense in his own words. If the former were certain, we should have a proof of ἀγέννητος being used about Ignatius's time, though among heretics only: but that I leave to be considered. I incline to think, that even when the Father was spoken of, the word was still ἀγένητος, but understood sometimes in the highest sense, signifying self-existence; as we see in the Sibylline verses^p. Athanasius's observation may hold true, that the ἐν τῷ ἀγένητον did not signify the one unbegotten, but the one underived^q, when applied to the Father; carrying in it both necessary existence and self-existence: though it was often expressive of the former only, being understood in opposition to precarious existence, and nothing else: and so the Son might be included in the ἐν τῷ ἀγένητον. I have made no account of any Latin translations of the Greek ἀγένητος, because nothing is more uncertain. The translator of Irenæus is various, and often translates by innatus or ingenitus, where it is plain the word should be infectus. Tertullian sometimes translates the one word ἀγένητος, by two together, innatus et infectus; which confirms me that the word was ἀγένητος, and that, for want of a proper word for underived, he chose to express it by two. Yet Tertullian has also the word innatus for unbegotten alone; applying it to the Father in contradistinction to the Son. But I shall weary the reader. He that would see more of the use of ⁿ Τί οὖν ἐστὶ τὸ αἰδιον καὶ ἀγένητον, καὶ ἀφθαρτον; ᾧ χρόνος οὐδεὶς μεταβολὴν ἐπάγει. Plutarch. de ei in Delphis Script.

^o Theod. Hæret. Fab. 104.

^p Ἐὶς Θεὸς ὁ μόνος ἐστὶν ὑπερμεγέθης ἀγένητος. Theoph. Antioch. p. 181.

Αὐτογενής, ἀγένητος, ἅπαντα κρατῶν διαπαντός. Ibid.

^q Οὐκ ἀγνοοῦμεν δὲ ὅτι καὶ οἱ εἰρηκότες ἐν τῷ ἀγένητον τὸν πατέρα λέγοντες, οὐκ ὡς γενητοῦ καὶ ποιήματος ὄντος τοῦ λόγου οὕτως ἔγραψαν, ἀλλ' ὅτι μὴ ἔχει τὸν αἴτιον, καὶ μᾶλλον αὐτὸς πατὴρ μὲν ἐστὶ τῆς σοφίας, &c. Athanas. vol. i. p. 761. Bened.

ἀγένητος may consult the authors in the margin^r. The benefit of what hath been hinted will appear as I go on.

A. D. 145. JUSTIN MARTYR.

I am next to shew, that Justin Martyr also taught the necessary existence of God the Son. His doctrine is, that the Son is $\delta \delta \nu$, the I AM; a phrase expressing, according to Justin, and all other the best critics, proper emphatical existence; the same which we now call necessary existence. As to the proof of the fact, that Justin really styles God the Son $\delta \delta \nu$, and in his own proper Person, I have given it in my Defence^s; and am now only to take off your exceptions to the evidence. You have very little of moment to reply; which is the reason, I suppose, that you appear so fretted all the way under this Query, and betray a very indecent warmth in your expressions. You have only your old pretence, (which is worth nothing,) that, according to Justin, Christ was Messenger, or Minister to the Father: and so he was according to me too, in my Defence, and now; and yet he is $\delta \delta \nu$ together with the Father; and he will be, maugre all the endeavours of passionate men to the contrary.

I insisted further in my Defence^t, that the very reason given why the Father is God, Θεός, (not δ Θεός,) is because he is ἀγένητος, necessarily existing.

Now since Justin every where expressly styles the Son Θεός, and says that he is Θεός, God, he must of consequence believe the Son to be necessarily existing. Here you are in a passion; telling me, (p. 296,) that it “is exactly as ridiculous as if a man should argue that since, according to St. Paul, God’s being the Father, of whom are all things, is declared to be the reason of his being the one God; therefore if the Son be not the Father, he is not God at all.” But have a little patience, and you will see the clearer. Had St. Paul said, that the reason of the Father’s being God, is because he is the Father of whom, &c. it would be manifest, that, according to St. Paul, no one could be God that was not also the Father of whom, &c. But as St. Paul has said no such thing, the case is not parallel. Nor is the Father’s being the Father of whom, &c. the reason or foundation of his being the one God, but only a reason why he principally is styled the one God: so that you have yet said nothing to take off the force of my argument relating to Justin. You are extremely angry at my construing ἀγέννητος in Justin, eternal, uncreated, immutable, not unbegotten, or self-existent; and you say, (p. 292,) “that I have not the least ground for it, from any “ancient writer whatsoever.” Who would not imagine you were perfectly acquainted with every ancient writer, to talk of them so familiarly? I have shewn you from many ancient writers, that ἀγέννητος has been commonly applied to things begotten or proceeding; where it could not signify unbegotten. I would further hint to you, which perhaps may surprise you, that you cannot prove that ever Justin Martyr used the word ἀγέννητος with double ν, or that he knew of any such word. That he uses ἀγέννητος is certain; sometimes meaning by it underived absolutely^u; sometimes necessarily existing^x. One thing I will presume to know, and to be certain of, that in the place by me cited, he used it in the sense of necessarily existing, and no other; because it is opposed to precarious, perishable being; as I shewed in my Defence: and this was the sense that the old philosophers most commonly used it in, whether speaking of the supreme Cause, or their incorruptible Deities, as opposed to the corruptible creation.

^r Suiceri Thesaur. Petavius de Athanas. de Decr. S. N. p. 207.
Trin. lib. v. c. 1, 2. Cudworth, p. ^s Vol. i. p. 296, 363, 364.
253, 254. Montfaucon, Admon. in ^t Vol. i. p. 362, 363.

You think ἀγέννητος, (for so I read it,) in his second Apology^y, must signify unbegotten. Far from it: it signifies no more than eternal, or however necessarily existing, in my sense of the word. His argument requires no more than this, that God should have none older than himself to have given a name to him; and because he had not, he had no name: wherefore also the Son (as Justin observes) being coexistent with him (συνὸν) from the first, and afterwards begotten, had no name, having none older than himself. Thus the connection of Justin’s sense is plain and clear; and his observation just and natural. O, but you say, “Justin, in this very sentence, styles the Son γεννώμενος, in “express opposition to ἀγέννητος.” But that I deny; γεννώμενος is opposed only to συνὸν, his temporal generation to his eternal coexistence with the Father: for so I interpret that passage with the learned Dr. Grabe; so entirely void of all foundation is every one of your exceptions.

To those already given I shall add one proof more of Justin’s professing the necessary existence of God the Son. It is from a ^u Pag. 387, 408, 410. ed. Thirlby.

I do not meet with more places where the word must necessarily signify more. In the rest, I conceive, it must, or may signify no more than necessary existence.

^x Pag. 20, 37, 72, 78, 114, 128, 148, 149, 150.

^y Just. Apol. ii. p. 13. Grab. p. 114. Thirlb.

fragment only^z; but there appears no reason to suspect its being genuine. What I build my argument upon, is Justin's styling the Λόγος, life by nature; by which I understand necessarily existing life, no phrase being more commonly used to signify necessary existence than φύσει, or κατὰ φύσιν, by the ancients. This very phrase of life by nature, is so used by Cyril of Alexandria, and others^a. But what most of all confirms this sense, is Justin himself, or a venerable person whom he produces in his Dialogue with approbation, arguing against the necessary existence of the soul, upon this topic, that she has not life in herself^b, but her life is precarious, depending on the will of another. Now, in this fragment, Justin asserts, that the Λόγος is life by nature, and enlivening whatever is joined thereto: the very description which the Platonists^c give of the τὸ Θεῖον, the divine Being, which emphatically exists. I might add further proofs, from Justin, of the Son's necessary existence; the same that Bishop Bull has produced out of him for the consubstantiality; for whatever proves one, proves both. But these are sufficient, and I may have occasion to hint more of this matter, when I come to answer the objection made from the temporal generation.

A. D. 177. ATHENAGORAS.

Athenagoras, the next in order, will be a powerful advocate for the necessary existence of God the Son. He declares him to be οὐ γινόμενος^d, not made; the very same phrase whereby he expresses the necessary existence of God the Father^e; and which comes to the same as ὁ ὦν, φύσει ὦν, ἀεὶ ὦν, all words, or phrases, expressing in Athenagoras necessary existence.

It is ridiculous of you to plead, in opposition to me, (p. 296,) that Athenagoras calls the Son γέννημα in the very same sentence. It is the thing that we contend for, that he may be γέννημα, and ^z Ἡ κατὰ φύσιν ζωὴ προσεπλάκη τῇ τὴν φθορὰν δεξαμένη. Justin. Fragm. p. 406. Jeb. Grabe Spicil. vol. ii. p. 172.

^a Κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ ζωὴ καὶ ζωοποιὸς ὁ παντὸς ἐπέκεινα νοῦ. Cyril. Alex. contr. Jul. lib. vii. p. 250.

^b Ζωὴ κατὰ φύσιν ὁ Θεὸς, ὡς Θεὸς ἐκ Θεοῦ, καὶ ζωὴ ἐκ ζωῆς. Cyril. in 1 Joh. p. 51.

^c Ὁς λόγος ὦν, καὶ ζωὴ, καὶ φῶς, καὶ ἀλήθεια, καὶ Θεὸς, καὶ σοφία, καὶ πάντα ὅσα κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eun. Or. i. p. 1.

^b Οὐ γὰρ δι' αὐτῆς ἐστὶ τὸ ζῆν, ὡς τῷ Θεῷ. Ju. t. Dial. p. 23. Jeb.

^c Οὐ γὰρ ὡς μετέχον τοῦ ζῆν, ἀλλ' ὡς παρέκτικον τῆς θείας ζωῆς, τὸ θεῖον ἀθάνατόν ἐστι. Procl. Platon. Theol. p. 65.

^d Οὐχ ὡς γινόμενον. Athenag. p. 38.

^e Αὐτὸν μὲν οὐ γινόμενον, ὅτι τὸ ἐν οὐ γίνεται, ἀλλὰ τὸ μὴ ὄν. P. 21.

Τὶ τὸ ἐν ἀεὶ, γένεσιν τε οὐκ ἔχων ἢ τὶ τὸ γινόμενον μὲν, ἐν δὲ οὐδέποτε. P. 67.

Οὐ φύσει ὄντων, ἀλλὰ γενομένων. P. 68.

yet necessarily existing; nay, that he is so, because he is γέννημα^f, properly so called; every Son being of the same nature with his Father. And why might not Athenagoras think the Son necessarily existing, and begotten also? No philosopher nor Catholic Christian ever imagined it at all inconsistent, for the same thing to be both γεννώμενον and ἀγένητον, as may appear, in a good measure, from the testimonies I have given above.

I have something further to plead from Athenagoras. He intimates, that God could never be without the Λόγος^g, any more than without reason or wisdom; which is declaring his existence as necessary as the Father's existence is. See this argument of the ancients explained and vindicated in my Sermons^h: besides that Bishop Bull has so fully defended Athenagoras in particular, from the senseless charge of his supposing the Son to be no more than an attribute before his generation, that an ingenuous man should be ashamed to revive it, till he can make some tolerable answer to what the Bishop has said. But I have mentioned this matter once before.

You object, that Athenagoras speaks emphatically of the unoriginate underived eternity of the Father, as the one unbegotten and eternal God, and again, that the unbegotten God is alone eternal. Had this been really said by him, yet nobody that knows Athenagoras could ever suspect that he had intended any opposition to the eternity of God the Son, included in him; and therefore it were of no great moment to dispute this point with you. But in regard to truth, I think myself obliged to observe, that no proof can be given of Athenagoras's ever using the word ἀγέννητος, but ἀγένητος. It is under the conception of necessary existence, not as unbegotten, that he proposes the Father as the true God, in opposition to all the perishing and feeble deities of the Pagans: and while he does this, he still bears in mind that this Father has a Son of the same nature with himself; and forgets not to mention him in his proper place: particularly in those very pages (37, 122.) from whence you quote the two passages of the unbegotten Father, (as you call him,) he takes care to bring in the mention of the Son, as included in him, and one God with him. It is very strange, that an ancient writer cannot be allowed to speak of the Father, in the first place, as the one God, (which all the churches in Christendom have ever

^f Vid. Dionys. Rom. ap. Athan. ὡν, εἶχεν αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὸν λόγον αἰδιως λογικὸς ὢν. Athen. p. 38.

^g Ἐξ ἀρχῆς γὰρ ὁ Θεὸς, νοῦς αἰδιος done, and still do in their creeds.) but presently he must be charged with excluding God the Son: as if reserving him a while in mind, and forbearing to make mention of him till it be a proper time and place, were the same thing with excluding him from the one true Godhead. Upon a view of the placesⁱ where Athenagoras uses the word ἀγέννητος, it is plain to me, from what I find it opposed to, that he means no more than ὄν γεγόμενος, or φύσει ὄν, necessary existence by it, in opposition to the Pagan perishing deities.

^a Page 149, &c. of this volume.

A. D. 187. IRENÆUS.

Irenæus will be found to teach the necessary existence of God the Son many ways, with great variety of expression; sometimes declaring him to be ipse Deus^k, God himself; sometimes the self^l of the Father, Creator^m often; which, with Irenæus, is always a certain argument of *immutable existence*ⁿ, and a mark of distinction between what is necessarily existing, and what not: intimating also, that whatsoever is a creature could never create^o. I have shewn also, above, that Irenæus asserts the Son not to be another God, but the same God with the Father; from whence it must follow, that he is also necessarily existing as well as the Father. He further supposes him God, in respect of his substance^p, and coexisting^q always with the Father. By these and other the like characters, too long and too many to be here cited at length, does this very early and judicious Father proclaim the necessary existence of God the Son. I shall over and above produce two passages; one where Irenæus styles the Son infectus, and another where the Father and his Word are so described, as plainly to shew that they are one necessary existing Being. The first runs thus^r; "Thou art not, O man, necessarily existing, "neither didst thou always coexist with God as his own Word." I make no doubt of infectus being the rendering of ἀγέννητος, a word often used by Irenæus; but whether he ever has ἀγέννητος, unbegotten, I am not positive: it does not appear to me that he has^s. Now as to the sense of the place, it is certainly the most ⁱ Athenag. p. 19, 27, 37, 53, 67, 122.

^k Iren. p. 132.

^l Ibid. p. 139, 163, 253.

^m Ibid. p. 44, 79, 190, 219, 307,

315.

ⁿ Ibid. p. 169, 183, 240.

^o Ibid. p. 288.

^p Generationem ejus quæ est ex Virgine, et substantiam quoniam Deus. Iren. p. 217.

^q Ibid. p. 153, 163, 209, 243.

^r Non enim infectus es, O homo, neque semper co-existebas Deo, sicut proprium ejus Verbum. Iren. p. 153.

^s The reader may turn to the pages here marked, if he be disposed to examine. N. B. I make no account of the present readings.

Iren. p. 2, 5, 11, 53, 54, 56, 67, 100, 101, 103, 153, 183, 284, 285, 348. Bened. ed.

natural to refer each branch of the sentence to the same Word of God. That is to say, Neither art thou unmade, as the Word is, nor didst thou always coexist with God, as he, the same Word, has. But because it is barely possible for the words to admit of another construction, I shall not contend about it. One thing however is certain, that the eternal coexistence of God the Word is here plainly taught; which, among all sober reasoners, will imply his necessary existence, as well as eternity.

The other place of Irenæus runs thus:

“But in him who is God over all, for as much as he is all Mind and all Word, (as we have said,) and having nothing sooner or later, or any thing of diversity in himself, but all equal and alike, and ever continuing one; there can be no such order of emission,” (as the Gnostics pretend†.)

To this may be added another such passage:

“For the Father of all is not a kind of compound substance (animal) of any thing besides mind, as we have shewn. But the Father is Mind, and Mind the Father. Wherefore it is necessary that the Word, which is of him, or rather the Mind itself, since it is Word, should be perfect and impassible, and the emissions therefrom being of the same substance with him, should be perfect and impassible, and always continue like to him that emitted them.”

These two passages will not be perfectly understood by any that are not in some measure acquainted with the Gnostic principles. Among other conceits of theirs, this was one, that the Word was remote from the Father in nature and perfections, and liable to ignorance and passion: which absurd tenet Irenæus here confutes, by teaching that the Mind is Word, and the Word Mind, both of the same substance and perfections. It is

† In eo autem qui sit super omnes Deus, totus Nus et totus Logos cum sit, quemadmodum prædiximus, et nec aliud antiquius, nec posterius, aut aliud alterius habente in se, sed toto æquali et simili et uno perseverante, jam non talis hujus ordinationis sequitur emissio. Iren. p. 131, 132.

“Non enim ut compositum animal quiddam est omnium Pater præter Nun, quemadmodum præ-ostendimus: sed Nus Pater, et Pater Nus. Necessè est itaque et eum qui ex eo est Logos, imò magis autem ipsum Nun, cum sit Logos, perfectum et impassibilem esse, et eas quæ ex eo sunt emissiones, ejusdem substantiæ cum sint, cujus et ipse, perfectas et impassibiles et semper similes cum eo perseverare qui eas emisit. Ibid. p. 139.

Compare

Qui generationem prolative hominum Verbi transferunt in Dei æternum Verbum, et prolationis initium dantes et genesim, quemadmodum et suo Verbo. Et in quo distabit Dei Verbum, imò magis ipse Deus, cum sit Verbum, a Verbo hominum, si eandem habuerit ordinationem et emissionem generationis? Ibid. p. 132.

plain, that by Word, in those passages, is not meant any attribute of the Father, but the Person of the Son, by what follows in p. 132, where he speaks of the eternal Word under that notion, and still continues the same thought of God himself being Word, or Logos, as before. The Word therefore is perfect, is impassible, is necessarily existing, as the Father is, according to Irenæus^x.

A. D. 192. CLEMENS ALEXANDRINUS.

Clemens is another unexceptionable evidence for the same doctrine. He styles the Son ὄντως Θεός, really God: a phrase which he often applies with particular emphasis to God the Father^z, as being the one true God, in opposition to pretended deities. I omit here, what I have before abundantly shewn, that the Father and Son together are the one God, according to Clemens: I pass over also Clemens's doctrine of Christ being Creator, Almighty, adorable, &c. from whence, by certain consequence, it may be proved, that his substance is truly divine and necessarily existing. I shall here insist only on such passages, as more expressly and directly signify his necessary existence; among which this is one:

“ But this must of necessity be took notice of, that we ought “ not to think any thing wise by nature, but the τὸ Θεῖον, the “ divine Being; wherefore also it is Wisdom, God's Power, that “ teaches truth: and from thence the perfection of knowledge is “ received^a.” Here Wisdom is plainly included in the τὸ Θεῖον, the divine Being, said to be wise by nature, that is, necessarily wise. All that know Clemens's style will allow, that by Wisdom is meant the Son of God, the teacher of truth, as Clemens himself explains it in the following page^b; and a few pages after, he gives him the titles of σοφία, Wisdom, and δύναμις Θεοῦ, Power of God^c, as here. Wherefore God the Son is φύσει σοφός, and also τὸ Θεῖον, which fully express necessary existence. Another passage of Clemens, proving the same thing, is as follows: “ We “ are not as the Lord, and if we would, we cannot: for no “ disciple is above his Lord. It is enough, if we be made such “ as the Master; not in essence, for it is impossible for that ^x Vid. Massuet. Dissert. Præv. p. 128.

^y Clemens Alex. p. 86.

^z Ibid. p. 45, 55, 60, 61, 81, 92, 150.

^a Ἐκείνο δὲ ἐξ ἀνάγκης παρασημειωτέον, ὡς μόνον τὸ θεῖον σοφὸν εἶναι φύσει νοεῖσθαι χρῆ' διὸ καὶ ἡ σοφία δύναμις Θεοῦ, ἡ διδάξασα τὴν ἀλήθειαν κἀνταῦθά που εἴληπται ἡ τελείωσις τῆς γνώσεως. Clem. p. 452.

^b Δι' οὗ καθοράται τὰ κατ' ἀλήθειαν καλὰ καὶ δίκαια. Ibid. p. 453.

^c Ὁ Κύριος ἀλήθεια, καὶ σοφία, καὶ δύναμις Θεοῦ. Ibid. p. 457.

“ which is by adoption (or appointment) to be equal in essence (or existence) to what is by nature: only we may be made eternal, and may be admitted to the contemplation of things that are, and may have the title of sons, and may see the Father in what belongs to him^d.”

In these words it is clearly intimated, that our Lord is κατ' οὐσίαν, essentially, and φύσει, by nature, eternal, and knowing, and Son of God: which are the known ways by which the ancients express necessary existence. Φύσει as opposed to θέσει is a familiar and very common expression for what is naturally and necessarily, in opposition to voluntary appointment or designation^e.

Clemens has another celebrated passage, worth the reciting:

“ The Son of God never comes down from his watch-tower, is never divided, never parted asunder, and never passes from place to place; but is always every where, and yet contained no where: all mind, all light, all the Father's eye, sees all things, hears all things, and knows all things^f.”

Here we find the principal essential attributes of God (immortality, immensity, omnipresence, and omniscience) ascribed to God the Son. And what can all this mean less than necessary existence? Compare with it what I had just before cited from Irenæus; who in like manner describes God as being all mind, all word, &c. And it is observable, that this was a way of speaking never applied to any but the eternal and necessary existing God. It is so applied by Clemens himself in another place^g. The manner of speaking was indeed first borrowed from the philosophers^h, who applied it to none but the divine nature

^d Οὐκ ἐσμὲν δὲ ὡς ὁ Κύριος, ἐπειδὴ βουλόμεθα μὲν, οὐκ ἐπιδόμεθα δέ. οὐδεὶς γὰρ μαθητὴς ὑπὲρ τὸν διδάσκαλον ἀρκετὸν δὲ εἶναι γενόμεθα ὡς ὁ διδάσκαλος· οὐ κατ' οὐσίαν· ἀδύνατον γὰρ ἴσον εἶναι πρὸς τὴν ὑπαρξίν, τὸ θέσει τῷ φύσει· τὸ δὲ αἰδίους γεγονέναι, καὶ τὴν τῶν ὄντων θεωρίαν ἐγνωκέναι, καὶ υἱοὺς προσηγορευέσθαι, καὶ τὸν πατέρα ἀπὸ τῶν οἰκείων καθορᾶν μόνον. Ibid. p. 469.

^e Χάριτι, καὶ οὐ φύσει τῆς υἰοθεσίας ἡξιωμένους. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eun. lib. i. p. 17, 126.

Ἐπὼν πρῶτον τὸ οἰκείον, πρὸς τὸν πατέρα μου, ὅπερ ἦν κατὰ φύσιν· εἰτ' ἐπαγαγὼν καὶ πατέρα ἡμῶν, ὅπερ ἦν κατὰ θέσιν. Cyriil. Hierosol. p. 116. ed. Benedict. Vid. et p. 46, 114, 117, 138, 149, 151, 152, 153, 158.

Athan. Orat. 2. p. 442, 527. Eustath. apud Theod. Dial. 1. The Arian doctrine was, Οὐ φύσει υἱὸς τίς ἐστιν τοῦ Θεοῦ. Alexand. Epist. apud Theod. E. H. lib. i. c. 4.

^f Οὐ γὰρ ἐξίσταται ποτε τῆς αὐτοῦ περιωπῆς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ· οὐ μερίζομενος, οὐκ ἀποτεμνόμενος, οὐ μεταβαίων ἐκ τόπου εἰς τόπον, πάντα δὲ ἂν πάντοτε, καὶ μηδαμῇ περιεχόμενος, ὅλος νοῦς, ὅλος φῶς, πατρῶος ὅλος ὀφθαλμὸς, πάντα ὄρων, πάντα ἀκούων, εἰδὼς πάντα, &c. Clem. p. 831.

^g Ὅλος ἀκοή καὶ ὅλος ὀφθαλμὸς, ἵνα τις τοῦτοις χρήσῃται τοῖς ὀνόμασι, ὁ Θεός. Ibid. p. 853.

^h Xenophanes, some hundred years before Christ, seems to have been the as such : and they are herein followed by manyⁱ of the Fathers, before or after Clemens.

I shall just point out one place more of Clemens, taken notice of by M. Lequien, the learned editor of Damascenk. The words are, " Let us hasten to salvation, to (baptismal) regeneration, to " be united together many of us, in one love after (the example " of) the unity of the one singular essence^l."

The words are supposed to be an allusion to John xvii. 21, 22, 23, where Christian unity is described by our Lord, as resembling, in some measure, the union of father and son. This construction of that place in Clemens is extremely plausible : but that the words are strictly capable of no other, I will not pretend ; let the reader make his judgment of it. Having traced the doctrine of the Son's necessary existence down to Clemens, I need not go lower, where the case is still plainer. As to Tertullian, you allow, that he supposes the Son to be a self-existent part of God's substance : which is throwing his sense into invidious terms to disparage it ; but is, in the main, confessing the thing, that the Son is by him supposed necessarily existing, and but one Person of the Trinity ; which Tertullian might not perhaps express in the best manner, though his meaning is right and good. I might produce vouchers for the same doctrine, as many Fathers^m as have pleaded that God the Father could never have been without the Word, any more than without thought, power, truth, life, or the like : and those I have reckoned up in another placeⁿ, whither I refer the reader.

I shall content myself with particularly mentioning one more only, and that is

A. D. 249. ORIGEN.

I shall begin with the famous passage in his treatise against Celsus, where he expressly styles the Son ἀγέννητος, unmade, first that used it. Vid. Diog. Laert. p. 559.

Plinii Nat. Hist. lib. ii. c. 7. Sext. Empiric. contra Phys. i. sect. 144.

ⁱ Irenæus, p. 130, 131, 151, 240. Novatian c. 6. Lactantius de Opif. c. 2. Cyrill. Hieros. p. 91. ed. Bened. Zeno Veron. in Psal. p. 139. Hieronym. in Psal. 93. p. 371.

^k Damasc. Op. vol. i. p. 132.

^l Σπεύσωμεν εἰς σωτηρίαν, ἐπὶ τὴν παλιγγενεσίαν, εἰς μίαν ἀγάπην συναχθῆναι οἱ πολλοὶ, κατὰ τὴν τῆς μοναδικῆς

οὐσίας ἕνωσιν. Clem. Alex. p. 72.

Compare p. 146.

^m Hippolytus contr. Noët. c. 10. Dionys. Roman. apud Athanas. 232. Dionys. Alex. apud Athan. 230, 253, 257. Alexand. apud Theod. lib. i. c. 4. Add to these Methodius (ap. Phot. p. 960.) and Theognostus, (ap. Athan. p. 230.) declaring the Son to be eternal and uncreated, that is, necessarily existing.

ⁿ P. 149, 150 of this volume.

that is, as I understand, necessarily existing. The whole sentence runs thus^o :

“ Our Saviour and Lord, the Word of God, setting forth how “ great a thing it is to know the Father, that he is compre“ hended and known principally, and, according to his dignity, “ by himself (the Son) alone, and in the second place by those “ who have their minds enlightened by the very Word of God, “ says, ‘ No one knoweth the Son, but the Father, neither the “ Father but the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son shall “ reveal him.’ For no one can be able worthily to know him “ that was unmade, and begotten before all created nature, as “ the Father who begat him : neither can any one (know) the “ Father, as (he is known by) his living Word, his Wisdom, and “ Truth.” I need say nothing here in defence of my way of rendering πάσης γενητῆς φύσεως πρωτότοκος, having sufficiently vindicated it in another place^p. The stress of my argument for the Son’s necessary existence lies in the word ἀγένητον, which you are very sensible of, and therefore endeavour all possible ways, though in vain, to elude it.

You say, (p. 295,) that “ the place is evidently corrupt.” I suppose, because it is evidently against you. But where are your manuscripts? Or by what authority do you pretend to pronounce any place corrupt, without the least shadow of a reason? You plead the term πρωτότοκος. But that, if rightly understood, confirms the reading rather than otherwise : for if the Son was begotten before all created nature, he must be uncreated^q. And I doubt not but Origen chose πάσης γενητῆς φύσεως, instead of πάσης κτίσεως, on purpose to make it answer the better to ἀγένητος going before, and to preserve the elegance of the sentence. You urge γέννησας αὐτὸν, as if the same thing could not be said to be ἀγένητος, and yet begotten : which all the philosophers had admitted, and nothing more frequent (as the testimonies produced above shew) than the application of both to the same person or thing : not to mention, that if Christ was a Son, in the ^o Ὅτε γὰρ τὸν ἀγένητον, καὶ πάσης γενητῆς φύσεως πρωτότοκον, κατ’ ἀξίαν εἶδεναι τις δύναται, ὡς ὁ γενήσας αὐτὸν πατὴρ, οὔτε τὸν πατέρα ὡς ὁ ἔμψυχος λόγος καὶ σοφία αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀλήθεια.

Origen. contr. Cels. lib. vi. p. 287.

^p P. 57 of this volume. See also Le Moyne, Not. et Observ. p. 447.
 Wall’s Defence, p. 37.

^q Dionysius, of the same age, thus reasons very remarkably upon the phrase πρωτότοκος, &c.

Ποῖημα ὁ πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως, ὁ ἐκ γαστρὸς πρὸ ἑωσφόρου γεννηθεὶς, ὁ εἰπὼν ὡς σοφία, πρὸ δὲ πάντων βουνῶν γεννᾷ με ; καὶ πολλαχοῦ δὲ τῶν θείων λογίων γεγενῆσθαι, ἀλλ’ οὐ γεγονέναι τὸν υἱὸν λεγόμενον εὔροι τις ἄν. Dionys. Rom. apud Athanas.
 p. 232.

strict and proper sense, (as all the Fathers have taught,) he must have been unmade, or necessarily existing. Your last pretence is from Gelenius, the editor, rendering it ab æterno genitus: which is descending low indeed. You might have urged the authority of Dr. Clarke, if you had pleased, which would have signified to me as much as Gelenius's. To imagine that ἀγένητον stands for ἀειγέννητον is making any thing stand for any thing: what man that knows Greek would use ἀειγέννητος for ἀειγενής, which is the proper word in such a case? To read γεννητόν, as you pretend, is still worse, being flat, and scarce sense: besides that Origen, intending here to say the highest things that could be said of the Son, would never use any such expression in this place.

Mr. Whiston^r, I think, has two or three little exceptions, more than you have mentioned. He appeals to Origen's known "doctrine and language elsewhere." But neither has this pretence any weight or force in it. Origen's doctrine can no way be better known than from this very treatise; which is every where conformable with what he has here said^s. And I have produced some evidence of it above. There is another place, in this very treatise, where Origen teaches the same doctrine implicitly, while he clearly distinguishes and exempts the Son ἀπὸ παντὸς γενητοῦ^t, from all created being: which comes to the same thing as the styling him ἀγένητος.

Mr. Whiston has one plea more from the silence of Origen's Athanasian vindicators. But this is very slight, unless all that was ever anciently pleaded for Origen were still extant; whereas, we have very little, in comparison, remaining. But if Origen's friends were silent on this head, it may be, his adversaries may have supplied the defect. Among the heads of the accusation drawn up against him, this was one, quod dixerit filium innatum, that he asserted the Son to be unbegotten^u. It is no improbable conjecture of the learned Huetius^x, that they had respect to this very passage; maliciously and captiously construing ἀγένητον, unbegotten, instead of unmade. But enough of this matter. It appears from what hath been said, that there is no reason at all for imagining the place corrupt. You have no manuscript, no ^r Whiston's Reply to Lord Nottingham, p. 15.

^s Bull. D. F. sect. ii. c. 9.

^t Ἀμικτον πρὸς ὁ, τιποτοῦν γενητόν — παντὸς μὲν ἀφιστάση γενητοῦ, προσαγοῦση δὲ δι' ἐμφύχου και ζώντος λόγου, ὅς ἐστι και σοφία ζῶσα, και υἱὸς Θεοῦ, τῷ ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεῶ. Orig. contr. Cels. lib. iii. p. 160.

^u Pamphili Apolog. p. 235. ed. Bened. inter op. Hieron.

^x Huetii Origeniana, p. 43.

various lection, no plea from the context, none from Origen's doctrine in other places, (however not in this treatise,) no argument of any kind, but what is mere trifling: nor have you been able to invent any correction or emendation, but what either is not Greek, or makes the sentence flat, and even silly in comparison: so unfortunate and unadvised a thing is it, to play the critic in a wrong place.

Origen, as we have seen, has styled the Son ἀγέννητος, unmade, or uncreated, (for that is his own interpretation^γ of the word ἀγέννητος;) and it is no objection to this, that other Fathers have been sparing of applying that title to Christ. The reason is, because the word ἀγέννητος was ambiguous, and was not applicable to Christ in every sense of it. For the like reason it is, that γεννητός is also very rarely applied to Christ: which though it might be applicable in one sense^z, yet being more generally used in another, and too low a sense, was therefore avoided. It is once applied to Christ by the Antiochian Fathers directly, and again obliquely: though a doubt may be made whether it should be γεννητός or γεννητός. And Origen (I do not remember any other of the Ante-Nicenes) is charged by Epiphanius^a with so applying it: which Epiphanius, as the humour then ran, very partially wrests to an ill sense, though he would have interpreted the same word more candidly in any one but Origen, as he there declares. So much had the Eustathian party prevailed in their unreasonable clamours against Origen, notwithstanding the endeavours of the wisest, and coolest, and best men of the Church, and even Jerome amongst them for a considerable time. However, though the phrase of γεννητός Θεός might bear a good sense, (and I doubt not was so intended by Origen,) yet I commend not his discretion in the use of it; since it might also bear an ill one, and had been a phrase applied by the Platonists to their inferior gods, or to the world. It might be on account of some of these uncautious sallies of Origen, that he was forced to purge himself to Pope Fabian, in a letter to him: after which, as in his treatise particularly against Celsus, he was more cautious, and kept closer to the language of the ^γ Ἀγέννητοι οὐσαι, καὶ μὴ ὑπὸ Θεοῦ κτισθεῖσαι. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 187.

^z Γεννητός sometimes denotes only a thing's proceeding from another, whether eternally or temporally, whether by generation or creation.

Γεννητόν λέγεσθαι τὸν κόσμον ὡς ἀπ' αἰτίας ἄλλης παραγόμενον, καὶ οὐκ ὄντα αὐτόγονον, οὐδὲ αὐθιπόστατον. Cran-tor. apud Procl. in Tim. p. 85.

Γεννητόν, τὸ ὅπωσούν ἀπ' αἰτίας ὑφίσταμενον. Vid. Cudw. p. 254.

^a Epiphanius. Hæres. Origenist. c. vii. viii. p. 531.

Church. To proceed: I might produce other very clear proofs of Origen's faith in the necessary existence of God the Son, from the attributes of immutability^b, omnipresence^c, impassibility^d, &c. which he ascribes to him, as well as from other topics^e. But I refer the reader to Bishop Bull's accurate account of him and his sentiments, and now hasten to what is most material, to take off your famous, and almost only objection drawn from what the Fathers have said about Christ's generation being by the will of the Father.

3. I am here to inquire, in what sense, and by whom, necessary generation or emanation was taught; and to account for the Son's being said to be generated by the will of the Father.

Here, in the first place, we are carefully to distinguish between those who asserted a temporal generation only, and those who asserted an eternal generation. As to the former, it may be allowed, that they supposed the generation to be by the will of the Father, even in your sense of will: and all you now have to do, is to prove, if you are able, that those writers believed no real or substantial existence of the Son, antecedent to that generation.

As to the latter, who held eternal generation, your business will be to shew, that they believed it to be an act of the will in your sense of will, if possible to be done: or, without this, you do nothing. It were sufficient to men of sense, and to scholars, to have pointed out a way of solving all that you have, or ever can advance upon this head: but because some readers will want to see some things more particularly cleared, I shall be at the pains of tracing this matter down quite through the Fathers; shewing you your mistakes all the way. You will not expect I should take any notice of the Apostolical Constitutions, so often and so unanswerably proved^f to be a patched, spurious, and interpolated work. Nor shall I have any thing to do with Ignatius's interpolated epistles, till you have confuted Bishop Pearson and Daillé. I refer you to a learned foreigner^g, in the margin, for ^b Origen. contr. Cels. p. 169, 170.

^c Ibid. p. 63, 164, 209, 325.

^d Ibid. p. 77, 170.

^e Viz. the many strong expressions of the Son's real and natural, or essential divinity occurring in that treatise of Origen. Τῆς θείας φύσεως ἀπαύγασμα—τοῦ θείου, p. 342. Τῆ φύσει κυρίου λόγου Θεοῦ, p. 392. Τῆς τοῦ θείου λόγου φύσεως ὄντος Θεοῦ, p. 171. Ἀπαύγασμα φωρὸς αὐδίου, p. 387. Τῆς ἀληθείας οὐσία, p. 386.

^f See Ittigius de Pseudepigraphis Apostolorum, p. 190. Mr. Turner on the Apost. Constitutions. Dr. Smalbroke.

^g Quas solas genuinas esse, alteras vero illas quas sinceras esse dixi, ab Athanasio decurtatas, inauditum et incredibile Wilhelmi Whistoni, novi the sense of wise and judicious men in relation to Mr. Whiston's wild attempt to substitute the larger instead of the smaller epistles. I proceed then to the genuine Ignatius, in the smaller epistles. I allowed in my Defence^h, that Ignatius supposes the Son to be a Son by the will of the Father; and I shewed in how many senses it might be taken, without at all favouring your principles. You imagine I was greatly puzzled; which I take to be an argument only of your small acquaintance with those matters. You pretend that three of the senses have no distinct sense. But are you to sit down in your study, and make reports of the ancients out of your own head, without looking into them, to see in what sense they used their phrases? I was not inquiring what you or I should now express by the word will, but what ideas the ancients had sometimes fixed to the word: for by that rule we must go in judging of the ancients. What think you of those that gave the name of Will, or the Father's Will, to the Person of the Sonⁱ? They had a meaning, though not such a meaning as you or I now understand the word will in. They must therefore be interpreted by the ideas which they, and not we, affixed to the phrase, or name. And what think you of others who used the phrases of omnipotent, or all-containing Will, (as we have seen above,) had not they Arianorum in Anglia Promachi, paradoxon est, singulari nuper scripto proditum magis quam demonstratum. Fabricii Bibl. Gr. lib. v. cap. 1. p. 40.

The same learned writer has also very lately given his judgment of Mr. Whiston's attempt about the Constitutions.

Quam parum feliciter hoc ei successerit, evidenter exposuerunt Rob. Turnerus, Richardus Smalbroke, Jo. Ernestus Grabe: consulendus etiam Simon Ockley. Licet vero Whistonus identidem tueri sententiam suam conatus est repetitis scriptis adversus Grabium, adversus Petrum Allixium, adversus Turnerum, vix quemquam tamen antiquitatis ecclesiasticæ peritum confido esse futurum, cui illius argumenta petita longius, et conjecturæ leves, rem tantam persuadere poterunt. Fabr. Bibl. Gr. vol. xi. p. 11.

^h Vol. i. p. 349.

ⁱ Ἄγαθὸν πατρὸς ἀγαθὸν βούλημα. Clem. Alex. p. 309.

Θέλημα παντοκρατορικόν, Sovereign Will. p. 647.

Ipsæ erat Voluntas et Potestas Patris. Tertull. de Orat. cap. 4.

Θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς ἐστὶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστός. Hippol. contr. Noët. cap. xiii. p. 15.

Charitatem ex charitate progenitam. Voluntas ex mente procedens—

Orig. περὶ ἀρχῶν. Pamph. Apol. p. 235. Τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς βούλησιν. Constant. apud Gelas. part. 3.

Βουλὴ καὶ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς. Athanas. p. 613.

Sicut Sapientia, et Verbum, et Virtus Dei, et Veritas, et Resurrectio, et Via dicitur, ita etiam Voluntas. Hieronym. Com. in Eph. i. p. 323.

Quidam ne Filium consilii vel voluntatis Dei dicerent unigenitum Verbum, ipsum Consilium, seu Voluntatem Patris idem Verbum esse dixerunt. Sed melius, quantum existimo dicitur Consilium de Consilio et Voluntas de Voluntate; sicut substantia de substantia, Sapientia de Sapientia. Augustin. Trin. lib. xv. cap. 38. p. 994. Vid. Petav. Dogmat. vol. i. p. 229. Cotelier. Not. in Recogn. p. 492.

some different idea of will from that which you have? And must not they be interpreted accordingly? You are very angry at those that have presumed (without your leave) to say the "Will of God is God himself," (p. 259.) And yet, whether the saying be right or wrong, when you would interpret the doctrine of such as made that their maxim, you must take their words as they meant them, and according to their ideas, and not your own. For aught I see, they spake more properly than you do in so often mentioning acts of the will. Does any thing act but an agent; and is the will an agent? How absurdly do you speak! Not that I should blame you for using a common phrase: only do not be so very severe and smart upon others; who knew how to speak as properly, or perhaps more properly than you^k. It seems to be owing only to narrowness of mind, and want of larger views, that you would confine all writers to your particular modes of speaking. The word will has been used by some of the ancients to signify any natural powers of God^l. Will, in the sense of approbation or acquiescence, is very common with ancient writers: nor was it thought absurd to say, that God had willed thus or thus, from all eternity, and could not will otherwise. Whether there be any thing very edifying in these notions or not, is not the question. But when we are searching into the sentiments of the ancients, we must carefully observe in what sense they understood the terms they made use of: otherwise we shall be apt to make very gross mistakes in our reports of them. To return to Ignatius. To cut off dispute, I admitted that Ignatius might understand by generation, a voluntary antemundane generation, or manifestation, with several other Fathers. In answer to which, you tell me, that I should "have proved that he had somewhere or other spoken of another "higher generation, otherwise I have given up the question." What question? the question of the eternal or necessary existence of the Logos? Nothing like it. I admitted that many of the Fathers speak of no higher a generation than that antemundane one: but still I insist upon it, that those very Fathers acknowledged the existence of a real and living Word, a Word ^k See Petavius's Dogmata Theol. vol. i. lib. i. cap. 8. p. 61, &c. lib. 5. cap. 4. p. 211. cap. 12. p. 239.

Where may be seen what Fathers said the Will of God was God himself, and what they meant by it.

^l Omnis Potentia naturalis (Dei)

est Voluntas. Mar. Victorin. adv. Arium, lib. i. p. 199. Basil. ed. Vid. Petavii Dogm. vol. i. p. 229.

Ταυτόν γὰρ ἡγοῦμαι φρόνησιν καὶ βούλησιν εἶναι. Athan. Orat. cap. lxxv. p. 613.

of God, eternally related to the Father, whose Word he is : which relation to the Father as his Head, is all that any writers ever meant by eternal filiation. They therefore acknowledged the same thing, but under another name: there was no difference in doctrine, but in the expression, and the manner of wording it ; as I observed in my Defence^m. Ignatius, of whom we are now speaking, owns an eternal Logos, and his necessary existence ; as I have already proved : which is sufficient to my purpose, unless you can shew that he meant an attribute only, by the Logos.

I go on to Justin Martyr ; who, as I before allowed, speaks of no generation higher than that voluntary ante-mundane generation, otherwise called manifestation : and I shewed both from Justin and Methodius, that a manifestation might be called a *generation*ⁿ. To the same purpose I quoted Hippolytus^o ; who plainly makes a manifestation to be the Son's generation ; as do also several others^p. Now certainly there is nothing amiss in supposing God the Son to have been manifested, in the proper season, by the will of the Father. I allow then that the Logos became a Son (according to Justin) by voluntary appointment : but I do not allow that he became God. The latter is what you are endeavouring to prove out of Justin. The passage which you insist principally upon is this, which I have explained in my Defence^q, and elsewhere^r. “ Who, according to his (the “ Father's) will, is both God, being his Son, and an angel also, “ as ministering to his will^s.” Upon which I observed that Christ is not here said to be God by the will of the Father ; though if it were, it might bear a good sense. For supposing that to be the case, Justin may mean no more than that the Son

^m Vol. i. p. 366, &c.

ⁿ Τότε γένεσιν αὐτοῦ λέγων γίνεσθαι τοῖς ἀνθρώποις, ἐξότου ἢ γνώσεως αὐτοῦ ἐμίλει γίνεσθαι. Just. Mart. Dial. p. 270.

Πρόντα ἤδη πρὶ τῶν αἰώνων ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς, ἐβουλήθη καὶ τῷ κόσμῳ γενῆσαι, ὃ δὴ ἐστὶ πρόσθεν ἀνοοούμενον γνωρίσαι. Method. apud Phot. Cod. 237. p. 960.

^o Ὁν λόγον ἔχων ἐν ἑαυτῷ, ἀόρατόν τε ὄντα, τῷ κτισμένῳ κόσμῳ ὄρατόν ποιεῖ, προτέραν φωνῆν φθεγγόμενος, καὶ φῶς ἐκ φωτὸς γεννῶν. Hippol. contr. Noët. cap. 10.

^p Cujus ex ore prodivit unigenitus Filius, cordis ejus nobilis inquilinus ; exinde visibilis effectus quia humanum genus visitaturus erat. Zen. Veronens.

Creata est ergo Sapientia, imo genita ; non sibi quæ semper erat, sed his quæ ab ea fieri oportebat. Pseud-Ambros. de Fid. cap. 2. p. 349.

Deus Filium non doloribus parturit sed virtutibus ease manifestat : nec præter se facit quod ex se est ; sed generat, dum quod in se est aperit, et revelat. De Patre processit Filius, non recessit : nec successurus Patri prodivit ex Patre, sed prodivit mansurus semper in Patre. Petr. Chrysol. Serm. lvii. p. 51.

^q Vol. i. p. 350.

^r Page 254 of this volume.

^s Τὸν κατὰ βουλὴν τὴν ἐκείνου καὶ Θεὸν ὄντα, υἱὸν αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἀγγελὸν ἐκ τοῦ ἰπηρετεῖν τῇ γνώμῃ αὐτοῦ. Dial. p. 370.

acted and appeared as God, with consent of the Father, who appointed him so to appear and act, being every way qualified for so doing, as being Son of God, and so really God. This sense the words may reasonably bear, were it certain that Justin applied the words κατὰ βουλήν to the first part of the sentence Θεὸν ὄντα. Or if this be not admitted, κατὰ βουλήν may mean no more than that the Son is God, and in perfect harmony with the Father; not an Anti-God, not set up in opposition to him: according to what Justin says elsewhere; ἀριθμῶ—ἕτερος, ἀλλὰ οὐ γνώμη^t, adding, that he never did any thing but what was perfectly agreeable to the will of the Father. Neither of these senses is any thing so improbable as yours, that the Son “was God by voluntary appointment:” which none of the other Fathers ever said or thought; nor has Justin any thing elsewhere to countenance such a notion. But besides what I have here pleaded, I further urged that the words did not necessarily require the application of κατὰ βουλήν to both the parts of the sentence singly: but I understood them thus; that it was the Father’s good pleasure that he who before was God, as being his Son, should now be God and Angel both, by the addition of the office. That he was one, was necessary; but that he should be both in one, this was a matter of voluntary appointment. In like manner it may be said to be by the Father’s good pleasure that he is Θεὸς and ἄνθρωπος together, or θεάνθρωπος. I do not yet see any thing, either in Justin’s words or in your comments upon them, that should move me to recede from this construction: however, I leave it to the learned to judge whether there be any thing harsh or unnatural in it.

You charge me, (p. 264,) with “self-contradiction,” for saying in a note^u, that though the Son was God as being a Son, and a Son κατὰ βουλήν, yet he was not God κατὰ βουλήν. You should have let the reader see what I had offered in the same place^u, to clear up and take off the pretended contradiction. Let us consider whether a few words may not set all right: he proceeded from (was not created by) the Father; therefore he is God. The procession makes him a Son, and is voluntary; but at the same time shews him to have been always God. For since he was not ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, was not created, but proceeded as a Son from the Father; therefore he is of the same nature with him, and God from all eternity. Wherefore, though he is a Son κατὰ βουλήν, and God because a Son, he is not God κατὰ βουλήν, which ^t Justin. Dial. p. 164. ^u Vol. i. p. 350. See also p. 255, 256 of this vol.

I asserted. And now where is the contradiction? Your objecting (p. 265,) that the supreme God could not minister as an angel, has been often answered: so we may dismiss such quibbling for the future. As to Christ being κύριος δυνάμεων by the Father's appointment, I have allowed it above, in Justin's sense; which comes not up to the sense of the Hebrew. As to the Father's being Lord of the Son, Justin explains it by his being Cause, or Fountain of the Son: in which all Catholics are agreed^x. You object that the generation (compared with one fire lighted from another) was yet δυνάμει καὶ βουλῇ αὐτοῦ. I do not well apprehend what you have been doing for a page and a half. You seem to think that I have somewhere denied the highest generation, spoken of by Justin, to be temporal; whereas I have constantly allowed it: and so you do not dispute against me.

The Son proceeded φῶς ἐκ φωτός, in time, according to Justin, and according to many more besides him; particularly Hippolytus, and perhaps even the Nicene Fathers. Well, but, then you will say, what becomes of what I call eternal generation? I answer, that before the procession the Λόγος was ἐν γαστρὶν, as Justin would have expressed it; in corde, pectore, utero, as others^z. And this is the same thing which Post-Nicene Fathers called eternal generation; viz. that eternal relation and reference which he had to the Father; in whom, and with whom, and of whom, he always was. So that there is still no more than a difference in words between Justin's doctrine of the generation and Athanasius's; for Athanasius owned the procession which Justin speaks of, as much as he.

You had cited a second passage from Justin; which, by your leaving out a material part of the sentence, was made to run thus: "He hath all these titles, viz. Son, Wisdom, Angel, God, Lord, and Word, from his being begotten of the Father by his will." The thing that offended me here was, to find angel brought in among the other names, as given him on account of his being begotten. For if this were the case, he would be an angel by nature, and not by office only; which is directly making a creature of him, suitably to your sense of begotten: and you will remember that you had produced this citation among others, to

^x Vid. Bull. D. F. sect. iv. cap. 2. p. 259.

^y Ἐκ γαστρὸς γεννηθῆναι. Just. Dial. p. 85.

^z Ἐν καρδίᾳ Θεοῦ. Theoph. Antioch. p. 129.

^z Cordis ejus nobilis inquilinus Zen. Veron.

Ex ore quamlibet Patris sis ortus, et verbo editus, tamen paterno in pectore sophia callebas prius. Prudent. Hymn. xi. p. 47.

prove that the Son was "brought into existence;" it is your very expression^a. I had therefore just reason to complain of your leaving out the words, from his ministering to his Father's will, which shewed the name angel to be a name of office, and gave a new turn to the whole sentence. The censure I passed upon your quoting so carelessly or partially was only this: "The account you give is such as must make one think either "that you never saw the book you mention, or else—" with a stroke: which you are pleased to call "wrathful" and "un-christian;" as it is natural for a man, when he is detected, to fly in the face of the calmest rebuke, and to give hard names. You now tell me, you had no design in the citation more than this; to shew that the Son was "begotten by the will of the "Father." Had that been all, you should have had no contradiction from me: for I had again and again allowed it to be Justin's doctrine. But if you did not design, you had really done more, in that partial citation; which I saw, at least, if you did not: and could I imagine you so unthinking, as not to perceive how the alteration was exactly fitted to your purpose? But as you best know what you intended, let it pass: only the more I allow to your good meaning, the less must be attributed to your sagacity. You proceed, in a very abusive manner, to misrepresent my words, and to throw dirt where you have very little occasion. You charge me with omitting a material word in a "marginal translation," (which yet you know was no translation;) and you intimate I know not what artifice in leaving out θελήσει, though it appears in the Greek; and I could not possibly have any ill design in the case, because I frankly admitted that the generation of the Son was θελήσει, by the will of the Father, and had no dispute with you on that head. But your warmth of temper here carried you too far: and you were resolved, it seems, not to be outdone in wrathful and unchristian expressions: at the same time not considering the difference between a just censure and an injurious calumny.

Tatian, who was Justin's scholar, may come next. I allow him to speak only of a temporal generation, or procession; in like manner as Justin. If you can do any thing here, it must be to prove that the Word was no more than an attribute, before the procession. But Bishop Bull^b is beforehand with you; having demonstrated the contrary. You have but little to say, and that scarce worth notice. You observe that Tatian says of the Word, that he was ἐν αὐτῷ, (not πρὸς αὐτὸν,) “ which shews, (as St. Basil argues against the Sabellians,) that by the Word is “ meant an internal power or property,” (p. 282.) But Basil was never so weak as to argue that ἐν αὐτῷ must necessarily denote an attribute; but only that πρὸς αὐτὸν is a stronger expression to signify personality; as I have also myself argued in another place^c: ἐν αὐτῷ may indifferently serve either for person or attribute: πρὸς αὐτὸν will not. When Christ says, “ I “ am in the Father, and the Father in me,” doth it follow that neither of them is a Person? There is therefore no force in your remark about ἐν αὐτῷ, more than this; that the Λόγος in Tatian might be an attribute agreeably enough to that expression, were there not other very convincing reasons to the contrary.

^a Collection of Queries, p. 51. ^b Bull. D.F.N. sect. iii. cap. 6. p. 209.

The words of Tatian (θελήματι τῆς ἀπλότητος αὐτοῦ προπηδᾷ ὁ Λόγος) you have rendered two several ways, and both of them wrong. The first you have, (p. 110.) “ By the simple efficiency “ of his will, this Reason, or Word, proceeded forth:” where I complain of your putting in “ efficiency” to serve your hypothesis. The second is, (p. 270.) “ The Word proceeded from the “ simple will of the Father:” where I complain of the words “ from the simple will,” to intimate to the English reader, as if nothing but a simple act of the will was concerned in that matter. Let the words appear as they lie in the author, without the mean artifice of giving them a false turn. “ By the will “ of his simplicity the Word proceeded forth.”

I admit the same thing of Athenagoras as of Justin and Tatian, that he speaks of no higher generation than the procession: yet he believed the existence, the eternal and necessary existence of the Λόγος, as before proved. Here you can have no pretence, except it be to imagine that the Λόγος was an attribute only, before the procession; as to which, Bishop Bull^d has effectually prevented you: and as to what little observations you had to make, I have replied to them above.

Theophilus comes under the same predicament with the three writers before mentioned. You have something to except against Bishop Bull's reasons^e for Theophilus's believing the Son to be a real Person before the procession. His reasons were these:

1. That very Logos which had been from all eternity ἐνδιάθετος ἐν καρδίᾳ, becomes afterwards προφορικός^f. If therefore he was ever a Person, (as is not doubted,) he must have always been so.

^c Page 34 of this vol. ^d Bull. D.F. sect. iii. cap. 5. ^e Ibid. cap. 7. p. 215.

^f Τοῦτον τὸν λόγον ἐγέννησε προφορικός. Theoph. p. 129.

2 The Λόγος who spake to the prophets, and was then undoubtedly a Person, was the same individual Λόγος which was always with the Father ὁ ἀεὶ συμπάρων αὐτῷ ε.

3. He was the Father's Counsellor, σύμβουλος, before the procession; and therefore a Person.

4. He is said to have been with him, and to have conversed with him, which are personal characters.

5. Even after the procession, he is still supposed to be perpetually (διαπαντὸς) in the heart of the Father; not separate from him, but exerting himself, ad extra, in the work of the creation; which is the meaning of procession, and becoming προφορικὸς.

6. Theophilus goes upon the same principles with Athenagoras, Tatian, and others; whatever therefore could be pleaded for those writers, in the case, would be at the same time pleading for Theophilus.

You pass over all those reasons, except the third and fourth; though Bishop Bull^h principally insists upon the first and second. And what you have to say, (p. 116,) to the third and fourth, reaches only the fourth. For Bishop Bull had allowed, that sometimes, in common speech, (such as Tatian sometimes uses,) a person may be said to be with himself. But he allowed not that a person might be said to be counsellor to himself, in the manner Theophilus speaks: besides that though sometimes, and improperly, a person may be said to be with himself; yet more generally, being with, denotes two persons, as in John i. 1. It may therefore be used as an argument which in the main is right and good, though admitting of some few particular exceptions.

I had almost slipped over your 284th page, where you say, that "that generation, before which the person generated was every thing he could be after it, is no generation." But it is undoubtedly what those writers, and many after them, call generation: and therefore this is disputing not against me, but them. However, though the Logos was the same essentially before and after the generation, he was not the same in respect of operation, or manifestation, and outward economy: which is what these Fathers meant.

Tertullian goes upon the same hypothesis, in the main, with those before mentioned; and so need not have any distinct consideration: he has been before vindicated at large.

^g Theoph. p. 81, 82.

^h Bull. D. F. p. 216, 217.

Clemens of Alexandria, whom I should have mentioned before, may be likewise allowed to speak of the procession. And when he says the Word sprang, or arose, ἐκ τῆς πατρικῆς βουλήσεως, from the will of the Father, it is plainly intended of his being sent out to mankind, as observed above, (p. 453.) Though I am of opinion that Clemens there means the same that other Fathers have expressed by ἐκ καρδίας, or ἐκ γαστρὸς, and might be rightly rendered in St. John's phrase, from the bosom of the Father, John i. 18.

Irenæus comes not under our inquiry, having said little either of eternal or temporal generation. Only from what hints we can gather, he seems to have asserted eternal generation^k. And you cannot shew that he has said any thing of its being by the will of the Father.

Hippolytus was undoubtedly in the hypothesis of the temporal generation, or procession. And if you can shew that the Λόγος, before that procession, was an attribute only, according to him, you will then take that writer from us. You do endeavour it, p. 119. Bishop Bull^l had observed, and^m I after him, that Hippolytus supposes God, before the procession, to have been one; and many, because he had the Son and Holy Spirit in him and with himⁿ. You say, "that learned Prelate seems not to have sufficiently considered," that (by the same reasoning) the power also, and the counsel mentioned in the same sentence must have been persons. But that learned Prelate, having a judgment equal to his learning, was used to consider things with great exactness; and was not so prone to mistake as those that too hastily pass their censure upon him. You have not considered (though I gave notice of it^o) that the words ἄλογος, ἄσοφος, ἀδύνατος, ἀβούλευτος, correspond to λόγος, σοφία, δύναμις, and βουλή, names of the Son and Spirit, and all so applied, except βουλή, (for which θέλημα is used, cap. 23,) in that very treatise. And Hippolytus speaks there just in the same way as many other both Post-Nicene and Ante-Nicene Fathers do upon the same subject; several testimonies whereof may be seen in a note ⁱ Clemens Alex. p. 86.

^k See my Defence, vol. i. p. 353.

^l Bull. D. F. sect. iii. cap. 8. p. 219.

^m Defence, vol. i. p. 360, &c.

ⁿ Αὐτὸς δὲ μόνος ὢν, πολλὸς ἦν, οὗτε γὰρ ἄλογος, οὗτε ἄσοφος, οὗτε ἀδύνατος, οὗτε ἀβούλευτος ἦν. Hipp. contr. Noët. p. 13.

Compare this of Gregory Nazianz.

Οὐ γὰρ ἦν ὅτε ἄλογος ἦν, οὐδὲ ἦν ὅτε οὐ πατήρ, οὐδὲ ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἀληθῆς, ἢ ἄσοφος, ἢ ἀδύνατος, ἢ ζωῆς ἐνδεής, ἢ λαμπρότητος, ἢ ἀγαθότητος. Orat. xxxv. p. 574.

^o Defence, vol. i. p. 360.

elsewhere^p; and their sense vindicated from such exceptions as you have made to it. You add further, that the Bishop “did not observe that it is the one unbegotten God, even the Father, “who is here said to be many.” I know not why you pretend the Bishop did not observe what nobody can doubt of: nor do I see of what service the observation can be to you or your cause. Allowing you that by μόνος is meant the Father, who was many, and the τὸ πᾶν: still it was the Father considered in the comprehensive way, as a head of a family containing all; in such a sense as I have explained above^q. It was not Hippolytus's way to exclude or separate from the alone God and Father, what was essential to him, and contained in him; his Logos, or his σοφία, his own mind, (voûs), which is the name he gives to the Son, thereby expressing his inseparable union and coexistence.

Origen, our next writer, I cited ^rfor eternal generation: to which you have little to object, beyond what I have answered to above. If that passage is to be depended on which you cite (p. 272.) from Huetius's Origeniana; then Origen has asserted, besides the eternal generation, the προέλευσις also.

Novatian I also considered at large^s, which you pass slightly over. Dionysius of Alexandria, and the other Dionysius of Rome, I also brought ^tas evidences for eternal generation: whom you let pass without ever a word, of any weight or moment.

Methodius^u was another voucher for the same doctrine: which you do not, cannot gainsay. Only you endeavour to confront his known, certain, and genuine doctrine, with a spurious passage out of his Symposion: a piece very much corrupted and adulterated in the judgment of Photius, as Bishop Bull had observed^x, and you take no notice.

Pamphilus I also cited for the same doctrine; and also Alexander of Alexandria, to whom you have some little exceptions, which I have answered above, and which are perfectly foreign to the present question.

Eusebius I did not cite, because some just exceptions may be made to him; and there is no reconciling him perfectly with himself, at different times. This you must know; and yet, very deceitfully, you “conclude,” as you say, (p. 273,) “the Ante-Nicene writers on this head, with the judgment of the learned

^p Sermon VII. p. 149, &c. of this volume.

^q P. 430, &c. 451, &c.

^r Defence, vol. i. p. 353.

^s Ibid. vol. i. p. 354.

^t Ibid. p. 357.

^u Ibid. p. 357. See also my Reply to Dr. Whitby, p. 221, &c. of this volume.

^x Bull. Def. p. 166.

“ Eusebius, which may justly be esteemed to be the true sense of “ the ancients before him :” producing a passage from his Demonstratio Evangelica, wrote before the Council of Nice, and before he had well considered the subject, and corrected in some material points afterwards, as I have observed above, p. 500.

And now we are come down to the Arian times ; in which Dr. Clarke and you think you have found something to your purpose ; artificially tacking together testimonies of several kinds, some Catholic, some Arian, and some doubtful : of which in their order, that I may fully clear the point I am now upon. But before I come to these testimonies, I must strike out a little into history, to give the reader a clearer notion of what we are about.

I have elsewhere^y given a brief account of an argument which the Arians made use of to prove the Son of God a creature. They argued that the Father must produce his Son either volens, willingly, (by which they understood free choice,) or nolens, against his will, which in Greek they expressed by φυσική ανάγκη, meaning what we should now call extrinsic necessity. The argument is much the same with what Dr. Clarke urges in these words : “ Whatever proceeds from any being otherwise than by “ the will of that being, doth not in truth proceed from that “ being, but from some other cause or necessity, extrinsic to and “ independent of that being^z.” And in another place^a, “ What- “ ever is caused by an intelligent being, is caused by the will of “ that being ; otherwise it is not (in truth and reality) caused “ by that being at all, but by some superior cause, be it necessity, “ or fate, or whatever it be, &c.”

This was the old Arian argument, and that was their sense of necessity, or φυσική ανάγκη : which I shall prove by plain testimonies beyond contradiction. Athanasius may be first cited, who writes thus^b : “ They have another way of saying the Son “ is a creature, by pretending will, and arguing thus : if he did “ not exist by will, then God had a Son by necessity, and unwil- “ lingly. But who is it, you miscreants, that imposes necessity “ upon him ?”

^y Defence, vol. i. p. 347, &c.

^z Clarke's Reply, p. 227.

^a Ibid. p. 113.

^b Ἄλλως πάλιν κτίσμα λέγουσιν αὐτὸν εἶναι, βούλησιν προβαλλόμενοι, καὶ λέγοντες, εἰ μὴ βουλήσει γέγονεν, οὐκοῦν ἀνάγκη, καὶ μὴ θέλων ἔσχεν ὁ Θεὸς υἱόν. Καὶ τίς ὁ τὴν ἀνάγκην ἐπιβαλὼν αὐτῷ, ποιηρότατος ; &c. Athan. p. 610.—ἀντίκειται τῇ βουλήσει τὸ παρά γνώμη, p. 611. ἰστοπὸν ἐστὶ λέγειν ἐπὶ Θεοῦ ἀνάγκην.

Epiphanius represents it thus^c: “They object that he begat the Son willingly or unwillingly: and if we say unwillingly, “then the divine nature is forced by necessity, and not by freedom of will.” He concludes that the generation was neither willingly nor unwillingly, but naturally.

St. Ambrose^d, St. Austin^e, and others^f, represent the same cavil of the Arians much in the same way; which being once well understood, we may easily deal with your pretended authorities. The first is of the Council of Sirmium in the year 351, which condemned Photinus. It is to be noted, in the first place, that this Synod of Sirmium was made up mostly of men of suspected faith, Arians or Semi-Arians: and though they did well in condemning Photinus, and though Hilary laboured much in putting the best construction possible upon their confession and anathemas; yet Athanasius and others rank them in the class of Arians; and it is certain they stand not perfectly clear in their character against some very just and weighty objections. M. Tillemont says of them, that “they were the declared enemies of the Church, the same Eusebians who had been condemned in the Council of Sardica:” and it seems that Hilary himself, who had once judged very kindly and candidly of them, saw reason afterwards to alter his sentiments^h. Having now some notion of the men, let us next see what they say, in relation to our present point:

“If any one say that the Son was begotten, and the Father not willing, let him be anathema. For the Father did not beget the Son, as being constrained, or impelled by a physical necessity, as not willing; but he at once willed and produced

^c Θέλων οὖν ἐγέννησεν ἢ μὴ θέλων; ἐὰν εἴπωμεν μὴ θέλων ἀνάγκη περιβάλλομεν τὸ θεῖον—καὶ ἐὰν εἴπωμεν ὅτι οὐ θέλων ἐγέννησεν ἄρα ἀνάγκη φύσεως ἦκται τὸ θεῖον, καὶ οὐκ ἐλευθεριότητι θελήματος. Epirh. Ancor. cap. li. p. 55.

Ὅτε θέλων τοῖνυν ἐγέννησε, ὅτε μὴ θέλων, ἀλλ' ὑπερβολῇ φύσεως ὑπερβαίνει γὰρ ἡ θεία φύσις βουλήν—ὅτε ἀνάγκη ἄγεται. Epirh. ibid.

^d Subtexunt aliam impietatem, proponentes utrum volens, an invitus generaverit Pater—Sed nihil in sempiterna generatione præcedit, nec velle nec nolle: ergo nec invitum dixerim nec volentem—non generat ex voluntate, aut necessitate Pater, sed super utrumque, hoc est natura. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. cap. 9. p. 540.

^e Interrogant (Ariani) utrum Pater Filium volens, an volens genuerit. August. contr. Serm. Arian. p. 626.

^f Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. xxxv. p. 565, 566. Cyrril. Alex. Thesaur. p. 50, 52.

^g Tillemont, History of Arians, p. 144. a book which I would particularly commend to the perusal of the English readers, to give them a just notion both of ancient and modern Arianism.

^h See Tillemont, p. 145.

“him from himself, begetting him without time, and without “suffering any thingⁱ.”

The expressions here are cautious and guarded: and though perhaps the men had something more in their hearts than they were willing to utter; yet as they have explained the Father's willing the generation in opposition only to his being forced, βιασθείς, and (ἀχθείς) impelled; their doctrine may pass. And so Hilary putting the mildest and most candid construction upon it, explained it to mean only that the generation was not volente Patre, against the will of the Father. And his comment upon ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης φυσικῆς ἀχθείς, is nec coacta imperio naturalis legis essentia est; his essence was not compelled by the command of a natural law.

You ask me, (p. 257,) “whether the persons censured by “the Council of Sirmium, or any others, ever were so stupidly “senseless, as to think any thing that is necessary, to be therefore “against the will of God, as well as without it?” To which I answer, that the Arians (whether stupidly or maliciously I know not) so interpreted the Catholic sense of natural and eternal generation; allowing no medium between free choice and such compulsive necessity^k. And there is one Dr. Clarke, who at this day (whether stupidly or otherwise I know not) charges the same doctrine with the same consequence, (as I have shewn,) allowing no medium in this case, between what he calls will, and extrinsic necessity. You ask, “if God be omnipresent by outward coercion, “or against his will, because not by it?” I like your argument very well: please to apply it to what I have quoted above from Dr. Clarke: it may serve as an answer to him, in respect of necessary generation. You are here arguing for me, and happen not to know it. You ask again, “Is not he omnipresent by “φυσικὴ ἀνάγκη, necessity of nature?” He is omnipresent by necessity of nature, in the modern sense of the phrase: but φυσικῇ ⁱ Ἐἴ τις μὴ θελήσαντος τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθῆναι λέγοι τὸν υἱὸν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω· οὐ γὰρ βιασθείς ὁ πατήρ ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης φυσικῆς ἀχθείς, ὡς οὐκ ἠθέληεν ἐγέννησε τὸν υἱόν· ἀλλ’ ἅμα τ’ ἐβουλήθη καὶ ἀχρόνως καὶ ἀπαθῶς ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ αὐτὸν γεννήσας ἀπέδειξε. Socrat. Hist. Eccl. lib. ii. cap. 30. p. 126. Athan. de Synod. p. 744.

Si quis nolente Patre natum dicat Filium, anathema sit: non enim nolente Patre coactus Pater, vel naturali necessitate ductus, cum nollet, genuit Filium; sed mox voluit sine tempore, et impassibiliter ex se eum genitum demonstravit. Hilar. p. 1184.

^k To the testimonies before cited, I shall add one more, a very full and plain one, from the eighth anathema of an Arian council: in the year 344 or 345.

Τοὺς οὐ βουλήσει οὐδὲ θελήσει γεννηθῆναι τὸν υἱὸν εἰρηκότας ἀνευλαβῶς, ἀνάγκην δὲ δηλονότι ἀβούλητον καὶ ἀπροαίρετον περιτεθεικότας τῷ Θεῷ, ἰνα ἅκων γενήσῃ τὸν υἱὸν, δυσσεβητάτους καὶ τῆς ἐκκλησίας ἕνεος ἐπιγινώσκωμεν. Apud Athanas. tom. i. p. 740.

ἀνάγκη never stood for what we call, in this case, necessity of nature. I know not whether there be one instance of it in all antiquity: I have not yet met with any, no, nor of the word necessity so applied. Certain however it is, that in the places which we are now concerned with, φυσικὴ ἀνάγκη had no such meaning, but that only which I have given. You go on arguing and reasoning, what necessity of nature must signify: which is only talking without book, and guessing what words anciently meant, without consulting the ancients to know the fact. But at length you come to argue somewhat more like a scholar: you observe the opposition made by ἐβουλήθη on the one side, and ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης φυσικῆς ἀχθεῖς on the other. That is well urged: but observe also, βιασθεῖς ὁ Πατήρ. Can any words be stronger? This determines φυσικὴ ἀνάγκη to the sense I am pleading for; and therefore ἐβουλήθη is rather to be interpreted by its opposition to this. So Hilary interprets it, and construes ὡς οὐκ ἤθελεν, cum nollet. But I will frankly tell you what my opinion is, which I ground chiefly upon the consideration of the men concerned in that Council, that they really meant by ἐβουλήθη what you say, and yet by φυσικὴ ἀνάγκη what I say; admitting no medium, any more than Dr. Clarke has done in this case, between necessity in the hard compulsive sense, and free choice: and perhaps they intended, obliquely, to charge the Athanasian doctrine (as the Arians used to do) with that hard necessity, just as Dr. Clarke has been pleased to charge it as a consequence upon ours. Thus, I think, we may fairly compromise the dispute about the Sirmian Synod.

You next mention the Council of Sardica, meaning the false Sardican Council, or Synod of Philippopolis, in the year 347: which condemned Athanasius, Hosius, Julius; as they themselves had been condemned by the true Sardican Council.

Hilary¹ bestowed the same kind pains here that he used afterwards with the decrees of the Sirmian Synod, to interpret their confession to a Catholic sense. And coming to the words, ex voluntate et consilio, he understands them, not in the sense of free choice, but in opposition to corporalis passio, corporal passion, that is, extrinsic necessity. However, I am persuaded (knowing the men) that Hilary was too kind in his construction; though with a good design, hoping by condescending towards the weak, to reduce them, by degrees, and to gain them over to the true and sound faith. He was forced to apologize afterwards for his good-natured and well-meant endeavours; which had rendered him suspected with some that were zealous for the Catholic faith.

¹ Hilarius de Synod. p. 1172.

But let us now come to some better instances than such as you have brought me from suspected synods. Sure you do not expect I should take notice of the Arian Council of Antioch. What if they condemned some Arian tenets? Has it not been common for Arians, being ashamed of their leader, to condemn some of his tenets in words, at the same time professing the same things in other terms? Give me authorities from men of steady principles, known Catholics, and not from known Arians. You do pretend to three such, Marius Victorinus, Basil, and Gregory Nyssen. Let us examine them.

Marius Victorinus says, that the generation "was not by necessity of nature, but by the will of the Father's Majesty^m." Such are his words: but when you inquire what he meant by will, and what by necessity, he is directly against you. Will is with that writer a name for any natural power, or for God himselfⁿ; so that generation by will comes to the same with generation by nature, which is what we now call necessary generation: and it is plain, that he understood by necessity, extrinsic necessity, as opposed to intrinsic nature. What is this to your purpose? Whoever will be at the pains to search into the sentiments of so obscure and perplexed a writer, (whom I am not very fond of quoting,) will perceive thus much at least, all the way through him, that he believed the substance of the Father and Son to be equally necessarily existing. I shall content myself with a few references^o.

Basil is also quoted by Dr. Clarke, as saying that the Father begat his Son, having his "power concurrent with his will;"

^m Est autem lumini et spiritui imago, non a necessitate naturæ, sed voluntate magnitudinis Patris. Ipse enim seipsum circumterminavit, &c. Filius ergo in Patre imago, et forma, et λόγος, et voluntas Patris — Sic igitur voluntate Patris voluntas apparuit ipse λόγος, Filius. Mar. Victor. lib. i. adv. Arium, p. 188. Basil. ed.

ⁿ A se movens Pater, a sese generans Filius, sed potentia patris sese generans Filius; voluntas enim Filius, unde enim si ipsa voluntas non est a sese generans, nec voluntas est: sed quoniam Dei est voluntas, equidem ipsa, quæ sit generans, generatur in Deo. Et ideo Deus Pater, voluntas Filius, unum utrumque, &c. Ibid. p. 188.

^o Una eademque substantia, vi pari, eademque potentia, majestate, virtute: nullum alteri prius, nisi quod causa est alterum alterius, p. 224.

Una eademque substantia, et simul, et semper: hoc est enim ὁμοούσιον ὁμοούσιαν ἔχον, simul substantiam habens, paremque existendi vim atque virtutem, eandemque substantiæ naturam, &c. p. 225. Vid. p. 227, 234.

and that the Son springs from the Father's goodness ^p. If the design be to deceive the populace with the sound of words, there may be some use in such quotations. But such things ought not to be offered either to scholars or by scholars. Who knows not that Basil is as express as possible for the necessary existence of God the Son; and directly denies and confutes the very thing for which you are pleading? "Will you not cease, you impious wretch," (says he to Eunomius, who was pleading the same cause that you now are,) "to speak of his not existing, who exists necessarily, who is the Fountain of Life; who gave being to all things that are?" I render τὸν ὄντως ὄντα, necessarily existing, because it always signifies the same with what we express by that word. Again, speaking of the Eunomians, he says, "They blaspheme in pretending to say, the Son of God ever was not; as if he did not exist by his own nature, but was brought into being by the favour of God ^r." What is this, but directly and flatly denying the very thing which you are contending for? Against which you set an obscure passage or two, which mean nothing of what you intend by them. As to Basil's first expression, of the Father's having his power concurrent with his will, it signifies only, that his will and his nature are the same, coeval with each other, and equally necessary in this case. Cyril of Alexandria thus expresses the same thought, something more distinctly than Basil.

"It were superfluous and silly to imagine the Father to be a Father either unwillingly or willingly; but rather naturally and essentially. For he is not unwillingly whatever he is naturally: having the will to be what he is, concurring with the nature ^s."

He means that the will and the nature are both together coeval and coeternal: in like manner as God always was what he would be, and always would be what he was. The like thought ^p Ὁ Θεὸς σύνδρομον ἔχων τῇ βουλήσει τὴν δύναμιν, ἐγέννησεν ἄξιον ἑαυτοῦ· ἐγέννησεν ὡς αὐτὸς οἶδεν. Basil. Hom. xxix. p. 624.

Φῶς εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν γεννητὸν, ἐκ τοῦ ἀγεννήτου φωτὸς ἀπολάμψαντα, καὶ αὐτοζωῆν, καὶ αὐτοάγαθον ἐκ τῆς ζωοποιου πηγῆς, τῆς πατρικῆς ἀγαθότητος. Contr. Eunom. lib. ii. p. 66.

^q Οὐ πάσῃ μὴ ὄντα προσαγορεύων, ὡς ἄθεε, τὸν ὄντως ὄντα, τὴν πηγὴν τῆς ζωῆς, τὸν πᾶσι τοῖς οὐσι τοῦ εἶναι παρεκτικόν. Basil. contr. Eun. ii. p. 56.

^r Μὴ εἶναι ποτε τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ βλασφημοῦντες, ὡς τῇ μὲν ἑαυτοῦ φύσει μὴ ὄντα, χάριτι δὲ εἰς τὸ εἶναι ὑπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ παραχθέντα. Ibid. p. 57.

^s Περιττὸν ἂν εἶη καὶ ἀμαθῆς, τὸ γούνη ἀνεβελήτως, ἢ θελητῶς γεννήτορα ὑπάρχειν οἰεσθαι τὸν πατέρα, φύσει δὲ μάλλον καὶ οὐσιωδῶς· ἔστι γὰρ οὐκ ἀνεβελήτως ἔστι φυσικῶς, σύνδρομον ἔχων τῇ φύσει τὴν θέλησιν τοῦ εἶναι ἃ ἔστι. Cyrrill. Dial. ii. de Trin. p. 456.

we have before seen in Lactantius^t. Here is nothing in this that at all favours your principles.

As to the second citation from Basil, the passage itself leads to the meaning. He there styles the Son αὐτογάθον, essentially good, as proceeding from the Fountain of essential Goodness, that is, from the Father himself: which is no more than saying, that he is Goodness of Goodness, in like manner as God of God.

Come we now to Gregory Nyssen, where the reader will admire at Dr. Clarke's pretences and yours upon this head; unless you take up passages at second-hand, without ever looking into the author themselves. The words you have first pitched upon are these^u:

“For neither doth that immediate connection between the “Father and the Son exclude the will of the Father, as if he had “the Son by some necessity of nature, without his will: neither “does the will divide the Son from the Father, so as to make “any distance betwixt them.”

Thus far Dr. Clarke quoted; shaping his translation, with little hints and parentheses, as near as he well could, to his own sense; however opposite to the author's. Let Gregory go on: “Let us neither exclude from our notion the Father's will about “the Son, as if it were straitened (or burdened) in the connection “of the Son's unity with the Father; neither let us dissolve the “immediate connection by considering the will in the genera- “tion.” Gregory proceeds to tell us, that to will what is good is essential to, and inseparable from the nature; as also to enjoy the thing willed, and that it cannot possibly be conceived without it. He further illustrates his meaning by the instance of ^t Ex seipso est, et ideo talis est quem se esse voluit. Lactant. Inst. lib. ii. cap. 8. p. 161.

Plotinus, before any of them, speaking of God, says that his will was concurring with his existence: and he and his will are the same.

Σύνδρομος αὐτὸς ἑαυτῷ θέλων αὐτὸς εἶναι, καὶ τοῦτο ὧν ὅπερ θέλει, καὶ ἡ θέλησις καὶ αὐτὸς ἐν. Plotin. Enn. vi. lib. viii. cap. 13.

Τὸ εἶναι ἀγαθὸς τε καὶ ἐλεῆμων, ἔχει μὲν, οὐκ ἐκ βουλήσεως δὲ οὔτε μὲν ἀβουλήτως ταῦτά ἐστι· θέλει γὰρ εἶναι τοῦτο ὅπερ ἐστὶν αἰεὶ, καὶ ἔσται οὕτω. Cyrl. Thes. p. 56.

Οὐ μὲν ἀβουλήτως καὶ ἀθελήτως ἐστὶν ἀγαθὸς· ὁ γὰρ ἐστὶ, τοῦτο καὶ θελή-τόν ἐστιν αὐτῷ. Athan. Orat. iii. p. 615.

^u Ὅτε γὰρ ἡ ἄμεσος αὐτῆ συνάφεια ἐκβάλλει τὴν βούλησιν τοῦ πατρὸς, ὡς κατὰ τινα φύσεως ἀνάγκην ἀπροαιρέτως τὸν υἱὸν ἐσχηκότος· οὔτε ἡ βούλησις διίστημι τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν υἱὸν, ὡς τι διάστημα μεταξύ παρεμπύπτουσα, ὡς μήτε ἐκβάλλει τοῦ δόγματος τὴν ἐπὶ τῷ υἱῷ βούλησιν τοῦ γεννήσαντος, οἷα στενοχωρουμένην ἐν τῇ συναφείᾳ τῆς τοῦ υἱοῦ πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ἐνότητος, μήτε μὴν τὴν ἀδιάστατον διαλεύειν συνάφειαν, ὅταν ἐνθεωρηται τῇ γεννήσει βούλησις. Greg. Nyss. Orat. vii. contr. Eumom. p. 206.

fire, and light streaming from it; that if the fire be imagined to have reason and will, it would choose or will to send forth its streams of light, according to its nature, with more to that purpose.

From hence it is manifest, that Gregory intended no more by will than we mean when we say God wills his own existence, or is what he would choose to be. Whether this be a proper sense of will is not the question: but it was Gregory's sense. And it is plain he does not mean by φυσικὴ ἀνάγκη necessity of nature in the modern sense, but such a necessity as lays a restraint or burden upon the *will, would be an imperfection, or a pain and uneasiness to the person. I might shew this further by many and express proofs of the necessary existence of God the Son, occurring in this very treatise, too tedious to recite at length: I must refer to some in the margin †.

Now for a word or two of St. Austin; and then we may shut up our inquiries into the sense of the ancients on this head. You tell me of a childish quibble of St. Austin's, (p. 255.) I gave the reader, in the Appendix to my Defence, an account of what Dr. Clarke and you call a "childish quibble:" by which it may sufficiently appear that the childishness is none of St. Austin's. It is no commendation of your discretion to revive the memory of a thing which can serve to no purpose, except it be to expose your unacquaintedness with antiquity. You pretend to tell me, that I "repeat the same quibble in my Appendix, without attempting to answer the Doctor's reasoning." But the design of my Appendix was to shew that the Doctor had committed an error, in supposing that St. Austin was making an answer to such testimonies as the Doctor had produced; when he was answering nothing but a mean quibble of the Arians about volens volens. As the Doctor had there made a slip, for want of knowing or considering what St. Austin had been doing, and upon what occasion he had said what he did; for the Doctor's credit, you should have let it drop, and have said no more of it. The

* In such a sense Gregory uses the phrase elsewhere:

Ὁ δὲ ἀνάγκη φύσεως ὑπεξευμένος ἐνεργεῖ διὰ παντός, μᾶλλον δὲ πάσχει τὴν ὑπακοήν· οὐδὲ εἰ μὴ βούλοιο τοῦτο ποιεῖν συγχωροῦσης τῆς φύσεως. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eun. lib. i. p. 44. Paris. Vid. p. 49, 292.

Ἀνάγκη φυσικὴ is constantly spoken of as an imperfection, or mark of subjection or servitude: for which reason it was not thought applicable to God.

Naturæ necessitas used in that low sense by Hilary, p. 976, 986, 1116, 1117.

† Θεός—κατὰ φύσιν, p. 1. τοῦ ὄντος ὄντος, understood of all the three Persons, p. 3. ἀεὶ ὄντος ὅπερ ἐστίν, of the Son, p. 4. φύσει ὦν Θεός· ὁ ὦν, p. 9. ὄντως ὄντα, p. 205, 272.

colour you would now give to it is, that my answer to what was objected of the Son's being generated by will was out of St. Austin: which is only heaping mistake upon mistake, and defending one error by another. Look again into my Defence, (vol. i. p. 347, &c.) and you will find I was shewing how necessary emanation might be and had been understood, consistent with will. St. Austin came in by the bye indeed, but he was not cited as admitting either volens or volens in the case; but as one who had contented himself with retorting the objection of the Arians upon themselves. I therefore passed on (p. 348.) to others, who had allowed the generation to be by will, and I intimated in what sense they allowed it: not in any such sense as Dr. Clarke intended, though he cited those very men (Marius Victorinus, Basil, and Gregory Nyssen) as favouring his doctrine. He should not have opposed will to necessary generation, when citing men that asserted both; and who understood by will a quite different thing from what he did. This was my answer with respect to citations of that kind. But as to other authorities from Justin Martyr, &c. I allowed will to be taken in the Doctor's sense: and my answer there was, that they intended it only of the προέλευσις, not of the eternal generation.

Upon my saying in my Defence, (vol. i. p. 347,) that you could not but have apprehended my meaning, about the difference between will and arbitrary will, had you retained in mind what you must have observed in the reading of the ancients; I say, upon this you remark, that those ancients were really "moderns," (p. 259,) and that I often "express myself in this ambiguous "and unfair manner." Yet you yourself take the liberty of calling the very same writers, and those of the same age, "ancient writers:" such as the Sirmian Council, Hilary, Basil, Marius Victorinus, and Gregory Nyssen; to whom Dr. Clarke had appealed in his Scripture Doctrine². It was to obviate those testimonies that I referred you to the writers of that time, calling them ancients; as you yourself have since done twice together, (p. 256, 257.) So easy is it to condemn another, and to do the same thing yourself. It seems they are ancients with you, while they furnish you with objections: but when the same writers, or their contemporaries, afford solutions also, then they become moderns. But to return.

The sum then of what hath been said is this: all the Fathers believed the necessary existence of God the Son: I have proved it of several, and might have done it of more, were it necessary. But the material thing was to take off the objection of the voluntary generation. I have done it, by distinguishing between those that asserted only a temporal generation, (where I allow will to be understood in the strict sense,) and those that asserted eternal. As to the latter, none of them ever allowed generation to be by will, in your sense of the word. They sometimes admit it in the sense of approbation, and they always reject necessity of nature; meaning by it extrinsic force, fate, or coercion, never what we now understand by it when applied to God.

² Part ii. sect. 17.

Having thus cleared the main point, it remains only to take some notice of a few incidental objections you have made; which could not before be brought in, without breaking my method and disturbing the connection.

You object, (p. 253,) that if this be the case, that the Son necessarily exists; then he is self-existent: that “if the sun were self-existent, so also would be its rays; if a tree, so also its branches:—the same thing partially considered:—derivation, origination, causality, generation, in such a case are figurative, improper expressions.”

By this then I perceive I have been doing nothing in searching antiquity: you have some maxims to yourself that must overrule all authorities. I shall answer you what I think sufficient. 1. Allowing your plea, the consequence then is, that the Son is self-existent as well as the Father: we change the name, but retain the thing. And now we shall challenge you to prove either from Scripture or antiquity, that the Son is not self-existent; provided you keep steadily to what you have said, that whatever is necessary is also self-existent. If this maxim be certain, then the Son is self-existent, though referred up to another, and I have proved it in proving his necessary existence.

But, 2, I answer, you appear a little too late to be a corrector of the language of all the ancients, philosophers and divines. They have constantly distinguished the ideas; and wherever there is a difference of ideas, there is a reason for assigning different names. Who does not see that the question whence a thing is, and the question what it is, are very different questions? Or that immutably existing, and existing under this or that relation, as a father, or as a son, are quite different things? And though we do not say that Father and Son are the same thing partially considered, where there are no parts: yet we admit them to be the same substance diversely considered, under distinct relations and personalities.

You refer me (p. 251.) to Modest Plea, p. 173. where I find it objected, that “if generation were necessary, there would be “no limitation to the number of Persons.” Yes, the number will be limited to so many as are necessary: and no more can be necessary than there are found, in fact, to exist.

It is further objected, that “in Scripture, the begetting of “the Son is always mentioned as an act of the Father; and an “act cannot be necessary.” But shew me that Scripture ever makes it an act, in your sense. I have heard of begotten, I never read that it was a voluntary act, a matter of choice; which is your sense of act. Scripture represents it by the relation of thought to mind^a, or by the ἀπαύγασμα, the shining forth of light^b from the luminous fountain: and so does all antiquity. This answers to the old sense of begetting^c and acting: but do not invent novel senses of them, and still pretend Scripture and antiquity. In your new sense of begetting and acting, there is no proof either in Scripture or antiquity, that the Father begat or acted: and now what have you done but altered names, and left things as before? Was there ever truer pedantry about words? You may call generation, in our sense, metaphorical, if you please; though you have no reason to give, why it is not proper: but when you have done, shew, if you can, that this metaphorical sense was not the true and only sense wherein it was understood both by Scripture and antiquity.

You object, that my “distinction between will and arbitrary will is elusive and equivocating.” But I pray excuse it for the Doctor’s sake; who makes the same distinction^d, in other words, between will of approbation and will of choice; which is all that I mean.

You object, that the doctrine of “necessary emanations was “Gnostic and Valentinian:” which you can never prove. But I must remind you that Athanasius charged upon the Arians two things as Gnostic and Valentinian, which undoubtedly are so:

^a See my Sermons, p. 31. of this vol.

^b Ibid. p. 104.

^c Λόγον γεννώμεν. Just. M. Dial. 183.

Nec dubitaverim Filium dicere et radicis fruticem, et fontis fluvium, et solis radium; quia omnis origo parens est, et omne quod ex origine profertur progenies est.

Γενῶ μὲν οὖν καὶ ὁ ἥλιος τὴν αὐγήν. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. i. cap. 12.

Lux splendorem generat. Ambros. de Fid. p. 540.

Ἀπαύγασμα γενῶται. Basil. contr. Eun. p. 89.

^d Scripture Doctrine, p. 248. ed. 2.

one was their bringing in θέλημα^e, will, between the Father and his Word: another was their making a creature Creator^f. Philastrius^g further charges them with borrowing another principle from the infamous Apelles, (of the Marcionite tribe,) which was the making a second God, a creature and a subject of the first. Not to mention that Bishop Bull had run up your doctrines to the old Gnostics^h long ago; and was never yet confuted, nor ever will be. It might therefore have been more prudent in you, to have been silent on this head.

Now we have mentioned the matter of necessary emanations, it may be proper to hint briefly what has been the Church's constant doctrine in that article. It occurs not indeed any where under those terms: neither does the necessary existence of God the Father. The ancients expressed not either of the doctrines in those terms: so the question must be, not about the name, but the thing: and emanation must be distinguished according to its two senses: as either signifying the Person emaning, or the emaning itself. They that spake only of a temporal procession, or emanation, could not mean that such procession was necessary. Only, as they held the necessary existence of the Person, proceeding in time, but always existing in the Father to whom he belonged, and to whom he is referred; their doctrine, however expressed, comes to the very same that has been since called eternal generation, or emanation. They that held eternal generation were all in the principle of necessary emanation, directly and plainly. Only the word emanation (if it stands for ἀπόρροια) was either approved, or otherwise, according as understood: and generation was the more common name for it. All is summed up in this, that the Son is necessarily existing, but still of the Father, and referred to him as his head.

You pretend, that the distinction of a threefold generation is groundless. If you mean that single writers do not speak of three generations, it may be true of most of them, not all: for an exception must be made for someⁱ, who plainly acknowledged ^e Προλεμαῖος γὰρ ὁ Οὐαλεντίνου ἔφη δύο ζυγούς ἔχειν τὸν ἀγέννητον, ἔννοιαν καὶ θέλησιν· καὶ πρώτον ἐνενόησεν, εἴτα ἠθέλησε· καὶ ἄπερ ἐνενοῖ, οὐκ ἠδύνατο προβάλλειν εἰ μὴ ὅτε καὶ ἡ τοῦ θελήματος δύναμις ἐπεγένετο· ἔνθεν Ἀρειανοὶ μαθόντες, θέλημα καὶ βούλησιν προηγίσθαι θέλουσι τοῦ λόγου. Athap. p. 608.

^f Οὐδὲ γὰρ οὐδὲ ἄγγλοι δημιουργεῖν δυνήσονται, κρίσματα ὄντες καὶ αὐτοὶ, κὰν Οὐαλεντίνος, καὶ Μαρκίων, καὶ Βασιλείδης τοιαῦτα φρονῶσι, καὶ ἡμεῖς ἐκείνων ζηλωταὶ τυγχάνητε. Athap. Orat. ii. p. 489.

^g Philastrius Hæres. cap. 47.

^h Bull. D. F. sect. iii. cap. 1.

ⁱ See Bull. D. F. p. 232. Animadv. in Gilb. Clerke, p. 1054. Fabricius Not. in Hippolyt. vol. i. p. 242.

eternal generation, temporal procession, and Christ's incarnation. But taking the Fathers collectively, there is demonstration for that threefold distinction I have mentioned. And even as to single Fathers, though they did not give the name to all the three, they acknowledged the things meant by that name; as I have fully shewn. Which of the three is most properly called by the name of generation, is a very fruitless question: it is manifest that that name was given by some or other of the ancients to all the three.

You object, (p. 283,) that Irenæus argues against all internal generations. The reader may see that matter handsomely cleared up in Massuet's Previous Dissertations upon Irenæus^k.

You object, (p. 285,) that the notion of consubstantiality (I suppose you will say the same now of necessary existence) is far from inferring equal supremacy. But, having once sufficiently proved his necessary existence, and took off your pretences about will (which you chiefly trusted to,) the rest will create no difficulty with considering men. As to your weak charge upon Tertullian, &c. about angels and souls being consubstantial with God, it has been answered. You have a pleasant argument, (p. 271,) that "if the Son was generated, by the will and power of the Father, into a state of Sonship, either in time or from eternity, it is sufficient to distinguish him from the one supreme, self-existent, immutable God; who is incapable of any change, even so much as in any mode of existence." Your argument here turns upon a fanciful supposition, that all generation, whether temporal or eternal, implies mutability, or change. But be pleased to make sense of what you have here said, on either supposition. Suppose the generation eternal, what sense is there in conceiving a change where there is nothing new, no state antecedent, no prius or posterius, which every change implies? Suppose it temporal; then as it means no more than a manifestation, exertion, or taking a new office, relation, &c. what change is there in all this, more than there is in God the Father, upon any new act, manifestation, exertion of power, &c.? There is no change at all in it, no, not so much as in any mode of existence.

I have now run through all that I find material under this Query. Upon the whole it appears, that the ancients firmly believed and professed the necessary existence of God the Son: as well those who maintained the generation to be temporal, as those that professed it eternal. And you have not been able to prove, either that the former thought the Son an attribute only before his generation, or that the latter ever made generation to be by will, in any sense but what is consistent with what we now call necessary existence and necessary emanation.

^k Massuet. Præv. Dissert. p. 36, 128.

It may not be here improper to throw in a few words about the several similitudes and illustrations made use of by the ancients to help imagination, and to give men a more lively sense of divine truths. They are all of them low, and infinitely short of what they were intended to represent; some of them perhaps too coarse, and such as might better have been spared: but writers are not always upon their guard. They had a pious design in adapting their comparisons to the very meanest capacities. The resemblances were these; mind and thought, light and its shining, sun and its rays, fountain and streams, root and branches, seed and plants, body and its effluvia, fire and fire, light and light, water and streams.

These similitudes were intended to represent the consubstantiality or coeternity, or both, according as they were most fitly adapted, respectively, or most proper to represent either or both.

The comparisons of fountain and stream, root and branch, body and effluvia, light and light, fire and fire, and such like, served more peculiarly to signify the consubstantiality: but those of mind and thought, light and splendor, (φῶς καὶ ἀπαύγασμα.) were more peculiarly calculated to denote coeternity; abstracting from the consideration of consubstantiality. For thought is not any thing substantial: and I know not whether light, ἀπαύγασμα, was ever taken to be so by the ancient Fathers. It is certain that sometimes it was looked upon as a mere energy or quality¹. I say then, that coeternity was more fitly represented by those two similitudes than consubstantiality.

Indeed Eusebius would not allow that^m coeternity was signified in the similitude of light and splendor; or, I may more properly say, luminous body and light, for that is the meaning. But in this that great man was very singular. And though Montfaucon's censure of him, as commonly wresting Scripture, and the Church's doctrine, to his own private fanciesⁿ, may seem rather

¹ Justin. Martyr. Dial. p. 372. Euseb. Dem. Evang. lib. iv. c. 3. Damascen. vol. i. p. 135, 137. Theodorit. in Epist. ad Hebr. c. i. ver. 3. Hær. Fab. lib. v. c. 7. p. 256.

^m Euseb. Demonstr. Evang. lib. iv. c. 3. p. 147.

ⁿ Nihil itaque insolens si Eusebius, qui plerumque Scripturarum et Ecclesie dogmata ex sensu et opinione sua æstimare ausus est, in multis lapsus sit. Montf. Prælim. in Euseb. &c. p. 29.

too severe; yet it is certainly true of him in this instance: unless we could suppose that parenthesis, or digression, (for such it seems to be,) foisted into his work by some other hand. No Catholic, before or after him, ever talked in that way, but quite the contrary. Origen^o, Theognostus^p, Dionysius of Alexandria, and Alexander, (to say nothing of later writers^q), give a very different account of that similitude: and they are more to be regarded than Eusebius, who stands alone in his account of it, directly thwarting the sense of all the Catholics his contemporaries, as well as of his predecessors that have used it. But to proceed.

It is observable that those who expressly maintained the temporal generation only, as Justin Martyr, Hippolytus, and several others, they also illustrate it by similitudes; not by φῶς and ἀπαύγασμα, so far as I have observed, but by light of light, one fire from another, fountain and streams. They have sometimes also the sun and its rays, which seems to me to amount nearly to the same with φῶς and ἀπαύγασμα. Those writers considered the light, not only as breaking forth, or streaming out from the Father absolutely, (as they considered it, who illustrated eternal generation thereby,) but also relatively, in respect of the creatures; upon whom it began to break forth and shine, when the Son exerted his power in the creation. Then was light sprung up to them from the Father, which light had been before eternally in and of the Father, not manifested ad extra, not sent abroad, as they would express it.

You give hints in your preface, (p. vii.) and book, p. 285, and elsewhere, that the notion of the ancients was no more than that the Son was from “an internal substantial power of the Father, by his will, without any division, abscission, diminution, &c. as one fire is lighted from another:” but you represent their sense very partially, or at least very obscurely. Their plain meaning was, that the Son was really, and not nominally distinct from the Father; which they signified by one

^o Θεός γὰρ φῶς ἐστὶν ἀπαύγασμα οὐκ εἶχε τῆς ἰδίας δόξης, ἵνα τολμήσας τις ἀρχὴν διῶ εἶναι υἱοῦ πρότερον οὐκ ὄντος. Orig. ap. Athanas. p. 233.

^p Οὐκ ἐξῶθεν τις ἐστὶν ἐφευρεθείσα ἢ τοῦ υἱοῦ οὐσία, οὐδὲ ἐκ μὴ ὄντων ἐπεισῆχθη· ἀλλὰ ἐκ τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας ἔφνυ, ὡς τὸ φῶς τὸ ἀπαύγασμα, ὡς ὕδατος ἀρμύς. Theogn. ap. Athanas. p. 230.

Ἀπαύγασμα δὲ ὡν φωτὸς αἰδίου, πάντως καὶ αὐτὸς αἰδίδος ἐστὶ. Dionys. Alex. apud Athan. p. 253.

Τὸ γὰρ ἀπαύγασμα τῆς δόξης μὴ εἶναι λέγων, συναίρει καὶ τὸ πρωτόγονον φῶς. Alexandr. Alex. apud Theod. lib. i. c. 4.

^q See some testimonies in my Sermons, p. 151 of this volume.

fire and another: and they meant further to signify, that though the Son did in a certain sense come out from the Father, yet he was not divided from him, but remained still really in him and with him. I have set the principal passages in the margin; which may serve to explain each other, and fully to ascertain the meaning. It would be tedious here to enter into the particulars. Upon the whole, their meaning was, that the Son so came out from the Father, as still to remain in him: it was an economical, not a real separation. And so the Father did not leave himself emptied, as it were, of his Son, by his sending him out to create and to transact all matters between him and the creature.

This, I doubt not to say, is the certain and the full meaning of those Fathers: and had it not been for some persons coming to read them with the notion of eternal generation in their heads, they could never have mistaken so plain a matter as this is, of the Son's being sent out economically from the Father, first to make, and next to govern the creatures: which mission, manifestation, or exertion, is, with those writers, his generation: as it was also so reckoned even by many of the Post-Nicenes, who may be seen in the margin*. It must be owned, that Hilary † Λόγον γεννώμεν, οὐ κατὰ ἀποτομήν, ὡς ἐλαττωθῆναι τὸν ἐν ἡμῖν λόγον προβαλλόμενοι (leg. προβαλλόμενοι) καὶ ὁποῖον ἐπὶ πυρὸς, ὁρῶμεν ἄλλο γινόμενον, οὐκ ἐλαττωμένου ἐκείνου ἐξ οὗ ἢ ἀναψις γέγονεν, ἀλλὰ τοῦ αὐτοῦ μένοντος καὶ τὸ ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἀναφθῆν καὶ τὸ ἐν φαίνεται οὐκ ἐλαττώσαν ἐκείνου ἐξ οὗ ἀνήφθη. Just. Dial. p. 183.

Οὐ κατ' ἀποτομήν ὡς ἀπομεριζομένης τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς οὐσίας, ὅποια τὰ ἄλλα πάντα μεριζόμενα καὶ τεμνόμενα, οὐ τὰ αὐτὰ ἐστὶν ἃ καὶ πρὶν τμηθῆναι. Justin. p. 373.

Γέγονε δὲ κατὰ μερισμὸν, οὐ κατ' ἀποτομήν· τὸ γὰρ ἀποτομηθῆν τοῦ πρώτου κεχώριστα· τὸ δὲ μερισθῆν οἰκονομίας τῆν αἰρεσὶν προσλαβῶν, οὐκ ἐνδεῆ τὸν ὄθεν εἰληπται πεποίηκεν, ὥσπερ γὰρ ἀπὸ μίας δαδὸς διὰ τῆν ξαψὶν τῶν πολλῶν δαδῶν οὐκ ἐλαττοῦται τὸ φῶς· οὕτω καὶ ὁ λόγος προελθὼν ἐκ τῆς τοῦ πατρὸς δυνάμεως οὐκ ἄλογον πεποίηκε τὸν γεγεννηκότα. Tatian. p. 22.

Πρὸ γὰρ τὶ γίνεσθαι τοῦτον εἶχε σύμβουλον, ἑαυτοῦ νοῦν καὶ φρόνησιν ὄντα· ὅποτε δὲ ἠθέλησεν ὁ Θεὸς ποιῆσαι ὅσα ἐβουλεύσατο, τοῦτον τὸν λόγον ἐγέννησε προφορικῶν, πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως, οὐ κενωθεὶς αὐτὸς τοῦ λόγου, ἀλλὰ λό-γον, γεννήσας καὶ τῷ λόγῳ αὐτοῦ διαπαντὸς ὁμιλῶν. Theoph. Antioch. p. 129.

Nec separatur substantia, sed extenditur—a matrice non recessit, sed excessit. Tert. Apol. c. 21.

Hæc erit probola veritatis, custos unitatis, qua prolaturum dicimus Filium, et non separatum. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 8.

Trinitas per certos et connexos gradus a Patre decurrens, et monarchiæ nihil obstrepit, et œconomie statum protegit. Tert. ibid.

Habes Filium in terris; habes Patrem in caelis. Non est separatio ista, sed dispositio divina. Tert. contr. Prax. c. 23.

Scirent Verbum in principio Deum, et hoc a principio apud Deum, et natum esse ex eo qui erat, et hoc in eo esse qui natus est, quod is ipse est penes quem erat antequam nasceretur; eandem scilicet æternitatem esse gignentis et geniti. Hilar. in Mat. p. 742.

Procedit in nativitate, qui erat, ante quam nasceretur, in Patre,—cujus ex ore prodivit unigenitus Filius, cordis ejus nobilis inquilinus: exinde visibilis effectus, quia humanum genus seems to have changed his language and sentiments too afterwards: or else he held a generation prior to this, along with the προέλευσις. It must also be confessed, that the Catholics themselves were for some time pretty much divided about the question of eternal generation; though there was no question about the eternal existence. Whether the Λόγος might be rightly said to be begotten in respect of the state which was antecedent to the προέλευσις, was the point in question. Athanasius argued strenuously for it, upon this principle, that whatever is of another, and referred to that other as his head, (as the Λόγος, considered as such, plainly was,) may and ought to be styled Son, and begotten: besides, the Arians had objected, that there would be two unbegotten Persons, if the Λόγος ever existed, and was not in the capacity of Son; and the Church had never been used to the language of two unbegottens. These considerations, besides the testimonies of elder Fathers who had admitted eternal generation, weighed with the generality of the Catholics; and so eternal generation came to be the more prevailing language, and has prevailed ever since. There is nothing new in the doctrine more than this, the calling that eternal generation which others would have styled the eternal existence and relation of the Λόγος to the Father; which at length amounts only to a difference in words and names. This appears to me a fair and full account of that matter, after the most careful and impartial search I have been able to make into the ancients upon it; that I might not deceive either myself or my readers.

In conclusion, since you have been pleased to call upon me for satisfaction, (p. 297,) which I shall be always ready to pay for any injury I have really done to my readers; I now leave it to your "ingenuity to consider, what satisfaction you ought to "make your readers," for the following particulars:

visitaturus erat. Zen. Veron. apud Bull. p. 200.

Ortus habens initium in navitate, in statu non habens. Phæbad.

Hoc initium habeat Sapientia Dei quod de Deo processit ad creanda omnia tam cælestia quam terrena; non quo cœperit esse in Deo. Creata est ergo sapientia, imo genita, non sibi quæ semper erat, sed his quæ ab ea fieri oportebat. Pseud. Ambros. de Fid. c. ii. p. 349.

Ἐγενήθη, μᾶλλον δὲ προῆλθεν αὐτὸς, καὶ πάντοτε ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ὄν, ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγενημένων διακόσμησιν. Constantin. apud Gelas. p. 58.

Ex ore quamlibet Patris sis ortus, et verbo editus;

Tamen paterno in pectore Sophia callebas prius. Prudent. Hymn. xi. p. 44.

Vere enim et sine voce natum, et omnia potentialiter continens Verbum, tum Pater actualiter generavit, quando cælum et terram, quando lucem et cætera fecit. Ruperti. Tuitiens.

† Athanasius contr. Arianos, Orat. 4.

1. For carelessly passing over the many and plain testimonies I produced for eternal generation; from Irenæus, Origen, Novatian, Dionysius of Rome, Dionysius of Alexandria, Methodius, Pamphilus, and Alexander of Alexandria: as to which, you have not attempted to shew that I have misconstrued the passages, nor have you endeavoured to reconcile them to your principles; contenting yourself with objecting only, instead of answering, as usual with you.

2. For imposing upon us the spurious or interpolated Constitutions: which, you know, are of no value in this controversy, with men of letters.

3. For representing the Councils of Sirmium, Sardica, Antioch, as undoubtedly orthodox; though never so accounted, or received as such, by the Catholics in general, but suspected as Arian by many, and that very justly.

4. For your several unfair, not to say manifestly false translations: of the words of the Sirmian Council, p. 258, 274. of Hilary, p. 259, 275. of Tatian, p. 270, 110. of Basil, p. 291.

5. For representing (p. 273, 287.) Eusebius as giving the sense of the ancients upon a point wherein all the Catholics before, and in, and after his times, are flatly against him, (as many as speak of it,) and not a man concurring with him.

6. For your very slight, superficial, and elusive answers to the many weighty reasons I before gave in my Defence, (vol. i. p. 360. to 365.) to prove that the Logos was a real and an eternal Person (according to the ancients) antecedently to his procession, otherwise called generation.

QUERY IX.

Whether the divine attributes, Omniscience, Ubiquity, &c. those individual attributes, can be communicated without the divine essence, from which they are inseparable?

TO this you say, "it is sufficient to answer, that individual attributes can neither be communicated with nor without the essence." Your reason: "because communication of an individual, without the communicator's parting with it, is supposing it to be not an individual, and is consequently a contradiction in terms," p. 301. Thus far you: and you go on after this with so peculiar an air of self-complacency and satisfaction, that one would almost think you weak enough to imagine you had said something considerable. The great difficulty is still behind, to determine what makes an individual, or to fix a certain principle of individuation. I called upon you for it before; knowing that very wise men thought it as difficult a problem as to square the circle. But to a man of your abilities nothing is difficult; you can solve the doubt in three words.

You undertake it, (p. 307,) telling me, that the "principle of individuation is a self-evident thing." To those only, I presume, who have not sagacity enough to see where the difficulty lies: to such all things are easy, as all colours are alike to men in the dark. Let us have this solution. "It is that by which any one thing, be it simple or complex, is that one thing which it is, and not another." That is to say, it is that by which any thing is an individual. And pray what is that? Are we not just where we were? If any should ask you what is the cause of the motion of the heart, you would tell them, I suppose, it is that by which the heart is made to beat; or if you are asked the cause of the tide, it is that by which the waters are made to ebb and flow. Who would be the wiser for such discoveries? You have not told me what makes an individual; but you have signified, in other words, what is meant by the phrase, principle of individuation, which I knew very well before.

Having laid your foundation, such as it is, you proceed to build upon it. "Two beings," you say, "may be one complex being, but they cannot either of them be that one being which this is. Two substances may be one complex substance, but they cannot either of them be that one substance which this is." Wonderful edifying! But the great defect is, (and it is strange you should not perceive it,) that we do not yet know what we are to call one being or two beings; one substance or two substances: if that were settled, any child could go on. We must therefore stop your course a little, and bring you back again to the place where you set out. To convince you of your being mightily out of the way, let me put a case to you. Upon Dr. Clarke's principles, of the divine substance being extended, I desire to know whether this substance which fills the earth, be one with that substance which fills heaven: this is bringing your doctrine of individuals to the test, in order to see of what service it may be to us. By your principles, so far as I yet perceive, this substance and that substance must be two simple substances, and one complex substance. I wondered indeed why you chose the word complex rather than compound, which signifies the same. But now I recollect that Dr. Clarke had declared^u against God being a compound substance. He may be complex, however, upon your hypothesis: and so if we must have a complex Deity, it may as well be with a Trinity of divine Persons, as without. Clear your own schemes, and you clear ours at the same time.

Dr. Clarke's notion of individual substance appears plainly to be this; that if the substance be but spiritual, and there be no disunion, then the substance is one, one simple substance. I approve of his notion as very just: and since the three divine Persons are supposed by us to be all spiritual, and united as much as possible, more closely indeed (being equally omnipresent) than you suppose the parts of the divine substance to be; I say, since these things are so, the three Persons may be one individual substance, upon the Doctor's principles, one simple and uncompounded substance; which is what we assert: and if the substance be individual, the attributes, we hope, may be so too: and then all is right. You are used to pay a deference to the learned Doctor's judgment in other matters; do so in this: or if you are resolved to debate the point, dispute it first with him: he may probably give you good satisfaction, and save me any further trouble.

You are displeas'd with me (p. 309.) for mentioning parts of the divine substance. But let your displeasure fall where it ought, upon the learned Doctor; who having subjected the divine substance to extension, has necessarily introduced parts; there being no extension where there are not parts. Besides that the Doctor has expressly admitted parts, provided only they be not separable, compounded parts, which I charge you not with. You say, indeed, that instead of parts, I should have said "partial apprehensions of its omnipresence." But, I beseech you, put me not off with words, nor with such answers as you would not yourself admit in another case. I am talking of the divine substance, which is not made up of apprehensions, but of somewhat real; which (upon your and the Doctor's hypothesis) must be called extended parts. You would laugh at us, if we should

^u Dr. Clarke's Answer to the sixth Letter, p. 4. His words are; "The meaning of parts is separable, compounded, ununited parts, such as the parts of matter; which for that reason is always a compound, not a simple substance. No matter is one substance, but a heap of substances."

"And that I take to be the reason why it is a subject incapable of thought. Not because it is extended; but because its parts are distinct substances, ununited, and independent on each other: which, I suppose, is not the case of other substances."

tell you that the three Persons are three partial apprehensions, when you ask us what they are; whether beings or not beings. Do not therefore put us off with empty sounds, when we ask you the like questions about the parts of the divine substance; whether Beings or one Being; and if one Being, whether one individual Being; and if so, whether simple or complex. By that time you have furnished out proper answers to these questions, all that you have objected about individual will drop and dwindle into nothing. And it will be great satisfaction to us to observe, how handsomely you can plead on the opposite side, and how ingeniously you can unravel your own sophistry. You may at length, perhaps, be sensible, that all the difficulties you have raised about individual, numerical, specific, &c. resolve only into this; that we know not precisely, in all cases, what to call individual, or numerical, or specific. You have a very distinct notion (in your way of thinking) of any two parts of the divine substance: and yet you know not whether it be proper to say, that this part is individually and numerically the same substance with the other part. You would be as much puzzled about specific; since you would hardly think it sufficient to say, that they are specifically one and the same substance. Learn therefore, from hence, to distinguish between difficulties relating to things and difficulties about names only.

You attempt to answer what I had urged in my Defence, vol. i. p. 445, where I had argued against the same wisdom, goodness, or any other attributes, being supposed to reside in infinitely distant parts. I thought no maxim clearer than this, that attributes of any subject reach not beyond their subject: and therefore whatever attribute is in this substance, cannot be also in that substance; unless this substance be that substance. I did not urge these things as being of any real weight in themselves; but only as having the very same weight as your objections against the doctrine of the blessed Trinity have, or ought to have: and I was to convince you of the folly of wading beyond your depth. You have answers, such as they are, ready for every thing; either to shew that you know more, or else know less than wise men do: for, it is one degree of knowledge to be sensible of one's ignorance. You tell me that the "same individual moment of time is every where, and the same individual truth is every where." Admitting this, why then may not the same individual wisdom, power, &c. be in three Persons? But if I should ask you to give me any distinct notion of the same individual moment or the same individual truth being every where, possibly you might be strangely confounded. Is this moment or this truth substance or attribute? If attribute, what is the subject of it? If the divine substance be the subject, how can these truths and these moments reside in an extended subject without being coextended? And how can the attributes of one part be the attributes of another part, any more than the extension of one is the extension of another? However, since you have been pleased to admit that this individual truth and that individual moment are "entirely in the whole, and entirely in every part of the universe;" we shall want a good reason why the same individual attributes may not be entirely in the whole Trinity, and entirely in every Person of it. But you will say, that you suppose the attributes common, and not communicated: and so there will be a difference between your hypothesis and ours. But, as the main difficulty lies in conceiving the same attributes to be entirely in the whole, and entire in every Person; this being happily got over, the other will create no difficulty. It is as easy to conceive the same thing common in this manner, as common in that manner: for there is no other difference but in the manner, between common and communicated. Having thus despatched the main point, relating to the principle of individuation, (which stands just where it did,) you will not expect any further answer to such objections as turn only upon the uncertain meaning of individual.

I freely own my ignorance, that I am not yet got beyond the common School definition, Individua sunt quæ dividi non possunt in plura ejusdem nominis, et naturæ singularis. Individual is something undivided, in such respect as it is conceived to be one: and one is something single, and not multiplex, in that respect wherein it is conceived to be one. I pretend not to make any man wiser by such an account as this: but it is proper to confess our ignorance where we know nothing. This, however, I pretend to be certain of, that every individual is, upon your principles, made up of parts; and that all oneness, or sameness, is by union of parts: otherwise there is nothing in the world that you can call one substance, or same substance, at all. Now, if union makes oneness, or sameness, you will be extremely puzzled to find out any union closer, or stronger, or higher, than that union which we conceive to be among the three Persons. Why then may they not be one individual Substance, Being, God? or the same individual Substance, Being, God? I like what

St. Bernard^x has said of this matter; and leave you to confute it when you are able.

I may here take some notice of the author of the Appeal to a Turk, &c. who thinks it strange we should pretend to know that three Persons are one Being, when, by our own confession, we know not precisely what makes one Being, nor can fix upon any certain principle of individuation, p. 54. Now, as to the fact, that three Persons are one God, or one Being, we pretend to know it from Scripture: but as to the manner how they are united, we know it not at all. I suppose, we may know that soul and body are so united as to make one man; though we understand not the nature of the union: or that the parts of matter cohere, though we understand not the manner or cause of their cohesion. And if we are puzzled in accounting for the union of things so familiar to us, and suited to our capacities, what wonder is it, if our thoughts are lost in accounting for the divine union of the tremendous Deity? It is one thing to know that three Persons are one God, another to know what makes them one. If the author's objection lies only against calling the Persons one Being, as not being scriptural; we shall be content if he admits them to be one God, or one Jehovah, which is evidently Scripture doctrine. His reasoning, p. 56, is of the same size for acuteness and penetration with what he has, p. 54. If we have no idea of the manner how two may be one, he will infer, that "we have no idea either of two Persons or of one God." That is to say; if we have no idea of the manner how soul and body make one man, we have no idea of soul, or body, or of one man. Now the case is this; we have an idea of the Persons united, and we understand that they are one, having a confuse general idea of unity: but as to the internal cause, or particular manner of the union, we have no idea of it. What is there strange or surprising in this, unless it be strange for ignorant creatures to know only in part, and to be able to understand something without knowing every thing? But to return to you.

I shall now look back, to see if there be any incidental passages under this Query deserving notice. Page 303, I find you endeavouring to prop up the Doctor's aphorism, that "necessary agents are no agents, and necessary causes no causes." This is also strife about words; in which the cause is nothing concerned. For admitting all you would have, it comes to this only; that the ancients have improperly called the Father an Agent, or Cause, in respect of the generation: the doctrine will stand exactly as before, only in other terms. And you must not pretend to change the sense of the ancients in respect of the words act or cause; and still appeal to their expressions as countenancing your novel notions: that will be affronting the readers indeed. But let us inquire a little into this new philosophy. I asked, whether an infinitely active Being can ever cease to act? To which you answer not a word. I asked, whether God's loving himself (which is loving every thing that is good, and which general love, or natural propensity, seems to be the prime mover in all the divine acts) be not acting? To which you reply nothing. I believe we are almost out of our depth here, and might more modestly leave the divine acts to that divine Being who alone understands the nature of them. But since you pretend to be wise in such high things, I may put a few questions to you concerning them. You say, "the essence of action is exerting of power, and the will is the original of all exerting of power." Well, let action be exerting of power: Does God never naturally or necessarily exert any power? Who can be wise enough to know these things? But, the "will is the original:" and is not the will itself determined by essential wisdom, goodness, and truth? And why is not that as much the original which determines, as that which is determined? How is it that God cannot but will good, cannot but will happiness: as, on the other hand, he cannot but will evil, cannot but will unhappiness? Are approving and disapproving the same with knowing good and evil? Or does he not rather approve and disapprove, because he knows why? How hard a thing then is it to distinguish between what shall be called acts, or actions, and what not? You have discarded all that in common speech passes under the name of action. Walking, riding, running, are no acts: they are bodily motions, following the impulses of something else that moves and actuates. Human acts must be confined to what is invisible, to what passes in the dark recesses of our minds. And here our ideas are very defective and obscure; and our language almost all improper and metaphorical; taken from bodily motions, which are no acts. We may divide the powers or faculties of the mind into perceptive and active: and we may call the latter by the name of will. But still what is that perpetual activity of the mind, that general pursuit of happiness, and avoidance of misery, which is not merely perceptive, and yet is necessary and unavoidable? It will be said, perhaps, that it is natural, resulting from our nature; that is, from God, who gave us our nature: and so herein we act not, but are acted upon. Be it so; let us next go higher, to the first cause of all things: are there no natural and necessary propensities there, no natural or necessary aversions; in a word, no willings and nillings, which are as necessary as it is to exist? Yet they are acts, internal acts; and the ground of all external: or else we know not what acts are. But enough of this matter; which as I before observed, is entirely foreign to the cause.

^x Inter omnia quæ recte unum dicuntur, arcem tenet Unitas Trinitatis; qua Personæ tres una substantia sunt: secundo loco, illa præcellit, quæ e converso, tres substantiæ una in Christo persona sunt. Bernard. de Conf. lib. v. c. 8.

You object, that the Father is not αἰῶς (as Basil styles him), if the Son necessarily coexists with him. But he is αἰῶς, notwithstanding, in Basil's sense of αἰῶς, in the ancient sense of αἰῶς, when necessary causes were styled causes: and can any thing be more ridiculous than to plead ancient phrases, and not to take them in their ancient sense? Could not I, in this way, quote Dr. Clarke, Mr. Whiston, Mr. Emlyn, (and indeed whom not?) as being perfectly in my sentiments; let me but put a sense upon their words as I please, however contrary to the known, certain sense of the authors? Was there ever a wilder method of supporting an hypothesis?

You have something, p. 305, which is reasonably put, and deserves consideration. I had pressed you with insuperable difficulties relating to the omnipresence, and other undoubted truths. To which you reply, that the "omnipresence is a truth demonstrated by reason, and affirmed in Scripture;" which our doctrine is not, at least not so certainly: that therefore though the difficulties be equal, here and there, yet the positive evidence is not. You will forgive me for putting your argument somewhat clearer and stronger than you had done. Now to this I answer, that our positive evidence from Scripture is very great and full; as hath been often shewn. I will here mention but one argument of it, viz. that you have not been able to elude our proof of the Son's divinity, without eluding, at the same time, every proof of the Father's divinity also; as I have shewn above^γ. Is not this a very sensible and a very affecting demonstration of the strength of our Scripture proofs? You add further, that our doctrine is "impossible to be understood." A groundless calumny, which I confuted at large^z. Is omnipresence impossible to be understood, which you say can be demonstrated? or is our doctrine more hard to be conceived than that is? But you pretend an insuperable difficulty in our scheme, that it makes more supreme Gods than one: which is another calumny as groundless as the former. You ask, are not two supreme Gods though undivided, two supreme Gods? Yes, certainly; but two supreme Persons, that is, two equally supreme in nature, (though not in order;) and undivided in substance, are not two Gods, but one God. You add, that making "one substance" is not the same thing with making "one God." To which it is sufficient to say, How do you know? or how came you to be wiser, in this particular, than all the Christian churches early and late? The heathens, you tell me, did not pretend that their subordinate deities, though consubstantial, were equally supreme. They were therefore the more silly in supposing them consubstantial, and not supreme; that is, of the same nature, and yet of a different nature. But the heathens were further wrong in making more deities than one, supreme and inferior: wherein you copy after them, adopting their Polytheism, and paganizing Christianity, as Dr. Cudworth expresses it.

^γ Page 564, &c. of this volume.

^z Defence, vol. i. p. 453, &c.

You accuse me, (p. 311,) as "presumptuously" calling my doctrine "the doctrine of the blessed Trinity," in opposition to yours. But why will you give yourself these affected airs? Great presumption, indeed, to believe that the Catholic Church has kept the true faith, while Eunomians and Arians made shipwreck of it. But it is high presumption in a few private men to revive old heresies, and to talk as confidently of them, as if they had never been confuted. A modest man would be apt to distrust his own judgment, when it runs counter to so many eminent lights of the Christian Church, and has been so often condemned by the wiser and better part of the Christian world. A becoming deference would appear well in a case of this nature: nor do I know any thing short of infallibility that can either warrant or excuse this big way of talking which you affect to appear in.

You intimate, (p. 311,) that it is not reason, but Scripture you appeal to; and that you will here join issue with me, apart from metaphysical hypotheses. Agreed: discharge then your metaphysics for the future; let us hear no more of self-existence, to divide the Father from the Son, when Scripture tells us they are one. Let us no more be told, that begetting is an act, and every act is of the will: this is all metaphysical. Wave all further discourse about specific, and individual, and intelligent agent, and the like, to hinder plain Christians from seeing that Scripture makes no more Gods but one; never supposes the Son another

God, nor admits Father and Son to be two Gods. Drop your pretences about subordination of offices, as implying distinct authorities, unequal power, independence on one hand, subjection on the other: such reasonings are metaphysical. Let us hear no more that three divine Persons must be three personal Gods, three Beings, three Substances; and that there can be no Unity of Godhead, but identical personal Unity, confined to one Person solely: these are metaphysics; deep, profound metaphysics. Tell us no more that derived and underived powers cannot be the same powers, nor any equality stand with the distinct relations or offices of a father and a son. Give up your famed dilemma against the Unity, that each Person must be either the same, whole, identical substance, or else an homogeneous undivided part of that substance: and your other dilemma, that the Persons must either have the same identical life, or distinct identical lives; neither of which (you imagine) can stand with our principles. These are abstract metaphysical speculations, such as never disturbed the churches of Christ, until many years after they had professed their faith in, and paid their worship to, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, as the one true God. Wave these things for the future, and we shall readily join issue with you upon Scripture alone; and shall then believe that you mean what you say, when you hereafter plead for the laying aside of metaphysics. We desire no metaphysics but in our own necessary self-defence: if you begin in that way, we must also enter the lists in the same way, and oppose false metaphysics with true; to shew the world your wanderings and your inconsistencies, even in what you most rely upon, and (though you will not own it) almost solely trust to.

QUERY X.

Whether, if they (the attributes belonging to the Son) be not individually the same, they can be any thing more than faint resemblances of them, differing from them as finite from infinite; and then in what sense, or with what truth can the Doctor pretend that all divine powers, except absolute supremacy and independency, are communicated to the Son? And whether every being, besides the one Supreme Being, must not necessarily be a creature and finite; and whether all divine powers can be communicated to a creature, infinite perfection to a finite being?

I FIND nothing in your further reply (which is no reply) to this Query, but what I have fully obviated in my Defence, and now in my answer to the other Queries above. All that the reader can learn from what you have here said, is, that if the question be, what it is not, viz. Whether the Son be the Father; you have something to plead for the negative: but if it be, as it really is, Whether the Son be a creature and finite; you have nothing to say to it. The evidence is so full and strong against you, that you dare not submit it to a fair hearing. Allow you but to wrap yourself up in ambiguous terms, supremacy, self-existence, individual, &c. and you are willing to hold on a frivolous and tedious dispute, of no benefit to the readers: but bring you down to plain sense and fixed terms, then you draw off, and take your leave. A conduct suitable to such a cause, but very unworthy of the hands engaged in it.

QUERY XI.

Whether if the Doctor means by divine powers, powers given by God, (in the same sense as angelical powers are divine powers,) only in a higher degree than are given to other beings; it be not equivocating, and saying nothing: nothing that can come up to the sense of those texts before cited, or to these following?

Applied to the one God.

Thou, even thou, art Lord alone; thou hast made heaven, the heaven of heavens, with all their hosts, the earth, and all things that are therein, &c. Neh. ix. 6.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, Gen. i. 1.

To God the Son.

All things were made by him, John i. 3. By him were all things created; he is before all things, and by him all things consist. Coloss. i. 16, 17.

Thou, Lord, in the beginning, hast laid the foundation of the earth; and the heavens are the works of thy hands. Heb. i. 10.

THE questions here were, what Dr. Clarke meant by divine powers, and whether his meaning comes up to the texts here cited. I am now told, that the "divine powers of the Son are not only in a higher degree than angelical powers, but totally of a different kind: for" (let us observe the reason) "to the Son is committed all judgment," p. 316. Well then, the Son's divine powers are at last dwindled into his offices given him by God; therefore divine most certainly. This is the divinity of God the Son, which you stand up so zealously for in your preface; and for the sake of which you are so highly affronted to be thought opposers of Christ's divinity. But let us go on. I insist upon the Son's having creative powers, according to the texts cited, and as I have proved more at large in my Sermons. You have little to reply, but that derived and underived are not the same: whereas they are the same, because they descend from one to the other: were they both underived, they could not (at least according to the ancients) have been the same. Derived and underived may be the same substance, as well as greater and less, containing and contained, may be the same substance: which you are forced to allow in your hypothesis of the extended parts of the same substance. And why must you be perpetually quibbling upon the different senses, or kinds of sameness, and using arguments against us, which inevitably recoil upon yourselves? Do but keep to that strict sense of sameness which you are using against us, in the argument about derived and underived; and I will demonstrate to you, upon your own principles, as before hinted, that there is no such thing as one and the same substance in the world.

In answer to hard arguments, in this Query, you return me hard names. “Heaps of contradictions, not treating the argument seriously;” in short, any thing that first came into your head, being at a loss for an answer, and resolved not to be entirely silent. You are cavilling at the account I gave of the ancients, as assigning to three Persons their several parts and provinces in the work of creation. I observed what meaning they had in it^a, and that their words are not to be strictly and rigorously interpreted. Have you a syllable to object to the truth of this report? Not a word: the thing is too plain and evident to be gainsaid. The truth is, if the ancients are to be interpreted rigorously, the Father is not properly Creator at all, but the Son only; for he is represented as doing and executing, the Father as issuing out orders only. But who can entertain so absurd a thought, as that the Father did not work in the creation as much as the Son? Again, the Father is represented as standing in need^b of the assistance of the Son and Holy Ghost. How will this suit with that supreme dignity, that alone self-

^a Defence, vol. i. p. 381.

^b Ὡς βοηθείας χρήζων ὁ Θεὸς εὐρίσκειται λέγων· Ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον κατ' εἰκόνα καὶ καθ' ὁμοίωσιν. οὐκ ἄλλω δέ τιμῃ εἴρηκε ποιήσωμεν, ἀλλ' ἢ τῷ ἑαυτοῦ λόγῳ, καὶ τῇ ἑαυτοῦ σοφίᾳ. Theoph. Antioch. p. 114.

Nec enim indigebat horum Deus ad faciendum quæ ipse apud se prædefiniat fieri, quasi ipse suas non haberet manus. Iren. p. 253.

Si necessaria est Deo materia ad opera mundi, ut Hermogenes existimavit; habuit Deus materiam longe digniorem—Sophiam suam scilicet—materiam materiarum—quali Deus potuit equivisse, sui magis quam alieni egens. Tertull. contr. Hermog. cap. 18.

sufficiency, which you are contending for? If you interpret this rigorously, it must be as great a lessening to the Father as you pretend the executing of another's orders is to the Son. It is plain therefore, that these sayings of the ancients were intended only to preserve a more lively sense of the distinction of Persons; while they considered them altogether as equally concerned in the creation, and equally working in it. You object that no ancient writer ever said that the three Persons "created in concert," p. 299. But what did the ancients^c mean then, by understanding the text of Genesis, "Let us make man," of all the three Persons? And what did they mean by giving the Son the title of σύμβουλος^d, Counsellor to the Father, in that work? How much does this come short of what I said? Nor can you make any thing more of ἀθευρία, (a word which rarely occurs,) or of auctoritas^e, (which is used oftener,) than the preeminence of the Father as Father, his priority of order. When you wrote before, you were confident that the Son was not styled ποιητὴς τῶν ὄλων: and this you noted, to confirm your fiction, that the Father only was efficient cause, the Son instrumental. You have been since convinced of your error by plain testimonies given you in great numbers^f. But still you go on in your pretence about efficient and instrumental, notwithstanding ποιητὴς, which you had before allowed to be expressive of the efficient cause. Now the defect is, that the Son is not ὁ ποιητὴς: and neither is that true, for I cited Eusebius for ὁ ποιητὴς applied to God the Son. I have spoken of διὰ before, and so here pass it over. You are persuading me that even Cyril of Jerusalem, whom I quoted in my Defence, (vol. i. p. 381.) is expressly against me. Ridiculous to any that know Cyril; you can mean this only for such as do not read. If there is any thing to be suspected of Cyril, it is rather his excluding the Father from being Creator, than the Son from being efficient. But the late learned Benedictine editor has sufficiently cleared up Cyril's orthodoxy on that head^g. I charged^h you with opposing efficient to ministering cause; either very unskilfully or very unfairly. Now you would seem

^c Barn. Ep. cap. 5, 6. Herm. Past. Sim. 5. Justin. Mart. Dial. p. 185. Irenæus, p. 220, 295. Theoph. Antioch. 114. Origen. contr. Cels. p. 63, 257. Synod. Antioch, Labbé, tom. i. p. 845.—See Dr. Knight's first Sermon.

^d Iren. p. 292. Clem. Alex. p. 769, 832. Tertullian. contr. Hermog. p. 18.

Theoph. Antioch. p. 129. Hippolyt. vol. ii. p. 13.

^e Insinuat nobis in Patre auctoritas, in Filio nativitas, in Spiritu Sancto Patris Filiique communitas, in tribus æqualitas. August. Serm. 11.

^f Defence, vol. i. p. 384, 385.

^g Dissert. iii. p. 139, &c.

^h Defence, vol. i. p. 381.

to come off by making the Father efficient, by way of eminence. Why then did you not allow both to be efficient, and leave the eminence only to the Father, that the readers might understand you, and that I might save myself the trouble of disputing that point? Let but both be equally efficient, and as to the eminence of order in the efficiency, (which is all you can make of it,) I readily assent to it.

You tell me of Origen's making the Father πρῶτος δημιουργός, the first and principal Creator: as if Origen admitted two Creators. But if you mean not to deceive your readers, you should tell them, that Origen never uses the phrase of πρῶτος δημιουργός, but where he is retorting upon his adversary Pagan testimonies in the Pagan styleⁱ; as was proper to do. But when Origen speaks in the Christian style, and is delivering his own sense; it is then πρῶτος δημιουργός, primarily Creator^k. You have something more to urge from Origen, that the Son was αὐτουργός, immediate worker in the creation. Well then, I hope the Son was efficient; and, by your representation, more properly so than the Father, who only gave out commands. Are you sensible of what you are doing? Or have you a mind, at length, through your great zeal in attributing to the Father the commanding part only, to make him properly no Creator at all? If you strain the expressions of the ancients to the utmost rigour, that must be the consequence. Be content therefore to allow a proper latitude of construction, and a significant mystery in these things. But I have obviated all you have said upon this topic, about the Father's commanding, elsewhere^l. You quote Eusebius again, his Demonstratio Evangelica, which is of no consideration with me at all. What if he styles the Son ὄργανον, does he not style him δημιούργημα too, in the same piece, though he contradicted it again afterwards? Why must Eusebius be thought to speak the sense of the ancients, especially in things where he manifestly ran counter to the ancient doctrine? You may see this very notion of the Son's being ὄργανον condemned by the famous synod of Antioch^m long before Eusebius wrote. I value Eusebius in many things; but not where he attempted to deprave and corrupt the doctrine of his Catholic predecessors; perhaps to gratify some novelists, before he had well considered ⁱ Origen. contr. Cels. p. 308.

^k Ibid. p. 317.

^l Sermons, p. 63 of this volume.

^m Οὕτω δὲ ὡς ἀληθῶς ὄντος καὶ ἐνεργούτος, ὡς Λόγον ἄμα καὶ Θεοῦ, δι' οὗ ὁ Πατήρ πάντα πεποίηκε, οὐχ ὡς δι' ὄργανου, οὐδὲ ὡς δι' ἐπιστήμης ἀνπιστάτου γενήσαντος μὲν τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν υἱὸν ὡς ζῶσαν ἐνέργειαν, καὶ ἐνυπόστατον, ἐνεργούντα τὰ πάντα ἐν πᾶσι.

what he was doing. However, if any one has a mind to see what mild construction may be put upon that expression of Eusebius, he may consult Bishop Bull and Dr. Caveⁿ. For my own part, I think the best defence to be made for him is, that he seems to have grown wiser afterwards. You charge Basil with weakness for making Aëtius the inventor of the distinction between ὑπὸ and διὰ. But where was Basil's mistake? You say, Origen, Eusebius, and Philo insist upon it. But Philo's is only general, without application to this case: and Origen's and Eusebius's amount to no more than a preeminence of the Father as such. They do not carry it to a difference of nature, as Aëtius did^p; and you also do: you do it indeed under other terms, but as plainly, while you deny the necessary existence of the Son. You will find none higher than Aëtius, or Eusebius of Nicomedia, to countenance you in it. There is nothing more that is material under this Query.

You have not been able to take off the force of what is urged from Scripture and antiquity for the Son's creative powers: and that creative powers are divine powers, in quite another sense than the Doctor and you use the phrase, in the equivocating way, will be seen as we pass on.

QUERY XII.

Whether the Creator of all things was not himself uncreated; and therefore could not be ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, made out of nothing.

AS to your complaint of my wording this Query, and my styling Christ the Creator of all things; I refer to my Sermons^q, where I have proved the thing, and to my Defence^r, where I have shewn that it is the language of all antiquity to style him Creator, and not barely in your deceitful way, him, "by whom God created all things," while you inform us not what you mean by it. You say, you "affirm not (nay, you blame those that presume to affirm) that the Son of God was created, or that he was ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, out of nothing." With what sincerity you say this, let the reader judge from the nine arguments I produced in my Supplement, to shew that you make the Son ⁿ Bull. D. F. p. 256. Cav. Diss. iii. p. 66.

^o Basil. de Sp. Sancto, p. 145, &c.

^p The Synodicon Vetus agrees with Basil's account of Aëtius.

^q Ὁ γὰρ μακαρίτης Εὐστάθιος Ἀντιοχείας, ἐκ τοῦ παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐκτεθέντος ἀσεβοῦς τόμου, ἀνόμοιον λέγοντος τὸ ἐξ οὐ, τοῦ δι' οὐ, τὸν ἄθεον Εὐσέβιον διήλεγξε καὶ Ἀέτιον. Synod. Vetus ap. Fabric. B. Gr. vol. xi. p. 211.

^r Serm. 2 and 3, p. 48, &c. of this volume.

^r Vol. i. p. 383, &c.

a creature^s. How you may equivocate, I know not: but I am sure you dare not tell us distinctly what you mean by saying, you blame those that affirm that the Son is “out of nothing:” it is either a mean quibble, or something worse that you are ashamed to own. You are pleased to give up some criticisms of Dr. Clarke’s in relation to a passage of Origen which I had took notice of in my Defence^t; so that we have done with. Still you talk of “ten thousand passages” in Origen, as opposite to my sentiments. When you were in the way of romancing, (which has no certain rule,) you did well to take a large number. I challenge you to produce a single passage from any piece of his, that is to be depended on, which either directly or indirectly makes the Son a creature. That, you know, was the point here in question.

The remainder of this Query is filled with all the worthless trifles you could rake up from Sandius, or others, to represent the ancients as making the Son a creature. At the same time, because you know they have been answered, and that you cannot stand by them, (yet having a strong propensity to make use of them, for the deception of ignorant readers,) you produce them with this faint and disingenuous censure upon them. “I think “that the writers I have here cited were mistaken in their “judging about consequences, when they thus charged with “Arianism the most learned and most eminent men the Christian Church ever had.” Permit me here, for a while, to choose myself a new adversary; one that honestly professes his belief of the Son’s being a creature, and has produced those very passages, most of them, as favouring those sentiments; which he is not afraid nor ashamed (while maintaining, as he believes, the honour of the great God) to call his own. After long and deliberate considering the question of the Son’s being a creature or no creature, the argument he mainly depends on^u, with respect to the sentiments of the ancients, is this: the universal application of the words in Prov. viii. 22, “The Lord created me the “beginning of his ways, &c.” by the ancient Christians, to the creation of Christ by God the Father. And indeed, hardly any thing can be brought out of the ancients, at all looking like it, but what is either the application of, or allusion to this text. The argument then is this: the text in the Proverbs has ἐκτίσσε according to the Seventy: the Fathers, knowing little or no

^s Page 324, &c. of this vol.

^t Vol. i. p. 389, &c.

^u See Mr. Whiston’s Reply to Lord Nottingham, p. 28.

Hebrew, followed that rendering : ἔκτισε signifies created : therefore the Fathers, in general, believed and taught that the Son is a creature. The argument would be irrefragable, if the word ἔκτισε, as it might signify what is pretended, could be shewn to have been so understood by the Fathers. But if created may signify appointed, or constituted, (as in good Latin authors, consuls, captains, magistrates, are said to be created, and we sometimes use the word in English, of creating a peer, or creating any officer,) and it may be certainly shewn that some Fathers so understood it, and no proof can be given that any of them understood it otherwise ; then there will appear such a flaw in the argument, as the wit of man will not be able to make up. We have it upon record, that this very point came to be considered about the middle of the third century, by Dionysius of Rome^x, (with his clergy ;) who fearing, upon the rise of Sabellianism, lest some should run into the opposite extreme of making the Son a creature, first condemns all such doctrine, as highest blasphemy, and next answers what had been urged by some from this text, expressing himself as follows : “ And what “ need I say more of these things to you, men full of the Holy “ Ghost, and well knowing what absurdities follow upon the sup“ position of the Son’s being a creature ? To which the leaders “ in that opinion seem to me not to have well attended, and so “ they have very much erred from the truth ; interpreting that “ place, ‘ The Lord created me the beginning of his ways,’ not “ according to the meaning of the divine and sacred writ. For,
 “ as you know, ἔκτισε is a word of more senses than one, ἔκτισε, “ created, here stands for ἐπέστησε, appointed, over the works “ (God) had made by the Son himself. The word ἔκτισε is not “ here to be understood to be the same as ἐποίησε : for ποιῆσαι
 “ and κτίσαι are very different.” Here we find how that text was understood by the most considerable men of the Church about the year 259.

And let it not here be objected, that the piece is of doubtful credit, because extant only in Athanasius : for nobody that knows any thing of Athanasius, and is not strangely bigoted to an hypothesis, can suspect any foul play in this matter. It is the less to be suspected here, because, as I shall shew presently, Athanasius did not entirely approve of this construction of Dionysius, and would certainly never have forged an interpretation different from his own. Besides, it is observable that ^x Apud Athanas. p. 232.

Eusebius, in his famous piece against Marcellus, interprets that text in the very same manner as Dionysius had done, defending it at large^y by several parallel places of Scripture. He interprets ἐκρίσε by κατέταξεν and κατέστησεν, appointed, or constituted. So that we have very great reason to believe that this was the prevailing and current construction of Prov. viii. 22. in the Ante-Nicene church. What confirms it is, that they all understood ἀρχὴν in the active sense, for Head or Principle, just as Dionysius and Eusebius do: and so the sense is, that the Father appointed the Son Head over all his works.

That this was the sense of ἀρχὴ all along, may be proved^z from Justin, Theophilus, Tatian, Clemens, Origen, and Methodius, to name no more: which consideration is alone sufficient in the case, when there is no positive proof on the other side. Only I must add further, that clear and strong passages may be brought, from the Fathers in general, to prove that they believed the Son to be uncreated. Seeing then that this text may bear such a sense as has been mentioned; seeing it was certainly so interpreted by some, and no reason appears for Mr. Whiston's interpretation at all; but the sense of ἀρχὴ, as understood by the ancients, is entirely against him, as also many clear testimonies of the Son's being uncreated: these considerations put together are enough to shew that there is no force in the argument drawn from the Fathers following the LXX, and reading ἐκρίσε in that text.

But I further promised to give some account of Athanasius, in relation to this text; because Mr. Whiston^a has been pleased to say some very hard, and indeed unjust things of him, in relation hereto. Athanasius could not be at a loss to know the meaning of ἐκρίσε, which had been so well explained both by Dionysius and Eusebius. He therefore closed in with the common interpretation, as signifying appointed, or constituted^b. But then he understood the appointing to be to the work of redemption only, not the work of creation: at least he makes no mention of the latter. He seems to have been apprehensive that the notion of appointing to the work of creation might sound too low: and indeed many of the Arians scrupled not to say as much, at least, in words. Athanasius thought the way of speaking not so proper, his notion being that the Father could ^y Euseb. contr. Marcell. p. 150, 151.

^a Reply to Lord Nottingham, p.

^{29.} ^b Athanas. Orat. ii. p. 513.

^z See Bull. D. F. p. 210.

no more create without the Son^c, than exist without him, both being alike necessary; and therefore appointing was not so proper a word for it. This principle he lays down in the very same Oration, where he at large comments upon Prov. viii. 22. Nevertheless it may be said, that this great man might perhaps be too scrupulous in this matter. Cyril^d of Jerusalem (whose orthodoxy is unquestionable) scruples not to assign a reason why the Son was appointed to create: and it has been usual with all the Christian writers to represent all offices as descending from the Father to the Son. Athanasius himself allows that God the Son wrought in the creation, upon the Father's issuing out his fiat, or command for it: as also do several other Post-Nicene writers^e. This in reality comes to the same thing with what others intended by appointing, or constituting to the work of creation.

But here indeed Athanasius guards against the notion of the Son's being ὑπουργός, an underworker, in the low Arian sense: for otherwise he admits that the Father wrought by and in the Son. And I doubt not but it was his apprehension of the Arians misconstruing the appointing, which made him so scrupulous in relation to Prov. viii. The expression however, when it is not abused, is very innocent; and some zealous Athanasians^f were not afraid to understand Prov. viii. 22. of God the Son's being appointed and constituted Creator, and Head over all the works of God. Faustinus, that severe and rigid Homoousian, of the Eustathian party, and Luciferian sect, understands that text of Christ, as being appointed by the Father, the Head and Conductor of all his works, as well of creation as redemption^g. Let ^c Οὐκ ἠδύνατο μὴ δι' αὐτοῦ γενέσθαι τὰ δημιουργήματα. καθάπερ γὰρ τὸ φῶς τῷ ἀπαυγασματι τὰ πάντα φωτίζει καὶ ἄνευ τοῦ ἀπαυγασματος οὐκ ἂν τι φωτισθεῖν· οὕτω καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ὡς διὰ χειρὸς, ἐν τῷ λόγῳ εἰργάσατο τὰ πάντα, καὶ χωρὶς αὐτοῦ οὐδὲν ποιεῖ. Athan. Orat. ii. p. 498, 499.

^d Cyril. Hieros. Catech. xi. p. 160. Πατὴρς Βουλθθέντος τὰ πάντα κατασκευᾶσθαι, τῷ τοῦ πατρὸς πνεύματι ὁ υἱὸς τὰ πάντα ἐδημιούργησεν. ἵνα τηρῇ τῷ πατρὶ τὴν ἀθεντικὴν ἐξουσίαν, καὶ ὁ υἱὸς δὲ πάλιν ἔχη ἐξουσίαν τῶν ἰδίων δημιουργημάτων, &c.

Theodorit's account of this matter appears to be as just and accurate as any.

Οὕτε ὁ πατὴρ βοηθείας δεόμενος κτίζει διὰ υἱοῦ, οὕτε ὁ υἱὸς βοηθείας χηρίζων, κτίζει διὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, ἀλλ' ἵνα ἐκ τῶν γιγνομένων δευχθῇ πατὴρ, καὶ υἱοῦ, καὶ ἁγίου πνεύματος ἡ ταυτότης. Dial. iv. adv. Macedon. p. 367.

^e Athanas. p. 216, 499. Hilarius, p. 325, 837, 840. Basil. de Sp. S. c. 16. Greg. Nyss. tom. i. p. 993. tom. ii. p. 454.

^f Hoc initium habeat Sapientia Dei, quod de Deo processit ad creanda omnia tam cœlestia quam terrestria, non quo cœperit esse in Deo. Creata est ergo Sapientia, imo genita; non sibi quæ semper erat, sed his quæ ab ea fieri oportebat. Hilar. Diacon. apud Ambros. p. 349.

^g Quod creata est Sapientia, ad mysterium vel rerum creandarum, vel this suffice to have shewn the sense of antiquity upon that text.

Now I return to you, who are entertaining your reader with a collection of scandal, and which you know to be such, for the greatest part of it. The scandal is produced at length; and what should have been, and has been pleaded to remove and confute it, is disingenuously kept out of sight: only it is said by you, "sufficient apologies have been made" for this or that Father, to shew that he was not indeed of Arius's notions. But what then? You pretend that your notions were not Arius's: so you would still have your reader apprehend that those Fathers might have been in your notions; whereas Bp. Bull, in his confutation of those scandals, (most of them misreports, and some of them malicious tales and lies,) has effectually prevented their being really serviceable either to Arius's cause or yours; which in reality (however you disguise the matter) are the very same. The conclusion you draw from this heap of stuff is pretty remarkable: "It evidently shews, that those ancient Fathers had not "entertained such a confused notion as you are labouring to "introduce of the Creator of all things:" whereas it is evident, to a demonstration, that my confused notion (as you unrighteously call it) was the very notion which all those Fathers had: or, if you think otherwise, why did you not distinctly shew where they contradict it, instead of producing a deal of idle tales, which (though you would have your reader lay some stress on) you yourself dare not undertake to defend?

Where is the consequence to be drawn from such premises? As let us see. The Apostolical Constitutions, which are spurious and interpolated by some Arian, have said something; therefore &c. Melito is said to have wrote περὶ κτῆσεως Χριστοῦ, which learned men doubt of; and neither Ruffinus nor Jerome would allow; therefore &c. Clemens has been charged with some things of which he was very innocent; therefore &c. Dionysius had enemies that told lies of him, abused him, and misrepresented his words; and some honest men were deceived thereby; therefore &c. Gregory likewise met with some that perverted his words, (as many have perverted our Articles or Liturgy;) therefore &c. In short, several other very orthodox humane dispensationis intellige: quam cum Dei Sapientia dignanter adsumit, creata dicitur. Faustin. contr. Arian. c. vi. p. 153.

Sapientia cum creata dicitur, non substantia ejus quasi quæ non erat, facta est: sed ipsa existens creata est initium viarum in opera ejus. Ibid.

men have been either falsely charged, or wrongfully suspected : therefore undoubtedly Dr. Waterland is mistaken in supposing them to have been orthodox. I refer the reader to Bp. Bull, who has abundantly answered what relates to these trifling accusations. Only, because you seem to insult and triumph the most in respect of Origen, I shall be at the trouble of giving the reader some account of that great man and his writings, and their hard fate in the world.

Origen was one that wrote much, and sometimes in haste : and it might be no great wonder if some uncautious things might sometimes drop from him ; or if his writings, passing through ignorant or malicious hands, might be otherwise represented than he intended or wrote. He complained of such misrepresentations in his lifetime ; and made an apology for things of that kind in a letter to Pope Fabian, about the year 248. The doctrine of a coeternal and consubstantial Trinity could be no new thing at that time. It appears by the famous case of Dionysius, but about ten years after, that it was the settled faith of the Church ; and that the generality, at least, were extremely jealous of the appearance of any thing that seemed to break in upon it. Origen's works however were still in great esteem ; and it does not appear that, for many years after his death, they were ever charged with heterodoxy in that article. Gregory Thaumaturgus, and Dionysius of Alexandria, whose orthodoxy in that doctrine has been abundantly vindicated by Bp. Bull, were great admirers of the man and of his writings. Methodius, about the year 290, (a man of orthodox principles,) began to impugn some of Origen's doctrines : but laid nothing to his charge in relation to the Trinity. About the year 308, he first began to have articles drawn up against him ; and among the several charges there were some upon that head. Pamphilus and Eusebius then undertook to apologize for him ; not by justifying any thing that seemed to lessen the divinity of the Son or Holy Ghost, but by shewing from Origen's own writings, that his doctrine was on the side of Christ's divinity, and against the Holy Ghost's being a creature. This appears from the remains we have of that Apology, according to Ruffin's translation ; who professes solemnly that he did not add a syllable, but made a just and literal translation. So that though Ruffin's other versions, where he professes to have taken a liberty, are the less to be depended on, this is of another kind, and may more securely be confided in : from whence I would take notice by the way, that even Eusebius at this time, before the rise of the Arian controversy, appears to have been very orthodox. I know there is an objection to be made out of Jerome: which the reader may see answered in Bp. Bull^h.

After Pamphilus, we find mention made of another *apologist*ⁱ, a very orthodox man himself, in respect of the Trinity, even in the judgment of Photius; who was used to judge too severely sometimes of the ancients, comparing their expressions too rigidly with those in use in his own times. That apologist acquits Origen as to any erroneous doctrine in the article of the Trinity: only he allows that Origen's zeal against Sabellianism might sometimes draw him into expressions that seemed to go too far the other way. Let us now come down to the Arian times. About the year 330, or later, the Arians endeavour to gain some countenance from Origen's writings: and some of the more zealous Catholics of the Eustathian party, who were for professing one hypostasis, had no opinion of Origen. The reason, I presume, was, because Origen every where insists upon the distinction of persons very much, and seemed not very reconcilable to the Eustathian way of professing one hypostasis. Origen therefore was much out of favour with that more rigid part of the Catholics; who differed from the rest in expression rather than real meaning, as appeared fully afterwards^k. Athanasius all the while stood up for Origen, and vindicated his own doctrine from Origen's writings^l. Gregory Nazianzen and Basil were both of them friends of Origen; defending his orthodoxy against the Arians^m. This was about the year 360. And though Basil thought Origen's notion of the Holy Ghost not to have been altogether sound, yet he objects nothing against him in respect of God the Son: and as to the Holy Ghost, he yet quotes passages from him where Origen spoke conformably to the doctrine and tradition of the Churchⁿ. And possibly the other suspected passages might not be Origen's own.

Titus of Bostra, another orthodox man of that time, was an advocate of Origen.

About 370, flourished Didymus, who is known to have been very zealous for the orthodox doctrine of the Trinity, and zealous also for Origen; looking upon those as weak men, and ⁱ Photius, Cod. cxvii. p. 293.

^h Bull. Def. F. p. 125.

^k Vid. Athanasium ad Antiochenos, p. 773. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. xxii. p. 396. Or. xxxii. p. 521.

^l Athanas. de Decret. Syn. N. p.

232.

^m Vid. Socrat. Eccl. H. lib. iv. c. 26. p. 246.

ⁿ Basil. de Sp. Sanct. c. xxix. p. 219.

of small sagacity, that suspected Origen on that head^o. Hitherto we have found no considerable men that condemned Origen as heterodox in the doctrine of the Trinity. The Catholics of greatest name and reputation asserted the contrary.

Let us come a little lower, to the year 380, and we shall now perceive a storm gathering; chiefly, I presume, by the means and the interest of the Eustathians, who had disliked Origen from the first. Epiphanius, about this time, was drawn in to be a party in a quarrel against the Origenists; and laid severe charges against Origen, even with respect to the doctrine of the Trinity. Ruffinus, at the same time, was a zealous advocate for Origen's orthodoxy; himself, as is well known, a strict Athanasian. Jerome being now about fifty years old, was also a great admirer of Origen. Nay, in the years 388 and 391, when past sixty, he still retained the same kind of opinion of Origen and his writings: as appears by his calling him the "master of the churches, second to none but the Apostles themselves^p." He declares that those who had in Origen's lifetime censured him, did it not for any novel doctrine, or heresy, but for envy; because they could not bear the reputation he had raised^q. Now could Jerome, so orthodox a man himself, and who had translated Didymus in defence of the divinity of the Holy Ghost; could he ever have thus commended Origen, had he, at that time, believed him heterodox in the doctrine of the Trinity? Impossible. He gives no better a name than that of barking dogs to those that then charged Origen with heresy: though at the same time Arians, or Macedonians, and all impugnors of the divinity of Christ or the Holy Ghost, were heretics in Jerome's account. To do Jerome justice, he stood up for Origen with resolution and courage some time; till, finding the stream run strong, he thought it convenient to tack about: and then (as is the nature of new converts in any case) he grew zealous and vehement on the opposite side. Then he set himself, meanly, to run down the man whom before he had so much commended. He fell to criticising his works, sometimes manifestly perverting his sense, sometimes representing it by halves; always putting ^o Vid. Hieronym. tom. iv. p. 347. 355, 409.

^p Origenem, quem post Apostolos, ecclesiarum magistrum nemo nisi imperitus negabit. Hieron. Præf. in Nom. Hebræ.

^q Non propter dogmatum novitatem, non propter hæresim, ut nunc adversus eum rabidi canes insimulant; sed quia gloriam eloquentiæ ejus et scientiæ ferre non poterant; et illo dicente omnes muti putabantur. Hieron. tom. iv. p. 67.

the worst constructions he possibly could upon his writings : as did also Epiphanius and Theophilus, who were afterwards joined with Anastasius Bishop of Rome, and many other Bishops of the west. Still Origen was not entirely destitute of some good and great defenders ; as Gregory Nyssen, the great Chrysostom, (bred up under Meletius, and never of the Eustathian party,) Theotimus, and John of Jerusalem. Severus Sulpitius, of that time, is a kind of neuter, passing a doubtful and moderate censure. St. Austin^r appears doubtful ; but, taking his accounts from Epiphanius, or other adversaries, leans to the severer side. Vincentius Lirinensis^s inclines to think that the plea about Origen's writings being adulterated^t might be very just. Socrates and Sozomen, of the fifth century, defend Origen's orthodoxy, and think he had been greatly misrepresented. Theodorit, of the same age, has been justly looked upon as a favourer of Origen ; because he reckons not the Origenists in his list of heretics : as neither did Philastrius, who wrote sixty years before him. What followed in the sixth century, under Justinian, is rather too late to come into account.

From what hath been said, it appears, that though antiquity were much divided in their sentiments of Origen's orthodoxy, in respect of the Trinity ; yet the most early and the most valuable men down to the times of Jerome, (and for a long while Jerome himself,) had acquitted him on that head. This account is a sufficient answer to what you have raked together in pages 327, 328, 329, 330. And I must observe, that were it really fact that Origen had taught what you pretend in respect to the article of the Trinity, it would by no means follow that he was therein a true interpreter of the Church's doctrine in that instance, any more than in the other articles laid to his charge by his accusers : many of which are known to have been directly contrary to the standing doctrines of the Church, as well before as after

^r Origeniani—mortuorum resurrectionem negant, Christum autem et Spiritum Sanctum creaturam dicunt—Hæc quidem de Origene, Epiphanius refert. Sed defensores ejus dicunt Origenem Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum unius ejusdemque substantiæ docuisse ; neque resurrectionem repulisse mortuorum. Sed qui ejus plura legerunt, contradicunt—

Dicit præterea ipse Origenes quod Filius Dei sanctis hominibus comparatus veritas sit, Patri collatus mendacium ; et quantum distant Apostoli his time. Such was the denial of the resurrection of the dead, imputed to him, among other errors, by his adversaries; as St. Austin observes: who, in the same place, mentions some other erroneous and uncatholic tenets of Origen. At last, the question of Origen's faith in the Trinity may be certainly determined out of his treatise against Celsus, (still remaining, and free from corruption.) And it is from thence chiefly, that Bishop Bull has demonstrated that Origen's doctrine on that head was sound and just, directly opposite to the principles which you are now espousing.

Christo, tantum Filius Patri. Unde nec orandus est Filius, &c. Augustin. Hæres. 43.

^s Sed dicat aliquis, corruptos esse Origenis libros. Non resisto, quin potius malo : nam id a quibusdam et traditum et scriptum est ; non Catholicis tantum, sed etiam Hæreticis. Vincent. Lirin. c. xxiii.

^t See Ruffinus's plea about the adulteration of Origen's books, handsomely defended against St. Jerome, by the learned Huetius. Origeniana, p. 187, 188.

I may take notice of your citing (p. 335.) a second-hand passage of Eusebius; as if he had made the Son created in the vulgar sense of created in this question, directly contrary to what Eusebius has argued at large in his piece against Marcellus. I hope you did it ignorantly. However, to prevent the like for the future, I shall here give you Eusebius's own words. Commenting on Prov. viii. 22. he says thus: "Though he says created, he does not say it, as if he came from non-existence into existence; nor as if he also, like as the rest of the creatures, were from non-entity, (as some have erroneously imagined;) but he was living and subsisting, prior and preexisting to the creation of the universe: and being appointed of the Lord his Father to bear rule over the universe; created here stands for appointed, or constituted." He goes on to several texts of Scripture, 1 Peter ii. 13. Amos iv. 13. Psalm ci. 19. to shew that κρίσις, or κρίζω, may admit that sense of appointing, or ordaining, rather than creating. And upon the words of the Psalm, "Create in me a clean heart, O God," he observes, that this is not said as if the Psalmist's heart was then to begin to exist, but what was before should be cleansed. You will please to remember how highly you resented my quoting Socrates for Eusebius's opinion, seemingly contradictory to Eusebius's other tenets. You have here quoted a short sentence out of an index of a book, not published to speak for itself; and have given it a construction flatly contrary to what Eusebius undoubtedly taught in his piece against Marcellus; namely, that Prov. viii. 22. was τοῦ παντός κόσμου συστάσεως ἄρχειν δὲ τῶν ὄλων ὑπὸ κυρίου τοῦ αὐτοῦ πατρὸς κατατεταγμένος, τοῦ ἔκτισεν ἐνταῦθα ἀντὶ τοῦ κατέταξεν, ἢ κατέστησεν εἰρημένου. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. p. 150, 151.

^u Εἰ δὲ λέγοι ἐκτίσθαι αὐτὸν, οὐχ ὡς ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος εἰς τὸ εἶναι παρελθὼν, τοῦτ' ἂν εἶποι, οὐδ' ὡς ὁμοίως τοῖς λοιποῖς κτίσμασι, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος γεγονώς, ἢ τινας οὐκ ὀρθῶς ὑπειλήφασιν, ἀλλ' ὡς ὑφεστῶς μὲν καὶ ζῶν, προῶν τε καὶ προϋπάρχων τῆς

not to be understood of creating, in the sense you pretend. As to what you cite from him in respect of the Holy Ghost, I know not whether it may admit of a candid^x construction. He was certainly mistaken, if he took that doctrine, such as you understand it, to be the doctrine of the Church. But it is out of my compass to treat of the divinity of the Holy Ghost. To conclude; I referred^y you to Ignatius, Athenagoras, Irenæus, Origen, Dionysius of Rome, Dionysius of Alexandria, Theognostus, and Methodius; as express authorities against the doctrine of the Son's being a creature. As to consequential and indirect testimonies against it, they are numberless; and have been produced by Bishop Bull, Le Moyne, Nourry, and many others, in this controversy. To this you have opposed such evidence as Bishop Bull has already answered, and you will not stand by, or engage to defend; but have rather owned to be indefensible. Only you think some advantage you should make of it; which some advantage is yet very unfair, and not regularly or distinctly laid down by any certain consequence, but is merely a confused and precarious conclusion. Upon the whole, every honest reader will easily perceive on what side he ought here to determine.

QUERY XIII.

Whether there can be any middle between being made out of nothing, and out of something; that is, between being out of nothing, and out of the Father's substance; between being essentially God and being a creature; whether, consequently, the Son must not be either essentially God, or else a creature?

IF any man wanted an instance of the power of affections or prejudice in holding out against conviction; or if there were not too many lamentable examples of it in history, sacred and profane; I would recommend to him the perusal of what you have under this Query, to give him a very lively example and idea of it. You begin with telling me, "there are many dilemmas in meta-physics, physics, and theology, wherein it may be very presumptuous to determine absolutely which part of the dilemma is the "truth." Had you rested neuter in this controversy, your plea would have appeared the better: but as you have determined on one side, and in virtue of such dilemmas as are neither half so clear nor half so certain as this is, you have no pretence left of that kind.

^x See the Bishop of London's Letter Defended, p. 56, &c.

^y Defence, vol. i. p. 389.

You should therefore tell me what medium there is between being essentially God, and being a creature; or else own the Son a creature. We do not thus shift and shuffle with you, when you press us with dilemmas. Derived or underived; we say derived: being or not being; we say being: necessary or not necessary in existence; we say necessary: self-existent or not self-existent; we say not self-existent: supreme God or not supreme God; we say supreme God. And whatever invidious terms, or however liable to be misunderstood, you put the question in, still we answer frankly, and discover our minds. And what can be the reason of the difference between your conduct and ours, but that we desire to be open and plain, and you love disguises? We have a cause which we know we can defend: you are conscious that you have not. We are justly sensible what advantage you every where make by putting the question, “Whether God the Son be the supreme God, or that supreme God?”

1. The expression is apt to insinuate to the reader a notion of two Gods, supreme and inferior: on which supposition the Son certainly could not be the supreme.

2. It is further apt to confound the reader, as insinuating, either that we suppose the Son to be the supreme Father himself, or else that the supremacy of order, or office, belonged equally to both. Yet we bear with your thus unequally and partially wording the question; being content to admit it with proper distinctions, and to assert that God the Son is the supreme God, or even that supreme God, as you are pleased to word it for us.

And why should not you as plainly own, that you make the Son a creature; there being no imaginable medium between uncreated and created, between God and creature? Yet you pretend to be arguing only against the Son's being essentially God, or supreme God, and not to be arguing for his being a creature; though they come to the same thing differently expressed. You say, p. 338, there lies a fallacy in my words, essentially God. As how? Shew where the fallacy is. You say, the words ought to mean self-existent in such a sense as the Father alone is. Well then; if you take self-existence and necessary existence to signify the same thing, you of consequence allow no medium, but that the Son must either be the Father himself, or else a creature. Why do you not therefore say plainly he is a creature? You will ask then, whether I would prove that the Son is the Father himself, in proving him to be no creature? No. But when I have proved that point, (as is easily done, and has been done a thousand times,) it will then be apparent how absurd and wild your notion is, that there is no medium between God the Father and a creature. I say then, that there neither is nor can be any medium between being necessarily existing and being a creature: and therefore since you allow nothing to be necessary but the Father, you plainly make a creature of the Son. Instead of answering this plain argument, you do nothing but evade, and shift in such a manner, as shews only that you are afraid of coming to the point, and of putting the controversy on a fair issue: which is highly disingenuous. Were I to abuse my readers at this rate, how would you insult, and look upon it as no better than giving up the cause. I told you before^z, and now tell you again, that you assert evidently, and by immediate necessary consequence, “that the Maker, and Redeemer, and Judge of the “whole world is a creature, is mutable and corruptible, depending “entirely on the good pleasure of God, has a precarious existence and dependent powers, finite and limited; and is neither “so perfect in his nature, nor so exalted in privileges, but that “the Father may, when he pleases, create another, equal, or “even superior to him.”

This is no unrighteous representation, nor appealing to the prejudices of the ignorant vulgar: you know it is not: but it is laying down the plain naked truth. And it ought to be sounded in the ears and riveted in the thoughts of all that come to read you; that they may be deeply sensible what you are doing, and whether it is that you are leading them.

These are not things shocking to the vulgar only, nor so much to the vulgar as to the wisest and most considerate, and most religious men. In short, they are such weights upon your hypothesis, as have ever sunk and bore it down among the sober part of mankind: and they will ever do so, as long as true piety and sobriety of thought have any footing in the world. This you are sensible of; and are therefore forced to wink hard.

You are next endeavouring to retort; which is your constant method when you are nonplused, and have no direct answer to give. I “assert,” you say, “many supreme Gods in one undivided substance.” Ridiculous: they are not many Gods, for that very reason, because their substance is undivided. Is there no difference between charging false consequences and true ones? Make you out the consequence which you pretend, at your leisure: mine is self-evident, and makes itself.

^z Defence, vol. i. p. 394.

^a You run off (p. 341.) to some foreign things, which have been answered in their place. You talk of authority and dignity; not telling us what you mean by them, whether of order and office, or of nature; though it is about the last only that we are inquiring. I suppose, if there be ever so many testimonies in antiquity for the Son's uncreatedness, consubstantiality, eternity, necessary existence, omnipresence, omnipotence, and other divine attributes; all must yield to a few equivocations and quibbles about authority and dignity: which if you had once defined and fixed to a determinate meaning, (as every ingenuous man would have done,) it would have been presently seen whether any testimony you produce were pertinent or no; or rather, that none of them are pertinent. As to Basil, whom you pretend to cite, it is certain he did not mean by ἀξιώματι what you mean; for he absolutely denies that the Father is greater in respect of dignity^a, meaning essential dignity: and he particularly excepts against your notion of making the Son subject; and censures Eunomius smartly, for taking from him the dignity of dominion, τῆς δεσποτείας τὸ ἀξίωμα. In another place, he spends a whole chapter in confutation of that very notion you are contending for; proving that God the Son is united in nature, in glory, in dignity^b with the Father, of equal honour and authority^c. I had told you, that "an eternal substance, not divine, and a Son made "out of it, was what you must mean, or mean nothing^d." This you confute by calling it a "calumny, ridiculous, and unjust;" which is a very easy way of confutation. Let the reader see the reason why you had nothing to offer but hard words. You deny the Son's being of the same divine substance that the Father is; you allow him not to be necessarily existing; you deny his being out of nothing. Let any Œdipus make other sense of this put together, than what I made of it^e.

^a Ἀλλὰ μεγέθει μὲν ὁ πατὴρ τοῦ υἱοῦ οὐκ ἂν λεχθεῖη μείζων, ἀσώματος γάρ — ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἀξιώματι, οὐ γὰρ ἐγένετο ὁ οὐκ ἦν ποτέ. Basil. contr. Eun. lib. iv. et lib. i. p. 236. ed. Bened.

^b Τῷ ἀξιώματι συνημμένον.

^c Συμβρονον καὶ ὁμότιμον — τὸ τῆς ἀξίας ὁμότιμον. Basil. de Sp. Sancto, cap. 6.

^d Defence, vol. i. p. 396.

^e Qui Filium de Patris substantia natum denegant, debent utique dicere unde arbitrentur Dei Filium exstitisse: utrum de nihilo, an ex aliquo? Si de nihilo exstitit, Creatura dicendus est, non Creator. Si autem de aliquo dicitur, sic etiam id ipsum Deus fecit, unde Filium genuit. An forte coæternum dicitur aliquid habuisse unde posset Filium generare? Si coæternum aliquid æstimatur, unde genitus Filius creditur, Manichæorum error hac adsertione firmatur. Fulgent. Resp. contr. Arian. object. iv. p. 58.

QUERY XIV.

Whether Dr. Clarke, who every where denies the consubstantiality of the Son as absurd and contradictory, does not of consequence affirm the Son to be a creature, ἔξ οὐκ ὄντων, and so fall under his own censure, and is self-condemned?

HERE, being conscious that this charge is just, you can give no direct answer; but, as usual, must retreat to little shifts and poor evasions. I sufficiently explained the true sense, and my sense of consubstantiality in my Defence, vol. i. p. 543, 544. Yet now you pretend to complain, you understand not what I mean by consubstantiality: whereas the truth is, you understand it so well as to know that this Query is unanswerable. But let us hear how you can cavil where you cannot reply. “Sometimes,” you tell me, I “seem to mean that the Father and Son are individually the same single, identical, whole substance.” But where do you ever find me talking so weakly and crudely? This you gather only from the word individual; which is capable of a larger and stricter sense, as I have often intimated. When you suppose that part of God’s substance which fills the sun, to be individually the same with what fills the moon; do you mean that both are individually the same single, identical, whole substance? How often must you be reminded of your unequal dealing in this controversy, that arguments must hold against the Trinity, which, in other cases, have no force with you at all? I may speak of whole and parts, while I am arguing against a man that brings every thing under extension: but as to the Catholic doctrine of the Church, which I here defend, the words are not proper; only this is certain, that one Person of the Trinity is not all the Persons of the Trinity. Yet because the Persons are undivided, they are one individual substance; which is as far from Sabellianism as from Tritheism, and can justly be charged with neither. You pretend that Dr. Clarke does not deny such consubstantiality as was taught by the Nicene Fathers. If this be true, then he admits, or does not deny, that the substance of the Son is of the same kind with that of the Father, as truly as light answers to light, very God to very God, uncreated to uncreated, and so on[†]: that is, he admits all that I do, and there is no longer any dispute between us. For I will easily prove to him, after he is advanced thus far, that whatever is thus equal in nature to the Father, cannot be unequal in any essential powers or perfections: and so all that you have been doing drops at once. If these be the Doctor's present sentiments, I am very glad of it : they were not always so. You say, indeed, " whatever the Son's metaphysical nature, essence, or substance be, all the Doctor's propositions (so far as you perceive) hold nevertheless equally true." Are you then so very unperceiving in a plain and clear case? Turn to five of the Doctor's propositions, (5th, 12th, 14th, 19th, 23rd,) where he denies the Substance, or Person, of the Son, or Holy Ghost, to be self-existent : and compare your own construction of self-existent, by necessarily existing, with them ; and then tell me, whether the Doctor has determined nothing about the substance of the Son. Doth he not make the substance of the Father necessary, the other precarious ; the one self-sufficient, the other depending ; the one immutable, the other mutable at pleasure ; in a word, the one infinitely perfect, the other infinitely short of it? All this follows by self-evident connection from the Doctor's denying the Son's necessary existence. Now certainly he has hereby determined their substances to be entirely different in kind ; or else I should despair of shewing, that a man and a horse, a tree and a stone, are not ὁμοούσια, are not of the same kind. For what is it we denote and distinguish different kinds of substances by, but by their different essential properties? Do not therefore now bring me the lame pretence, about the Doctor's propositions being the same on either supposition. I bore with it in the Modest Pleader ζ , (though sensible how little sincerity was in it,) because I was then doubtful whether the Doctor should be charged with denying the necessary existence. You have eased me of that doubt : and now the plea is ridiculous, and will serve no longer. The mystery is at length come out ; and self-existence, wherewith we have been so long amused, wants no unriddling.

[†] See my Defence, vol. i. p. 544.

QUERY XV.

Whether he also must not, of consequence, affirm of the Son, that there was a time when he was not, since God must exist before the creature ; and therefore is again self-condemned. (See Prop. 16. Script. Doctr.) And whether he does not equivocate in saying, elsewhere, that the second Person has been always with the first ; and that there has been no time when he was not so : and lastly, whether it be not a vain and weak attempt to pretend to any middle way between the orthodox and the Arians ; or to carry the Son's divinity the least higher than they did, without taking in the consubstantiality ?

ζ See the Preface to my Sermons, at the beginning of this volum

IT has been shewn that the Son is, upon the Doctor's principles, a precarious being, which is nothing but another name for creature: and now the question is only whether a creature can be eternal. And this is of no great moment to the cause itself, but only to shew the Doctor's self-condemnation, in blaming such as have said, there was a time when the Son was not. If, for the sake hereof, you will maintain that a creature is eternal, you shall dispute by yourself, or else against Mr. Whiston^b; who justly calls it a despised and absurd tenet: only he happened to have his thoughts a little wandering, when he called it an Athanasian mystery, instead of calling it an Arian one. For I never heard of any one Athanasian but what despised and rejected it. There were some Arians who formed a new sect about the year 394, under the name of Psathyrians, who have been charged with that principle by Theodoritⁱ; though I think Socrates's and Sozomen's account^k of them rather acquits them of it. Now if you are inclined to maintain such wild doctrine, say so plainly: if not, let us know the meaning of the Doctor's censuring those that should presume to say of the Son, that there was a time when he was not^l; and of his saying that the second Person has been always with the first. I am sensible there is something very mean and disparaging in the way of equivocating upon so serious a subject. A man may well be ashamed to own it: so I press it no further.

You were to find a middle way between the orthodox and the Arians: which I called a vain and weak attempt, and proved it to be so. You do not care to own your mistake here: but you say, "it is not material to determine." That is, you find it has been evidently determined against you; though you are very unwilling to confess it. Next you come to your usual method of misrepresenting my notion, and charging three supreme Gods: which trifling has been answered oftener than it deserved. What follows, p. 348, 349, is so exceeding low, that in pure commiseration one would pass it over. Page 350, you come to dispute the point, whether the Doctor's scheme was condemned

^b Nor do I quite despair of seeing such shrewd and cunning Athanasians as Dr. W. driven to this last evasion, and of hearing them broach this other great Athanasian mystery, how despised and absurd an one soever, that any creature whatsoever may be strictly speaking, in point of duration, coeternal with its Creator. Whiston, Reply to Lord Nottingham, p. 30.

ⁱ Theod. Hæret. Fab. lib. 4. Compare the supposititious Disputatio contra Arium. p. 211. ed. Bened.

^k Socrat. Eccl. Hist. lib. v. cap. 23. p. 300. Sozom. Eccl. Hist. lib. vii. cap. 17. p. 303.

^l Clarke's Script. Doctr. prop. 16.

near 1400 years ago by the Council of Nice. You pretend that none of his Propositions were condemned. But I insist upon it, that the Doctor, in denying the Son's necessary existence, evidently makes him a creature: and therefore all that is material in the Doctor's Propositions, all that we find fault with, in respect of his doctrine of God the Son, stands fully condemned by the Nicene Council. And do not imagine that the point of difference betwixt us lies only in authority, or office, and not in nature: you make the nature of the Son wholly of a different kind from the Father, as hath been shewn. I told you of our doctrine, that it has "prevailed for 1400 years:" upon which you remind me of my saying of the Arians, that the "world was once, in a manner, "their own." In a manner, that is, when they had got the emperors of the world, in a manner, on their side. You return to your quibble about individual essence. Please to observe, essentia de essentia, substantia de substantia, was Catholic doctrine all along: and this is the full meaning of individual essence. Not essences, nor substances, nor beings: any more than you will say substances, while yet you admit substance and substances; or beings, where yet you are forced to allow being and being^m.

You tell me, I acknowledge person and intelligent agent to be the same. I never acknowledged any such thing; but always denied their being reciprocal. But because this word person is a matter of much dispute, I shall here endeavour, having nothing further worth notice under this Query, to give the best account I am able of the true notion of person. I shall not here search into the books of philosophers, but into the common apprehensions of mankind, learned and unlearned; which appears to be the true method of knowing what ideas are affixed to the word person.

Our ideas are at first all of them particular, and borrowed from what we daily converse with, from what we see and feel. Our first notion of person is the notion we have of a man, a woman, a child. By degrees we learn to abstract from the differences of age, sex, stature, &c. and so we form a more general idea of an human person, meaning one of our own species: and this idea, perhaps, a rude countryman would express, improperly, by the word Christian, in opposition to brutes, or inanimate things. From the idea of human persons thus formed, we proceed to make a more general idea, by leaving out what is peculiar to our species, and keeping in what we conceive common to us with angels, suppose, or any intelligent being. And now we take in rationality only, or intelligence: and a person is something intelligent in opposition to the brutal creation. Indeed there is something analogous to person even in brutes: and so it is common to say he or she of them, in like manner as we speak of persons. But still the common notion of person includes intelligence: and I think Damascenⁿ is very singular in bringing in τούδε τὸν ἵππον under ὑπόστασις and πρόσωπον, signifying person. But perhaps he meant it of ὑπόστασις only, and did not nicely distinguish. Thus far we are advanced, that person is something which is the subject of intelligence. But still we are not come far enough to fix the idea of a single person: for an army, a council, a senate, is something which is the subject of intelligence, something that understands and acts. We must therefore be more particular: and at length we may bring it to this: a single person is an intelligent agent, having the distinctive characters of I, thou, he; and not divided nor distinguished into more intelligent agents capable of the same characters. This definition or description will, I think, take in all the ideas that mankind have generally affixed to the word person, when understood of a single person. I will shew this first negatively, and then positively.

^m See my Defence, vol. i. p. 371, 372, 448. and Reply to Dr. Whitby, p. 209 of this volume.

1. Negatively. An army, a senate, &c. is not a single person, because divided into more. The Trinity, upon the Catholic hypothesis, is not a single person, because distinguished into more intelligent agents than one.

2. Positively. A man is a single person by the definition.

An angel is a single person by the same.

Father, Son, or Holy Ghost, a single person by the same.

Any separate soul, a single person also.

The θεάνθρωπος, or God-man, a single person: because not divided nor distinguished into more intelligent agents than one, having each of them the distinctive characters.

To clear this matter a little further, we must next distinguish persons into several kinds: as, 1. divided and undivided; 2. simple and compound: which, when explained, will, I hope, set this whole affair in a true and full light.

1. As to the distinction of divided and undivided; all persons, but the three divine Persons, are divided and separate from each other in nature, substance, and existence. They do not mutually include and imply each other : therefore they are not only distinct subjects, agents, or supposita, but distinct substances also. But the divine Persons, being undivided, and not having any separate existence independent on each other ; they cannot be looked upon as substances, but as one substance distinguished into several supposita, or intelligent agents.

ⁿ Damascen. Dialect. c. xliii. p. 46.

2. As to the other distinction of simple and compound, it will appear what reason there is for it. An angel, or a soul, (whether supposed first preexisting, or afterwards separated,) is a simple person, and so is God the Father, or God the Holy Ghost, upon the Catholic scheme. But man is a compound person of soul and body. It is plain, that according to the common idea of person, (which must here be our rule,) the body goes to make up the person : otherwise we could not say James or John is fat or lean, low or tall, healthful or sickly, or the like ; such things belonging to the body only, and yet belonging to the person. If we suppose John's soul to have preexisted, it would be a person in that preexistent state as much as after, having all that belongs to the definition of a person : and by taking a body afterward, the soul does not become magis persona, but major persona : that is, the person is enlarged by the addition of a body, but still altogether is considered but as one subject with intelligence in it ; and all is but one Peter, one John, one I, he, or thou, which completes the notion of a single person. Let John die, the body is no longer part of the person, but the person goes where the intelligence rests ; the soul in this case becomes, not minus persona, by the separation, but minor.

Our next example of a compound person is the θεάνθρωπος, consisting of the Logos, the soul, and the body. The Logos was a Person before the incarnation, as much as after. But by taking in a soul and body, the whole Person then is made up of all three. And thus Christ is always represented in Scripture in the same manner as any single person is represented ; one I, one he, one thou, whether he is spoken of with respect to what he is as the Logos, or as having a soul or a body. The same Christ made the world, increased in wisdom, was pierced with a spear : in which three examples, it appears that the Logos, the soul, and the body, all go to make up the one Person, the one compound Person of Christ. And hence it is, that the churches of God, following the common idea of a single person, which they found to suit with the Scripture representation of Christ, have rightly and justly included all the three constituents in the one Person°.

These are my present thoughts of the word person, and the ideas contained in it. If any man has any thing to object to it, I shall be willing either more fully to explain, or else to alter the notion, as I see reason for it. You will perceive that intelligent acting substance is implied in every person; and more persons are more intelligent substances, whenever their substance is divided, but not otherwise: and two intelligent substances are two persons, where both have existed separately, or have been severally capable of the distinctive characters, but not otherwise. You will also perceive, that intelligent acting substance (that is, intelligent agent, as you call it) is not equivalent to person, neither are the phrases reciprocal. But to intelligent agent add, its not being divided, nor distinguished into more intelligent agents having the same distinctive characters; and then, as I conceive, you complete the notion of person, according as it has commonly passed with mankind. I suppose not any of the divine Persons a person in a sense different from the common meaning of the word person: they are Persons in the same common sense of person; but Persons of a different kind, and differently circumstantiated from what human, or angelical, or any other kinds of persons are. Thus person, like triangle, appears to be the name for an abstract idea: and the name is equally applicable to every kind of person, as the name of triangle is to every kind of triangle.

QUERY XVI.

Whether by these (of the first column) and the like texts, adoration and worship be not so appropriated to the one God, as to belong to him only?

Divine worship due

To the one God.

Thou shalt have no other gods before me, Exod. xx. 3.

Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve, Matt. iv. 10.

To Christ.

They worshipped him, Luke xxiv. 52. Let all the angels of God worship him, Heb. i. 6.

That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father, John v. 23.

UNDER this Query I fully proved, in my Defence, that, according to Scripture and antiquity, adoration is due to God alone, in opposition to all creature-worship whatever. You enter very little, if at all, into the particulars of the evidence which I produced: but you form two objections against the thing in general, leaving me the part of a respondent, instead of undertaking it yourself, as was proper in answer to queries. Your two objections are these: 1. That if my arguments prove any thing, they prove too much, viz. that Christ is the very Father himself. 2. That they again prove too much in disallowing all mediatorial worship; which, you think, is plainly warranted by Scripture and antiquity.

° Videmus duplicem statum, non confusum, sed conjunctum in una Persona, Deum et hominem Jesum. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 27. Τοῦ Θεοῦ Λόγου ἐνώσει, τῇ καθ' ὑπόστασιν φυσικῇ, ἐνωθέντος τῇ σαρκί, &c. Irenæi Fragm. p. 347. Bened.

1. As to your first pretence, it is founded only on the personal characters, I, thou, he; seemingly excluding all persons but one. To which it is answered, that there is no necessity arising from any pretended force of the exclusive terms, for excluding all other persons P: but there is a necessity, from the very end and design of the Law, for excluding all other gods; and from the whole tenor of Scripture, for excluding all creatures: so that my argument proves what I intended to prove, and no more. And why have you not answered, after you have been so often called upon, the reasons I had offered in my Defence, and Preface to my Sermons, against the receiving inferior gods to any degree of religious worship? Surely it should be your business to respond sometimes, especially in reply to queries, and not merely to oppose.

2. As to your second pretence about mediatorial worship, first borrowed from Pagans, handed on by Arians, and brought to our own times by Papists; I shall give it a large and distinct answer presently. You have for some time (I mean you and your friends) amused unthinking persons with a phrase, never yet distinctly explained by you, but serving to delude such as can be content with sounds instead of sense. I shall endeavour to search this matter to the bottom, once for all; and then shew how easy it is to unravel your speculations on this head.

By mediatorial worship you intend some kind of worship to be paid to Christ; such as you have been pleased to invent for him, rather than none. I do not find that you have secured any worship at all to the Holy Ghost, (who is no mediator,) though all antiquity has paid him worship. But you are so confused and undeterminate in your account of mediatorial worship, that it is not easy to discover what you precisely mean by it; or perhaps you yourself do not yet know what you intend. There are but two general senses, so far as I conceive, to be put upon it; though these again are divided into many particular ones. The two I speak of, are either, 1. the making Christ the medium of worship; or, 2. the worshipping him under the character of a Mediator. We must examine both these :

P See my fourth Sermon, p. 84, &c. of this volume.

1. A medium of worship is a phrase of some latitude and ambiguity. It must be explained by instances and examples; that considering all cases which can well be thought of, we may at last hit upon what you mean by mediatorial worship. An image has been sometimes thought a medium of worship, when God is supposed to be worshipped by and through an image: as in the instance of the molten calf, and in the golden calves of Dan and Bethel. Such mediatorial worship as this leaves very little honour to the medium: all is supposed to pass through, to the ultimate object. Thus the Egyptians, in worshipping the sacred animals, supposed the worship to pass to the prototype, to the Deity whereunto the animals belonged. This, I presume, is not your notion of mediatorial worship: if it be, it is low indeed.

There may be a second sense of making a medium of worship: as, if we were to pray to Christ, to pray for us. This is near akin to the Romish doctrine of praying to saints and angels. If this be what you mean by mediatorial worship, your opinion of Christ may still be very low, as of one that gives us nothing himself, but only asks another to give us. But, besides that there is no warrant for praying to any thing less than God, and so such a practice must be wholly unjustifiable; I conceive that this is not what you mean by mediatorial worship, it being so extremely low and dishonourable to suppose that he can himself do nothing for us, especially having declared the contrary, John xiv. 13, 14.

There is a third sense of a medium of worship: as if we ask the Father any thing by and through the merits of Jesus Christ. If this be what you mean by mediatorial worship, I am afraid it will amount to no worship at all upon your principles. You will not say that the same worship is therein paid to both: and unless you say that, you leave no worship at all for God the Son in such addresses or applications.

There may be a fourth consideration of a medium of worship, supposing Christ to be directly worshipped, but "to the glory of the Father:" the Father being imagined to be glorified through Christ as through a medium. Now here I must ask, Whether the worship supposed to be paid to Christ be supreme or inferior? You will not say supreme: and if it be inferior, it cannot be presumed to pass on to the supreme object, who would not be honoured but affronted with inferior worship. It must therefore rest in the inferior object, and so cannot be called mediate, but ultimate worship. I must add, that no worship of a creature can terminate in the Creator, or be for his glory, because he has absolutely forbidden all creature-worship: and therefore, again, such worship as we are now supposing cannot be mediate, but ultimate, terminating where it is offered.

Indeed, the Scripture never makes any difference between directing and terminating worship; but supposes it always to terminate in the object to which it is directed, or offered. God interprets all image-worship, or creature-worship, as terminating in the image, or creature, to which it is offered. When the Israelites worshipped the calf, they “offered sacrifice to an “idol,” not to God; and they “worshipped the molten image,” not God, in doing it; however they might intend and mean it (as they certainly did) for the Jehovah. They are said to have “forgot God their Saviour,” (Psalm cvi. 21,) notwithstanding their intention to remember him in it; because it was not remembering him in a manner suitable to his commandment, which was to offer worship to God only. So also Jeroboam is said to have made other gods, and to have cast “God behind his “back,” (1 Kings xiv. 9. 2 Chr. xiii. 11.) notwithstanding his intention to terminate all the worship in the true Jehovah. I may add, that when St. John was preparing to offer worship to an angel, (whether out of a sudden transport, or not then knowing that it was a mere angel,) no doubt but he designed the glory of God, and to terminate all worship there: and yet it is observable, that the angel, notwithstanding, bade him “worship “God;” intimating, that it is not worshipping of God, unless the worship be directly offered to God. Dr. Clarke^q has a fancy, that the idolatry of such as worshipped the true God through mediums of their own inventing, lay only in their making idol-mediators, such as God had not allowed them to have. But this notion is very peculiar, and has no foundation in Scripture or antiquity. To pay religious worship to any thing is, in Scripture style, making a God of it. This is true, even of what is called mediate or relative worship; as I have before instanced in the case of the golden calf, and the calves of Dan and Bethel. And Laban’s teraphims, or images, which were supposed to be no more than symbols or mediums of the worship of the Jehovah, (for ^q Clarke’s Script. Doct. p. 344. 2nd ed.

Laban worshipped, as some believe, the true God^r;) are called gods^s; because worship was offered directly to them, instead of being offered immediately to God. To make any medium of worship was setting up other gods, not other mediators; strange gods, not strange mediators; it was robbing God, not any mediator, of his honour; and making an idol-god, not an idol-mediator. The idolaters are never charged with mistaking the medium, but mistaking the object; not with having false mediators, but false gods; not for worshipping those that were not mediators by office, but those that by nature were no gods; for worshipping the creature, not instead of the mediator, but instead of the "Creator, who "is blessed for ever." Such is the constant language both of the Old and New Testament, which never fix the charge upon the setting up false mediators or mediums of worship; nor ever insert any caution against it: so weak and groundless is the Doctor's notion of idol-mediators. What then is the result, you will ask, of this reasoning? Does not the worship of Christ terminate in the glory of God the Father? Admit that it does so: then certainly the worship of Christ is not creature-worship. For since all worship terminates in the object to which it is directed or offered, if the same act of worship, offered to Christ, terminates in God the Father; then the case is plain that it terminates in both, and both are one undivided object. Having considered the several senses of a medium of worship, and shewn that none of them will answer your purpose, I come now,

2. To consider the worship of Christ under the character of a Mediator, and to see what sense we can make of mediatorial worship under that view. A Mediator may be considered two ways, according to the ancients; a Mediator by nature, and Mediator by office. The first and principal sense of a Mediator (μεσίτης) between God and man, is a Person partaking of the nature of both, perfect God and perfect man. In this sense, principally, the ancient Christians constantly understood Christ to be a Mediator. So Irenæus, Melito, Clemens, Hippolytus, Tertullian, Cyprian, Novatian, and others of the Ante-Nicenes; whose testimonies I have placed in the margin^t. As to Post-

^r Gen. xxxi. 49, 53.

^s Gen. xxxi. 30. Josh. xxiv. 2.

^t Εἰ μὴ συνηνώθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῷ Θεῷ οὐκ ἂν ἠδυνήθη μετασχεῖν τῆς ἀφθαρσίας. ἔδει γὰρ μεσιτήν Θεοῦ τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων, διὰ τῆς ἰδίας πρὸς ἑκατέρου οἰκειότητος εἰς φιλίαν καὶ ὁμόνοιαν τοῦ ἀμφοτέρου συναγαγεῖν. Iren. p. 211. ed. Bened.

Θεὸς γὰρ ὢν, ὁμοῦ τε καὶ ἄνθρωπος τέλειος, ὁ αὐτὸς τὰς δύο αὐτοῦ οὐσίας ἐπιστώσατο ἡμῖν. Melito, Cav. H. L. vol. ii. p. 33.

Θεὸς ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ, καὶ ὁ ἄνθρωπος

Nicenes, since no doubt can be made of them, I content myself with referring to Petavius, who has collected their testimonies^u.

Now, if you would but please to understand mediatorial worship conformably to this true and ancient sense of Mediator, we might not perhaps despair of coming to some terms of agreement. For mediatorial worship, thus understood, would nearly coincide with what we call divine. It would be worshipping Christ because, with the human nature, he is possessed also of the divine, and is therefore strictly and properly adorable, as well as the Father.

But Mediator may be considered also in respect of office, without considering the nature at all: and this, I presume, is the sense you contend for. Accordingly, for the most part, by mediatorial worship, you seem to intend some inferior kind of worship payable to our Lord considered as mediating, or as executing the office of a Mediator between God and man. Now we must confess that Christ is really Mediator by office, as well as by nature: but how this can ever justify you in making a new and an inferior worship, and calling it mediatorial, we understand not. Fanciful men will have their peculiarities: and it is a wonder to me, you have not yet invented twenty several kinds of worship, superior and inferior, for God the Father. For the purpose; you may consider him as King, and so you may present him with regal worship; or as King of kings, and then it will be super-regal. You may consider him as Judge, your particular Judge, and so present him with judicial worship: but if you consider him further as Judge of all men, nay, and as Judge of angels, or of the whole system of creatures, the worship will be ἵνα δὲ δευχθῆ τὸ συναμφοτέρον ἔχω ἐν ἑαυτῷ τὴν τε τοῦ Θεοῦ οὐσίαν καὶ τὴν ἐξ ἀνθρώπων, ὡς καὶ ὁ ἀπόστολος λέγει, μεσίτην Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων ἀνθρώπου Χριστὸς Ἰησοῦς. ὁ δὲ μεσίτης ἐνὸς ἀνθρώπου οὐ γίνεται, ἀλλὰ δύο. ἔδει οὖν τὸν Χριστὸν Θεοῦ καὶ ἀνθρώπων, μεσίτην γενόμενον παρ' ἀμφοτέρων ἀρραβῶνά τινα εἰληφέναι, ἵνα φανῆ δύο προσώπων μεσίτης. Hippol. vol. ii. p. 45.

Θεός. καὶ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πατρὸς ὁ μεσίτης ἐκτελεῖ. μεσίτης γὰρ ὁ Λόγος ὁ κοινὸς ἀμφοῖν Θεοῦ μὲν υἱὸς, σωτὴρ δὲ ἀνθρώπων. Clem. Alex. p. 251.

Hic sequester Dei atque hominum appellatus; ex utriusque partis deposito commisso sibi. In another place, utriusque substantiæ. Tertull. de Resur. Carn. c. 51. contr. Prax. c. 28.

Deus cum homine miscetur. Hic Deus, hic Christus est, qui Mediator duorum, hominem induit quem perducit ad Patrem. Cypr. de Idol. Van. p. 15.

Quoniam si ad hominem veniebat; ut Mediator Dei et hominum esse deberet, oportuit illum cum eo esse, et Verbum carnem fieri; ut in semetipso concordiam confibularet terrenorum pariter atque cælestium; dum utriusque partis in se connectens pignora, et Deum homini et hominem Deo copularet. Novat. c. 18.

Mediam inter Deum et hominem substantiam gerens—Deum fuisse et hominem, ex utroque genere permistum. Lactant. l. iv. c. 13.

^u Dogm. Th. tom. v. part. 2.

then most highly and superlatively judicial. You may next consider him as Creator, ποιητής, without an article, and then you are to present him (pardon the novelty of the phrase) with creatorial worship: but if you consider him further as the Creator, ὁ ποιητής, with an article, the worship then becomes eminently creatorial. You may next consider him as Protector, as Deliverer, or Defender, and each of these in a higher or a lower sense: and hence may arise as many several worships. Nay, when your hand is in, every attribute you consider him under will be a distinct foundation of a particular worship: and so you will have worships innumerable, to pay to one and the same Person. But you will say, that these many worships are all but one worship of the one divine Father under variety of conceptions. Right: and so, though the Son be considered as Mediator, as Judge, as Creator, as King, &c. in our worship of him, these are all but one worship of the one divine Son, under variety of conceptions. The worship then both of Father and Son centering in this, that they are both divine, this makes it divine worship: and divine worship being one with itself, it is very manifest that the worship of both is one.

Aye but, says the learned Doctor^x, “There is an adoration due to Christ as Mediator, which cannot possibly be paid to the one supreme God;” supreme Father he means. And what is there in this, more than an affected manner of expressing what every body allows, that Father and Son have distinct personal characters and offices? He need not have gone thus round about: the shorter way would have been to divide adoration into two sorts, paternal and filial; and to plead that one of these worships can never be paid to the Son, any more than the other to the Father, because the Son must never be considered as Father, nor the Father as Son. But had the Doctor remembered that both may be considered as divine, and that divine worship is but one, he might have perceived that there is no foundation for the two worships which he is introducing: unless he has a mind to bring in a hundred worships as well as two; which may be easily done in the way he has taken. The truth of the case is this; worship has an immediate respect to the divinity of the Person to be worshipped. That must be presupposed in all religious worship: otherwise such worship is idolatry; as hath been proved. This foundation being laid, whatever personal characters or offices we consider the Person worshipped under; divine goes along with all: it is a divine Mediator, a divine Priest, a divine Prophet, a divine King: and so our worship of him never wants its proper object, never moves from its proper foundation, but remains constantly the same. Our considering the Son under the character or office of Mediator does not hinder us from considering him as God at the same time, (indeed Mediator, in strictness, implies it,) any more than our considering the Father as King, Judge, Preserver, or Rewarder, hinders us from considering him also as divine.

^x See Clarke’s Script. Doctr. p. 343. 2nd ed. Modest Plea, &c. Continued, p. 33.

All the acts and offices of Christ, relative to us, are only so many manifestations of his goodness, power, wisdom, and other attributes, which attributes are founded in his divine nature, which nature is common to the Father and him: thus all our acknowledgments centre and terminate in one and the same divine nature; and all the particular worships amount to no more than one worship, one divine worship belonging equally to both.

Having thus far cleared my way, I may now proceed to examine what you have done under this Query. But I should first observe to the reader what you have not done, that he may be the more fully apprised of your manner of disputation: which is to answer difficulties, by slipping them over without notice.

I urged the great design of the Law and of the Gospel to exclude inferior, as well as other supreme deities; you take no notice. I urged, that even miracles could not suffice for the introducing another God: you are profoundly silent. I pleaded, that the reasons of worship which God insists upon are such as exclude all creatures: not a word do you give in answer. I shewed, (vol. i. p. 412,) that any man with your distinction of sovereign and inferior worship, might have eluded every law about sacrificing to the true God only: you have nothing to say to it. I pleaded the impropriety of absolute and relative sacrifice∫, vows, oaths, &c., not a syllable do you reply. I pleaded several texts of Scripture, and several examples against creature-worship, and against your distinction made from the intention of the worshipper: all is passed over. I further pressed you with ∫ Sacrifice, without distinction of absolute and relative, supreme and inferior, the outward act of sacrificing, was always looked upon as appropriate to God. Now prayers were of the same import with sacrifice, in the primitive Church, and esteemed by them as the purest and best sacrifices.

See Just. Mart. Dial. p. 340. Jeb. Irenæus, l. iv. c. 17. p. 249. Clem. Alex. p. 848. Tertull. ad Scap. c. 2.

the practice and principles of the primitive martyrs; of which you take no notice. You have indeed something to oppose in favour of the other side of the question: but is it my business only to answer objections? I thought you had undertook to answer queries; to clear something, and not to be always in the way of puzzling. But let us see however what you have in the way of objection. I have answered your two principal pleas already: I am now to seek for some of the slighter pretences. You find fault with me (p. 357,) for making the nature of God, not the Person, the object of worship. But what if I make three Persons the object (which is the truth of the case) on account of their divine nature? Is there any thing more absurd in this, than in your making one Person, on account of his perfections, that is, of his nature? And where is the difference between you and me, but that you worship individual living substance, which you confine to one Person; and I, individual living substance, which I suppose common to more Persons? You the τὸ Θεῖον in one Person; I the τὸ Θεῖον in more than one.

You say, "the texts of the Old Testament relate not to an indefinite Person, but definitely to the Person of the Father." Yet many of them (in the judgment of all antiquity) relate to the person of the Son, as we have seen before: and that none of them are ever meant indefinitely is what you can never prove^z. However, if you could, you would still be far from proving your point. For, supposing God, or Jehovah, to be always taken personally, sometimes denoting the Person of the Son, abstracting from the consideration of the Father, and sometimes denoting the Person of the Father, abstracting from the consideration of the Son; it might still be nevertheless true, that Jehovah is one, both Father and Son.

You attempt, (p. 360,) to prove that the worship of the Son is "subordinate, mediate, relative." You quote Heb. i. 6, and infer that the angels are to worship him, "not as supreme, but "by the command of the Father." Wonderful! that if the Father has ever commanded any one to worship himself, (as he often has,) his worship therefore is not supreme. Has not our Saviour commanded us to worship the Father; is his worship therefore not supreme? Sure, arguments must run very low with you, or you would not trifle at this rate. As to Heb. i. 9, I have answered it above: and as to John v. 23, Christ is not worshipped because God committed judgment to him: but God committed it to him for this end and purpose, that men might be sensible of the dignity and divinity of his Person, and thereupon worship him. The prophecy of Daniel (chap. vii. 13.) speaks of a kingdom, and a dominion, in a particular sense; as 1 Cor. xv. speaks of a kingdom to be received by the Father: this is all economical, and makes nothing for your purpose. But your argument is calculated for the Socinian hypothesis, rather than the Arian. The ancient Arians would have condemned such men as you, for their low thoughts of our Saviour. They did not worship him merely as having a judgment or a kingdom committed to him, but as being Creator^a. You throw together (p. 361, 362.) a multitude of texts, proving only that Christ is Mediator. Does any Christian doubt of it? There is not a syllable about absolute and relative, sovereign and inferior prayer: which is what you were to shew. A Mediator may be a divine Mediator notwithstanding: and so all your pretences vanish into air. And what if it be said, (Rev. v. 9, 12,) "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honour, and glory:" and if it be said, "Unto him that loved us, and washed us, &c. be glory and dominion," Rev. i. 5, 6, what are we to learn from thence? Here is nothing said of the foundation of worship: but the Person is described under his proper and peculiar characters, and such as may recommend him to our affections. Not a word is there of mediatorial worship, or of any thing like it. And if his being God, or God supreme, be not assigned as the reason for worshipping him, doth it therefore follow that he is not to be worshipped as God supreme? By the same argument, you might as well prove, that neither is the Father to be worshipped as supreme God. We find it said, (Eph. iii. 20, 21,) "Unto him that is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us; unto him be glory in the Church by Christ Jesus," &c. The reason here assigned for worshipping the Father, is not his being supreme God, but only his being "able to do more than we can ask or think." So again in the Book of Revelations, (ch. xix. 1, 2,) "Salvation, and glory, and honour, and power unto the Lord our God; for true and righteous are his judgments," &c. Here the reason assigned is not his being supreme God, but his being true and righteous. Again, in chapter iv. ver. 11, "Thou “ art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory, and honour, and power :

^z See my Sermons, p. 99, &c. of this volume.

^a Christum colimus ut Creatorem. Serm. Arian. ap. Augustin. p. 623. Maximin. ap. August. p. 663.

 “ for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are “ and were created.” Here the reason assigned for worshipping the Father, is not that he is supreme God, but that he “ created “ all things for his pleasure :” which reason, though not expressly applied in this manner to God the Son, is yet equally applicable in virtue of Heb. i. 10. and Col. i. 16. I own that supreme God is implied in this last title of Creator : which however is equally true, either of Father or Son. I observed in my Sermons^b, how frequent it is for the Father himself to insist upon what he had done for men ; claiming their worship upon those moving reasons, or motives : and what wonder is it, if some much greater and more endearing works of God the Son be mentioned as motives to our worship of him ? the foundation still of worship stands as before ; which is wholly to be resolved into the infinite excellency and divinity of his Person^c. You pretend to say, that “ the worship of the Father is founded “ principally in his supreme, independent, underived power,” &c.
 If you mean any thing contrary to me, you mean, on his self- existence, or being unbegotten, as distinct from necessary existence.
 Shew me one text of Scripture for it, at your leisure. You do not pretend any : but you speak of all antiquity ; not knowing what you say, nor whereof you affirm. You should have shewn me who, and what ancients ever founded his worship in his being Father, or unbegotten ; and not in his being God.

After abundance of trifling, you come at length to make some reply to what I had urged from antiquity^d : only you first take notice of my charging you^e with slipping over a difficulty, by putting honour, an ambiguous word, instead of worship and adoration. The reason I had for it is, that worship and adoration stand for exterior acts ; whereas honour may stand for either interior or exterior, and is therefore more ambiguous. Exterior acts have their signification fixed and determined by circumstances, and do not depend upon the intention of the mind to make their signification higher and lower ; as mental honour does. This therefore was the reason of my blaming you for changing worship into honour. The difference of these two is easily seen in this instance : equality and inequality of honour are proper expressions : but equality or inequality of sacrifice

^b P. 115, 116 of this volume.

^c See the Preface to my Sermons, at the beginning of this volume.

^d Defence, vol. i. p. 418, &c.

^e Ibid. p. 411, 421.

(an outward act) is very improper. Now our dispute was about outward acts. The foundation I went upon was this; that in order to have God's authority and superlative excellency owned, there should be some outward visible acts, which we call worship, appropriated to God, to put a visible difference between God and the creature. For herein lies the manifestation of that inward sense we have of his superlative excellencies and perfections: and the confounding this difference, by applying these peculiar and appropriated acts to any creature, is the great sin of idolatry. The inward intention is of no moment in this case: for if the outward acts be the same, how then shall God be outwardly distinguished (as he ought to be) in the honours paid to him, above the creatures? This consideration is alone sufficient to cut off every plea and pretence for offering religious worship to any but God. You have first a distinction of supreme and inferior, of ultimate and mediate worship: but that is utterly unserviceable, because it would not so much as exclude the worship even of Pagan deities (if considered as inferior) along with the true God. You may next say, that worship should not be paid to any inferior gods, that stand in opposition to the true and supreme God: and yet neither will this restriction sufficiently answer the purpose; since it does not exclude the worship of saints or angels, friends of God, and not opposite to him. You may retreat to a further restriction, that even inferior religious worship must be paid to none but such as God has nominated, and allowed to be worshipped: which, you may think, will effectually exclude all but Christ. But after you have thus far followed your own inventions, in your several restrictions, and qualifyings of an absolute command; there is still this invincible reason against them all, that whereas there ought to be some peculiar outward acts (as sacrifice was formerly) appropriated to God, as exterior acknowledgments of his infinite excellencies and perfections above his creatures; by these restrictions and limitations, all such peculiarity of exterior acknowledgments is taken away, and it is made impossible even for God himself to prescribe any. Now you see why I found fault; and that I had some reason for it. But you ask me, why then did I "found Christ's worship upon "John v. 23," which speaks only of honour? The reason is plain: if I am to honour the Son, even as I honour the Father; I must signify it by the same outward expressions, that is, by worship. The text then is very much to my purpose; though honour and worship are not the same thing, but differing as the internal thought and the outward manifestation. Now let us come to the ancients, upon this head of worship.

I shewed by plain testimonies what their doctrine was ; viz. to worship God alone, the Creator, in opposition to the creature. You take no notice of the last particular ; because it was very material, and pressed hard upon your scheme. But you observe, by the “alone God” is evidently meant “the God and Father “of all.” I am persuaded you, in the main, are right in your observation : and now the question will be, whether when they proposed the Father as the only God, they intended it in opposition only to false gods and creature-gods, admitting a latitude in the exclusive terms ; or whether they intended any distinction of worship, making it supreme and inferior, absolute and relative, ultimate and mediate. This is a question which will admit of an easy and a certain decision, upon a due consideration of circumstances. There are but two ways of making this matter out ; either by admitting some latitude in the exclusive terms, so that the Father shall be understood to be the only God in opposition to creatures and false gods ; or by admitting some distinction and degrees of worship, that supreme worship may be due to the Father as the highest God, and inferior to the Son as an inferior Deity. Now this, I say, will be easily decided. If, when the ancients speak of worshipping one God, the Father, they either say, that he alone is to be sovereignly, or absolutely worshipped ; or if they found his title to worship upon his being Father, or unbegotten, rather than upon his being God ; or if they admit any inferior God, or any other God besides the Father ; then you will have something to plead from the ancients for your opinion. But, on the other hand, if they never mention two worships or two Gods ; if they mean, when they speak of worship as due to God alone, not sovereign worship only, but all religious worship ; if they suppose the Son not to be another God, but one God with the Father ; and if they intimate their intention to be to exclude creatures, or false gods, not God the Son ; then the case will be manifest, that they used the exclusive terms, not with utmost strictness, but with a proper latitude ; and this will be the true way of interpreting the ancients. That this latter is really the case, is evident to every man that is at all conversant with the ancients : and he that thinks otherwise must either never have read them, or have read them with very little judgment. Their way was to speak of the one God in opposition to all false deities ; and by the one God they meant principally the Father, as first in conception, and first in order ; but always with a reserve for the Son and Holy Ghost, reckoned to him, and included in him : so that the Father, considered with what naturally belonged to him, was the one God of the Christians in opposition to all other deities. This is so clearly and so evidently the current and prevailing notion of the ancients, that I scruple not to say, that they who see not this, see nothing. I shall briefly consider the testimonies I before gave, and then conclude this article.

Justin Martyr says, “God alone is to be worshipped^f.” He does not say sovereignly, or absolutely, but barely worshipped : neither does he say, Worship him alone as supreme God, to insinuate any inferior God : and therefore it is evident that Justin was not in your scheme of two Gods and two worships, but in mine of one God and one worship ; considering the Father primarily as the one God, not exclusive of the Son.

Athenagoras^g lays the stress upon worshipping the Creator, in opposition to creatures : so that it is plain he was in my principles, not yours : besides that he says nothing of sovereign and inferior worship.

Theophilus^h speaks of worship simply, not sovereign worship as due to God alone : and the reason he gives why the king is not to be worshipped, is not because he is not underived or unbegotten, but because he is not God.

Tatianⁱ denies worship (not sovereign worship only) to the creatures.

Tertullian^k is express against any inferior worship, any worship at all but to the one God ; in which one God, as every body knows, he includes all the three Persons.

Clemens Alexandrinus^l has not a word that looks favourable to the distinction of supreme and inferior worship ; but he con-

^f Θεὸν μὲν μόνον προσκυνούμεν. Apol. i. cap. 23. Τὸν Θεὸν μόνον δεῖ προσκυνεῖν. cap. 21.

^g Οὐ τοῦτον, ἀλλὰ τὸν τεχνίτην αὐτοῦ προσκυνητέον. Athen. p. 55. Οὐ τὰς δυνάμεις προσκύνοντες θεραπεύομεν, ἀλλὰ τὸν ποιητὴν αὐτῶν καὶ δεσπότην. p. 56.

^h Διὰ τί οὐ προσκυνεῖς τὸν βασιλεῖα ; ὅτι οὐκ εἰς τὸ προσκυνεῖσθαι γέγονεν — Θεὸς γὰρ οὐκ ἔστιν, ἀλλὰ ἄνθρωπος, &c. Theoph. p. 30. οὐκ ἄλλω ἐξόν ἐστι προσκυνεῖσθαι ἀλλ’ ἢ μόνω Θεῷ. Theoph. p. 33.

ⁱ Δημιουργίαν τὴν ὑπ’ αὐτοῦ γεγε-νημένην χάριν ἡμῶν προσκυνεῖν οὐ θέλω. Tatian. p. 18. Σέβειν δὲ τῶν στοιχείων τὴν ὑπόστασιν οὐτ’ ἂν πεισθεῖην, &c. p. 79.

^k Quod colimus Deus unus est. Tertull. Apol. cap. 17. Præscribitur mihi ne quem aliūm Deum dicam, ne quem aliūm adorem, aut quoquo modo venerer, præter unicum illum qui ita mandat. Scorpiace, cap. 4. Conf. Prax. cap. 31. Orat. cap. 2. cum notis Albaspinæ.

^l See the passages in my Defence, vol. i. p. 419. Comp. p. 424.

fines all worship to the Creator, excluding all creatures from it, making no medium between Creator and creature.

Irenæus^m speaks of adoring or worshipping; but not a word of sovereign, or absolute adoration: and it is reason sufficient with him against the worship of any thing, that it is a creature: which you take no notice of.

Origenⁿ also is express against the worship of any creature; which you observe not, though before hinted. Neither does he speak of supreme worship, but all worship, when he confines it to the Creator, to the divine nature, τὸ Θεῖον, to the eternal and uncreated nature of God. You pretend, that τὸ Θεῖον is a figurative way of speaking for ὁ Θεὸς, like the King's Majesty for the King, p. 356. But I affirm, on the contrary, (which is sufficient against your bare affirmation,) that it generally, if not always, signifies the divine nature, or substance^o, considered as the subject of divine perfections.

As to Origen in particular, in his piece against Celsus, I know not that he any where uses the phrase of τὸ Θεῖον, but where it either must or may bear the sense I contend for. See p. 158, 159, 226, 321, 374, 375, 376, 377, 392. And, I think, if what Origen has in p. 342 be well considered, it may suffice to determine the dispute about the sense of τὸ Θεῖον in him. For there he plainly uses τὸ Θεῖον to denote that which is divine in our Lord, (as distinguished from his human nature,) viz. The only-begotten of God; intimating that his substance is very different in that respect: Ἄλλος ὁ περὶ τούτου, καὶ τῆς οὐσίας αὐτοῦ, Λόγος ἐστὶ, παρὰ τὸν περὶ τοῦ νοουμένου κατὰ τὸν Ἰησοῦν ἀνθρώπου. And he afterwards gives the name of τοῦ Θεῖου to that very divinity, or divine nature, which he supposes in our Lord together with the manhood^p.

The like may be said of Clemens's use of the phrase, who likewise includes the Son in the τὸ Θεῖον^q, as observed above^r.

^m Dominum Deum tuum adorare oportet et ipsi soli servire, et non credere ei qui falso promisit ea quæ non sunt sua; Hæc omnia tibi dabo, si procidens adoraveris me. Neque enim conditio sub ejus potestate est, quandoquidem et ipse unus de creaturis est. Iren. p. 320.

ⁿ See the passages collected in my Defence, vol. i. p. 419, 420.

^o The reader may see several plain examples in Gregory Nyss. contr. Eunom. It is not worth the while to search or cite many authorities for a known thing, which nobody conversant in the Greek Fathers can doubt of.

Greg. Nyss. p. 89, 92, 145, 147, 161, 162, 165, 166, 167, 168, 170, 180, 181, 191, 203, 264, 281, 291, 294, 301, 302, 303, 319, 327, 329, 412, 427.—448, 451, 453, 457, 471.

^p Τὰ περὶ τὸν Ἰησοῦν τοῖνον καθὸ μὲν νεότητι θεότητι ἐν αὐτῷ πραχθέντα, ἐστὶν ὅσια, καὶ οὐ μαχόμενα τῇ περὶ τοῦ Θεῖου ἐνοσίᾳ. Orig. p. 343.

^q Clem. Alex. p. 452.

^r Query VIII. p. 584 of this vol.

other places* of Clemens, where the phrase is also used, may be compared at leisure. Τὸ Θεῖον and ὁ Θεός may sometimes indifferently stand for each other: but a judicious reader may often observe τὸ Θεῖον to be used where ὁ Θεός would be very improper, and so vice versa. God considered substantially, as res divina, is the proper notion of τὸ Θεῖον, [θεῖον γένος, or θεῖον πρᾶγμα,] and not considered according to personal characters, acts, or offices. It would be improper to say, for instance, that the τὸ Θεῖον begat, or sent his Son, or did acts of mercy, or the like. I need not give more instances: an intelligent reader will easily perceive, from the circumstances, where τὸ Θεῖον is the more proper phrase, and where ὁ Θεός. To return to Origen.

You translate ἀγένητον φύσω in Origen†, unoriginate nature, instead of uncreated nature: which is the constant sense of ἀγένητον in that treatise of Origen, opposed to γενητὸν, a name for created, mutable, and perishing things. You have no instance in all Catholic antiquity where worship is put upon the un-derivedness of the Father, any further than as it implies necessary existence: nor a single example to prove a distinction of two worships, one supreme and the other inferior. Some pretences of yours relating hereto will be examined in the next Query.

QUERY XVII.

Whether, notwithstanding, worship and adoration be not equally due to Christ; and consequently, whether it must not follow that he is the one God, and not (as the Arians suppose) a distinct inferior Being?

YOU here begin with repeating your argument from the personal characters, I, thou, he: which has been often answered. You go on (p. 368) to argue for mediate worship, because the worship of the Son is to the glory of the Father. I might here insist upon it (as an ingenious gentleman^u hath lately done) that the words, Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ Πατρὸς, may be justly rendered, The Lord Jesus Christ is (or Jesus Christ is Lord) in the glory of God the Father: which rendering, agreeable to the Italic, and some other versions, would entirely defeat your argument. But allowing the common construction, and that the † Orig. contr. Cels. p. 189.

* Clem. Alex. p. 50, 53, 58, 113, 704, 778, 829, 836, 841, 845, 848.

^u Mr. Wade's short Inquiry into the Doctrine of the Trinity, p. 55.

N. B. Cyprian, Novatian, Hilary, and other Latins, so read and understand Phil. ii. 11.

Ὁ οὐκ ἄλλότριος Θεοῦ ὢν, ἀλλὰ εἰς δόξαν Θεοῦ πατρὸς. Epiphani. p. 972. Conf. 880.

worship of God the Son terminates in God the Father; still it is manifest, for that very reason, that it is not an inferior worship, because then it could not terminate in the Father, being unworthy of him. Nor indeed can any act of worship extend to both, unless both be one object, as before shewn. As to the same act of worship being considered as ultimately resting in the Father, it is because the divine nature to which the worship is paid is considered primarily in the Father, though belonging equally to both. You object that, by this account, no worship is paid to the Father, but to the substance or essence of the Father. Ridiculous; as if worshipping the divine substance as personalized in the Father, were not the same thing with worshipping the Father's Person. Pray, what is the Person of the Father but living, acting, intelligent substance? Do you mean, by intelligent agent, intelligent and acting nothing? "All worship," you say, "is personal:" and I say every person is substance: therefore worship may as well be called substantial, as personal, amounting, in this case, to the same thing. And if worship be paid to three Persons, is it not truly personal, as well as when paid to one? Your quotation from Bishop Pearson is nothing to the point in hand, but wide and foreign as possible. I had observed, in my Defence, that you had many things to say, in hopes to lessen the honour attributed to the Son in Scripture. Upon this, you go solemnly to prayers: "I pray God forgive you the injury you here do me." I thank you for your charitable prayer, if really such. But had you put it up from your closet, instead of sending it from the press; there would have been less suspicion either of affectation or malice in it. As keen a satire and as bitter a revenge may appear in the shape of a prayer as in any other form. The great injury, it seems, lies only in the word hopes; an expression perhaps not so exactly proper or accurate: a candid construction of it would have been a much surer token of a forgiving and charitable temper, than this unusual sally of devotion thrown out upon so slight an occasion. But let us pass on.

You tell me, (p. 371,) of "building my notion of religious worship upon metaphysical speculations:" which is doing me a great injury, and laying your own faults to my charge. I build my notion upon plain Scriptures, the universal suffrage of antiquity, (till the time that praying to saints and angels came in,) and upon the principles and practices of the Jews before Christ; who always looked upon creature-worship as idolatry. You build your dissent to such a cloud of witnesses upon nothing, that I can yet perceive, but some metaphysical speculations about self-existence, generation being an act, acts being all acts of the will, necessary generation being coaction, and the like. And when, in the strength of these speculations, you have discarded God the Son from the one Godhead; then you have recourse to such principles as Pagans first, and Papists since, have made use of in favour of idolatry, to bring in the worship of the Son at a back-door; instead of fixing it where Scripture, and antiquity, and all sober Christians have ever fixed it. You ask me, if I “really think that the worship of the “ Father does as much terminate finally in the Son, as the worship of the Son terminates finally in the Father?” But let me ask you, do you really think that any creature-worship, any inferior worship terminates in the Father? I have shewn you that it does not, and cannot. Your own argument therefore turns upon yourself. Either the supposed inferior worship terminates in the Son, and then it is ultimate; or it terminates in the Father, and then it is supreme: choose which you please. I say, what I take to be sense and truth, that it terminates in the divine nature, considered primarily in the Father and derivatively in the Son: and now all is right. You ask, if the Son’s “glorifying the Father” means the very same thing with the “Father’s glorifying the Son?” Yes, the very same thing: how can you doubt of it, when you read John xvii. 1? And as to Phil. ii. 9. I question not its meaning being the very same.

I allowed, that prayers are generally to be offered rather through, than to the Son, because of his being Mediator. You ask, how this is consistent with the allowing no distinction of mediate and ultimate worship? You should have shewn how it is inconsistent: but you choose rather to amuse your reader with words, where you give him no distinct ideas. Either the Son is not worshipped in this case, or he is worshipped: if he is not, there is no mediate worship; if he is, then in worshipping the Father through him, his divinity, and essential union with the Father, (which alone can render our services accepted, and unite us to God,) are at the same time acknowledged. And so the worship of both is one, being an acknowledgment of the same divine excellencies under a distinction of Persons and offices. Where do you find two different worships, more than two different natures in these cases? Only the worship, as the nature, being one, is considered primarily in the Father, and secondarily in the Son: this is all you can make of it. You will never prove any thing of inferior worship, unless you can first prove the nature of the Son to be inferior to the Father. Why then do you not come to the pinch of the question, instead of amusing us with little cavils wide of the point? You fall to your usual quibbling with abstract essence, which has been often answered. You proceed to repeat your pretence about derived and underived; which indeed makes, in a manner, the sum total of your Reply; having little else to retreat to when pressed. Yet you love not metaphysical speculations. Let us see, however, what these curious things are: "that is, either derived and underived are the same, and the Son has the underived "perfections of the Father derivatively: or else self-existence and underived self-sufficiency are no perfection at all." Here is nothing in this matter but quibbling upon the word same; which must admit of a closer and larger sense: or else there is no such thing as same substance or same perfection in the world: I am sure in your way of considering every thing as extended, there is not. To answer them more directly; the perfections of the Father and of the Son are equal, and the same in kind, though differing in the manner of existing, underderivatively, and derivatively: and they are also the same in number, by reason of their inseparable unity and coexistence. That union is sufficient to make sameness, numerical sameness, you must allow, as I have often hinted: otherwise how do you suppose innumerable extended parts of substance to make one numerical substance? Or will you venture to say, that they are the same specifically, and no otherwise, making many substances in number, though the same in kind? These metaphysical subtilities therefore ought to be dismissed, as being of no use in our present question. The same substance or the same perfections may be both derived and underived; allowing such a sense of same as you admit yourself in other cases.

I charged you with begging the question all the way, as confounding a distinction of Persons with difference of nature. You have nothing to say to nature. But what is the meaning of this shifting, but shutting your eyes against a necessary distinction, which at once discovers the fallacy of your reasonings, and leaves you utterly destitute of any further reply? It is not that you understand not nature: but you understand it too well to be ever capable of getting over so clear and plain a distinction. You have nothing further worth notice, till you come to consider antiquity, p. 375.

I began with Justin Martyr, shewing that he maintains the worship of the Son; and upon my principles, not yours. You cite some passages out of him to prove the contrary. I stand amazed at your note, p. 375, wherein you insinuate, as if Justin were for the worship of angels; nay, and had set them before the Holy Ghost. I little thought you would fall in with Bellarmine and other Roman Catholics, in an interpretation which has been so often confuted by learned Protestants. I will not do over again what has been done to my hands. Let the reader consult the authors in the margin^x upon that passage of Justin. Justin speaks of honouring the Son in the second place: he does not say with inferior worship: he says expressly second in order. He says also, that the Word, who is of the uncreated, or necessary existing God, (intimating thereby, as I conceive, the necessary existence also of the Λόγος himself,) we worship, and we love next after God. Next in order again, he does not say with inferior worship, or inferior love. He adds the reason why we are to love him, namely, on account of his merits in our redemption.

Your next quotation from Justin proves only that God has commanded his Son to be worshipped: and so has Christ commanded us to worship his Father. What is this to the point of inferior worship?

Your last proves, that we worship the Father through Christ; which I readily admit.

What you say to Athenagoras and Theophilus requires no further answer than what I have given more than once. As to Tertullian, I have shewn before, that he is directly against inferior worship. You have nothing from Clemens, but that God is worshipped through Christ; which is wide of the purpose. As to the place cited by you out of his Protrepiticum, it has been considered above^z.

Irenæus is plainly on my side of the question, as never making any distinction of supreme and inferior worship, never allowing worship to any creature, asserting Father and Son together to be one God, and testifying that the same acts of adoration^a under ^x Le Moyne Var. Sacr. Not. p. 180. Bull. D. F. p. 72. Op. Posth. p. 962, 1037. Clerici Histor. Eccles. p. 616. Nourr. Apparat. ad Bibl. Max. p. 414.

As to angels being taught by God the Son, see Clem. Alex. p. 769. Iren. p. 163. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 90. ed. Bened.

^y Τὸν γὰρ ἀπὸ ἀγενήτου (leg. ἀγενήτου) καὶ ἀρρήτου Θεοῦ Λόγον μετὰ τὸν Θεὸν προσκυνούμεν, καὶ ἀγαπῶμεν, ἐπειδὴ καὶ δι' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος γέγονεν, ὅπως καὶ τῶν παθῶν τῶν ἡμετέρων συμμετοχὸς γενόμενος, καὶ ἰδασιν ποιήσθαι. Apol. ii. p. 35.

^z Page 455.

^a Qui igitur a prophetis adorabatur Deus vivus; hic est vivorum Deus et the Old Testament were applied to both. You have two objections to make against it : one, that Irenæus makes a prayer to God through Jesus Christ ; which has no difficulty : the other is, that every knee, according to the good pleasure of the Father, is to bow to Christ ; which scarce carries the face of an objection. For why may not the Father, who, according to his good pleasure, makes known himself, and demands worship to himself, do the like for his Son ?

Hitherto the point in dispute is clearly determined on my side, by antiquity. Origen's principles appear more disputable : but when he is rightly understood, he will be also an advocate on the same side. I shall first lay down the arguments on my side, and vindicate the same from your exceptions : and then shall consider what counter-evidence you have pretended out of him.

1. In the first place, Origen declares fully against the worship of all creatures^b whatever ; clearly distinguishing the Son from the creatures.

This you say nothing to.

2. The reasons which Origen founds worship on are applicable to the Son, as well as to the Father. The uncreated nature, ἀγέννητος φύσις, is adorable as such : but such is the nature of God the Son : I have proved above, that he makes the Son ἀγέννητος. The δημιουργὸς τοῦ παντός, Creator of the universe, is adorable as such : but such also is the Son. To this you object, (p. 380.) that the Father is primarily Creator, (so you ought to have rendered πρώτως δημιουργὸν, and not primarily Maker,) the Son only immediate Maker, at the Father's command. But a difference in order or manner makes no difference in the thing itself : or if there be any, the Son is more properly Creator than the Father, according to the strictness of the expression in Origen.

Origen's doctrine is, that he who made all things is adorable, as such : and he asserts expressly, that the Son made all things, the very words^c. To which you again object, that he made them at the command of the Father : which I allow in such sense as the ancients meant it, explained above. But the point of worship is not put upon the primary manner of making, nor upon the Verbum ejus, qui et loquitur, est . . .^b See my Defence, vol. i. p. 419, Moysi, &c.— Ipse igitur Christus 425.

cum Patre vivorum est Deus qui loquitur est Moysi, &c. p. 232. ^c Ibid. vol. i. p. 425.

commanding to make, by Origen, but upon the making: so that in this respect there is no difference.

3. I further pleaded Origen's supposing the Son to be worshipped, because God^d. And I have above proved^e, that he is to be worshipped as one God with the Father: therefore their worship is one, not two worships, supreme and inferior.

4. I pleaded, lastly, that the worship of Father and Son is inseparably and undividedly one, according to Origen. His words are: "Now he has ascended to the God of the universe, "who undividedly, inseparably, unpartedly worships him through "the Son, the Word and Wisdom of God, seen in Jesus, who "alone brings those to him that^f," &c.

You were sensible how strong this passage was against your principles; and therefore endeavoured to pervert the sense, by foisting in a word into your translation. You say, "with an "undivided, undistracted, unparted affection." Where do you meet with affection? Or how came it in here, where the author is not talking of the undistractedness of our affections, but the undivided worship of Father and Son? He is commenting on 1 Cor. viii. 6. where it is said, "one God, of whom are all "things," and also "one Lord, by, or through, whom are all "things:" and this made him bring in the discourse of worshipping one by the other inseparably. What follows in that sentence further shews, that this must be his meaning; where he observes, that it is the Son only, who is the very Word and Wisdom of God (well therefore may he be undivided from God) that brings men to God. This then may shew you what worshipping the Father through the Son means in Origen: it is directing the worship to the Father; but so as to look upon the Son as inseparably worshipped in the same act. I illustrated the thought by a parallel place of the elder Cyril, which you take no notice of.

^d Origen. contr. Cels. p. 46.

^e Page 436, 466.

^f Ἀναβέβηκε δὲ πρὸς τὸν ἐπὶ πάντων Θεόν, ὁ ἀσπίτως καὶ ἀδαιρέτως καὶ ἀμερίστως αὐτὸν σέβων διὰ τοῦ μόνου προσάγοντος ἐκείνω υἱοῦ, τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον καὶ σοφίας ἐν τῷ Ἰησοῦ θεωρουμένου, &c. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 382.

^g Μῆτε διὰ τὸ τιμᾶν τὸν πατέρα νομίζω, ἐν τι τῶν δημιουργημάτων τὸν υἱὸν ὑποπτεύσωμεν, ἀλλ' εἰς πατῆρ δι' ἐνὸς υἱοῦ προσκυνεῖσθω, καὶ μὴ μερίζεσθω ἢ προσκύνῃσι. Cyril. Catech.

xi. p. 143. Ox.

Μία γὰρ ἐστὶν ἡ θεότης, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο μία τιμὴ καὶ μία ἐστὶ προσκύνησις, ἡ ἐν υἱῷ καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ γινομένη τῷ πατρί· καὶ ὁ οὗτω προσκυνῶν, ἓνα Θεὸν προσκυνεῖ. Athan. Orat. p. 3. 555.

Dum ad solius Patris personam honoris Sermo dirigitur, bene credentis fide, tota Trinitas honoratur. Et cum ad Patrem, litantis destinatur intentio, sacrificii munus omni Trinitati uno eodemque offertur litantis officio. Fulgent. ad Monim. lib. ii. c. 5. p. 31.

Having now seen what Origen's real and certain doctrine was upon this head, it will be the easier to take off the force of your pretended counter-evidence from the same Origen.

There is but one passage, in his whole treatise, that looks at all favourable to your principles; and that being obscure, and of doubtful meaning, ought never to be set against many and plain ones, but rather to be interpreted by them. I gave a sufficient answer to it before, producing the passage in the margin. You tell me that, "for a very good reason I thought not fit to translate it." I must own, I do not love to abound in translations, only to swell pages; while I suppose myself writing more for the use of scholars, than for the populace, who are scarce competent judges of our disputes about antiquity. I perceive, you are very full of translations, out of Eusebius especially; as if you intended show more than any thing else: for they are of no more real weight, than if I were to translate as much out of Alexander, Athanasius, or Cyril the elder, and throw it before the readers. But this by the way. I return to Origen. The passage, justly and literally rendered, runs thus: "All supplication, and prayer, and intercession, and thanksgiving, are to be sent up to the God over all, by the High Priest, who is above all angels, being the living Word, and God. And we may also offer supplication to the Word himself, and intercession, and thanksgiving, and prayer; if we can but understand how prayer is taken in propriety of speech, or in an improper sense ^h."

What I gather from this passage is, that prayer in the most proper sense is to be understood of prayer directed immediately to the Father. This has been the most usual and common method of praying: wherefore this kind of praying has obtained generally the name of prayer, and is what the word prayer has been ordinarily used to mean. Origen does not say, that the prayers, supplications, intercessions, and thanksgivings, offered to God the Son, are none of them properly so called; but he makes his remark upon prayer only: and he does not say, that even prayer, when directed to God the Son, is not proper divine

^h Πᾶσαν μὲν δέησιν γὰρ καὶ προσευχήν, καὶ ἔντευξιν, καὶ εὐχαριστίαν ἀναπεμπτόν τῷ ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεῷ, διὰ τοῦ ἐπὶ πάντων ἀγγέλων ἀρχιερέως, ἐμφύχου Λόγου καὶ Θεοῦ δεησόμεθα δὲ καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ Λόγου, καὶ ἐντευξόμεθα αὐτῷ καὶ εὐχαριστήσομεν, καὶ προσευξόμεθα δὲ, ἐὰν δυνώμεθα κατακοῦνεν τῆς περὶ προσευχῆς κυριολέξεως, καὶ καταχρήσεως. Orig. contr. Cels. lib. v. p. 233.

Vid. Bull. D. F. sect. ii. c. 9. p. 121. Bingham, Origin. Eccl. lib. xiii. c. 2. p. 45, &c. Origen. περὶ εὐχ. p. 78. in notis.

worship, or that it is another worship, or an inferior worship : nor can any such consequences be justly drawn from his words. All that we are obliged to grant, in virtue of this passage, is, that one part of divine worship called prayer, is most properly and emphatically prayer, when directed to the first Person of the Godhead ; inasmuch as that method of praying has been most customary and prevailing, and has thereby, in a manner, engrossed the name of prayer to itself : just as addresses, by being most commonly offered to a prince, come at length, by use, to mean addresses of that kind only ; and then addresses to others are not so properly addresses. Prayer then, properly, or emphatically speaking, is praying to the Father, to whom all prayer primarily belongs. Allowing this to be Origen's meaning, (and it is the very utmost that can be made of it,) how will you prove supreme and inferior worship from it ?

I have before observed, that the worship of the Son, according to Origen, is properly divine ; being offered to him as Creator, and as necessarily existing, and as God : and I observed also, that Father and Son together are worshipped as one God. I observed further, that even in prayers directed to the Father through the Son, the Son is supposed, by Origen, to be worshipped undividedly in the same act. How then do you make out your two worships ? Suppose the prayer to pass through or by the Son to the Father ; still it is one prayer, one worship, considered as belonging to both in a different manner. For as the one work of creating descends, as it were, from the Father by the Son ; who are therefore one Creator : so the one worship ascends, as it were, by the Son to the Father ; who are therefore one object of worship. You should have proved two unequal worships : but you have proved no more than this, that one and the same worship, diversely considered, is paid to both, in the very same act : to the Father directly, as being primarily and eminently Creator, God, &c. and supreme in order and office ; to the Son obliquely, or interpretatively, as being equally God, Creator, &c. but God of God, and mediating between God and man. There is therefore no difference in the worship itself, no superiority or inferiority, no acknowledgment of higher and lower perfections : but the same worship, the same acknowledgments of the same infinite perfections, admit of a different manner of application, to keep up a sense of the distinction of Persons, order, and offices.

You represent Bishop Bull (p. 383) as making a distinction of one worship paid to the Son as God absolutely, and another worship paid to him as God of God^l. This is not a just representation of Bishop Bull, as if he admitted one and another worship, two worships, to God the Son; when he makes but one worship of all, due to Father and Son. This, I suppose, was to give some colour to your own hypothesis. Bishop Bull's meaning is plainly this; that the Son is considered as divine whenever we worship him; and that that alone is the foundation of his worship^k. But we may consider him barely as divine, abstracting from all relations of order and office; or divine in such an order, or together with the office of Mediator. The divine worship is the same, under these three conceptions, because divine enters them all: but the additional consideration of order and office, in the two last, makes a difference, not in the worship itself, but in the order and manner of applying it.

You proceed to cite another passage of Origen^l, where arguing ad hominem, (as the Schools call it,) he pleads a command for the worship of Christ, against Celsus; who could plead no command for the worship of the Pagan deities. This was indeed shewing a very great difference in the two cases, such as was worth insisting upon: but it does not from hence follow, (the contrary is very evident,) that Origen ever founded the worship of Christ upon mere command, without reference to the dignity and real divinity of his Person. What you further cite from the piece περὶ εὐχῆς, whether Origen's own, or foisted in by some other hand, is of no moment in the case, being clearly contradicted in his treatise against Celsus, which is certainly genuine, and contains Origen's last and maturest thoughts upon the subject. Do you ever find Origen placing the Son among the γενητὰ in his book against Celsus? Doth he not constantly distinguish him from them, and set him above them, making him ἀγέννητος, as I have proved? Or does he ever deny that Christ is to be prayed to at all; as this author of the piece περὶ εὐχῆς does? No, but he frequently, plainly, and fully asserts the contrary.

What you add (p. 386) about doxologies is low and trifling;

^l Vid. Bull. D. F. sect. ii. c. 9. s. xv. p. 120.

^k Vid. Bull. Prim. Trad. p. 36.

N. B. The design of this piece of Bishop Bull, is to prove that the worship paid to Christ is properly divine, and not merely mediatorial. From whence let the reader judge with what truth or fairness you represent Bishop Bull as differing from me, in the allowing mediatorial worship, p. 120.

^l Orig. contr. Cels. p. 384.

especially after that matter has been so carefully and accurately discussed by learned hands. And your quoting the lying Philostorgius in a matter of fact of Flavian's introducing a new kind of doxology, which he reports against the faith of all history^m, is a great affront upon your readers.

I might quote you a better authority than Philostorgius, namely, Theodoritⁿ, to prove that Arius introduced a change of the ancient doxologies. But learned men know that neither of those accounts is true: but that doxologies of both sorts were in use long before either Flavian on one side or Arius on the other.

You go on to other writers, endeavouring to prove, as you say, mediate and ultimate worship: that is your phrase now, instead of inferior and supreme; because you imagine the reader may more easily be deceived under those terms, than under these. For if the Father be but worshipped through Christ; presently you cry out mediate worship; though it be all one divine worship, not two: and either the Son is not worshipped at all, in such a case; or, if he is, the same worship is then offered to both. The nature of the worship is not altered by the manner of conveyance; any more than a present of gold, made to two persons, becomes brass to one and gold to the other, only by being conveyed through one to the other. You will never be able to prove any difference in the nature or kind of the worship, merely from the economical manner of applying it. You begin with the Apostolical Constitutions; which you know are of no authority: and so I shall not trouble myself to shew that the passages, were they really genuine, are nothing to your purpose. You go on to Polycarp; who glorifies God through Christ. Cyprian says, that the Father commanded his Son to be worshipped: therefore his worship is mediate. Wonderful! Novatian says, if Christ be a man only, why is he invoked as Mediator? therefore again his worship is mediate. You did not consider Novatian's notion of a Mediator, that he must be both God and man: and so you lost the whole force of his argument; which was to prove the Son to be God from the invocation, and not man only, as some heretics pretended.

What you cite from Lactantius, I have answered above: or if I had not, you must be sensible that very little stress ought to ⁿ Theod. Hæret. Fab. lib. iv. c. 1.

^m Vid. Bull. D. F. sect. ii. c. 3. p. 51.

be laid upon a few uncautious expressions of a catechumen, not yet perfectly instructed in the doctrines of the Church, which was the case of Lactantius. He had, however, learned so much of the Church's doctrine, as to determine directly against you in the present question; where he says, one honour belongs to both as to one God, and that their worship is inseparable°.

As to Eusebius, your last evidence, though I build little upon so late and so suspected an authority, (which, as I have often hinted, you ought no more to urge against me, than I to urge Alexander, Cyril, Athanasius, or Hilary, against you,) yet neither had he any such mean thoughts of God the Son as you have: nor did he found his worship upon any such low principles; which I have shewn above. He is, however, the first you could find, among such as have been ever called Catholics, who pretended to say, that Father and Son are not ισότιμοι, the first that durst ever flatly contradict St. John, (or rather our Saviour himself by St. John,) where he says, "that all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father," John v. 23. I conclude with the same declaration I formerly made, that "I desire only to have things fairly represented, as they really are; no evidence smothered or stifled on either side. Let every reader see plainly what may be justly pleaded here or there, and no more." Had you attended to these good rules, which you are pleased to remind me of, and to favour with your approbation, you might have brought your book into a less compass; and perhaps have done as much real service to your cause, and less hurt to your character.

QUERY XVIII.

Whether worship and adoration, both from men and angels, was not due to him, long before the commencing of his mediatorial kingdom, as he was their Creator and Preserver, (see Col. i. 16, 17,) and whether that be not the same title to adoration which God the Father hath, as Author and Governor of the universe, upon the Doctor's own principles?

IT is proper the reader should be let into the full design and purport of this Query, that he may be able to pass a more certain judgment of the pertinence or impertinence of your answer. The question is, whether the worship of Christ be founded upon any thing antecedent to his incarnation and exaltation, or only upon the powers then supposed to be given him. If it was founded on any thing antecedent, then the Doctor and you have very impertinently cited Matt. xxviii. 18. John v. 22, 23. Phil. ii. 10, 11. and the like texts, as carrying in them the sole foundation of his worship, after the manner of the Socinians : if it was not founded on any thing antecedent, what account can you give of Christ's being Creator, of his being God before the creation, John i. 1, of his having "glory before the world was," and the like? In short, the Doctor is here confounded between two schemes, Socinian and Arian, and very unskilfully endeavours to tack both together ; which is utterly impracticable. Either let him found the worship of the Son upon what was antecedent to the incarnation, and then he may tolerably go on upon the Arian scheme : or if he chooses to found it entirely upon the subsequent powers, he is all over Socinian, and does not know it.

° Unus est honos utrique tribendus tanquam uni Deo: et ita dividendus est per duos, cultus, ut divisio ipsa compage inseparabili vinciat.

Neutrum sibi relinquet, qui aut Patrem a Filio, aut Filium a Patre secerit. Lact. Epit. c. xlix. p. 141. ed. Cant.

My design is not to suffer you to take the advantage of both the schemes, which are utterly inconsistent with each other. You must either drop your Arian principles, and so settle in Socinianism : or if you resolve to retain your Arian tenets, you must drop your Socinian pleas, to be all of a piece. This is what you may easily be driven to ; and that was the design of this Query. If the reader takes this along with him, he will readily perceive how hard you are here pressed ; and how elusive and insufficient all your answers are.

You say, whenever the mediatorial kingdom began, the worship however of Christ was by the command of the Father. That I allow : and so was also the worship of the Father first introduced by the command of the Father. Hitherto you are only shifting ; and come not to the pinch of the question ; namely, when the worship began, or whereon it was founded. What follows, (p. 392,) is still evading, and running from the point in question. What comes nearest to it is your saying, that he by whom God created all things has not the same title to adoration with him who created all things by him. Well : but has he any title at all upon the foot of his being Creator ? Or do you make him a mere nominal Creator ? If, according to Heb. i. 10, "he laid the foundation of the earth," and if "the heavens were the works of his hands ;" and if he was God before the creation, (according to John i. 1,) then shew me, that the power of judging, or any thing of like nature subsequent, ever could be a higher or an equal foundation of worship with what has been mentioned. You cannot shew, that he was made a God after his resurrection: but it is plain, and you cannot gainsay it, that he was God before the creation. Wherefore I insist upon it, that he had as clear and full a title to worship before his incarnation, as any you can shew after: and therefore it is strangely inconsistent of you to found his worship upon the power of judging, &c. No one ever would do this that believed the Son to be God and Creator (though in a lower sense than the Father) before the world. The Socinians were shrewd men, and shewed some parts and sagacity in the working up their scheme. They founded the worship of Christ upon the power of judging, and his exaltation: but then they were never so silly as to suppose him God and Creator before. The Arians founded the worship of Christ upon his being Creator and God before the world: but then they were not so weak as to found it upon the power of judging, &c. Whereas you, to give a specimen of your great dexterity in forming a scheme, have marvellously tacked two parts together, one of which will suit only with the Socinian scheme, the other only with the Arian or Catholic; thereby betraying great unskilfulness and want of thought. Which of these parts you will at length give up, I know not: but all men of sense and common discernment will laugh at you for holding both.

When I wrote my Defence, the Doctor had not determined that God the Father is ever called God, in Scripture, in the metaphysical sense. Worship even of him was to be founded only upon his office, (God was then a name of office) relative to us. I was therefore of opinion, that if the Son was Creator, as great an office as any, and as highly meriting of us, he must then, upon the Doctor's own principles, have the same title to adoration as the Father himself had: nor do I see, that you have yet been able to baffle this reasoning. You have been forced to allow, (obliged thereto by the unanimous current of antiquity, Eusebius not excepted,) that the Son is immediate Artificer, or Creator, of the universe. This is meriting as highly of us as is possible; more, one would imagine, than merely giving out commands; which is an honour you reserve peculiar to the Father. If therefore worship be founded, not upon any dignity and excellency of nature, but upon relative offices; it seems to me, that the Son's title to our worship is as clear and full as possible, upon your own principles; such, I mean, as they were at that time. My argument therefore was good when I made it; however you may have varied your notions since. I add further, that my argument, from the hand the Son had in creating, will remain impregnable for an equality of worship, whatever principles you take up in hopes to elude it: though that particular was not the special purport of this Query.

You had argued against creating being a just foundation of worship, because no act of dominion: to which I replied, that the same argument would hold with respect to the Father also; and so his creating the world would be no foundation for worshipping him, being no more an act of dominion than the Son's creating is. To which you now reply, that the world was made by the Father's "original absolute authority and power." This is not defending your first answer, but retreating to another. However, this will not do, any more than the first. For you will never be able to prove, that the Son is not as completely and fully Creator as the Father: and Scripture never founds worship upon the original undervived manner of creating, which you speak of, but upon the creating itself. What you object from Rev. iv. 10, 11, "created for his pleasure," has been answered above. You go on upon this argument of the Son's having the same title that the Father has, though but a by part of the Query. Not a word do you say to clear yourself of Socinianism; not a syllable to vindicate your inconsistency in founding the Son's worship upon his mediatorial powers given after his resurrection; at the same time admitting that he was God before the world, and created the world. This perhaps was too tender a point to be touched.

To pursue you in your own way. I pleaded John xvii. 5, "Glorify me with the glory," &c. not to prove that the Son had the same title to worship which the Father has; but to shew that the glory he had after his incarnation was not greater than he had before: and therefore it was a weak thing of you to overlook his former glories, equal to any, and to found his worship upon what came after. To this you reply, (p. 394,) "His being restored to the glory he had before, does not prove that the power of judgment, &c. was not an additional exaltation." Yes, but it proves something more; that even after all judgment was committed to him, he was yet not invested with that glory, not with so great glory, (for why should he ask for less, if he had greater,) as he had before the world was. But you add, that "if the Son

^p See my Sermons, p. 73, 74 of this volume.

^q Page 519.

“ had the same right to glory that the Father had, it could be no more proper for the Son to pray to the Father, to glorify him, than for the Father to pray to the Son.” But the case is different, because the Son was incarnate, and not the Father: therefore it became the Son to pray, but not the Father. Aye but, say you, could not the Son himself have given it by his own authority? Yes; but as the Father did not disdain to receive glory from the Son, why should the Son refuse to receive glory from the Father? As to Irenæus’s testimony, that the Son was of old worshipped together with the Father, it is a very plain one; and I have given it above^r. The Father and Son together are there expressly styled the “ God of the living:” and it was the “ God of the living” that the Patriarchs adored.

You have a pleasant remark (p. 142.) on that passage of Irenæus: you say, I take no notice of the emphatical words, resurrectio autem ipse Dominus est. Behold, now I have taken notice of them: of what use are they, I beseech you, in our present debate? How do they at all lessen the force of my argument? Would you have it, that Christ was adored by the Patriarchs of old, as God, because he was to be exalted to be God 2000 years after? You should speak out plainly, that a reader may understand you: unless your design be to give a hint as if you had something material to say, when you have really nothing. It puts me in mind of the Modest Pleader, who once thinking himself obliged to quote, at full length, a noted passage of Bishop Pearson^s, which had been usually cut into halves, (the latter half begins with, “and therefore,”) he claps this note upon it: “ What that learned writer meant by the word therefore, I “ submit to the judicious reader^t.” No doubt but he would have the judicious reader imagine there is something weighty in the remark; though he can neither shew what nor why. But to proceed.

I had referred to Eusebius and Athanasius, as both agreeing that God the Son was worshipped by Abraham, Moses, and the Jewish Church: it was therefore the sense of the ancients in general, (as we may safely conclude from these two writers, and their agreement; were there no other proofs,) that God the Son had distinct worship paid him long before his incarnation: and therefore his worship (whatever it were) could not be founded on the commission to judge, or the like, as you have founded it. After your many boasts of the ancients, groundless and shameless as I ever met with, here in a very important point, the point of worship, wherein our practice is nearly concerned; here, I say, you run counter to all the Catholics of the primitive Church; nay, to all the sober Arians, who will hereafter rise up in judgment and condemn you, for founding Christ's worship so meanly, upon I know not what powers given after his resurrection. They founded it upon reasons antecedent to his incarnation, upon his being God before the world, and Creator of the world by his own power^u.

^r Page 672.

^s See it above, p. 533.

^t Modest Plea, p. 212.

You endeavour to shew that Eusebius's doctrine about the worship of Christ runs not so high as mine. Perhaps it does not: I did not cite Eusebius for that purpose. But I cited him as an evidence, to prove that all antiquity is directly and fully against your way of founding Christ's worship in the power of judging, &c. You have none of the ancients, except such as Photinus, or Paul of Samosata, to countenance you in it: the Arians, at least the generality of them, would have been ashamed of it. This is what I before pressed you with; and you, in your reply, dissemble and totally conceal it, leading your reader off to quite other things.

What you have from Philo is still diverting, and running off from the main point: nor are Philo's notions, in this case, of any moment in the controversy; unless the Apostles and primitive Christians had no better guide than Philo. Philo might hit upon some truths, but shaded with errors, and not breaking out with full lustre and brightness. A clearer and fuller discovery was a privilege reserved for the Christian Church. Your remark (p. 397.) about the angel which appeared to Manoah is just: and had you looked into the last edition of my Defence, you would have found that part corrected. For it is not my way, after I perceive any mistake, to persist in it.

To conclude. The reader is desired to observe, that you had been charged with taking in two inconsistent schemes (Arian and Socinian) into one, and tacking them very absurdly together; that you have been called upon to declare which of the disjointed parts you will give up, or else to shew how it is possible to make them stand together; that after mature deliberation, you have made no answer to the charge, but have passed it over ^u Christum colimus ut Creatorem. Serm. Arian. ap. August. p. 663.

Antequam faceret universa, omnium futurorum Deus et Dominus, Rex et Creator erat constitutus. Voluntate et præcepto (Patris) cælestia et terrestria, visibilia et invisibilia, corpora et spiritus, ex nullis exstantibus, ut essent, sua virtute fecit. Serm. Arianor. p. 622.

in profound silence. These are the facts; let every honest reader judge what to infer from them.

QUERY XIX.

Whether the Doctor hath not given a very partial account of John v. 23. founding the honour due to the Son on this only, that the Father hath committed all judgment to the Son; when the true reason assigned by our Saviour, and illustrated by several instances, is, that the Son doth the same things that the Father doth, hath the same power and authority of doing what he will; and therefore has a title to as great honour, reverence, and regard, as the Father himself hath? and it is no objection to this, that the Son is there said to do nothing of himself, or to have all given him by the Father; since it is owned that the Father is the fountain of all, from whom the Son derives, in an ineffable manner, his essence and powers, so as to be one with him?

THOUGH you have nothing under this Query but what I have before fully answered or obviated; yet because you are pleased to repeat, I shall repeat also. Dr. Clarke's pretence is, that Christ's honour is founded upon the power of judgment committed to him: I say, his honour is founded on the intrinsic excellency and antecedent dignity of his Person; whereof the power of judgment committed is only a further attestation, and a provisional security for the payment of his due honour. It did not make him worthy, but found him so: and it was added, that such his high worth and dignity might appear to men, and be acknowledged by them—"The Father hath committed all judgment unto the Son, that all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father." This is not giving us the formal reason, or foundation of his honour, but the final reason, or moving cause, why the Son is to execute judgment rather than the Father himself. It is because men would hereby be apprised of his antecedent worth and dignity, and at the same time be incited to pay him suitable honour, in external acts of worship and adoration, as to the Father himself. This is the obvious, natural construction of the place in St. John; as I before intimated. And I confirmed it by the accounts which St. John has given us of his antecedent dignity, his being God before the creation, and his creating the world; which makes it plain, that the committing of judgment was no addition of new dignity, but rather declarative of the old; that it might appear the more fully, and be the more secure of the effect upon mankind. This reasoning appearing to me very clear and just, demanded as clear an answer. But you have little to say, except in the way of objection and repetition, about derived and underrived: which is not arguing from Scripture, but from metaphysical notions you have taken up about sameness, and such as you allow not in any case but this; contradicting that strict notion of sameness, as often as you make an infinite number of extended parts to be the same substance.

To what you repeat from the Modest Pleader about the Father's being Fountain, I returned a sufficient answer in a note to a Sermon^x. You ask, "Can one person commit powers to another who had already in himself the same powers?" Yes, by voluntary economy, the exercise of powers common to many may devolve upon one chiefly; and may run in his name. I gave you a proper rebuke in my Defence, vol. i. p. 438, for your expressing great amazement at my prejudice and blindness in maintaining only what had been held by all the Christian churches. I reminded you of the many wise, great, and good men, whom you charged through my sides. "This," you say, "is not a right way of dealing with Scripture." That was not the point: but it might be a right way of dealing with a gentleman who was gone beyond decorum, and appeared too full of himself; forgetting that a modest deference is due to wise, great, and good men, even where we dissent from them. But to pass on.

I charged your interpretation of John v. 19. as unnatural and forced, making the context incoherent. "The Son can do nothing but by commission: for" (observe the reason) "he can do every thing the Father does." But if the sense runs thus, The Son being one with the Father can do nothing separately, then the context is coherent; "for whatsoever the Father doth, the Son does also, or likewise." You say, "The word for, in the latter part of the 19th verse, is not the reason given of what went before, but that the latter part is a parenthesis." But who will give you the liberty of making a parenthesis where there is no occasion, only to serve an hypothesis? I shewed, that you cannot make your sense out of the passage, but by supplying the deficiency of the text with what the text has not said. Which observation of mine you call retracting the charge before made, when it is really enforcing it: and I preferred the Catholic interpretation as more natural, and as arguing no deficiency in the text. Besides that, admitting the sentence to be elliptical, in order to make the sense coherent in your way of construction; yet I took notice further, how very harsh and strange it must sound for a creature to be commissioned to do all that the Creator does. To which you have nothing to reply, but that your interpretation does not suppose the Son created. Say then, that he is uncreated, and let us end the dispute; provided only, you will please to mean, as well as say. I accept, however, of your tacit acknowledgment, that my argument against the Son's being a creature is unanswerable. How far you are concerned in it, the readers will judge. You go on; "it must be odd, and strange, that the supreme God should be commissioned." Nothing strange at all, that one who is supreme in order and office, should give commission to another not supreme in order or office; though both be equally supreme in nature; which is the true notion of supreme God.

^x Sermon II. p. 55, 56 of this volume.

I shewed you what answers had been formerly given to your objections by Hilary, Chrysostom, Cyril, and Austin: in reply to which, you tell me, that Novatian and Eusebius were more ancient Fathers. But did I put it upon the authority of the Fathers which I cited? I insisted upon the reasons they gave, against those very pretences which you revive. And why did you not answer them? Their reasons were drawn from Scripture, and founded on the text itself; against which neither Novatian nor Eusebius is of any the least weight. But thus you love to disguise the true matter in question, and to lead your reader off to something wide and foreign. However, Novatian has not a word to your purpose; unless copying out the Father's works (imitator operum Paternorum) proves the Son to be of a different nature from the Father. Tertullian, ancients than either Novatian or Eusebius, understands the Son's doing nothing of himself, of the intimate conjunction of the Father and Son, the Son being in the Father, and seeing all that he does, or rather all that he designs or conceives. He goes upon the old notion, that the designing or conceiving part belongs peculiarly to the Father, the executive and finishing part to the Son: and thus Father and Son ν Filius nihil a semetipso potest facere, nisi viderit Patrem facientem. Pater enim sensu agit; Filius vero qui in Patris sensu est, videns perficit; sic omnia per Filium facta sunt, et sine illo factum est nihil. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. 15.

Τῶν αὐτῶν πραγμάτων τοὺς τύπους ἐνομαίνεται μὲν ὁ πατήρ, ἐπιτελεῖ δὲ ὁ Λόγος, οὐ δουλικῶς, οὐτ' ἀμαθῶς, ἀλλ' ἐπιστημονικῶς, καὶ οικειότερον εἰπεῖν, πατρικῶς. Greg. Naz. Or. xxxvi. p. 584.

Eusebius has the like thought, which he expresses however in terms somewhat harsh:

Ὁ μὲν οὖν πατήρ διετύπων, καὶ ἠτοίμαζε διανοούμενος, &c.—ὁ δὲ τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς λογισμοῖς ἐνατενίζων, καὶ μόνος ἐποπτεύων τὰ ἐν αὐτῷ βάθη, δι' ἔργων ἐχώρει, τοῖς τοῦ πατρὸς ἐξηγηρητοῦμενος νύμασι. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. iii. c. 3. p. 164.

were jointly concerned in every operation. As to Eusebius's authority, where he has not reasons, nor elder Fathers to support him, it is worth nothing. Athanasius has writings extant older, probably, than any we have of Eusebius's; except his oration before Paulinus of Tyre, or what may be had in Pamphilus's Apology. And as to Hilary, there is about twenty years difference between his age and Eusebius's: a mighty thing for you to boast of.

I excuse your citing (p. 404.) a sentence of the Semi-Arians in Epiphanius; mistaking it for Epiphanius's own; I suppose you did it ignorantly. And it is the more pardonable, because learned men had formerly made the same blunder: though, I believe, never since the time that Petavius's sagacity set that matter right in his notes to his edition, the same that you made use of.

To your argument drawn from the Father's loving the Son, I replied, that he loves also himself; which is no matter of choice. You pretend, however, that "showing the Son all things, is "free:" which you have no ground for saying, but it is purely fiction to serve an hypothesis. Your adding, his "giving authority to do likewise," is corrupting the text, which says nothing of authority; though, if it had, it might be understood of such authority, power, and perfections, as descend with his nature from the Father to the Son.

You quote John xv. 10. of Christ's "abiding in his love." If you see any consequence favourable to your principles in that text, you should have shewn it; I can see none. You tell me of bringing Hilary in again: and you entirely slip over the reasons I produced from him, without any answer. Is this dealing fairly with the reader?

I had challenged you to shew, that one person may not be delegate to another, without being unequal in nature. But you are frightened, as usual, with the distinction of order and nature; and run off in the utmost confusion. A "delegated "power," you say, "cannot be equally supreme and independent." Come out of the clouds, and tell me what you mean by supreme and independent. If you mean as great a power, and as necessarily existing, I shall tell you, there is no difference between the Father's and the Son's: if you mean, that the Son's is of the Father, the Father's from none, I allow a supremacy of order, and a different manner of existing; and the question is not whence the Son has his powers, but what they are. As to supremacy of order being only in placing of words, I have shewed your inconsistency on that head above. Your blaming me for citing Ruffin's translation, in a case where it is all one whether the words were Ruffin's or Origen's, is low carping. You did not perceive that the passage was brought in among several others of Post-Nicene writers; and intended only for illustration. But you are still more offended at my styling my doctrine the doctrine of the Trinity; as if others had not as good a right to style theirs so. Supposing you have, (which I deny,) yet sure I may style my own according to what I take to be right and true. But your Trinity of a great God, a little God, and no God, must have some strong figure to help it, to make it a Trinity; which is a word that has long stood for a quite different thing^z.

I had retorted upon you your own arguments against the received doctrine of the Trinity; to shew the world how unequal and partial you have been in the handling this controversy. You had several maxims about individual, about sameness, about substance, about being, which were to be urged as of great force against the doctrine of the Trinity; though of no force in another subject, upon your own principles. You could allow being and being, where you could not say beings; substance and substance, where you could not say substances; individual substance, where yet you could distinguish between this and that; and same substance, where it is not the same in such a sense of same, as you urge against us. Sameness by union you can allow, where you have a mind: only in our present dispute, no such thing was to be admitted. This unreasonable, and indeed shameful conduct, in so momentous an affair, I endeavoured to expose as it deserved. The reader may please to look into my Defence, vol. i. p. 444, &c. to see what I had to say on that head: I have no mind to repeat. Pressed with the difficulties of the omnipresence retorted upon you, you now tell me, that my foundation was wrong, in supposing the substance of God to be God. This I am a little startled at: let us hear what your philosophy can produce in defence of so wild a paradox, that the substance of God is not God. I will give the reader your words at length, that he may marvel: "God is neither the substance of God, nor the attributes of God, but he is that intelligent Agent whose both the substance and δέδεικται δὲ ἀδιαίρετος οὕσα καὶ οὐκ ἀνόμοιος. ἀνάγκη μίαν ταύτης εἶναι τὴν ἀγιότητα, καὶ μίαν ταύτης τὴν αἰδιότητα, καὶ τὴν τῆς ἀτρειφίας φύσιν. Athanas. Ep. i. ad Serap. p. 678.

^z Τριάς ὡς ἀληθῶς ἡ τριάς ἀδελφοί. τριάς δὲ οὐ πραγμάτων ἀνίστων ἀπαρίθμησις—ἀλλὰ ἰσῶν καὶ ὁμοσίμων σύλληψις. Greg. Nazian. Orat. xiii. p. 211.

Εἰ δὲ τριάς ἐστίν, ὥσπερ οὖν καὶ ἐστὶ,

“ attributes are. And as infinity, for instance, so every other “ attribute, power, or perfection, of the omnipresent Being, is the “ individual attribute, power, or perfection, of that one individual “ intelligent Agent, whose the omnipresent substance is,” p. 407. The philosopher that fixed the earth upon an elephant, and the elephant upon a tortoise, and knew not where to go next, could not be more confounded than you appear to be here. The substance, it seems, is to be fixed upon the Person, (which is neither substance nor attribute; but something between both,) and thus all difficulties are wiped off at once, by making person stand for nobody knows what; an idea, I suppose, or nothing. I have often suspected your notion of intelligent agent to be very confused; but never thought it so wild and unaccountable as this comes to. Do you consider that intelligent and agent are two adjectives, which suppose a substantive, two attributes that require substance for their support? Say that person is the subject: but then what is person, but either substance, or attribute, or nothing? Resolve it into its several ideas, and you will find that person always implies intelligent and acting substance; not intelligent acting nothing. Now intelligence, and activeness, are attributes only of God, that is, of the divine substance; which is God, and what we mean by God, as often as we speak of him, considered as the subject of his own attributes.

I know not whether you might not be led into the mistake through the vulgar way of speaking about the substance of God, or substance of the Father; as if the substance were not God himself, or not the Father himself, but something belonging to him. The same way of speaking might be as good an argument to prove, that the Person of the Father is not the Father, but something belonging to the Father. Such a mode of speech is very common in other cases; as when we say the body of the moon for the moon, or the matter of the world for the world. Which kind of language has its reason and foundation in our way of forming and ranging our ideas for our more distinct perception. For, not content with a general confuse idea of any thing, we take it, as it were, into pieces, or parcels, for a more distinct and particular view of it. The idea, suppose, of God the Father, we divide into two ideas, substance and attribute; and attribute again into many ideas still more distinct and particular. And now Father stands for the general confuse idea, while substance and attribute are considered as parts of it, and belonging to it. This I take to be the true account of that way of speaking ; as well in this, as in the other cases above mentioned. So, though the Person of the Father be really nothing else but the Father ; yet it is considered as something distinct, after we have once parcelled out the general confuse idea into several particular ideas ; as into person, power, goodness, &c. for the greater distinction. Then even Person is considered as but part of that confuse idea, for which the word Father stands ; and it is conceived to belong to it, as a part to the whole. Hence, as I apprehend, arises the way of speaking before mentioned ; which is right and just in respect of our ideas, but very inaccurate in regard to the things themselves, for which the ideas stand : because indeed our ideas are not adequate ; being formed in a way suited to our own infirmity, rather than to the truth and strictness of things.

QUERY XX.

Whether the Doctor needed have cited 300 texts, wide of the purpose, to prove what nobody denies, namely, a subordination, in some sense, of the Son to the Father ; could he have found but one plain text against his eternity or consubstantiality, the points in question ?

YOU have little under this Query but repetition and reference : which requires no further notice. As to the Form of Baptism, which you mention in the close, I have considered it in a distinct Discourse^a, which you had seen before you came to this Query. You have nothing to object but a passage from the spurious Constitutions, of no value ; and another from Eusebius, of very little. I content myself therefore with referring to my Defence and Sermons.

QUERY XXI.

Whether he be not forced to supply his want of Scripture-proof by very strained and remote inferences, and very uncertain reasonings from the nature of a thing confessedly obscure and above comprehension ; and yet not more so than God's eternity, ubiquity, prescience, or other attributes, which we are obliged to acknowledge for certain truths ?

YOU tell me, in the entrance, that “ none of Dr. Clarke’s “ propositions, on which he lays any stress, are drawn by mere “ reasonings from the incomprehensible nature of God.” But what think you of five of his propositions, where he denies the necessary existence (for so you now understand self-existence) of the Son and Holy Ghost ? Has the Doctor so much as one text in the ^a See my eighth Sermon, p. 171, &c. of this volume.

Scripture for any of them? Not a syllable, either in Old or New Testament, but what he pretends to infer from very obscure and uncertain reasonings about derived and underived, about acts and no acts, about necessary agency being no agency, about will, coaction, &c. profoundly metaphysical and fanciful, with nothing solid or certain in them. The like may be said of the doctrine contained in his 17th proposition; which has no text of Scripture to stand upon, though he lays great stress upon it. In short, I observed in my Defence, and here repeat, that “the main strength of the Doctor’s cause lies first in his giving either a Sabellian or Tritheistic turn (admitting no medium) to the Catholic doctrine; and then charging it with confusion of Persons, Polytheism, nonsense, contradiction. Take away that, (to which his constant resort is, whenever he comes to the pinch of the question,) and there will be little left considerable.” For the truth and justice of this report, or censure, I appealed^b to the Doctor’s own books, which is a fair procedure: and if you have any thing to say in vindication of the Doctor, shew that the fact is otherwise than I represented. Not being able to do any thing of this kind, you endeavour, as usual, to turn it off by retorting; and to put me upon the defensive, having nothing to plead in defence of the Doctor or yourself. This may serve to blind a reader, and to conceal your shame: but it is not answering Queries. You fall again upon 1 Cor. viii. 6. which has been answered over and over. What is that to the point now in hand, the Doctor’s making strained inferences, except it be giving one example more, by his wresting of that text?

As to God’s “eternity, ubiquity, prescience,” you say, “they themselves are the subject of our belief, not particular men’s philosophical explications of the manner of them.” Well then, let it be the subject of our belief, that the Father is God, the Son God, and the Holy Ghost God; and that they are the one God of the Christians. But as to the manner how they are three, or one, let nobody concern himself about it. If any one, under pretence of explaining the manner, changes the sense of the word God, making the Son a nominal God only, and the Holy Ghost scarce so much; what is this but doing the same, as if under pretence of explaining the manner of eternity, ubiquity, or prescience, he should introduce the doctrine of a nominal, not real eternity; a nominal ubiquity, a nominal prescience; undermining the doctrines themselves? Our dispute is about the sense in which any of the Persons is God: let this be determined by Scripture and antiquity, and proper rules of criticism. Make no objections from the manner how the thing should be: for all such objections are as improper, as it would be in the question of prescience^c, eternity, or ubiquity; to leave Scripture, and such approved rules as serve to determine the sense of it, and to retreat to philosophical reasonings about the manner how these things are. This is the very fault which you have perpetually run into. And while we are bringing you plain Scripture proofs for Christ's divinity, as plain as can be brought for the divinity of the Father; you are filling people's heads with Tritheism and Sabellianism, with specific and individual, with identical wholes and undivided parts, with acts and no acts, with causes and no causes, with derived and underived, with co-ordinations, three supreme Gods, three substances, and I know not what; all cavils taken from the manner of the thing, and intended to undermine the doctrine itself, which is and ought to be the subject of belief. You will say, perhaps, that we have not so full proof of this doctrine, as we have of eternity, prescience, or ubiquity. Admit we have not: yet let that point, as to the ^c A late author, in his Appeal to a Turk or Indian, being pressed with the instance about prescience and free agency, has no way of coming off, but by denying that there is so much as a seeming repugnancy between the two ideas, p. 5. He is the first man of parts who, after considering the subject, ever thought so. I could name him many of the clearest heads and finest wits among ancients and moderns, (such as Dr. Burnet of the Charter House, Mr. Locke, &c.) who have been so sensible of the seeming repugnancy, as to despair of ever clearing it, or reconciling the ideas. Is there no seeming repugnancy in maintaining that the same act is certain, as being foreknown, uncertain, as depending on the will of a free agent? I should be glad to see the seeming repugnancy answered, or took off any other way than by an humble acknowledgment of our ignorance in the high things of God. And I would remind this author, that this very instance about prescience and free will carries much greater difficulty in it than the doctrine of three and one. For there is no argument, I know of, against the latter, but what is capable of a just solution: that is, it may be shewn where the argument has a flaw, and where the chain breaks. But in the other case, I think, the utmost we can do is only to prove that the argument must have a flaw somewhere, though we see not where; being content to resolve all into the inscrutable perfection of the divine Prescience, which infinitely transcends our finite capacities. With this author's good leave, then, there is a difference between these two cases: but the advantage lies wholly on the side of the doctrine of the Trinity, as being more easily defended than the other. And if he pleases but to point his logic, contained in page 6, against free will, or prescience, with the same rigour as he intends it against the Trinity, I dare promise him an absolute victory there, though not here. But this, perhaps, the author was not aware of; any more than of the difference between saying, that few understand the doctrine of the Trinity, and few understand the controversy about the Trinity; committing the same blunder twice, p. 12, 153. See my Supplement, p. 363 of this volume.

^b See my Defence, vol. i. p. 450, 451, 464.

truth of the doctrine, be decided by proper evidence; discarding all vain pretences about the manner; and then we may bring it to a short issue.

“The directions,” you say, “given in Scripture concerning the “worship of God and Christ (and not philosophical conjectures “concerning substances and essences) ought to be the guide of “our practice.” Let us then follow the directions given in Scripture: not philosophical conjectures about self-existence; nor Pagan distinctions about absolute and relative, ultimate and mediate worship; nor precarious suppositions of one that had been God and Creator before, becoming greater by being appointed Judge. Let worship, all religious worship, be paid, as Scripture every where directs, to God alone, and to no creature. Let none have worship that cannot be proved to be God, nor any want it that can: and then there will soon be an end of all disputes; and worship will stand upon its old foundations, as it had ever stood, before Pagans, Arians, and Papists perverted and corrupted the true notions of it.

You state the main question between us in these terms, (p. 413.) “Scripture,” you say, “tells us there is but one God, “even the Father.” Yes: Scripture styles the Father the “one “or only God:” that is all you should pretend. The same Scripture styles the Son God, ascribing also divine titles, attributes, glory, to him. Now let your question be put: “In what sense “these two propositions are, according to reason and the use “of language, best understood to be consistent.” I have at large considered this very question, so stated, in a distinct Discourse^d; which was published before this part of your Reply was put to the press: as appears by your quoting my Sermons in the former part. I have therefore just reason to complain of your complaint, which you have borrowed from the Modest Pleader; and which, whatever was then, you have now no pretence for. I have shewn abundantly that your argument from the exclusive terms is not, either according to reason or use of language, of any weight, in comparison to the proofs we bring of Christ’s being God in the same sense as the Father is, and one God with him. The 1 Cor. viii. 6. which you urge in such a manner as if the whole Scripture was to yield to one text, and that misinterpreted, has been often answered. You blame me for not expressing my faith in any Scripture positions: as if every thing I assert as matter of faith were not as much Scripture position, according to my way of understanding Scripture, as yours is to your Scripture position according to your way: only the difference is, that mine is the Catholic, approved way; yours is partly Arian and partly Socinian.

^d Sermon IV. p. 84, &c. of this volume.

Under this Query, I entered into a discourse about the meaning of believing mysteries, in answer to the objection, that our doctrine is not intelligible. I shewed both of the doctrine in general, and of the particulars most usually excepted against, that they are intelligible; as intelligible, at least, as omnipresence, eternity, prescience, God's simplicity, self-existence, &c. To the main of the discourse you have nothing to reply: but here and there you throw in some short strictures upon such parts as you think proper.

I had said, "the learned are hardly agreed, whether self-existence be a negative or positive idea." Upon which you remark, "how absurd this is I have already shewn." What is absurd? The report I had made of learned men, and their differing on that head? No; the fact is undoubtedly true. But it is absurd for any one to make the idea negative: that, I presume, is your meaning. And yet you here entirely mistake what I was talking about; and have certainly determined on the wrong side of the question. For the question upon which the learned have differed is this; whether when we say any thing exists of itself, or is self-existing, the words a se, or of self, have any positive meaning, or mean only that it does not exist of another. Some have carried the notion of its being positive so far, as to say God is the cause of himself^e, or even made himself, as Lactantius expresseth it: which is supposing the idea positive indeed, and is manifestly absurd. Dr. Clarke, one of the latest writers, and from whom one might have expected something accurate, yet appears to be all over confused upon this very head in his famous "Demonstration" of the "Existence." His professed design there is to prove the existence of a first cause a priori: which has no sense without the supposition of a cause prior to the first: which ^e The expressions of αυτογενής and αυτοφύης, if strictly taken, lead to such a meaning. As also ex se ortus, ex seipso, and the like. Petavius cites several testimonies of this kind. De Trin. lib. v. cap. 5. p. 294.

Υἱὸν ἑαυτοῦ. Synes.

Solus Deus est, itaque principium; qui ex seipso dedit sibi ipse principium. Zen. Veron.

Deus—ipse sui origo est, suæque causa substantiæ. Hieron. in Ephes. 3.

Id quod est, ex se, atque in se continens. Hilar.

Ex se principium cui contigit. Hilar. alter.

"Ἐξεῖ ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ τὸ εἶναι ὃ ἐστὶν." Zach. Mitylen.

Sui namque principium.

Ex seipso procreatus — ipse se fecit. Lactanti.

yet is nonsense. The Doctor was too wise a man to say that God is the cause of himself: and yet he says what amounts to it unawares. He speaks of "necessity of existence," as being "antedecently, in order of nature, the cause or ground of that existence^f:" which is, in short, making a property or attribute antecedent, in order of nature, to its subject, and the cause and ground of the subject. And he talks in his Letters, of this necessity absolute and antecedent (in order of nature) to the existence of the first Cause, operating every where alike. As if a property operated in causing the substance, or making it to be what it is. All this confusion seems to have been owing to the Doctor's not distinguishing between modal and causal necessity; and his not considering that self-existence, or aseity^h, as the Schools speak, is negative; and does not mean that the first Cause is either caused by any thing ad extra, or by itself, (much less by any property of itself,) but has no cause, is absolutely uncaused. I was not therefore considering, whether any, or what positive perfections are implied in self-existence, or in any being that is self-existent, as you hastily apprehended, but whether self-existence (having plainly a reference to the question whence the thing is) is to be considered positively or negatively in regard to the cause of that existence. I have now determined, I think upon plain reasons, that it is negative only; and that we are not to suppose any cause, external or internal, but absolutely no cause; because there is no cause prior to the first. The true way of ending the dispute about the attribute of self-existence being positive or negative, is by shewing what ideas are supposed to be contained in it. No doubt but existence is a positive idea: and the question only is, whether the manner of existing expressed by self denotes any thing positive. It is plain it doth not, since it means existing from no cause, which is negative; though such existence implies all positive perfections. Bishop Stillingfleet on the Trinity (p. 278.) says, "To be from himself, in the sense "generally understood, is a mere negative expression:—and in "this sense only, learned men have told us, that it is to be "understood by those ancient and modern writers, who have "used that expression, as when St. Jerome saith, that God

^f See Demonstration, &c., p. 9, 10, 16. Letters, p. 35, 36, 16.

^g Letters, p. 20, 37.

^h Hanc Dei proprietatem quidam ex recentioribus philosophis aseitatem vocarunt, quia Deus, eo quod princi-pio caret, est a se, non ab alio; contenduntque eam esse positivum attributum; quod eodem quidem redit ac id quod diximus, sed vocabis novis sine causa expressum est. Clerici Pneumatol. cap. 3. p. 150.

“ is self-originated, and St. Austin, &c.— All these and such “ like expressions are only to be negatively understoodⁱ.” To return.

You proceed to make two or three little exceptions (scarce worth notice) to what you met with in my Defence. You declare that your argument against the Son’s being God, in the strict sense, is not founded upon what can or cannot be, (which I am glad to hear,) but upon 1 Cor. viii. 6, which I have often answered. You acquaint me further, (p. 416,) that “ two supreme “ Gods” cannot be “ one supreme God ;” which I readily agree to: as neither can two Gods, supreme and inferior, be one God, or ever stand with the Scripture doctrine of one God. But two Persons in nature equal, and so equally supreme, may be one supreme God.

You assure me, that you did set out “ upon the foot of Scripture, and do continue upon that foot still.” I heartily wish you could mean, as well as say, and not revoke all again presently, by denying the Son and Holy Ghost to be necessarily existing: which you have not the least syllable of Scripture to countenance you in. And I wish you would not every where represent a distinction of order or office to be inconsistent with the divine Unity: which again you have no Scripture for, but mere fanciful speculations. You have the less reason to blame me for mentioning office in respect of God: because, you know, there was a time, when the word God was thought to be always a relative word of office.

As to Lucian’s Philopatris, I have given my thoughts of it above, (p. 439.) Your hints about a passage of Irenæus, which I had sufficiently explained^k by another of Novatian, and a third of Tertullian, are very trifling. Those heretics thought it mean and degrading for God to become man: which made some of them deny Christ’s divinity, and others his humanity; all, the union of both natures in one Person. Whether you or I give the most countenance to those heretical tenets, I leave the reader to judge.

QUERY XXII.

Whether his (the Doctor’s) whole performance, whenever he differs from us, be any thing more than a repetition of this assertion, that being and person are the same, or that there is no medium between Tritheism and Sabellianism? Which is removing the ⁱ See Pearson on the Creed, Art. i. p. 39.

^k Defence, vol. i. p. 463.

cause from Scripture to natural reason, not very consistently with the title of his book.

YOU begin with telling me, that "if two or more intelligent agents can be the same being, or subsist in the same individual substance, (provided the agents be not all of them self-existent,) this will no way affect the truth of Dr. Clarke's propositions." The reader is to know that by the same being, or substance, in this case, is understood the same necessarily existing substance: for necessary and precarious, that is, uncreated and created, cannot be called the same individual substance. By self-existent, as you have now explained yourself, you mean necessarily existing. The sum then of what you have here said amounts to this wise sentence; "If two or more intelligent agents can be the same necessarily existing being, or subsist in the same necessarily existing substance, (provided the agents be not all of them necessarily existing,) this will no way affect the truth of Dr. Clarke's propositions." What is this to the purpose? Do not you here plainly deny that two persons can be one necessary being, or substance? And this is what Dr. Clarke has often denied¹; and could never give a sufficient reason for doing it. Indeed the Doctor (or you for him) seems at length to have given up his general principle, which he first insisted upon, viz. that "two persons cannot be one being;" which he chiefly grounded upon the consideration of the imaginary composition implied in it. I say, he appears to have given this up; being at length sensible that he has allowed, in another case, substance and substance, being and being, to make one substance and one being, without any composition. But what the Doctor (or you) insist upon now, is, that two such Persons cannot be one necessary Being or substance; or that derived and underived cannot be both included in one necessary substance. Which though it be putting the objection upon a different foot, yet wants to be proved as much as did the other: and is equally liable to the charge I brought ¹ Three intelligent agents in one individual, identical substance, is so self-evident a contradiction, that I think no reasoning can make it plainer than intuition. Dr. Clarke's Three Letters, p. 31.

Two persons to be one being, I think a manifest contradiction in terms. Clarke's Reply, p. 157.

Two persons in one and the same individual uncompounded being, is an express contradiction. Ibid. p. 169.

Two individuals cannot, without an express contradiction, have an identity of nature. Ibid. p. 184.

The reason why our Saviour could not affirm that he and his Father were one Being, is because he would thereby have affirmed that they were one Person. Ibid. p. 291.

against the Doctor in this Query, his removing the cause from Scripture to natural reason; to a philosophical question, whether the ideas of self-existence and necessary existence be the same or different, or whether undervived expresses an essential perfection, all that necessary existence does, or only a relation of order, and mode of existence. After all your pretences to Scripture, you really resolve the dispute into this metaphysical question: and you cannot advance your cause at all by Scripture, but by the help of your metaphysics. You take your rise from 1 Cor. viii. 6, to come at unoriginate: thus far is commenting upon Scripture. The rest is philosophy, false philosophy, drawing inferences from unoriginate to self-existence, from self-existence to necessary existence, from thence to the Father's being alone necessarily existing, from thence to the exclusion of the Son from being necessarily existing, from thence to the making him a precarious being, (though in words you deny it,) and from thence to his being a creature: this is the course of your reasoning. Your πρωτον ψευδος, or fundamental error, lies in your philosophy, confounding unoriginate (as did the ancient Eunomians) with necessary existence; which you have no foundation for: or if you be allowed to make necessary existence the same with self-existence; you will then never be able to prove that the Father alone is self-existent; or that the self-existence of three Persons (so understood) is at all inconsistent with a real distinction of order and office. It will be changing the names of things, and nothing more. It is manifest, from what I have observed, that Scripture is not the thing you trust to, but philosophy; because when we have granted you all you pretend to have proved from Scripture, viz. that the Father is the first Person, derived from none, you are still but where you were, till you call in philosophy and metaphysics to make out the rest, and to determine the main question. You are now pleased to put the matter upon this, whether two supreme Persons can be one supreme God. You say, (p. 420,) "two equally supreme Persons united may be in the complex sense, one Being, one substance; but they will not consequently "be one supreme Governor, one Lord, one God." Now here, in the first place, I very much blame your not attending to the distinction of supreme in nature and supreme in order. It is in the first sense only that we assert two or three supreme Persons; supreme in every perfection, having no higher or lower, no better or worse, no degrees of essential power, wisdom, or any other attribute. At the same time, those Persons, thus equally supreme in nature, are not equally supreme in order, but two of them are subordinate to one, the Head and Centre of Unity. And because they are in nature undivided, and in order referred up to that one Head and Fountain of all; they are therefore, with him, one Governor, one Lord, and one God. And though the authority, the dominion, the power be considered always primarily in the Father, yet is it common to all; only with this order, that the Father has it from none, they from the Father: so that all that remains peculiar to the Father is a preeminence, or priority of order. This is the Catholic doctrine which you are endeavouring to confute: but, instead of arguments, you generally give us only ambiguous words and names, to confound and perplex what ought to be kept clear and distinct.

You tell me of running counter to Scripture and antiquity, in making more than one "absolutely supreme over all." Here you are only doubling upon, or trifling with, the word supreme. I make three supreme in nature; I suppose one only supreme in order or office: shew me either one text of Scripture or one single testimony of Catholic antiquity, (I allow not Eusebius for such,) that plainly contradicts either of these positions. They appear to me, both of them, true and just positions; founded in Scripture, and confirmed by the universal suffrage of the ancients. If they appear not consistent in your philosophy, own it frankly and ingenuously, as an honest man would: but do not misreport Scripture and antiquity.

What follows in p. 421 is only repeating your own fictions both of me and of the ancients.

I had appealed to the Prophet Isaiah, as interpreted by St. John, making Father and Son "one Lord of hosts." You tell me bluntly, "there is no such thing in the texts;" referring me to Dr. Clarke's Scripture Doctrine. I say, there is in those texts all that I before asserted: and why do you now refer me to Dr. Clarke, whose pretences I had before^m considered, and, I think, confuted?

You tell me that neither the ancient writers nor Bishop Bull are at all of my opinion in the point of "equal supremacy of dominion." But so far as I apprehend of the ancients and of Bishop Bull, they were exactly of my opinion, as they are directly opposite to yours: and I wonder at your presumption in claiming any acquaintance with them or interest in them.

You have a pretty argument (p. 425.) to prove St. Paul a ^m Sermons, p. 43 of this volume.

Pagan and an idolater, upon my principles; that is, upon the principles of the Catholic Church in all ages; for mine are no other. But how is this wonderful consequence to be raised? It is first by supposing, that St. Paul excluded the Son from the one Godhead; an imaginary consequence drawn from 1 Cor. viii. 6. And next by supposing, that St. Paul allowed mediate and inferior worship; another imaginary inference drawn from 1 Tim. ii. 5. Phil. ii. 11. After sporting yourself a while in so ridiculous an argument, you come to invent something for me to say: you suppose I shall say, that our Lord is that one God mentioned 1 Cor. viii. 6. which you think highly absurd. But what if I should plead, that that one God is a silly expression, where there are not two one-Gods; and therefore should rather say, that our Lord is not that Person there styled one God by way of eminence, but another Person, who is yet one God with him. Your interpretation of the gods many and lords many, as alluding to the superior and inferior deities of the Pagans, stands upon the authority of Mr. Mede: who, like a modest and learned man, proposed it only as a plausible conjecture, not with the confidence you speak of it. An ingenious gentlemanⁿ has very lately suggested several things on that head well deserving consideration; and such as appear sufficient to make Mr. Mede's construction pass for precarious at least, if not certainly false. There is one obvious objection to be further used against it; that to make the gods many answer in the comparison, (in your way,) they should be understood to be many supreme Gods; which yet the heathens never asserted, but the contrary; as Dr. Cudworth and other learned men have abundantly shewn. To me it appears, that the many gods and many lords mean the same thing, under different names; and that St. Paul, in opposition to having many, asserts that all things were of the one God, and by the one Lord, intimating their perfect unity of power, perfection, and operation, so as to be both but one God and one Lord; the one Lord being one with the one God, and vice versa. To proceed: how well you have been able to answer the charge of Polytheism has been seen before: and particularly as to Origen, it has been shewn that his answer to the charge in his piece against Celsus was nothing like yours, but directly contrary; affirming Father and Son to be one God.

I pass over your repetitions in p. 426, 427, which have been abundantly answered. Two Gods, one supreme and another inferior, is so manifestly your doctrine, that you do but expose yourself to ridicule by struggling to evade it. The Socinians, in this, were plainer men, and did not scruple to confess a clear thing.

ⁿ Mr. Wade's Short Inquiry into the Doctrine of the Trinity, &c. p. 39, &c.

You pretended, before, to bring Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene writers against me, as to the point of charging you with Polytheism. I knew you had none, but that you had unhappily deceived yourself with a few second-hand scraps of Athanasius, Hilary, and Basil, which you understood not. I answered your pretences, and produced full and plain testimonies^o against you, both from Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene antiquity. One was out of a fragment of Dionysius Romanus, preserved by Athanasius; a very valuable one, and such as no critic will ever doubt of, as to its being genuine: your exceptions therefore against it, as of doubtful authority, are not worth the notice; besides that I have answered them above^p. Another testimony I produced from Athanasius himself, (or perhaps Basil,) who makes it Ditheism either to suppose two principles, or to admit one God underived and another God derived. Your remark upon him for it is so very shrewd and sagacious, that it is pity the reader should lose it: he shall have it in your own words: “ You cite a passage of Athanasius, that he who introduces a “ God underived, and another who is a God derived, makes two “ Gods: which is not very consistent with his own foregoing “ words, that he who introduces two original principles preaches “ two Gods: for, that in this unoriginate principality over all, “ consists the unity of God, was the express doctrine of all the “ Ante-Nicene writers.” Now are you really so blind as not to have perceived, that that origination (according to the ancients) was not supposed to make the Father one God exclusive of the other Persons? But because two of the Persons were referred to one as their Head, undivided from him; therefore all three together were the one God. This was the use they made of the origination: not to throw out the Son and Holy Ghost, as you do, but to take them both in. Yet you are constantly representing that origination in a quite different light, and to a quite different purpose; meanly quoting Bp. Pearson for it: who contradicts you in the very same sentence, and represents the case as it really stood among the ancients, being a learned and a judicious man.

Upon this occasion, I shall here translate that passage of ^o Defence, vol. i. p. 470.

^p Page 634.

Athanasius, that the common reader may see what the ancients thought of Tritheism, in a very few words :

“ He that introduces two principles (or heads) preaches up two Gods : such was the impious doctrine of Marcion. Again, he “ that asserts an uncreated God, and another God created, does “ also make two Gods ; because of the difference of nature “ (essence) which he blasphemously introduces. But where there “ is one Head, (or Father,) and one offspring from him, there is “ but one God ; the Godhead being perfect in the Father, and “ the perfect Godhead of the Father being also in the Son.” I refer the reader to my Defence, (vol. i. p. 470,) for the original ; where he will also find other passages to the same purpose.

What you produce next from Justin, Novatian, Hilary, and Bishop Pearson, the reader may judge of by the last of them ; whom you quote as saying, “ This origination in the divine “ Paternity has anciently been looked upon as the assertion of “ the unity.” Here you stop, as usual. The very next words of Bishop Pearson are ; “ and therefore the Son and Holy Ghost “ have been believed to be but one God with the Father, “ because both from the Father, who is one, and so the union “ of them⁹ :” directly contrary to what you cited him for. Such are your representations of authors ; such your manner of using the common reader.

QUERY XXIII.

Whether the Doctor's notion of the Trinity be more clear and intelligible than the other ?

The difficulty in the conception of the Trinity is, how three Persons can be one God ?

Does the Doctor deny that every one of the Persons, singly, is God ?

No : Does he deny that God is one ? No : How then are three one ?

Does one and the same authority, exercised by all, make them one, numerically or individually one and the same God ? That is hard to conceive how three distinct Beings, according to the Doctor's scheme, can be individually one God, that is, three Persons one Person.

If therefore one God necessarily signifies but one Person, the consequence is irresistible ; either that the Father is that one Person, and none else, which is downright Sabellianism ; or that the three Persons are three Gods.

Thus the Doctor's scheme is liable to the same difficulties with the other.

⁹ Pearson on the Creed, p. 40.

There is indeed one easy way of coming off, and that is, by saying that the Son and Holy Spirit are neither of them God, in the Scripture-sense of the word. But this is cutting the knot, instead of untying it; and is in effect to say, they are not set forth as divine Persons in Scripture.

Does the communication of divine powers and attributes from Father to Son and Holy Spirit, make them one God, the divinity of the two latter being the Father's divinity? Yet the same difficulty recurs; for either the Son and Holy Ghost have distinct attributes, and a distinct divinity of their own, or they have not: if they have, they are (upon the Doctor's principles) distinct Gods from the Father, and as much as finite from infinite, creature from Creator; and then how are they one? If they have not, then, since they have no other divinity, but that individual divinity, and those attributes which are inseparable from the Father's essence, they can have no distinct essence from the Father's; and so (according to the Doctor) will be one and the same Person, that is, will be names only.

Q. Whether this be not as unintelligible as the orthodox notion of the Trinity, and liable to the like difficulties: a communication of divine powers and attributes, without the substance, being as hard to conceive, nay, much harder, than a communication of both together?

YOU begin thus: "The difficulty in the conception of the Trinity, is not how three Persons can be one God. For the Scripture no where expresses the doctrine in those words: and the difficulty of understanding a Scripture doctrine ought not surely to lie wholly upon words not found in Scripture." The reader is to know that this is a new turn, intended to bring you off from the first state of the question, where you happened to lose yourself in your first answer. However, though it may pass for an ingenious shift in distress, there is very little in it more than in your first answer. Only it is hard upon me to have new answers now formed to old Queries, and to be put upon changing my method of defence, as often as you are pleased to vary your responses. Whoever taught you this new turn was a man of no great prudence or foresight: he did not consider how it inevitably recoils upon Dr. Clarke. For the Scripture no where expresses in words or in sense his main doctrine, that the Father alone is necessarily existing, that neither the Son nor the Holy Ghost is necessarily existing; (so you now confessedly understand self-existence;) these are tenets not found in Scripture expressly, nor so much as deducible by any consequence, or shadow of a consequence. Why then did you not consider better, before you drew up a charge upon others, which at length falls only on your own friends? You go on: "It is very strange that a man of your abilities should write a large book without so much as knowing, or ever once being able to express, what the true question is." And it is very strange that a man of your abilities should perceive nothing of my mistaking the question, when you first answered the Queries; but should be forced to learn this at length of the Modest Pleader, from whom you have been content to echo it. Though my abilities are very slender, yet this mean suggestion will hardly find credit, even among the lowest readers that can at all distinguish between a probable untruth, and one that is plainly romantic. When you are again disposed to abuse an adversary, do it a little more artfully; if without any truth, yet with a little discretion. But I excuse you for being misled by a third person, who was too wise to set his name. As to the question, I have not mistook it, but have kept close to it; while the Doctor and you have been either industriously disguising it, or unfairly running from it. You might think it sufficient, if your shifting and shuffling in so momentous a controversy (which plain and honest men, on either side, can but hardly excuse) be passed over as tolerable; or may but admit of any candid and plausible colour, from the circumstances you are under. It becomes you not, in the mean time, so magisterially to correct others for stating the question right, and as it ought to be stated. Had you but had the courage and spirit of your friend Mr. Whiston, I doubt not but you yourself would have stated the question as he, and I, and all men of sense and undisguised ingenuity have ever done. But enough of this.

You were here to clear Dr. Clarke's doctrine of the charge of three Gods. You first observe, that the word God no where in Scripture denotes the Holy Ghost. Well then, you will throw him out from being God, and reduce the number to two: though, when I wrote before, I imagined Dr. Clarke and you had admitted the Holy Ghost to be God; and the rather, because I never heard that you had retracted your subscription, or would scruple to repeat it. But not to press you further on so tender a point; how get you off from asserting two Gods, the Father and the Son? You have nothing to say, but repeating and trifling: let us go to another point.

You are next to retort the charge of Tritheism upon me: which I have answered more than once, and need not do it again. Dr. Clarke's scheme, you say, is easily expressed in the very words of Scripture. But had the Doctor gone no further than Scripture, his scheme could never have been expressed at all. Only, since he has told you where, and how, to understand self-existent, and where to exclude it; now you pretend his scheme may be expressed in Scripture words. Do you imagine that I cannot as easily, or more easily, find Scripture words for mine? But this is trifling. Why have you not laid down your doctrine in Scripture words, that I might compare it with the Doctor's propositions, to see how far they exceed or come short? I may here dismiss the Modest Pleader, who is set in the front, and is not answering my Defence, but my Queries: which you had done before, and, I think, more to the purpose; I am sure more ingenuously and frankly, and more like a lover of truth. I have reason to complain of your not digesting your book better, and not throwing your disjointed materials into a more neat and regular order, after you had so long time for the compiling. For when sometimes I thought a point had been discussed, and we were to have no more of it, in that Query at least; as I go on some pages forwards, there, I observe, I am to discuss the same things again; which gives me some trouble, and must create confusion in the reader.

The Modest Pleader, I perceive, draws off in p. 436, and now I am to engage a new man, whom I will suppose to be the man I am writing to. You need say no more about the charge of three Gods, or two Gods. I understand you very fully, that the Father is one God, as being necessarily existing; the Son another God infinitely inferior, of the Father's appointing. Strain no more for apologies: the thing is out, though long a bringing forth; and now our dispute will run clear. Here is very little of moment occurring but what has been answered. You have a few quibbles in p. 438, which are all abundantly answered in my Defence^r. You object Bishop Pearson to me against my saying, that the word God is sometimes taken personally and sometimes essentially. And what says Bishop Pearson? I have a great respect for his memory. He says, the word God in the Apostles' Creed is not taken essentially: so say I too. Nor is it taken essentially, but personally, in the Nicene Creed. Therefore what? therefore it is never taken otherwise: that is your consequence, when you can make any consequence of it. It is the old Valentinian distinction, you observe. I am glad it is so old however: those heretics sometimes borrowed good things from the Church: though they happened to spoil them in the use. But, if you look again into Tertullian, you will find that Valentinian distinction to be nothing akin to ours, except it be in the name.

^r Vol. i. p. 477, 478.

In page 439, you are finding I know not what perplexities in a very easy thing; which I have accounted for twice already in print^s. Intelligent agent, being only two adjectives, is to be understood according to the subject to which the attributes are applied. Put the words to substance, and then we have intelligent agent substance, whether in person or persons. If the substance be thus or thus circumstantiated, (as explained above,) intelligent agent substance may be a single person; if otherwise, it may be more persons: so that intelligent agent is different in sense and meaning, according as it may be differently applied. What you repeat about a principle of individuation, and your further speculations thereupon, have been sufficiently obviated; or have nothing contradictory to any thing I assert. I allow that three stands for three, and three substances for three substances, and three Gods for three Gods. What is all this to me? I do not assert that three stands for more or less than three; nor that three substances, but that three Persons (who are not three substances) are one substance; nor that three Gods, but three Persons (who are not three Gods) are one God. What you say of Sabellius (p. 442) has been answered above. And what you say of the Church's holding "one and the same individual identical whole substance," affects not me, who never express my notion in such uncouth terms. The same undivided substance is what I hold and maintain in opposition both to substances and to the Sabellian notion of one Hypostasis, nominally, and not really distinguished.

Origen's account of the Sabellian notion is very distinct and accurate, as I before observed, viz. that the Father and Son were one, not in essence only, (or substance,) but in subject, (or suppositum,) being called Father and Son under different considerations, not really or personally distinguished^t. This is a just account of Origen's sense in that passage. And it is observable, that the Noëtians of that time would not have been blamed for τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀλλ' ἐν οὐ μόνον οὐσίᾳ ἀλλὰ καὶ ὑποκειμένῳ τυγχάνοντες ἀμοφτέρους, κατὰ τινὰς ἐπινοίας, οὐ κατ' ὑπόστασιν, λέγεσθαι πατέρα καὶ υἱόν. Orig. Com. in Joh. p. 186.

^s Preface to Sermons, at the beginning of this volume. Supplement to the Case of Arian Subscription, p. 332 of this volume.

^t Μη διαφέρειν τῷ ἀριθμῷ τὸν υἱὸν

supposing the Father and Son to be ἐν οὐσίᾳ, one in essence, (or what we call one in substance,) had they not carried the union so high as to make one suppositum, or what we now call one Person, of both, without any real distinction. Your account of it is very little different from mine; only you are fond of the phrase, single existent substance, which serves you to play with, and you know not what you mean by it. Do but define what a single existent substance is, and I will soon tell you whether the name belongs to every single person, or to all together.

Undivided substance, in three Persons, you say, makes three substances. How do you prove it? I have often told you that Dr. Clarke and you will not admit this kind of reasoning in another case, for fear of dividing the divine substance into numberless substances. If you can admit substance and substance, nay, this substance and that substance, where there are no substances; why do you deal thus unequally with others? You must allow that union is enough to constitute sameness, without making either complex or compound substance: otherwise you make a complex or compound substance of God. Since therefore the same or equal difficulties bear upon both, be so fair and so candid as to condemn or to acquit both. As to the sense of Hypostasis, I have delivered my mind above.

You bring in a long detail of the sense of οὐσία and ὑπόστασις, in which I am very little concerned; having never pretended that Hypostasis, or Person, does not imply substance, or signify substance. Only, in divinis, a person is not separate substance, nor, consequently, more persons more substances: so that what you have to say in the following pages is mostly wide and foreign. I may just throw a few strictures upon your account, as I pass along. Ἦπόστασις, you say, signifies singular identical substance. Now, because you often speak of singular identical substance, as if you really understood what you are talking about; let us stop a while, and examine what you mean by it. I conceive, you mean just as much substance as you take into your thoughts at once, considering it as one. You have brought the divine substance under extension; and so give me leave to question you a little upon that head, in a style proper to your notion. You can conceive, in your thoughts, as much of that substance as is commensurate, suppose, to the sun: pray tell me, if this be not a singular identical substance, in your own way of reasoning. Consider only half of that; and then there is another singular identical substance. Divide into quarters; and then you have four singular identical substances. And as every thing extended is (as our mathematicians tell us) infinitely divisible; there will be as many singular identical substances as you are pleased to conceive divisible parts. Do I misrepresent you? Or are none of those parts singular identical substances, but all one singular identical substance? What is the reason of it? Is it not that union makes sameness, all real sameness? You must say so: otherwise, upon your principles, I will demonstrate that there is not a singular identical substance in the world; the least imaginable same being still further divisible, in conception, infinitely. What use you will now make of singular identical substances, I know not: but this I know, that you can never oblige me to admit two undivided inseparable persons to be two singular identical substances, till you divide the divine substance (as you conceive it) into as many singular identical substances as there are conceivable parts. Having given this hint of the fruitlessness of the pains you are taking about Hypostasis, I may now ask, is this the doctrine Christ came to teach, that three divine Persons must be three singular identical substances? But to proceed. I forgot to ask you, whether any two parts of the divine substance, in your way of thinking, are ὁμοούσια, or ταυτοούσια, or μονοούσια? I know they must be una substantia, though either of them is singular identical substance, distinct by itself, and this is not that. I believe you would be more puzzled about the use of terms, in that case, than ever were the Fathers in respect of the Trinity.

What I intend by all I have here said is, to make you at length sensible of two things, about which you have been hitherto very slow and unperceiving.

1. That a man may have a very clear and full notion of an union and a distinction, and yet be very much puzzled about the names whereby they should be called.

2. That the metaphysical objections wherewith you have been endeavouring to clog the Catholic doctrine of the Trinity, (about specific, numerical, individual, identical, and the like, are not so much owing to any difficulty there is in the conception of the doctrine, (which was a plain thing long before ever those words came in, and still is so,) but to the difficulty of fixing, defining, settling, in all cases, what those several words, names, or phrases, shall import. But I proceed.

Instead of amusing your reader with a long detail of the use of οὐσία and ὑπόστασις, such as the learned will despise, and the unlearned will not edify by ; it were better to have endeavoured to give him a distinct idea of what the ancients meant by one Hypostasis, or three Hypostases. That I may say something which may be useful to common readers, the case lies thus : The faith of the Church all along was in Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God, into which they were baptized. The Father was not the Son, nor the Son the Father, nor the Holy Ghost either of the other. This was the common faith of the Church before either person or substance was talked of.

In Justin Martyr's time, we find that nothing was to be worshipped but God ; that these three, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, were all worshipped, yet not as three Gods ; that they were believed to be really distinct, and not nominally only : but the distinction was not expressed by persons, nor the union by substance ; nor does it appear that the word Trinity was yet applied to this case.

In Athenagoras, we find plain mention made of the union and distinction of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost ; but still nothing of persons and substance.

Theophilus, of the same age, about the year 180, is the first writer extant that expressly gives them the name of Trinity. But still persons and substance were not mentioned.

But upon the disputes raised by Praxeas, Noëtus, and Sabellius^u, (one after another,) it by degrees grew into common use to express the distinction by persons, and the unity by one substance. I know not whether Clemens of Alexandria may be reckoned the first writer extant that expressly has the name of one substance (μοναδικὴ οὐσία) applied in this case. It is certain Tertullian has it, and persons too. And this became the usual way of expressing what had been all along believed and professed, though under other terms. The Sabellians (by which I mean all of Sabellian principles) charged the Catholics with ^u Facundus Hermianensis is a little mistaken, when he confines it to the times of Sabellius : but if we understand him of Sabellius, and his predecessors, Noëtus and Praxeas, his observation is just. His words are :

Nam sic Ecclesia Christi, etiam cum necdum ad distinctionem Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, uteretur nomine Personæ. Tres credit, et prædicavit, Patrem, et Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum,—Personarum autem nomen non nisi cum Sabellius impugnaret Ecclesiam, necessario in usum prædicationis assumptum est ; ut qui semper tres crediti sunt, et vocati, Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus, uno quoque simul et communi Personarum nomine vocarentur. Deinde etiam et subsistentiæ dictæ sunt, quoniam Ecclesiæ placuit, ad significandam Trinitatem, et hoc nomen distinctioni personali tribuere. Facun. Herm. lib. i. p. 8.

See what I have said above, p. 541.

three Gods, and thereby first gave occasion to the Church to make use of the word Person: for their answer was, that they did not profess two Gods, or three Gods, but one God and two Persons, or three Persons^x.

There being in the Trinity a distinction and an union, there would naturally arise some difference about the use of several terms, to be either plurally or singularly predicated, according as the intent might be to speak of the Persons as distinguished into three, or as united in one God. The same names either plurally or singularly predicated sometimes served to express both the distinction and union. Gregory Nazianzen calls them Lights and Light, that is, three Lights, and yet but one Light; and so three Lives, and yet but one Life; three Goods, and yet but one Good; three Glories, and yet but one Glory; the mind conceiving the three as distinct, though in themselves united and inseparable^y. All the care to be take in these cases was, not to make the distinction too wide by the plural expressions, nor the unity too close by the singular: and the disputes that arose in this case were from men's different apprehensions about this or that phrase, or expression, as being liable to abuse one way or other. Three Spirits was a phrase generally thought to carry the distinction too far: and therefore one Spirit became the more common language; though even Jerome himself has been thought to have used the phrase of three Spirits^z.

But the greatest debate of all was about three Hypostases, begun at Antioch. The Arians had used the phrase to signify three substances, understanding them to be different in kind, (as gold, silver, brass,) and separate from each other. Again, the Sabellians had made use of one Hypostasis, to signify one substance in such a sense as left no real distinction, but nominal only. Here was therefore danger on either side; either of dividing the substance by making three Hypostases, or of confounding the Persons by making one. This difference was at length compromised, (A. D. 362,) in a synod at Alexandria, where Athanasius presided: either manner of expression was left indifferent, so long as they agreed in one common faith, meaning both the

^x See Hippolytus contr. Noët. and Tertull. adv. Prax.

^y Ζωὴς καὶ ζῶν, φῶτα καὶ φῶς, ἀγαθὰ καὶ ἀγαθόν, δόξας καὶ δόξαν— Θεὸν ἕκαστον ἂν θεωρεῖται μόνον, τοῦ τοῦ χωρίζοντος τὰ ἀχώριστα. Orat. xiii. p. 211.

^z Tres Spiritus nominatos breviter ostendam.— Principalem Spiritum Patrem appellat: quia Filius ex Patre, et non Pater ex Filio. Spiritum autem rectum, veritatis atque justitiæ, Christum Dominum significat.— Porro Spiritum Sanctum aperto nomine vocat. Hieron. in Galat. tom. iv. cap. 14. p. 168.

same thing under different terms. So that μὴ ὑπόστασις or τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις might be asserted, in like manner as φῶς or φῶτα, the same word plurally predicated to express the distinction, and also singularly to express the union; the plural being equivalent to three Persons, the singular to one God: for that was all the ancients intended, never to make the Persons one, nor the Godhead many.

The Latins^a could hardly bear the phrase of tres substantiæ: it seemed to carry more in it than the Greeks' three Hypostases. It was understood to mean either three substances, (that is, a division of substance;) or three different kinds of substance; neither of which could be borne: and therefore una substantia became the common language: but so that the real distinction between Father, Son, and Holy Ghost was kept up, to guard against Sabellianism. Indeed Hilary uses tres substantiæ^b: and so, no doubt, did some other Latins who were zealous Catholics: but then they intended no difference in the kind of substance, nor any division in the same kind: which secured the true Catholic notion; and the offence lay only in the expression. In short, the main thing they intended in all was, that the three Persons were really, and more than nominally distinct, and all but one God. And they admitted several ways of expressing the distinction, or union, in such modes of speech as were thought most proper to it. Provided both a real distinction, a real Trinity were kept up, and at the same time an unity of Godhead; the rest amounted only to a verbal dispute, or strife about words.

I may here remark, that Basil, Nazianzen, Austin, and others, blame the scantiness of the Latin tongue, as being the sole reason of the perplexity of the Latins, in relation to the phrase of tres

^a Et quisquam, rogo, are sacrilego tres substantias prædicabit? Hieron. Ep. ad Damas. tom. iv. p. 20.

Sub nomine Catholicæ fidei, impia verba defendunt; dicentes, tres esse substantias, cum semper Catholica fides unam substantiam Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti confessa sit. Faustin. Fid. Theodos. Missa.

Quia nostra loquendi consuetudo jam obtinuit, ut hoc intelligatur cum dicimus essentiam quod intelligitur cum dicimus substantiam; non audemus dicere unam essentiam, tres substantias, sed unam essentiam vel substantiam, tres autem Personas. August. Trin. lib. v. c. 9. p. 838.

Sunt tria quædam coeterna, consub-stantialia, coessentialia. Sed cum quæreretur a patribus, ut diceretur, Quid tria; nec essentias, nec substantias, nec naturas dicere ausi sunt; ne aliqua forte diversitas crederetur essentialium, aut naturalium, aut substantialium: sed dixerunt tres Personas, unam essentiam; ut una essentia declararet Deum unum, tres autem Personæ Sanctam Trinitatem ostenderent. Fulgent. de Trin. cap. iii. p. 330.

^b Idcirco tres substantias esse dixerunt, subsistentium Personas per substantias edocentes, non substantiam Patris et Filii diversitate dissimilis essentia separantes. Hilar. de Synod. p. 1170.

substantiæ. Yet we find, that for a long season the phrase of τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις was almost as much a bone of contention among the Greeks, as tres substantiæ among the Latins; and that it was with great difficulty that it at length prevailed, and became the common language^c; as it was also with some difficulty that the other way of speaking, viz. una substantia, obtained among the Latins. The true ground of all was this, that both Greeks and Latins wanted a phrase to express substance considered as united, but distinguished at the same time. Three substances (whether ὑποστάσεις or substantiæ) expressed, ordinarily, three divided substances; and the latter, three of different kinds: what therefore could they invent to express three things (tres res or tria) real and substantial, but undivided? Here lay the pinch of the difficulty. Substantia de substantia expressed it tolerably well; like as Lumen de lumine, and Deus de Deo: but still what were they to put to the word three, in the plural way of predication? Persons? But Sabellius had wrested and depraved the sense of the word person to an ambiguous or sinister meaning. Substances? But that was also liable to misconstruction, and to be perverted to another extreme. However, the Greek ὑποστάσεις, by degrees, obtained to signify the same as πρόσωπα ἐννύπαστατα. And so long as no division be understood, the phrase may serve very well: and so perhaps might the Latin substantiæ, had not custom carried it the other way. The Latins have since invented tres subsistentiæ, tria supposita, instead of tres substantiæ; though the very Schoolmen have not scrupled tres substantiæ, with the addition of incommunicabiles, or relative^d, to intimate that the Persons are not divided substances, but that they are united, and depending on each other, relative as to existence, so that one cannot be without the other, or separate from the other: under which cautions they can admit tres substantiæ, and yet una

^c Quamobrem gratis Basilius Romanis objiciebat, quod cum nominum Græcorum vim ignorarent, illarum duarum vocum significationem confunderent; quandoquidem alii e Græcis nativæ patriæque linguæ non ignari prorsus, earum discrimen non satis intelligebant. Le Quien Panopl. p. 28.

^d Est æquivocum substantiæ nomen, et sæpe significat essentiam—Potest etiam significare suppositum; et maxime si addatur prima substantia, quia suppositum maxime per se subsistit. Unde in hac significatione admitti possunt tres substantiæ in Deo, non vero in priori. Et propter hanc equivocationem vitandam, multi ex antiquis patribus negarunt hanc locutionem, ne viderentur cum Ario sentire, qui essentias in Trinitate multiplicabat—et ita D. Thomas dicit juxta consuetudinem Ecclesiæ non esse absolute dicendas tres substantias; addendo vero aliquid, quod determinet significationem, dici posse—ut tres substantiæ incommunicabiles, seu relative. Suarez. Metaph. Disq. xxxiv. sec. i. n. 6. p. 177.

substantia in all : like as tres res, though all together una summa res. The truth is, every Person is substance, (but not properly a substance;) substance in union with substance, and not divided : a thing easy to be understood, but not easy to be expressed. You would find the like difficulty in expressing the parts of the divine substance, in your hypothesis of extension. You cannot but admit that every part is substance, (substance it must be, or nothing,) and yet because of their inseparable union, and their making one substance in the whole ; you would not dare to call one part a substance, or several parts several substances. This I again intimate, that you may not be too severe upon others, merely about a mode of expression, (which is all the case,) when in a parallel instance the objection may be as strongly retorted upon yourselves. You admit substance and substance, where you think it not proper to say substances : and if you had not, yet you could never be able to shew that substance and substance, considered in union, must always make substances. Yet a great part of what you have been endeavouring under this Query, as well as what Dr. Whitby has urged in the Second Part of his Reply, is founded chiefly upon a precarious, nay false supposition, that, if every person be substance, three Persons must be three substances, and cannot be one substance. Now to return.

I must here take notice of a passage of Gregory Nazianzen, produced first by Mr. Whiston^e with great pomp, as making some notable discovery ; and now by you, I suppose, for the like purpose. What Mr. Whiston professedly (and you covertly) intends from that passage is, that Athanasius was the first inventor or teacher of the divinity, consubstantiality, coequality, and coeternity of the Holy Spirit. This would be a great discovery indeed, had Gregory Nazianzen really said it.

But before we come to the remarkable passage, it will be proper to inform the reader what Gregory had been saying before, and how this sentence, which I shall presently produce at length, came in. The oration is a panegyric upon Athanasius ; wherein he runs through the most remarkable incidents of his life : his sufferings and his services, his great prudence, fervent zeal, and undaunted courage in the cause of Christ. He observes how Athanasius^f, even in his younger years, before the Nicene Council, had very just and accurate notions of the doctrine of the Trinity ; keeping a mean between the extreme of Sabellius

^e Whiston's Reply to Lord Nottingham, Add. p. 92.

^f Greg. Naz. Orat. xxi. p. 380, 381.

(who had too much contracted the Godhead by confounding the distinction) and the other extreme of Arius, who had divided the Godhead into separate Deities. He describes afterwards the many difficulties Athanasius met with, raised by the hatred and enmity of the Arians: particularly in the year 356, in the reign of Constantius, when Gregory the Arian was put into the see of Alexandria, and Athanasius forced to flee for his life. Then were the churches put into the hands of the Arians: who, having the secular power on their side, spared no severities; but raged against the Catholics with all imaginable cruelties. Then it was, especially about the year 359, that the ancient and pious doctrine of the Trinity (as Nazianzen ε says) was dissolved and destroyed: and Arianism, unscriptural Arianism, brought in, in its room. Many, who were in their hearts true friends to the ancient doctrine, yet complied too far with the Arian confessions^h; which, Nazianzen says, he had often lamented with tears. And such was the violence of the persecution, that, excepting some few men that stood out, and others whose station was so low as to make them be overlooked, all yielded to the times; induced thereto either by fear or by interest, or else ignorantly circumvented by fraud. During these storms, and in the midst of so general an apostasy, Athanasius stood firm and unmoved; the main support of the true ancient faith. In 361, Constantius, who had been the strength of the Arians, dies: and a worse than he, Julian the apostate emperor, succeeds. Here was some peace to the Church, but it was yet miserably distracted with heresies, with variety of sects and parties, tearing one another. In 363, Julian being slain, Jovian succeeded: still things were in confusion as to the state of the Church. The Arians, in some places, were many and powerful, and had been endeavouring very early to stir up the emperor Jovian against Athanasius and all his adherents. At this critical time, in the midst of danger, that great and good man was not afraid to preach the truth boldly, and to propose it open and undisguised to the Emperor himself in writing: of which noble instance, both of his courage and constancy, Nazianzen thus speaks:

“ And here particularly appeared the integrity of the man “ (Athanasius) and the firmness of his faith in Christ. For “ when, of all the other Christians, divided into three parts, “ many were unsound in their faith concerning the Son, and “ more concerning the Holy Ghost, (where to be only less impious ε Greg. Naz. p. 386.

^h Ibid. p. 387.

“ was esteemed piety,) and but a few were sound in both articles ;
 “ he was the first and only man (or however with a very few)
 “ that had the courage to profess the truth, in writing, plainly
 “ and in express words, the one Godhead and essence of three.
 “ And what many of the Fathers before had been divinely moved “ to confess in relation to the Son, he was afterwards inspired
 “ to confess concerning the Holy Ghost ; bringing a gift truly “ royal and magnificent to the Majesty Royal, a written faith in “ opposition to unwritten noveltyⁱ.”

Now what is there in this passage of Nazianzen more than this : that at a time when many had abandoned the faith, and more had been sneakers and time-servers, Athanasius, with a few adherents, had the courage to speak out the truth boldly, without mincing it : and that this brave resolution of his was owing to the Spirit of God, moving and inciting him to make that glorious confession in the face of the world ? I have translated ἐχαρίσθη, according to what appears to me to be the true and full meaning of Nazianzen : who in this very oration speaks of the Nicene Council as called together by the Holy Ghost^k, that is, moved and incited by the Holy Spirit to the resolutions they made against Arius and his heresy. In like manner, he supposes Athanasius to have been stirred up, by the same Spirit, to make that noble confession of the divinity of the Holy Ghost, and in the like expressive words. All this well agrees with what Nazianzen had said but a few pages before, that, notwithstanding the violence of the persecution, there were some that had courage to resist, and stand firm ; whom God preserved, that there might be still remaining some seed and root for Israel to reflower, and take new life by the influzes of the Holy Spirit^l.

That this was all his meaning, may appear further, from his representing the doctrine of a coessential Trinity, every where, as ancient doctrine ; and his branding the contrary doctrine as novelty, in that very passage. Nor could a man of Nazianzen's good sense and piety be so ridiculous and silly as to build his own faith (which this was) upon any supposed private inspiration in the

ⁱ Τῶν μὲν γὰρ ἄλλων ἀπάντων, ὅσοι τοῦ καθ' ἡμᾶς λόγου, τριχῆ νεμεμημένων καὶ πολλῶν μὲν ὄντων τῶν περὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἀρρωστούντων, πλειόνων δὲ τῶν περὶ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, ἔνθα καὶ τὸ ἦπτον ἀρεβεῖν, Εὐσέβεια ἐνομίσθη ὀλίγου δὲ τῶν κατ' ἀμφοτέρα ὑγαιίνοντος' πρώτος καὶ μόνος, ἢ κομιδῆ σὺν ὀλίγοις, ἀποτολμᾷ τὴν ἀλήθειαν σαφῶς

οὕτως καὶ διαρρήθην, τῶν τριῶν μίαν θεότητα καὶ οὐσίαν ἐγγράφως ὁμολογήσας' καὶ ὁ τῷ πολλῷ τῶν πατέρων ἀριθμῷ περὶ τὸν υἱὸν ἐχαρίσθη πρότερον, τοῦτο περὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος αὐτὸς ἐμπνευσθεὶς ὑστερον, &c. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxi. p. 394.

^k Greg. Naz. Orat. xxi. p. 381.

^l Ibid. p. 387.

fourth century, or any century after the Apostles, or indeed upon any thing but the sacred writings. It is certain he looked upon the doctrine of the Godhead of the Holy Ghost, as one of those truths, into the knowledge whereof the Apostles were led immediately after Christ's ascension^m. All that was done after was the fixing it by terms that could not be eluded.

I must observe, that where Gregory Nazianzen speaks of the smallness of the number joining with Athanasius, and adhering to the Nicene faith; some allowance must be made for his oratorical manner of setting forth Athanasius's singular courage and constancy: or else he must be understood only of the Christians of Alexandria or Constantinople; who had been, for the generality, perverted by the Arians. For, as to other places, it is certain, that the Nicene faith was, at that very time, professed by almost all the churches, all the world over. For no sooner did the Catholics recover a little respite from persecution, about the year 362, but they condemned all that had been done by the Arians in the Council of Ariminumⁿ; and professed their steady attachment to the Nicene faith. Athanasius assures the emperor Jovian, in that very year 363, that the Nicene faith was universally received by all the Churches of Spain, England, and Gaul; by all Italy, Dalmatia, Dacia, Mysia, and Macedonia; by all Greece and Africa, by the islands of Sardinia, Cyprus, and Candia, by Pamphylia, Lycia, Isauria, Egypt, Libya, Pontus, Cappadocia, and the East; that is, by all the earth, excepting a small number of Arians. He declares, that he was assured of the faith of all those churches; and had their letters by him to produce^o, in testimony of it.

From hence I infer, that Nazianzen is to be understood only of some particular place at that time overrun with Arianism; most probably Constantinople, where Eusebius of Nicomedia, Macedonius, and Eudoxius, had successively held the see for above 20 years; and must of course have corrupted great numbers: and it is certain, that by the succession of Demophilus, (another ringleader of the Arians,) the Catholic interest in that city was in a manner oppressed and stifled, before Nazianzen came thither, about the year 378.

To return. I have nothing more to say to your long account

^m Τούτων ἐν εἶναι νομίζω, καὶ αὐτὴν τοῦ πνεύματος τῆν θεότητα, &c. Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxvii. p. 609.

ⁿ See Tillemont's History of the Arians, sect. 83. p. 279, &c.

^o Athanas. Epist. ad Jovian. p. 787.

of Hypostasis, which does not at all affect me: when you are once able to fix and settle the precise meaning of individual, identical substance, you may then know how to oppose me. That person is substance, I have always allowed; that substance and substance always makes substances, you cannot prove: or if you could, you know very well, that the consequence bears as hard upon the Doctor and you, as it can upon me; since it makes the divine Being, upon your own principles, a compound of innumerable substances: so that you cannot condemn my way of thinking and speaking, but with the shame of self-contradiction, and condemning your own selves.

I had told you in my Defence, vol. i. p. 479, that to say the one God is one Person only, and the Father that Person, is the essence of Sabellianism, and the doctrine of Paul of Samosata^p. This you call romantic history; which I am willing to excuse, charitably believing you really think so: though had any man well versed in antiquity told me as much, I must have had a hard opinion of his sincerity. You pretend, that the professed doctrine of those that opposed Paul of Samosata was, that the “one God was the Father, by way of eminence.” That is, the Father was eminently styled one God: not that the Father alone was the one God, exclusive of a real Son; as Sabellius and Paul of Samosata taught. I have shewn you above, that the Church’s doctrine was to make both one God: and this was done by the defenders of the Catholic faith, even against the Praxeans, Noëtians, and Sabellians. You add, that Paul of Samosata, and the Sabellians, taught that the “one God was not the Father only, but Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.” Here you are playing with terms (whether ignorantly or designedly, I know not) to deceive the reader, in a very plain case. Pray, what did the Sabellians mean, or Paul of Samosata, by making Father, Son, and Holy Ghost one God? Just the same as if you should style the Father Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier, and then say, that the Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier are one God. To the Person of the Father, the alone God, (according to them,) they were pleased to apply two names more, that of Son and Holy Ghost: and so the same one real Person, the Person of the στασιν, καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος—πρόσωπον ἐν τὸν Θεὸν ἅμα τῷ λόγῳ φασίν, ὡς ἄνθρωπον ἓνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν λόγον. Eriphan. de Paul. Samosat. Her. lxv. p. 609.

^p Καὶ γὰρ τῷ ὄντι καὶ αὐτοὶ οὐ δύο φαμέν εἶναι θεοὺς οὐδὲ θεότητες, ἀλλὰ μίαν θεότητα—ὅτι οὐ λέγει μόνον Θεὸν διὰ τὸ πηγῆν εἶναι τὸν πατέρα, ἀλλὰ μόνον Θεὸν ἀναρῶν, ὅσον τὸ κατ’ αὐτὸν, τὴν τοῦ υἱοῦ θεότητα καὶ ὑπό-

Father, was alone, with them, the one God⁹. I shewed you this by plain testimonies: and now, where is the difference between them and you; except that they made the Person of the Father the alone God, under three names; you make the same one Person the alone God, under the one name of the self-existent God^r? This I demonstrated very distinctly to you in my Defence; and you take not the least notice of it. The reader will suspect you had a reason for slipping over so material a point.

I retorted upon you your plea from 1 Cor. viii. 6. asking, how you can make two Gods, in contradiction to St. Paul, who says there is but one? You distinguish between a supreme God and an inferior God; which St. Paul does not: we distinguish upon the strict or large intent of the exclusive terms: and I told you, that our distinction was much older, and better warranted than yours. I therefore desired you no more to charge us with contradicting St. Paul; but either to condemn yourselves for doing it, or at least to acquit both. To this you reply, that to say “the Son is (an inferior) God, is no way contrary to this text.” But it is contrary to the whole tenor of Scripture, and to the fourth verse of that very chapter; which says absolutely, that “there is none other God but one.” St. Paul does not say, no supreme God only, but absolutely, none. In strictness therefore you contradict St. Paul, as directly as possible: and you have no other way of coming off, but by a novel distinction. Now, since it is easy for us to come off from the charge you make, by 9 Φάσκει δὲ (Παῦλος ὁ Σαμοσατεὺς) Θεὸν πατέρα, καὶ υἱὸν, καὶ ἄγιον πνεῦμα ἓνα Θεόν.—μη εἶναι δὲ τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐνπρόσβατον, ἀλλὰ ἐν αὐτῷ Θεῷ, ὡσπερ ἀμέλει καὶ ὁ Σαβέλλιος, &c. Epirh. Hær. lxxv. p. 698.

Παῦλος ὁ Σαμοσατεὺς Θεὸν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου ὁμολογεῖ, Θεὸν ἐκ Ναζαρέτ ὀφθέντα—τῷ μὲν προορισμῷ πρὸ αἰώνων ὄντα, τῇ δὲ ὑπάρξει ἐκ Ναζαρέτ ἀπαδειχθέντα ἵνα εἰς εἶη, φησὶν, ὁ ἐπὶ πάντα Θεός, ὁ πατήρ. Athanas. contr. Apollinar. p. 642.

Ἐν γὰρ Σαβέλλιος λέγει τριώνυμον, τοῦτον εὐνόμιος ὀνομάζει ἀγέννητον. Greg. Nyss. contra Eunom. p. 676. alias 248.

Utique hæreticorum istorum singularem in Deo personam asseruit; quod de Sabellio nemo prorsus ignorat: de Paulo Samosateno testantem Epiphanium audivimus. Petav. Dogm. vol. v. p. 6.

^r See my Defence, vol. i. p. 480,

&c. Gregory Nyssen's observation is worth the reciting: he says thus:

“To charge our doctrine with Sabellianism, or Montanism, is much the same as to impute to us the blasphemy of Eunomius. For if any one carefully examines into the common mistake of those heresies, he will find that it has a near affinity to that of Eunomius. Both Judaize in the same doctrine; as not admitting the only-begotten to be God, nor receiving the Holy Ghost into the communion of the Godhead of him whom they call the great and the first God. For, whom Sabellius calls the trinominal God, the same does Eunomius name self-existent: and neither of them looks upon the Godhead as common to a Trinity of Persons. Let the reader then judge who it is that comes nearest to Sabellius.” Greg. Nyss. Orat. ix. p. 676. alias 248.

the help of a distinction, and one much better warranted than yours; why are we blamed, and you freed? I have before shewn what we mean by saying that the Son is tacitly included, though the Father be eminently styled the one God: not that the word God, or the word Father, in such cases, includes Father and Son; but it is predicated of one only, at the same time that it is tacitly understood that it may be equally predicated of either or both; since no opposition is intended against either, but against creatures and false gods. You have here passed over fifteen pages of mine, which contained things of great moment: I may pass over two of yours, which contain nothing but words.

QUERY XXIV.

Whether Gal. iv. 8. may not be enough to determine the dispute betwixt us; since it obliged the Doctor to confess, that Christ is by nature truly God, as truly as man is by nature truly man.

He equivocates there, indeed, as usual. For he will have it to signify that Christ is God by nature, only as having, by that nature which he derives from the Father, true divine power and dominion: that is, he is truly God by nature, as having a nature distinct from, and inferior to, God's, wanting the most essential character of God, self-existence. What is this but trifling with words, and playing fast and loose?

THE Modest Pleader here stands in the front; and, after his solemn way, gives me rebukes, when he is at a loss for answers. He tells me of an express Scripture-distinction that I am ridiculing: as if ridiculing what is really ridiculous, and what is very profanely called express Scripture, (viz. the distinction of two adorable Gods, supreme and inferior,) were ridiculing Scripture. However, I was ridiculing nothing in this Query; but only laying before the reader two or three instances of Dr. Clarke's equivocating and trifling: which, it seems, is resented as a high affront, and is to be turned upon the Scripture itself. And the reader is to be gravely called to judge, whether it were a "zeal according to knowledge, &c." All this, because one fallible man, who has been charging whole churches and whole ages with contradiction and nonsense, has been charged with trifling and contradicting himself; and that in a case too, which is self-evident and undeniable.

The argument on which the charge rests is this:

"He that has not the nature of the true and only God, or is “ not naturally and necessarily God, is not by nature truly God, “ as truly as man is by nature truly man.

“ Our Lord (according to the Doctor) has not the nature of “ the true and only God, nor is he naturally and necessarily God : “ therefore he is not by nature truly God, as truly as man is “ by nature truly man.”

Let the reader now judge whether the Doctor, in saying that Christ is “ by nature truly God,” &c. has not either grossly contradicted himself, or meanly equivocated. It might have become this Modest Pleader either to have confessed the charge, or to have shewn how to get clear of it. All he can say is, that “ the Son has, by that nature which he derives from the Father, “ true dominion :” and so has every lawful magistrate true dominion, in as just a sense as is here understood of Christ, a dominion derived from God. Is this what according to use of language, and custom of speech, has been understood by the phrase God by nature ? And how has Christ, by nature, true dominion, when his nature is supposed to have existed before any dominion commenced, and is supposed also to continue after the dominion shall cease ? Not to mention that the dominion is also presumed to proceed from free grant, and to be given or taken away at pleasure. Is this to be as truly God by nature, as man is by nature truly man ? If this be not burlesquing Scripture, ridiculing every thing serious, and making a jest of all language, I know not what is. To divert the reader from dwelling upon the Doctor’s mismanagement, you charge me next with a “ heap “ of absurdities,” (p. 465,) as it is a very easy matter for a man, when his head is clouded, or his passions are up, to make blunders for others, and then comment upon them. Let us hear :

1. The first pretence is, that I contradict myself in making self-existence no essential character, and yet approving the putting it in a definition of the supreme Being, as an essential character. That is to say, because self-existence often has, and still may be, used in different senses, therefore the allowing in one sense what I disallow in another, is contradicting myself.

2. The second pretence is, that to call self-existent an ambiguous term, and an equivocal word, is ridiculous. To which it is sufficient to say, that to deny it is much more so.

3. The third pretence is, that to call self-existence a character merely negative, is absurd. That is according as it is understood : for to make it positive, in some cases, is infinitely absurd ; as hath been shewn above.

4. A fourth cavil is, that the distinction of essential and personal has no place here, because both the Person and the essence are self-existent. But this is begging the question. The essence belongs to three Persons ; self-existence, or underivedness, to one only : therefore though necessary existence be an essential character common to all, self-existence is not.

5. A fifth cavil is against my including supreme in the definition of the divine nature, abstracting from the consideration of person. “ As if,” say you, “supremacy was a character, not “ of a living agent, but of an abstract essence.” Ridiculous enough : as if the living substance, common to three persons, were not as truly living, and agent, as when considered in one^s. Let the reader now judge to whom the “ heap of absurdities” justly belongs. You have invented some imaginary ones for me, and betrayed real ones of your own ; having a happier talent at writing nonsense for others, than sense for yourself.

Your argument to prove that a person may be God on account of dominion before any dominion commenced, has been already answered. As to the sense of Gal. iv. 8. I referred to what has been said by a learned gentleman^t upon it. You, on the other hand, refer to Dr. Clarke’s pieces, and to Modest Plea, &c. The dispute is about the meaning of the phrase τοῖς μὴ φύσει οὐσι θεοῖς, or shorter, about φύσει Θεός, God by nature, what it should signify ; whether substantially and essentially God, or really God, as having true dominion. The reasons for the former interpretation are such as follow :

1. The common use of the term φύσις, for essence, or substance.

2. The use of φύσει Θεός in that sense among Greek writers^u: as particularly by Irenæus and Athanasius ; and by Gregory Nyssen in relation to this very text.

3. Worship is required to be given to God principally on ac-

^s See my Sermons, p. 140 of this volume.

^t The Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, &c. p. 19, &c. True Scripture Doctrine Continued, p. 73, &c. Edwards’s Critical Remarks, p. 18.

^u Naturaliter Deus, in opposition to one that only bears dominion, who is God verbo tenus. Irenæus allows the distinction, but rejects the application. Iren. lib. iv. cap. 1.

Θεὸν ὄντα κατὰ τὴν φύσιν, ὅπερ ὁ πατήρ. Athan. vol. ii. p. 43.

Φύσει Θεός. Athan. in Psal. p. 83. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eun. p. 9. See above, p. 570. Eustathius, Fabric. vol. viii. p. 174, 185. Vid. Cleric. de Art. Crit. p. 103.

count of his being $\delta \delta \nu$, or Jehovah; that is, on account of his being essentially, or substantially God. Nor is it of any moment what the Modest Plea urges, that then Father and Son will be two Jehovahs, if each of them is to be worshipped as being $\delta \delta \nu$, or Jehovah: for that is supposing the name Jehovah to be proper to one Person only, and not common to more; which is begging the question.

4. Scripture is used to argue against the gods of the heathen, as being no Gods; not as wanting divine dominion only, but as having no divine nature or substance.

5. The true notion of idolatry is paying religious honour to any thing that has not the divine perfections; that is, divine substance, the only ground of divine perfections. To which may be added,

6. That St. Paul (Rom. i. 20.) condemns the worship of the creature, confines all worship to the Creator: which is explicatory of Gal. iv. 8. Now the Creator is God essentially, the creature not essentially God: wherefore, as all things are really excluded by St. Paul from worship that are not essentially divine; that must be the meaning of Gal. iv. 8. These are the reasons on our side. Dr. Clarke, on the other hand, pleads,

1. The different use of the word $\phi \nu \sigma \iota \varsigma$ in Scripture, to signify state, condition, capacity, &c. and even customs only. But if the places be well considered where the expression $\phi \nu \sigma \epsilon \iota$, by nature, occurs; we shall find that it is put in opposition to something accessional, superinduced, accidental, or the like: from whence one may plainly perceive that it relates to something inherent, innate, permanent, fixed and implanted in any thing from the first. The uncircumcision by nature (Rom. ii. 27.) is opposed to circumcision superinduced by law. The wildness by nature (Rom. xi. 24.) is opposed to what is superinduced by grace. The Jews are said to be such by nature, as being such from their birth, in opposition to being made or adopted. The Gentiles do by nature the things contained in the law, (Rom. ii. 14.) in opposition to the doing the same by a superinduced law. We are by nature children of wrath, born such in opposition to the superinduced new-birth by grace: that is, by our depraved nature, our conditio nascendi, since the fall, we are under the sentence of the divine displeasure^x. Even in that famous place, (1 Cor. xi. 14.)

^x Naturam aliter dicimus cum proprie loquimur naturam hominis, in qua primum in suo genere inculpabilis factus est: aliter istam in qua, ex illius damnati poena, et mortales et ignari, et carni subditi nascimur. August. de Lib. Arbitr. lib. iii. cap. 19.

“Doth not even nature itself teach you, &c.” the word nature does not signify custom, but the masculine nature, in opposition to the feminine. Subjection is natural to the woman, in token whereof she is to wear her veil; and her hair, as another kind of veil: while the man, in token of his being naturally superior to the woman, goes with his head uncovered, and with short hair. Nature, in the formation of the two sexes, has made the distinction of superiority and inferiority; and they are born to this or that, by the condition of their sex. This appears to be the most obvious and easy sense of that text. Such being the usual sense of nature, or of the phrase by nature; we may infer thus much from Gal. iv. 8. That nothing is to be worshipped that has not a divine nature. Whatever is God by nature, as Christ is now supposed to be, must have that which makes God to be God, (in like manner as man by nature must have that which makes man to be man; or a Jew by nature must have that which makes a Jew to be a Jew, and the like;) and what can that be, but his having the divine perfections, and consequently, the divine substance, coeval with the Father; that is, from all eternity?

I may add, that whatever passages may be brought of the use of φύσει, yet they come not fully up to the case; unless φύσει Θεός could be shewn to bear such a sense as you would put upon it. Many examples may be brought of ours: few, or perhaps none, of yours. The Modest Pleader, (p. 247.) thinks that the passage cited out of Eusebius^γ, where Æmilian the Roman præfect makes mention of the Pagan deities, as being gods by nature, is directly contrary to our notion; because the Romans did not look upon their gods to be self-existent and supreme. This observation is to the purpose, and is not without its weight. But as the Pagans had several schemes of theology, and several hypotheses in respect of their gods, and it cannot be certainly known what hypothesis Æmilian went upon; we cannot be certain in what sense he used the phrase. And though the Pagans did not believe more than one supreme God, yet their inferior gods were generally supposed ἀγένητοι, eternal, and necessarily existing; which answers to θεοὶ κατὰ φύσιν, gods by nature^z. Besides that, as many Pagans as supposed the inferior ^γ Τίς γὰρ ὑμᾶς κωλύει καὶ τοῦτον, εἴπερ ἐστὶ Θεός, μετὰ τῶν κατὰ φύσιν θεῶν προσκυνεῖν; Euseb. lib. vii. cap. 11. p. 335.

^z The primary and archical beings, according to Proclus, were the Pagan deities.

^α Ἀπαντες οὖν ὄσοι πάποτε θεολογίας gods to be nothing but the polyonymy of their one supreme God, must have thought them all to be θεοὶ κατὰ φύσιν, gods by nature.

I may add, that it seems highly probable that Æmilian designed what he said, in answer to what Dionysius or other Christians had pleaded; viz. that they worshipped one that was God by nature, in opposition to the Pagan deities, which were none of them such. I say, in answer hereto, he pleads that their deities were gods by nature also: and why then might not Christians worship both the Pagan gods and their own? The heathens had before this time learned to refine their theology, and to pretend as much in honour of the Pagan divinity, as the Christians pleaded for theirs: and the dispute now was, which of them could most clearly make good their plea^a.

But I proceed to a second argument for your sense of the text.

2. The Modest Pleader argues, that if St. Paul had gone upon our scheme, he would not have said τοῖς μὴ φύσει οὐσι θεοῖς, but τοῖς μὴ φύσει οὐσι θεῶ; not them which by nature are not gods, but them which by nature are not God: because to say, they are not gods, as not being of the same divine substance, seems to intimate that they would be gods if they were of the same substance, and not one God as upon our principles. But St. Paul's expression is very right. The fault of the Pagans was not in worshipping gods; had there really been many gods, many gods by nature: their fault was in worshipping gods that were not really and essentially such. Nor would it be any fault in Christians to worship many gods, were there really many gods by nature: but the fault is in worshipping any that are not gods by nature, or more gods than there really are; which fault is committed by worshipping more gods than one, because there is but one God by nature. Whether more persons than one would be more gods, or otherwise, by partaking of the same substance; is neither affirmed nor denied in the place of St. Paul: only the Pagans are condemned for worshipping those as gods, which had εἶν ἡμένοι, τὰ πρῶτα κατὰ φύσιν θεοὺς ἐπονομάζοντες περὶ ταῦτα τὴν θεολογικὴν ἐπιστήμην πραγματεύεσθαι φασί. Procl. Plat. Theol. lib. i. cap. 3. p. 5. Vid. Plotin. Ennead. 2. lib. ix. cap. 1.

Αἱ τῶν θεῶν οὐσίαι οὐδὲ ἐγένοντο. Τὰ γὰρ αἰὶ ὄντα οὐδέποτε γίνονται. Sallust. de Mund. cap. ii. p. 244.

^a Cum de re loquimur divina vobiscum, hoc ut ostendatis exposcimus, esse Deos alios natura, vi, nomine: non in simulachris propositos quos videmus, sed in ea substantia in qua conveniat aestimari tanti esse nominis oportere virtutem. Arnob. contr. Gent. lib. iii. p. 101.

not the nature of gods, or what was necessary to make them really gods.

3. It is further pleaded by Dr. Clarke, that the true notion of idolatry is the ascribing to any being such worship and honour as does not belong to it.

To this pretence see a sufficient answer in True Scripture Doctrine Continued^b, of which the Modest Plea has taken no notice.

To conclude this article; you have not been able to acquit the Doctor of the charge of equivocating, or contradicting himself; nor to take off the force of our argument built upon Gal. iv. 8. for the essential divinity of God the Son: who, because he is adorable, is therefore God by nature in virtue of that text. Your trifling about the definition I gave from Melancthon, as if it could not be scriptural because it is taken from Melancthon, who took it from Scripture, is beneath my notice.

QUERY XXV.

Whether it be not clear from all the genuine remains of antiquity, that the Catholic Church before the Council of Nice, and even from the beginning, did believe the eternity and consubstantiality of the Son; if either the oldest creeds, as interpreted by those that recite them; or the testimonies of the earliest writers, or the public censures passed upon the heretics, or particular passages of the ancient Fathers, can amount to a proof of a thing of this nature?

I AM here to dispute first with the Modest Pleader, who may be known by his positive style, and magisterial air, to make good the title of his treatise. I am rebuked for my presumption, in this Query: and why? Because I have presumed to tell the world what has been proved an hundred times over: and yet not positively affirming it, but putting it by way of Query, to be fairly debated. This solemn gentleman, I suppose, will call it presumption, in a while, for any man to undertake to defend the faith of all the Christian churches. To such a height may men be carried by a strong conceit of their own novel hypothesis.

I had modestly appealed to the oldest creeds, not directly, but as interpreted by those that recite them. And where was the presumption of doing it? His cavil, upon this occasion, I answered in a note to my eighth Sermon^c. I appealed also to censures passed upon heretics. In reply to this, I am told,

^b True Script. Doctr. p. 76, 78, &c.

^c P. 193 of this volume.

1. That the most remarkable censures were passed upon the Ebionites; who taught that Christ was a mere man, in whom the supreme God dwelt. But if their great guilt, and the heinousness of it, lay in the consequence of their principles, in their denying Christ's divinity; then it will appear that the modern impugners of Christ's divinity are nearly concerned in the censures passed upon the Ebionites. For indeed the great danger and impiety of their heresy was not merely in making a creature some years, or ages, younger than he really was; but in denying their God, in refusing to acknowledge him as really and truly God. Irenæus^d, the oldest Father that mentions the Ebionites, represents the case thus: "The Ebionites God will judge: "How can they be saved, if he was not God who upon earth wrought salvation? Or how shall man come to God, if God (ὁ Θεός) had not come to man?" In another place, he says, "Vain are the Ebionites, not admitting the union of God and man, by faith, into their souls." He proceeds to observe, that the Holy Spirit (by which he understands the Logos, as do many other Fathers^e) came upon the Virgin: and a little lower, blames the Ebionites again, as "not receiving God" along with the man. Now it is well known in how strict a sense Irenæus understood the word God, and that he applied it in the same strict sense to God the Son; as I have proved above. As many therefore as deny the Son to be God in that sense, were condemned in the Ebionites long ago; as is plainly proved from this Father. To the same purpose speak other writers^f of the Ebionites (and of

^d Ἀνακρινεῖ δὲ καὶ τοὺς Ἠβιωνοὺς πῶς δύνανται σωθῆναι εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ τὴν σωτηρίαν αὐτῶν ἐπὶ γῆς ἐργασάμενος; ἢ πῶς ἄνθρωπος χωρήσει εἰς Θεόν, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἐχωρήθη εἰς ἄνθρωπον; Iren. lib. iv. cap. 30. p. 271.

Vani autem et Ebionæi, unionem Dei et hominis, per fidem, non recipientes. Iren. lib. v. cap. i. p. 293.

Non recipientes Deum ad commixtionem suam.

^e Irenæus, p. 216. Just. Mart. Apol. i. cap. 43. p. 69. Clem. Alex. p. 654. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 26, 27. Novat. cap. 19.

^f Καὶ γὰρ κακείνοι ἦτοι ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον ὁμολογοῦσι πεφυκέαι τὸν Χριστὸν εἰς τὸν βίον, θεότητος αὐτοῦ τὸ τάλεινον ἀρνούμενοι. Hippol. Fragm. vol. i. p. 281.

Accedit his Theodotus, hæreticus Byzantius, qui—doctrinam intro-duxit quæ Christum hominem tantummodo diceret, Deum autem illum negaret. Auctor. Append. ad Tertull. de Præscript. cap. 68.

Ἀρρησιβίου ἀποστασίας. Euseb. lib. v. cap. 28.

Paul of Samosata, his crime was denying his God.

Τοῦ καὶ τὸν Θεὸν τὸν ἑαυτοῦ καὶ κύριον ἀρνούμενου. Epist. Syn. Antioch. apud Euseb. lib. vii. cap. 30.

Hebion discipulus Cerinthi, in multis ei similiter errans, Salvatorem nostrum hominem de Joseph natum, carnaliter æstimabat, nihilque in eo divinitatis fuisse docebat; sed sicut omnes prophetæ, sic et eum gratiam Dei habuisse adserbat, non tamen Dominum Majestatis, et Dei Patris Filium cum Patre sempiternum credebat. Philastr. Hær. cap. 37.

such others as the Ebionites) both before and after the Nicene Council. The great impiety of such men was in their being ἀρησιθεοί, deniers of Christ's divinity, blasphemers against his Godhead. How you can yet clear yourselves of the same charge, I see not. It was not without reason that Alexander, Bishop of Alexandria, charged the Arians, upon their first appearance, with reviving the impiety of Ebion, Artemas, and Paul of Samosata. Theod. E. H. lib. i. cap. 4.

2. The Modest Pleader goes on to tell us that Cerinthus was censured; who taught that the Son of God was not himself made man, but only united to a man. He thinks he has here said something smart: but, because every body will not understand the innuendo, and he durst not speak plainer for fear of discovering his whole heart, we may pass it over. He takes no notice of Cerinthus's being condemned, as well as Ebion, for denying our Lord's divinitys, and the eternity of the Word. He proceeds to observe, that the Valentinians and Cataphrygians were censured; from whom arose the doctrine of necessary emanations: to which weak piece of calumny I have answered above. He takes no notice of the Valentinians denying the eternity of the Logos, nor of their making creature-creators, nor of several of their other principles, whereby they led the way to Arianism, as Athanasius hath shewn^h.

3. Sabellius, it seems, was censured for teaching individual consubstantiality: that is, for nonsense. For consubstantiality and individual (in the Sabellian sense of individual) are repugnant, and contradictory as possible. Nor did Sabellius ever teach consubstantiality at allⁱ. Whether the Modest Pleader has here shewn a zeal according to knowledge, let any man judge that knows antiquity. He takes no notice of Sabellius's being condemned for confining the Godhead to one real Person, (instead of extending it to three,) upon the very same principles on which Arius afterwards founded a different heresy^k; viz. the apprehension of there being no medium^l between making the Son to ⁱ Ὅσπερ γὰρ μισεῖ ὁ ὀφίς τὴν ὄσμην τῆς ἀσφάλτου—οὕτως καὶ Ἀρειοῦ καὶ Σαβελλίου μισεῖ τὸν Λόγον τῆς ἐν ἀληθείᾳ ὁμολογίας τοῦ ὁμοουσίου. Epirh. Hær. l. ix. n. 70. p. 797.

^g See Bishop Bull, D. F. p. 178. Jud. Eccl. cap. 2.

^h See Montfaucon's preface to the first volume of Athanasius, p. 24.

^k See my Defence, vol. i. p. 469, 481.

^l Σαβέλλιος δὲ τοῦ Ζαμοσατέως Παύλου, καὶ τῶν κατ' αὐτὸν ἐπιδέδικται τὴν γνώμην· δεδοικὼς γὰρ τὴν ἐξ Ἀρειοῦ διαίρεσιν, τῇ ἀναιρετικῇ καταπέπτωκε πλάνῃ. Athanas. contr. Apoll. lib. ii. p. 942.

^m Ἀρειοῦ μὲν πρὸς τὴν Σαβελλίου τοῦ λίβου δόξαν ἀπαντήσαι μὴ δυνθεῖς, τῆς ὀρθῆς ἐξέπεσε πίστewe, πρόσφατον Θεὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ δογματίσας. Socr. E. H. lib. iv. cap. 33. p. 256.

be the self-existent Father himself, and excluding him from the one Godhead.

After a lame, partial, and false account of the ancient heresies condemned by the Church, the Modest Pleader goes on to give as partial and false accounts of the doctrine of the Fathers. But having obviated all his frivolous pretences on that head before, I may now dismiss him, and return to you.

You are pleased to say, that my "Defence of this Query is "nothing but a confused heap of words relating to metaphysical "subtilties," &c. The reader, I suppose, understands by this time what these and the like complaints from you mean. I no sooner find you expatiating this way, but I conclude you had met with something you could not answer; it being your constant method thus to proclaim your defeat.

You durst not enter upon the main question debated under this Query. It was whether the Ante-Nicene writers, in general, taught a proper consubstantiality. You were before of opinion that it was a figurative or oratorical consubstantiality. I suffered not the reader to go away with any such weak pretence, instead of a just answer. I laid before you several reasons to the contrary, such as, I thought, might be depended on: and I perceive now, by your manner of replying, (which is no replying,) that you think so too. I shall repeat the reasons once more: and where you have scattered any loose hints that any way relate to them, I shall consider them in their proper places:

1. I thought it strange and unaccountable that so many Fathers should rheticate in a matter of faith, and of the greatest importance: and that none should be met with wise enough or good enough to throw off the varnish, and to tell us the naked truth.

2. I thought it still stranger that they should do it, not in popular harangues, but even in dry debates; where it particularly concerned them to speak accurately and properly, out of figure and flourish.

Hitherto you are pleased to be silent; not a syllable of reply. Let me go on.

3. I observed, that one principal and standing objection of heretics against the Catholic doctrine was, that it inferred a division of the Father's substance. I thought there must have been at least some colour for the objection; as indeed there was, if the Catholics professed a proper consubstantiality: otherwise there was none at all^m. For who could be silly enough to imagine that angels or archangels, or any creature whatever, might not be created without a division or abscission of the divine substance?

You endeavour at something (p. 472.) by way of reply; telling me that the ancients, “by denying all division, abscission, or “diminution, did not mean to affirm that the Son was the “individual identical substance of the Father.” I would be glad to know what this phrase, individual identical, &c. means with you. I think it plain, that the objectors, in inferring a division of substance, thought of the same substance; and the Catholics by denying division, asserted the same undivided substance. Whether this amounts to your individual identical, &c. is no great matter; since you do not care to say, or rather do not yet know, what you mean by it. You pretend that the ancients intended only, to “assert the absolute immutability of “the Father;” and that “he generated the Son, as one fire “lights another, without any diminution of himself.” But what pretence or colour could there be for the Father’s diminishing himself, unless a proper consubstantiality was intended? And if one fire be consubstantial to another, as I think the Fathers believed; the very instance proves the thing I am speaking of. I have however explained above what they meant by diminution, and what by denying it in this case.

4. A fourth argument I drew from another noted objection made to the Catholic doctrine, viz. Tritheism: and I observed both from the sense of the objectors, and from the method taken in the answers, what kind of Tritheism was intended; such as was founded on the supposition of a proper consubstantiality. This argument you have taken no notice of, but have left it in the heap, undisturbed.

5. I added a fifth reason from the particular state of the Sabellian controversy, and the arguments made use of in it; quite different from what would have been, and must have been, had the Fathers been of the same or like principles with you and Dr. Clarke. To which you say nothing.

6. In the sixth place, I threw in a heap of reasons; reasons, I think, and not words only: to one of which, relating to worship, you vouchsafe me a brief answer, but such as I have answered in another place. Upon the whole, you appear to have been much distressed in this Query : for otherwise, who would believe that a man of your abilities, after so long considering, would leave any thing unanswered ?

^m See my Defence, vol. i. p. 498.

Aye, but after all, you say, Dr. Clarke's propositions will remain true and untouched, which way soever any of these points be determined, (p. 471.) Indeed, they are wonderful propositions : they seem to be much of the Stoic make and constitution ; that if they be ever so distressed or crushed, or even ground to pieces, yet they cannot be hurt. To be serious ; if the Doctor's propositions have really nothing contrary to the Son's eternity, or consubstantiality, or necessary existence, (which comes to the same ;) if they leave to God the Son that honour and that worship which those divine perfections demand ; if they do not make him precarious in existence, or dependent on the good pleasure of another ; in short, if they leave to the Son the one true Godhead, or divine substance, then let the propositions pass as very harmless, innocent, trifling propositions, containing nothing but old truths under a novel and conceited way of expression. But if the propositions really run counter to the necessary existence, the immutable perfections, the divine worship, &c. of God the Son, (as I conceive they do,) then the propositions appear to be very nearly concerned in what I have been proving.

But you say, the true and only material question is, " Who is " the alone first Cause, the alone supreme Governor?" &c. Now as to this matter, I will be very frank and plain with you. Do but sincerely and plainly acknowledge that God the Son is coeternal and consubstantial with the Father, of the same divine substance, necessarily existing, having the divine perfections, Creator by his own power, worthy of equal honour, and of the same kind of worship : do but admit these things, and you shall have the liberty of talking as you please about the alone first Cause, and the alone supreme Governor ; that is, first in order and office. But if you deny the Son's necessary existence, if you deny his divine perfections strictly so called, if you scruple to admit him as Creator by his own power, (which many Arians allowed,) and to worship him as Creator ; nay, to call him Creator, which the very Euhomians never scrupled : if you betray your dissent from us in so many and so material points as these are, do not then pretend that the supremacy is the main point of difference, or the only material question : because it is pretending something directly false, and what you know to be false ; and therefore what ought not to be pretended by any honest or good man. It is possible you may understand supreme Governor in such a sense, that all the other questions may be reduced to that one: and so may they also to this one question; whether God the Son be a creature or no. If this be your meaning, then there is no difference betwixt your state of the question and mine, except this; that what you have put into ambiguous, equivocal, deceitful words, to confound the readers, I have put into plain, clear, and distinct terms, to instruct and inform them. And now the main question will not be about the supremacy, whether it be asserted or denied; but about the sense and meaning of supremacy: whether supremacy is to be asserted in such a sense as to make the Son a creature, or in such a sense only as is consistent with his being essentially God, and one God with the Father. For you may please to take notice that many other questions must come in, in order to give light into the question about supremacy: or if you pretend to take the supremacy in a sense peculiar to yourself, and then to argue from it; this is only begging the main question, and pursuing your own inventions, in opposition both to Scripture and antiquity.

You have an odd remark in the close: you say, “to preserve the priority of the Father, and withal the divinity, the essential divinity, of the Son, is no difficulty.” This is news from you: I hope you are sincere, and have no double meaning. For if these two things, the essential divinity of the Son, and the priority of the Father, be admitted as consistent, the dispute is at an end. But you add, that I pretend something more, viz. “to preserve the priority of the Father, and withal, the equal supremacy of the Son in point of authority and dominion.” Yes; I do pretend to hold the priority of the Father in order (which is natural) and in office (which is economical) as consistent with the Son’s essential and equal divinity: in a word, I hold any supremacy consistent with the Son’s essential divinity. If you carry the supremacy further, you either contradict yourself, or equivocate in a childish manner in the word essential. Choose you either part of the dilemma: it is all one to the argument whether the fault lies in your heart or your head.

QUERY XXVI.

Whether the Doctor did not equivocate or prevaricate strangely, in saying, “The generality of writers before the Council of Nice were, “in the whole, clearly on his side:” when it is manifest, they were, in general, no further on his side, than the allowing a subordination amounts to ; no further than our Church is on his side, while in the main points of difference, the eternity and consubstantiality, they are clearly against him ? that is, they were on his side, so far as we acknowledge him to be right, but no further.

HERE I am told by the Modest Pleader, (who was to rectify your unwary answers to my Queries, after he had seen my Defence,) that Dr. Clarke did not equivocate, or prevaricate ; because the Ante-Nicene writers agree with him in all the points laid down in his propositions. This is a shameful untruth, as hath been often proved : and since you have now owned that self-existent is necessarily existent, I shall point out to you what propositions of the Doctor's are flatly contrary to the Ante-Nicene writers in general. His 4th is one : for the ancients always thought that the nature, essence, or substance of the Persons was sufficiently declared in Scripture. His 5th proposition is another : for the ancients never taught that the Father alone is necessarily existing, but the contrary. His 7th is ambiguous. His 8th is contrary to all antiquity. So are the 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th. So is the 14th, in part, if by self-existent he meant necessarily existing. His 17th is directly contrary to the ancients, in sense, though not in words. The 19th has no manner of foundation in antiquity. The 25th has no foundation in antiquity : the ancients are contrary. The 33rd is not agreeable to the primitive doctrine. The 38th is oddly expressed : the covert meaning directly contrary to the Ante-Nicene faith. The 39th is contrary to the ancients.

As to proposition 43, the ancients knew nothing of supreme and inferior worship. The 48th is contrary to all the ancients. So is the 50th in part : and the 51st in the whole. The 54th may admit of some dispute ; but, in the main, the ancients are against it.

About one third of the Doctor's propositions are either directly contrary to antiquity, or have no countenance from it. I shall not here stay to prove the particulars : it has been done before, under the proper heads, in my Defence, and in this vindication of it. But, supposing I had charged the Doctor with something not to be found in his propositions, but in his replies, or other pieces ; is the Doctor ever the less guilty of equivocating or prevaricating ? Are we not to take his sentiments from any other part of his writings, as well as from his propositions ? But to proceed.

What you add about supremacy and subordination has been abundantly answered. You surprise me a little by one sentence, p. 477: "The question," you say, "is not whether the Son be generated consubstantially, but whether he be generated at all." I understand you. The question is, whether God could have a Son of the same nature, power, and perfections with himself: or, more briefly, whether such divinity as the Church maintains, is consistent with Sonship. You have hit the matter right: but why have you pretended all the while to lay no stress on metaphysics, when you here rest the main debate upon metaphysics, and that only? For you will not be weak enough to maintain that Scripture any where says that the only-begotten Son of God is another God, or not one God with the Father, or that he is of a different nature, or not necessarily existing as the Father, Metaphysics must do this for you, or nothing. You must call in all your vain philosophy, about individual, about necessity, about intelligent agent, about coaction, about substance and substances, causes, acts, will, and I know not what else: and at length you will go off without a proof, just as you came on.

You return to your quibble about the supremacy and monarchy of the Father. That is, all dominion over the creatures (I know of no dominion, properly so called, over any thing else) is primarily in the Father, secondarily in the other two Persons, and common to all three. The dominion is not in the Father alone: only he alone has it from none, they from him; this is the whole truth. Dr. Clarke having made some pretence to antiquity, I thought it proper to hint, in eleven particulars, his disagreement with it^a. I must here be forced to repeat them, because you have something to say to every one of them.

1. The first was, in the point of consubstantiality: in denying of which he runs counter to all the ancients. In reply, you say, you "do not presume to say that the Son is not consubstantial;" but only that "the Father alone has supreme authority and dominion." Which is either saying the same thing in other words, or saying nothing. But as you presume to say that the Son is not necessarily existing, I suppose all men of sense will see that that is denying the consubstantiality; or I know not what is so.

2. The second charge was, that you do by necessary consequence deny the Son's coeternity. Here again you presume not to say the Son is not eternal, but the Father is supreme, &c. I did not ask about the Father: however, what you intend, is, to deny the eternity, not directly, but implicitly, by asserting the Father alone to be necessarily existing. Now it is all one to us, whether you do it directly or by consequence: undermining the faith in a serpentine way, is as pernicious as a more open attacking it. If you do not deny the eternity, it is plain however that you do not assert it; and therefore you come very short of the ancients.

^a See my Defence, vol. i. p. 503, &c.

3. Another article was, the Doctor's asserting Θεός, God, to be a relative word. This I shewed to be contrary to all antiquity, a few instances excepted: your reply to this article hath been obviated above, p. 540.

4. You differ from all the ancients, in pretending that the Father only was God of Abraham, &c. You plead, in answer hereto, that it is a Scripture proposition: which is false, as hath been shewn. However, the ancients (about whom our present question is) never thought it to be a Scripture position, but quite the contrary.

5. You differ from all antiquity, in pretending that the titles of one, only, &c. are exclusive of God the Son. This you ridiculously call an express Scripture proposition. I have answered your cavils on that head: in the mean while it is evident, and you do not gainsay it, that the ancients never thought as you do.

6. You again differ from all antiquity, in pretending that the "Son had not distinct worship paid him till after his resurrection." You here make references only, which I may answer by references^o.

7. You run counter to all antiquity, in pretending that two Persons may not be, or are not, one God. To this you reply, that the one God, you think, always, in the Ante-Nicene writers, signifies the Father. I have demonstrated the contrary. However, if both together be ever called God, or included in that singular title, it comes to the same thing, though the word one be away.

8. You contradict all the ancients, in saying, that "the title "of God, in Scripture, in an absolute construction, always signifies the Father." The quotations of the ancients from the Old Testament have been abundantly vindicated above. See Query II, p. 409, &c.

9. You run counter to all antiquity, in admitting an inferior God besides the supreme; and allowing religious worship to both.

^o Defence, vol. i. p. 432, &c. See above, on Query xviii. p. 679, &c.

You appeal to St. Paul, which I have often shewn to be a weak plea; and it is here foreign. The ancients never understood St. Paul in any such sense, but the contrary. You have therefore no plea from the Ante-Nicene Fathers, which was the point in hand.

10. You contradict all antiquity, in denying the Son to be "efficient Cause of the universe." You now say, you "do not deny it;" which I am very glad of: there is one point gained. You did before, in opposing efficient to instrumental, and reserving the first to the Father only. You now say, the Son is not the "original efficient Cause." This is ill expressed, and worse meant: but do you ever find the ancients making two causes?

11. You run counter to all antiquity, in supposing (not saying) the Son to be a creature. That you suppose it, and really mean it, under other terms, hath been shewn^p.

12. You contradict all antiquity in resolving the foundation of the Son's personal Godhead into the power and dominion which you suppose him advanced to after his resurrection. It is your express doctrine. Collect. of Queries, p. 75.

13. You run counter to all the ancients in supposing the Logos to have supplied the place of a human soul; and making the Logos, as such, passible. As to the former part of this charge, you have given broad hints, up and down, in this reply: as to the latter part, it is, or was, your express doctrine. Collect. of Queries, p. 143.

Let the reader now judge of your repeated boasts of antiquity: such as none could ever have made, but the same that could espay Arianism in our Liturgy and our Articles, and bring the Creeeds of the Church to speak the language of heresy.

QUERY XXVII.

Whether the learned Doctor may not reasonably be supposed to say, the Fathers are on his side, with the same meaning and reserve as he pretends our Church forms to favour him; that is, provided he may interpret as he pleases, and make them speak his sense, however contradictory to their own; and whether the true reason why he does not care to admit the testimonies of the Fathers as proofs, may not be, because they are against him?

YOU ask me whether I admit the testimonies of the Fathers as proofs, since I disapprove of the Doctor's making them illustrations only.

^p See my Supplement, p. 324, &c. of this volume.

You think, it had been just in me to declare upon this head. Verily, I thought I had declared^p plainly, that I admit their testimonies as proofs, two ways: certain proofs, in many cases, of the Church's doctrine in that age; probable proofs of what the doctrine was from the beginning. In respect of the latter, they are inferior additional proofs, when compared with plain Scripture proof: of no moment, if Scripture is plainly contrary; but of great moment where Scripture looks the same way, because they help to fix the true interpretation in any disputed texts. I build no article of faith upon the Fathers, but upon Scripture alone. If the sense of Scripture be disputed, the concurring sentiments of the Fathers in any doctrine will be, generally, the best and safest comments upon Scripture, so far as concerns that doctrine: just as the practice of courts, and the decisions of eminent lawyers, are the best comments upon an act of Parliament made in or near their own times: though it be nevertheless true, that the obedience of the subject rests solely upon the laws of the land, as its rule and measure.

You proceed to vindicate some translations of the Doctor's, which I had found fault with. But you are first wrapped up in admiration of the Doctor's performance; that so "acute a man, &c. could not find above twenty passages to cavil at, in a book "of near five hundred pages full of quotations." Whether it was cavilling shall be seen presently. But you will remember, that, besides a general charge of want of pertinence in many, and of great unfairness^q in the whole course of them; I had over and above taken notice of particular faults, very great ones, in the Doctor's versions. And surely twenty faults of this kind were enough for one man to commit within the compass of about three hundred pages: for I examined no further^r, having found and noted a sufficient number for my purpose; which was to awaken the reader's caution, and to prevent his relying too implicitly upon the Doctor's representations. And you will consider, that it was not merely for inaccuracy in his translations, that I blamed him, (such as a man may innocently commit, or

^p Defence, vol. i. p. 538.

^q See my Defence, vol. i. p. 533.
&c.

^r The learned reader will observe more instances of like kind, in sometimes choose, to save time or pains, when the cause is not concerned in it, or when it is not material whether a scrupulous exactness be observed or no,) but it was for his mistranslating such parts of what he cited, as were of greatest moment to the question in hand, and his industriously warping them to his own hypothesis. You do well to labour this point: for indeed the Doctor's integrity, or fidelity, to say no more, is pretty deeply concerned in it; though my design was, not to expose his character, but to prevent the deception of the reader. They who desire to reexamine this matter may please to look into my Defence, that I may not be at the trouble of repeating.

Script. Doctr. p. 295, 296, 297, 304, 312, 314, 322. 2nd edit. The most shameful of them is a version, in p. 312, of a passage cited at the bottom of p. 311.

1. In the first passage, I complained of two false renderings; one of the words, οὐκ εἰς ἀναίρεσιν, another of the word ἀπαύγασμα, in both which the Doctor served his hypothesis, obliquely, against the sense of the author. You cannot, you do not pretend that his version was just: I cited as far as was necessary to shew that it was not. What then? You pretend I leave out the only words for the sake of which the Doctor cited it. I left out no words that were at all necessary to shew the sense of the author, or to judge of the Doctor's version. It was undoubtedly the Doctor's business either not to cite or translate the author at all, or to render his words faithfully, so far as he did pretend to translate from him. And though the Doctor's particular design, in that passage, might be to shew that Athanasius allowed the Father to be styled the only God, (Mark xii. 32,) yet he had a more general design running through his performance, which was to keep the reader in the dark as to the ancient way of understanding it, in opposition to false gods, or idols only: to serve which general design, he perverted the sense of that passage in his translation of it.

2. The second passage^a which the Doctor had mistranslated, you are willing to correct, in some measure, by leaving out the word most. But you will still have it absolutely and strictly God, instead of really God: which might not be much amiss, had not the Doctor made such frequent ill use of absolutely, in respect of the Father; intending therein an opposition to God the Son's being absolutely God. This was not the meaning of Athanasius, who meant no opposition but to idols^t. I observed, that Athanasius would have said, or had said, in other words, as much of the Son, as he has there said of the Father. To which you reply, that you “will not undertake to answer what Athanasius would have said, were I to indite for him : but you deny that he has said it.” I shewed before what Athanasius had said, in that very treatise^u, namely, that the Son is the ὦν, signifying emphatical existence ; which amounts to the same thing he had before said of the Father. And to shew further what Athanasius would have said, I have quoted in the margin what he really has said, in a treatise^x annexed to the other, written at the same time, and being a second part to it, so that they may be justly esteemed one treatise. He there teaches us to worship the Son only, and he styles him true God. These things put together amount to full as much as was said of the Father^y in the passage cited by the Doctor ; namely, τὸν ἀληθινὸν καὶ ὄντως ὄντα Θεὸν, signifying that he is the true God, and that he exists emphatically : and it is manifest, that Athanasius intended no opposition to the Son, in what he said of the Father, but to idols only.

^a Τὸν ἀληθινὸν καὶ ὄντως ὄντα Θεὸν, Gent. p. 9.
τὸν τοῦ Χριστοῦ πατέρα. Athan. contr.

^t See my Defence, vol. i. p. 524.

3. As to the third place which I found fault with, you would persuade us that the Doctor was very favourable in his translation, and took the least advantage possible. I blamed him for his rendering “far above all derivative being,” intending thereby to include the Son ; as if Athanasius meant that the Father was far above the Son : whereas if it be rendered, as it ought to be, far above all created being ; it would then be plain that this passage relates not to the Son at all, but to creatures only. But the Doctor, you now say, might have translated it “far above all begotten being.” He might, indeed, have done so, and have thereby shewn himself as ill a critic, as before a partial writer. For what if some copies read γεννητῆς, with double v, instead of single ; is any thing more common than mistakes of that kind ? A little lower, in the same page, the editions had γεννητῶν instead of γενητῶν^z. The sense must determine us in such cases, and a critical judgment of the principles laid down in the same treatise. One thing is certain, that however γενητῆς

^u Ὁ δὲ Θεὸς ὦν ἐστὶ καὶ οὐ σύνθετος, διὸ καὶ ὁ τοῦτον Λόγος ὦν ἐστὶ καὶ οὐ σύνθετος, ἀλλὰ εἰς καὶ μονογενῆς Θεὸς — ὡς ἀγαθὸς τῷ ἑαυτοῦ Λόγῳ καὶ αὐτῷ ὄντι Θεῷ τὴν σύμπασαν διακυβερνᾷ καὶ καθίστησιν. Athan. contr. Genf. p. 40.

^x Πανταχοῦ τὴν τοῦ Λόγου θεϊότητα βλέπων, οὐκ ἔτι μὲν ἀπατάται περὶ Θεοῦ, μόνον δὲ τοῦτον προσκυνεῖ, καὶ δι’ αὐτοῦ καλῶς τὸν πατέρα γινώσκει. Ibid. p. 87.

^y Ἐγνωρίσθη Θεὸς ἀληθινὸς, Θεοῦ Θεὸς Λόγος. P. 88.

^z Ὑπερέκεινα πάσης γενητῆς οὐσίας ὁ τοῦ Χριστοῦ πατήρ. Athan. contr. Genf. p. 39.

^z Ἄλλος μὲν ἐστὶ τῶν γενητῶν καὶ πάσης τῆς κτίσεως, ἴδιος δὲ καὶ μόνος τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ πατρὸς ὑπάρχει Λόγος, &c. p. 39. ed. Bened. Comp. Orat. i. c. 56. p. 460, &c. which, if there be any doubt, will determine the meaning of the phrase ἄλλος τῶν γενητῶν, &c.

be rendered, the Doctor is entirely false in ranking the Son under γενητῆς οὐσίας, because Athanasius, in the very page, clearly exempts him from the τὰ γενητὰ, from created beings. You may, if you please, say, from the begotten beings, and justify it in the same way as you pretend to justify the other. The late learned editor of Athanasius easily perceived that the word should be γενητῆς in one place, and γενητῶν in the other: and so it stands corrected in his edition.

4. I found fault with the Doctor's translation of a place in Eusebius^a, wherein he was doubly blamable: first, for tripping in his logic, by opposing efficient to ministerial cause, when the same may be both efficient and ministerial; and secondly, for faltering in a momentous article of faith, excluding God the Son from being efficient Cause of all things. Upon this you are in a vehement passion: it is "a cavil, most ridiculous, as well as unjust." I am not displeased to hear you say so; because now I may be confident that what I said was very right, just, and unanswerable. It is an observation the reader may have made, which will not be found to fail in any one instance, that whenever you throw out this kind of language, it is a certain mark of your distress, and of your not being able to make any solid reply. Let us see whether it does not hold true here, as well as in former instances. The Doctor's translation, you say, "does not exclude the Son from any proper efficiency, but from "supreme self-authoritative efficiency." You may be a better judge than I of what the Doctor believes, or maintains upon second thoughts: but I may presume to judge of a written translation. And I say, it is plain from his opposing efficient (not supreme efficient) to ministerial, that, unless his wits were absent, he intended as much to say that the Son was not efficient Cause, as that the Father was not ministerial. He continues the same thought all along, concluding the Father to be the Maker, (not supreme Maker only) of all things; therein shewing his supreme power and efficiency. This is the obvious sense of the Doctor's version. But I am not sorry to find, that either the Doctor or you are coming off from it, and approaching nearer to Catholic

^a Οὐχ ἵπ' αὐτοῦ, ἔφη, ἀλλὰ δι' αὐτοῦ ἵν' ἡμᾶς ἀναπέμψῃ ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν ὅλων ποιητικὴν τοῦ πατρὸς αὐθεντίαν. Euseb. Eccl. Theol. lib. i. c. 20.

The Doctor's translation, or paraphrase.

"Whereas he might have expressed "it thus, All things were made by him,

"as the efficient Cause; he does not "so express it, but thus; All things "were made by him as the ministering Cause; that so he might refer us to "the supreme power and efficiency of "the Father, as the Maker of all "things." Script. Doct. p. 89. alias 79.

principles: though it still looks a little suspicious, that you are every where scrupulous of styling the Son Creator, or Maker, and will never say that he created by his own power, but by the power of the Father.

5. I found fault with the Doctor's partial rendering a place of St. Chrysostom^b, and cutting the quotation short. You repeat (p. 462.) the same thing that the Doctor had pleaded for himself; and which I shewed to be insufficient in my Appendix. As to Basil, the Doctor had dealt as partially by him^c. Basil makes the Son's inherent power equal to the Father's; and in that sense says, that as to power, he is equal and the same. The Doctor means no more than that the Son's power (however unequal;) is derived from the Father, and in that sense they are one in power. Now I say, Basil's idea and the Doctor's are very different: and the Doctor was sensible of it; dropping the word equal in his version of Basil. Basil should not have been quoted as agreeing in the thing, when he agrees only in the name. You say, Basil could not mean that the Son's power is coordinate. But he certainly meant, and said, that the Son's power is equal: let the Doctor say this, and our dispute is ended. It is plain, that Basil's reason for the Father and Son being one is quite another than what the Doctor's is; and that the Doctor's notion of one in power is not Basil's notion^d. Why then was he quoted, and mistranslated, to confirm an interpretation entirely different from, nay, contrary to his own?

6. I found fault with the Doctor's partial rendering a noble passage of Irenæus^e. That Irenæus was not speaking of the Son, considered in a representative capacity, (which the Doctor, without any warrant^f, would express by ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ;) is manifest from Irenæus's referring to John i. 1. which describes the Son as God, before that fictitious representation the Doctor speaks of. Therefore the τὸ θεϊκὸν καὶ ἔνδοξον, in that place of Irenæus, is to be understood of the antecedent character which belonged to God the Son before the world was; and not of any subsequent representation.

7. I took notice^g of a passage in Justin cited by the Doctor,

^b Defence, p. 489, 525, 560.

^c Page 304.

^d The Doctor, by power, seems to mean moral power; such as moralists define to be that by which a person is enabled to do a thing lawfully and with moral effect: but Basil means natural power. The Doctor interprets the text of Christ's assuming to himself the power and authority of God. Reply, p. 147. See also p. 136, 254.

^e See my Defence, vol. i. p. 525, 561.

^f See my Sermons, p. 106 of this volume.

^g Defence, vol. i. p. 526.

and truly rendered, but set in a false light to deceive the reader; as if God the Son were not himself Creator and God of Abraham, but one personating the Creator and God of Abraham.

I observed, that the Doctor could not have confuted the Jew, as Justin did, while he goes upon the supposition of the Son's personating the Father: a plain and evident token of the Doctor's misunderstanding and misrepresenting his author, when he makes a great part of the Dialogue nonsense, to bring it to his hypothesis. For how should Justin ever prove that there was a divine Person, distinct from angels, one that was really God, God of Abraham, &c. if the person pretended to be such was only personating the God of Abraham, and was not himself God? Might not the Jew insist upon it that it was an angel only, personating God? Why must it be another, who was really God of Abraham as well as the Father^h? The whole drift of Justin's argument is entirely defeated by such a fiction of personating: which makes it evident that Justin had no such notion, but the quite contrary. You do not pretend to say that the Doctor, upon his principles, could have confuted the Jew in the same way with Justin: only you say, "He never thought of confuting "him upon mine." But it is manifest that he did confute him upon this principle, that there was a Person, besides the Father, God of Abraham, really so, in his own Person, because so described in Scripture: and therefore there exists a divine Person, besides the Father, Son of that Father; which was to be proved. Your weak pretences about the Son's ministering, and his not being supreme God because of that, have been often answered.

8. I took notice of some things of a slighter kind; but such as betrayed too much leaning to an hypothesis, and tended to convey false ideas to the common readerⁱ. And though the alteration in such cases may appear slight, like the change of a figure or a cypher in an account; yet is it very mischievous, and, if designedly done, very dishonest.

9. I blamed the Doctor^k for skipping over some very material

^h For if he always spake in the name, &c. of the Father, no texts could be brought to prove him Lord God, because Lord God would express the Person and authority of the Father: but it is evident that Justin, Irenæus, and others, do professedly cite passages of Scripture to prove the Son to be Lord God: that title or name then no less expresses the Person and authority of the Son, than of the Father. True Script. Doctr. Continued, p. 146.

ⁱ Defence vol. i. p. 526. ^k Ibid.

words of Novatian. Do you deny the fact? No: but you insist upon it, that Novatian has a great deal which may look for your purpose. I allowed as much before: only, as the words were capable of a Catholic meaning, and must be determined to that meaning if some parts of the sentence are incapable of any other; I desired that the words per substantiæ communionem, by communion of substance, (which the Doctor had unfairly omitted,) might be brought in to end the dispute.

As to Novatian's real principles, I have given you my thoughts above. He takes a particular way in the resolving the unity, very like to yours: yet he maintains the *eternity*¹ and consubstantiality of God the Son; wherein he differs as much from you as he agrees with me. The subordination he expresses in very strong words, but yet such as do not amount to an inferiority of nature.

You intimate, that the author intended an inequality of perfections, and not merely an inequality in respect of original: which is more than Novatian's words prove; or, at least, than they appear to me to prove. I shall give the passage in the margin^m, which must decide this matter. Novatian there many ways expresses the same thing, that had the Father and Son been equal in respect of original, had they both been underived or unbegotten, there might then have been just pretence

¹ As to Novatian's supposing the Father prior to the Son, I accounted for it in my Defence, vol. i. p. 355, 356. I shall here add a few parallel expressions from other Catholic writers, who undoubtedly believed the coeternity.

Ex quo ostenditur semper fuisse vaporem istum virtutis Dei, nullum habentem initium nisi ipsum Deum: neque enim decebat aliud ei esse initium nisi ipsum unde est et nascitur. Pamphil. Apolog. p. 230.

Primitivus est dictus quia præter Patrem, cui etiam coæternus est divinitate, cum Spiritu Sancto, ante ipsum nullus est primus. Zen. Veronens. Serm. in Exod. ix.

Πῶς οὖν οὐκ ἦν τὸ ἐξ ἀρχῆς—ὁ μηδὲν ἔχων προεπιστούμενον ἑαυτοῦ, εἰ μὴ τὸν ἐξ οὗ ἔχει τὸ εἶναι: οὐ διαστήματι ὑπερέχοντα, ἀλλὰ τῇ αἰρίᾳ προτεταγμένον. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. ii. p. 735.

^m Si enim natus non fuisset, innatus comparatus cum eo qui esset innatus, æquatione in utroque ostensa, duos faceret innatos, et ideo duos faceret Deos. Si non genitus esset, collatus cum eo (qui) genitus non esset, et æquales inventi, duos Deos merito reddidisset non geniti; atque ideo duos Christus reddidisset Deos. Si sine origine esset, ut Pater, inventus, et ipse principium omnium, ut Pater, duo faciens principia, duos ostendisset nobis consequenter et Deos. Aut si et ipse Filius non esset, sed Pater generans de se alterum Filium, merito collatus cum Patre, et tantus denotatus, duos Patres effecisset, et ideo duos approbasset etiam Deos. Si invisibilis fuisset cum invisibili collatus, par expressus, duos invisibiles ostendisset, et ideo duos comprobasset et Deos. Si incomprehensibilis, si et cætera quæcunque sunt Patris; merito dicimus, duorum Deorum quam isti confingunt controversiam suscitatset. Nunc autem quicquid est, non ex se est, quia nec innatus est. Novat. c. 31.

for making them two Gods. He adds, that had they been both invisible and incomprehensible, they had then been two Gods. To understand which, we are to remember that it was the general doctrine of the Fathers, that God the Son might be visible and appear in a place, per assumptas species, by visible symbols; but that God the Father might not, it being unsuitable to the character of the first Person to be sent, and consequently to appear in that manner. Upon this hypothesis, had the Son been invisible and incomprehensible, in such a sense as the Father was conceived to be, it would have been the same thing as if he had been another Father, or another first Person; and that would infer two Gods. He is not therefore speaking of any difference as to essential perfections, but only of the difference between a first and second Person; that one could not be sent, or become visible and confined to a place in any sense: the other might in such a sense as hath been mentioned, viz. by symbols of his presence. Otherwise Novatian admits the Son in his own nature to be omnipresent, as well as the Father, as is plain from his wordsⁿ. See this point more fully cleared in Bishop Bull^o. The whole course and tenor of Novatian's discourse tends only to this, that there is but one Head, viz. the Father, to whom the Son himself, his substance, his power, and perfections are referred, and in whom they centre; that there is a difference of order because of that headship; and that, conformably thereto, the Son in all things acts subordinately, ministers to the Father, and executes inferior offices under him, as a son to a father, not as a servant to his lord. This is all that Novatian's words strictly amount to: and though he speaks of the subjection of the Son, it does not necessarily mean any thing more than that voluntary economy which God the Son underwent, and which would not have been proper for the Father himself to have submitted to, because not suitable to the order of the Persons.

One passage I must here give, because we differ chiefly about what that passage contains. The literal version runs thus P:

ⁿ Si homo tantummodo Christus, quomodo adest ubique invocatus? Cum hæc hominis natura non sit sed Dei, ut adesse omni loco possit. Novat. cap. 15. See True Script. Doctr. Continued, p. 170.

^o Bull. D. F. sect. iv. cap. 3.

^p Cujus sic divinitas traditur, ut non aut dissonantia, aut inequalitate divinitatis, duos Deos reddidisse videatur. Subjectis enim ei, quasi Filio, omnibus rebus a Patre, dum ipse cum his quæ illi subjecta sunt, Patri suo subicitur, Patris quidem sui Filium probatur, cæterorum autem et Dominus et Deus esse reperitur. Ex quo dum huic qui est Deus, omnia substracta (leg. substrata) traduntur, et cuncta sibi subjecta Filius accepta refert Patri, totam divinitatis auctori-

“ Whose Godhead is so delivered, as not to appear to make “ two Gods, either by a disagreement or inequality of Godhead.
 “ For all things being by the Father made subject to him, as to a “ Son, while he himself, with those things which are made subject “ to him, is subject to his Father: he is shewn indeed to be the “ Son of his Father; but is found to be Lord and God of all “ things else. And since all things are thus subjected to him
 “ (the Son) who is God, and since he owes their being made “ subject under him to the Father, he again refers back to the “ Father all the authority of the Godhead: and so the Father “ is shewn to be the one true and eternal God, from whom alone
 “ this efflux of the Godhead being sent out and communicated “ to the Son, revolves again to the Father by communion of sub- “ stance. The Son is indeed shewn to be God, as the Godhead “ is communicated and delivered to him: but at the same time
 “ the Father is nevertheless the one God, while that very Majesty “ and Godhead is, by a reciprocal course, returned, and referred “ up again from the Son to the Father that gave it.”

This is, I think, a fair and true rendering of Novatian: only I am now to justify such parts of it as you will be apt to except against. Instead of inequality, you choose the reverse, viz. equality; upon some slender suspicions of your own against the faith of the copies. Conjectural emendations ought never to be admitted, but upon the greatest necessity. For it often happens that men please themselves awhile with reasons that look plausible; but when the thing comes to be well considered, reasons as plausible, or more so, may appear on the other side. It has been urged, in this very case, by a learned gentleman, that what you would make a reason for non equalitate, is sufficiently answered by the words, non dissonantia divinitatis. For had the Father and Son been equally unoriginate, there would have been dissonantia, according to Novatian^r; a disagreement of two independent Deities, without any Sonship, which makes tatem rursus Patri remittit; unus Deus ostenditur verus et æternus Pater, a quo solo hæc vis divinitatis emissa, etiam in Filium tradita et directa, rursus per substantiæ communionem ad Patrem revolvitur. Deus quidem ostenditur Filius cui divinitas tradita et porrecta conspicitur; et tamen nihilominus unus Deus Pater probatur; dum gradatim reciproco meatu illa majestas atque divinitas ad Patrem, qui dederat eam, rursus ab illo ipso Filio missa revertitur, et retorquetur. Novat. cap. 31.

^r True Scripture Doctrine Continued, p. 172.

^r Dum non aliunde est quam ex Patre, Patri suo originem suam debens, discordiam divinitatis de numero duorum Deorum facere non potuit. Novat. cap. 31.

the union^s. Hence then Novatian excludes equality of original, by the words non dissonantia; but at the same time teaches an equality of nature, or Godhead, that he might avoid the opposite extreme. And this is but suitable to the very tenor of his discourse, there and elsewhere. For how can there be a communication of substance and Godhead, without the supposition of equality of nature and Godhead? A little before, he had said, the Word was divine substance^t: and he here speaks of the Godhead being communicated, or imparted to the Son, and revolving again to the Father as the Head or Fountain. Besides that, Novatian is known to make the Son as truly of the same nature with the Father, as any man is of the same human nature with his Father^u. What is this but, in other words, declaring equality of nature or Godhead? There is therefore no reason for altering Novatian's text^x: however positively you may express yourself on that head.

As to the words accepta refert Patri, they really mean no more than that he received them from the Father, or acknowledged them to be received: which comes not up to the Doctor's expression, (which I found fault with,) "in acknowledgment returned:" besides that the Doctor was not there translating accepta refert, but reciproco meatu revertitur, &c.

* Si ambo vocarentur Patres, essent profecto natura dissimiles: unusquisque enim ex semetipso constaret, et communem substantiam cum altero non haberet; nec Deitas una esset, quibus una natura non esset. Fulgent. Resp. contr. Arian. p. 52.

Duos autem Deos dicere non possumus, nec debemus: non quod Filius Dei Deus non sit, imo verus Deus de Deo vero; sed quia non aliunde quam de ipso Patre Dei Filium novimus, proinde unum Deum dicimus.—Si verus Deus est, et de Patre non est, duo sunt, habentes singuli et voluntates proprias, et imperia diversa. Greg. Nazianz. Op. vol. i. p. 728. Ambros. Op. vol. ii. p. 347.

Quicquid extra eum est, cum contumelia ei honoratæ virtutis æquabitur. Si enim aliquid quod non ex ipso est, reperiri potest simile ei, et virtutis ejusdem; amittit privilegium Dei sub consortio cœqualis: jamque non erit Deus unus a quo indifferens sit Deus alius. At vero non habet contumeliam proprietatis æqualitas, quia suum est quod sui simile est; et ex se est quod sibi ad similitudinem comparatur; nec extra se est, quod quæ sua sunt potest: et profectus dignitatis est genuisse potestatem, nec alienasse naturam. Hilar. de Tris. p. 934.

† Substantia scilicet illa divina, cujus nomen est Verbum. Novat. c. 31.

‡ Ut enim præscripsit ipsa natura hominem credendum qui ex homine sit: ita eadem natura præscribit et Deum credendum esse qui ex Deo sit. Novat. cap. 11.

§ I may here cite a passage of Hilary, which may serve as a just comment upon this of Novatian; being extremely like it, and carrying the same thought, probably, in it.

Insunt sibi invicem, dum non est nisi ex Patre nativitas, dum in Deum alterum naturæ vel exterioris, vel dissimilis non subsistit, dum Deus ex Deo manens non est aliunde quod Deus est. Hilar. p. 937.

Here are the same reasons given why Father and Son are not two Gods: and Hilary's expression of non naturæ exterioris answers to Novatian's of non dissonantia: as also his non dissimilis to the other's non inæqualitate.

The words vis divinitatis, I render efflux of the Godhead; which you render divine power. I could not think of a better expression than what I made use of. That I have not missed the sense I persuade myself, because Novatian is speaking of communion of substance in the same sentence, and had styled the Word divine substance a little before: and he is here plainly speaking of the divine substance being porrecta and tradita, communicated from Father to Son, and recurring to the Father as Head. If vis answers to the Greek δύναμις, as I conceive it here does, it means the same as the living and substantial power of God, the same that we express by efflux, or emanation. The thought of Novatian seems to be the same with that of Tertullian^γ, whom he loved to imitate in many things. To make it still plainer that I interpret him rightly, please to observe the words, Deus quidem ostenditur Filius, cui divinitas tradita et porrecta conspicitur. Here he gives the reason why the Son is God: it is because the Godhead extends to him, or is communicated to him. Compare this with what the author says in another place^z; and you will see how consistent and uniform this writer is in his doctrine, that it is the Son's proceeding from the Father, or his partaking of the divine substance, that makes him God. So little reason have you to imagine that the words, per substantiæ communionem, crept into the text out of the margin. Whether the Doctor or I have pursued a wrong scent in explaining Novatian, I now leave to the reader to judge.

10. I had remarked^a upon the Doctor's rendering a passage of Athanasius^b, more to serve his hypothesis, than pursuant to the sense of the author. The reader must be left to judge for himself, after comparing what hath or may be said on both sides. The author, as I take it, is there blaming the Sabellians for imagining the Son to be the only God, in such a sense as to make one Person only (under three names, of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost) in the Godhead, instead of three real Persons. Accord-

^γ Cum radius ex sole porrigitur, portio ex summa; sed sol erit in radio, quia solis est radius, nec separatur substantia, sed extenditur. Tertull. Apol. cap. 21.

Prolatum Filium a Patre, sed non separatum. Contr. Prax. cap. 8.

^z Qui idcirco unum potest dici, dum ex ipso est, et dum Filius ejus est, et dum ex ipso nascitur, et dum ex ipso processisse reperitur, per quod et Deus est. Novat. cap. 23.

Si homo tantummodo Christus, quomodo dicit, Ego ex Deo prodii et veni? cum constet hominem a Deo factum esse, non ex Deo processisse — Deus ergo processit ex Deo, dum qui processit sermo, Deus est qui processit ex Deo. Novat. cap. 23.

^a Defence, vol. i. p. 528.

^b Ὁ σαρκωθείς Κύριος καὶ Θεὸς ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ὁ πατὴρ οὐκ ἔστιν, οὐδ' ὡς ἐκεῖνοι φαίεν, ὁ μόνος Θεός. Athanas. contr. Greg. Sabell. p. 47.

ingly, the same author censures them (p. 39^c.) for making the Son μόνος, or the alone divine Person, in contradiction to John viii. 16. "I am not alone, because the Father is with me." Which text he produces to prove that Father and Son were two Persons, and that the Son was not μόνος in such a sense, as to infer a confusion of Persons. This therefore being all that the author intended against the Sabellians, it seems to me plain, that the construction I before gave of ὡς ἐκεῖνοι φαίεν, was right, and the Doctor's wrong. That the author could not deny the Son to be the only God in any other sense, is plain from his making Father and Son one perfect substance^d; and his asserting one Godhead of both^e. In another place^f, he censures the Sabellians for making the Son the one and only God: but how? So as to deny the distinct Personality, and no otherwise. And in the very place we are now upon, all that the writer insists upon is, that the Father and Son are distinct Persons, not one Person: in which sense the author does not admit the Son to be ὁ μόνος Θεός. But that it is always Sabellian to apply the phrase to the Son singly, or to both together, is not said, neither can you prove it. The force of your argument lies only in the article ὁ: for as to μόνος Θεός, only God, that it is often applied to the Son, cannot be denied^g: and this consideration might be sufficient to make the author put in the restriction of ὡς ἐκεῖνοι φαίεν to the latter branch of the sentence, which he did not to the former, where it is ὁ Πατήρ. For there is a sense wherein the Son is ὁ μόνος Θεός, but he is not ὁ Πατήρ in any sense: which shews the reason why the author expressed himself as he did.

II. I took notice^h of another passage directly contrary to the Doctor's purpose, though cited by him. For the Doctor's design was to make the Father the only God exclusive of the Son: while that passage makes him the only God including the Son; di-

^c Πῶς οὐκ ἀποστασία σαφῆς ἀρνεῖσθαι τὰ τρία, καὶ μόνον εἶναι λέγειν τὸν φάσκοντα· οὐκ εἰμὶ μόνος, ὅτι ὁ πέμψας με πατήρ μετ' ἐμοῦ ἐστὶ—ἰδοὺ γὰρ δύο πρόσωπα. Athas. tom. ii. p. 39.

^d Μία δὲ οὐρα οὐσία τελεία. P. 41.

^e Μία θεότης πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ. P. 42.

^f Οἱ τὴν τριάδα μονάδα ποιούντες νοθεύειν καὶ τὴν ἀποστολήν, ὥσπερ τὴν γέννησιν, ἐπιχειροῦσιν· εἰσὼ γὰρ ὄντα φασὶ τοῦ πατρὸς τὸν υἱὸν, ἁγιασμὸν ἀνθρώπου ἐργάζεσθαι, τοιούστιν, αὐτὸν τὸν ἕνα καὶ μόνον Θεὸν, οὕτως ἀπεστάλθαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον, οὐ Θεὸν παρὰ Θεοῦ. P. 47.

^g Μόνος τῶν πάντων ἀνθρώπων Θεῶν. Clem. Alexand. p. 84.

Τῶν συμπάντων Θεὸν ἕνα μόνον—υἱὸν ἐν πατρὶ. P. 142.

Christus Jesus solus esset Deus. Aristid. apud Petav. Pref. ad 2. tom. Theol.

Τοῦ Θεοῦ Λόγος μόνος Θεὸς ἀληθῆς—μόνος Θεὸς ὡς ὁ πατήρ. Athas. in Psal. p. 83. nov. collect.

Υἱὸν μόνον εἰρησθαι Θεὸν, &c. Greg. Naz. Orat. xxxvi. p. 586.

Ἐμὲ δὲ μόνον Θεὸν εἰδῆναι, &c. Euseb. in Psal. p. 503.

^h Defence, vol. i. p. 528.

rectly the reverse. Had the Doctor's intention been only to prove that the Father is styled the only God, the method had been fair: but as his professed design was to exclude the Son from the one Godhead, his manner of citing authors for it, who in these very passages were directly against it, is an intolerable abuse upon the readers.

12. The like may be said of another passage taken notice of in my Defenceⁱ. You seem to forget the Doctor's note on prop. 9. where he precautions his reader to understand it in such a sense as to exclude the Son from necessary existence, (so you interpret self-existent.) Now can any thing be more unfair or fraudulent, than to cite authors as styling the Father the only God, to countenance a proposition in such a sense as those authors detested and abhorred? All the apologies you can possibly invent can never make such a practice righteous, or honest.

13. I remarked^k upon a passage cited out of Nazianzen; where the Doctor, by a note, had most shamefully stifled and perverted the author's meaning. You say not one word of the Doctor's note, the only thing I found fault with: and which indeed can admit of no colourable excuse, except it were done through carelessness, taking a passage at second hand, and commenting upon it, without ever looking into the author to see what went before or after.

14. As to the passage of Justin Martyr, enough hath been said above.

15. I remarked^l upon another note of the Doctor's, on a passage in Irenæus, and gave several reasons to shew the unfairness and falseness of it. You have here nothing to say in his defence: so I pass on.

16. I remarked upon another passage^m, where the Doctor had read the text of Irenæus wrong; which you civilly acknowledge, and thank me for the notice. But there are still two questions betwixt us relating to that place. First, whether it should be ἀγέννητος or ἀγένητος, and next, whether the Son be included by Irenæus, in that place, in the ἀγένητος Θεός, supposing that to be the reading. It was needless for you to heap passages upon me to prove that none but the Father should be ⁱ Vol. i. p. 528. ^k Ib. p. 529. ^l Ibid.

^m Ὁ γεννητὸς καὶ πεπλασμένος ἀνθρώπος κατ' εἰκόνα καὶ ὁμοίωσιν τοῦ ἀγεννήτου γίνεται Θεοῦ· τοῦ μὲν πατρὸς εὐδοκούντος, καὶ κελείοντος, τοῦ δὲ υἱοῦ πράσσοντος καὶ δημιουργούντος, τοῦ δὲ πνεύματος τρέφοντος καὶ αἰζάντος.

Iren. lib. iv. cap. 38. p. 285.

styled ἀγέννητος, unbegotten, or unoriginate; which I readily allow. All the question is about ἀγέννητος, uncreated, unmade, eternal, or necessarily existing. The reasons why I think ἀγενήτου to be the reading in Irenæus are these:

I. The translator's rendering it by infecti: which however I acknowledge to be of less weight, because he is sometimes mistaken in such cases; putting ingenitus for infectus, and perhaps infectus for ingenitus or innatus.

II. A much stronger reason is, that through that whole chapter ἀγέννητος is opposed to things made, things of transient and precarious existence. The opposition runs between the things made, and the Maker of themⁿ:

III. Another very weighty reason is drawn from the opposition between γεννητὸς ἄνθρωπος, and ἀγενήτου Θεοῦ: that the reading is γεννητὸς, not with double ν, is evident from the whole chapter; where the opposition runs between man made^o, and God his Maker. And there is not the least hint of man considered as begotten, or as Son of God; as you would understand it, referring to Luke iii. 38. These reasons convince me that the true reading of the words is ὁ γεννητὸς ἄνθρωπος, and τοῦ ἀγενήτου Θεοῦ.

The next question is, whether the Son be here included under ἀγενήτου Θεοῦ. I gave several reasons why all the three Persons are included; which reasons may be seen in my Defence. I shall add two more: one, that as the opposition runs between the thing made and the maker; so it is observable that God the Son frequently is factor, ποιητῆς, Maker, according to Irenæus; which shews that he is included in the ἀγέννητος Θεός. And again, it is Irenæus's doctrine, that man's being made after the image of God is to be understood of his being made in the image of God the Word^p: which still further confirms my construction of that passage; and I now submit it to the judgment of the ⁿ Τῷ μὲν Θεῷ, ἀεὶ κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ ὄντι, καὶ ἀγενήτῳ ὑπάρχοντι—τὰ δὲ γεγονότα καθὸ μετέπειτα γενέσεως ἀρχὴν ἰδίαν ἔσχε, κατὰ τοῦτο καὶ ὑστερεῖσθαι δεῖ αὐτὰ τοῦ πεποιηκότος, οὐ γὰρ ἠδύναστο ἀγέννητα εἶναι τὰ νεωστὶ γεγεννημένα. Iren. p. 283.

Volunt similes esse factori Deo, et nullam esse differentiam infecti Dei et nunc facti hominis. P. 285.

^o Ἐκεῖνος ἄρτι γεγονὸς—νεωστὶ γεγονότα ἄνθρωπον, ὅτι μὴ ἀγέννητος ἦν. P. 284.

^p Ἐδεῖ δὲ τὸν ἄνθρωπον πρῶτον γενέσθαι, καὶ γεγόμενον αὐξήσθαι, &c. p. 285.

^p Ὁ Λόγος, οὐ κατ' εἰκόνα ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἐγγέσσει.

Ὁ Λόγος—τὴν εἰκόνα ἔδειξεν ἀληθῶς, αὐτὸς τοῦτο γεγόμενος ὡς ἦν εἰκὼν αὐτοῦ. Iren. lib. v. cap. 16. p. 313.

Quia jam adhærebat illi Filius, secunda persona, sermo ipsius, et tertia, Spiritus in sermone, ideo pluraliter pronuntiavit, faciamus, et nostram. Tertull. adv. Prax. cap. 12.

Unum enim sunt, quorum imaginis et similitudinis unum est homo factus exemplum. Hilar. de Trin. lib. v. cap. 8.

learned reader. As to my translating εὐδοκούντος by designing, I have accounted for it above.

17. As to the passage in Basil, which the Doctor had not done justice to, I desire the reader to see my Defence⁹. That Basil allows the Father to be a natural cause of the Son is very true; not a cause in the Doctor's sense: nor do Basil's words convey any such notion to the reader, as the Doctor's word, effects, does. And therefore the Doctor cannot be acquitted of a misrepresentation. I leave it to any reader, who will compare my account of Basil with the Doctor's version, to judge whether the ideas here and there be not very widely different. And what occasion was there for the Doctor's saying effects, instead of things issuing from them, but to favour an hypothesis, and to hold out a false light to the readers? As to what you say of ἀξίωμα, dignity, I have answered it above. Your reason for προτερᾶχθαι signifying more than priority of order, is very peculiar, viz. because Basil in another place has both τάξει and ἀξιώματι: therefore when he makes mention of order only, (as in the word προτερᾶχθαι.) he meant more than order. You might perceive, by the reason given in both places, that προτερᾶχθαι applied to the Father, and τάξει δεύτερος applied to the Son, answer exactly to each other, and literally signify order, and nothing else^r. And had you attended to Basil's reasoning, where he allows ἀξιώματι as well as τάξει, you would have perceived that it was rather ad hominem, or for argument sake, than any thing else. For admitting that the Son or Holy Ghost were ἀξιώματι, as well as τάξει, second and third, (as Eunomius pretended,) yet he shews that no certain consequence can be drawn from thence to inferiority of nature. Or however, at the most, all you can make of it is, that the Father being supreme in office, as well as in order, was on that account ἀξιώματι πρῶτος, first in dignity: as one angel (which is Basil's illustration) is superior to another in rank, or office, though in nature equal. Basil. lib. iii. p. 79.

19. The last passage I found fault with, you are content to throw off under the name of a quibble; because you could not account for the Doctor's foul play in mistranslating it, and warping it to his own hypothesis. Why was not the word δημιουργήματα rendered creatures, as it ought to have been? And why did the Doctor put all things, when speaking of things produced by the Father, and things only in respect of the Son's producing, when he had no ground for the distinction in Basil?

⁹ Vol. i. p. 531.

^r See another passage of Basil above, p. 723.

But enough of this. The Doctor's partiality in many of his quotations has been sufficiently manifested. And though you are pleased to pass the matter off with as good a face as you can, (and it is your wisest way so to do,) yet you will hardly find many readers of opinion with you, that these kind of slips, in a man of character, are of slight moment. Had Bishop Bull been ever guilty of things of this kind, I well know what use would have been made of it. Mr. Whiston^s charged him with once unfairly translating a passage of Origen; where yet the Bishop was right, and Mr. Whiston certainly wrong, as I have proved in my Defence^t: and this one pretended instance of unfairness is brought up again, and aggravated, by another gentleman^u, with some kind of insult. A few slips of this nature, where a charge is really just, are not easily pardoned in any writers of the higher class: betraying either want of learning, or want of care, or, what is worst of all, want of honesty.

You endeavour to throw off the force of the next five or six pages of my Defence, (which you can never fairly answer,) by charging something disingenuous, as you pretend, upon me: "as if all the Doctor's citations from the Fathers in general were concessions only from writers, who were adversaries in the "whole." But I made a distinction^x, as the Doctor himself had done^y, between Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene writers. As to the latter, he laid claim to nothing but concessions: and as to the former, he did indeed claim more in respect of some of them, though I think without reason. You are still sanguine enough to say, that "much the greater part of the authors he cites, all," you think, "of the three first centuries, agree with him in the "full sense of all his propositions." How wild, and indeed romantic, this imagination of yours is, hath been sufficiently shewn all the way; first, in my Defence, and again in these papers: particularly in the eleven instances above mentioned, wherein the Doctor runs counter to all antiquity. As to supreme dominion, which you lay so much stress on; it is demonstration that the Fathers held no supremacy but what was thought consistent with equality of nature, and with the unity of the same Godhead common to Father and Son. If this be your supremacy, all is right and well. But it is ridiculous in you to quote ancients

▪ Primitive Christianity Revived, Append. ii. p. 44.
vol. iv. p. 154.

^x Defence, vol. i. p. 522.

^t Vol. i. p. 380, &c.

^y Preface to Script. Doctr. p. 18.

▪ Primitive Christianity Revived. 1st ed. Reply, p. 5, 6.

for the supremacy, and at the same time to throw out all the considerations which should come in to qualify, fix, and determine the notion of supremacy among the ancients. Are not all the other tenets, wherein the ancients evidently contradict the Doctor's whole scheme, so many demonstrations that they never understood supremacy in any such sense as he does? What is the Doctor or you doing, but playing one or two principles of the ancients, of uncertain meaning in themselves, against twenty clear, plain, undoubted principles? which if you were able to do with success, it would not be proving that the Fathers were on your side, but that they were fools and mad, and are of no account on either side of the controversy. But I hope the reader will easily see through the mystery of the whole deceit which you are putting upon him, (and perhaps upon yourselves at the same time,) which is only this: the straining and perverting the true and Catholic notion of supremacy (held in all ages of the Church, before and after the Nicene Council) to an Arian and heretical sense; that so you may obliquely (what you care not to do directly) reduce the Son and Holy Ghost to the rank of creatures. Your constant plea is, the supremacy, the supremacy: the ancients, it seems, were for supremacy, amidst all their variety of metaphysical speculations: so that every other tenet, whereby the ancients plainly overturn your whole scheme, must be thrown off as a metaphysical speculation; and nothing but supremacy must be sounded in our ears. Yet, after all, you can make nothing of this pretended supremacy till you turn it into a metaphysical speculation upon self-existence, and that again into necessary existence; then adding sundry other metaphysical speculations, to degrade and sink God the Son into precarious existence. This was not the way of the ancients; nor was this the use they ever made, or intended to make of the supremacy: if they had, you would have allowed them, I suppose, in this single instance, to run into metaphysical speculations. One thing is evident, amidst all their variety of metaphysical speculations, in which you think they abounded more than you, that what metaphysics they had in their great abundance, they employed them all in defence of our Lord's divinity; while you, on the contrary, employ the little you have, in direct opposition to it. Certainly, the ancients, being so much given to metaphysics, could have been metaphysical on your side of the question, as well as you are now: but either they were wise enough to distinguish false metaphysics from true; or, they had not so learned Christ. But to return.

I intimated^z how a Romanist might, in Dr. Clarke's way, fill pages with quotations wide of the purpose, and call them concessions, and thereby deceive weak readers. Here you have nothing to reply, but that I do the Doctor wrong in applying this to all his citations. I applied it not to all, but to as many (be they more or fewer) as have been thus deceitfully made use of by the Doctor. By his own account it must be understood of as many Post-Nicene Catholics as he quotes in that manner: and how many Ante-Nicenes it ought to be understood of, may appear from what I have shewn of their being in very opposite sentiments to his, in the most material points of our dispute. But allowing your plea, is it any justification of the Doctor's method of quoting? I charge him with deceit: and you, in his defence, represent him as practising it not so much, or so often, as I might imagine. But why did he practise it at all?

You next endeavour to retort something upon me like to the Romanists, though entirely wide and foreign, and brought in most strangely. They have recourse, you say, to tradition: you should have said to oral tradition, which is quite another thing from written tradition. And what harm is there in having recourse to the written tradition of Fathers for the sense of Scripture, more than in having recourse to a Dictionary for the sense of words; or to the practice of courts, resolutions of Judges, or books of Reports, for the sense of laws? All helps, for the understanding of Scripture, ought to be made use of: and recourse to the Fathers is one, and a very considerable one. The Romanists, you add, call their own doctrine Catholic: yes, and without reason. The Fathers, long before Popery, called their doctrine Catholic, and with good reason. What then? The Romanists also call that heresy, which is really none: may we not therefore call that heresy, which really is such, and which has been ever so accounted in all ages of the Church? What you have further is repetition: except your speculations on Rev. i. 8. which have been mostly considered above^a. There remain only a few incidental matters to be here taken notice of, very briefly. I had referred to four places^b in Clemens, where he either directly or indirectly makes the Son παντοκράτωρ, Almighty. Of three of them no reasonable doubt can be made: and three are ^z Defence, vol. i. p. 534, 535.

^a Page 562 of this volume.

^b Τοῦ παντοκράτορος καὶ πατρικοῦ Λόγου. p. 148. Τὸν παντοκράτορα Θεὸν

Λόγον, p. 277. Δύναμις πανκράτης—θέλημα παντοκρατορικόν. p. 646. Ἡ υἱοῦ φύσις ἢ τῷ μόνῳ παντοκράτορι προσεχεστάτη. p. 831.

sufficient. The fourth only says, that the nature of the Son is προσεχουστάτη, most intimately united to the alone Almighty; which, according to Clemens's notion of their union, is supposing both Almighty. But this I need not insist upon, having three plain testimonies besides; two of which have been vindicated above. You cite another passage^c of Clemens, and you translate it most shamefully, to serve your hypothesis, in these words; "He is irresistible as being Lord of all; most certainly irresistible, because ministering to the will of the good and supreme Father over all." You have here exceeded Mr. Whiston by far; whose translation is very modest and reasonable in comparison. The literal and just rendering is thus: "Neither could he be obstructed by any other, being Lord of all, and chiefly (or most perfectly) ministering to the will of the good and Almighty Father." Clemens's thought is this; that as to creatures, they cannot obstruct him, since he is Lord over them: and as to the Father, he will not, inasmuch as all that the Son does is perfectly agreeable to his will^d. I need not say any thing here further in relation to Justin or Eusebius; having given my thoughts of both in the preceding sheets.

QUERY XXVIII.

Whether it be at all probable, that the primitive Church should mistake in so material a point as this is; or that the whole stream of Christian writers should mistake in telling us what the sense of the Church was: and whether such a cloud of witnesses can be set aside without weakening the only proof we have of the Canon of the Scripture, and the integrity of the sacred text?

THE Modest Pleader thinks it not material to inquire, "whether the ancient writers of the Church were better skilled in metaphysical speculations, than we at this day?" This kind of talk is what he affects, and pleases himself in; though he has nothing but metaphysics to depend on, as I have often observed: and I will venture to assure him, that the old and well tried metaphysics of the ancients are such as he will find much superior to his own. Metaphysics were indeed first brought in by heretics, and were much encouraged by Arius, Eunomius, and the whole sect of Arians : but the Fathers of the Church, having better sense than they, were able to baffle them at their own weapons. The Modest Pleader, I think, (if there be not an interpolation by another hand,) still goes on, and tells me "how unanimously, how uniformly the ancients asserted a real "premac^y of the Father's dominion." And yet the certain truth is, that he has no Ante-Nicene or Post-Nicene Catholic writer that ever came up to his notion of it. Where does he find them saying, that the Father alone is supreme in dominion? He may find many expressly contradicting it; as many as make Father and Son one God, or proclaim them undivided in dominion, or say that they are unius Potestatis, unius Divinitatis, of one Power and Godhead, and the like: many testimonies whereof have been given in the course of these papers. All he can prove is a supremacy of the Father, a supremacy in respect of order or office, nothing more. But his way is to take old expressions, and to affix new ideas to them, under pretence that those old writers knew not how to speak accurately. What they called cause, is with him no cause; what they called acts, are no acts; what they called generation, is no generation; and their subordination (like mine) is a coordination: and so, I presume, their supremacy is no supremacy, but must be stretched further upon the foot of the new metaphysics. This is the whole of the case; new ideas to old terms, that a man may seem to concur with the ancients, while he is really contradicting them in the grossest manner, and introducing a novel faith. I know not how far such a method may serve with the populace: wise men will see through it, and give it its due name; viz. either great ignorance of antiquity, or great partiality.

^c Οὐδ' ἕφ' ἐτίρου κωλυθεῖν ποτ' ἂν ὁ πάντων κύριος, καὶ μάλιστα ἐξυπηρετῶν τῷ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ καὶ πατοκράτορος θελήματι πατρός. p. 832.

^d See Bull. D. F. sect. ii. cap. 6. Nourrii Appar. vol. i. p. 954. Lord Nottingham's Answer to Whiston, p. 5.

But he goes on: "whole streams of writers in matters of controversy, representing other men's opinions otherwise than in "the words of the persons themselves, are no manner of evidence." One would wonder what this wise paragraph meant, or what it was to the purpose. Have we not the sense of the Church from Churchmen themselves? But he wanted to introduce an ill-natured gird upon somebody. He is terribly afraid lest any man should judge of Dr. Clarke's writings from his adversary's accounts. I hope the reader will bear this caution in mind, as often as he reads Dr. Clarke's account of the Ante-Nicene or Post-Nicene writers, to whom he is an utter adversary; though a professed one to the latter only. As to what he says about weakening the canon of Scripture, I refer to my Defence^c; where that matter is fairly and fully stated.

I now come to you. You repeat the pretence of supremacy: which requires no further answer but this; that you mistake the alone unoriginateness for alone dominion. The Father is not the alone Governor: but he alone hath his authority and dominion from none.

QUERY XXIX.

Whether private reasoning, in a matter above our comprehension, be a safer rule to go by, than the general sense and judgment of the primitive Church in the first 300 years: or, supposing it doubtful what the sense of the Church was within that time, whether what was determined by a Council of 300 Bishops soon after, with the greatest care and deliberation, and has satisfied men of the greatest sense, piety, and learning, all over the Christian world, for 1400 years since, may not satisfy wise and good men now?

I HERE meet with nothing but what has been abundantly answered or obviated. Your former pretences were;

1. That the Nicene Council knew nothing of individual consubstantiality.
2. That they understood consubstantial in a figurative sense.
3. That if they intended any real consubstantiality, it was specific only.
4. That several Councils, more numerous than that of Nice determined against the ὁμοούσιον.

All these pleas were particularly examined and confuted in my Defence: and you have been content to drop them, as indefensible, without any reinforcement.

You have nothing further but a few trifling quibbles about individual, and identical, and supreme authority: which may now pass with the readers for words of course; such as you have accustomed yourself to repeat, when you have no mind to be silent. I must desire the reader to turn to my Defence of this Query, and to compare it with your Reply, if he finds any thing in what you have said that seems to require any consideration.

QUERY XXX.

Whether, supposing the case doubtful, it be not a wise man's part to take the safer side; rather to think too highly, than too meanly of ^c Vol. i. p. 541, &c.

our blessed Saviour ; rather to pay a modest deference to the judgment of the ancient and modern Church, than to lean to one's own understanding ?

I MUST take notice of what the Modest Pleader here pretends, that "this Query may be retorted with irresistible strength." After he has thus prepared his reader, let us hear what his words come to. It is thus, "whether it be not a wise man's part, rather to think too highly than too meanly of God the Father ; and to be tender of his incommunicable honour." To which I answer, that God the Father has determined this question already, by his commands laid upon us to honour his Son even as himself ; and by his giving no particular cautions against honouring him too much. If we err on this part, in honouring the Son too highly, (without the least thought of dishonouring the Father,) we err on the right side, as erring on the side of the precept ; whereas the other is erring against the precept. This I urged before ; and neither the Modest Pleader nor yourself take the least notice of it. However, I rested my argument upon this further consideration, that the modest side is the safest to err in : and I thought a debt of modesty very proper to be paid to the ancient Church, and to all the modern Churches ; unless you had plain demonstration for your dissent.

But the Modest Pleader says, a "modest deference should be paid to the express declarations and commands of Scripture, rather than to the additions of any human and fallible judgment." But where is his modesty to call his unscriptural inventions by the venerable name of Scripture ? The question is not, whether express Scripture ought to be obeyed : but whether, what a few confident men call express Scripture, and all the Churches of Christendom, early and late, take to be directly contrary to express Scripture, is to be admitted as an article of faith.

It is very strange that you should so often speak of human and fallible judgment, and never consider that the judgment you make is human and fallible, as well as the rest. Are you, in particular, privileged from errors, or blessed with the gift of infallibility ? Since we are comparing human with human, and fallible with fallible judgment ; think it possible that many, and great, and wise men may have judged right, and that a few may have judged wrong. There is a presumption, a strong probability, to say no more, against you : nor will any thing less than demonstration be sufficient to support your pretences, in opposition to the current judgment of the Christian world. In modesty, the novelists ought to pay a deference to wiser men than themselves; and not presume that they have Scripture on their side, till they are able to prove it. But of this I said enough in my Defence^f; and you make no answer. You have nothing more, under this Query, but repetition of your preface; which I have answered in its place. Only I must take notice of one very peculiar piece of grave banter: your accusing me as appealing to the passions of the readers, only for retorting upon you your own declamation, in somewhat stronger words; as I had a better cause to support them. Who was it that first called upon us to "consider, what to answer at the great day, &c.?" So solemn an appeal, upon such trifling pretences as you had, obliged me to remind you of the infinitely greater risk you run, in unaccountably denying your Lord and God. You tell us also of names of reproach; at the same time reproaching the Church of God, and the most eminent lights of it in all ages, as Tritheists, or Sabellians, or Scholastics, or as contentious men, that built their faith on metaphysical speculations. It seems, you can feel any thing that looks like a reproach upon yourselves; at the same time causelessly dealing about hard names, and most injurious reflections upon all around you. Learn to be modest, or at least commonly civil to others, and you may meet with suitable returns. We shall not suffer you to run on with your charge of Sabellianism, Tritheism, scholastic jargon, &c., which you cannot make good against us; without letting the world know something of a charge of Arianism, which we can make good against you, having often done it with the force and evidence of demonstration. As to the charge I made (p. 558, vol. i.) relating to your resting your cause, in the last result, solely upon metaphysics, though you are pleased to call it calumny, there is not a syllable of it but what is strictly true, and may be undeniably proved from Dr. Clarke's own pieces, and yours. I except one or two particulars, which I remember to have met with only in Mr. Emlyn's Tracts^g. I hope you will not think him an ignorant writer, nor one that is used to allege such reasons only as his adversaries should desire or wish for. He has long studied this controversy, and, as I conceive understands it better than some who have succeeded him in it, and who have been content sometimes to borrow from him. But that by the way: I still continue to affirm, having proved it more than once, that in the last result your doctrine stands upon metaphysics only, and such pretences as I mentioned in the place above cited. They are what you constantly retreat to, when pressed: and without them you cannot advance one considerable step towards what you aim at, with all your pretended proofs from Scripture or antiquity.

^f Vol. i. p. 541, 542.

^g Emlyn's Tracts, p. 165.

QUERY XXXI.

Whether any thing less than clear and evident demonstration, on the side of Arianism, ought to move a wise and good man, against so great appearances of truth on the side of orthodoxy, from Scripture, reason, and antiquity; and whether we may not wait long before we find such demonstration?

WHAT the Modest Pleader here pretends against the charge of Arianism has been abundantly answered more than once^h. And as to his cavil against charging consequences in this case, I have distinctly considered it elsewhereⁱ.

Among all the charges I made, you will hardly meet with any such general charge as is here brought against me, of “subverting all science, and all religion,” without shewing how or why. When I make a charge, I signify upon what I found it, and give you the liberty of defending yourselves if you can. This other method of general scandal, thrown out in such a way as to bar a man the privilege of self-defence, is of all the most ungenerous, mean, and detestable. All I shall say to it is this; that I have demonstration before me, that if the man had had any thing he could have mentioned without exposing himself, he would certainly have produced it at full length: and therefore, I presume, his general charge about nobody knows what, may reasonably pass for a bounce extraordinary, words and no more.

After a deal of trifling repetition, you are at length pleased to ease your reader and me; leaving me some words of my own, which stand better in their place. You do well to return me back the good advice I gave you, which you had made no use of. As to the honest reader, I desire him to take notice, that every thing material in this Query is entirely dropped: no demonstration given of the new scheme, nor so much as pretended; no answer to five particulars which required satisfaction. As you begin, so

^h In my Defence, and in this Second Defence, and particularly in my Supplement to the Case of Arian ⁱ Supplement, vol. ii. p. 664, &c.

Subscription, vol. ii. pp. 663, 664, 694, 695.

you end, with evasions and subterfuges, shiftings and disguises ; perpetually running off from the true point in question, and wrapping yourself up in clouds and darkness ; studying and contriving all possible ways to perplex rather than instruct, and fearing nothing so much as to have the issue of the cause put upon a clear foot, or left to a fair hearing. It might reasonably have been expected, while you write under cover, that you would have taken quite another method : and give me leave to judge so justly, or at least so kindly of you, as to believe you would have done it, had you been left entirely to your own counsels. I am not such a stranger to you, or so unacquainted with your style, your manner, your diction, (in many private papers, as you well know, besides what you have published,) as not to perceive, that many things, which I have here answered as yours, yet never came from your pen. I cannot indeed critically distinguish in all cases, where you begin to speak, or where you end : but, in the general, where there is any thing that looks of a more ingenuous strain, and is most like what one would expect from a plain, honest man ; that I conceive certainly to be all your own. Indeed, you have interpretatively made the whole yours, by lending your name, I should rather say your person, to it : for you are personated all the way through. You will therefore the more easily excuse me for directing myself generally to you, even in those parts where I am sensible I have had to do with another man.

One thing I complain of, and that is of the disingenuous use every where made of writing under concealment, and without a name. I should have had a great deal less trouble in examining the Reply, had it been to be owned by any man of character, and his name set to it. He would have written, very probably, with more care, had his reputation been staked upon it ; he would have cut off many impertinences, would not have attempted to put so many gross and palpable abuses upon the readers, nor have undertaken to defend what was at first sight plainly indefensible. He would have selected such things, and such only, as might bear some colour at least, and appear of real weight : such, in a word, as might become a scholar, a man of sense, and a man of probity, to urge, and nothing more. And then I am sure, that both the Reply itself, and my labour in examining it, would have been very much shortened : and our readers would have been more agreeably and more usefully entertained.

I shall conclude with observing, how easy a thing it may be to reduce this controversy into a small compass ; if men would but come sincerely to it, and keep close to the principal points in question. The most convenient method, and most natural order of inquiry, would, I conceive, be this following one :

- I. What the doctrine to be examined is.
- II. Whether it be possible ?
- III. Whether it be true ?

I.

The first question is, what the doctrine is ; which lies in these particulars :

1. That the Father is God, (in the strict sense of necessarily existing, as opposed to precarious existence,) and the Son God, and the Holy Ghost God, in the same sense of the word God.
2. That the Father is not the Son, nor the Son the Father, nor the Holy Ghost either Father or Son : they are distinct, so that one is not the other ; that is, as we now term it, they are three distinct Persons, and two of them eternally referred up to one.
3. These three, however distinct enough to be three Persons, are yet united enough to be one God.

II.

The second question is, whether the doctrine be possible ? All that relates to this question is resolvable into three other questions :

1. Whether there can be three Persons necessarily existing ?
2. Whether three such Persons can be one God, in the nature of the thing itself, or upon the foot of mere natural reason ?
3. Whether they can be one God, consistently with any data in Scripture, any thing plainly laid down in sacred writ ; as, suppose, subordination, mission, generation ?

If any one of these questions can be determined in the negative with sufficient certainty, then the doctrine, as here stated, is not possible : but if none of these questions can be with any certainty determined in the negative, the doctrine then must be allowed to be possible.

1. The first question cannot be determined in the negative ; for, after frequent trials so to determine it, no one has been yet found able to do it : all the pretended proofs of it are sophistical ; they may be, they have been, shewn to be so.
2. As to the second question, no one has hitherto been able to determine it in the negative ; though often attempted. And there is this reason to be given why it never can be done ; that no certain principle of individuation ever has or can be fixed : upon which alone the resolution of that question, on the foot of mere natural reason, entirely depends.

3. As to the third question, there is no determining it in the negative ; because it is certain that subordination or mission may be consistent with equality of nature ; as is seen even in men. And if it be pleaded, that such subordination is not consistent with the unity, (though it might with the equality,) our ideas of the unity are too imperfect to reason solidly upon : nor can any man prove that every kind of unity must be either too close to admit of any subordination, or else too loose to make the Persons one God. How shall it be shewn, that the distinction may not be great enough to answer the subordination, &c. and yet the union close enough to make the Persons one God ? Our faculties are not sufficient for these things. If eternal generation be objected to as a thing impossible, the objectors should shew that there cannot be any eternal reference or relation of one to the other, as head, fountain, or centre : which is the sum of what eternal generation amounts to ; and which (though often attempted) could never yet be proved to carry any thing contradictory in it. Not to mention that could it be really proved to be absurd or contradictory, yet the main doctrine might possibly stand independent of it ; among such at least as scruple not to throw off the ancients, and confine the dispute to Scripture alone : which is not so clear or full for the eternal generation, as it is for the eternal existence of the Son. Upon the whole, since the doctrine can never be proved to be impossible ; it must be allowed to be possible : and now,

III.

The third and last question is, whether the doctrine be true ? For the resolving of which, we must have recourse to Scripture and antiquity. Whoever undertakes to debate this question should forbear every topic drawn from the nature of the thing ; because such arguments belong only to the other question, whether the doctrine be possible : and, in all reason, the possibility should be presupposed in all our disputes from Scripture or Fathers.

By what I have here observed, it appears that the controversy of the Trinity may be easily brought to a short issue, and be comprised in two sheets of paper. The strength of the adversaries most certainly lies in the question of the possibility: and if they have any thing considerable to urge, it may be despatched in a very few words; one demonstration (if any one can be found) being as good as a hundred.

If none can be found, I doubt not but all reasonable men will immediately give up the point in respect of Scripture and antiquity; which have been so often and so unanswerably proved to be on our side.

My hearty concern for truth, on whatever side it may be conceived to lie, and my desire to submit every doctrine (not excepting even those which we call fundamental) to a free and fair trial, makes me willing to offer those hints; which may be useful to our adversaries, if there be any real strength in the cause they have undertaken. I am not afraid of pointing out to them the shortest and readiest way of confuting us, if there be any way of doing it. Let them try the strength of their philosophy, or metaphysics, when they please: I desire only to have the cause put upon clear and solid reasoning, upon firm principles pursued by regular and just inferences or deductions. And let the world see whether any modern improvements in philosophy, logic, or metaphysics, can raise Arianism up, in these latter days, which never could be supported, formerly, by all that human wit and learning could invent or contrive for it.

ANSWER
TO THE POSTSCRIPT.

YOU conclude with a Postscript relating to Dr. Calamy : whom you first reproach very roundly, as one that has been throughout misled, by trusting to my citations and comments. You ought to beg his pardon for this unrighteous report ; which was not made in the fear of God, nor under a sense of the common obligations of humanity or justice towards man. If I should report that you had been frequently (I do not say throughout) misled by Dr. Clarke's citations and comments, I should say no more than I have given abundant proof of : but what proof have you given that Dr. Calamy has been throughout misled by mine ? I know not whether you will be able to give a single example of it. However it had been but just, rather to have said that he had been misled by trusting to his own judgment, concurring with mine. For it is plain enough that the Doctor has examined for himself : and if he has fallen, in a great measure, into the same way of thinking with me, it is not as trusting to my citations or comments, but as approving the grounds upon which they stand. You had the less reason to reproach him as having been throughout misled by me, when the main design of your Postscript is to intimate to the world that he differs from me in one part of his scheme, which you think very considerable : an argument, sure, that he did not take things upon trust from others ; but considered and examined carefully, before he gave into them.

The second citation which you produce from him, to intimate to me (as you pretend) the consequence of my notion, relates not to my notion ; nor was it written with any such view, but with regard to quite another notion^a. The unaccountable part you have here acted, in citing it, and tacking it most unrighteously to the former, must make your very friends blush for you, or stand astonished at you. Whether it was done with design, or was purely blunder, the author of the Postscript (for I would gladly hope it was not you) best knows. Suppose it owing to haste and carelessness; yet even want of care, in charges of this kind, will be apt to cast some blemish upon a writer's honesty or probity.

^a See Dr. Calamy's Sermons, p. 345.

I lay hold on this opportunity of thanking Dr. Calamy for his learned and useful labours in defence of our common faith: and it is with pleasure I take notice of the seasonable stand which he and many others (the most eminent and most considerable men of the Dissenting way) have made, in opposition to the threatening defection, and to preserve their flocks in time of danger. If he has any where differed from me, in less material points, holding the foundation sure, the doctrine of a real and coequal Trinity; he is at liberty to follow his own judgment, and to defend the main articles in such a way as appears to him most reasonable, and freest from embarrassments. I will first suppose that he really differs from me in the point of subordination, (though, I conceive, he does not,) yet what advantage do you propose to reap from it, that you should now so plume yourself upon it? Do not deceive yourself in this matter: if Dr. Calamy has made any concession of this kind, beyond what I have thought proper to do, he will still be able to maintain his ground against Dr. Clarke and his adherents, both from Scripture and antiquity. As to Scripture, allowing any natural subordination of Christ, as God, to be inconsistent with his essential Divinity; the question then will be, whether your proofs of any such natural subordination (distinguished from economical) are plainer, stronger, or fuller than the proofs of the essential Divinity. Here, I conceive, he will have the advantage very evidently, both in the number and the strength of his proofs. Your pretended voluntary generation he will reject as an unscriptural dream of human invention: your Scripture proofs of the necessary existence of the Father will stand upon no better a foot than his Scripture proofs of the necessary existence of the Son. Your pretences from the prepositions of, by, through, or in, he will resolve into economical order: and you will not be able to prove from 1 Cor. viii. 6. that God the Son is included in the all things which are of the Father. Metaphysics you will be ashamed to offer, having so often pretended to condemn them in us. All your little quibbles about derived and underived, about cause and effect, about acts of the will, about identical substance, identical lives, and the like, will drop at once. In short, when antiquity is set aside, you will find it extremely difficult to make it appear that the Scripture account of subordination necessarily infers any natural subordination, or may not possibly be understood of economical only; as some writers of note seem to have understood, as high as the sixth century^b, if not higher.

As to antiquity, you will be able to prove a natural subordination, very plainly, from the earliest Fathers: but not more plainly than Dr. Calamy will be able to prove the consubstantiality, coeternity, omnipresence, omniscience, and other Divine attributes of God the Son: not more plainly than he will prove from the ancients, that the Father and Son are one God, (one God most high,) that creature worship is idolatry, that no inferior God must be admitted, and the like. The question then will be, (since the ancients, upon the present hypothesis, must be said to have contradicted themselves and each other,) I say, the question will be, whether you have more and stronger testimonies for one part of the contradiction, than the Doctor will have for the other part. Here again he will manifestly have the advantage over you, in the number and strength of his testimonies: and he may justly plead, either to have the evidence of antiquity set aside as null; or that the many tenets, wherein the Fathers agree with his scheme, be admitted as more considerable than the few tenets wherein they agree with you. Thus, so far as I apprehend, you and your friends will be really no gainers by Dr. Calamy's concessions; or by throwing off the subordination, as impossible and contradictory on both sides.

Nevertheless, I am fully and unalterably persuaded, that the true and right way is, to admit the subordination, and to assert the essential Divinity of all the three Persons together with it. Both parts appear to be founded in Scripture, and were undoubtedly believed by the ancients in general: and there is no repugnancy between them, more than what lies in mistaken fancy or imagination. I know not whether Dr. Calamy might not pay too great a regard to Dr. Clarke's partial representation of this matter; and so take Bp. Pearson's and Bp. Bull's sentiments something otherwise than they intended them. I observe, that he admits eternal generation, necessary emanation, and natural order; which is, in other words, admitting all that is intended by priority of order or subordination. The Son proceeds from the Father; the Father from none: this is the difference of natural order which the ancients, and after them those two excellent moderns speak of; viz. that the Son is referred up to the Father as up to a Head or Fountain, and not vice versa. This reference or relation of the Son to the Father, we call subordination: and this is all that is natural, the rest is economical. If Dr. Clarke has represented subordination otherwise, pretending Bp. Pearson's or Bp. Bull's authority for it, he has done unfairly: and perhaps Dr. Calamy intended no more than to condemn the notion so represented^d. Which is not condemning either Bp. Pearson's, or Bp. Bull's, or my doctrine; but something else which others have invented for us.

^b See Jobius apud Photium Cod. ccxxii. p. 624, 625. ^c Sermons, p. 20, 49, 263.

I know not indeed whether you will allow me to put myself in; because I am represented as teaching a real coordination, and a verbal subordination only. But I am very certain that the same objection, or rather cavil, lies equally against Bp. Pearson or Bp. Bull; and you are very sensible of it: only you are disposed to serve a turn by making some use of those great names. They both asserted a coequality, in as full and strong terms as I any where do: which coequality you are pleased to miscall, in me, coordination; assuming a strange liberty of altering the sense of words, and affecting to speak a new language, to make way for a new faith.

To conclude; if Dr. Calamy and I really differ, (as I think we do not,) we agree however in the main points, and much better than our late revivers of Arianism agree among themselves. And I doubt not but that by the united labours of the true friends of our common faith, (with God's blessing upon them,) the vain attempts of our new Arians and Eunomians will be defeated and baffled, (as were formerly those of their predecessors,) and that the Catholic doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity, that sacred depositum of the Church of Christ, will be preserved whole and entire, and handed down, as to us, so to our latest posterity, through all generations.

^d " Whosoever will be at the pains " to compare the several passages " cited by Dr. Clarke, as they stand " in the places whence they are taken,
" with other clear and express pas" sages of our learned author, (Bishop " Bull,) and with the whole scope and " purport of his reasonings for the " truth of the Nicene doctrine, must " evidently perceive that these are all " placed in quite another light than in " the book referred to: that some are " directly contrary to the author's

" true meaning, and to his design in " writing; and most of the rest incon- " sistent, at least, with the same, as " the Doctor very well knew." Nel- " son's Life of Bull, p. 326, 327.

END OF VOL. II.

1
2 3
4 5 6 7 8 9 10 11 12 13 14 15 16 17 18 19 20 21 22
23 24 25 26 27 28 29 30 31 32 33 34 35 36 37 38 39 40 41 42 43 44 45 46 47 48
49 50 51 52 53 54
55 56 57 58 59 60 61
62
63
64
65 66
67 68
69
70 71 72 73
74
75 76
77 78
79 80
81 82 83
84
85 86 87
88 89 90
91 92
93
94
95
96
97
98
99 100

