

---

This is a reproduction of a library book that was digitized by Google as part of an ongoing effort to preserve the information in books and make it universally accessible.

Google™ books

<https://books.google.com>

609

יהוה

INSTITVTIO THEOLOGICA
ANDOVER FVNDA TA MDCCCVII.

ΑΚΡΟΤΩΝ

ΧΡΥΣΤΟΥ

1835

THE WORKS

OF

THE REV. DANIEL WATERLAND, D.D.

FORMERLY

MASTER OF MAGDALENE COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE, CANON OF WINDSOR, AND ARCHDEACON OF MIDDLESEX.

TO WHICH IS PREFIXED A REVIEW

OF THE

AUTHOR'S LIFE AND WRITINGS,

BY

WILLIAM VAN MILDERT, D.D.

LORD BISHOP OF LLANDAFF.

---

THIRD EDITION, WITH COPIOUS INDEXES.

---

IN SIX VOLUMES.

VOL. III.

---

OXFORD:

AT THE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

M. DCCC. LVI.

21, 3/6.

CONTENTS
OF
THE THIRD VOLUME.

---

A FARTHER VINDICATION OF CHRIST'S DIVINITY....	Page 1
A CRITICAL HISTORY OF THE ATHANASIAN CREED ....	97
AN ANSWER TO SOME QUERIES PRINTED AT EXON, RELATING TO THE ARIAN CONTROVERSY .....	273
THE SCRIPTURES AND THE ARIANS COMPARED .....	285
FIVE LETTERS TO MR. STAUNTON.....	307
A DISSERTATION UPON THE ARGUMENT A PRIORI FOR PROVING THE EXISTENCE OF A FIRST CAUSE .....	321
THE IMPORTANCE OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE HOLY TRINITY .....	389

A FURTHER VINDICATION
OF
CHRIST'S DIVINITY:
IN ANSWER TO A PAMPHLET,
ENTITLED,
OBSERVATIONS ON DR. WATERLAND'S SECOND DEFENCE.

---

MAGNA EST VERITAS ET PRÆVALEBIT.

---

THE INTRODUCTION.

---

SINCE the publication of my Second Defence in the cause of our blessed Lord's Divinity, I have been waiting to see what further attempts we were to have from the Arians. I perceive they are still resolute in their opposition to the faith of Christ, blaspheming his Godhead, impugning his worship, and despising every kind offer of instruction, or exhortation, to convince or reclaim them. I have the satisfaction however to observe, that they daily give ground more and more; that the defensive part, which they begun with, is, in a manner, yielded up; their main scheme appearing so gross, and so untenable, that they themselves are afraid or ashamed to own it. As to the offensive, which is now all that they are willing to abide by, they hold it on still as far as they are able: and yet even here one may observe, that, as to matter of argument, their attacks are as harmless as a man might wish; only there is a certain fierceness or bitterness of spirit still remaining, and which seems to increase, as their strength decreases; and which perhaps may grow upon them more and more to the last, as is natural and common in such cases. But to come to the point.

Their first effort to renew the contest appeared under the title of Remarks, &c. by one Philaethes Cantabrigiensis, printed for J. Noon. Having no manner of acquaintance, that I know of, with the man under that conceited name; and finding little in the piece more than tedious repetition and studied confusion, I slighted it, as apprehending myself not at all obliged to take notice of it.

Waiting a while longer, there comes out another pamphlet, entitled, Observations, &c. and by the Author of the Reply to my First Defence, printed for James Knapton, &c. which when I saw, I immediately concluded as I had some leisure upon my hands, that here was a call to me to set pen to paper once more. For however low an opinion I might have of the performance, after reading it, yet the Author of the Reply, when he has any thing to say, and while our readers are not quite weary, may always command my more especial notice. Whether it be Dr. Clarke, or whether it be Mr. Jackson, (for though it be doubted which, all agree that it lies between them,) they are both men whom I must attend to: one, as he is the principal in the cause; the other, as he is second, and had the first hand in committing my Queries to the press, engaging me ever after in the public service. Let but either of those two gentlemen stand accountable in the opinion of the world, (I mean no more,) for any foul play on their side, as I by setting my name am answerable for any on mine, and then I shall think myself upon even terms with them in that respect: and as to any other, I humbly conceive, I have no reason to fear their gaining any advantage.

The author of the Observations begins with giving us his judgment of his own performance; assuring his reader, in the most solemn manner, that the Observations contain in them no argument, nor branch of any argument, but what, upon the most serious consideration and careful review, appears to him strictly and perfectly conclusive. Thus far perhaps may be true: for I know not how things may appear to him, nor how defective he may be in judgment. But I wish he could have added, no representations but what, upon calm examination, he had found to be strictly just; no reports, but what he knew to be true; no charges upon his adversary, but what he believed to be honest and upright; no personal reflections beyond what he had clear and sufficient grounds for. But I pass on to his book.

He has cast his work into fourteen observations; the weightiest, no doubt, that the whole compass of the controversy could afford. I shall consider what to say to them, after I have given the reader some brief hints of the past and present state of the dispute between us. It should be remembered, that this gentleman at his first setting out, and all along till now, undertook to answer queries, to satisfy objections, to assail difficulties, to reconcile the new scheme to itself, to Scripture, to antiquity, and to reason; that so having first cleared his own doctrine in every part, beyond any thing that could be done for the faith received, he might then with a better face disturb the peace of the Church, and plead the more earnestly (but modestly withal) for a thorough change. This was what he undertook: and had he been as able to execute, as he was forward to project, I profess sincerely, he should not have wanted any encouragement, or even thanks of mine; so far should I have been from giving him further molestation. But it hath happened to him, (as it ordinarily must to every man, who undertakes a business before he has seen into it,) that he has met with many difficulties, more than he at first apprehended, and is by no means able to surmount them.

To mention a few particulars, out of a great number:

1. He has not been able to clear his scheme of the unsupportable charge of making two Gods, one supreme and another inferior<sup>a</sup>.

2. He has not been able to get over the difficulty of supposing God the Son and God the Holy Ghost two creatures<sup>b</sup>, in direct opposition to Scripture and antiquity. He has indeed avoided giving them the name of creature, which yet can contribute but little satisfaction to as many as plainly see how the thing is otherwise fully and repeatedly owned under other names<sup>c</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> See my First and Second Defence, Query v. vol. i. and ii.

<sup>b</sup> See my First and Second Defence, Query xi. xii. vol. i. and ii.

3. He has not been able to defend or excuse creature-worship, so fully condemned by Scripture, and by the ancient Jews and Christians, with one voice<sup>d</sup>.

4. Nor hath he been able to disprove or elude the proofs brought from Scripture and antiquity, of the divine worship due to Christ<sup>e</sup>.

5. He hath not been able to salve, or so much as to colour over a notorious flaw in his scheme, relating to the foundation of the worship of Christ; taking up principles there which can suit only with the Socinian scheme, at other times espousing the Arian, though it be impossible for both to stand together<sup>f</sup>.

6. He has not been able to give any tolerable account of the divine titles, attributes, and honours being ascribed to a creature<sup>g</sup>.

7. He has given no satisfaction at all about Christ being Creator and creature too; not being able to elude the proofs of the former, nor to reconcile both parts together<sup>h</sup>.

8. Though he set out with pompous pretences to antiquity, he cannot make them good: but it is proved upon him, nor can he elude the proof, that in thirteen instances of doctrine, containing the main branches of his scheme, he runs directly counter to all Catholic antiquity<sup>i</sup>.

9. He has not been able to vindicate Dr. Clarke's quotations from the ancients: which have been proved, all of them, to be

<sup>c</sup> See my Supplement to the Case, &c. vol. ii. p. 324. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 642, &c.

<sup>d</sup> First and Second Defence, Query xvi. xvii. vol. i. and ii.

<sup>e</sup> See my First and Second Defence, Query xvi. xviii. vol. i. and ii.

<sup>f</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 434, &c.

Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 676, &c.

<sup>g</sup> First and Second Defence, Query x. xi. vol. i. and ii. Sermons vii. viii. vol. ii.

<sup>h</sup> First and Second Defence, Query xii. vol. i. and ii.

<sup>i</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 497. Second, vol. ii. p. 729, &c.

either not pertinent, or not justly quoted, or not fairly translated, or not rightly understood<sup>k</sup>.

The author of the Reply having thus failed in the main business, I might reasonably decline any further dispute with him. He is so sensible of the lameness of his former performances in the defensive, that he is now pleased to quit that part entirely, and to attempt it no longer. My Queries remain queries still; and the oracle shuts up in sullen silence. All that I contended for seems to be tacitly yielded up to me; and I stand in quiet and peaceable possession of it. What room then is there for any further dispute? Yes, there is room still, this gentleman thinks, to act upon the offensive: and since he has been so unhappy as to give no satisfaction in respect of his own scheme, he hopes however to be even with us in some measure, by declaring himself still dissatisfied with ours. He had many objections formerly, which he has been pleased to drop one after another in the course of the debate: and he has some left still, which he resolves to abide by; though the force even of these few remaining have been already so broken and blunted, that were it not for the ignorance of some readers, and the convenient use of misrepresentations, misreports, flouts, and scoffs, and an assuming positiveness, in lieu of a just reply, he could do nothing with them.

For the benefit therefore of weak readers, who may be moved by weak things, and for the sake of truth and godliness, and in regard to the character of the men I am engaged with, I proceed to examine the Observations. The author has taken his own method; and so will I mine, as to me seems most proper, and most convenient for the reader. As his work is a rhapsody of independent thoughts, thrown under heads, at discretion: and as the author in the composition observes very little coherence, but jumps from thing to thing, blending matters together as it happened, or as came into his head, I shall not think it necessary to follow him all the way in his rambling chase. But some method I must have too; and it shall be this, to rank his most material observations under several heads, viz. False Charges, Misrepresentations, Flouts and Scoffs, &c. And these heads shall make so many chapters.

<sup>k</sup> First and Second Defence, Query xxvii. vol. i. and ii.

A FURTHER VINDICATION
OF CHRIST'S DIVINITY.

---

CHAP. I.

False and injurious Charges contained in the Observations.

1. IN the list of false charges, I shall first place one that stands in page 118th, as being a very remarkable one, and proper to be first spoken to, by way of introduction to what shall come after. The words of the Observator are,

“ Not so much as one single writer in the three first centuries — has presumed to teach, but, on the contrary, they would all have judged it the highest blasphemy either to say or think, (which is the very point in which Dr. Waterland's whole doctrine centres,) that God the Father Almighty, even the one God and Father of all, who is above all, has no natural and necessary supremacy of authority and dominion at all; has no other supremacy of authority and dominion, than what is founded merely in mutual agreement and voluntary concert; but has, naturally and necessarily, a priority of order only.”

Here is a high charge, a charge of blasphemy laid to me, and in the name too of the Ante-Nicene Fathers, whose memory will be ever precious, and whose judgment I respect and reverence. Now, that the reader may the better judge of this extraordinary paragraph of the Observator, I must take care to inform him how the case stands between him and me in regard to the supremacy. In the preface to my Second Defence, and again in the book, I intimated over and over, in as plain words as I could speak, that provided the Son's necessary existence be secured, that he be acknowledged not to exist precariously, or contingently, but necessarily, that his coeternity and consubstantiality be maintained, his creative powers, his infinite perfections, his being no creature, but one God with the Father, and the like; that then the supremacy shall be no matter of dispute with me. Any supremacy of the Father that is consistent with these certain, plain, Catholic tenets, always and universally believed by the churches of Christ; I say, any supremacy consistent herewith, I hold, assert, and maintain: any that is not consistent, I reject, remove, and detest, with all the Christian churches early and late.

The case then, betwixt this gentleman and me, lies thus:

It is agreed, I presume, on both sides, that God the Son is either strictly equal with God the Father, as to all essential perfections, or that he is infinitely inferior to him, as one that does not exist necessarily, must of course be infinitely inferior to another that does.

The equality of nature, it seems, is not consistent with this writer's supremacy; and he readily acknowledges that it is not: but he will maintain however the supremacy at all adventures; which is directly making God the Son naturally subject to the Father, who is therefore his sovereign Lord and Ruler, to reward him if he does well, to punish him if he does amiss, to do with him according to his will and pleasure, as with any other creature. The consequence is, making God the Son a creature; the Jehovah, the true God, and God blessed for ever, &c. a creature, a being that might never have existed, and might cease to exist, if God so pleased. These are the plain certain consequences of this gentleman's scheme, and such the tendency of his doctrine about the supremacy. He urges the supremacy to destroy the equality: I stand by the equality, and insist upon it, that it is consistent with all the supremacy that either Scripture or Catholic Fathers taught. And I have this plain reason to offer, with respect to the Fathers, that while they maintained the supremacy, they maintained also the necessary existence, the coeternity, the consubstantiality of God the Son, and his unity of Godhead with the Father; which points once secured, I am very ready to admit any consistent supremacy. The consequences which Dr. Clarke and his adherents draw from the supremacy, I answer, as the Church of Christ has always done from the time such consequences were pleaded, by admitting a supremacy of order, which is natural, and a supremacy of office, which is economical. The consequences, on the other hand, which we draw against them, as destroying the equality, (so manifestly taught through the whole Scripture and by the primitive churches.) they have never answered, nor can they answer them: which they are so sensible of, that they do not care to have them mentioned, but perpetually disguise, conceal, dissemble them, and keep them out of sight.

I must therefore, in my turn, now tell the objector, that he is the blasphemer, upon the avowed principles of the Ante-Nicene churches; in making God the Father naturally sovereign Lord and Ruler over God the Son and God the Holy Ghost; in reducing both the divine Persons to the condition of creatures, or precarious beings; brought into existence at pleasure, and reducible to non-existence again at pleasure. This is not the doctrine of Scripture or Fathers, but diametrically repugnant to both; is derived from ancient heresies, and is false, wicked, and detestable.

There may be some difficulties objected to the Church's way of reconciling (the Church's way I call it, for such it is, not mine) the equality and supremacy together: but no greater difficulties than what occur in almost every other controversy. They that have seen into the heart of the controversy between Jews and Christians, or between Atheists and Theists, or between Papists and Protestants in some points, or between Calvinists and Arminians, must acknowledge the same thing in every one of them: which is owing to this, that human capacity is finite, and our ignorance of wider compass than our knowledge; and that therefore it is much easier to raise doubts and difficulties, than it is to solve them. But difficulties are one thing, and demonstrations another: and it very ill becomes this gentleman, when he has such large scores of his own, and while he bends under the weight of many insuperable objections, to grow so exceeding flippant, and above measure assuming, upon the strength only of two or three stale cavils, borrowed from ancient heresies.

I should take notice of his wording the charge, about the natural and necessary supremacy of dominion. He gives it out that I have totally disowned and denied that the Father has any, asserting that he has none at all. I think there is a great deal of difference between saying, that the Father has a natural and necessary dominion over the creatures in common with the

Son and Holy Ghost, and saying, that he has no natural supremacy of dominion at all. And this writer could not be ignorant with what iniquity he thus worded the thing, to leave room for a false construction, and to shock and astonish every careless and ignorant reader. However, thus much may be said, that, in strictness, no supremacy of dominion can be natural and necessary, in such a full sense as God's attributes are natural and necessary, eternally and constantly residing in him. All supremacy of dominion supposes an inferior, and commences with the existence of that inferior; and is therefore so far, and so much voluntary, as the creating of an inferior is. But upon the inferior's coming into being, then indeed commences the supremacy; which is an extrinsic relation, no essential attribute: only, thus far it may be called natural and necessary, as being necessary ex hypothesi, or, upon that supposition, as being a relation founded upon the natural and necessary perfections of the Godhead, which set it above the creatures, and make an infinite disparity of nature between that and them. So that, after all, this superabundant eagerness and vehemence for a natural supremacy over God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, is only contending, in other words, for a disparity or inferiority of nature in those two Persons: and this is the sole meaning of appointing them a governor. The blasphemy I am charged with, is only the denying that they have naturally any ruler and governor. I venture once and again to repeat, that they have not, nor ever could have: and this I maintain upon the clear and undoubted principles of all the ancient and modern churches.

This gentleman may call it, if he pleases, (words are free,) my wonderful fiction, p. 7, my new and unheard of fiction, p. 23, entirely of my inventing, p. 28, my own invention, p. 46, 52, 100. If he really thinks so, I should advise him to read the ancients; or if that be too much, to read only Bishop Pearson, or Bishop Bull, to inform himself better: or if he does not believe it, and yet says it, I should entreat him to correct that evil habit of romancing, that outrageous method of reviling, and to learn the due government of his mind. I have invented nothing, have coined no new notion, but have plainly and sincerely followed what the ancients, with one voice, have led me into, and the two excellent moderns, just mentioned, have taught and maintained upon the same bottom. Bishop Bull may be consulted at large: I shall quote one passage of Bishop Pearson, because short: "The Word, that is, Christ as God, hath the supreme and uni“versal dominion of the world<sup>a</sup>.” Which is to all intents and purposes denying the Father's supremacy as much as I have ever done. But what a pass are things come to, that the known standing doctrine of all Christian churches, ancient and modern, must be treated as a novelty, as a fiction or invention of mine! If the reader desires a specimen of the ancient doctrine in this point, he may turn to the quotations in my First Defence, (vol. i. p. 443.) which express the Catholic doctrine, and to which all the Fathers are conformable. So much in answer to the charge of blasphemy.

Whether this gentleman can ward off that very charge, or prevent its returning on his own head, may deserve his consideration. The good Christians of old would have stopped their ears against such blasphemy as his tenets amount to. All reclaim against it: some directly and expressly, as often as they pronounce any two, or the whole three, to be one God, or one substance, of one dominion, of one power or glory: and the rest consequentially, by maintaining the necessary existence, consubstantiality, coeternity, or other divine attributes of the Son or Spirit.

I have now done with the first charge; which I have dwelt the longer upon, because it runs in a manner through the book; and the answering it here in the entrance will give light to what follows:

II. A second false charge upon me is in these words: “Neglecting therefore the reason upon which the Scripture expressly founds the honour we are to pay to Christ, the Doctor builds it entirely upon another foundation, on which the Scripture never builds it, viz. on this, that by him God created all things,” p. 7.

I shall say nothing here of the absurdity of founding the worship of Christ in the manner this author does, by tacking Socinianism and Arianism together, though entirely repugnant to each other, as I have observed elsewhere<sup>b</sup>: but as to the charge brought against me, of founding Christ's worship as is here said; I must beg leave to confute it by producing my own words. “I found the Son's title to worship upon the dignity of his Person; his creative powers declared in John i. and elsewhere; his being  $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$  from the beginning; and his preserving and upholding all things, (according to Coloss. i. 16, 17. and “Heb. i.<sup>c</sup>”

<sup>a</sup> Pearson on the Creed, p. 188. Oxf. edit. 1847.

<sup>b</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 434. Second

Defence, vol. ii. p. 676.

<sup>c</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 434.

Son and Holy Ghost, and saying, that he has no natural supremacy of dominion at all. And this writer could not be ignorant with what iniquity he thus worded the thing, to leave room for a false construction, and to shock and astonish every careless and ignorant reader. However, thus much may be said, that, in strictness, no supremacy of dominion can be natural and necessary, in such a full sense as God's attributes are natural and necessary, eternally and constantly residing in him. All supremacy of dominion supposes an inferior, and commences with the existence of that inferior; and is therefore so far, and so much voluntary, as the creating of an inferior is. But upon the inferior's coming into being, then indeed commences the supremacy; which is an extrinsic relation, no essential attribute: only, thus far it may be called natural and necessary, as being necessary ex hypothesi, or, upon that supposition, as being a relation founded upon the natural and necessary perfections of the Godhead, which set it above the creatures, and make an infinite disparity of nature between that and them. So that, after all, this superabundant eagerness and vehemence for a natural supremacy over God the Son, and God the Holy Ghost, is only contending, in other words, for a disparity or inferiority of nature in those two Persons: and this is the sole meaning of appointing them a governor. The blasphemy I am charged with, is only the denying that they have naturally any ruler and governor. I venture once and again to repeat, that they have not, nor ever could have: and this I maintain upon the clear and undoubted principles of all the ancient and modern churches.

This gentleman may call it, if he pleases, (words are free,) my wonderful fiction, p. 7, my new and unheard of fiction, p. 23, entirely of my inventing, p. 28, my own invention, p. 46, 52, 100. If he really thinks so, I should advise him to read the ancients; or if that be too much, to read only Bishop Pearson, or Bishop Bull, to inform himself better: or if he does not believe it, and yet says it, I should entreat him to correct that evil habit of romancing, that outrageous method of reviling, and to learn the due government of his mind. I have invented nothing, have coined no new notion, but have plainly and sincerely followed what the ancients, with one voice, have led me into, and the two excellent moderns, just mentioned, have taught and maintained upon the same bottom. Bishop Bull may be consulted at large: I shall quote one passage of Bishop Pearson, because short: "The Word, that is, Christ as God, hath the supreme and uni“versal dominion of the world<sup>a</sup>.” Which is to all intents and purposes denying the Father's supremacy as much as I have ever done. But what a pass are things come to, that the known standing doctrine of all Christian churches, ancient and modern, must be treated as a novelty, as a fiction or invention of mine! If the reader desires a specimen of the ancient doctrine in this point, he may turn to the quotations in my First Defence, (vol. i. p. 443.) which express the Catholic doctrine, and to which all the Fathers are conformable. So much in answer to the charge of blasphemy.

Whether this gentleman can ward off that very charge, or prevent its returning on his own head, may deserve his consideration. The good Christians of old would have stopped their ears against such blasphemy as his tenets amount to. All reclaim against it: some directly and expressly, as often as they pronounce any two, or the whole three, to be one God, or one substance, of one dominion, of one power or glory: and the rest consequentially, by maintaining the necessary existence, consubstantiality, coeternity, or other divine attributes of the Son or Spirit.

I have now done with the first charge; which I have dwelt the longer upon, because it runs in a manner through the book; and the answering it here in the entrance will give light to what follows:

II. A second false charge upon me is in these words: “Neglecting therefore the reason upon which the Scripture expressly founds the honour we are to pay to Christ, the Doctor builds it entirely upon another foundation, on which the Scripture never builds it, viz. on this, that by him God created all things,” p. 7.

I shall say nothing here of the absurdity of founding the worship of Christ in the manner this author does, by tacking Socinianism and Arianism together, though entirely repugnant to each other, as I have observed elsewhere<sup>b</sup>: but as to the charge brought against me, of founding Christ's worship as is here said; I must beg leave to confute it by producing my own words. “I found the Son's title to worship upon the dignity of his Person; his creative powers declared in John i. and elsewhere; his being  $\Theta\epsilon\acute{o}s$  from the beginning; and his preserving and upholding all things, (according to Coloss. i. 16, 17. and “Heb. i.<sup>c</sup>)”

<sup>a</sup> Pearson on the Creed, p. 188. Oxf. Defence, vol. ii. p. 676.
edit. 1847.

<sup>c</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 434.

<sup>b</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 434. Second

“ I say, his honour is founded on the intrinsic excellency and “ antecedent dignity of his Person ; whereof the power of judg- “ ment committed is only a further attestation, and a provisional “ security for the payment of his due honour. It did not make “ him worthy, but found him so : and it was added, that such his “ high worth and dignity might appear, &c.<sup>d</sup>”

Is this founding it entirely upon what the author here pre- tends ? As to his pleading, that his way of founding it is scrip- tural, and mine not scriptural : both the parts of his pretext are abundantly confuted in my First and Second Defence<sup>e</sup>, and in a preface to my Sermons<sup>f</sup>.

III. Another false charge is in these words, p. 11. “ Here the “ Doctor directly corrupts the Apostle’s assertion ; not allowing “ him to say (what he expressly does say) that to us there is one “ God, the Father, but only on the reverse, to give the Father “ the style or title of the one God.” He grounds the charge upon what he finds in my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 527, 694. In the first I have these words : “ Yes, he (the Apostle) tells us, that “ the Father, of whom are all things, is the one God, (N.B.) in “ opposition to false ones, to nominal gods and lords : and it is “ plain, that he meant it not in opposition to God the Son, be- “ cause he reckons him God to us.” Rom. ix. 5.

Now where, I pray, is the corruption of what the Apostle asserts ? Or how do I refuse to allow him to say what he does say ? This gentleman, it seems, will shew it by this wise remark ; “ It is one thing to say, that the one God is the Father, of “ whom are all things ; and another thing to say, that the “ Father (though not the Father only) is the one God. Now it is “ evident the Apostle in this text is not reciting the characters “ of the Father, and telling us that he may be styled the one “ God ; but—he is declaring to us who the one God is, viz. the “ Father.” The difference then between us is only this ; that I suppose the Apostle to tell us who is the one God, he supposes him to tell us who the one God is. A notable criticism, to found such a charge, of directly corrupting and disallowing Scripture, upon ! Especially considering that the Greek words (εἰς Θεὸς ὁ Πατήρ) may bear either construction, (if they be really two con- structions,) and either may equally suit with the context. For though the text is not reciting the Father’s characters, not all and ii. Query xvi. xvii. xviii. xix.

<sup>d</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 685.

<sup>e</sup> First and Second Defence, vol. i.

<sup>f</sup> Preface to Eight Sermons, vol. ii.

his characters, yet the design was to point out who is the one God; and he fixes that character upon the Person of the Father, as being primarily and eminently, though not exclusively, the one God.

I have been considering (longer perhaps than it deserves) where the difference lies between asking who is the one God, and asking, who the one God is: and to me it appears so very small and imperceptible, that I can lay no hold of it. I have tried what I could do in another instance: let it be inquired, Who is the apostle of the Gentiles? The answer is, Paul of Tarsus, &c. Well, but inquire, Who the apostle of the Gentiles is? The answer is still the same, Paul of Tarsus, &c. Put the questions into Latin, we are still never the nearer, they are plainly tantamount: at least the difference to me is undiscernible; unless by who, in the latter case, be meant what: upon which supposition, the text we are concerned with should not be translated, To us there is but one God, the Father; but thus; To us the one God is a Father, &c. Perhaps this ingenious gentleman may be able to clear up the matter to satisfaction: but since he has not yet done it, it is plain he was too hasty in charging me at all, but very injurious in running it up to such an extravagant height.

IV. "The doctrine of the Trinity delivered in these words (Eph. iv. 3, 5, 6.) by the Apostle, is so expressly contradictory to Dr. Waterland's scheme, and so impossible to be perverted even into any appearance of consistency with it, that the Doctor finds himself here obliged even fairly to tell us, that St. Paul ought not to have writ thus as he did, &c." p. 17.

This is a charge so malicious and petulant, and withal so groundless, that I cannot well imagine what could transport the man into such excesses. For supposing I had misinterpreted St. Paul, and very widely too, would it amount to a declaration that the Apostle ought not to have writ what he did write? How hard would it be with commentators, if upon every misconstruction of a text, really such, they were to be thus charged with taking upon them to be wiser than the sacred penmen, and to correct the Spirit of God!

After all, if the reader pleases to look into my Defences, he will be surprised to find how innocent the words are, which have been wrought up into this high charge. In my Defence, I say, "Ephes. iv. 6 has been generally understood by the ancients of

“ the whole Trinity : above all, as Father ; through all, by the “ Word ; and in all, by the Holy Ghost.” I refer to Irenæus, Hippolytus, Marius Victorinus, Athanasius, and Jerome, for that construction : I conclude, “ However that be,” (that is, whatever becomes of that interpretation, be it just or otherwise,) yet “ the Father may be reasonably called the one, or only God, “ without the least diminution of the Son’s real divinity<sup>g</sup>.”

In my Second Defence, all I pretend is, that “ I see no “ absurdity<sup>h</sup>” in the interpretation now mentioned : and I observe, that “ we are not there inquiring into the sense of the “ text, but into the sentiments of the ancients upon it ;” and I exhibit their testimonies at large. And to take off the pretended absurdity of that ancient interpretation, in making the one God and Father of all include all the three Persons, I observe how Irenæus (one of the Fathers quoted) reckons the Son and Holy Ghost to the Father, as being his very self in a qualified sense. And I further add, that “ nothing is more “ common than for a head of a family, suppose Abraham, to be “ understood in a stricter or larger sense, either as denoting his “ own proper person, or as denoting him and all his descendants “ considered as contained in him, and reckoned to him.” I shew further from the plain and express testimonies of Hippolytus and Tertullian, that they also, as well as Irenæus, sometimes considered the Father in that large sense before mentioned<sup>i</sup>.

These are the facts ; which this gentleman should have confuted, instead of bringing against me railing accusations. If there be any force (as there is none) in the charge, it falls upon the Fathers ; whose interpretation I defended no further than by shewing it not to be absurd, nor unsuitable to the language of the early times. As to myself, I did not so much as condemn the common interpretation, but was content to admit of it : and yet if I had condemned it, I should not, I conceive, have been therefore chargeable with condemning St. Paul.

This writer has a further complaint, it seems, in relation to the present text. He is positive that the title of Father of all is very disagreeable<sup>k</sup> to me : and he insinuates, that pure decency here restrained me from finding fault with St. Paul, for choosing such a Pagan expression. A mean suggestion, and entirely

<sup>g</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 280.

<sup>h</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 430.

<sup>i</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p.

431, 457.

<sup>k</sup> Observations, p. 18.

groundless. For neither did I give any the least hint of dislike to St. Paul's expression, nor did I find fault with the Fathers for adapting sometimes their style to Pagans, but commended them rather for doing it, in the cases by me mentioned<sup>l</sup>, as doing what was proper. And certainly it was commendable in St. Paul, and I acknowledged it to be so<sup>m</sup>, to adopt the Pagan phrase of unknown God, and to apply it in a Christian sense, to lead the Pagans into a belief of the true God.

Before I leave this article, I would take notice of this gentleman's affectation, (to call it no worse,) of loading every thing beyond measure, in a way uncommon; and pointing and edging his expressions to such a degree as to make them ridiculous. It is not enough, with him, to say, as another man would in such a case, that a text has been misconstrued, and its sense perverted or misapplied; no, that would sound flat and vulgar: but it is to be called corrupting the Apostle's assertion, not allowing him to write what he did write; or, it is finding fault with him, or fairly telling us that he ought not to have writ thus as he did; or, it is an attempt to expose and render ridiculous the Apostle's doctrine, and arguing, not against Dr. Clarke, but against plain Scripture, and against the Evangelists and Apostles themselves<sup>n</sup>. This it is to be elegant and quaint, and to push the satire home. I can pardon the pedantry, and the false sublime, in a man of such a taste: but I desire he may use it somewhere else; and not where he is laying an indictment, or making a report, which requires truth and strictness.

V. "The supreme authority and original independent absolute dominion of the God and Father of all, who is above all; that authority which is the foundation of the whole law of nature, which is taught and confirmed in every page of the New Testament; which is professed and declared in the first article of every ancient creed, in every Christian church of the world, and which is maintained as the first principle of religion by every Christian writer, not only in the three first centuries, but even in the following ages of contention and ambition: this supreme authority, &c. Dr. Waterland in his last book (merely for the more consistent salving of a metaphysical hypothesis) has, by a new and unheard of fiction, without any shadow of evidence from any one text of Scripture, in direct contra-

<sup>l</sup> See Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 486.    <sup>m</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 530.

<sup>n</sup> See Reply, p. 195, 197.

“ diction to the first article of all the ancient creeds, without the “ testimony of any one ancient (I had almost said, or modern) “ writer, very presumptuously (and had he himself been an op- “ poser of the hypothesis he defends, he would have said, blas- “ phemously)—reduced entirely to nothing.” p. 23.

Here seems to be something of sounding rhetoric in this para- graph; which had it been intended only for an exercise, or by way of specimen, might have been tolerable: but it was wrong to bring it in here, in a grave debate, because there is not a word of truth in it.

To speak to the matter, all this hideous outcry against an innocent man means only this, as hath been above hinted; that I have been willing to think, and as willing to say, that God the Son and God the Holy Ghost have naturally no Governor, are not naturally subject to any Ruler whatever. This gentleman is here pleased to intimate that they are, and is very confident of it. Let me number up the many palpable untruths he has crowded into half a page. One about the foundation of the law of nature: a second, about the New Testament: a third, about every ancient creed: a fourth, about the first principle of religion, and every Christian writer: four or five more, about Dr. Waterland. There is not a syllable of truth in any of the particulars of which he is so positive. For neither does any law of nature, nor any text of the New Testament, nor any ancient creed, nor any Christian and Catholic writer, early or late, ever assert, or intimate, that God the Father is naturally supreme Governor over his own Son and Spirit; or that they are naturally under his rule or government. And as to Dr. Waterland, it is no new or unheard of fiction in him, to assert one common dominion to all the three Persons, and to deny that either the Son or Holy Ghost is naturally subject to (that is, a creature of) the Father. He has full evidence for his persuasion, from innumerable texts of Scripture, from all the ancient creeds, as understood by the Christian churches from the beginning to this day: and he has neither blasphemously nor presumptuously, but soberly, righteously, and in the fear of God, stood up in defence of the injured honour of the ever blessed Trinity, grievously insulted and outraged by the Arians of these times; who when they have carried on their resolute opposition as far as argument and calm reasoning can go, and are defeated in it, rather than yield to conviction, come at length to such a degree of meanness, as to attempt the support of a baffled cause by the low methods of declaiming and railing.

VI. "When Dr. Waterland says, that many supreme Gods in one undivided substance are not many Gods, for that very reason, because their substance is undivided, he might exactly with the same sense and truth have affirmed, that many supreme persons in one undivided substance are not many persons; for that very reason, because their substance is undivided." p. 51.

Here I am charged with saying, that "many supreme Gods are not many Gods." Let my own words appear as they stand. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 645.

"I assert, you say, many supreme Gods in one undivided substance. Ridiculous: they are not many Gods, for that very reason, because their substance is undivided." Is this saying, that many Gods are not many Gods? No; but they, that is, the three Persons, supposed by the objector to be three Gods upon our scheme, are not three Gods, not many, but one God only. This gentleman appears to be in some distress; that, in order to form his objection, he is forced to invent words for me, and to lay them before the reader instead of mine. He seems however, in the same paragraph, to aim obscurely at an argument which the Author of the Remarks has expressed plainly, and urged handsomely enough<sup>o</sup>, though with too much boasting.

The answer, in short, is this: though the union of the three Persons (each Person being substance) makes them one substance, yet the same union does not make them one Person; because union of substance is one thing, and unity of Person is another: and there is no necessity that the same kind of union which is sufficient for one must be sufficient for the other also. There is no consequence from one to the other, but upon this supposition, that person and acting substance are equivalent and reciprocal: which the Author of the Remarks had acuteness enough to see, and therefore fixes upon me, unfairly, that very supposition. If he pleases to turn to my definition of person, he will find, that though I suppose Person to be intelligent acting substance, yet that is not the whole of the definition, nor do I ever suppose the terms or phrases reciprocal; any more than the asserting man to be an animal is supposing man and animal to be tantamount, or to be reciprocal terms. I have taken this occasion of replying to the Remarks upon this head, to let the author see that I do not neglect his performance for any strength it bears in it. That which I have now answered is, in my judgment, the best and strongest argument in the whole piece: and I believe he thinks so too.

<sup>o</sup> Remarks, p. 36.

VII. "When the Doctor affirms that the one supreme God "is not one supreme God in Person, but in substance: what is "this but affirming, that the one supreme God is two supreme Gods in Person, though but one supreme God in substance?" p. 51.

Let the reader see my words upon which this weak charge is grounded: they are in my First Defence, vol. i. p. 294.

"Father and Son both are the one supreme God: not one in "Person, as you frequently and groundlessly insinuate, but in "substance, power, and perfection." I neither said, nor meant to say, not one supreme God in Person; but, not one in Person: the rest is of this writer's foisting in by way of blunder, first to make nonsense, and then to comment upon it, and add more to it. In the meanwhile, it is some satisfaction to me to observe, that in a controversy where it is not very easy to express every thing with due accuracy, the keenest adversaries have not yet found any offensive or unjustifiable expression to lay hold on, till they have first made it so, by artifice and management.

VIII. "Another method whereby Dr. Waterland attempts "to destroy the supremacy of the one God, &c.—is by denying "any real generation of the Son, either temporal or eternal." Observ. p. 56.

Here are two false and injurious charges: one of my denying any temporal generation of the Son; the other of my denying any eternal generation. Every body that has seen my books knows that I assert, maintain, and inculcate three generations; the first eternal, the other two temporal: so that this charge of the Observator must be made out, if at all, by inference, or consequence only, and not directly: and therefore he ought not to have expressed this article in such general terms as he has, but should have said, consequentially, implicitly, or the like, if he had not been exceeding prone to set every thing forth in the falsest and blackest colours.

What he advances in support of these two charges betrays such confusion of thought, and such surprising forgetfulness of ancient learning, (for I am unwilling to impute it all to formed, premeditated malice.) that I stand amazed at it.

1. One of his first blunders is, his attributing the words before all ages (πρὸ πάντων αἰώνων) to the Council of Nice: this he repeats, p. 67, 70, though every body knows that those words were not inserted by the Nicene Council, but the Constantinopolitan, above fifty years after. It is necessary to remark this, because part of the argument depends upon it. There can be no doubt but that the Constantinopolitan Council intended eternal generation: but as to the Nicene Council, it may be questioned whether they did or no. These two our writer, as his way is to confound every thing, has blended together, and, I suppose, very ignorantly.

The use he makes of it is, bringing me in as his voucher (p. 67.) for the Nicene Fathers professing no more than a temporal generation, though they expressly say, it was πρὸ πάντων αἰώνων, before all ages. I do indeed offer such a conjecture about the Nicene Fathers<sup>p</sup>; but then I know nothing of the πάντων αἰώνων which this gentleman puts upon them; nor do I allow that either the Nicene or Ante-Nicene Catholics understood that phrase in the limited sense<sup>q</sup>.

2. Another mistake, or rather gross misreport, is what he says of the writers before and at the time of the Nicene Council, that using the similitude of light from light, or fire from fire, they “always take care to express this one difference in the “similitude, that whereas light shineth forth, and is communi“cated not by the will of the luminous body, but by a necessary “property of its nature, the Son of God is, by the power, and “will, and design of the Father, his substantial image.”

I do not know that any single writer ever expressed this before Eusebius; if it may be said of him. If it be pretended, that they meant it at least; yet neither can that be proved, in the full extent of what is here asserted, of any one of them. All that is true is, that as many Ante-Nicene Fathers as went upon the hypothesis of the temporal ante-mundane generation, so many acknowledged such generation to be by will and counsel: but none of those writers ever used that similitude upon which Eusebius made the remark now mentioned; viz. that of light and splendor; but that of one light, or one fire of another, which has a very different meaning<sup>r</sup> and application. But it is not the Observator's talent to think or write accurately.

<sup>p</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 595. Socrat. Eccl. Hist. p. 24. ed. Cant.
Compare Bull. D. F. sect. iii. cap. 9.   <sup>q</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p.
But see also Lowth's note upon 355, &c.

I must further add, that Origen, Theognostus, Dionysius of Alexandria, and Alexander, making use of the same similitude that Eusebius does, give no such account of it<sup>s</sup>. And none that intended to illustrate eternal generation thereby ever intimated that it was by will, design, or counsel, in opposition to what is natural or necessary, in our sense of necessary.

3. A third instance of this writer's great confusion, upon the present head, is his blending and confounding together what I had laid down distinctly upon different subjects. What I say of Post-Nicenes only, he understands of Ante-Nicenes too: and what I say of one Ante-Nicene writer, he understands of another; and thus, by the confusion of his own intellect, I am made to be perpetually inconsistent. It would be too tedious to repeat. All may be seen very distinctly, and with great consistency, set forth in my Second Defence; whither I refer the reader that desires to see the sentiments of every particular writer fairly considered<sup>t</sup>.

4. A fourth instance of this author's confusion, is his pretending that none of the Ante-Nicene writers ever mention any prior generation, any other ante-mundane generation, beside that temporal one before spoken of. It is true that many, or most of the Ante-Nicene writers were in the hypothesis of the temporal generation, mentioning no other: but it is very false to say, that none of them speak of any higher. Origen, and Dionysius of Alexandria, and Methodius, and Pamphilus, and Alexander, are express for the eternal generation, or filiation<sup>u</sup>: and Irenæus, and Novatian, and Dionysius of Rome may, very probably, be added to them. These together make eight, and may be set against Ignatius, Justin, Athenagoras, Tatian, Theophilus, Clemens of Alexandria, Tertullian, Hippolytus, who make an equal number for the other hypothesis. And I have often observed, and proved, that the difference between these writers was verbal only, all agreeing in the main doctrines, and differing only about terms, whether this or that should be called generation<sup>x</sup>.

5. Another instance of his great confusion under this head, is his objecting to me again, as before in the Reply, my appealing to the ancients for the understanding of will in the sense of acquiescence and approbation, meaning by ancients, Post-Nicene writers. This I did to obviate Dr. Clarke's pretences from some Post-Nicene writers, such as Hilary, Basil, Marius Victorinus, and Gregory Nyssen. And, certainly, in expounding these writers, heed must be given to their way and manner of using their phrases. And as to calling them ancients, the Author of the Reply had done the same twice together †.

<sup>r</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 614.      <sup>s</sup> Ibid. 353, &c.      Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 598, &c.

<sup>t</sup> Ibid. from p. 590 to p. 609.

<sup>u</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p.      <sup>x</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 266, &c.      Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 442, 617.

6. This writer discovers his ignorance, or infirmity rather, in calling my interpretation of ἀνάγκη φυσική ridiculous, as taken only from some later Christian writers. I proved my interpretation from Athanasius, Epiphanius, Hilary, and the history of the times in which the Sirmian Council was held, in order to fix the meaning of the phrase about that time, which is the first time we find it applied in this subject<sup>z</sup>. And I fully answered all this gentleman's cavils, which he now repeats.

7. Another instance of his confusion, is his saying of the pro-cession, or temporal generation, that it is no generation at all; and that "not one Ante-Nicene writer ever was so absurd, as to call that a generation by which the generated person was no more generated than he was before." As to the fact, that the Ante-Nicene writers, in great numbers, called this procession generation, I proved it at large; nor can any scholar make doubt of it. And as to the poor pretence, which he here repeats, I answered it before in these words, (Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 598.) "Though the Logos was the same essentially before and after the generation, he was not the same in respect of operation, or manifestation, and outward economy; which is what those Fathers meant." And I particularly proved this to be their meaning, from the express testimonies of Justin, Methodius, and Hippolytus<sup>a</sup>; and confirmed it by quotations from Zeno Veronensis, Hilary, Phœbadius, and others. And what does it signify for the Observator to set his raw conceptions and fond reasonings about the meaning of a word, against such valuable authorities? Can any thing be more ridiculous, than to sit down and argue about what an ancient writer must or must not have said, from pretended reasons ex absurdo? I assert it to be fact, that they said and meant what I report of them ; and I have produced their testimonies : the author may, if he pleases, go on with his dreams.

† See Reply, p. 256, 257, and my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 609.

<sup>z</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 601, 607.

<sup>a</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 593, 616.

This writer having performed so indifferently upon one part of the charge, will not be found less defective in regard to the other ; wherein he charges me with denying eternal generation, or reducing it to nothing. He will not, I presume, pretend that I either deny it or destroy it, as he does, by pronouncing all eternal generation absurd and contradictory. If I deny it or destroy it, it is in asserting it however at the same time : and it must be by explaining it, if any way, that I reduce it to nothing. If it happens not to be so explained as to fall under this gentleman's imagination, it is, according to him, reduced to nothing. But before he comes to his metaphysical speculations on this head, he gives us a taste of his learning, in respect of the ancients ; boldly asserting, that they never express the first (or eternal) generation of the Son, by filiation, or generation, or begetting, or by any other equivalent term. This is a notorious untruth. For when Irenæus reproves some persons as attributing any beginning to the prolation of the Son, (prolationis initium donantes,) he uses a term equivalent to filiation, or generation<sup>b</sup>. When Origen declares there was no beginning of the Son's generation, he uses the very word<sup>c</sup>, as also when he speaks of the only begotten, as being always with the Father. Dionysius of Alexandria expresses it by the word ἀειγενής, eternally generated<sup>d</sup> ; which surely is very express. When Methodius asserts, that he never became a Son, but always was so<sup>e</sup>, what is this, but saying the same thing ? And when other writers assert, that the Father was always a Father, this is at least asserting an eternal generation in equivalent terms. But this writer's knowledge of antiquity has been sufficiently shewn. Let us see whether he can perform any thing better in metaphysics. He forms his attack thus : " Dr. Waterland—desires, you would by no means understand him " to intend eternal generation indeed, but a mere coexistence " with, and not at all any derivation from the Father." p. 72.

And certainly Dr. Waterland is very right in making eternal generation to be eternal, amounting to a coexistence with the Father, without which it could not be eternal. It is observable

<sup>b</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 353.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 353.

<sup>d</sup> Ibid. p. 357.

<sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 357.

however, that this gentleman opposes derivation to coexistence; which shews what kind of derivation he intends; a derivation from a state of non-existence, a derivation commencing after the existence of the Father, and because later than the Father's existence, infinitely later, as it must be if at all later. In short then, it is a derivation of a creature from his Creator: this is the eternal generation he is contending for, in opposition to mine; while he is endeavouring to shew that mine is not generation; as his, most certainly, is not eternal, nor generation, but creation. The sum of what he has to advance is, that coexistence is incompatible with generation; that an eternal derivation is absurd, and contradictory. No doubt but such a derivation as he is imagining (which he explains by a real motion of emission, and growth of one out of the other) is incompatible with coexistence. But what the primitive Fathers intended, and what the Scripture intended by eternal generation, implies no such motion of emission, no such growth of one out of the other, but an eternal relation or reference of one to the other as his Head. An eternal relation has no difficulty at all in the conception of it. All the difficulty lies in the supposition of its not being coordinate, though the Persons be coexistent. And when it can be shewn that all priority of order must of course imply a priority of duration too, then the objection may have some weight in it. Till that be done, the notion of eternal generation will stand: an eternal Logos of the eternal Mind, which is the aptest similitude to express the coeternity and headship too; and is the representation given of it both by Scripture and antiquity. I proceed to a new charge.

IX. "Another method by which Dr. Waterland endeavours " to destroy the supreme dominion, &c.—is his labouring, by a " dust of learned jargon, to persuade men that the very terms " one God mean nobody knows what." p. 85. To this I answer, that one God means one necessarily existing, all-perfect, all-sufficient substance, or Being: which substance, &c. consists (according to Scripture account) of three Persons, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one Jehovah. This is one God. Let this gentleman disprove it, when he is able.

I had said, "If Scripture makes the three Persons one God " either expressly or by necessary consequence, I know not what " men have to do to dispute about intelligent agents and identical

† Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 434.

"lives, &c. as if they understood better than God himself does, "what one God is, or as if philosophy were to direct what shall or "shall not be Tritheism." Upon this our Observator remarks ; "Better than Dr. Waterland himself does, is all that he means." I would allow the justice of his reflection, were we disputing what one God is, upon the foot of Scripture: for then it would amount only to this difference, that his interpretation leads one way, and mine another. But as the competition is made between Scripture and philosophy, he may easily perceive both the impertinence and iniquity of his reflection. While the point is removed from Scripture to philosophy for a decision of it, I insist upon it, that this is interpretatively, and in effect, though not in design, pretending to understand the thing better than God himself does. But to proceed with our writer's pretences against the account I had before given from the ancients.

He objects, (p. 86.) that "one substance is not the same as "one God ; because two equally supreme, two unoriginate divine Persons would be two Gods," by my own confession : for I say (vol. ii. p. 537.) that "two unoriginate divine Persons, "however otherwise inseparable, would be two Gods according to "the ancients." I knew very well what I said, though I perceive this gentleman does not apprehend it. The ancients thought this reference of one Person to the other, as Head, was one requisite among others, to make the substance one, being thus more closely allied, and, as it were, of one stock. This made me say, however otherwise inseparable: that is, whatever other union may be supposed, the Persons would not be perfectly inseparable, not perfectly one substance, (according to the ancients,) and so not one God, but upon the present supposition. And now how does this shew that one substance and one God, are not, in this case, tantamount ? To me it seems, that it both confirms and explains it.

X. The Observator charges me (p. 94.) with making one compound person of many distinct persons. His words are : "He "thinks a person may be compounded of many distinct persons." He refers to page the 652nd of my Second Defence. If the reader can find any such thing there, or any where else in my books, let the charge of false doctrines lie upon me : if not, let the charge of slander and calumny lie upon the accuser.

XI. He charges me, p. 62, with referring to a passage in Modest Plea, without "pretending to make any the least answer "to it." This is like his other misreports : I abundantly answer it, (vol. ii. p. 545,) by allowing necessary existence to be positive, but denying it of self-existence.

From the instances here given, (to which more will be added under the next chapter,) the reader may perceive, that speaking of the truth, in simplicity and singleness of heart, is none of this gentleman's talent. If he hits upon any thing really true, and which he might perhaps make some little advantage of, he has such a faculty of inventing and straining, that he quite spoils it in the telling, and turns it into romance. One would not expect such exorbitances as these are from men of their profession and character: but it now brings to my mind the Postscript to the Reply: and I shall wonder at nothing of this kind hereafter.

CHAP. II.

Misreports and Misrepresentations contained in the Observations.

EVERY page of the pamphlet is concerned in this charge: the whole is, in a manner, one continued misrepresentation from beginning to end. But some of the misrepresentations have been already shewn in the first chapter, among false charges; and others will fall under a subsequent chapter. I shall select a convenient number to fill up this.

1. Page 11. the author writes thus: "The Doctor is forced further to affirm, that the Son is tacitly included, though the Father be eminently styled the one God: nay, (which is very hard indeed,) tacitly included, though by name expressly excluded, and contradistinguished by a peculiar character of his own, in the very words of the text itself." Thus he leaves the remark, without informing the reader in what sense I suppose the Son tacitly included. I explain it in my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 720:

"I have before shewn what we mean by saying that the Son is tacitly included, though the Father be eminently styled the one God: not that the word God, or the word Father, in such cases, includes Father and Son; but the word God, is predicated of one only, at the same time that it is tacitly understood that it may be predicated of either, or both: since no opposition is intended against either, but against creatures and false gods."

This gentleman pretends indeed that the one God is opposed to † See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 765.

the one true Lord, (in 1 Cor. viii. 6,) as well as to false gods. But this is gratis dictum; and he does not consider that then the Son can be no God at all to us, contrary to Rom. ix. 5. besides many other places of Scripture. I say therefore that the exclusive term, in this case, is not to be understood with utmost rigour, but with such qualifying considerations, as other Scriptures manifestly require to be consistent with this. I gave instances, in good number, of exclusive terms so used, <sup>h</sup> which this laconic gentleman confutes, first, by calling them ridiculous; and next, by positively affirming, that “wherever any particular thing “ or person is by any particular title or character contradistinguished from any other thing or person mentioned at the “ same time under another particular title or character, it is “ infinitely absurd to suppose the latter tacitly included in the “ former, from which it is expressly excluded.” Now allowing him the whole of what he here asserts, all that follows is, that in 1 Cor. viii. 6. the Son is excluded from being God in that eminent manner, that unoriginate manner as the Father is; not from being God in the same sense of the word, <sup>i</sup> nor from being one God with him. But it will be difficult for him to prove any thing more, than that the Father is there described under the character of the one God, of whom are all things, and the Son under the character of the one Lord, by whom are all things, in opposition only to nominal gods and lords, and not to each other. For since all things are of one, and by the other, they together are one Fountain of all things, one God and Lord: and thus may this text stand with verse the 4th of the same chapter, which declares that there is but one God; and with Rom. ix. and 5, which declares the Son to be “over all, God blessed for “ever.”

II. Page the 18th of the Observations, I am found fault with for misunderstanding a passage of Athanasius, in his Epistle to Serapion<sup>k</sup>. I had said, that the one God is his subject in

<sup>h</sup> Vol. ii. Sermon iv. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 405, 424, 444.

<sup>i</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 425.

<sup>k</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 430.

* Εν γὰρ εἶδος θεότητος, ὅπερ ἐστὶ καὶ ἐν τῷ Λόγῳ, καὶ εἰς Θεός. ὁ πατήρ ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ ὢν κατὰ τὸ ἐπὶ πάντων εἶναι, καὶ ἐν τῷ νύφ δὲ φαινόμενος κατὰ τὸ διὰ πάντων διήκειν, καὶ ἐν τῷ πνεύματι δὲ κατὰ τὸ ἐν ἅπασιν διὰ τοῦ Λόγου ἐν αὐτῷ ἐνεργεῖν, οὕτω γὰρ καὶ ἓνα διὰ τῆς τριάδος ὁμολογοῦμεν εἶναι τὸν Θεόν—ὅτι τὴν μίαν ἐν τριάδι θεότητα φρονοῦμεν. Athan. Orat. iii. p. 565.

Eis Θεὸς ἐν τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ κηρύττεται, ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων, καὶ διὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐν πάσιν· ἐπὶ πάντων μὲν, ὡς πατήρ, ὡς ἀρχή, καὶ πηγὴ· διὰ πάντων δὲ διὰ τοῦ Λόγου· ἐν πάσιν δὲ ἐν τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ—that passage; as is manifest to every one that can read and construe.

My smart corrector here says, "And yet not only the necessary construction of this very passage, but moreover Athanasius himself declares, on the contrary, in the fullest and most express words, that he is speaking of the Father all the way." And to prove this, he refers me to Athanasius's third Oration against the Arians; a prior work, and which therefore could declare nothing about his meaning in the place I had to deal with: so far from declaring in the fullest and most express words. It would have been sufficient for a cooler writer to have said, that Athanasius had explained his meaning in one place by what he had said in another: and to have offered it as a probable argument to determine a doubtful construction.

Certain it is, that Athanasius did not, could not in full and express words, declare beforehand in his third Oration against the Arians, that he should be "speaking of the Father all the way," several months or years after, in an epistle not yet written, nor perhaps thought of. I can with better reason plead, that since the Epistle to Serapion was written after the other, and contained his later, thoughts, that either the former treatise should be interpreted by the latter, or at least that his second thoughts upon the text should be preferred. However, upon a careful review of both the places, and upon considering the context, and the argument Athanasius is upon in both, (namely, to prove one Godhead in all the three Persons, one God in, or by, a Trinity, his express words,) I am so far from thinking that the passage in his Oration is at all against me, that it rather confirms my construction of the other; allowing only a different pointing from what appears in the prints, such as I have here given. And I desire the words, ἓνα Θεὸν διὰ τῆς τριπλῆδος, may be attended to, one God in Trinity. If ἓνα Θεὸν means the Father only, then the sense is, one God the Father, in (or by) Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; which is a sense that this writer will call perfectly absurd. I submit this whole matter to the judgment of the learned. In the mean while it is evident, that our Observator has let his pen run too fast; has been exceeding positive in a thing which he cannot make clear, or so οὐκ ἔστι μὲν τὸ τοιοῦτον ὑμῶν φρόνημα εἰς ἓνα Θεὸν, τὸν ἐπὶ πάντων, καὶ διὰ πάντων, καὶ ἐν πᾶσι. Τὸ γὰρ, ἐν πᾶσιν οὐκ ἔχετε, διαιρούντες καὶ ἀποφθεονύντες ἀπὸ τῆς θεότητος τὸ πνεῦμα. Athanas.

ad Serap. i. p. 677.

much as probable; and that he has expressed his positiveness in such a manner, and in such words, as cannot be justified by common rules.

I may just note, before I leave this article, that this gentleman has not shewn his skill in Greek, by rendering ἐφ' ἑαυτῷ ὦν, (as if it had been ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ, or ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ,) existing of himself: nor does he apprehend the force of ἐπὶ πάντων, or what Athanasius is talking of in that place. When he understands the maxim of Irenæus, (invisibile Filii Pater, p. 234,) and considers how God the Son was supposed to be let down, as it were, to the creatures, while the Father remained in excelsis, and, as it were, within himself; he will then know how to construe that passage.

III. Page 19th of the Observations, we meet with another misrepresentation, a very great one.

“ It was further alleged, that Dr. Waterland most absurdly “ so interprets this phrase, (ἐχαρίσατο) given him a name; as if “ it could signify extolling and magnifying in such a sense as “ men extol and magnify God; as if men could (χαρίσασθαι) “ graciously grant any thing to God.” I had interpreted exalting to signify praising, (in such a sense as men exalt God,) in opposition to the other sense of exalting, which is raising up to a higher place or dignity. This is all the objector has to ground his weak suggestion upon. As to χαρίσασθαι, giving, gratifying with, or the like, as it may be done by equals to equals, or even by inferiors to superiors, as well as by superiors to inferiors; where is the inference that the Father must be superior to the Son, because of his giving him a name? My answer therefore was in these words: “ I see no absurdity in interpreting giving “ a name to be giving a name. But it is absurd to imagine that “ God may not glorify his Son, as well as his Son may glorify “ him; by spreading and extolling his name over the whole “ creation<sup>1</sup>:” which this writer transcribes, and leaves as he found; not being able to answer it. Nor indeed is there any just objection against an equal doing thus to an equal: nor does χαρίσασθαι intimate any thing more than its being a free and voluntary act. But it is trifling in this case to strain the words (used in the other case) in such a sense as men exalt God; which were intended only in opposition to another quite different sense of exaltation: and are still to be understood with allowance for the different circumstances.

<sup>1</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 550.

IV. Page 34th, this writer cites some words of my Second Defence, (vol. ii. p. 516,) which are these: "If you ask why that Person called the Son might not have been Father, I have nothing to say, but that in fact he is not. So it is written, and so we believe: the Father is Father, and the Son is Son." Upon which he is pleased to remark as follows: "By the Doctor's hypothesis therefore, there was no impossibility in the nature of things, but unoriginate might have been originate, and originate unoriginate; underived might have been derived, and derived underived; the Father might have been begotten, and the Son unbegotten." Such is his malicious or thoughtless misconstruction of very plain and very innocent words. In the same paragraph, from which he cited my words, I assert the priority of order (that is, the originateness of one, and unoriginateness of the other) to be natural, that is, necessary or unalterable, and eternally so: so that one could never have been the other; which is my constant doctrine. But if you ask why they could not, which is asking a reason a priori in a case which admits of none, I pretend not to it; being content to prove the fact a posteriori, which is all that can be done. Will any man give me a reason a priori, why there must have been a God, or why it could not have been otherwise? It is impossible. It is sufficient to prove a posteriori, that in fact there is a God, and that he could not but be, because we find that he exists necessarily, and without a cause. But we shall have more of this in the sequel.

V. Page 35. Observat. "Instead of eternal generation, the Doctor, if he was at liberty, had much rather say eternal existence of a real and living Word, &c.—And for this reason, I suppose, it is, that instead of the Nicene words, begotten of the Father, and from the substance of the Father, the Doctor, by a new and unheard of expression, affirms the Son to be the substance of the Father." First Defence, vol. i. p. 496.

Ans. As to what he is here imagining of what the Doctor had rather say, and if he was at liberty, it deserves no answer: my sentiments in that article are sufficiently known, and fully laid down in my writings. His other remark about a new and unheard of expression, betrays his ignorance in antiquity, or something worse. Ever since the terms substance and person came into this controversy, Father and Son have been always believed and professed to be one substance: as high as Tertullian, all the three have been called one substance. Una substantia in tribus coherentibus. What is this but saying, that both the Son and Holy Ghost are the Father's substance, since all are one substance, which one substance is the Father's, as well as theirs? This is all that I say in the place referred to, "that the Son might be justly called the Father's substance, both being one."

VI. "Tertullian presumes to add, speaking of one of Dr. Waterland's principal assertions, if the Scripture itself had taught it, it could not have been true." Observ. p. 52. comp. p. 47. This is misrepresentation both of Tertullian and me. The assertion of which Tertullian speaks is, that "the Father was actually incarnate, suffered," &c. the tenet of the Praxeans. And he does not say, it could not have been true, but could not have been believed, and that with a perhaps, (fortasse non credenda de Patre licet scripta,) to shew that it was rather a rhetorical figure of speech, than to be taken strictly, and with utmost rigour: and his chief reason why he said so much, was because such a tenet could hardly, if at all, be reconciled with other Scriptures and their description of the Father, and the standing economy of the three Persons therein revealed. How does this at all affect my assertion that, antecedent to the economy, "there was no impossibility in the nature of the thing itself, but the Father himself might have done the same that the Son did?" This is not the assertion which Tertullian strikes at: nor did he say of the other, that it could not be true, nor positively, that it could not be believed. Three false reports this gentleman has here crowded into one short sentence. And I must remind him of what I before told him <sup>m</sup>, (though he is pleased to forget it,) that the same Tertullian, in the same treatise, when, in the course of the dispute, he was brought closer up to the pinch of the question; had nothing to say about the natural impossibility of the supposition: but he resolves the case entirely into this, that Scripture had warranted the assertion in regard to God the Son, and had not done so, but the contrary, in regard to God the Father. So little reason had this writer to appeal, twice, to Tertullian upon this article.

VII. "The three Persons in the Trinity are (with Dr. Waterland) real Persons, each of them an individual intelligent agent, undivided in substance, but still distinct Persons: so “distinct, that were they all unoriginated, he himself allows “they would be three Gods.” [Good reason why, when upon that supposition they would be more distinct than they now are : but this is one of our author's shrewd remarks.] “ Yet at the “ same time, in a most unintelligible manner, and with the “ utmost inconsistency, he professes them to be all but one living “ Person.” Where do I profess any such thing? This hasty gentleman might better have stayed a while to prove what he pretends, instead of fixing upon me a consequence of his own, and in such a manner as must make an ignorant reader think he had quoted my own words. He brings some passages of mine to prove his charge, which yet prove nothing like it. If the reader pleases to turn to my definition of person<sup>n</sup>, he will easily perceive that the same life may be common to three Persons, and that identical life no more infers singularity of Person, than identity of essence. When this writer pleases to give us another definition of person, or to confute mine, we may give him a further hearing.

<sup>m</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 480.

VIII. In the next page, (p. 90,) I meet with a misrepresentation of so odd a kind, that I could never have suspected it, and can scarce think he was well awake when he made it. He pitches upon a passage of my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 531. which runs thus :

“ You have taken a great deal of fruitless pains to shew, that “ the particular glories belonging to the Son, on account of his “ offices, are distinct from the glories belonging to the Father. “ You might in the same way have shewn that the particular “ glories due to the Father under this or that consideration, “ are distinct from the glories of the Father considered under “ another capacity.” Now let us come to the remark of this acute gentleman upon it. It is thus : “ What is this, but “ saying, that the Persons of the Father and Son differ no other- “ wise than as capacities of the same Person?” I am content to put it off, and to refer the reader to my book, which fully explains the whole thing ; hinting only, that the writer might as well have said offices, (as capacities,) when his hand was in ; and that nothing is more evident than that, if distinct offices in different persons are a foundation for distinct worships, then distinct offices in the same person will make as many distinct worships as there are offices.

<sup>n</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 650.

IX. One noted misrepresentation must not be neglected : the author insults mightily upon it. I shall cite part of what he says :

“ A coordination or subordination of mere order, without relation to time, place, power, dominion, authority, or the like, is exactly the same manner of speaking and thinking, as if a man should say, a coequality or inequality of equality. Dr. Waterland therefore was really much weaker than he imagines, when he wantonly declared, he was so weak as to think, that the words coordination and subordination strictly and properly respected order, and expressed an equality or inequality of order p. “ Are not things come to a fine pass, if the prime foundation of religion, the first and great commandment, is to be ludicrously placed on such a quicksand as this ?” p. 33.

The reader, I suppose, is pretty well acquainted with this gentleman's manner, before this time, [so] that I have the less need to take notice of his affecting big swelling words, and his running out into extravagant exclamations on very slight occasions. It is his unhappiness, that he never knows where to stop, nor how to be moderate in any thing. It is ludicrous indeed for him to pretend a zeal for the first and great commandment, while he is preaching up two Gods, and is a friend to creature-worship : but that I mention by the way only. As to the point in hand ; had I made any mistake in a very nice part of the controversy, he might have borne it with temper, as I have many and great ones of his, where there was less excuse for them. To come to the business : he will not find it easy to confute a very plain thing, that coordination and subordination strictly and properly respect order, (to say nothing here what the order respects,) as much as contemporary or coeval respects time or age, collateral place, concomitant company ; or as any other word of like nature bears a signification suitable to its etymology, and to the analogy of speech.

Against this he objects, that a “ coordination or subordination of mere order is exactly the same manner of speaking, as a coequality or inequality of equality :” which happens to be a blunder. For as coequality and equality are the same, in this case, the expression to answer a coequality or inequality of equality would be this ; a coordination or subordination of coordination ; which is not my expression, nor any thing like my sense. What order, abstractedly considered, may signify, or what in this particular case, are questions which may come in presently. But in the mean while it is evident, that there is no solecism nor impropriety, but truth and accuracy too, in saying that coordination and subordination respect order; not dominion, not dignity, &c. as this author pretends; unless all order implies dominion, as it certainly does not. Order is a general word, and is sometimes determined to a particular meaning by what it is joined with: as order of time, order of situation, order of dignity, order of nature, order of conception, order of existence, order of causality, order of dominion, and the like. But then order is also frequently used simply and absolutely, without any thing further to determine or specify its signification: and thus it hath been anciently<sup>9</sup>, as well as in later times, made use of in our present subject. Thus far then, I hope, it may be very excusable to use the word order in this subject simply and absolutely. If any word is to be put to it, to make the sense more special, I admit order of conception, with Tertullian<sup>r</sup>; or order of existence, as the Son exists of and from the Father: which may be likewise called order of causality<sup>s</sup>, in the old sense of causality respecting emanative necessary causes. That I did not use the word order without a meaning, may appear from the very passages which this writer quotes from me, p. 34, though he is pleased to call them empty words; as every thing here is empty with him that carries not in it his crude conceptions about natural dominion. His argument to prove them empty, being founded on nothing but his own shufflings and mistakes, is answered above, p. 31.

<sup>9</sup> Λέγοντας Θεὸν πατέρα, καὶ υἱὸν Θεὸν, καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον, δεικνύσας αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ ἐνώσει δύναμιν, καὶ τὴν ἐν τῇ τάξει διαίρεσιν. Athenag. Legat. cap. 10.

Ὁ υἱὸς τάξει μὲν δευτέρος τοῦ πατρὸς, ὅτι ἀπ' ἐκείνου<sup>r</sup> καὶ ἀξιώματι ὅτι ἀρχὴ καὶ αἰτία, τῶ, εἶναι αὐτοῦ πατέρα, καὶ ὅτι δι' αὐτοῦ ἡ πρόσσδος καὶ προσαγωγή πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν καὶ πατέρα<sup>r</sup> φύσει δὲ οὐκέτι δευτέρος, διότι ἡ θεότης ἐν ἑκατέρῳ μία. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. iii. p. 272. ed. Bened. See my Second Defence, in relation to this passage, vol. ii. p. 646, 723, 751.

Ἔστι τι τάξεως εἶδος, οὐκ ἐκ παρ' ἡμῶν θέσεως συνιστάμενον, ἀλλ' αὐτῇ τῇ κατὰ φύσιν ἀκολουθία συμβαίνον, ὡς

τῷ πυρὶ πρὸς τὸ φῶς ἔστι τὸ ἐξ αὐτοῦ ——— τίνος οὖν ἔνεκεν ἀθετεῖ τὴν τάξιν ἐπὶ Θεοῦ λαμβάνεσθαι; ——— ἡμεῖς δὲ, κατὰ μὲν τῶν αἰτίων πρὸς τὰ ἐξ αὐτῶν σχέσιν, προτετάχθαι τοῦ υἱοῦ τὸν πατέρα φάμεν<sup>r</sup> &c. Basil. l. i. p. 232.

<sup>r</sup> Principaliter determinatur ut prima Persona, quæ ante Filii nomen erat proponenda, quia Pater ante cognoscitur, et post Patrem Filius nominatur. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 18.

<sup>s</sup> Nihil plane differt in substantia, quia verus Filius est; differt tamen causalitatis gradu; quia omnis potentia a Patre in Filio est: et in substantia minor non est Filius; auctoritatis tamen major est Pater. Auct. Quæst. utr. Testam. apud August. Quæst. 122.

The meaning however of order, in this case, may be thus intelligibly set forth to the meanest capacity.

While we consider the scale of persons from God the Father down to man, or ascending from man up to God the Father, he is the first in the scale from whom all things descend; and he is the last, in the way of ascent, in whom all things terminate. The Father by the Son and Holy Ghost conveys all his blessings to his creatures; and his creatures in the Holy Ghost and by the Son ascend up to the Father. Such is the scale of existences, such the order of things: and this, I hope, is intelligible enough.

If it be next inquired what the foundation of this order is, and why the Father, if but equal in nature to the Son or Holy Ghost, shall yet be at the top of all, and stand first; we have this to say, that both the parts are true and certain; and that the Son and Holy Ghost, though in nature equal, are yet referred up to the Father as their head and source, because of him and from him, in a mysterious and inscrutable manner, they both are. The Father is from none; they from the Father. This is the Catholic doctrine<sup>t</sup>, and as old as Christianity itself, so far as we can find in the primitive records: all acknowledging (conformable to Scripture) this order, and reference of the Son and Holy Ghost up to the Father, and at the same time asserting their consubstantiality, coeternity, necessary existence, equality of nature, and unity of Godhead.

If our ideas of this eternal reference of one Person up to another be no more than general and confuse, not full and adequate; what wonder is it that we should find it so in a subject so sub-

<sup>t</sup> Πᾶσα δὲ τοῦ κυρίου ἐνέργεια ἐπὶ τὸν παντοκράτορα τὴν ἀναφορὰν ἔχει, καὶ ἔστιν, ὡς εἰπεῖν, πατρικὴ τις ἐνέργεια ὁ υἱός. Clem. Alex. Strom. 7.

Ἠνωσθαι γὰρ ἀνάγκη τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν θεῖον λόγον ἐμφιλοχωρεῖν δὲ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐνδιατεῖσθαι δεῖ τὸ ἄγιον πνεῦμα. ἤδη καὶ τὴν θείαν τριάδα εἰς ἓνα, ὥστε εἰς κορυφὴν τινα, τὸν Θεὸν τῶν ὄλων τὸν παντοκράτορα λέγω, συγκεφαλαιουσθαι τε καὶ συνάγεσθαι πᾶσα ἀνάγκη. Dionys. Roman. ap. Athan. vol. i. p. 231.

Φύσις δὲ τοῖς τρισὶ μία Θεός. ἔνωσις δὲ ὁ πατὴρ, ἐξ οὗ, καὶ πρὸς δὲ ἀνάγεται τὰ ἑξῆς. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. xxxii. p. 520.

Θεὸς δὲ ἐξαιρέτως λέγεται, ἐπεὶ ἡ ἔνωσις, ἦτοι ἀνάπτυξις, καὶ ἀνακεφαλαιώσις τῆς τριάδος ὁ πατὴρ ἐστὶ ὡς εἶπεν ὁ θεολόγος. Theod. Abucar. ap. Petavium, Trin. lib. iv. cap. 15. p. 262.

“This origination in the divine Paternity hath anciently been looked upon as the assertion of the unity: and therefore the Son and Holy Ghost have been believed to be but one God with the Father, because both from the Father, who is one, and so the union of them.” Pearson on the Creed, p. 40. See also my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 417, 516, 767.

lime? Is it not the tremendous substance or essence of the Divine Being that we are here considering? And who is sufficient for these things? Let any man try the utmost stretch of his capacity, in any thing else immediately pertaining to the divine substance; and he will soon perceive how short and defective all his ideas are. He cannot tell us what it is, nor whereunto we may liken or compare it: cannot say how it is present every where, or how it acts any where. Every thing belonging thereto, as simplicity, infinity, eternity, necessary existence<sup>1</sup>, is all dark and mysterious: we see but "through a glass darkly," and cannot "see God as "he is." It may therefore become these gentlemen to be a little more modest, and less positive in these high matters; and not to insult us, in their manner, as teaching a collocation of words, or an order of empty words; only because we cannot give them, what we cannot have, full and adequate ideas of the mysterious order and relation of the blessed Three, one among another. We might as reasonably object to them an eternity of words, or an omnipresence of words, a verbal ubiquity, simplicity, infinity, and the like, as often as we perceive that they are not able to give us more than general, confuse, and inadequate conceptions of those things.

Such is our answer, such our just defence, after attending to every consequence the adversary can object, and after suffering it, in the way of fair debate, to be run up to the utmost height. We acknowledge God's essence to be inscrutable, as did the ancient Catholics in the same cause, against the Eunomians; who finding themselves thereby pinched, had no way left but to put on a bold face, and flatly to deny the incomprehensibility of God's essence<sup>2</sup>. If their successors at this day are of the same mind, let them speak out. It should be observed how differently our adversaries here behave, from what we do when pursued with consequences. They deny the necessary existence of God the Son. Run them down but to the next immediate consequence, precarious existence, and they are amazed and confounded: and instead of frankly admitting the consequence, they fall to doubling, shifting, equivocating, in a most childish manner, to disguise a difficulty which they cannot answer. Push them a little further, as making a creature of God the Son; and they fall to blessing themselves upon it. They make the Son a creature? No, not they; God forbid. And they will run you on whole pages, to shew how many quirks they can invent to avoid giving him the name of creature, and at the same time to assert the thing. Carry the consequence a little lower, till their whole scheme begins to shew itself more and more repugnant to the tenor of Scripture and all Catholic antiquity; and then what do these gentlemen do, but shut their eyes and stop their ears: they do not understand a word you say; they will not be answerable for consequences; they never taught such things, nor think them fit to be mentioned. This is their way of management, as often as we go about to pursue the consequences of their scheme down as far as they can go; at the same time that we suffer them to exhaust all their metaphysics, in drawing any imaginable consequences against the Catholic doctrine, and both attend to them, and answer them, with all Christian fairness, openness, and sincerity<sup>z</sup>. The meanest reader may here see, by this different conduct, where truth, where integrity, where reason is, and where it is not: truth does not use to shun the light; nor is it any sign of a good cause to want so much art and colouring. And let it not be pretended, that all this shuffling and disguise is only to screen their sentiments from the popular odium, and themselves from public censure: there may be something in that; and so far perhaps their conduct may appear the more excusable. But there is certainly more in it than that comes to; because the same men can, upon occasion, discover their low sentiments of God the Son very freely<sup>a</sup>; and it is chiefly when they are pressed in dispute, and when they see plainly how hard an argument bears upon them, from Scripture and antiquity, that they have recourse to evasion and disguise, and refuse to speak out<sup>b</sup>. But to proceed.

<sup>1</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 456, &c.

<sup>2</sup> Ibid. p. 452.

<sup>3</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 545.

X. "The Doctor frequently appeals from reason and Scripture to authority. When his argument is reduced to an express contradiction, a contradiction in itself, as well as to Scripture, then he alleges that the thing he contends for must be so upon the principles of the primitive churches, (Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 478.) meaning, that it must be so upon his own hypothesis." Observations, p. 115.

<sup>z</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 644, 645. ii. p. 318, &c.

<sup>a</sup> See a collection of passages in my Supplement to the Case, &c. vol. 45, 175, 223, 224, 237, 319, 323, 339, 343, 347, 402. <sup>b</sup> See instances in the Reply, p.

Let the reader see my words, upon which this gentleman makes his tragical exclamation.

“One substance with one Head cannot make two Gods upon the principles of the primitive churches: nor are your metaphysics strong enough to bear up against their united testimonies, with Scripture at the head of them.” How is this appealing from Scripture to authority? So far am I from it, that in another place<sup>c</sup>, while I commend the ancients for their way of solving the unity, as taking the best that human wit could invent or rest upon, yet I declare at the same time, that there is no necessity at all for shewing how the three are one: it is sufficient that Scripture bears testimony to the fact, that so it is; we are not obliged to say how. And there also I obviate what this writer here pretends, in his vain confidence of boasting, as if he was able to do great things in the way of natural reason; by observing that the adversary can do nothing in this case, unless he be able to shew (which is impossible) that “no unity whatever can be sufficient to make more Persons than one, one Being, one Substance, one God.”

XI. “When an argument is worked up to the evidence even of an identical proposition, (which is the essence of demonstration,) then, it is contrary (he says) to the sentiments of wiser men, who have argued the other way.” Observations, p. 87, 115.

It is very true that I preface my answer to some big pretences of theirs with the words here recited<sup>d</sup>. I suppose the great offence is in reminding them that there have been men wiser than they are. As to the identical proposition, the demonstration here talked of, I shew in the same place<sup>e</sup> that it is built upon nothing but the equivocal meaning of sameness. Reduce it to sylogism, and it will be found a sophism with four terms in it.

In page the 87th, arguing against the supposition of powers derived and underived being the same, he says, “If it were possible, it would follow, that the supreme power of all, the power of begetting, or deriving being and powers down to another, would be no power at all.” That is to say, if the essential powers of the Godhead be the same, then the personal properties are lost. But I humbly conceive, that as union of 434. Compare First Defence, vol. i. p. 464, 465.

<sup>c</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 433.

<sup>d</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 543.

Compare p. 556, 557.

<sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 543, 544.

substance accounts for the one, the distinction of persons may account for the other: and this supreme power of deriving, &c. amounts to nothing more than a mode of existing, or a relation of order<sup>f</sup>.

N. B. The supreme power of begetting, which the author here speaks of, means with him nothing more nor less than the supreme power of creating; which is plainly his sense of begetting, as may appear from what hath been observed above, p. 24.

XII. "Again, when two very different assertions are affirmed "not to be the same assertion, then he asks, how do you know? "Or, how came you to be wiser in this particular than all the "Christian churches early or late? Who yet never affirmed two "such different assertions to be the same assertion; and if they "had affirmed it, still the assertions would not have been the "same." Observations, p. 119.

Let my words appear; § "You add, that making one substance, "is not making one God: to which it is sufficient to say, How "do you know? &c." The thing here maintained is, that upon the principles of the primitive and modern churches, if the three Persons be one substance, they are of consequence one God. The assertions in this case are equivalent and tantamount. This is the plain avowed doctrine of the Church ever since the term substance came in. They that impugn this doctrine ought first to confute it, if they can. Sometimes indeed I express this primitive doctrine by one substance with one head, for greater distinction: but one substance implies both, because the notion of headship is taken in with the union of substance, as rendering the union closer, and making the substance more perfectly one<sup>h</sup>.

XIII. "When he is told, that it is great presumptuousness "to call the particularities of his own explication, the doctrine of "the blessed Trinity; then he cries out, Great presumption indeed! "to believe that the Catholic Church has kept the true faith; which "are the very words, and the very argument wherewith the "writers of the Church of Rome perpetually insult, and will for "ever with justice insult, over all such protestants as endeavour "to discourage all serious inquiry," &c.

This writer, to introduce his weak reflection, is forced to cut off part of my sentence, which runs thus : — “ kept the true faith, while Eunomians and Arians made shipwreck of it.” This shews that I was speaking of the Catholic Church justly so called, of the primitive times, and before Popery was in being ; which observation would have entirely prevented his sarcasm, or have discovered the impertinence of it. As to the Church of Rome, I desire no better, no other argument against her, than the same I make use of against the Arians, viz. Scripture interpreted by primitive and Catholic tradition. Down falls Popery and Arianism too, as soon as ever this principle is admitted. But this author, I conceive, was a little too liberal to Popery, or did not know what he was talking of, when he presumed to intimate, that the writers of the Church of Rome can, with justice, insult us on that head. I hope it was a slip, and he will retract it when he comes to consider. But here again his eagerness overcame him, and carried him too far.

<sup>f</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 545.

§ Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 626.

<sup>h</sup> See above, p. 26.

XIV. “ It had been alleged, that he who never acts in subjection, &c. — and every other person always acts in subjection to his will, is alone the supreme Governor. In reciting this argument twice, Dr. Waterland does twice omit the word always, in “ which the stress of the argument lies.” Observations, p. 24.

In abridging, not reciting, the argument, I omitted the word always ; having indeed no suspicion that any stress at all could be laid upon it, but thinking rather that it had been carelessly or thoughtlessly put in by the author. If the stress of the argument lies there, the argument is a very poor one, being grounded only upon a presumption of a fact that can never be proved. I allow indeed, if God the Son antecedently to the economy, and before the world was, acted in subjection to the Father, that then the argument will have some force in it : but as I very well knew that the author never had, never could prove any such thing ; so I could not suspect him to be so weak a man as to lay the stress of the argument there. I insist upon it, that millions and millions of ages, an eternity, a parte ante, had preceded, before ever the Son or Holy Ghost are introduced as acting in subjection. Let the author disprove this, and he will do something. I have read of the glory which our Lord had with the Father before the world was : but never heard any thing of his then acting in subjection to him : wherefore it does not appear that he always did it.

XV. “ There is no argument in which Dr. Waterland is more “ insolent, or with less reason, than in this which follows. There “ are, he thinks, as great difficulties in his adversary’s notion of “ the divine omnipresence, as there are in his notion of many “ equally supreme (in nature) independent Persons, constituting “ one supreme Governor or Monarch of the universe.—Upon “ this weak comparison he seems to build all his hopes—and “ yet the whole of the comparison is as entirely impertinent, as “ if a man should pretend that to him there are as great difficul- “ ties in conceiving immensity or eternity, as in conceiving tran- “ substantiation,” &c. Observations, p. 95.

How just, how civil, how pertinent this representation is, will appear, when I shall have given the reader a true and faithful account of this whole matter from the beginning, which is as follows :

In the year 1704, Dr. Clarke, then but a young man, published his Demonstration (as he is pleased to call it) of the Being and Attributes of God : in which work, not content with the common arguments for the existence, a posteriori, he strikes a note higher, and aims at a proof a priori ; which every man of sense besides knows to be contradictious and impossible, though he was not aware of it. However, to countenance his pretended Demonstration, he laid hold of the ideas of immensity and eternity, as antecedently forcing themselves upon the minds of all men : and his notion of the divine immensity is, that it is infinite expansion, or infinite space, requiring an infinitely expanded substratum, or subject ; which subject is the very substance of God, so expanded. Upon this hypothesis, there will be substance and substance, this substance and that substance, and yet but one numerical, individual, identical substance in the whole. This part will be one individual identical substance with that part : and a thousand several parts will not be so many substances, (though every one be substance,) but all will be one substance. This is Dr. Clarke’s avowed doctrine : he sees the consequence, he owns it ; as may appear from his own words<sup>1</sup>, in answer to the objection. And he must of course admit, that the one individual substance is both one in kind, in regard to the distinct parts, and one in

<sup>1</sup> “ No matter is one substance, but
 “ a heap of substances. And that I “ take to be the reason why matter is “ a subject incapable of thought, not “ because it is extended, but its parts

“ are distinct substances, ununited,
 “ and independent on each other :
 “ which (I suppose) is not the case of “ other substances.” Clarke’s Answer to the Sixth Letter, p. 40.

number also, in regard to the union of these parts in the whole. Upon these principles does the Doctor's famed Demonstration of the existence proceed; and upon these does it now stand.

I must next observe, that the same Dr. Clarke, in the year 1712, was disposed to publish, and did publish, a very ill book against the received faith of the Church; which he entitled, The Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity. He made a pompous show of texts, and pretended much to antiquity also: but as many as could look through the surface, and penetrate into the work, easily saw that the main strength of his performance rested upon two or three philosophical principles, by virtue whereof he was to turn and wrest Scripture, and Fathers too, to such a sense as he wished for; that is, to the Arian hypothesis. Among his philosophical principles, the most considerable of all, and which he oftenest retreated to in distress<sup>k</sup>, was this; that the defenders of the received doctrine, whenever they should come to explain, must inevitably split either upon Sabellianism or Tritheism: which presumption he grounded upon this reasoning; that the three Persons must be either specifically one, (one substance in kind only, while three substances in number,) which is Tritheism: or else they must be individually one substance, one in number in the strictest sense, which is plain Sabellianism. Which reasoning at length resolves into this principle; that substance and substance, however united, must always and inevitably make substances; and that there cannot possibly be such a thing as one substance in number and in kind too at the same time.

And now it could not but be pleasant enough to observe the Doctor and his friends confuting the Atheists upon this principle, that substance and substance united does not make substances, and at the same time confuting the Trinitarians upon the contrary supposition. Against Atheists, there might be substance one in kind and number too: but against the Trinitarians it is downright nonsense and contradiction. Against Atheists, union shall be sufficient to make sameness, and numerical substance shall be understood with due latitude: but against Trinitarians, the tables shall be turned; union shall not make sameness, and no sense of numerical substance shall serve here but what shall be the very reverse of the other. In a word, the affirmative shall serve the Doctor in one cause, and the negative in the other: and the self-same principle shall be evidently true there, and demonstrably false here, to support two several hypotheses.

<sup>k</sup> See my First and Second Defence, Query xxii. vol. i. and ii.

I had observed the thing long ago, before I published a syllable in the controversy: and that I might be the better satisfied, discoursed it sometimes over with friends; which still confirmed me the more in it. Having tried the thing every way, and being secure of that point, a point upon which the main cause, as I easily foresaw, would at length turn, I then proceeded to engage those gentlemen: and as often as they have been retreating to their dilemma about Sabellianism and Tritheism, (their impregnable fortress as they esteemed it,) I have objected to them their self-contradiction and inconsistency<sup>1</sup>; have retorted upon them their own avowed doctrine in another cause; have reminded them of their former (their present) sentiments in that article, and have sometimes pretty smartly taxed their notorious prevarication and partiality in the cause of the Trinity; while they insist upon principles here as of undoubted certainty, though they believe not a word of them, though they really disbelieve them in any cause else. For this I am called insolent by the meek and modest Observer: and by the judicious Author of the Remarks my conduct herein has been censured as ridiculous and monstrous<sup>m</sup>: by which I perceive, that the men are stung somewhere or other, and have sense enough to know when they are hurt; but have not learned how to bear it. One tells me, that I build almost all my hopes upon this discovery: another intimates, how happily for me my adversaries had advanced their notion, because otherwise I should have had nothing at all to say<sup>n</sup>. It is a great favour in them to allow that I have something at last: let us now examine what they have to say: I will reduce it to heads, for distinction sake.

1. They are sometimes inclinable to disown any such notion as I have charged upon them. The Author of the Remarks, being a nameless man, thinks he may safely say, that he “has nothing to do with that notion, one way or other<sup>o</sup>.” And even the writer whom I am now concerned with says, that “it is by mere conjecture only that Dr. Waterland has taken it to be his opinion at all<sup>p</sup>.” If it be Dr. Clarke that says this, his

<sup>1</sup> See First Defence, vol. i. p. 371, 372, 374, 446, 448, 479. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 423, 433, 539, 625, 646, 689, 697, 698, 708, 709, 713, 714.

<sup>m</sup> Remarks on Dr. Waterland's

Second Defence, p. 38.

<sup>n</sup> Remarks, p. 36.

<sup>o</sup> Ibid. p. 14.

<sup>p</sup> Observations, p. 100.

own books confute him: if Mr. Jackson, he knows that I am perfectly well acquainted with his real and full sentiments in that question. However, if Dr. Clarke's friends meanly desert him here, and in a point too on which his famed Demonstration very much depends; I will endeavour to do the Doctor justice so far, and shall not suffer him to be run down in a right thing, however I may blame him when I find him wrong.

2. Sometimes they complain of me as very unfair to take an advantage of an opinion of theirs, and to plead it as true, at the same time that I myself judge it to be erroneous and false<sup>q</sup>. But this is gross misrepresentation. I plead nothing but what I take to be very true; namely, that substance and substance in union does not always make substances; which is Dr. Clarke's doctrine as well as mine; and, if true against Atheists, cannot be false against the Trinitarians. Indeed, I do not admit (at least, I doubt of) their hypothesis about God's expanded substance: but their general principle of union being sufficient to make sameness, and of united substance, in things immaterial, being one substance, this I heartily close in with, and make no question of its truth and certainly.

3. They sometimes plead that, at best, this is only argumentum ad hominem<sup>r</sup>, and that it is therefore mean to insist upon it. Let them then first condemn Dr. Clarke for leading me into it: and when they have done, I will defend the Doctor, so far, by the concurring verdict of the whole Christian world, by the maxims of common sense, and by the prevailing custom of speech, which never gives the name of substances to any thing, but where the substance is separate, or separable. And I will further plead, that upon the hypothesis of extension this principle must be true; or else there is no such thing as one substance, or one being, in the world<sup>s</sup>. Further, if I had not such plain and cogent reasons for the truth of this principle; yet since I am here upon the defensive only, and am warding off an objection, I have a right to suppose it true, till my adversaries can prove the contrary. All these considerations put together are more than enough to answer the pretence of my arguing ad hominem.

4. They add further, that their explication of the omnipresence is not exactly parallel to my notion of the Trinity<sup>t</sup>. Nor did I

<sup>q</sup> See the Remarks, p. 37, &c.

p. 622, 623, 708.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 13.

<sup>t</sup> Remarks, p. 38.

<sup>s</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii.

ever pretend that it was exactly parallel: I have myself particularly shewn<sup>u</sup> wherein and how far the two cases differ. But, forasmuch as both agree in one general principle, (which was all that I wanted, and all that I insisted upon,) that substance in union with substance does not necessarily make substances, they are so far parallel: and so long as this principle stands its ground, (which will be as long as common sense shall stand,) so long will the received doctrine of the Trinity stand clear of the most important and most prevailing objection that metaphysics could furnish: and the boasted pretence of no medium between Sabellianism and Tritheism, which has been in a manner the sole support, the last refuge both of Socinians and Arians, is entirely routed and baffled by it. Hinc illæ lacrymæ, &c. that I may use now and then a scrap of Latin, as well as our Observer. I pass over several remarks of his, relating to this article, because now the reader will perceive how wide they are of the point in hand; and that they are only the uneasy struggles of a man fast bound and fettered; bearing it with great regret, and very desirous, if possible, to conceal it; though he shows it so much the more, by the laborious pains he spends upon it.

XVI. "What I suppose the Doctor more strictly means—"is this; that if, from the highest titles given to Christ in Scrip"ture, he cannot prove the Son to be naturally and necessarily "the God supreme over all; then neither can we, from the "highest titles given to the Father in Scripture, prove him to "be naturally and necessarily the God supreme over all, so as to "have no one above or superior to him in dominion." Observat.
 p. 110.

This representation of the case is pretty fair in the main, had but the author in his further process kept close to it, and made no change in it. My argument was this<sup>x</sup>; that Dr. Clarke and his friends, by their artificial elusions of every text brought for the divinity of God the Son, had marked out a way for eluding any text that could be brought for the divinity of God the Father. To make this plain, let it be premised, (as granted on both sides,) that there is discoverable, by the light of reason, the existence of some eternal, immutable, necessarily existing God: and now the question will be, how we prove from Scripture that any particular Person there mentioned is the eternal God, whose existence is proved by reason. We urge in favour of God the Son, that he is God, according to Scripture in the true and full meaning of the word; therefore he is the eternal God, and has no God above him. We urge that he is Jehovah, which implies necessary existence; therefore, again, he is the eternal God, who has no God above him. We plead further, that he is properly Creator, since the "heavens are the works of his hands, &c." therefore again he is the eternal God, who has no God above him. We further urge, that he is "over all, God blessed for ever," Rom. ix. 5. And παντοκράτωρ, Almighty, or God over all, who "is, and was, and is to come," Rev. i. 8.† which expressing necessary existence, and supreme dominion too, proves further that he is the eternal God, &c. The same thing we prove from several titles, and attributes, and honours, being all so many marks and characters of the one true and eternal God. These proofs of the Son's divinity are at the same time applicable to the Father, and so are proofs of the eternal divinity both of Father and Son. Now to come to our Arianizing gentlemen: they have found out ways and means, artifices, colours, quibbles, distinctions, to elude and frustrate them all. God is a word of office only<sup>z</sup>, not substance: Jehovah means only one faithful to his promises<sup>a</sup>: παντοκράτωρ, God over all, and the like, may bear a subordinate sense<sup>b</sup>. Every title or attribute assigned may admit of a limited construction. Well then: what remains to prove the eternal Godhead of the Person of the Father against any Marcionite, or other heretics that should assert another God superior to him? Here is the pinch of the present argument. This gentleman in answer asks, "Does he by whom God created all things claim as much to be the first cause of all things, as he that created all things by him? Does he who came not to do his own will, but the will of him that sent him, claim as much to have no superior, as he whose will he was sent to fulfil?" And he has more to the same purpose. To which I answer, that when all the proofs before mentioned of the Son's having no God above him are set aside, I allow that there would remain but very weak and slender presumptions of the Son's being equal to the Father, or of his

<sup>u</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 372.

341. Second Defence, vol. ii. p.

<sup>x</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 505, &c.

† See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 537, 538. Sermons, vol. ii. p. 141, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 562, &c.

<sup>z</sup> Clarke's Reply, p. 110, 200, 301. Scripture Doctrine, p. 296. ed. 1st.

<sup>a</sup> Collection of Queries, p. 19.

<sup>b</sup> Reply, p. 159.

having no God above him. But suppose (for argument sake) the Son thus proved to be inferior to the Father, when the texts before mentioned are all set aside; next shew, that the eternal God, known by the light of reason, is not, or may not be, another God above them both. What I assert is, that the same elusions, at least the same kind of elusions, will serve to frustrate every argument that has been or can be brought. Let us try the experiment upon those which this gentleman (after the last straining and racking of invention) has been able to produce. He builds his main hopes and confidence upon 1 Cor. viii. 6. "To us there is one God, the Father, of whom are all things." To which a Marcionite may make answer, that to us may not signify to the whole compass of beings; neither is there any necessity of interpreting all things in an unlimited sense, when it may very well bear a limited one. And supposing of whom are all things (that is, some things) to be meant of creating; yet since the work of creating is allowed not to prove the essential divinity of the Creator, here is nothing done still. The words one God prove nothing: for God being a word of office, it means little more than one King, or one Ruler. And so the whole amounts to this only, that to us of this earth, this system, there is one Ruler, who made all things in it. How does this prove that our Ruler is the eternal and necessarily existing God? The like may be said of Eph. iv. 6. One Ruler over this system, supreme King over all the earth, above all, and through all, and in all that belong to it. The last thing the gentleman has to offer is, that this Ruler claims to have no other God above him. This is not without its weight and force, though it has not a tenth part of the force of those arguments I have above mentioned, and which this gentleman knows how to elude. By a little straining, (as this writer knows how to strain much upon occasion,) this may be interpreted in a subordinate and limited sense, to signify supreme in these his dominions, having no rulers here to control or command him, or, no God of this kind, (that is, God by office only,) which does not exclude any God of another kind, the supreme God of the universe: for it would be improper to say, that the supreme God has an office<sup>c</sup>. It is not therefore proved, that there may not be, above him, another God; who is really and truly, and in the metaphysical sense, the eternal and necessarily existing God. This gentleman adds, speaking still of the Father, that he is sent by none, receives power and authority from none, acts by no one's commission, fulfils no one's will. It is true, it is not said that he is sent by any, or receives power from any one: and this may afford a probable presumption in favour of his being absolutely without any superior, and be as good a proof of it, as a mere negative proof can be. But as this is not said, so neither is the contrary; or if it were, it might bear a limited construction, so that the demonstration at length appears lame and defective.

<sup>c</sup> See Reply, p. 220.

I should have been very sorry to engage in an argument of this kind, but to convince some persons of the great imprudence, as well as impiety, of throwing aside so many clear, solid, and substantial proofs, which the holy Scripture affords, of the eternal divinity of God the Father, and resting it at last upon so weak and so precarious a bottom; at the same time introducing such a wanton way of eluding and frustrating the plainest texts, that it looks more like burlesquing Scripture, than commenting upon it. I heartily beseech all well-disposed persons to beware of that pride of pretended reason, and that levity of spirit, which daily paves the way for infidelity, and a contempt of all religion; which has spread visibly, and been productive of very ill effects, ever since this new sect has risen up amongst us.

XVII. "The Doctor cannot possibly express his (notion) in any words of Scripture: and, when called upon to do it, he has only this jesting answer to make, Do you imagine that I cannot as easily, or more easily, find Scripture words for mine? But this is trifling<sup>d</sup>. And again: You blame me for not expressing my faith in any Scripture position: as if every thing I assert as matter of faith were not as much Scripture position, according to my way of understanding Scripture, as yours is to you<sup>e</sup>, &c.—Undoubtedly it is just as much so; that is, not at all. For neither one man's nor another man's interpretation, or way of understanding Scripture, is at all a Scripture position: but the texts themselves only are Scripture positions, with which no man's interpretation can without the greatest presumption be equalled." Observations, p. 113.

The civility and the sense of this worthy passage are both of

<sup>d</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 706.
where I add, "Why have you not laid down your doctrine in Scripture words, that I might compare it with "the Doctor's propositions, to see how far they exceed, or come short?"

<sup>e</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 694.

a piece. Why is my answer called a jesting answer? I never was more serious, nor ever said a thing with better reason, than when I called that pretence trifling. If nothing will satisfy but exposing his weak reasoning at full length, it must be done.

1. In the first place, what has he gained by giving us the whole of his notion (as he calls it) in the very words of Scripture? The words are, "one Spirit; one Lord; one God and Father of all, who is above all." Had Dr. Clarke done no more than cited these words, could any man have ever known the whole of his notion, or ever suspected him to be an Arian? His propositions and replies are the things that contain the whole of his notion, and not these words, which do not contain it.

2. Again, let but a Socinian understand these words as he pleases, and they may as well contain the whole of his notion. A Sabellian will tell you the same. I shall not despair, reserving to myself my own construction, of maintaining my claim also, and making the same words contain the whole of my notion. Well then, here will be four different or contrary positions, and all of them Scripture positions, to their respective patrons and abettors. What must we do now? Oh, says the Arian, but mine is the Scripture position, (for it is in the very words of Scripture,) yours is interpretation. Ridiculous, says the Socinian; are not my words the very same with yours, and as good Scripture as yours? I tell you, yours is interpretation, and mine only is the Scripture position. Hold, I beseech you, gentlemen, says a Sabellian, or any Athanasian, why do you exclude me? I tell you, the words contain my notion to a tittle, and they are Scripture words; mine therefore is the Scripture position.

Now if this writer can end the dispute any other way than by shewing whose is the best interpretation of the four, and by admitting that best interpretation for the only Scripture position; he shall have the reputation of a shrewd man, and the honour of being the author of that sage maxim, that texts themselves only are Scripture positions.

3. I cannot help observing further, what a fine handle he has here given for such as adhere to the letter, in any instance, against the sense of Scripture. For the letter, in such a case, upon this gentleman's principles, must pass for the Scripture position: and the other being interpretation only, or drawn out by reason and argument, must not be equalled with it, under pain and peril of presumptuousness. The Quakers must thank him highly. "Swear

“not at all,” say they: Can there be ever a plainer Scripture position? Can the opposite party bring any text like it? Can they express their notion in Scripture words like these? No: their notion can be reckoned only as interpretation, and must never be set against a plain Scripture position.

An Anthropomorphite will insult over his adversary on the same foot. He will produce many and plain texts, where God is represented with eyes, ears, face, heart, hands, or feet. There are no texts so plain on the other side. The plainest is where it is said, God is πνεῦμα, which yet is capable of divers constructions, and every one is only interpretation, never to be equalled with Scripture position.

The Apollinarians, or other heretics, will insult. “The Word “was made flesh:” was made, not took upon him; and flesh, not man. They will challenge their adversaries to produce any text so plain on their side, and will value themselves, no doubt, upon the Scripture position; to which the interpretation, however just or necessary, must not be equalled.

To mention one more, the very Papists will assume upon it, and even in favour of transubstantiation. “This is my body,” is a Scripture position: and, “Except ye eat the flesh of the “Son of man, and drink his blood, you have no life in you.” Let any Protestant produce a text, if possible, as full and expressive of his notion, as these are of the other; or else let him confess that his is interpretation only, which is by no means to be equalled with Scripture position.

This gentleman is pleased to say, that transubstantiation has some colour in the “bare words of Scripture, though,” as he adds, “none in the sense.” But what is the sense till it be drawn out by interpretation? The words, according to him, are the Scripture position; to which no interpretation must be equalled.

To conclude this head; if this writer will understand by Scripture position, the sense and meaning of Scripture rightly interpreted, I shall readily prove to him that my main positions, in regard to the ever blessed Trinity, are all Scripture positions. But if he means any thing else, let him first answer the Quakers, the Anthropomorphites, the Apollinarians, and Papists, as to the texts alleged; and then we shall take care to answer him about Ephes. iv. 6. or any other text he shall please to produce.

He talks much of my putting my “own explications of a doc“trine, in the place of the doctrine to be explained;” and spends a whole observation upon it. He certainly aims at something in it; though I profess I cannot well understand what: nor do I think that he himself distinctly knows what it is that he means. If he means, that I have put what I have collected from many texts, or from the whole tenor of Scripture, into a narrow compass, or into a few words, as our Church, as all Christian churches have done; I see no harm in it. If he means, that I substitute my own doctrine in the room of the Church’s doctrine, or of the Scripture doctrine, I deny the charge, and leave him to prove it at leisure. If he means that I take upon me to call the received doctrine the doctrine of the Trinity, in opposition to his doctrine, which is not properly the doctrine of a Trinity<sup>f</sup>, nor true doctrine, but heresy; I own the fact, and have said enough to justify it. And this gentleman will be hard put to it, to make good his pretended parallel between teaching this doctrine, and asserting transubstantiation; which is a calumny that he has twice repeated, p. 95, 112, and which he has borrowed from the Papists, though abundantly confuted long ago by learned and judicious hands<sup>g</sup>.

XIX. This gentleman represents me (p. 63, 64, and 120.) as changing the word ἀγέννητος into ἀγέννητος, in innumerable passages of ancient authors, without any pretence of manuscripts; nay, without any pretence of authority for so doing. This is great misrepresentation: and he is herein guilty at least of fraudulently concealing what I do pretend, and what authority I had for it. Let but my Second Defence be consulted<sup>h</sup>, and it will there be seen, that I had good reason, and sufficient authority, even for correcting the manuscripts in relation to that word; shewing by an historical deduction, and critical reasons, what the reading ought to be, and what it anciently was: which is of much greater weight than the readings of manuscripts (supposing them to agree, which yet is doubtful) in an instance of this kind, where the copyists might so easily mistake, the difference being no more than that of a single or double letter. I laid down rules whereby to judge of the readings in this case. If this gentleman can either confute them, or give better, I shall stand corrected. In the mean while, he has been acting an ungenerous and unrighteous part, in the representation here given, and ought to make satisfaction to his readers for it.

<sup>f</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. relating to the Popish Controversy. p. 689.

<sup>h</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 572,

<sup>g</sup> See the Collection of Pamphlets &c.

CHAP. III.

Concerning the Author's Flouts, Abuses, declamatory Exclamations, Repartees, &c. in lieu of Answers.

WE shall meet with many instances of this kind in the course of his work: I shall point out some of them in order as they occur.

I. Page 9th, and 10th, to the solutions I had given of his great objection, wherein he pleads for a natural superiority of dominion over God the Son, and to what I had urged about the Father and Son mutually glorifying each other<sup>i</sup>; he is pleased only to say, "If any man who, to say no more, reads seriously "this chapter, (John xvii,) can believe this to be the doctrine of "Christ, I think it can be to no purpose to endeavour to convince him of any thing."

He introduces these words, indeed, with some pretence to reasoning; though it is really made up of nothing else but his own shufflings and mistakes. I have never said that the Father might not have disdained to have been incarnate. He might, he could not but disdain to be so; because it was not proper nor congruous for the Father, or first Person, to condescend to it. And admitting that it was possible for him to have been incarnate; it does not follow that the Father could become a Son, or the Son Father; their relation to each other being natural, and unalterable.

II. Page the 13th, he is pleased to cite, imperfectly, my words wherein I answer and obviate<sup>k</sup> his pretences from 1 Cor. viii. 6. by reasons drawn from the context, and very plain ones. He tells us, instead of replying, that "the Doctor endeavours to "cover the reader with a thick dust of words, that have no signification;" and that it could scarce "have been believed, that "such a twist of unintelligible words should have dropped from

<sup>i</sup> Expostulatio clarificationis dandæ, vicissimque reddendæ, nec Patri quidquam admittit, nec infirmat Filium; sed eandem divinitatis ostendit in utroque virtutem; cum et clarifi-

cari se Filius a Patre oret, et clarificationem Pater non dedignetur a Filio. Hilar. p. 814.

<sup>k</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 701.

“ the pen of a serious writer.” I am sorry for his slowness of apprehension: but I am persuaded rather, that he understood the twist of words too well to attempt any answer.

III. To the objection about the Son’s receiving dominion, I had shewn<sup>l</sup>, how both Father and Son may receive dominion, and increase of dominion; intimating that dominion is an external relation which may accrue to any of the divine Persons, and is no argument against their equal perfection. This gentleman turns it off by misrepresentation, (p. 16,) to this purpose; “ As “ if the Father’s receiving the kingdom, &c. was as much an “ argument of the Son’s supremacy over the Father, as the “ Son’s receiving,” &c. and concludes: “ Was ever any thing so “ ludicrous upon so important a subject?” Which is first making a ridiculous blunder of his own, and then, to shew still greater indeecency and levity, beginning the laugh himself. I did not plead for any supremacy of the Son over the Father; but was shewing, that economical conveyance of dominion on one hand, or economical reception of dominion on the other, is no bar to equality of nature.

IV. To a reply made by me<sup>m</sup>, about the sense of exalting, (Phil. ii. 9,) which sense I vindicated at large, and then asked, where now is there any appearance of absurdity? to this the author here returns me a flout, though in the words of an Apostle: “ If any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant.” This, he thinks, is the only proper answer, p. 19. The next time he is disposed to jest, or shew his wit, he should be advised to choose some other than Scripture words to do it in. I shall endeavour however, that he may not be ignorant hereafter, by taking care to inform him, that when I interpret exalting in such a sense as men exalt God, in opposition to another sense of exalting to an higher place or dignity, I could not be supposed to mean, that the Father is inferior to Christ, as men are inferior to God: it must be great maliciousness to insinuate that I had any such meaning. But as inferiors may exalt superiors in the sense of extolling, or praising; so undoubtedly may equals exalt equals in the same sense of extolling, or praising; and thus God the Father exalted his coequal Son.

V. Upon a remark of mine<sup>n</sup>, or rather not mine, in relation to the construction of two Greek words, (εἰς δόξαν<sup>o</sup>.) this gentle-

<sup>l</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 445.
446.                   <sup>m</sup> Ibid. p. 549.

<sup>n</sup> Ibid. p. 668.
<sup>o</sup> Phil. ii. 11.

man, full of himself, breaks out into "wonder, that some men of great abilities and great learning can never be made to understand grammar." These men that our writer so insults over, as not understanding grammar, are, we should know, such men as Beza, Grotius, Schmidius, and the top critics; who unanimously assert that eis is often put for ἐν, and some admit it even in this very text. This gentleman is pleased to deny that one is ever put for the other. I might very justly decline entering into that dispute, because, as it happens, our learned grammarian confirms the construction he finds fault with in this text, by the very instance brought to confute it; which, if it does not shew want of grammar, shews want of thought.

His words are: "If I mean to affirm that a man is in the field, I can with equal propriety of speech say either that he is ἐν ἀγρῷ, or εἰς ἀγρὸν, because the sense, in this case, happens to be the same whether I say that he is in the field, or that he is gone, or carried, into the field." Admitting this to be so, then I hope εἰς δόξαν may as well signify in the glory, because the sense, in this case, is the same, whether Christ be said to be in the glory, or gone into the glory; that glory which he had "before the world was," and into which he reentered after his passion and ascension, which is called "entering into his glory," Luke xxiv. 26. This is sufficient for me, in regard to the text I am concerned with.

As to this author's new rule of grammar, (which happens to do him no service,) I may leave it to the mercy of the critics; who perhaps may take it for a vain conceit in matter of criticism, as he has discovered many, both in divinity and philosophy: the same turn of mind will be apt to shew itself in like instances in all. I know not whether this gentleman will be able, upon the foot of his new rule, to give a tolerable account of the use of the preposition εἰς in such examples as here follow: εἰς τὸν κόλπον, John i. 18, εἰς ὃν εὐδόκησεν, Matt. xii. 18. εἰς ἄδου, (suppl. οἴκον.) Acts ii. 31, εἰς διαταγὰς ἀγγέλων, Acts vii. 53, εἰς τὸ γῆρας, Gen. xxi. 2. He must suppose, at least, something understood (as in his other instance, gone into, or carried into,) beyond what is expressed, to make the preposition εἰς stand with equal propriety: and so he must solve by an ellipsis what others solve by a change of prepositions. Which at last is changing one phrase for another phrase, or using one form of speech instead of another which would be clearer and more expressive. To me it seems, that the easier and better account is that which our ablest critics hitherto have given; that one preposition or particle may be, and often is, put for another: which may be owing to several accidental causes among the different idioms of various languages borrowing one from another. To instance in quia, or quoniam, for quod, by a Grecism: for since it happens that  $\delta\tau\iota$  may sometimes signify this and sometimes that, these two renderings by degrees come to be used one for the other. The like might be observed in many other cases of the same kind: but I am not willing to weary the reader with grammatical niceties, of small importance to the point in hand.

VI. To an assertion of mine, namely, that there was no impossibility, in the nature of the thing itself, that the Father should be incarnate, (an assertion which all that have professed a coequal Trinity have ever held, and still hold,) only it is not so suitable or congruous to the first Person to have been so: to this the gentleman replies, "Do not the reader's ears tingle?" And he goes on declaiming for a whole page of repetition. This is the gentleman, who in his preface enters a  caveat against making "applications to the passions of the ignorant;" as if he meant to engross the privilege entirely to himself.

VII. In the next page, (p. 29,) he seemed disposed to give some answer to an observation of mine, that by voluntary economy the exercise of powers common to many may devolve upon one chiefly, and run in his name<sup>9</sup>. After some fruitless labouring, as we may imagine, to make some reply, out comes a scrap of Latin, from an old comedy, Quid est, si hæc contumelia non est? which, if the reader pleases, he is to take for an answer.

VIII. From page 39th to 47th, this writer goes on declaiming about the supposed absurdity of the Father's appearing according to the ancients.

Bishop Bull<sup>r</sup>, and after him, I have particularly, fully, and distinctly considered that whole matter, and have answered every thing that has been or can be brought in the way of reason or argument, against the divinity of God the Son from that topic<sup>s</sup>. Yet this writer, applying only to the passions of the ignorant, and 252. Second Def. vol. ii. p. 479 to 485.

<sup>9</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 686.

<sup>s</sup> Answer to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii. p.

<sup>r</sup> Bull. D. F. sect. iv. c. 3. Breves Animadv. in Gilb. Cler. p. 1044, &c.

roving in generals, displays his talent for eight or nine pages together. And among other Fathers, he is weak enough to bring St. Austin in, as voucher for the absurdity of the Father's being sent, appearing, &c. For verily, if St. Austin, who undoubtedly believed there was no natural impossibility †, but only great incongruity in the thing, could yet use such a strong expression of it as absurdissime ‡, what consequence can be drawn from the expressions of other Fathers, which scarce any of them come up to this? But St. Austin was professedly for the Father's appearing, and objects only against his being sent; which this writer seems not to know. I have remarked upon him before in relation to Tertullian in this very matter, nor need I add more §.

IX. There is a sentence in my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 507, (repeated, in sense, p. 512, 513,) which has happened to fall under the displeasure of this gentleman. My words are:

“What has supremacy of office to do with the notion of supreme God? God is a word expressing nature and substance: he is supreme God, or God supreme, that has no God of a superior nature above him. Such is Christ, even while he submits and condescends to act ministerially.” To the former part of this passage we have the following smart repartee: “What has supremacy of office, or authority and dominion to do with the notion of supreme man.—Is not man (in the same way of reasoning) a word expressing nature and substance? Quam ridicule!” p. 50. Now, for my part, I never heard of supreme man. Man is the word upon which the argument turns; for which reason I have thrown out supreme King, or Governor, as not pertinent. And as no supremacy of office can make one man more truly or more properly man, or man in a higher sense of the word man; so it seemeth to me that no supremacy of office can make God the Father more truly God, or God in a † Solus Pater non legitur missus, quoniam solus non habet auctorem a quo genitus sit, vel a quo procedat. Et ideo non propter naturæ diversitatem, quæ in Trinitate nulla est, sed propter ipsam auctoritatem, solus Pater non dicitur missus. Non enim splendor, aut fervor ignem, sed ignis mittit sive splendorem, sive fervorem. August. contr. Sermon. Arian. c. 4.

‡ Pater non dicitur missus; non enim habet de quo sit, aut ex quo procedat—si voluisset Deus Pater per subjectam creaturam visibiliter apparere, absurdissime tamen aut a Filio quem genuit, aut a Spiritu Sancto qui de illo procedit, missus diceretur. August. de Trin. lib. iv. c. 28, 32.

§ See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii. p. 252. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 480, &c.

higher sense than is God the Son. There was no great reason for the gentleman's bursting out into merriment upon it, with his quam ridicule: but perhaps his infirmity, as usual, overcame him.

X. To a well known plea on our side, that God could not be God merely in the sense of dominion, having been God from everlasting, and before dominion commenced, the Observer thus speaks: "But is it in reality no character of dominion, " no relative character, to have in himself an essential power " from eternity to eternity, of producing what subjects he thinks " fit, and of destroying what subjects he thinks fit, and of producing new subjects of his government at pleasure? Was ever " such trifling in serious matters?" Truly, I think not, if the last part be intended for an answer to the first; as any stranger might judge, who knows not that both come from the same hand. This gentleman is so taken up with grammar, it seems, that he has forgotten the first elements of logic; which will teach him that relate and correlate always rise and fall together. Where can the relative character be, while as yet there is supposed to exist but one term of relation? It is true, God can make to himself new relations by making new creatures when he pleases: but when he had as yet, for an eternity backwards, no relation to any creature at all, none being created, I humbly conceive he was under no such relative character, nor had any dominion; consequently could not be God in the sense of dominion<sup>γ</sup>. This writer therefore might have spared his ridicule for a more proper occasion, had the gaiety of his heart permitted him to think seriously of the matter. As to what he has further upon the same question, it is no more than repetition of what I fully answered long ago<sup>z</sup>. And the main of the question was before given up in the Reply<sup>a</sup>: as I observed also in my Second Defence<sup>b</sup>.

XI. When this writer comes to the head of worship, (Observat. viii.) he repeats some stale pleas used by the party, and which have all been particularly considered and confuted in my Defences, vol. i. and ii. As to reinforcing the pleas with any new matter, or taking off the force of the answers given, he is

<sup>γ</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 517.

<sup>a</sup> Reply, p. 119.

<sup>z</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 302, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 517, 518.

<sup>b</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 510, 539, 566.

not solicitous about it. But here a scoff and there a flout he flings at his adversary. P. 78, he cites a sentence of mine<sup>c</sup> in a scoffing manner, calling it an excellent commentary upon two texts, (1 John ii. 1. Hebr. vii. 25.) which texts, he conceives, teach us to "pray to Christ, to pray in heaven for us:" in the mean while taking no notice of what I had said to obviate so low and mean a notion of God the Son, and to cut off the pretence of creature-worship. Having gone on with repetition as far as he thought proper, he next vouchsafes to take notice that I had made some replies: and one of them he confutes, by saying, that there will be found in it a singular dexterity, p. 81. Another, by saying, "If any serious reader finds any instruction or "improvement in it, it is well," p. 84. A third, by a scrap of Latin, from the Comedian, Quid cum isto homine facias? The English of which seems to be, that he has thought every way to come at some solution, is disappointed in all, and knows not what to do more; except it be to flout and scoff, that whatever reputation he and his friends had once gained, by beginning like serious men, (in which way I was ready to go on with them,) they may at length throw up, by ending like—— XII. Page the 86th, this writer comes to speak of individuality and sameness; in which I had been beforehand with him, answering all his pretences on that head<sup>d</sup>. Instead of replying, he goes on in his way. "Individuality and sameness," says he, "are "words, it seems, which signify nobody knows what:" because, forsooth, I had exposed his weak pretences to shew what makes it, or what its principle is. He refers me to his Reply<sup>e</sup>, to convince me of the absurdity of my way of talking. I had seen, I had considered his Reply long ago, and exposed the weakness of it<sup>f</sup>: what pity is it that he is forced to leave it at last helpless, and entirely destitute of any reinforcement.

XIII. He is further angry with me for calling upon him to explain his terms<sup>g</sup>, particularly supreme and independent. As to the first of them, he says, (p. 87,) it is "a term which no man, he "believes, before Dr. Waterland, misunderstood." Whether I misunderstood it or no, may be a question. I think the English of it is highest: and as high or low may have respect to variety of things, to place, to dignity, to dominion, to office, to order, to

<sup>c</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 655.

<sup>d</sup> Ibid. p. 618, &c. 556, 707, 708.

<sup>e</sup> Reply, p. 307, 308.

<sup>f</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 619.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. p. 674.

nature, &c., it was but just in Dr. Waterland to call for an explanation, that so the word supreme might be admitted or rejected under proper distinctions.

Independent is likewise a word variously understood according to variety of respects. God the Son, for instance, is dependent on the Father, as being of him, and from him, and referred up to him: but he is not dependent on the Father's will, or pleasure, being necessarily existing as well as the Father. Every Person of the Trinity is independent of any thing ad extra; but none of them are entirely independent of each other, having a necessary relation to one another, that they must and cannot but exist together, never were, never could be separate, or asunder. This is sufficient to justify my calling for an explanation of independent. Which this gentleman would not have been offended at, but that it touches him in a tender part: it is breaking through his coverts, letting the world in upon him, when he has a mind to be retired, and to lie concealed under equivocal and ambiguous terms.

The term authority was another equivocal word, which I was willing to distinguish upon <sup>b</sup>. This writer being extremely desirous of finding a governor for God the Son and God the Holy Ghost, says; "As if any man, since the world began, ever did or ever " could mean, by those terms, not power and dominion." It were easy to quote a multitude of writers, ancient and modern, that use the word authority, without reference to dominion; and who when they ascribe it to the Father, as his peculiar, never mean to express any the least dominion over the other two Persons by it. I content myself here with two only, both quoted in my Second Defence <sup>i</sup>, namely, St. Austin and Bishop Pearson. It would be endless to instruct this gentleman in all the useful things which he wants to know. He does not know, that as early as the days of St. Austin, the very distinction which I insist upon, as to the equivocal sense of authority in this case, was taken notice of, and pleaded against one of his Arian predecessors, Maximin <sup>k</sup>; so little is he acquainted with what men of letters have been doing since the world began.

Upon this occasion he drops a maxim, as he takes it to be,

<sup>b</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 417, 517.

<sup>i</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 516, 630. See other testimonies in Petavius, de Trin. lib. v. c. 5. sect. 11, 12, 13. lib. ii. c. 2. sect. 9. and in Bull. D. F. sect. iv. c. 1. p. 254.

<sup>k</sup> Augustin. cont. Maxim. lib. iii. c. 5, 14.

that "nothing can be the same in kind and in number too." The Author of the Remarks is full of the same thing<sup>1</sup>. I have already hinted, how contradictory this pretended maxim is to Dr. Clarke's known and avowed principles in another cause. To answer now more directly, and to cut off their main argument at once; I observe, that though in finite things, especially things corporeal, those that are one substance in kind are more than one substance in number; yet the reason is not, because they are one in kind, but because they are really separate, or separable from each other: and so it happens, that while they are one substance in kind, they are not one in number. But where the substance is neither separate nor separable, (as in the divine Persons,) there unity of kind and number are consistent, and meet in one: and thus the unity is both specific and individual, without any the least repugnancy, or appearance of it<sup>m</sup>.

XIV. Page the 93rd, we meet with several little efforts to say something, but with a very ill spirit, and shewing more of the author's spleen than his abilities. He scoffs at the advice given him, not to pretend to be wise in the deep things of God. He is positive that an infinitely active Being can, if he pleases, entirely cease to act; that God's loving himself, however it may be the prime mover in all the divine acts, is no act at all; and that God never naturally or necessarily exerts any power; for this wise reason, because in such a case he can have no power to exert: that is, because the will is the original (with this writer) of all exerting of power, which was the point in question. He has left several very material things I urged upon this head perfectly untouched<sup>n</sup>: but seems to be affronted that any man should question whatever he has been pleased to affirm, or should not take his dictates for demonstrations.

XV. There is a place which I have passed over in p. 62. but deserves to be mentioned under this chapter. I happened to find fault with Dr. Clarke, for pretending to prove the existence of a first Cause, a priori<sup>o</sup>: which has no sense without supposing a cause prior to the first, which is flat contradiction. This plain reasoning is called turning the pretended proof into ridicule; though, in my notion, reasoning is one thing, and ridiculing another. However, the gentleman being grievously offended, re-

<sup>1</sup> Remarks, p. 25.

<sup>m</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 620, 671.

<sup>n</sup> Ibid. p. 623, 624.

<sup>o</sup> Ibid. p. 695.

solves to revenge himself in a note. Repeating some words of mine, out of the place I have referred to in my Second Defence, vol. ii. he enters a remark: "These words shew that Dr. Waterland does not understand what the meaning of a proof a priori is." I should be glad to receive information on this head from our great dictator in science: and if he understands the thing so well, the reader might have expected some explanation of it at his hands, that it might be seen where Dr. Waterland's mistake lay. Till this be done, I will presume to think, that what I said was perfectly right; and that neither Dr. Clarke nor his friends can return any reply, more than abuses to it. Dr. Cudworth was one that had travelled in the argument as far as any man, and had as good an inclination to prove the existence a priori, as Dr. Clarke could have. But he was a wise man, and saw clearly how that matter stood. Let us hear what he says, after many years' thought and meditation. Speaking of what he had done in his last chapter, he has these words: "We therein also demonstrate the absolute impossibility of all atheism, and the actual existence of a God: we say demonstrats; not a priori, which is impossible, and contradictionous, but "by necessary inference from principles altogether undeniable<sup>P</sup>." I do not want Dr. Cudworth's or any man's authority for a maxim of common sense, and as plain as that two and two are four: but the plainer it is, so much the greater wonder that men of parts and abilities could not see it, or are yet ignorant of it.

The most knowing men hitherto have been contented with the proofs a posteriori, as being sufficient, and the only ones that are so. And they have rightly judged, that to pretend more is betraying great ignorance of things, and is exposing the clearest and best cause in the world to the insults of atheism and infidelity. These gentlemen endeavour to blind this matter by substituting ground and reason in the room of cause. Let them say plainly what they mean by this cause, ground, or reason, or whatever else they please to call it. They will at length find the words either to have no sense, or to contain that absurd sense of a cause prior to the first. Is this ground, reason, &c. the substance itself? The consequence then is, that the substance is the cause or ground of itself. Is it any attribute or attributes of that substance? The consequence then is, that attributes are the cause or ground of the subject or substance. Let them turn it which way they will, the absurdity still recurs, till they please to allow, (what is both sense and truth,) that the first Cause is absolutely uncaused; and that it is nonsense to talk of any ground or cause of that substance which is itself the ground and cause of all things. But it is pleaded (p. 63.) that if God may "exist absolutely "without any ground or reason" (that is, cause) "of existence, "it would follow that he might likewise as well without any "cause or reason cease to exist." Which is as much as to say, that unless there be a cause prior to the first, which exists necessarily, it will follow that the first Cause does not exist necessarily, but may cease to be. What is this, but making the notion of a first Cause repugnant, and contradictory to itself; or in short, denying any such thing as a first Cause? I think it sufficient to say, that it is the property of the first Cause to exist necessarily: he must, and cannot but exist from eternity to eternity. If existence be considered as an attribute of that first Cause, the sole ground, reason, or subject of it is the substance itself so existing; which is therefore the support of that and of every other attribute. All pretended grounds, reasons, causes, &c. in this case, can resolve into nothing but the actual existence of such a Being. Prove first a posteriori, that it is fact that he does exist; and the necessary manner of his existing is proved at the same time. It is nonsense to run up higher for an antecedent ground, reason, or cause, after we are come to the top, and can go no higher; unless this writer is disposed to go on ad infinitum, and never to come at a first Cause at all. But he has been so used, it seems, to talk in this way upon other subjects, that he thinks it strange he may not do it here too; and that he may not talk of an antecedent reason for what has not any thing antecedent, as well as for what has. Such is his great proficiency in metaphysics.

<sup>P</sup> Cudworth's Intellect. Syst. Preface.

I should have been willing to have passed over the Doctor's misconduct in this argument, had it not accidentally fallen in with our present subject. The cause of Theism, and his good intentions, and, I believe, very honest endeavours in it, might have been his protection. But since this matter has at length been brought in, and admits of no just defence; it is good to acquaint this gentleman, that it will not be carried through, either by confident dictating, or by throwing out abuses. But I proceed.

XVI. Page the 91st, this gentleman, speaking of me, says as follows: "Having been told, that whenever the Deity, or divine nature, [τὸ Θεῖον,] is spoken of as an object of adoration, it is not by way of accuracy, (as the Doctor had absurdly pretended,) but on the contrary by a mere figurative way of speaking, put for God himself, just as we frequently say the king's majesty, not meaning the majesty of the king, but the king himself; his answer is, that his affirming the contrary is sufficient against our bare affirmation. If the reader thinks it so, I am willing to leave it to him."

That this writer is offended, one may perceive. I shall endeavour to set the matter however in a clear light. In my Defence<sup>q</sup> I have these words:

"God alone is to be worshipped, the Creator in opposition to all creatures whatever, the τὸ Θεῖον, as Clemens of Alexandria<sup>r</sup> and Origen<sup>s</sup> sometimes accurately express it: which also Tertullian<sup>t</sup> seems to intimate in the words, quod colimus, above cited."

The Author of the Reply having a fancy, that worship cannot be properly said to be paid to the divine, or any nature, but to Person only, was pleased to put in his answer<sup>u</sup> to what I had said, in the words he has since repeated. To a bare affirmation of his, and positively laid down, only to serve an hypothesis, I first returned a counter affirmation, (disputants, as I thought, being always upon a level in such cases, and never obliged to take each other's word for proof;) but presently subjoined<sup>x</sup> some remarks and references, about the sense of τὸ Θεῖον in Greek writers, and particularly in Clemens and Origen: from which I had reason to conclude, that τὸ Θεῖον properly signifies the divine nature, or substance, or God considered substantially as res divina, and not according to personal characters, acts, or offices. That this was the sense of Clemens, when he speaks of the τὸ Θεῖον, as the object of worship, might appear plainly from the places I referred to; particularly from those I have again noted<sup>y</sup> in my margin. And the reason why both Clemens and Origen chose that expression rather than Θεός, was to be more

<sup>q</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 420.

<sup>r</sup> Ὁμοσεύειν τὸ Θεῖον. Clem. Alex. p. 778. Ox. ed.

<sup>s</sup> Σεβει τὸ Θεῖον, &c. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 307.

<sup>t</sup> Ἀνακαλεῖται εἰς τὴν ἀγάπην τοῦ Θεοῦ φέστω. ἀπέχου μὴτε εὐσεβῆ. Orig.

contr. Cels. p. 189.

<sup>u</sup> Quod colimus Deus unus est, &c. Tertull. Apol. cap. xvii.

<sup>x</sup> Reply, p. 350.

<sup>y</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 667, 668.

<sup>z</sup> Clem. Alex. p. 30. 836.

emphatical and expressive against Pagan worship offered to things of a frail and corruptible nature, to created beings. I think, it was paying great respect to this gentleman's bare affirmation, to trace the sense of τὸ Θεῖον so far as I did in opposition to it; as may appear by my references. And though I threw in a parenthesis, saving to myself the just claims of every disputant, he need not have been offended at it, as if it were intended as an affront to his superior learning or judgment, to set mine against it: I had no such thought in it. But however raised and extraordinary his abilities may be, and however high an opinion he conceives his readers should have of them, he ought nevertheless to have taken some notice of what I had pleaded; if not as a critic, yet as an honest man: and I cannot but think it too assuming still, to expect that his bare dictates shall have more weight than another's reasons.

XVII. To an observation of mine out of Tertullian, that God the Son is an Angel and Messenger, not by nature but by office<sup>z</sup>, he returns me this answer: "Can any man tell what the being "a messenger by nature means<sup>a</sup>?" No: but he may know what an angel by nature means, which was the word I designed the distinction for, and to which alone it referred; as my argument, and the quotation at the bottom, sufficiently shewed: and all the fault was in not throwing the word Messenger into brackets. The reason of bringing it in appears from what went before. This is low carping: but no doubt the author intended a smart repartee. He has such another piece of smartness in the same page, relating to the word servility; which he charges me with adding deceitfully, as synonymous to subjection<sup>b</sup>, because of the quite different sense of that word in the English language. Whatever sense it be that he speaks of, as to the English, I am sure nobody but himself can mistake my sense of it, in the place where I used it, nor think the word improper. But this gentleman seems to be so elated upon his skill in language, that he can scarce allow others to understand their mother tongue.

XVIII. He has some ingenious thoughts and smart sayings, p. 40, which must not be omitted. They are bestowed upon a passage of mine<sup>c</sup>, where I say, that the Father was not to be visible, so much as per assumptas species, by visible symbols, because he was not to minister, or be incarnate. The remark

<sup>z</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 479.

<sup>a</sup> Observations, p. 26.

<sup>b</sup> See my Second Def. vol. ii. p. 464.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 490.

hereupon is: "It seems from these words, that Dr. Waterland " does not suppose the incarnation of Christ to be at all real, " but merely a phantasm, per assumptas species: this being con- " fessedly the only way in which there was any natural possibility " for the Father to be incarnate. And accordingly in his expli- " cation of that text, (Phil. ii. 7.) he tells us that Christ emptied " himself in appearance."

I passed over this uncommon turn of his, when I met with it in the Reply<sup>d</sup>. I saw he was strangely lost and bewildered; and I was willing to give him time to recover and recollect. But by his repeating it here, he appears to be very fond of it: and this, no doubt, is one of the arguments which, (as he tell us in his preface,) upon the most careful review, he believes to be strictly and perfectly conclusive. I am ashamed to answer such impertinencies: but sometimes it must be done. His first mistake is, understanding per assumptas species of a phantasm: but this was to make way for what was to come after, and to answer to appearance. His second is, in pretending that this was the only way that it was naturally possible for the Father to be incarnate. For neither would this way have amounted to any incarnation at all, being only præliudium incarnationis, as it was anciently called: nor is a real incarnation naturally less possible than that was. His third is, in not distinguishing between the taking up visible symbols for a while to appear by, and being personally united to the human nature, which is incarnation. His fourth is so gross, (not to perceive the difference between veiling the glories of the Godhead, and having no real manhood;) that I can hardly suppose his thoughts were at home when he wrote it. But the word appearance seems to have struck his imagination at once, and to have made him jump immediately, without any pre- mises, into a marvellous conclusion.

XIX. Page the 74th, &c. he undertakes to shew, that, upon his hypothesis, the existence of God the Son is not precarious. I could scarce have believed, till I saw the Reply, that any man of tolerable parts or discretion would have engaged in so silly an argument. But there is a necessity for it, it seems: and this is the second time that he has resolved to shut his eyes against common sense<sup>e</sup> in this very article.

We are to observe, that he denies the necessary existence of

<sup>d</sup> Reply, p. 59, 181.

<sup>e</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 545.

God the Son ; which is directly making his existence contingent, which is another word for precarious, and is proper to a creature.

This gentleman endeavours, p. 75, with a dust of words, to obscure this plain state of the question. At last, he comes a little closer to the point, and begins the debate. "God, says the Apostle, cannot lie : the only reason why he cannot, is "because he will not." [Note then, that the only reason why God does not or cannot reduce God the Son to nothing, is because he will not.] "Is therefore the veracity of God a thing "as mutable and precarious, because it entirely depends upon "his will, as is the existence of any creature whatever?" But this gentleman should have shewn that God was as much bound up by his own attributes to give the Son existence, and to continue him in it, as he is bound never to lie, to make the case parallel : and upon this supposition, God could no more want his Son one moment from all eternity, than he could be ever one moment capable of lying : which is making the Son as necessarily existing, by necessary will, (which this gentleman would call no will.) as God's attribute of veracity is necessary and immutable. God's moral attributes are founded in the natural perfections, and are indeed no other than natural and necessary perfections of the Deity, which he can no more cease to have, than he can cease to be. And even the rectitude of his will is natural, necessary, and unalterable : and the reason why he never wills amiss is because he cannot. But not to run further into this point, which is perfectly remote and foreign, and brought in only for a blind ; what becomes of the distinction between the necessary existence proper to the divine Being, and the precarious existence proper to creatures ? If God may be obliged by any of his moral attributes of wisdom, goodness, veracity, &c. to preserve the Son in his being ; so may he likewise to preserve angels, or men, or any other creature : and is this a reason against calling their existence precarious ? If it be, then there may be creatures, many besides God the Son, whose existence is not precarious : and thus the distinction between necessary and precarious existence is lost. The meaning of precarious existence is, not necessary, of what might either never have been, or may cease to be, if God pleases. Let this gentleman either affirm this of God the Son, or deny it of any creature whatever.

This writer, who is used to wise questions, asks me, whether the supreme dominion of God the Father (that which I found in voluntary economy) be precarious? Undoubtedly every voluntary office may cease to be, is not necessary, but depending on pleasure, and is therefore so far precarious. And even as to natural dominion, God might choose whether he would make any creatures; he may choose whether he will continue any: that is, he may choose whether he will exercise any such dominion at all; for all such dominion supposes the existence of creatures, over which only such dominion is. Supremacy therefore of dominion is as precarious as the existence of the creature: and if that be not precarious, I know not what is so. But, I think, I am over-abundantly civil to this writer to debate a maxim of common sense with him. The sum is, that that existence which is not necessary is contingent; and contingent is precarious, or depending on pleasure, in opposition to what is naturally immutable, and cannot but be: such is the existence of God the Son with this writer: therefore his existence is precarious in the same sense, though perhaps not in the same degree, that the existence of any creature whatever is called precarious. Q. E. D.

XX. Page 92nd, this gentleman tells me of “affecting to express a ridiculous seeming repugnancy in maintaining, that the “same act is certain as being foreknown, uncertain, as depending “on the will of a free agent<sup>f</sup>.” I should be glad to see the difficulty dexterously hit off by this acute writer, to make us some amends for his failures in other things. He does it, he thinks, in two words; that what depends on the will of a free agent may be certain, though not necessary. But to me it seems that the difficulty stands just where it did: for how is that certain which is not necessary, which may or may not be; which is all the meaning of not necessary, and which seems to amount to the same with not certain, in the present case. And how is that fixed, or certain, which is yet floating and hanging in suspense, either may or may not be? Possibly, some solution may be found for these and the like difficulties: but I am afraid, not by this gentleman, who does not appear hitherto to have gone to the bottom of the subject, or to have patience or coolness of temper requisite to go through with it.

CHAP. IV.

Concerning Quotations from the Ancients.

THE 14th observation is spent upon this subject: and I shall think it worth the while to bestow a chapter upon the same; that as we have seen this gentleman's penetration in matters of argument, we may now also see his diligence and accuracy in matters of learning. I have had frequent occasion, in both my Defences, to take notice of his superficial acquaintance with the ancient Fathers.

<sup>f</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 692, 693.

1. Sometimes he has endeavoured to put spurious or worthless pieces upon us, as being of considerable value and authority. The Apostolical Constitutions<sup>g</sup>, Ignatius's larger epistles<sup>h</sup>, the Arian Councils of Sirmium<sup>i</sup>, Philippopolis<sup>k</sup>, and Antioch<sup>l</sup>, (instead of the Catholic and approved synods,) and the tenets of Semi-Arians for those of Epiphanius<sup>m</sup>. See the instances of this kind up and down in the Reply<sup>n</sup>. The doing this, unless it be done ignorantly, is much the same honesty in the way of writing, as the putting off bad wares or damaged goods at the price of good ones in the way of trading.

2. Sometimes he has expressed wonder and amazement at me, as if I had been teaching some new and strange thing, or something merely scholastic, when I have been only following the concurring judgment of the ancient Fathers<sup>o</sup>.

3. Sometimes you will find him representing a doctrine as unanimously taught by all the ancients, when they were all directly against it, or none clearly for it<sup>p</sup>.

4. False history and misreports of the Fathers have been very ordinary and common with him<sup>q</sup>.

5. Misrepresentations of the Fathers, as to their real sense and meaning, have been numberless: the greatest part of my labour has been all the way to lay them open and confute them.

6. Misquotations, or deceitful translations, I have often had occasion to observe and correct<sup>r</sup>.

Now this gentleman being very desirous, as it seems, to make

<sup>g</sup> Second Defence, p. 590, 591, 618.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid. p. 590, 591.

<sup>i</sup> Ibid. p. 602, 618.

<sup>k</sup> Ibid. p. 604. <sup>l</sup> Ibid. 618.

<sup>m</sup> Ibid. p. 688.

<sup>n</sup> Reply to Dr. Waterland, &c. p.

17, 18, 19, 22, 23, 29, 58, 61, 258,

260, 274, 275, 276, 299, 404, 410.

<sup>o</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p.

287, 324, 496, 549. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 422, 541.

<sup>p</sup> See these fallacies noted: First Defence, vol. i. p. 295, 332, 470, 484,

485, 503, 536. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 600, 601, 637, 700, 733, 734.

<sup>q</sup> See the same detected: First Defence, vol. i. p. 328, 382, 389, 428, 497, 507, 536, 538, 545, 547. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 389, 391, 429, 439, 459, 481, 489, 491, 495, 498, 537, 541, 563, 564, 618, 714, 717, 728.

<sup>r</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 350, 351, 381, 389, 523, &c. 560. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 444, 473, 485, 595, 597, 618, 641, 674, 737, &c. 755.

reprisals upon me, undertakes to furnish out a whole section of gross misrepresentations made by me in my quotations. He gives them for a specimen only, as he says, and calls them some few; being willing the reader should think he had been very tender and compassionate. The reader perhaps may really think so, when he finds what the sum total of this worthy charge of gross misrepresentations amounts to: nothing but an account of some very fair and just representations set in a bad light, misrepresented under false colours, and called by a wrong name. I hope every intelligent reader will apprehend the difference between making a charge and proving one; between a false report and a true one; between an unrighteous calumny and a just censure. I am willing to put the issue entirely upon the justice and merits of the case, upon the evidence produced here or there, to justify the charges respectively. Let but the reader compare my remarks on Dr. Clarke's quotations<sup>a</sup> with what this writer would lay to me; and then the difference betwixt the one and the other will be thoroughly understood. Now to come to particulars: they are twelve in number: which were they all faults, it were easy to select hundreds greater out of their pieces. But I confined myself, in my collection, to such only as betrayed manifest partiality and deceit, or great want of care and exactness.

I. In the first place, he finds fault with my way of understanding a passage of Philo, and gives me his own judgment against it: which I have as much regard for, as he has for mine. The very passage which he cites from Philo, to confute my construction, confirms it: as it shews that the Logos was betwixt the τὸ γινόμενον and ὁ πατήρ, and was therefore neither. And if he is not reckoned with the τὰ γινόμενα, he is of course ἀγέννητος.

II. The second is my reading ἀγέννητος in two places of Justin, where he chooses to read ἀγέννητος. His reasons, it seems, are good to him, and mine to me, which is the whole matter. I vindicated my reading against his exceptions in my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 506, 579: and he has nothing to add by way of reinforcement. A mighty business to found a charge of gross misrepresentation upon: he must have been hard put to it, to strain so much for one.

III. A third article of my gross misrepresentations begins with a new invention of his own; a very forced interpretation of a passage in Irenæus<sup>t</sup>; which interpretation was never, I believe, thought on by any man before himself, and rests only in strength of imagination. For what if the Father be called Λόγος in that chapter as well as the Son, could Irenæus be there talking of the emission or generation of the Father? If this gentleman will but please to look forwards, as far as page 157. and 158. and view the whole process of the argument, he will see what Irenæus meant by the Logos, namely, the only begotten of the Father, the same that Isaiah speaks of chap. liii. 8.

<sup>a</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 523, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 737, &c.

This writer also tells me of citing two passages of Irenæus, as containing the Church's notion, when he is ridiculing the notions of the Valentinians: as if a man might not be ridiculing the notion of the Valentinians, and at the same time discover his own. Had the author undertaken to vindicate this his new and extraordinary construction, I should have taken care to consider it at large: but as he has only given a few dark and obscure hints of what he would have, I think it sufficient to refer the reader to my Second Defence<sup>u</sup>, and to Irenæus himself<sup>x</sup>, and to his learned editor, who has particularly considered his author's meaning<sup>y</sup>.

A further complaint against me is for falsely interpreting non alius et alius, in Irenæus<sup>z</sup>, of Father and Son; which is so trifling and groundless, that nothing can be more so. He has invented another imaginary construction, peculiar to himself, which he endeavours to help out, by supplying something in Irenæus's text, which the good Father never thought on, and which the whole context strongly reclaims against. See my Second Defence<sup>a</sup>, where I cite the passage, with another parallel place of Tertullian. In this way of charging me with gross misrepresentations, the author may be copious enough; for invention is fruitful.

As to the fourth place, all the fault is, that I follow the common reading, (cum Verbo suo, Iren. p. 183,) though there is one

<sup>t</sup> Qui generationem prolativi hominum Verbi transferunt in Dei æternum Verbum, et prolationis initium donantes et genesis, quemadmodum et suo Verbo. Et in quo distabit Dei Verbum, imo magis ipse Deus, cum sit Verbum, a Verbo hominum, si eandem habuerit ordinationem et emissionem generationis? Iren. p. 132. ed. Mass.

<sup>u</sup> Vol. ii. p. 435, 583.

<sup>x</sup> Iren. p. 132, 139. ed. Mass.

<sup>y</sup> Massuet. Dissert. Præv. p. 128.

<sup>z</sup> Non ergo alius erat qui cognoscebatur, et alius qui dicebat; nemo cognoscit Patrem, sed unus et idem, omnia subjiciente ei Patre, &c. Iren. p. 234. Mass. Præv. Diss. p. 131.

<sup>a</sup> Vol. ii. p. 436.

manuscript which leaves out cum: a manuscript scarce above 400 years old, and of no great authority<sup>b</sup>. The manuscript is the Arundel, in the library of the Royal Society: I have seen it, and find the reading to be as Dr. Grabe represented. But that the reading is “without doubt the truer reading,” as the Reply pretends<sup>c</sup>, against the faith of all the other manuscripts, about ten in number, several of them much older, and most of them more faithful in the whole, will not be taken for granted upon a bare affirmation.

A fifth place of Irenæus by me cited<sup>d</sup>, I am willing to leave with the reader: who may please to consider, whether what this writer objects be of any force against what I said; since I did not pretend that the Son did any thing contrary to, or without the Father's good pleasure.

IV. This gentleman proceeds to Clemens Alexandrinus and charges me with misrepresenting him. I vindicated my sense of that passage at large before<sup>e</sup>, and obviated every pretence to the contrary: nor has this writer so much as attempted to reply to what I there urged; except calling a thing monstrous be the same with confuting it. His repeating here his former opinion about Christ being representative only, (which has been so abundantly answered and baffled in both my Defences<sup>f</sup>, beyond any just reply.) only shews to what a degree of hardness a man may arrive by long opposing the truth.

There is another place of Clemens<sup>g</sup>, as to which he insists upon his construction, and I also upon mine<sup>h</sup>; though it is sufficient for me, if mine may be true; he should prove, on the other hand, that his must. He appeals to all that understand Greek. So do I, and to the context likewise. Bishop Bull, Le Nourry, and the learned editor of Clemens, (who, I believe, understood Greek,) had declared beforehand for my construction. Let this gentleman produce his better vouchers, if he has any, to support his pretences about the nature of the Greek tongue: which he may sometimes happen to mistake, and pretty widely too, as appears by his versions. His translation, as he calls it, of this very place

<sup>b</sup> See Massuet. præf. p. 8.

<sup>c</sup> Reply, p. 103.

<sup>d</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 447.

<sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 488.

<sup>f</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 294, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 505, &c.

<sup>g</sup> Οὗτ' οὖν φθονοίη ποτ' ἂν τισιν, ὁ πάντας μὲν ἐπ' ἰσῆς κεκληκώς, ἐξαιρέ-

τους δὲ τοῖς ἐξαιρέτως πεπιστευκόσιν ἀπονείμας τιμὰς. οὐθ' ἰφ' ἑτέρου κωλυθείη ποτ' ἂν, ὁ πάντων κύριος, καὶ μάλιστα ἐξυνηρητῶν τῶ τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ καὶ παντοκράτορος θελήματι πατρός. Clem. Alex. Strom. vii. cap. 2. p. 832.

<sup>h</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 755.

of Clemens, is no translation, but a loose paraphrase<sup>i</sup>; and such a one, that no man could ever imagine from it what the Greek words are. Whether I am right or no, he is most certainly wrong in taking the liberty he has, of foisting in words, and altering the turn of the expression, to help out his construction. But besides that, the construction itself appears to me somewhat forced and unnatural, as referring καὶ μάλιστα to the negative going before, and to the first member of the sentence, rather than the second; when in the preceding sentence, of like kind, the third part hangs upon the second. The most natural construction therefore seems to be this; Who is Lord of all, etiam maxime serviens<sup>k</sup>, &c. even when most subservient, &c. that is, even in his lowest condescension, becoming incarnate, which Clemens had been speaking of. In the very next page, resuming the assertion of the Son's being Lord of all, he again qualifies it, in like manner, by referring all up to the supreme Father.

V. We now come to Tertullian: where he taxes me with a misconstruction; owning however that he had gone before me in the same. I must acknowledge I looked upon the construction of that place as doubtful, at least; for which reason I had never cited it in my First Defence, or elsewhere, to prove Father and Son one God. But finding at length that some learned men so understood the place, and observing that the Reply also came into it, I thought I might then safely use it. If it be a mistake, (as probably it may,) it should not however have come under the head of gross misrepresentations.

He next charges me with a great neglect, as omitting to take notice of what the Reply had objected to my construction of a place in Tertullian, though I again quote the place. It is unreasonable in the man to expect particular notice of every thing that he has any where occasionally dropped, when he has slipped over many and more material things of mine: but I have accustomed him so much to it, that now he insists upon it. After all, his construction of suo jure<sup>l</sup>, in Tertullian<sup>m</sup>, which he makes to be the same with sensu sibi proprio, is so extravagant,

<sup>i</sup> Reply, p. 511. Compare my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 755.

<sup>k</sup> As to the like construction of μάλιστα in Clemens, see p. 138, 250, 436, 443, 620, 759, 821.

<sup>l</sup> Reply, p. 509.

<sup>m</sup> Omnia, inquit, Patris mea sint,

cur non et nomina? Cum ergo legis Deum omnipotentem, et altissimum, et Deum virtutum, et Regem Israelis, et qui est; vide ne per hæc Filius etiam demonstretur; suo jure Deus omnipotens, qua Sermo Dei omnipotentis, &c. Tertull. adv. Prax. cap. 17.

that it might be safely left with any man that knows Tertullian, or knows Latin. What could Tertullian say less, than that God the Son was God Omnipotent in his own right, when he so often proclaims him to be of the same substance with the Father? It is not said merely suo jure omnipotens, but suo jure Deus omnipotens: and as the meaning of suo jure is well known to all that know Latin; so are Tertullian's principles well known to as many as know him; and that he makes the Son God in the same sense as the Father is, as partaking of the same divine substance. Tertullian therefore could not mean, as this gentleman says, that the Son is God Almighty, in a sense proper to him, or upon a ground peculiar to himself; since Tertullian's principles plainly make Father and Son God in the same sense, and upon the same ground, as being of the same divine substance. But this he might mean, and this he did mean, that the Son is Almighty God distinctly, and in his own proper Person and right; and not considered as the Person of the Father, which Praxeas pretended. This gentleman however, by endeavouring to find out some misinterpretations of mine, does nothing else but discover more and more of his own.

He is in the same page (p. 125,) cavilling at a very innocent translation of an Arian passage in my book<sup>n</sup>; where I render sua virtute, by his own power. He will have it, that it does not mean the Son's own power, but his Father's, because supposed to be given him: which is nothing but equivocating upon the word own. The meaning undoubtedly is, that the Son created all things by his own natural, inherent power; though supposed to be given him, with his nature, by the Father. And this is all I meant in my version of the words: it is observable however, that this gentleman never yet came up so high in his doctrine as the ancient Arians did. They supposed Christ invested with creative powers by the Father; which is a great deal more than making him merely an instrument in the work of creation.

As to Tertullian's meaning in some passages which this author produced to prove that souls were consubstantial with God<sup>o</sup>, (according to that writer,) as much as the Son was supposed to be by the Nicene Council; it was so mean, and so unworthy a suggestion, that I thought it proper to vindicate<sup>p</sup> Tertullian, as

<sup>n</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 684.

<sup>o</sup> See Reply, p. 55, 225, 328. Preface, p. 6.

<sup>p</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 459.

Compare Pamelii Paradox. Tertullian. n. 3.

falsely charged in that matter. It was of some moment that Tertullian had utterly denied it of angels; or even archangels, and of the highest order. This the objector takes no notice of. Tertullian denies that the soul comes up usque ad vim divinitatis, and explains himself inoffensively on that head; as I observed. Nay, he argues through the whole chapter against Marcion's tenet, of the soul being substantia Creatoris, the substance of (or consubstantial with) its Creator. Yet this writer here goes on with the same ridiculous charge, founding it upon words that express nothing of it. What the words mean, I intimated at large in the place referred to<sup>q</sup>: and this gentleman makes no reply to it. Why he did not, is best known to himself.

VI. We come next to Origen, whom, it seems, I have greatly injured in rendering μετέδωκε γὰρ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τῆς μεγαλειότητος, hath imparted even his greatness<sup>r</sup>, instead of has imparted even of his greatness<sup>s</sup>. But I am sure he has injured Origen a great deal more by suppressing the remaining part of the sentence, which shews what Origen meant, viz. that the Son is commensurate with the Father in greatness. This was not imparting some small pittance of his greatness, but equal greatness, or his whole greatness: and this gentleman might have considered that μεταδίωμι commonly governs a genitive case; which is sufficient to take off the force of his criticism: though I must own I see but little difference in the two ways of speaking, nor that either of them may not be admitted; provided only that the whole sense of Origen in that passage be taken along with it.

As to another place of Origen, this writer desires that my Defence<sup>t</sup> and his Reply<sup>u</sup> may be compared; which I desire also.

The same I say as to a third place<sup>x</sup> of Origen.

As to a fourth place in Origen, this writer is pleased to stand corrected in respect of his translation of it, which I found fault with<sup>y</sup>. As to his further endeavours to defeat the meaning of that place, I am willing to trust them with the reader, after he has seen the passage itself, and what I have said upon it.

<sup>q</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 472.
Vid. Tertull. contr. Marc. lib. ii. c. 9.

<sup>r</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 419.

<sup>s</sup> Observations, p. 25, 126.

<sup>t</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 436, 465. Reply to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii.
p. 216.

<sup>u</sup> Reply, p. 83, 84, 85.

<sup>x</sup> Compare Reply, p. 295, and Observations, p. 63, with my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 587, 677.

<sup>y</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 673,
674.

Another passage of Origen I shall likewise trust with the reader, if he pleases but to look into my Second Defence<sup>z</sup>. This writer here (p. 127,) talks of my construction being “contrary to the nature of all language;” as if the nature of language never admitted any adjective to stand alone, the substantive being sufficiently intimated from the context. But this is his forward way of talking: and he seems to think he has a right to be believed upon his word.

VII. This article concerns Novatian. I have fully expressed myself, as to this author, in many places of my Defences, which the reader that thinks it of importance may please to consult. I forbear any further dispute about the reading of a certain passage, till the learned Mr. Welchman’s new edition of that author appears, which may probably give us some further light into it.

VIII. The eighth article, instead of proving any misrepresentation upon me, only revives the memory of a great one of his own<sup>a</sup>; which discovered his small acquaintance with the ancients. As to this writer’s exceptions to Hippolytus, I have sufficiently obviated them elsewhere<sup>b</sup>: and one would think that Tertullian’s use of the word Persona, in the same sense with Hippolytus’s πρόσωπον, might have screened the latter from this author’s censure in that particular. But supposing I had less to plead for my saying that the Sabellian singularity consisted in making the Godhead μονοπρόσωπος, and that I had expressed it in a phrase that came not into use till the fourth century; can there be a greater mark of pedantry, than for a man to take me up, and cavil at the bare expression, and to charge me with an untruth upon it? How would it look to charge Basil, and Chrysostom, and Theodoret, as reporting a thing notoriously untrue, when they represent Sabellius as making the Godhead ἐν πρόσωπον, just as I do? Would not the man be taken for a jester, or a very ignorant man, in doing it, as cavilling only at a mode of expression? But I proceed.

IX. The author here censures me for rendering μοναρχίας by unity, rather than monarchy, in a passage of Pope Dionysius<sup>c</sup>. My reasons for so doing, I conceive, were such as these: 1. That the same Dionysius had expressed the same thing a little higher by the word μονάδα, which signifies unity: and he seems to have chosen μοναρχίας after, only to vary the phrase. 2. Because in

<sup>z</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 436.

<sup>b</sup> Ibid. p. 463, 563.

<sup>a</sup> Ibid. p. 541.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 469.

the words immediately preceding, he is speaking of the union of Father and Son; by which he solves the difficulty objected, and not by throwing the oneness of Godhead upon the Father alone, exclusive of the other Persons. 3. Because τριὰς, Trinity, is the word opposed to μοναρχίας in the same sentence; Dionysius shewing that there must be a Trinity, and withal an Unity (say I) preserved. These reasons made me prefer the word unity. When this author has better for the word monarchy, and in his sense<sup>d</sup>, I shall be ready to accept it, instead of the other.

X. Here I am charged with mistranslating a word in Eusebius, ἡρημένη, which I render compacted<sup>e</sup>, that is, constituted; which, it seems, is wonderfully done. But the wonder may cease, if it be considered, 1. That in the same place the equality is mentioned as belonging to the ternary number, here considered as a figure of the Trinity. 2. That the τριὰς is there also made the one ἀρχή, Source of all things. 3. That the whole τριὰς is said to be ἡρημένη, compacted, as I render it. For had the meaning been that two Persons were dependent on one, the epithet would not have been applied to the whole Trinity. 4. There is a plain opposition between the τριὰς and the τῶν γενητῶν. Whether these reasons may convince our writer or no, I know not: if he pleases, he may go on wondering at very plain things, to shew his want of reflection. He will have it that ἡρημένη there signifies a connection of things, one depending on or derived from another. He has not thought fit to give us any translation of the place, according to his own sense of it; but all he says in favour of it is only misreport of the use of the word ἀναρχος, as I shall shew hereafter.

The second passage<sup>f</sup> of Eusebius I leave to the reader; this gentleman having no way of eluding my sense of it, but by misrepresenting it, after his manner.

XI. The next relates to Gregory Nyssens, where this writer has nothing to shew but chicane. I translate some words that may be seen in the place referred to, thus: "Neither let us dissolve the immediate connection, by considering the will in the generation." Upon which my acute censor thus <sup>d</sup> It is to be noted, that μοναρχία, in this subject, sometimes signifies, not monarchy, but unity of headship, or principle, source, or fountain, as in Athanasius.

Λεχθείη δὲ ἅν καὶ οὕτως μία ἀρχή θεότητος, καὶ οὐ δύο ἀρχαί· ὅθεν κυρίως καὶ μοναρχία ἐστίν. Athan. Orat. 4. init.

<sup>e</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 475.

<sup>f</sup> Ibid. p. 496.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. p. 607, 608.

remarks: as if the author meant to say, that "considering the will of the Father in the generation of the Son, would be a dissolving of the immediate connection." No, neither the author nor I meant to say it: the words immediately foregoing shew that we did not; nor does my translation imply any such thing. But the meaning is, that the notion of will was not to be carried so far as to destroy that necessary connection.

XII. As to the passage of Cyril, and my inference, as he calls it, from it, (which is not my inference, but an inference which is mentioned as having some colour, and at the same time confuted by the late learned Benedictine editor, as I observed<sup>h</sup>;) this writer might as well have let it alone, unless he had known more of it. Had not that learned editor given us much better arguments against that inference than the Observator has, it would be more considerable than he imagines. The reader that desires to know more of this matter may consult the learned Toutée's Dissertation<sup>i</sup>, before referred to; and which this writer has fraudulently concealed from the reader, in order to make way for his charge upon me.

My words are these: "If there is any thing to be suspected of Cyril, it is rather his excluding the Father from being Creator, than the Son from being efficient: but the late learned Benedictine editor has sufficiently cleared up Cyril's orthodoxy on that head." Now after I had so plainly declared against the inference, is it not very unaccountable in this gentleman to charge me with it, and in the manner he does? "The Doctor's inference," says he, "from the words of Cyril, is as remarkable an instance of the strength of prejudice, as (I think) I ever met with," p. 131. I may much more reasonably say, that this representation is as remarkable an instance of the strength of malice, as I ever met with. See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 629, 631, 687, where I take notice of the Father being represented as issuing out orders for creating, and the Son as creating: which is Cyril's notion also, and which affords some colour for the inference before mentioned; but colour only, and not ground sufficient for it, as I before intimated, acquitting Cyril of it.

I have now run through the whole charge of "very gross misrepresentations," of which the foregoing instances are the specimen, all that this gentleman could find. Nobody doubts of his inclination to have picked out the very worst that my books could any where afford; and these are they. I thank him for them. I could not, I think, have desired a fuller testimony from an adversary than this is, of my fidelity in the matter of quotations; I might almost say, care and exactness beyond what I had expected. For though I had taken the best care I could, in revising every thing of that kind, and again comparing it with the books themselves, as my papers went through the press, and was certain not to be wilfully guilty of any mistake; yet I knew not what an able critic might possibly discover after me, in a work that had not long time to lie by, nor had passed through the hands of my judicious and learned friends. But perhaps our Observator has been negligent in examining, or is not very acute: and so I shall not assume upon it.

<sup>h</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 630.

<sup>i</sup> Dissert. iii. de Doctrin. Cyrilli, p. 139, &c.

One thing, I hope, will be observed, that though this writer has found no gross misrepresentations of mine, he has made several of his own; which may now be added to the rest above mentioned, under my second chapter. And to his former misreports of the ancients may be added another great one which he has in p. 130. "It is notorious," says he, "that the word ἀναρχος was always appropriated to the Father." The contrary is notorious to all that know antiquity. Ἀναρχος is very often applied to God the Son, by the Post-Nicene Fathers<sup>k</sup>, of the same century with Eusebius, though some years later; and more than once directly by the Ante-Nicenes also<sup>l</sup>: as to indirect application of it to him, in respect of his generation or existence, as being ἀναρχος or ἀνάρχως, nothing more common<sup>m</sup>: Eusebius himself is an evidence for it<sup>n</sup>. But why will this positive gentleman make reports of antiquity, till he knows more of it?

CHAP. V.

A summary View of the Judgment of the Ancients upon the question, Whether God the Father be naturally Ruler and Governor over God the Son.

SINCE the Author of the Observations has been pleased to

<sup>k</sup> Epiphanius passim. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. p. 421, 563, 630. Greg. Nyss. contr. Eunom. lib. i. p. 118.

<sup>l</sup> Τὸ πρεσβύτερον ἐν γενέσει, τὴν ἀχρονον καὶ ἀναρχον ἀρχὴν τε καὶ ἀπαρχὴν τῶν ὄντων, τὸν υἱόν. Clem. Alex. p. 829.

<sup>m</sup> Ζύεστιν αὐτῷ τὸ ἀπαύγασμα ἀναρχον, καὶ ἀειγενὲς, προφαινούμενον αὐτοῦ, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ἡ λέγουσα σοφία, ἐγὼ ἤμην ἢ προσέχαιρε. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. vol. i. p. 254.

<sup>n</sup> Clem. Alex. p. 832. Alexand. Alex. apud Theod. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 19. Cyrill. Hieros. Catech. xi. cap. 13. p. 155. Athanas. vol. i. p. 99, 526.

<sup>n</sup> Euseb. in Psalm. p. 15.

reduce the controversy to this single question<sup>o</sup>, and to boast highly of the ancients as holding the affirmative, charging the negative as being an unheard of fiction and invention of mine, with repeated insults, and such a degree of groundless assurance as is scarce to be paralleled; I say, since he has indulged himself in these peculiar strains, it may not be improper to lay before the reader a summary view of the ancient doctrine upon that head. I shall content myself with references, for the most part, to my own books; pointing out to the reader such material quotations, relating to this question, as lie scattered in several parts, under several heads, in the course of our debate. I shall follow the chronological order of the Fathers, shewing all the way for what reasons I judge that every one respectively was in the same persuasion that I defend, and not in the contrary hypothesis.

A. D. 116. IGNATIUS.

Ignatius did not believe that the Father is naturally Governor over the Son, but the contrary: because he acknowledged the consubstantiality<sup>p</sup>, and coeternity<sup>q</sup>, and necessary existence<sup>r</sup> of God the Son. Any supremacy of the Father, consistent with these doctrines of the Son, may be readily admitted. But the adversary has not been able to produce any testimony from him to prove the natural dominion of the Father over the Son. What he has pleaded may be seen in the Reply<sup>s</sup>, and a confutation of it in my Second Defence<sup>t</sup>.

I may just take notice of an incidental remark which this writer drops (p. 63.) to invalidate some of my testimonies for the Son's necessary existence. He says that φύσει, or κατὰ φύσιν, does not express necessary existence; for man is φύσει, or κατὰ φύσιν ἄνθρωπος. Admitting this, yet φύσει ἄν can never be applied to any thing but what exists necessarily: and it may always be certainly determined from the context, or circumstances, or from the author's usual phraseology, what φύσει, or κατὰ φύσιν, signifies in any ancient writer: and this gentleman will not be able to shew that I have misconstrued the phrase so much as in a single testimony. Suppose, for instance, natura bonus may be

<sup>o</sup> The main thing he lays to my charge is, the denying the alone natural dominion, p. 8, 9, 15, 24, 27, 32, 40, 44, 46, 89, 118, 119.

<sup>q</sup> See Bull. Def. F. N. p. 40.

<sup>p</sup> Ibid. p. 174, &c.

<sup>r</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 572.

<sup>s</sup> Reply, p. 261, 294.

<sup>t</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 572, &c. 591, 592.

sometimes applicable to a man or an angel; yet it may at other times signify necessary existence so plainly, that no one can doubt of it: particularly in Tertullian, in this sentence: Bonus natura Deus solus: qui enim quod est sine initio habet, non institutione habet illud, sed natura, &c. Tertull. adv. Marc. lib. ii. cap. 6.

146. JUSTIN MARTYR.

Justin Martyr did not believe that the Father is naturally Ruler or Governor over the Son.

1. Because he declares that God the Son is not another God<sup>u</sup> besides the Father; at the same time acknowledging the Son to be God.

2. Because he asserts the Son's consubstantiality<sup>x</sup>.

3. Because he gives to God the Son such high and great titles as Scripture appropriates to the one true God of Israel<sup>y</sup>.

4. Because he teaches the necessary existence of God the Son<sup>z</sup>.

5. Because he declares for the worship of God the Son, yet admitting no worship as due to any but to God alone<sup>a</sup>.

Any supremacy of the Father, consistent with these doctrines of the Son, may be admitted. But the adversary has not produced any testimony that may not be fairly accounted for upon the foot of voluntary economy, or natural priority of order. The principal pretences from this Father's writings may be seen in the Reply<sup>b</sup>, and the answers in my Second Defence<sup>c</sup>. Let this gentleman disprove the particulars here asserted; or if not, let him admit them, and then we need not dispute further.

170. LUCIAN.

Lucian, or some other contemporary Pagan writer, bears testimony to the faith of the Christians in his time, in Father, Son, and Holy Ghost: which means there one God supreme<sup>d</sup> in the whole three. This doctrine is not consistent with any natural dominion of God the Father over God the Son: but is rather

<sup>u</sup> See my Answer to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii. p. 235, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 439.

<sup>x</sup> See Bull. D. F. p. 65, &c.

<sup>y</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 481.

<sup>z</sup> Ibid. p. 578.

<sup>a</sup> My Sermons, vol. ii. p. 178. Defence, vol. i. p. 418, 423. Second

Defence, vol. ii. p. 438, 666.

<sup>b</sup> Reply, p. 129, &c. 263, &c. 293, 375.

<sup>c</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 481, &c. 506, 578, 593, &c. 666, 672, &c. Compare Nourrii Apparatus ad Bibli. Max. p. 405, &c. vol. i.

<sup>d</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 179. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 439.

a full and clear testimony for one common dominion of all the three Persons.

177. ATHENAGORAS.

Athenagoras could not believe any natural rule over God the Son.

1. Because he asserts his consubstantiality<sup>e</sup>.
2. Because he asserts his coeternity<sup>f</sup>.
3. Because he makes Father and Son one God<sup>g</sup>.
4. Because he maintains the Son's necessary existence<sup>h</sup>.
5. Because he is express for the common dominion of both<sup>i</sup>.

Nothing can be pleaded on the contrary, but what is easily reconciled by admitting a temporal procession, generation, or manifestation of the Son, and a priority of order in the Father. The pretences of the Reply<sup>k</sup> are all answered in my Second Defence<sup>l</sup>.

181. THEOPHILUS.

For the consubstantiality and coeternity maintained by this writer, Bishop Bull may be consulted. Besides which, he gives Christ the title of Κύριος ὁ Θεός, God absolutely so called<sup>m</sup>: and he drops some intimations, by a similitude which he makes use of, that Father and Son are one God, and have one dominion<sup>n</sup>. Objections of the Reply<sup>o</sup> have been considered and answered<sup>p</sup>.

187. IRENÆUS.

Irenæus could never believe that the Father is naturally Governor over the Son.

1. Because he ascribes to God the Son titles and attributes peculiar to the God of Israel<sup>q</sup>, God supreme.
2. Because he asserts his consubstantiality, coeternity, and necessary existence<sup>r</sup>.
3. Because he makes Father and Son one God<sup>s</sup>.
4. Because he expressly excludes any inferior God, and clearly intimates that God the Son has no God above him<sup>t</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> See Bull. D. F. p. 71. Nourrii Appar. vol. i. p. 487.

<sup>f</sup> See Bull. D. F. p. 203. Nourrii Appar. vol. i. p. 489.

<sup>g</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 178. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 439.

<sup>h</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 580.

<sup>i</sup> Ibid. p. 442.

<sup>k</sup> Reply, p. 57, 105, &c. 299.

<sup>l</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 439, &c. 580, &c. 597, 666.

<sup>m</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 485.

<sup>n</sup> Ibid. p. 486.

<sup>o</sup> Reply, p. 114, 142, 270.

<sup>p</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 486, 597, &c.

<sup>q</sup> Ibid. p. 487.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 582, &c.

<sup>s</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 179. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 436, 443, &c.

<sup>t</sup> See First Defence, vol. i. p. 306. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 450.

There is nothing on the contrary to be pleaded from this author, but what may be fairly and easily reconciled upon the foot of the economy, and the natural order of the Persons; as hath been particularly shewn<sup>u</sup> in answer to the Reply<sup>x</sup>.

192. CLEMENS of Alexandria.

This ancient writer could never have a thought of subjecting God the Son to the natural rule and governance of God the Father. For,

1. He asserts the necessary existence<sup>y</sup> of the Son, which is an insuperable bar and obstacle to any such subjection.

2. He makes him to be the Jehovah, the Almighty God<sup>z</sup> of the Jews, who had no God above him.

3. He even equalizes<sup>a</sup> the Son, that is, proclaims him equal to the Father.

4. He gives him the titles  $\delta$  Θεός<sup>b</sup>, and παντοκράτωρ<sup>c</sup>, titles expressive of dominion supreme, and such as the Observer would translate supreme God, and supreme Ruler, whenever spoken of the Father.

5. He makes Father and Son one God of the whole universe<sup>d</sup>: which certainly expresses equality and union of dominion.

6. Lastly, he addresses to both together as one Lord<sup>e</sup>; which does not look like addressing to a Sovereign and his natural subject, but to one God and Lord supreme. The Author of the Reply shewed his good wishes and endeavours<sup>f</sup> to elude the testimonies: but failed in the performance<sup>g</sup>.

200. TERTULLIAN.

Tertullian could never think that the Father is naturally the Son's Ruler, or Governor.

1. He admits the necessary existence of the Son<sup>h</sup>.

2. He makes both to be one substance, and one God<sup>i</sup>.

<sup>u</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 430, 434, 435, &c. 487, 557, &c. 582, 583, 599, 667.

<sup>x</sup> Reply, p. 10, 17, 19, 23, 41, 60, 61, 62, 93, &c. 140, 239, 283, 295, 379, 393, 417, 484, 496, 507.

<sup>y</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 584.

<sup>z</sup> Ibid. p. 488.

<sup>a</sup> Ibid. p. 452.

<sup>b</sup> Ibid. p. 520.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 521, 755.

<sup>d</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 435, 451. Sermons, vol. ii. p. 180.

<sup>e</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 451.

<sup>f</sup> Reply, p. 80, &c. 140, 190, 227, 377.

<sup>g</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 451 to 457, 488, 599.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid. p. 586.

<sup>i</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 181. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 457, 435. Compare p. 489.

3. He rejects with indignation the notion of an inferior God<sup>k</sup>.
4. He directly and expressly asserts the one power and dignity of both<sup>l</sup>. The objections made by the Reply<sup>m</sup> are answered at large<sup>n</sup>.

225. HIPPOLYTUS.

This ancient writer could not suppose God the Son to be naturally under the rule of God the Father.

1. Because he makes them both one God<sup>o</sup>, and consequently one God supreme.
2. He asserts the consubstantiality<sup>p</sup> and necessary existence<sup>q</sup> of God the Son.
3. He joins all the three Persons equally in his doxology<sup>r</sup>, which can by no means be suitable to a Sovereign and his subjects.

The objections made by the Reply<sup>s</sup> have been easily solved<sup>t</sup> upon the foot of the economy, and distinction of order.

249. ORIGEN.

Origen, in his certainly genuine works, no way favours the notion of the Son's being naturally subject to the Father.

1. He asserts Father and Son to be one God<sup>u</sup>.
2. He makes but one object of worship<sup>x</sup> of both.
3. He maintains the Son's necessary existence<sup>y</sup>.
4. He is very express for the coexistence, coeternity, and consubstantiality of God the Son<sup>z</sup>.
5. He asserts that the Son is commensurate to the Father, equal in greatness<sup>a</sup>.

Any possible supremacy of the Father, consistent with these <sup>k</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 306.

Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 534.

<sup>l</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 458, 535. Bull. D. F. p. 261. Statu ab altero diversum non esse, idem valet atque illud ipsi non esse subditum, sed par et æquale. Bull. ibid.

<sup>m</sup> Reply, p. 55, 111, 76.

<sup>n</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 457 to 462, 489.

<sup>o</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 182. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 464, 490. First Defence, vol. i. p. 287.

<sup>p</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 488.

<sup>q</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 414.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 586. Sermons, vol. ii.

p. 149. and Hippolytus, vol. ii. p. 18. Fabric.

<sup>s</sup> Reply, p. 13, 16, 20, 39, 61, 65, 91, 117, &c. 509.

<sup>t</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 413, &c. 430, 462, &c. 599, &c.

<sup>u</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 182. Answer to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii. p. 215.

<sup>v</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 436, 465.

<sup>x</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 424.

<sup>y</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 673.

<sup>z</sup> First Defence, vol. ii. p. 586.

<sup>a</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 286. Sermons, vol. ii. p. 148, 149. See also Bishop Bull.

<sup>b</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 418.

plain and avowed doctrines, will not be scrupled. The Reply<sup>b</sup> has boasted much of Origen the other way, and produced counter-evidences; but such as are either not to be compared with ours for genuineness and certainty, or such as may be reconciled<sup>c</sup> with the doctrine here mentioned, by allowing a superiority of office and order. Let him either disprove these particulars, or reconcile them with his notion of the alone supremacy.

250. CYPRIAN.

Cyprian has nothing in favour of the pretended natural dominion over God the Son; but the contrary.

1. As including all the three Persons in the one God<sup>d</sup>.
2. As applying to God the Son the appropriate titles of the one true God<sup>e</sup>.

The few things which the author of the Reply<sup>f</sup> had to offer are answered in my Second Defence<sup>g</sup>.

257. NOVATIAN.

Novatian looks more favourably to the notion of a natural superiority of dominion than any writer before him. But as he has several tenets inconsistent with such a notion, so what he has that seems most to favour it does not necessarily require any such sense, but may very well bear a candid construction.

1. He maintains equality, and unity of substance<sup>h</sup>.
2. He asserts the eternity<sup>i</sup> of God the Son; and, as it seems, eternal generation<sup>k</sup>.
3. He applies such texts to Christ as are intended of the Jehovah, and one true God of Israel<sup>l</sup>.

These tenets are by no means consistent with a natural superiority of dominion over God the Son: neither does Novatian assert any subjection but what may reasonably be understood of the economy, as I have observed<sup>m</sup>. The pretences of the Reply are all distinctly considered in my Second Defence, vol. ii. And though the Observator<sup>n</sup> has since charged me as being

<sup>b</sup> Reply, p. 4, 5, 10, 18, 20, 23, 28, 31, 42, 49, 56, 69, 70, 84, 85, 187, 219, 242, 272, 295, 319, 327, 375, 380, &c. 442, 446, &c.

<sup>c</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 418, 466, 537, &c. 600, 638, &c. 667, 673, &c.

<sup>d</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 183.

<sup>e</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 490. Bull. D.F. p. 131.

<sup>f</sup> Reply, p. 10, 24, 28, 146.

<sup>g</sup> Vol. ii. 491, 678.

<sup>h</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 282, 295, 486, 527. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 477, 492, 745.

<sup>i</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 354, &c.

<sup>k</sup> Ibid. p. 356.

<sup>l</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 492, 427.

<sup>m</sup> Ibid. p. 427, 493.

<sup>n</sup> Observations, p. 54.

too hasty, in saying that the ancients never speak of Christ as a constituted God, because of a passage of Novatian, where the phrase is Deus constitutus; yet he thought proper to conceal from the reader what I had said<sup>o</sup> to obviate his construction of that very place.

259. DIONYSIUS of Alexandria.

Dionysius of Alexandria could not be in the hypothesis of natural rule over God the Son.

1. Because he asserted the coeternity of God the Son, in very full and express words<sup>p</sup>, and his eternal, beginningless<sup>q</sup> generation.

2. Because he was as express for the consubstantiality, name and thing<sup>r</sup>.

3. Because he taught the necessary existence of the Son, representing it as necessary for the Son to coexist, as for the Father to exist; as may be seen at large in Athanasius. Besides that in other words<sup>s</sup> he has also expressed the same thing.

4. He included all the three Persons in the Monad, or the one God, as I have shewn elsewhere<sup>t</sup>: which is making all together one God supreme, directly contrary to the notion of a natural superiority of dominion. The Reply<sup>u</sup> has some few things to say of this author; which had been long ago obviated by Bishop Bull, and are since answered in my Second Defence<sup>x</sup>. I might observe too, how Dionysius particularly guards<sup>y</sup> against the notion of the Son's being created by the Father, which is the only thing that could be a foundation of natural dominion.

259. DIONYSIUS of Rome.

This excellent writer is no less full and plain against the hypothesis of natural superiority of dominion.

1. By declaring it blasphemy to suppose the Son a creature<sup>z</sup>,

<sup>o</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 555.

<sup>p</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 150.

<sup>q</sup> Ὁ δὲ γε Θεὸς αἰώνιον ἐστὶ φῶς, οὔτε ἀρχάμενον, οὔτε ληξόν ποτε, οὐκ οὖν αἰώνιον πρόκειται, καὶ σύνεστιν αὐτῷ τὸ ἀπαύγασμα, ἀναρχον καὶ ἀειγενὲς προφανόμενον αὐτοῦ. Dionys. ap. Athan. vol. i. p. 254, 258.

<sup>r</sup> Vid. ap. Athanas. vol. i. p. 255, 230.

<sup>s</sup> Μόνος δὲ ὁ υἱὸς αἰὶ συνὼν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ τοῦ ὄντος πληροῦμενος, καὶ αὐτός ἐστιν ὢν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς. Apud Athan.

p. 254.

<sup>t</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 185. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 420.

<sup>u</sup> Reply, p. 71, 331.

<sup>x</sup> Vol. ii. p. 419, 420.

<sup>y</sup> Ἐὰν δέ τις τῶν συκοφαντῶν ἐπειδὴ τῶν ἀπάντων ποιητὴν τὸν Θεὸν καὶ δημιουργὸν εἶπον, σίγηται με καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ λέγειν, ἀκουσάτω μου πρότερον πατέρα φήσαντος αὐτὸν, ἐν ᾧ καὶ ὁ υἱὸς προσγέγραπται. Apud Athan. p. 257.

<sup>z</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 357, 487. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 468, 634.

understanding creature in the common sense of precarious, or temporal existence.

2. By teaching the necessary existence of God the Son, inasmuch as the Father never was, never could be without him<sup>a</sup>.

3. By including all the three Persons in the one true Godhead<sup>b</sup>. Some little objections of the Reply to the genuineness of the piece are abundantly answered in my Second Defence<sup>c</sup>.

260. GREGORY of Neocæsarea.

This celebrated Father is full and express, in his famous creed, against any thing created, or servient, in the Trinity<sup>d</sup>; asserting one undivided glory and dominion of all the three Persons. There have been suspensions raised against the genuineness of this creed; but such as have not been thought of sufficient weight by any of the best critics, against the express testimonies of Ruffinus and Gregory Nyssen, confirmed, in some measure, by Nazianzen<sup>e</sup>.

Besides what Gregory has in his creed, he has some considerable things to the same purpose in another work, written about the year 239, and which is of unquestioned authority. The titles and epithets he therein gives to the Son are, Creator and Governor of all things<sup>f</sup>, really, or naturally, united to the Father<sup>g</sup>, the most perfect living Word<sup>h</sup>; the last expressions very like to some in his creed, and a probable argument of their having the same author.

270. ANTIOCHIAN Fathers.

The synodical epistle of these Fathers gives to God the Son such titles as belong to the one true God. But as they have nothing express upon our present question on either side, it may be sufficient to have mentioned them, and to refer<sup>i</sup> to what has been said of them.

290. Methodius is express against the Son's being a creature, and for eternal generation and immutable existence<sup>k</sup>: tenets

<sup>a</sup> See Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 469. Sermons, vol. ii. p. 149.

<sup>b</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 184. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 469.

<sup>c</sup> Vol. ii. p. 419, 634.

<sup>d</sup> Ούτε οὐν κτιστὸν, ἢ δούλον ἐν τῇ τριάδι, &c. Τριάς τελεία, δόξη, καὶ αὐθιγία, καὶ βασιλεία μὴ μεριζομένη, μηδὲ ἀπαλλοτριωμένη. Fabric. ed. p. 224.

<sup>e</sup> Nazianz. Orat. xxxvii. p. 609. Orat. xl. p. 668.

<sup>f</sup> Πάντων δημιουργὸς καὶ κυβερνήτης.

<sup>g</sup> Πρὸς αὐτὸν ἀτεχνῶς ἠνωμένος.

<sup>h</sup> Τελειότατον καὶ ζῶντα, καὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ πρώτου νοῦ Λόγον ἐμψυχον. Bull. D. F. p. 154.

<sup>i</sup> Reply, p. 18, 20, 64, 148, 445. Bull. D. F. p. 158, 199, 263. My Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 491.

<sup>k</sup> First Defence, vol. i. p. 357, 511. Answer to Dr. Whitby, vol. ii. p. 223, 224. Bull. D. F. p. 164, 200.

utterly repugnant to such a natural inferiority as is pretended. What the Reply<sup>1</sup> had to object is answered in another place<sup>m</sup>.

300. Theognostus is also express against the Son's being a creature, and for his consubstantiality<sup>n</sup>. What the Reply<sup>o</sup> has to object had been abundantly before answered by Bishop Bull.

303. As to Arnobius, little has been pleaded on either side from him. He has some strong expressions which seem to carry the supremacy very high: and he has other expressions very full for the true and essential divinity of God the Son. Bishop Bull<sup>p</sup> and Le Nourry<sup>q</sup> may be consulted in respect of both the parts, and how to make them consistent.

318. Lactantius has been largely considered both in the Reply<sup>r</sup> and in my Second Defence. He makes Father and Son one God<sup>s</sup>. He makes both one substance<sup>t</sup>. He describes him under the characters of the one true God<sup>u</sup>. He supposes both to be one object of worship<sup>x</sup>. He joins the Son with the Father in the same dominion, and exempts the Son from the necessity of obeying<sup>y</sup>. These tenets are perfectly repugnant to natural superiority of dominion in the Father only. Nevertheless, he has some crude expressions, scarce excusable in a catechumen of his abilities.

322. ALEXANDER of Alexandria.

This venerable Patriarch, defender of the Catholic faith against his Presbyter Arius, shews in his two letters the Church's doctrine in his time. He could not be a friend to any natural subjection of God the Son. For,

1. He asserts his coeternity, and inseparability with the Father.

2. He maintains his necessary existence.

3. His natural divinity, or Godhead, of and from the Father.

4. His high or supreme Godhead. Proofs of these particulars may be seen in my Second Defence<sup>z</sup>; where also objections are answered, such as had been offered in the Reply<sup>a</sup>. Hitherto we

<sup>1</sup> Reply, p. 290, 334.

<sup>m</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 600.
Bull. D. F. p. 166.

<sup>n</sup> See Bull. D. F. p. 135.

<sup>o</sup> Reply, p. 333.

<sup>p</sup> Bull. D. F. p. 169.

<sup>q</sup> Nourrii Apparatus, vol. ii. p. 350.

<sup>r</sup> Reply, p. 49, 55, 63, 86, &c. 119,
388.

<sup>s</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 470, &c.

<sup>t</sup> Ibid. p. 470, 471.

<sup>u</sup> Ibid. p. 493.

<sup>x</sup> Ibid. p. 678.

<sup>y</sup> Ibid. p. 474.

<sup>z</sup> Ibid. p. 421. Sermons, vol. ii.
p. 149. First Defence, vol. i. p. 358.

<sup>a</sup> Reply, p. 57, 73, 291, 355, 451,
498.

have not found one man full and express for the natural government, or natural subjection among the Persons of the sacred Trinity. Several have been here cited who were expressly against it: and the rest implicitly condemn it; while none, either directly or so much as consequentially, maintain it. But now I take leave to name a man who did maintain it, and in pretty plain and broad terms.

323. ARIUS.

Arius, with his confederates, in a letter to Alexander, delivers it for doctrine<sup>b</sup>, that God the Father rules over God the Son, as being his God, and having existed before him. Here may Dr. Clarke and his followers see the first lines of their doctrine; which was afterwards filled up and completed by Aetius and Eunomius.

These were the authors and founders of that natural supremacy of dominion over God the Son, that natural subjection and servitude of two of the divine Persons, which these gentlemen are so eagerly contending for; and which, with as groundless and shameless a confidence as I ever knew, they presume to father upon the sacred Scriptures, upon the ancient creeds, and upon the venerable Doctors of the Church; against plain fact, against the fullest and clearest evidence to the contrary. I shall proceed, a little lower, to shew what reception this Arian conceit met with.

I shall say nothing of Eusebius of Cæsarea, of this time, a doubtful man, and of whom it is difficult to determine in the whole<sup>c</sup>.

340. ATHANASIVS.

Athanasius, about this time, began to write in the cause against Arius. His Exposition of Faith is of uncertain date: and so I may place it any where from the time he entered the list against the Arians. His doctrine is well known from his many works. I shall cite but one short sentence of his, speaking of God the Son. He is "Ruler supreme, of Ruler supreme:

<sup>b</sup> Ἀρχὴ γὰρ αὐτοῦ, ὡς Θεὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ πρὸ αὐτοῦ ἔσθ'. Ap. Athan. de Synod. vol. ii. p. 730.

Phœbadius well expresses the Arian doctrine of natural subjection, at the same time distinguishing it from the Catholic doctrine of filial ministration.

Subjectum Patri Filium, non Patris et Filii nomine, ut Sancta et Catholica dicit Ecclesia, sed creaturæ conditione, profitemini. Phœbad. B. P. P. tom. v. p. 303.

<sup>c</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 494 to 504.

“for whatsoever things the Father bears rule and dominion
“over, over the same does the Son also rule and govern <sup>d</sup>.”

348. CYRIL of Jerusalem.

The elder Cyril was always looked upon as a very moderate man, and not so vehement against the Arians as many others. Yet let us hear how expressly and fully he condemns the doctrine of natural subjection in the Trinity, ‘owning none other but voluntary and chosen.

“<sup>f</sup> All things,” says he, “are servants of his,” (of the Father;) “but his only Son and his own Holy Spirit are exempt from the all things: and all these servants do, by the one Son, in the Holy Ghost, serve the Master.” <sup>ε</sup>In another place the same Cyril says, “The Father has not one glory, and the Son another, but one and the same.” So little countenance had the alone supremacy of dominion, or natural subjection of two divine Persons, at that time.

358. HILARY.

Hilary’s doctrine on this head is, that the subjection of the Son is voluntary, and not by constraint <sup>h</sup>; that is to say, it is economical, not natural. <sup>i</sup>In another place he directly denies that either the Son is servant to the Father, or the Father Lord over him, save only in respect of the incarnation of God the Son: where he expressly again denies any natural subjection of God the Son as such.

360. Zeno Veronensis’s doctrine, to the same purpose, may be seen in my First Defence <sup>k</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> Παντοκράτορα ἐκ παντοκράτορος πάντων γὰρ ὢν ἄρχει ὁ πατήρ καὶ κρατεῖ, ἄρχει καὶ κρατεῖ καὶ ὁ υἱός. Athm. Ἐξpos. Fid. vol. i. p. 99.

<sup>e</sup> Οὐκ ἀναγκαστήν ὑπακοὴν ἔχων, ἀλλ’ αὐτοπροαίρετον εὐπειθειαν· οὐ γὰρ δούλος ἐστι, ἵνα ἀνάγκη ὑποταγῇ· ἀλλὰ υἱός ἐστιν, ἵνα προαιρέσει καὶ φιλοστοργίᾳ πεισθῇ. Cyrril. Cat. xv. n. 30. p. 240.

<sup>f</sup> Τὰ σύμπαντα μὲν δούλα αὐτοῦ· εἰς δὲ αὐτοῦ μόνος υἱός, καὶ ἐν τῷ ἅγιον αὐτοῦ πνεύμα ἐκτός τούτων πάντων, καὶ τὰ σύμπαντα δούλα, διὰ τοῦ ἐνός υἱοῦ ἐν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι δουλεύει τῷ δεσπότῃ. Ibid. Cat. viii. p. 123.

<sup>ε</sup> Οὐ γὰρ ἄλλην δόξαν πατήρ, καὶ ἄλλην υἱός ἔχει, ἀλλὰ μίαν καὶ τὴν αὐτήν. Catech. vi. p. 87.

<sup>h</sup> Subjectio Filii naturæ pietas, subjectionem autem cæterorum creationis in-firmitas. Hilar. de Synod. p. 1195.

<sup>i</sup> Servus enim non erat, cum esset secundum Spiritum Deus Dei Filius. Et secundum commune iudicium, ubi non est servus, neque Dominus est. Deus quidem et Pater natiuitatis est unigeniti Dei: sed ad id, quod servus est, non possumus non nisi tunc ei Dominum deputare cum servus est: quia si cum ante per naturam non erat servus, et postea secundum naturam esse quod non erat cœpit; non alia dominatus causa intelligenda est, quam quæ exstitit servitutis; tunc habens et naturæ dispensatione Dominum, cum præbuit ex hominis assumptione se servum. Hilar. de Trim. lib. xi. p. 1090.

<sup>k</sup> Vol. i. p. 443. Bull. D. F. p. 266.

370. Basil's also, no less full and express against the pretended natural dominion on one hand, and subjection on the other, is shewn in my Second Defence<sup>l</sup>.

375. Gregory Nazianzen's testimony I shall throw into the margin<sup>m</sup>: the same will be a confirmation of the Creed of Thaumaturgus.

380. Gregory Nyssen's doctrine may be seen in my Defences<sup>n</sup>, very full to the purpose.

382. I conclude with Ambrose<sup>o</sup>, having thus brought the doctrine low enough down. No doubt can be made of the Catholics all the way following to this very time.

These, after Scripture, are my authors for that very doctrine which the Observator every where, without the least scruple, charges upon me as my fiction and invention. Such is his great regard to truth, to decency, and to common justice: such his respect to the English readers, in imposing upon them any the grossest and most palpable abuses. Let him, when he is disposed, or when he is able, produce his vouchers from Catholic antiquity, for the natural subjection of God the Son, or the natural superiority of the Father's dominion over him. He may give proof of a superiority of order (which I dispute not) or of office, which I readily admit: but as to there being any natural rule, or natural subjection among the divine Persons, or within the Trinity itself, none of the ancients affirm it; all, either directly or indirectly, reclaim against it. He may run up his doctrine to Eunomius, and so on to Arius, where it began. He, I believe, is the first man upon record that ever allowed the preexistence and personality of the Logos, and yet made God the Son, as such, naturally subject to the dominion of the Father; appointing him a Governor, another God above him: which was really Arius's sense, and is the plain sense likewise of his successors at this day.

<sup>l</sup> Vol. ii. p. 401, 646, 751.

<sup>m</sup> Θεὸν τὸν πατέρα, Θεὸν τὸν υἱόν, Θεὸν τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τρεῖς ἰδιότη-τας θεότητα μίαν, δόξη καὶ τιμῇ καὶ οὐσίᾳ καὶ βασιλείᾳ μὴ μεριζομένην, ὡς τις τῶν μικρῶ πρόσθεν θεοφόρων ἐφιλοσόφησεν. Orat. xxxvii. p. 609.

Οὐδὲν τῆς τριάδος δοῦλον, οὐδέ κτιστὸν, οὐδὲ ἐπέισακτον, ἤκουσα τῶν σοφῶν τινος λέγοντος. Orat. xl. p. 666.

<sup>n</sup> Vol. i. p. 443. Vol. ii. p. 401.

<sup>o</sup> Non sunt enim duo Domini, ubi
Dominatus unus est; quia Pater in Filio, et Filius in Patre, et ideo Dominus unus. Ambros. de Sp. S. l. iii. c. 15.
p. 686.

THE CONCLUSION.

---

I HAVE nothing now to do but to take my leave of these gentlemen for this time. If they are disposed to proceed in the way they have now taken, it will be no great trouble to me (while God grants me life and health) to do myself justice, as often as I see needful; and to support, with God's assistance, the cause I have undertaken, as well against calumnies now, as against arguments before. But I think, since the argument is in a manner brought to an end, it is time for these gentlemen to put an end to the debate too; lest, after exposing the weakness of their cause, they may meet with a more sensible mortification, by going on to the utmost to expose their own.

They have done enough for Arianism; and more a great deal than the best cause in the world (though theirs is a very bad one) could ever require. They have omitted nothing likely to convince, nothing that could be any way serviceable to deceive their readers. They have ransacked the Socinian stores for the eluding and frustrating the Catholic interpretation of Scripture texts. They have gone on to Fathers: and whatever they could do there, by wresting and straining, by mangling, by misinterpreting, by false rendering, and the like, they have done their utmost to make them all Arians. And, lest that should not be sufficient, they have attempted the same thing upon the ancient creeds, and even upon modern confessions; upon the very Articles and Liturgy of the Church of England. To complete all, having once found out the secret of fetching in what and whom they pleased, they have proceeded further to drag me in with the rest<sup>a</sup>, into the very doctrine that I had been largely confuting.

They have spared no pains, or art, to disguise and colour over their wretched tenets, and to give them the best face and gloss that they could possibly bear. They will not call the Son a creature; nay, it was some time before they would say plainly that he is not necessarily existing, till the course of the debate and some pressing straits almost forced it from them; and that not till after some of the plainer and simpler men of the party had first blabbed it out. At last, they would seem not so much to be writing against the divinity of God the Son, as for the honour of God the Father. They do not care to say, they are pleading for the natural subjection and servitude of the Son, but it is for the natural dominion of the Father over him: and they do not commonly choose so much as to say that in plain and broad terms; but they hint it, and mince it, under the words "alone supremacy of the Father's dominion." And for fear that that should be taken hold on, and wrested from them, in due course of argument, they clap in authority with dominion; that they may have something at least that looks orthodox, something that may bear a colour upon the foot of antiquity, as admitting of a double meaning. And they have this further view in confounding distinct things together, to make a show as if we admitted no kind of authority as peculiar to the Father when we deny his alone dominion; or that if we assert one, we must of course, and at the same time, assert both. To carry on the disguise still further, they represent their adversaries as teaching that the Father has no natural supremacy of authority and dominion at all; without taking care to add, (what they ought to add,) over the Son and Holy Ghost, to undeceive the reader; who is not perhaps aware that subjection they are contriving for two of the divine Persons, while they put on a face of commendable zeal for the honour of the first. Such is their excessive care not to shock their young, timorous disciples; not to make them wise at once, but by degrees, after leading them about in their simplicity for a time, with their eyes half open.

<sup>a</sup> See Reply, p. 116. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 537.

Besides giving a fair gloss and outside to their own scheme, they have next studiously endeavoured to expose and blacken the faith received. It is Sabellianism, it is Tritheism, it is scholastic jargon, it is metaphysical reverie, nonsense, absurdity, contradiction, and what not: contrary to Scripture, contrary to all the ancients, nay, contrary even to moderns also: and, to make it look as little and contemptible as possible in the eyes of all men, it is at length nothing more than Dr. Waterland's own novel fiction and invention.

Now I appeal to all serious and thinking men, whether any thing can be done that these men have not done, in favour of their beloved Arianism; and whether they may not now fairly be excused, if they should desist, and proceed no further. A great deal less than this, though in ever so good a cause, might have been sufficient: and had they sung their liberavi animam some twelve months backwards, I know not whether any truly good and conscientious Arian could have thought them deserters, or have condemned them for it. Let the cause be ever so right or just, yet who hath required it at their hands that they should pursue it to such hideous lengths? Their design, suppose, is to promote truth and godliness: let it then be in God's own way, and by truth, and truth only. There can be no necessity of deceiving, of betraying, of beguiling any man even into truth, (though this is not truth,) by disguises, by misreports, by making things appear what they are not, or not suffering them to appear what they really are. This is going out of the way, wide and far, and defending truth, (were it really truth,) by making fearful inroads upon simplicity and godly sincerity, upon moral honesty and probity.

In conclusion, I must be so just to myself as to say, that considering how I was at first forced, in a manner, into public controversy, and what kind of a controversy this is, and how often and how anciently before decided by the churches of Christ; I was civil enough in engaging the men so equally as I did, and upon so fair terms. I expected, I desired nothing, but that they would make the best use they could of their own understandings, from which we were promised great things. I invited them to the utmost freedom, in discussing every point within the compass of the question; only not to exceed the rules of just and regular debate<sup>b</sup>: that every branch of the cause might have a new hearing, and be reexamined with all possible strictness and severity. In a word, all I required was, to dispute fair, to drop ambiguous terms, or define them, to condemn every thing but truth in the search after truth, and to keep close to the question; at the same time binding myself up to a careful and constant observance of the same rules.

When their Reply appeared, I presently saw how far those gentlemen were gone off from just debate; and how little inclination they had to dispute fairly or regularly. To prejudice the readers, they began with charges and complaints; all trifling, most false; and some such as they themselves could scarce be weak enough to believe<sup>c</sup>. I need not say what followed. When I found how the case stood, I reminded them of their misconduct, sometimes raised my style, and treated them with some sharpness, (though with less than they had me, with much less reason,) to let them know that I understood what they were doing, and that if I could not be confuted, I would not be contemned. As they had taken the liberty of charging me very often, and very unfairly, with things that they could not prove; I made the less scruple of charging them with what I could prove. And this, I hope, the impartial reader will upon examination find, that all the severity on my side lies in the truth of the things proved upon them; while theirs, on the other, lies mostly in invention, and abusive words, which, for want of evidence to support them, must of course return upon their own heads. They appear, in their last pieces especially, to be no great friends to ceremony: so that I have reason to believe they will expect the less in return. I had hitherto been so tender of Mr. Jackson, as never to name him; though his own friends had done it at full length: particularly the Author of the Catalogue, &c. and Dr. Whitby twice<sup>d</sup>, promising the world something very considerable from "the accurate pen of Mr. Jackson." Accuracy is a thing which I shall not complain of, but shall ever receive, even from an adversary, with the utmost reverence and respect. I wish this gentleman had shewn something of it; if not in his account of Scripture or Fathers, (which his hypothesis perhaps would not permit,) yet in his reports and representations, at least, of my words, and my sense; which might have been expected from a man of probity. Whether his writing without a name has been his principal encouragement to take the liberties he has, I will not be positive: but it is highly probable; because common prudence, generally, is a sufficient bar against it, in men that have any character to lose, any reputation to be responsible for it. The just and proper views, or reasons, for a writer's concealing his name are, to relieve his modesty, or to screen himself from public censure; to be frank and open in debate, and to discuss every point of importance (though against the received opinions) with all due freedom and strictness, like a lover of truth. Had the gentlemen I am concerned with gone upon these views, or made use of their concealment for these or the like laudable purposes, I should have been perfectly well satisfied. But while they continue their disguises as before, and regard nothing less than frank, fair, and open debate; while the main use they make of their concealment is only to be less solicitous about what they think or write; pelting us from their coverts with misreports, and slandering in masquerade: when this is the case, it concerns a man in his own defence to intimate to these gentlemen, that they are not so entirely under cover as they may imagine; but that it is their prudence still to be a little more upon their guard, and to write with more decency hereafter, at least, for their own credit and reputation.

<sup>b</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 557, &c.

<sup>c</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 396.

<sup>d</sup> Whitby's Second Part of his Reply, p. 74, 122.

After all, if any reasonable man is disposed to examine this question, or any part of it, with freedom and plainness, with sincerity and strictness, attending to the argument, and representing every thing in a fair and true light, without misreport or insult; such a person, though nameless, would have a just title to all tender, and candid, and even respectful treatment, from an adversary; and, I am very sure, would never find any other than such from me. I shall ever think it a much greater disgrace to be outdone in civility, than in matter of argument. The first cannot happen but through a man's own fault: the other may; and when it does, there is no real discredit in yielding to the truth once made clear. Both sides, if they are good men, are victorious in such a case; because both attain the only thing that they aimed at, and both share the prize.

A CRITICAL HISTORY
OF THE
ATHANASIAN CREED:
REPRESENTING THE OPINIONS
OF
ANCIENTS AND MODERNS CONCERNING IT:

WITH

An Account of the Manuscripts, Versions, and Comments, and such other particulars as are of moment for the determining the Age, and Author, and Value of it, and the Time of its Reception in the Christian Churches.

TO HIS GRACE

W I L L I A M

LORD ARCHBISHOP OF YORK,
PRIMATE OF ENGLAND AND METROPOLITAN.

My Lord,

I AM desirous of sending these papers abroad under your Grace's name, in confidence you will be a Patron to them, as you have been to the Author. I would make their way short and easy to the public esteem, by introducing them first into your Grace's acquaintance and good opinion: which if they have once the honour to obtain, I may then be assured that they will be both useful to the world, and acceptable with all good men: the height of my ambition.

The subject, my Lord, is the Athanasian Creed, the most accurate system of the Athanasian, that is, the Christian faith; of which your Grace is, by your station and character, by duty and office, and, what is more, by inclination and principle, and real services, the watchful Guardian and Preserver.

The happy fruits of it are visible in the slow and inconsiderable progress that the new heresy has been able to make within your province; where it died, in a manner, as it first arose, and no sooner began to lift up its head, but sunk down again in shame and confusion: as if the plenty of good seed sown had left no room for tares, or they could take no root in a soil so well cultivated.

While your Grace is promoting the honour and interests of our holy faith, in the eminent way, by the wisdom of your counsels, the authority of your precepts, and the brightness of your high example; I am endeavouring, in such a way as I can, to contribute something to the same common cause, though it be but slight and small, though it be only reviewing the fences and surveying the out-works; which is the most I pretend to in the history here presented.

What advantage others may reap from the publication will remain in suspense: but I am sure of one to myself, (and I lay hold of it with a great deal of pleasure,) the opportunity I thereby have of returning my public thanks to your Grace for your public favours. Though this, my Lord, is but a scanty expression for them, and far short, where the engaging manner and circumstances, known but to few, and not to be understood by many, make so considerable an addition in the whole, and almost double the obligation upon,

My Lord,

Your Grace's most obliged,

Most dutiful, and most obedient

Humble Servant,

DANIEL WATERLAND.

Cambridge, Magd. Coll.

Oct. 25, 1723.

THE PREFACE
TO THE SECOND EDITION.

---

WHAT I here present the Reader with, will not require much Preface. The introduction intimates the design, and use, and partition of the Work. The Appendix, which is an additional enlargement beyond my first design, gives account of itself. I subjoin two Indexes, for the ease and convenience of such persons as may be disposed, not only to read these sheets, but to study the subject. I should scarce have thought of making Indexes to so small a treatise, had I not found the like in Tentzelius, upon the same subject, and to a smaller Tract than this is. His were of considerable use to me, as often as I wanted to review any particular author or passage, or to compare distant parts, relating to the same things, one with another: the benefit therefore which I reaped from his labours, I am willing to pay back to the public by mine.

As to the subject of the following sheets, I make no question of its well deserving the thoughts and consideration of every studious reader; having before passed through the hands of many the most learned and most judicious men, and such as would not misemploy their time and pains upon a trifle. As to the present management of it, it must be left to the reader to judge of, as he sees cause.

For the chronology of the several parts, I have consulted the best authors; endeavouring to fix it with as much accuracy as I could. Wherever I could certainly determine the age of any Tract, printed or manuscript, to a year, I set down that year: where I could not do it, (as in manuscripts one seldom can,) I take any probable year within the compass of time when an Author is known to have flourished; or for a manuscript, any probable year within such a century, or such a king's reign wherein the manuscript is reasonably judged to have been written: and I generally choose a round number, rather than otherwise, in such indefinite cases and instances.

Thus for example, first in respect of Authors: there is a comment of Venantius Fortunatus, upon the Athanasian Creed, which I reprint in my Appendix. I cannot fix the age of it to a year, no, nor to twenty years. All that is certain is, that it was made between 556, when Fortunatus first went into the Gallican parts, and 599, when he was advanced to the Bishopric of Poitiers. Within this wide compass, I choose the year 570. If any one shall rather choose 580, or 590, I shall not dispute it with him, nor doth any thing very material depend upon it: but if any good reason can be given for taking some other year rather than 570, I shall immediately acquiesce in it.

As to manuscripts, it is well known there is no fixing them precisely to a year, merely from the hand or character: and there are but few, in comparison, that carry their own certain dates with them. The best judges therefore in these matters will think it sufficient to point out the king's reign, or sometimes the century, wherein a manuscript was written: and in the very ancient ones, above 1000 years old, they will hardly be positive so much as to the century, for want of certain discriminating marks between manuscripts of the 5th, 6th, and 7th centuries.

It may be asked then, why I pretend to fix the several manu- scripts, hereafter to be mentioned, to certain years in the margin ; those that carry no certain dates, as well as the other that do ? I do it for order and regularity, and for the more distinct perception of things ; which is much promoted and assisted by this orderly ranging them according to years. At the same time the intelligent reader will easily understand where to take a thing as certain, and where to make allowances. It is something like the placing of cities, towns, rivers, &c. in a map or a globe : they have all their certain places there, in such or such precise degrees of longitude and latitude ; which perhaps seldom answer to the strict truth of things, or to a mathematical exactness. But still it serves the purpose very near as well as if every thing had been adjusted with the utmost nicety : and the imagination and memory are mightily relieved by it. Thus much I thought proper to hint in vindication of my method, and to prevent any deception on one hand, or misconstruction on the other. I have, I think, upon the whole, generally gone upon the fairest and most probable presumption, and according to the most correct accounts of knowing and accurate men : but if I have any where through inadvertency, or for want of better information, happened to mistake in any material part, the best way of apologizing for it will be to correct it the first opportunity, after notice of it.

As to mere omissions, they will appear more or fewer, according to men's different judgments or opinions what to call an omission. I might have enlarged, considerably, the first chapter, which treats of the learned moderns : though some perhaps will think it too large already, and that it might better have been contracted. I have omitted several moderns mentioned by Tentzelius, whose professed design was to take in all : mine is only to take the principal, or as many as may suffice to give the Reader a full and distinct idea how this matter has stood, with the learned moderns, for eighty-five years last past.

In this second edition I have considerably shortened my Appendix, by throwing the several parts of it into the book itself, referring them to their proper places. Some few additional observations will be found, here and there interspersed, and some corrections, of slight moment as to the main thing, (in which I make no alteration,) but contributing in some measure to the perfection and accuracy of the Work.

I conclude with professing, as before, that I shall be very glad if what hath been here done may but prove an useful introduction to more and larger discoveries. If any thing considerable still remains, either in private hands or public repositories; any thing that may be serviceable to clear up some dark part, or to correct any mistake, or to confirm and illustrate any important truth relating to the subject; I shall be very thankful to the person that shall oblige either me with private notice, or the public with new improvements.

Cambridge, Magd. Coll.

Nov. 1, 1727.

A CRITICAL HISTORY
OF THE
ATHANASIAN CREED.

---

THE INTRODUCTION,

SHEWING

The Design and Use of this Treatise: with the Method and Partition of it.

MY design is, to inquire into the age, author, and value of that celebrated Confession, which goes under the name of the Athanasian Creed. The general approbation it hath long met with in the Christian churches, and the particular regard which hath been, early and late, paid to it in our own, (while it makes a part of our Liturgy, and stands recommended to us in our Articles,) will, I doubt not, be considerations sufficient to justify an undertaking of this kind: provided only, that the performance be answerable, and that it fall not short of its principal aim, or of the just expectations of the ingenuous and candid readers. No one will expect more of me than my present materials, such as I could procure, will furnish me with; nor any greater certainty in an essay of this nature, than things of this kind will admit of. If a reasonable diligence has been used in collecting, and due pains in digesting, and a religious care in building thereupon, (more than which I pretend not to,) it may, I hope, be sufficient with all equitable judges.

Many learned and valuable men have been before employed in the same design: but their treatises are mostly in Latin, and some of them very scarce, and hard to come at. I know not that any one hitherto has attempted a just treatise upon the subject in our own language, however useful it might be to the English readers; and the more so at this time, when the controversy about the Trinity is now spread abroad among all ranks and degrees of men with us, and the Athanasian Creed become the subject of common and ordinary conversation. For these reasons, I presumed, an English treatise might be most proper and seasonable: though otherwise, to avoid the unseemly mixture of English and Latin, (which will here be necessary,) and because of some parts which none but the learned can tolerably judge of; it might be thought more proper rather to have written a Latin treatise, and for the use only of scholars. However, there will be nothing very material but what an English reader may competently understand: and I shall endeavour to lay before him all that has been hitherto usefully observed upon the subject, that he may want nothing which may be conceived of any moment for the enabling him to form a true judgment. What I borrow from others shall be fairly acknowledged as I go along, and referred to its proper author or authors; it being as much my design to give an historical account of what others have done, as it is to supply what they have left undone, so far as my present materials, leisure, and opportunities may enable me to do it. Now to present the reader with a sketch of my design, and to shew him how one part is to hang upon another, my method will be as follows:

I. First, in order to give the clearer idea of what hath been already done, and of what may be still wanting, I begin with recounting the several conjectures or discoveries of the learned moderns.

II. Next, to enter upon the matter itself, and the evidence proper to it, I proceed to lay down the direct testimonies of the ancients, concerning the age, author, and value of this Creed.

III. To these I subjoin an account of the ancient comments upon the same Creed, being but another kind of ancient testimonies.

IV. After these follows a brief recital of the most ancient, or otherwise most considerable, manuscripts of this Creed, which I have either seen myself or have had notice of from others.

V. After the manuscripts of the Creed itself, I inquire also into the ancient versions of it, printed or manuscript; which will be also very serviceable to our main design.

VI. I come in the next place to treat of the ancient reception of this Creed in the Christian churches; as being a point of great moment, and which may be more certainly determined than the time of its composition, and may give great light into it.

VII. These preliminaries settled, to introduce to what follows, I then fall directly to the darkest part of all; namely, to the inquiry after the age and author of the Creed: which I despatch in two distinct chapters.

VIII. Next, I lay before the learned reader the Creed itself in its original language, with the most considerable various lections; together with select passages from ancient writers, either parallel to those of the Creed, or explanatory of it. And, lest the English reader should appear to be neglected, I subjoin the Creed in English with a running English commentary, serving much the same purpose with what is intended by the Latin quotations going before.

IX. I conclude all with a brief vindication of our own Church in receiving, and still retaining this excellent formulary of the Christian faith; answering the most material objections which have been made against us, on that account; and shewing the expediency, and even necessity of retaining this form, or something equivalent, for the preservation of the Christian faith against heresies. The Reader, I hope, will excuse it, if in compliance with custom, and to save myself the trouble of circumlocution, I commonly speak of it under the name of the Athanasian Creed; not designing thereby to intimate, either that it is a Creed strictly and properly so called, or that it is of Athanasius's composing: both which points will be discussed in the sequel.

CHAP. I.

The Opinions of the learned Moderns concerning the Athanasian Creed.

A. D. 1642. IN reciting the opinions of the learned moderns, I need go no higher than Gerard Vossius: who in his treatise De Tribus Symbolis, published in the year 1642, led the way to a more strict and critical inquiry concerning this Creed than had been before attempted. The writers before him, most of them, took it for granted that the Creed was Athanasius's, without troubling themselves with any very particular inquiry into it: and those few who doubted of it, or ascribed it to another, yet entered not closely into the merits of the cause, but went upon loose conjectures rather than upon any just rules of true and solid criticism. It will be sufficient therefore to begin our accounts from Vossius, who, since the time of his writing, has been ever principally mentioned by writers upon the subject, as being the first and most considerable man that has entered deep into it, and treated of it like a critic. He endeavoured to sift the matter thoroughly, as far as he was well able to do from printed books: as to manuscripts, he either wanted leisure or opportunity to search for them. The result of his inquiries concluded in the following particulars, some of them dubiously, all of them modestly proposed by him. 1. That the Athanasian Creed is not Athanasius's. 2. That it was originally a Latin composure, and of a Latin author or authors. 3. That it was made in the eighth or ninth century, in the time of Pepin, or of Charles the Great; and probably by some French divine. 4. That the first time it was produced, under the name of Athanasius, at least, with any assurance and confidence of it being his, was in the year 1233, when Pope Gregory the IXth's legates pleaded it at Constantinople in favour of the procession against the Greeks. 5. That it scarce ever obtained in any of the Christian churches before the year 1000. These were his sentiments when he wrote his treatise De Tribus Symbolis. But in a posthumous piece of his, having then seen what some other learned men had written upon the subject, he was content to say that the Creed could not be set higher than the year 600<sup>a</sup>. How far Vossius was mistaken in his accounts will appear in the sequel. Thus far must be allowed him, that he managed the argument with great learning and judgment, made a good use of such materials as he was possessed of; and though he was not very happy in determining the age of the Creed, or the time of its reception, yet he produced so many and such cogent arguments against the Creed's being originally Greek, or being made by Athanasius, that they could never be answered.

1644. The learned Petavius, who in the year 1622 (when he published Epiphanius) had fallen in with the common opinion of this Creed's being Athanasius's, did yet afterward in his treatise of the Trinity, published in the year 1644, speak more doubtfully of it; in the mean while positive that it was written in Latin<sup>b</sup>.

1647. The next considerable man, and who may be justly called a first writer in this argument, as well as Vossius, was our learned Usher. He had a good acquaintance with libraries and manuscripts; and was able from those stores to produce new evidences which Vossius knew not of. In the year 1647, he printed his Latin tract De Symbolis, with a prefatory epistle to Vossius. He there appeals to the testimonies of Ratram of Corbey, and Æneas Bishop of Paris, neither of them at that time made public, as also to Hinomar's of Rheims, (which had been published, but had escaped Vossius's observation,) to prove that this Creed had been confidently cited under the name of Athanasius almost 400 years before the time of Pope Gregory's legates, the time set by Vossius. And further by two manuscripts found in the Cotton Library, he thought he might carry up the antiquity of the Creed to the year 703, or even to 600. In short, he scrupled not to set the date of it above the year 447: for he supposes a council of Spain, held in that year, to have been acquainted with it, and to have borrowed the Filioque from it<sup>c</sup>. Thus far he, without any more particular determination about either the age or the author.

<sup>a</sup> Neque ante annum fuisse sexcentiesimum, fuse ostendimus in libro De Symbolis. Voss. Harm. Evang. lib. ii. c. 13. p. 215.

<sup>b</sup> Petavius de Trin. lib. vii. c. 8. p. 392.

<sup>c</sup> Usher. de Symbolis, pag. 24. N. B. Usher went upon the supposition that the words, a Patre, Filioque procedens, were genuine; and not foisted into the Confession of that Council; as they now appear to have been, after a more careful view of the MSS. of best note, and greatest antiquity.

1647. About the same time Dr. Jeremy Taylor (afterwards Bishop of Down and Connor) published his Liberty of Prophecy, wherein he expresses his doubts whether the Creed be justly ascribed to Athanasius. But as he had never seen Usher's treatise, nor indeed Vossius's, nor was at that time furnished with any proper assistances to enable him to make any accurate inquiries into this matter, it may suffice just to have mentioned him, in regard to the deserved name he has since borne in the learned world.

1653. George Ashwell, B. D. published an English treatise which was printed at Oxford, entitled, Fides Apostolica, asserting the received authors and authority of the Apostles' Creed. At the end of which treatise, he has a pretty long Appendix concerning the Athanasian Creed; which is well written, and contains a good summary of what learned men, before him, had advanced upon the subject. His judgment of it is, that it was written in Latin, and by Athanasius himself, about the year 340.

1659. Hamon L'Estrange<sup>d</sup>, in his Alliance of Divine Offices, gives his judgment of the Athanasian Creed, that it is not rightly ascribed to Athanasius, but yet ancient, and extant ann. 600 after Christ.

1659. Leo Allatius, about this year, printed his Syntagma de Symbolo S. Athanasii; which no doubt must be a very useful piece, especially in relation to the sentiments of the Greek churches, and the reception of this Creed amongst them: but I have never seen it; only I learn from Tentzelius (who yet could never get a sight of it) and Fabricius, that such a piece was written by Allatius in modern Greek, in 12mo. published at Rome 1658 or 1659. It appears to be very scarce, since none of the learned who have since written upon this Creed, have either referred to it, or given extracts out of it, so far as I have observed: excepting only something of that kind at Rome, A. D. 1667, by the College de propaganda Fide<sup>e</sup>.

1663. Cardinal Bona, some years after, in his book De Divina Psalmodia, makes frequent mention of this Creed, touches slightly upon the question about its age and author, takes some cursory notice of what Vossius had said, but nevertheless ascribes it to Athanasius, as being composed by him while in the western parts, teste Baronio; resting his faith upon Baronius as his voucher<sup>f</sup>.

<sup>d</sup> Hamon L'Estrange, Annot. in chap. iv. p. 99.

<sup>e</sup> Vid. Tentzel. Judic. &c. p. 147.

1669. Our very learned Bishop Pearson, in his Exposition of the Creed, occasionally delivers his opinion, that the Athanasian Creed was written in Latin, and by some member of the Latin Church; and extant about the year 600. Though the last particular he builds only upon an epistle attributed to Isidore of Seville, and since judged to be spurious.

1675. Joh. Lud. Ruelius, in his second volume, or tome, Conciliorum Illustratorum, has a particular dissertation, about thirty pages in quarto, upon this Creed. He follows Vossius's opinion for the most part, repeating the same arguments<sup>h</sup>.

1675. Our next man of eminent character is Paschasius Quesnel, a celebrated French divine. In the year 1675, he published his famous edition of Pope Leo's works, with several very valuable dissertations of his own. His fourteenth contains, among other matters, a particular inquiry about the author of this Creed. He ascribes it to Vigilius Tapsensis, the African<sup>i</sup>; and so well defends his position, that he has almost drawn the learned world after him. He is looked upon as the father of that opinion, because he has so learnedly and handsomely supported it: but he is not the first that espoused it. For Labbe, about fifteen years before, had taken notice of some that had ascribed this Creed to Vigilius, at the same time signifying his dissent from them<sup>k</sup>.

1676. The year after Quesnel, Sandius, the famous Arian, printed a second edition of his Nucleus, &c. with an Appendix: wherein he corrects his former judgment<sup>l</sup> of this Creed, taken implicitly from Vossius; and allows, nay, contends and insists upon it, that this Creed was not only known, but known under the name of Athanasius, as high at least as the year 770<sup>m</sup>. He ascribes it, upon conjecture, to one Athanasius, Bishop of Spire in Germany, who died in the year 642.

1678. I ought not to pass over our very learned Cudworth, though he has entered very little into the point before us. He gives his judgment, in passing, of the Creed commonly called

<sup>f</sup> Bona de Divina Psalmod. cap. xvi. sect. 18. p. 864.

<sup>g</sup> Pearson on the Creed, Art. viii. p. 324. ed. 3. art. v. p. 226.

<sup>h</sup> Ruelii Concil. Illustrat. tom. ii. p. 639 to 670.

<sup>i</sup> Quesnel, Dissert. xiv. p. 729, &c.

<sup>k</sup> Labbæi Dissert. de Script. Eccles. tom. ii. p. 477.

<sup>l</sup> Vid. Sandii Nucl. Histor. Eccles. p. 256.

<sup>m</sup> Sandii Append. p. 35.

Athanasian; that it "was written a long time after Athanasius
"by some other hand".<sup>n</sup>

1680. Henricus Heideggerus, in his second volume of Select Dissertations, (published at Zurich,) has one whole dissertation, which is the eighteenth, containing near forty pages in quarto. This author takes his account of the Creed mostly from Vossius, does not allow it to be Athanasius's, only called by his name as containing the Athanasian faith: and he defends the doctrine of the Creed at large against the objections of Dudithius and other Antitrinitarians; and concludes with a running comment upon the whole.

1681. Wolfgang Gundling, a German writer, the year after, published a small Tract, containing notes upon a little piece relating to the religion of the Greek churches, written by Eustratius Johannides Zialowski. What is chiefly valuable in Gundling is his account of the Greek copies of this Creed, (printed ones I mean,) giving us six of them together. He occasionally expresses his doubts whether the Creed be Athanasius's, or of some later writer<sup>o</sup>.

1683. I may next mention our celebrated ecclesiastical historian, Dr. Cave; who about this time published his Lives of the Fathers, and particularly of Athanasius. His account of this Creed is, that it "was never heard of in the world till above "600 years after Athanasius was dead; but barely mentioned
"then, and not urged with any confidence till above 200 years
"after, when the legates of Pope Gregory the Ninth produced "and pleaded it at Constantinople." The learned Doctor, it is plain, took this account from Vossius, and had never seen Usher's Treatise; which one may justly wonder at. Five years after, in his Historia Literaria, he allows that this Creed had been spoken of by Theodulphus, which was within 436 years of Athanasius: but not a word yet of any elder testimony, or manuscript, though both had been discovered, and publicly taken notice of, before this time. He still contends that the Creed obtained not in the Christian churches before 1000, nor became famous every where before 1233; but inclines nevertheless to ascribe it to Vigilius Tapsensis, who flourished about the year 484<sup>q</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> Cudworth, Intellect, Syst. p. 620.

<sup>o</sup> Gundlingii notæ in Eustratii Johannidis Zialowski Delineationem Ecclesiæ Græcæ, p. 68, &c.

<sup>p</sup> Cave, Life of Athanasius, sect. vi. art. 10.

<sup>q</sup> Cave, Histor. Literar. vol. i. p. 146, 371.

1684. Dr. Comber, in his book entitled, A Companion to the Temple, closes in with the old tradition of the Creed being Athanasius's; repeating the most considerable arguments usually pleaded for that persuasion<sup>r</sup>.

1684. To him I may subjoin Bishop Beveridge, who perhaps about this time might write his thoughts on the Creed, in his Exposition of our Articles, published after his death. He was so diligent and knowing a man, that had he been to consider this matter in his later years, he would certainly have given a more particular and accurate account than that which now appears. He ascribes the Creed to Athanasius, but with some diffidence; and thinks it might have been originally a Greek composition, but that the old Greek copies have been lost, and that the only remaining ones are versions from the Latin<sup>s</sup>.

1685. Cabassutius, in his Notitia Ecclesiastica, hath a short dissertation about the author of this Creed<sup>t</sup>. He contents himself with repeating Quesnel's arguments, to prove that Athanasius was not the author of it, determining nothing further; save only that it was originally a Latin composure, known and cited by the Council of Autun about the year 670.

1687. The celebrated Dupin, in his Ecclesiastical History, sums up the reasons usually urged to prove the Creed is none of Athanasius's and assents to them. He determines with confidence that it was originally a Latin composition, and not known till the fifth century; repeats Father Quesnel's reasons for ascribing it to Vigilius Tapsensis, and acquiesces in them, as having nothing more certain in this matter<sup>u</sup>.

1687. About the same time Tentzelius, a learned Lutheran, published a little treatise upon the subject<sup>x</sup>; setting forth the several opinions of learned men concerning this Creed. He is very full and accurate in his collection, omitting nothing of moment that had been said before him by any of the learned moderns, but bringing in some further materials, from his own searches, to add new light to the subject. He determines nothing; but leaves it to the reader to make a judgment as he sees cause from a full view of the pleadings.

<sup>r</sup> Comber, Companion to the Temple, p. 144.

<sup>s</sup> Beveridge on the eighth Article, p. 162.

<sup>t</sup> Cabassutii Notit. Eccles. Dissert. xix. p. 54.

<sup>u</sup> Dupin, Eccles. Histor. vol. ii. p. 35.

<sup>x</sup> Ernesti Tentzelii Judicia Eruditorum de Symb. Athanas. studiose collecta. Gothæ, A. D. 1687.

1688. I may place here the learned Pagi, who in his Critick upon Baronius passes his judgment of this Creed<sup>γ</sup>: which being the same with Quesnel's, and little more than repetition from him, I need not be more particular about him.

1693. Joseph Antelmi, a learned Paris divine, first began directly to attack Quesnel's opinion; and to sap the reasons on which it was founded. He published a particular Dissertation to that purpose<sup>z</sup>, consisting of eighty-five pages in octavo. He ascribes the Creed to Vincentius Lirinensis, who flourished in the year 434.

1695. The famous Tillemont wrote after Antelmus; for he makes mention of his Treatise, and examines his hypothesis: and yet it could not be long after; for he died in the year 1697. He commends Mr. Antelmi's performance as a considerable work; but inclines still rather to Quesnel's opinion. All that he pronounces certain is, that the Creed is none of Athanasius's, but yet as old as the sixth century, or older<sup>a</sup>.

1698. In the year 1698, Montfaucon published his new and accurate edition of Athanasius's works. In the second tome he has an excellent dissertation upon this Creed; the best that is extant, either for order and method, or for plenty of useful matter. The sum of his judgment is, that the Creed is certainly none of Athanasius's, nor yet Vigilius Tapsensis's, nor sufficiently proved to belong to Vincentius Lirinensis; but probably enough composed about the time of Vincentius, and by a Gallican writer or writers<sup>b</sup>.

1698. In the same year, Ludovicus Antonius Muratorius, an Italian writer, published a second tome of Anecdota out of the Ambrosian Library at Milan. Among other manuscripts there, he had met with an ancient Comment upon this Creed, ascribed to Venantius Fortunatus, who was Bishop of Poitiers in France in the sixth century. He publishes the Comment, together with a Dissertation of his own, concerning the author of the Creed:

<sup>γ</sup> Pagi, Critic. in Baron. an. 340. n. 6. p. 440.

<sup>z</sup> Josephi Antelmii Disquisitio de Symbolo Athanasiano. Paris. 1693. 8vo.

<sup>a</sup> Tillemont, Mémoires, tom. viii. p. 667.

<sup>b</sup> Symbolum Quicumque Athanasio incunctanter abjudicandum arbitra-

mur — Afro itaque Vigilio nihil est quod symbolum Quicumque tribuatur. — Non ægre quidem concesserim Vincentii ætate editam fuisse illam fidei professionem — Haud abs re conjectant viri eruditi in Gallis illud (symbolum) fuisse elucubratum. Montf. Diatrib. p. 723.

concluding, at length, that Venantius Fortunatus, the certain author of the Comment, might possibly be the author of the Creed too. He entirely rejects the opinion of those that would ascribe it to Athanasius, and disapproves of Quesnel's persuasion about Vigilius Tapsensis; but speaks favourably of Antelmi's, as coming nearest to the truth<sup>c</sup>.

1712. Fabricius, in his Bibliotheca Græca<sup>d</sup>, (highly valued by all men of letters,) gives a summary account of the sentiments of the learned relating to this Creed. His conclusion from all is, that thus far may be depended on as certain; that the Creed was not composed by Athanasius, but long after, in the fifth century, written originally in Latin, and afterwards translated into Greek.

1712. In the same year, the learned Le Quien published a new edition of Damascen, with Previous Dissertations to it. In the first of these, he has several very considerable remarks, concerning the age and author of the Athanasian Creed. He appears inclinable to ascribe it to Pope Anastasius I. (who entered upon the Pontificate in the year 398,) because of some ancient testimonies, as well as manuscripts, carrying the name of Anastasius in the title of the Creed: but he is positive that the Creed must be set as high as the age of St. Austin, Vincentius, and Vigilius<sup>e</sup>. And, as Antelmus before had made light of the supposition that the internal characters of the Creed shew it to be later than Eutyches; he makes as light of the other supposition of the internal characters setting it later than Nestorius.

1714. Natalis Alexander's new edition of his Ecclesiastical History bears date A. D. 1714. He had examined into our present question some years before, (about 1676, when his first edition came abroad,) subscribing to the opinion of Quesnel: and he does not appear to have altered his mind since. He takes notice of Antelmi's opinion, and speaks respectfully of it, as also of the author; but prefers the other hypothesis<sup>f</sup>.

1715. I ought not here to omit the late learned Mr. Bingham,

<sup>c</sup> Hæc et similia pluribus pertractavit eruditissimus Anthelmus, cujus opinioni, quorumnam eruditorum suffragia accesserint, me penitus fugit: fateor tamen ad veritatem omnium maxime illam accedere. Murator. tom. ii. p. 222.

<sup>d</sup> Fabricii Biblioth. Græca, vol. v.

p. 315.

<sup>e</sup> Omnino fateri cogor Augustini, Vincentii, et Vigilii ætate extitisse expositionem Latinam fidei, quæ postmodum Athanasio Magno attribui meruerit. Le Quien, Dissert. i. p. 9.

<sup>f</sup> Natal. Alexand. Eccl. Hist. tom. iv. p. 111.

to whom the public has been highly indebted for his Origines Ecclesiasticæ, collected with great judgment, and digested into a clear method. He had a proper occasion to say something of the Athanasian Creed, in passing, and very briefly. He observes, that it was not composed by Athanasius, but by a later, and a Latin writer; and particularly Vigilius Tapsensis; referring to such learned moderns as I have above mentioned for the proof of it; and giving no more than short hints of their reasons<sup>g</sup>.

1719. Dr. Clarke of St. James's, in his second edition of his Scripture Doctrine<sup>h</sup>, gives us his last thoughts in relation to this Creed. Referring to Dr. Cave, he informs us, that "this Creed was never seen till about the year 800, near 400 years after the death of Athanasius," (they are his own words,) "nor was received in the Church till so very late as about the year 1000." Yet Cave does not say, was never seen, (for he himself ascribes it to Vigilius Tapsensis, of the fifth century,) but only that it was not quoted before the year 800, or nearly; which yet is a very great mistake. What the learned Doctor intended by saying "about the year 800," and yet only "near 400 years after the death of Athanasius," or, as he elsewhere<sup>i</sup> expresses it, "above 300 years after the death of Athanasius," I do not understand; but must leave to those that can compute the distance between 373 (the latest year that Athanasius is ever supposed to have lived) and the year 800. I am persuaded, the Doctor was thinking, that if Athanasius had lived to the year 400, then the distance had been just 400 years; but as he died 27 years before, the distance must be so much the less, when it is quite the contrary.

1722. The last man that has given his sentiments in relation to this Creed is Casimirus Oudinus, in his new edition of his Supplement (now called a Commentary) to the Ecclesiastical Writers. I need say no more than that he does not seem to have spent much pains in reexamining this subject, but rests content with his first thoughts; ascribing the Creed, with Quesnel, to Vigilius Tapsensis<sup>k</sup>.

These are the principal moderns that have fallen within my notice: and of these, the most considerable are Vossius, Usher, <sup>g</sup> Bingham's Antiq. of the Christian Church, vol. iii. p. 546. &c. Oxf. edit. 1855.

<sup>h</sup> Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 379. 2nd edit.

<sup>i</sup> Clarke's Script. Doctr. p. 447. 1st edit.

<sup>k</sup> Vid. Oudin. Commentar. de Script. Eccl. vol. i. p. 345, 1248, 1322.

Quesnel, Tentzelius, Antelmus, Tillemont, Montfaucon, Muratorius, and Le Quien; as having particularly studied the subject, and struck new light into it, either furnishing fresh materials, or improving the old by new observations. Some perhaps may wish to have the several opinions of the moderns thrown into a narrower compass: for which reason I have thought it not improper to subjoin the following table, which will represent all in one view, for the ease and conveniency of every common reader.

A.D.	Writers.	Author of the Creed.	What Century composed in.	What Year composed.	When received.
1642.	Vossius.	A Latin Author.		Not bef. 600.	A.D. 1000.
1644.	Petavius.	Doubtful.
1647.	Bishop Usher.		Vth.	Before 447.	Bef. 852.
1647.	Bishop Taylor.	Not Athanasius.
1653.	G. Ashwell.	Athanasius.	IVth.	340.
1659.	L'Estrange.	Not Athanasius.		Before 600.
1659.	Leo Allatius.	Athanasius.	IVth.	340.
1663.	Card. Bona.	Athanasius Alex.	IVth.	340.
1669.	Bishop Pearson.	A Latin Author.		About 600.
1675.	Ruellius.	Not Athanasius.
1675.	Paschas. Quesnel.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.	Bef. 670.
1676.	Sandius.	Athanasius of Spire.	VIIth.	Before 642.	Bef. 770.
1678.	Dr. Cudworth.	Not Athanasius.	After the IVth.
1680.	Heideggerus.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.
1681.	Wolf. Gundling.	Doubtful.
1683.	Dr. Cave.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.	1000.
1684.	Dr. Comber.	Athanasius Alex.	IVth.	336.
1684.	Bishop Beveridge.	Athanasius Alex.	IVth.		Bef. 850.
1685.	Cabassutius.	A Latin Author.			Bef. 670.
1687.	Dupin.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.
1687.	Tentzelius.	Doubtful.
1688.	Pagi.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.	570.
1693.	Antelmus.	Vincentius Lirinens.	Vth.	Before 450.
1695.	Tillemont.	Not Athanasius.	VIth or sooner.
1698.	Montfaucon.	A Gallican Writer.	Vth.		Bef. 670.
1698.	Ant. Muratorius.	Venant. Fortunatus.	VIth.	570.	800.
1712.	Fabricius.	A Latin Author.	Vth.		663.
1712.	Le Quien.	Anastasius I.	IVth or Vth.	Before 401.	500.
1714.	Natal. Alexander.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.
1715.	Mr. Bingham.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.		670.
1719.	Dr. Clarke.	Doubtful.	VIIth or VIIIth.		1000.
1722.	Oudin.	Vigilius Tapsensis.	Vth.	484.

CHAP. II.

Ancient Testimonies.

HAVING taken a view of the moderns, in relation to the Creed, we may now enter upon a detail of the ancients, and their testimonies; by which the moderns must be tried. My design is to lay before the reader all the original evidence I can meet with, to give any light either into the age or author of the Creed, or its reception in the Christian churches; that so the reader may be able to judge for himself concerning the three particulars now mentioned, which are what I constantly bear in my eye, producing nothing but with a view to one or more of them.

Ancient testimonies have been pretended from Gregory Nazianzen, Gaudentius Brixiensis, St. Austin, and Isidorus Hispalensis, of the fourth, fifth, and sixth centuries. But they have been since generally and justly exploded by the learned, as being either spurious or foreign to the point; and therefore I conceive it very needless to take any further notice of them. As to quotations from our Creed, or comments upon it, falling within the compass of the centuries now mentioned; if there be any such, they shall be considered under other heads, distinct from that of ancient testimonies, properly so called, to be treated of in this chapter.

670. The oldest of this kind, hitherto discovered, or observed, is that of the Council of Autun in France, under Leodegarius, or St. Leger, the Bishop of the place in the seventh century, There is some dispute about the year when the Council was held, whether in 663, or 666, or 670. The last is most probable, and most generally embraced by learned men. The words of this Council in English run thus: "If any Presbyter, Deacon, Subdeacon, or Clerk, doth not unreproubly recite the Creed which the Apostles delivered by inspiration of the Holy Ghost, and also the Faith of the holy Prelate Athanasius, let him be censured by the Bishop<sup>1</sup>." By the Faith of Athanasius is here meant what we now call the Athanasian Creed; as may be reasonably pleaded from the titles which this Creed bore in the earlier times, before it came to have the name of a Creed: which titles shall be exhibited both from manuscripts and written evidences in the sequel. Yet it must not be dissembled that Papebrochius, a learned man, and whom I find cited with approbation by Muratorius<sup>m</sup>, is of opinion, that the Faith of Athanasius, here mentioned, means the Nicene Creed, which Athanasius had some hand in, and whereof he was the great defender. I can by no means come into his opinion, or allow any force to his reasonings. He asks, why should the Nicene Creed be omitted, and not mentioned with the Apostles? And why should the Athanasian, not then used in the Sacred Offices, be recommended so carefully, without a word of the Nicene? I answer, because it does not appear that the Nicene Creed was so much taken notice of at that time in the Gallican churches, while the Apostolical, or Roman Creed, made use of in baptism, in the western churches, instead of the Nicene, (which prevailed in the east,) in a manner superseded it: which no one can wonder at who considers how prevailing and universal the tradition had been in the Latin Church, down from the fifth century at least, that the Apostolical Creed was composed by the twelve Apostles, and therefore as sacred, and of as great authority as the inspired writings themselves. Besides that it appears from Hincmar, who will be cited in his place, that it was no strange thing, even so low as his time, about 850, to recommend the Athanasian Creed along with the Apostles', without a word of the Nicene. And why should it be thought any objection against the Athanasian Creed, that it was not at that time received into the Sacred Offices, (supposing it really was not, which may be questioned,) when it is certain that the Nicene was not yet received into the Sacred Offices in France, nor till many years after, about the time of Pepin, or of Charles the Great? There is therefore no force at all in the argument of Papebrochius: but there is this strong prejudice against it, that the title there given is a very common title for the Athanasian Creed, and not for the

<sup>1</sup> Si quis Presbyter, Diaconus, Subdiaconus, vel Clericus Symbolum quod Sancto inspirante Spiritu Apostoli tradiderunt, et Fidem Sancti Athanasii

Præsulis irreprehensibiliter non recenserit; ab Episcopo condemnetur. Augustodun. Synod. Harduin. tom. iii. p. 1016.

<sup>m</sup> Atqui, ut eruditissime adnotavit Cl. P. Papebrochius, in Respons. ad Exhibitionem Error. par. 2. art. xiii. n. 3. verbis illis Fidem S. Athanasii, minime Symbolum Athanasium designatur, sed quidem Nicænum, in quo elaborando plurimum insudasse Athanasium verisimile est. Etenim cur

Apostolico Symbolo commendato Nicænum prætermisissent Augustodunenses Patres? Cur Athanasiani Symboli cujus tunc nullus erat usus in sacris, cognitionem exegissent, Nicænumque ne uno quidem verbo commemorassent? Murator. Anecdol. tom. ii. p. 223.

Nicene. Nor would the Fathers of that Council have been so extravagantly fond of the name of Athanasius, as to think it a greater commendation of the Creed of Nice to call it after him, than to call it the Nicene. There is then no reasonable doubt to be made, but that the Council of Autun, in the Canon, intended the Athanasian Creed; as the best critics and the generality of the learned have hitherto believed.

But there are other objections of real weight against the evidence built upon this Canon. 1. Oudin makes it a question whether there was ever any council held under Leodegarius, a suffragan Bishop under the Archbishop of Lyons, having no metropolitanical authority<sup>n</sup>. But it may suffice, if the Council was held at Autun, while he was Bishop of the place, a good reason why he should be particularly mentioned; especially considering the worth and fame of the man: to say nothing of the dignity of his see, which from the time of Gregory the Great had been the second, or next in dignity to the metropolitanical see of Lyons. Nor do I perceive any force in Oudin's objection against St. Leger's holding a diocesan synod, (for a provincial synod is not pretended,) though he was no metropolitan. 2. A stronger objection is, that the Canon we are concerned with cannot be proved to belong to the Council held under Leodegarius. It is not found among the Canons of that Council published by Sirmondus from the manuscripts of the library of the church of Angers, but it is from another collection, out of the library of the monastery of St. Benignus of Dijon, with this title only; Canones Augustodunenses: so that one cannot be certain whether it belongs to the Synod under St. Leger, or to some other Synod of Autun much later. It must be owned that the evidence can amount to no more than probable presumption, or conjecture. Wherefore Dupin<sup>o</sup>, Tentzelius<sup>p</sup>, Muratorius<sup>q</sup>, and Oudin<sup>r</sup>, do not scruple to throw it aside as of too suspected credit to build any thing certain upon: and even Quesnel<sup>s</sup> expresses some dissatisfaction about it; only in respect to some great names, such as Sirmondus, Peter le Lande, Godfr. Hermantius, &c. he is willing to acquiesce in it. To whom we may add, Labbet<sup>t</sup>, Le Coint<sup>u</sup>,

<sup>n</sup> Oudin. Comment. de Script. Eccles. tom. i. p. 348.

<sup>o</sup> Dupin, Ecl. Hist. vol. ii. p. 35.

<sup>p</sup> Tentzel. Judic. Erud. p. 61, &c.

<sup>q</sup> Murator. Anecd. Ambros. tom. ii. p. 223.

<sup>r</sup> Casim. Oudin. vol. i. p. 348.

<sup>s</sup> Quesnel, Dissert. xiv. p. 731.

<sup>t</sup> Labb. Dissert. de Script. Eccles. tom. ii. p. 478.

<sup>u</sup> Le Coint, Annal. Franc. ad ann. 663. n. 22.

Cabassutius<sup>x</sup>, Pagi<sup>y</sup>, Tillemont<sup>z</sup>, Montfaucon<sup>a</sup>, Fabricius<sup>b</sup>, Harduin<sup>c</sup>, and our learned antiquary Mr. Bingham<sup>d</sup>: who all accept it as genuine, but upon probable persuasion, rather than certain conviction. Neither do I pretend to propose it as clear and undoubted evidence, but probable only, and such as will be much confirmed by other evidences to be mentioned hereafter.

760. Regino, abbot of Prom in Germany, an author of the ninth and tenth century, has, among other collections, some Articles of Inquiry, supposed by Baluzius the editor to be as old, or very nearly, as the age of Boniface, Bishop of Mentz, who died in the year 754. In those Articles there is one to this purpose: "Whether the clergy have by heart Athanasius's "Tract upon the Faith of the Trinity, beginning with Whosoever will be saved<sup>e</sup>, &c." This testimony I may venture to place about 760, a little after the death of Boniface.

794. The Council of Frankfort, in Germany, in their thirty-third Canon give orders, that "the Catholic Faith of the holy Trinity, and Lord's Prayer, and Creed, be set forth and delivered to all<sup>f</sup>."

Vossius understands the Canon of the two Creeds, Nicene and Apostolical. But I know not why the Apostolical, or Roman Creed, should be emphatically called Symbolum Fidei, The Creed, in opposition to the Nicene; nor why the Nicene should not be called a Creed, as well as the other, after the usual way. Besides, that Fides Catholica, &c. has been more peculiarly the title of the Athanasian Creed: and it was no uncommon thing, either before or after this time, to recommend it in this manner together with the Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed, just as we find here. And nothing could be at that time of greater service against the heresy of Felix and Elipandus, (which occasioned the calling of the Council,) than the Athanasian Creed. For which reasons, till I see better reasons to the con-

<sup>x</sup> Cabassut. Notit. Eccl. Dissert. xix. p. 54.

<sup>y</sup> Pagi Crit. in Baron. ann. 340. n. 6.

<sup>z</sup> Tillemont, Mémoires, vol. viii. p. 668.

<sup>a</sup> Montfauc. Diatrib. p. 720.

<sup>b</sup> Fabric. Bibl. Græc. vol. v. p. 316.

<sup>c</sup> Harduin. Concil. tom. iii. p. 1016.

<sup>d</sup> Bingham, Origin. Eccl. vol. iii. p. 548, Oxf. edit. 1855.

<sup>e</sup> Si Sermonem Athanasii Episcopi de Fide Sanctæ Trinitatis, cujus initium est, Quicumque vult salvus esse, memoriter teneat. Regin. de Discipl. Eccles. l. 1.

<sup>f</sup> Ut Fides Catholica Sanctæ Trinitatis, et Oratio Dominica, atque Symbolum Fidei omnibus prædicetur, et tradatur. Concil. Francf. Can. 33.

<sup>g</sup> Vossius de tribus Symb. Dissert. iii. c. 52. p. 528.

trary, I must be of opinion that the Council of Frankfort in their thirty-third Canon intended the Athanasian Creed, which Charles the Great had a particular respect for, and had presented in form to Pope Adrian I. above twenty years before; as we shall see in another chapter.

809. Theodulphus, Bishop of Orleans in France, has a Treatise of the Holy Ghost, with a preface to Charles the Great, written at a time when the dispute about the procession began to make disturbance. He brings several testimonies in favour of the procession from the Son, out of Athanasius; and, among others, a pretty large part of the Athanasian Creed, from the words, "The Father is made of none, &c." to "He therefore that will be saved must thus think of the Trinity<sup>h</sup>," inclusive.

809. An anonymous writer of the same time, and in the same cause, and directing himself to the same Prince, makes the like use of the Athanasian Creed, in the following words; "St. Athanasius, in the Exposition of the Catholic Faith, which that great master wrote himself, and which the universal Church professes, declares the procession of the Holy Ghost from the Father and Son, thus saying; The Father is made of none<sup>i</sup>, &c." This I cite upon the credit of Sirmondus in his notes to Theodulphus.

809. It was in the same year that the Latin monks of Mount Olivet wrote their Apologetical Letter to Pope Leo III. justifying their doctrine of the procession from the Son, against one John of Jerusalem, a monk too, of another monastery, and of an opposite persuasion. Among other authorities, they appeal to the Faith of Athanasius, that is, to the Creed, as we now call it. This I have from Le Quien, the learned editor of Damascen, who had the copy of that letter from Baluzius, as he there signifies<sup>k</sup>.

820. Not long after, Hatto, otherwise called Hetto and Ahyto,

<sup>h</sup> Item idem—Pater a nullo est factus, &c. usque ad Qui vult ergo salvus esse, &c. Theodulph. apud Sirmondum Oper. tom. ii. p. 978.

<sup>i</sup> Incertus autor quem diximus, hoc ipso utens testimonio, Beatus, inquit, Athanasius, in Expositione Catholicæ Fidei, quam ipse egregius Doctor conscripsit, et quam universalis confitetur Ecclesia, processionem Spiritus Sancti a Patre et Filio declarat, ita dicens: Pater a nullo est factus, &c. Sirmond.

Op. tom. ii. p. 978. Conf. p. 967.

<sup>k</sup> In Regula Sancti Benedicti quam nobis dedit Filius vester Dominus Karolus, quæ habet fidem scriptam de sancta et inseparabili Trinitate; Credo Spiritum Sanctum Deum verum ex Patre procedentem et Filio: et in Dialogo quem nobis vestra sanctitas dare dignata est similiter dicit. Et in Fide S. Athanasii eodem modo dicit. Monachi de Monte Oliv. apud Le Quien, Dissert. Damasc. p. 7.

Bishop of Basil in France, composed his Capitular, or Book of Constitutions, for the regulation of the clergy of his diocese. Amongst other good rules, this makes the fourth; "That they should have the Faith of Athanasius by heart, and recite it at the prime (that is, at seven o'clock in the morning) every Lord's Day<sup>1</sup>."

820. Agobardus of the same time, Archbishop of Lyons, wrote against Felix Orgelitanus; where he occasionally cites part of the Athanasian Creed. His words are: "St. Athanasius says, that except a man doth keep the Catholic faith whole and undefiled, without doubt he shall perish everlastingly<sup>m</sup>."

852. In the same age flourished the famous Hincmar, Archbishop of Rheims; who so often cites or refers to the Creed we are speaking of, as a standing rule of faith, that it may be needless to produce the particular passages. I shall content myself with one only, more considerable than the rest for the use that is to be made of it hereafter. He directs his presbyters "to learn Athanasius's Treatise of Faith, (beginning with Whosoever will be saved,) to commit it to memory, to understand its meaning, and to be able to give it in common words;"<sup>n</sup> that is, I suppose, in the vulgar tongue. He at the same time recommends the Lord's Prayer and (Apostles') Creed<sup>o</sup>, as I take it, without mentioning the Nicene: which I particularly remark, for a reason to be seen above. It is further observable, that though Hincmar here gives the Athanasian formulary the name of a Treatise of Faith; yet he elsewhere<sup>p</sup> scruples not to call it (Symbolum) a Creed: and he is, probably, as Sirmondus observes<sup>q</sup>, the first writer who gave it the name it bears at this day. Which, I suppose, may have led Oudin into his mistake,

<sup>1</sup> IVto. Ut Fides Sancti Athanasii a sacerdotibus discatur, et ex corde, die Dominico ad primam recitetur. Basil. Capitul. apud Harduin. tom. iv. p. 1241.

<sup>m</sup> Beatus Athanasius ait; Fidem Catholicam nisi quis integram, inviolatamque servaverit, absque dubio in æternum peribit. Agobard. adv. Felic. cap. 3. ed. Baluz.

<sup>n</sup> Unusquisque presbyterorum Expositionem Symboli atque Orationis Dominicæ, juxta traditionem orthodoxorum patrum plenius discat— Psalmorum etiam verba, et distinc-

tiones regulariter, et ex corde, cum canticis consuetudinariis pronuntiari sciat. Necnon et Sermonem Athanasii de Fide, cujus initium est, Quicumque vult salvus esse, memoriæ quisque commendet, sensum illius intelligat, et verbis communibus enuntiari queat. Hincm. Capit. i. tom. i. p. 710. ed. Sirmond.

<sup>o</sup> Vid. Hincm. Opusc. ad Hincmar. Laudunensem, tom. ii. p. 473.

<sup>p</sup> Athanasius in Symbolo dicens &c. de Prædestin. tom. i. p. 309.

<sup>q</sup> Sirmond. Not. in Theodulph. p. 978.

that no writer before Hincmar ever made mention of this Creed<sup>r</sup>; a mistake, which, though taken notice of by Tenzelius<sup>s</sup> in the year 1687, he has nevertheless again and again repeated in his last edition.

865. In the same age lived Ansharius, monk also of Corbey, and afterwards Archbishop of Hamburg and Bremen in Germany. Among his dying instructions to his clergy, he left this for one; that they should be careful to recite the Catholic Faith composed by Athanasius<sup>t</sup>. This is reported by Rombertus, the writer of his Life, and successor to him in the same see; who had been likewise monk of Corbey: so that we have here two considerable testimonies in one.

868. Contemporary with these was Æneas, Bishop of Paris, who, in his treatise against the Greeks, quotes the Athanasian Creed under the name of Fides Catholica<sup>u</sup>, Catholic Faith, producing the same paragraph of it which Theodulphus had done sixty years before.

868. About the same time, and in the same cause, Ratram, or Bertram, monk of Corbey in France, made the like use of this Creed, calling it, a Treatise of the Faith<sup>x</sup>.

871. Adalbertus of this time, upon his nomination to a bishopric in the province of Rheims, was obliged to give in a profession of his faith to Archbishop Hincmar. Among other things, he professes his great regard to the Athanasian Creed, (Sermo Athanasii;) as a Creed received with great veneration by the Catholic Church, or being of customary and venerable use in it<sup>y</sup>. This testimony is considerable in regard to the reception of this Creed; and not before taken notice of, so far as I know, by those that have treated of this argument.

<sup>r</sup> Oudin, Commentar. vol. i. p. 345, 1322.

<sup>s</sup> Tenzel. Judic. Eruditor. p. 144.

<sup>t</sup> Cum instaret obitus, præcepit ut fratres canerent Fidem Catholicam a beato Athanasio compositam. Anshar. Vit. apud Petr. Lambec. in Append. lib. i. Rerum Hamburg. p. 237.

<sup>u</sup> Sanctus Athanasius, sedis Alexandrinæ Episcopus, &c. — Item, idem in Fide Catholica, quod Spiritus Sanctus a Patre procedat et Filio, Pater a nullo est factus, &c. Æneas Paris. adv. Græc. cap. 19.

<sup>x</sup> Beatus Athanasius, Alexandrinus

Episcopus, in libello de Fide quem edidit, et omnibus Catholicis proposuit tenendum, inter cætera sic ait; Pater a nullo est factus, nec creatus, nec genitus, &c. Ratr. contra Græcor. op. pos. lib. ii. cap. 3.

<sup>y</sup> In Sermone Beati Athanasii, quem Ecclesia Catholica venerando usu frequentare consuevit, qui ita incipit; Quicumque vult salvus esse, ante omnia opus est ut teneat Catholicam fidem. Professio Adalberti Episcopi Morinensis futuri. Harduin. Concil. tom. v. p. 1445.

889. This Creed is again mentioned in the same age by Riculphus Bishop of Soissons in France, in his pastoral charge to the clergy of his diocese. He calls it a Treatise (or Discourse) of Catholic Faith<sup>z</sup>. This I take from Father Harduin's Councils, as also the former, with the dates of both.

960. Ratherius, Bishop of Verona, in Italy in the year 928, and afterwards of Liege in Germany in the year 953, and restored to his see of Verona in the year 955, did after this time write instructions to his clergy of Verona; in which he makes mention of all the three Creeds, Apostolical, Nicene, and Athanasian; obliging his clergy to have them all by heart: which shews that they were all of standing use in his time, in his diocese at least<sup>a</sup>.

997. Near the close of this century lived Abbo, or Albo, Abbot of Fleury, or St. Benedict upon the Loire in France. Upon some difference he had with Arnulphus Bishop of Orleans, he wrote an Apology, which he addressed to the two kings of France, Hugh and Robert. In that Apology he has a passage relating to our purpose, running thus: "I thought proper, in the first place, to speak concerning the Faith: which I have heard variously sung in alternate choirs, both in France and in the Church of England. For some, I think, say, in the Athanasian form, the Holy Ghost is of the Father and of the Son, neither made, nor created, but proceeding: who while they leave out, nor begotten, are persuaded that they are the more conformable to Gregory's Synodical Epistle, wherein it is written, that the Holy Ghost is neither unbegotten, nor begotten, but proceeding<sup>b</sup>." I have taken the liberty of throwing in a scopi de Fide Trinitatis, cujus initium est, Quicumque vult, memoriter teneat. Ratherii Synod. Epist. Harduin. Con. tom. vi. p. 787.

<sup>z</sup> Item monemus, ut unusquisque vestrum Psalmos, et Sermonem Fidei Catholicæ, cujus initium, Quicumque vult salvus esse, et Canonem Missæ, et cantum, vel compositum, memoriter, et veraciter et correcte tenere studeat. Riculph. Const. 5. Harduin. Concil. tom. vi. p. 415.

<sup>a</sup> Ipsam Fidem, id est Credulitatem, Dei, trifarie parare memoriter festinetis: hoc est, secundum Symbolum id est Collationem Apostolorum, sicut in Psalteriis correctis invenitur; et illam quæ ad Missam canitur; et illam Sancti Athanasii quæ ita incipit; Quicumque vult salvus esse—Sermonem, ut superius dixi, Athanasii Epi-

<sup>b</sup> Primitus de Fide dicendum credidi; quam alternantibus choris et in Francia, et apud Anglorum Ecclesiam variari audivi. Alii enim dicunt, ut arbitror, secundum Athanasium, Spiritus Sanctus a Patre et Filio non factus, non creatus, sed procedens: qui dum id quod est non genitus subtrahunt, Synodicum Domini Gregorii se sequi credunt, ubi ita est scriptum; Spiritus Sanctus nec ingenuus est, nec genitus, sed procedens. Abbo Floriacens. Apol. ad Francor. Reges.

word or two to make the sentence run the clearer. What the author intends is, that some scrupulous persons, both in France and England, recited the Athanasian Creed with some alteration, leaving out two words, to make it agree the better, as they imagined, with Gregory's Synodical instructions. As to their scruple herein, and the ground of it, I shall say more of it in a proper place. All I am to observe at present is, that this testimony is full for the custom of alternate singing the Athanasian Creed, at this time, in the French and English Churches. And indeed we shall meet with other as full, and withal earlier evidence of the same custom, when we come to treat of manuscripts in the following chapters. To proceed with our ancient testimonies.

1047. In the next century, we meet with Gualdo, a monk of Corbey; who likewise wrote the life of Anscharius, but in verse, as Rembertus had before done in prose. He also takes some notice of our Creed, ascribing it to Athanasius<sup>c</sup>.

1130. In the century following, Honorius, a scholastic divine of the Church of Autun, in his book entitled, The Pearl of the Soul, (which treats of the Sacred or Liturgic Offices,) reckons up the several Creeds of the Church, making in all four: namely, the Apostolical, the Nicene, the Constantinopolitan, and the Athanasian. Of the last, he observes, that it was daily repeated at the prime<sup>d</sup>. He ascribes it to Athanasius of Alexandria in the time of Theodosius: where he is undoubtedly mistaken in his chronology. For, if he means the first Athanasius of Alexandria, he is too early for either of the Theodosius's; and if he means it of the second, he is as much too late. But a slip in chronology might be pardonable in that age: nor does it at all affect the truth of what he attests of his own times.

1146. Otho, Bishop of Frisinghen in Bavaria, may here be taken notice of, as being the first we have met with who pretends to name the place where Athanasius is supposed to have made this Creed; Triers, or Treves, in Germany<sup>e</sup>. It is no improbable conjecture of M. Antelmi, that the copy of the Creed found at Treves, being very ancient, or the most ancient of any, and

<sup>c</sup> Catholicamque Fidem quam composuisse beatus

Fertur Athanasius— Gualdon. Vit. Ansh. apud Lambec. p. 322.

<sup>d</sup> Quarto, Fidem Quicunque vult, quotidie ad primam iterat, quam Athanasius Alexandrinus Episcopus, rogatu Theodosii Imperatoris, edidit.

Honor. Augustod. Gemm. Animæ, lib. ii. cap. 5. Bibl. PP. tom. xx. p. 1086.

<sup>e</sup> Ibidem manens in Ecclesia Trevirorum sub Maximino ejusdem Ecclesie Episcopo, Quicunque vult, &c. a quibusdam dicitur edidisse. Oth. Frising. Chronic. lib. iv. cap. 7. p. 44. al. p. 75.

from which many others were taken, might first occasion the story of the Creed's being made at Treves, and by Athanasius himself, who by his exile thither might render that place famous for his name to all after-ages.

1171. Arnoldus, in his Chronicle, informs us of an abbot of Brunswick, who attending the Duke of Brunswick, at this time, in his journey into the east, had some disputes with the Greeks at Constantinople, upon the article of procession, and pleaded the usual passage out of this Creed; whose words are to be seen in the margin<sup>f</sup>. What is most to be noted is the title of Symbolum Fidei, which now began to be common to this form, as to the other Creeds.

1178. Robertus Paululus, Presbyter of Amiens, in the diocese of Rheims, speaking of the Offices recited at the prime, observes that the piety of good Christians had thereunto added the "Quicumque vult, that the articles necessary to salvation might never be forgotten any hour of the day<sup>g</sup>."

1190. Beleth, a celebrated Paris divine, is the oldest writer that takes notice of this Creed's being commonly ascribed to Anastasius; though he himself ascribes it to Athanasius<sup>h</sup>. Tentzelius<sup>i</sup> marks some differences between the prints and the manuscripts of this author, and betwixt one manuscript and another. But as the difference, though in words considerable, is yet very little in the sense, it is not material to our present purpose to be more particular about it.

1200. I must not omit Nicolaus Hydruntinus, a native of Otranto in Italy, who sided with the Greeks, and wrote in Greek against the Latins. He understood both languages, and was often interpreter between the Greeks and Latins, in their disputes at Constantinople, Athens, and Thessalonica<sup>k</sup>. He wrote several bola; minimum quod a cunctis communiter in quotidiana oratione dicitur, quod Apostoli simul composuerunt. Secundum est quod in prima recitatur, Quicumque vult salvus esse: quod ab Athanasio Patriarcha Alexandrino contra Arrianos hæreticos compositum est, licet plerique eum Anastasium fuisse falso arbitrentur. Beleth. de Divin. Offic. cap. xl. p. 334. ed. Venet.

<sup>f</sup> Unde Athanasius in Symbolo Fidei: Spiritus Sanctus a Patre et Filio non factus, nec creatus, nec genitus, sed procedens. Ecce Spiritum Sanctum a Patre dicit procedere et a Filio. Henric. Abb. apud Arnold. Chron. Slavov. lib. iii. cap. 5. p. 248.

<sup>g</sup> His addidit fidelium devotio, Quicumque vult salvus esse, ut Articulorum Fidei qui sunt necessarii ad salutem, nulla diei hora obliviscamur. Rob. Paulul. inter Oper. Hugon. de S. Victor. de Offic. Eccl. lib. ii. cap. 1. p. 265.

<sup>h</sup> Notandum est quatuor esse Sym-

<sup>i</sup> Tentzel. Judicia Erudit. p. 91.

<sup>k</sup> Vid. Fabric. Bibl. Græc. vol. x. p. 393.

tracts, out of which Leo Allatius has published some fragments. There is one relating to the Athanasian Creed, which must here be taken notice of; being of use for the certifying us that this Creed was extant in Greek at and before his time. It is this: "They (the Greeks) do not know who made the addition to the Faith of Athanasius, styled Catholic; since the words, and of the Son, are not in the Greek (form,) nor in the Creed" (of Constantinople!).

From this passage we may learn, that there was a Greek copy of the Athanasian Creed at this time; that it wanted the words, of the Son; that it was looked upon as Athanasius's; and that the title was, The Catholic Faith of St. Athanasius: which is its most usual title in the Latin copies. I may just hint to the reader, that though both πίστις in the Greek, and fides in the Latin, might justly be rendered creed in English, rather than faith, whenever it stands for a formulary or confession of faith, as it does here; yet because I should otherwise want another English word for σύμβολον in the Greek, and symbolum in the Latin, I therefore reserve the word creed, in this case, for distinction sake, to be the rendering of symbolum, or σύμβολον, and nothing else. But to proceed.

1230. Alexander of Hales, in Gloucestershire, may here deserve to be mentioned, as shewing what Creeds were then received in England. He reckons up three only, not four, (as those that make the Nicene and Constantinopolitan to be two;) namely, the Apostles', the Nicene or Constantinopolitan, and the Athanasian<sup>m</sup>: where we may observe, that the Athanasian has the name of a Creed, which yet was not its most usual or common title in those times: only the Schoolmen, for order and method sake, chose to throw it under the head of Creeds.

1233. I am next to take notice of the famed legates of Pope Gregory the IXth, (Haymo, Radolphus, Petrus, and Hugo,) who produced this Creed in their conferences with the Greeks at Constantinople. They asserted it to be Athanasius's, and made by him while an exile in the western parts, and penned in the

<sup>l</sup> "Οτι και αυτοι αγροουσι, τις ο προσθησας εν τη πιστει του αγιου Αθανασιου, τη καθολικη λεγομενη, ως εν τω ελληνικω ουχι τουτο, υπερ εστι και εκ του νιου, περιεχεται, ουτε εν τω συμβολω. Leo Allat. de Consens. Eccl.

Occident. &c. lib.iii. cap. 1. n. 5. p. 887.

<sup>m</sup> Tria sunt Symbola: primum Apostolorum, secundum patrum Nicænorum, quod canitur in Missa, tertium Athanasii. Alexand. Alens. par. iii. q. 69. membr. 5.

Latin tongue<sup>n</sup>. They had not assurance enough to pretend that it was a Greek composition : there were too many and too plain reasons to the contrary.

1240. In this age, Walter de Cantilupe, Bishop of Worcester, in his Synodical Constitutions, exhorts his clergy to make themselves competent masters of the Psalm called Quicumque vult, and of the greater and smaller Creed, (that is, Nicene and Apostolical,) that they might be able to instruct their people<sup>o</sup>. From whence we may observe, that at this time the Athanasian formulary was distinguished, here amongst us, from the Creeds properly so called ; being named a Psalm, and sometimes a Hymn, (as we shall see from other evidences to be produced hereafter,) suitably to the place it held in the Psalters among the other Hymns, Psalms, and Canticles of the Church, being also sung alternately in churches, like the other.

1250. We may here also take notice of a just remark made by Thomas Aquinas of this century ; that Athanasius, whom he supposes the author of this formulary, did not draw it up in the way of a Creed, but in a doctrinal form ; which however was admitted by the authority of the Roman see, as containing a complete system of Christian faith<sup>p</sup>.

1255. Walter de Kirkham, Bishop of Durham, in his Constitutions, about this time, makes much the same order that Walter Cantilupe had before done, styling the Creed a Psalm also as usual<sup>q</sup>.

1286. Johannes Januensis, sometimes styled Johannes Balbus, makes mention of this Creed in his Dictionary, or Catholicon, under the word symbolum. He reckons up three Creeds, and in festationem fidei per modum Symboli, sed magis per modum cujusdam doctrinæ : sed quia integram fidei veritatem ejus doctrina breviter continebat, auctoritate summi Pontificis est recepta, ut quasi fidei regula habeatur. Thom. Aqu. Secund. Secundæ qu. i. art. 10. n. 3.

<sup>n</sup> 'Ο ἅγιος Ἀθανάσιος ὄταν ἐν τοῖς μέρει τοῖς δυτικοῖς ἐξόριστος ἦν, ἐν τῇ ἐκβίσει τῆς πίστεως, ἦν τοῖς Λατινικοῖς ῥήμασι διεσαῶσεν, οὕτως ἔφη· 'Ο πατήρ ἀπ' οὐδενός ἐστι, &c. Definit. Apocris. Greg. LX. Harduin. tom. vii. p. 157.

<sup>o</sup> Habeat etiam saltem quilibet eorum simplicem intellectum, secundum quod continetur in Psalmo qui dicitur, Quicumque vult, et tam in majori quam in minor Symbolo, ut in his plebem sibi commissam noverint informare. Walter Wigorn. Const. apud Spelm. Concil. vol. ii. p. 246.

<sup>p</sup> Athanasius non composuit mani-

<sup>q</sup> Habeat quoque unusquisque eorum simplicem intellectum fidei, sicut in Symbolo tam majori quam minori ; quod est in psalmo, Quicumque vult, et etiam Credo in Deum, expressius continentur. Spelm. Conc. vol. ii. p. 294.

this order, Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian. The name he gives to the last is Symbolum Athanasii, thrice repeated<sup>r</sup>.

1287. In a Synod of Exeter, in this century also, we have mention again made of the Athanasian Creed, under the name of a Psalm, and as such distinguished from the two Creeds<sup>s</sup> properly so called: though the name of Psalm was also sometimes given to the Creeds and to the Lord's Prayer<sup>t</sup> likewise, since those also were sung in the Church.

1286. William Durants, or Durandus, the elder, Bishop of Menda in France, recounting the Creeds, makes their number three; mentioning the Athanasian in the second place, between the Apostles' and Nicene. He follows the same tradition which Otho Frisingensis did before, that this Creed was made at Triers, or Treves<sup>u</sup>. It is scarce worth noting that some copies here read Anastasius, since the circumstances plainly shew that Athanasius is the man intended, and that Anastasius can be nothing else but a corrupt reading.

1330. Ludolphus Saxo, the Carthusian, numbers three Creeds, with very brief, but good hints of their uses respectively: the Apostles', useful for a short compendious instruction in the faith; the Nicene, for fuller explication; and the Athanasian, for guard or defence<sup>x</sup> against heresies.

<sup>r</sup> Tria sunt Symbola; scilicet Apostolorum, quod dicitur in matutinis, in prima, et in completorio: item Nicænum, quod dicitur in diebus Dominicis post Evangelium: item Athanasii, quod dicitur in prima in Dominicis diebus alta voce.—Symbolum autem Athanasii quod contra hæreticos editum est, in prima dicitur, quasi jam pulsus hæreticorum tenebris.—Ad id editum est Symbolum Athanasii quod specialiter contra hæreticos se opposuit. Johan. Januens. in voce symbolum.

<sup>s</sup> Articulorum Fidei Christianorum saltem simplicem habeant intellectum, prout in Psalmo, Quicumque vult, et in utroque Symbolo continentur. Synod. Exon. Spelm. Conc. vol. ii. p. 370.

<sup>t</sup> In a MS. of Trinity College, (called Rythmus Anglicus), written about 1180, is a copy of the Apostles' Creed, and another of the Lord's Prayer, with these titles: The Salm the Me Clepeth Crede: The Salm that is cleped pr nr. This manner of speaking seems to have been borrowed from the Germans: for Otfridus, as is observed by Lambecius, gives the name of a Psalm to the Apostles' Creed. Lambec. Catal. vol. ii. p. 760.

<sup>u</sup> Nota, quod triplex est Symbolum. Primum est Symbolum Apostolorum, quod vocatur Symbolum minus—Secundum Symbolum est, Quicumque vult salvus esse, &c. ab Athanasio, Patriarcha Alexandrino, in civitate Treviri compositum—Tertium est Nicænum quod—vocatur Symbolum majus. Gul. Durant. Rational. Divin. Offic. lib. iv. cap. 25.

<sup>x</sup> Tria sunt Symbola: primum Apostolorum; secundum, Nicæni Concilii; tertium, Athanasii. Primum, factum est ad fidei instructionem. Secundum, ad fidei explicationem. Tertium, ad fidei defensionem. Ludolph. Sax. de Vit. Christi, cap. lxxxiii. p. 732.

1337. William of Baldensal, or Boldesale, a German knight, ought here to be mentioned; as being the first writer extant that ascribes the Creed to Eusebius (of Verceil in Piedmont) along with Athanasius. The reason, I presume, was, the better to account for the Creed's being originally Latin. Baldensal's treatise, being the History of Piedmont, wherein he makes the remark, is not yet published, I suppose: but Cardinal Bona informs us that the manuscript was, in his time, in the library of the Duke of Savoy at Turin<sup>γ</sup>.

1360. Manuel Caleca, a Latinizing Greek, wrote a treatise upon the Principles of the Catholic Faith, published by Combefis, in his new Auctarium to the Bibliotheca Patrum, tome the second, where we find some passages to our present purpose; particularly this, that Caleca ascribes the Creed to Athanasius, and supposes it to have been presented by him to Pope Julius<sup>z</sup>. I know not whether he be not the first writer that mentions that circumstance, nor whether he reports it from others, or from his own invention.

1360. About the same time Johannes Cyparissiota, surnamed the Wise, wrote his Decads, which are published in Latin, in the Bibliothèques, of Turrianus's version. What we are to observe from him is, that he cites this Creed in the name of Athanasius, and as if it were made at the Council of Nice<sup>a</sup>. It seems, after it once passed current that Athanasius was the author, there was great variety of conjectures about the place where, and the time when, he composed or presented this Creed.

1439. I shall mention but one more, as late as the Council of Florence, or a little later; and that is Johannes (afterwards Josephus) Plusiadenus, a Latinizing Greek, who wrote a Dialogue in Defence of the Latins. What is observable in him is, that he makes the Creed to have been presented by Athanasius to Pope Liberius, instead of Julius<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>γ</sup> In hoc autem Symbolo, sive componendo, sive e Græco in Latinum traducendo, adiutorem fuisse Athanasio Eusebium, Vercellensem Episcopum, refert Gulielmus Baldesanus in historia Pedemontana, quæ manuscripta Taurini asservatur in bibliotheca Ducis Sabaudix, ex tabulario Vercellensis Ecclesiæ. Bona de Divin. Psalm. cap. xvi. sect. 18. p. 864.

<sup>z</sup> Ταύτην γὰρ εἶναι μὴ τις πιστῶς πιστεύσῃ, σωθῆναι οὐ δύναται, ὡς ὁ μέγας

Ἀθανάσιος ἐν τῇ πρὸς Ἰούλιον πάπαν Ῥώμης τῆς πίστεως ὁμολογία προσέθηκεν. Manuel Calec. de Fid. c. 10. Confer eund. contr. Græc. lib. ii. c. 20.

<sup>a</sup> Magnus Athanasius in Expositione Fidei, in prima synodo, ait, &c. Joan. Cypariss. Decad. ix. c. 3. Bibl. PP. tom. xxi.

<sup>b</sup> Ὁ θεῖος τῷ ὄντι καὶ ἱερὸς Ἀθανάσιος, ἐν τῇ ὁμολογίᾳ τῆς αὐτοῦ πίστεως, ἦν ἐξέθετο πρὸς Λιβέριον Πάπαν, ἧς ἡ

I have now come low enough with the ancient testimonies, if I may be allowed so to call those of the later times. A few of the first and earliest might have sufficed, had I no other point in view but the mere antiquity of the Creed: but, as my design is to treat of its reception also, in various places, and at various times, and to lay together several kind of evidences which will require others, both early and late, to clear up and explain them; it was, in a manner, necessary for me to bring my accounts as low as I have here done. Besides that several inferior, incidental questions will fall in our way, for the resolving of which, most of the testimonies I have here cited will be serviceable in their turn; as will appear more fully in the sequel. I have omitted several testimonies of the later centuries, such as I thought might conveniently be spared, either as containing nothing but what we had before from others more ancient, or as being of no use for the clearing up any that we have, or for the settling any point which will come to be discussed in the following sheets. The rule I have set myself in making the collection, and which I have been most careful to observe, was to take in all those, and none but those, which are either valuable for their antiquity, or have something new and particular upon the subject, or may strike some light into any doubtful question thereunto relating.

I shall shut up this chapter, as I did the former, with a table, representing in one view the sum and substance of what has been done in it. The several columns will contain the year of our Lord, the authors here recited, the country where they lived, and the title or titles by them given to the Creed. The titles ought to appear in their original language wherein they were written; which my English reader may the more easily excuse, since they have most of them been given in English above, where it was more proper to do it. The use of such a table will be seen as often as a reader has a mind to look back to this chapter, or to compare several evidences of different kinds, proving the same thing, one with another.

ἀρχή, ὅστις ἀνβούληται σωθῆναι τὸ πνεῦ- τοῦ υἱοῦ, &c. Joan. Plusiad. apud Com-
μα τὸ ἄγιον φησίν, ἀπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ befis. not. in Calec. p. 297.

A.D.	Authors.	Country.	Title of the Creed.
670	Council of Autun	France	Fides Sancti Athanasii Præsulis.
760	Articles Inqu. Regino	Germany	Sermo Athanasii Episcopi de Fide.
794	Counc. Frankfurt	Germany	Fides Catholica Sanctæ Trinitatis.
809	Theodulphus	France
809	Anonymous	France	Expositio Catholicæ Fidei Athanasii.
809	Monks of M. Olivet	Judæa	Fides Sancti Athanasii.
820	Hatto, or Hetto	France	Fides Sancti Athanasii.
820	Agobardus	France
852	Hincmar	France	Sermo Athanasii de Fide. Athanasii Symbolum.
865	Anscharius	Germany	Athanasii Fides Catholica.
868	Bertram	France	Libellus Athanasii de Fide.
868	Æneas Paris.	France	Athanasii Fides Catholica.
871	Adalbertus	France	Sermo Beati Athanasii.
889	Riculphus	France	Sermo Fidei Catholicæ
960	Ratherius	Italy	Sermo Athanasii Ep. de Fide Trinitatis.
997	Abbo, or Albo	France	Fides secundum Athanasium.
1047	Gualdo	France	Fides Catholica Athanasio adscripta.
1130	Honorius	France	Fides Quicunque vult.
1146	Otho	Bavaria	Quicunque vult &c.
1171	Duke of Brunswick	Germany	Athanasii Symbolum Fidei.
1178	Robertus Paululus	France	Quicunque vult &c.
1190	Beleth	France	Athanasii Symbolum.
1200	Nic. Hydruntinus	Italy	Τοῦ ἁγίου Ἀθανασίου πίστις ἡ Καθολικῆ.
1230	Alexander Alens.	England	Athanasii Symbolum.
1233	P. Gregory's Legates		Ἐκθεσις τῆς πίστεως.
1240	Walter Cantelupe	England	Psalmus Quicunque &amp;c.
1250	Thom. Aquinas	Italy	Athanasii Manifestatio Fidei.
1255	Walter Kirkham	England	Psalmus Quicunque &amp;c.
1286	John Januensis	Italy	Symbolum Athanasii.
1286	Durandus	France	Athanasii Symbolum.
1287	Exon. Synod	England	Psalmus Quicunque.
1330	Ludolphus	Saxony	Athanasii Symbolum.
1337	Baldensal	Germany	Athanasii Symbolum.
1360	Man. Caleca	Greece	Ἡ τῆς πίστεως ὁμολογία τοῦ Ἀθανασίου.
1360	Joan. Cyparissiota	Greece	Athanasii Expositio Fidei.
1439	Joan. Plusiadenus	Greece	Ἡ τῆς πίστεως ὁμολογία τοῦ Ἀθανασίου.

CHAP. III.

Ancient Commentators and Paraphrasts upon the Athanasian Creed.

ANCIENT comments, or paraphrases, may be properly mentioned after ancient testimonies, being near akin to them, and almost the same thing with them. I call none ancient but such as were made before the year 1500; and therefore shall carry my accounts no lower, nor quite so low, as that time.

A. D. 570. The first comment to be met with on this Creed is one of the sixth century, composed by Venantius Fortunatus, an Italian by birth, but one that travelled into France and Germany, became acquainted with the most eminent scholars and prelates all over the west, and was at length made Bishop of Poitiers in France. His comment on this Creed has been published from a manuscript about 600 years old <sup>x</sup>, out of the Ambrosian library at Milan, by Muratorius, in his second tome of Anecdota, in the year 1698. There can be no reasonable doubt but that the comment really belongs to the man whose name it bears. 1. Because in the same book there is also a comment upon the Apostles' Creed <sup>y</sup> ascribed to Fortunatus, and which is known to belong to Venantius Fortunatus, and has been before printed among his other works. 2. Because it appears highly probable from what Venantius Fortunatus has occasionally dropped in his other undoubted works <sup>z</sup>, that he was really acquainted with the Athanasian Creed, and borrowed

<sup>x</sup> Est porro nobis in Ambrosiana bibliotheca membranaceus codex annos abhinc ferme sexcentos manu descriptus; ut ex characterum forma, aliisque conjecturis affirmari posse mihi videtur. Heic, præter alia opuscula multa, tres Symboli expositiones habentur, quarum unam tantum nunc publici juris facio.

Prima ita inscribitur, Expositio Fidei Catholicæ. Alteri nullus titulus præfixus est. Postrema vero hunc præ se fert; Expositio Fidei Catholicæ Fortunati.—Fortunatus autem, heic memoratus, alius a Venantio Fortunato non est, quem Insulæ Pictaviensis Ecclesiæ, quem Christianæ poetices ornamenta æternitate donarunt.

Murator. Anecd. tom. ii. p. 228.

<sup>y</sup> Expositionem quoque continet (cod. Ambrosianus) Apostolici Symboli, cum hac inscriptione: Incipit expositio a Fortunato Presbytero conscripta. Eadem vero est ac edita inter Fortunati opera. Tum sequuntur geminæ ejusdem Symboli explicationes. Tres Orationis Dominicæ, et duæ Athanasiani Symboli expositiones incertis auctoribus scriptæ. Tandem, uti diximus, Expositio Fidei Catholicæ Fortunati legitur. Quocirco quin ad Venantium quoque Fortunatum opusculum hoc sit referendum, nullus dubito. Murator. ibid. p. 331.

<sup>z</sup> Præclarum in primordio ponitur cælestis testimonii fundamentum, quia

expressions from it. 3. Because in the expositions of the Apostles' and Athanasian Creeds, there is great similitude of style, thoughts, and expressions; which shews that both are of the same hand, and indeed, the other circumstances considered, abundantly proves it. It would burden my margin too much, otherwise it were easy to give at least half a dozen plain specimens, where either the expressions or turn of thought, or both, are exactly parallel. Such as think it of moment to examine, may easily be satisfied by comparing the comment on the Apostles' Creed, in the tenth tome of the last Bibliothecque, with the comment on the Athanasian, in Muratorius. 4. I may add, that the tenor of the whole comment, and the simplicity of the style and thoughts, are very suitable to that age, and more so than to the centuries following. These reasons convince me that this comment belongs to Venantius Fortunatus, composed by him after his going into France, and before he was Bishop of Poitiers: and so we may probably fix the date of it about the year 570, or perhaps higher. There is an older manuscript copy of this comment (as I find by comparing) in the Museum at Oxford, among Junius's manuscripts, number 25<sup>a</sup>. I am obliged to the very worthy and learned Dr. Haywood, for sending me a transcript of it, with a specimen of the character. It is reasonably judged to be about 800 years old. It wants, in the beginning, about ten or a dozen lines: in the other parts it agrees with Muratorius's copy, saving only some slight insertions, and such various lections as are to be expected in different manuscripts not copied one from the other. From the two copies compared may be drawn out a much more correct comment than that which Muratorius has given us from one; as will be shewn at the end of this work.

I intimated above, that Muratorius supposes this Venantius Fortunatus to be the author, not of the comment only, but Creed salvus esse non poterit, qui recte de salute non crediderit. Fortunat. Expos. Symb. Apost. Bibl. PP. tom. x.

Non Deus in carnem versus, Deus accipit artus:

Non se permutans, sed sibi membra levans.

Unus in ambabus naturis, verus in ipsis

Æqualis matri hinc, par Deitate Patri.

Non sua confundens, sibi nostra sed omnia nectens.

De Patre natus habens divina, humanaque matris,

De Patre sublimis, de genetrice humilis.

Venant. Fortun. lib. viii. carn. 5. Bibl. P. tom. x.

<sup>a</sup> The title, Expositio in Fide Catholica.

also. But his reasons, which plead strongly for the former, are of no force at all in respect of the latter : which he is so sensible of himself, that while he speaks with great assurance of the one, he is very diffident of the other <sup>b</sup>. And indeed, not to mention several other considerations standing in the way of his conjecture, who can imagine Venantius Fortunatus to have been so vain, as, after commenting on the Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed, to fall to commenting upon a composition of his own?

This comment of Fortunatus is a great confirmation of what hath been above cited from the Council of Autun : for if the Creed was noted enough to deserve a comment upon it so early as the year 570, no wonder if we find it strongly recommended by that Council in the year 670, a hundred years after. And it is observable that, as that Council recommends the Apostolical and Athanasian Creeds, without saying a word of the Nicene ; so Fortunatus, before them, comments upon those two only, taking no notice of the third.

I cannot take leave of this comment, without observing to the reader, that in Pareus's notes on this Creed, I have met with a passage which I am not well able to account for. He cites a comment upon this Creed, under the name of Euphronius Presbyter <sup>c</sup>, does not say whether from a print or a manuscript : but the words he produces are in this very comment of Fortunatus. Who this Euphronius is, I can no where find ; nor whether an ancient or modern writer. There was an Euphronius Presbyter, (mentioned by Gregory of Tours,) who lived in the fifth century, and was at length Bishop of Autun : but I never heard of any writings of his, more than an epistle ascribed to him and Lupus of Troyes. There was another Euphronius, who was bishop of Tours, with whom Fortunatus had some intimacy. Whether his name, appearing in any manuscript copy of Fortunatus's tracts, might occasion the mistake, I know not. Bruno's comment has the very same passage which Pareus cites, only in a different order of the words : but neither will this help us to account for its being quoted under the name of Euphronius

<sup>b</sup> Hujus Symboli auctor esse potuit Venantius Fortunatus : saltem fuit hujus Expositionis auctor. Murator. p. 217.

Non ita meis conjecturis plaudo, ut facilius non arbitrer Expositionem potius quam Symbolum huic auctori tribuendum. Murator. p. 231.

<sup>c</sup> Euphronius Presbyter in expositione hujus Symboli Athanasii, Fides, inquit, Catholica, seu universalis, dicitur : Hoc est, recta, quam Ecclesia universa tenere debet. David. Parei not. ad Symb. Athan. p. 118. edit. an. 1635. The words are not in the edition of 1627.

*Presbyter, which has no similitude with the name of Bruno, Bishop of Wurtzburgh. I would not however omit the mentioning this note of Pareus, because a hint may sometimes lead to useful discoveries; and others may be able to resolve the doubt, though I am not.

852. Our next Commentator, or rather Paraphrast, is Hincmar of Rheims: not upon the whole Creed, but upon such parts only as he had occasion to cite. For his way is to throw in several words of his own, as explanatory notes, so far as he quotes the Creed<sup>d</sup>: and he sometimes does it more than he ought to have done, to serve a cause against Gothescalcus: which I may hint, in passing; to say more of it would be foreign to our present purpose.

1033. S. Bruno, Bishop of Wurtzburgh in Germany, has a formal comment, and much larger than Fortunatus's, upon the Athanasian Creed. It is at the end of his Psalter, and has been several times printed with it. Father Le Long reckons up six editions<sup>e</sup>, in this order: 1. At Nuremberg, in folio A. D. 1494. 2. By Antonius Koberger, in quarto, A. D. 1497. 3. By Cochleus, at Wurtzburgh, in quarto, A. D. 1531. 4. At Leipsic, in quarto, 1533. In the Cologne Bibliothecque, A. D. 1618. tom. xi. 6. In the Lyons Bibl. PP. A. D. 1677. tom. xviii. The old editions are scarce, and not easy to be met with. I have seen two of them in our public library of Cambridge, those of 1494 and 1533. There is an elegant one of the former (as I conceive by the description sent me by a learned gentleman) in the Bodleian at Oxford: it is in vellum, in a black and red letter, reserved among the manuscripts, and marked Laud, E. 81. The title, at the beginning, Fides Anastasii; at the end, Fides Athanasii. The two editions of 1497 and 1531 I never saw. I have seen one by Antonius Koberger, in quarto, bearing date A. D. 1494<sup>f</sup>, in the Bodleian, marked F. 40. Bishop Usher makes mention of an edition in 1531<sup>g</sup>, and seems to have known

<sup>d</sup> Vid. Hincmari Oper. tom. i. p. 452, 464, 469, 552, 553.

<sup>e</sup> Commentarii in totum Psalterium et in Cantica Vet. et Nov. Testamenti, in fol. Norembergæ, 1494. In 4to. per Antonium Koburger 1497. Idem a Joan. Cochleo restitutum in 4to. Herbipoli 1531. Lipsiæ 1533. Bibl. PP. Coloniensis et Lugdunensis. Le Long, Bibl. Bibl. tom. ii. p. 654.

<sup>f</sup> Per Antonium Koberger impressum anno incarnationis Deitatis millesimo quadringentesimo, nonagesimo quarto, finit feliciter.

<sup>g</sup> Psalterii editio vulgata Latina, obelis et asteriscis distincta, cum Brunonis Herbipolensis Episcopi commentariis, anno 1531. a Johanne Cochleæ in lucem est emissa. Usser. de editione LXX Interpr. p. 104.

of none older. I should have suspected 1531 to be a false print for 1533, had not Le Long confirmed it, that there is such an edition as 1531, and named the place where it was printed: though I cannot but observe that he makes a folio of it in his first tome<sup>h</sup>, and a quarto in the second; which is to me an argument that he had never seen it, but perhaps took the hint from Usher. But leaving the printed editions of this comment of Bruno's, let us next say something of the manuscripts of it, and their differences from the prints, or from each other. There are many manuscript copies, which I shall mention in order.

1. The first and most valuable manuscript is in the library of Wurtzburgh, as old as the author, left by him as a legacy to that church. The first printed edition (if I mistake not) was taken from that very original manuscript<sup>i</sup>; which at the lowest computation must be 680 years old. The title of the Creed, Fides Catholica S. Athanasii Episcopi.

2. There is a second, which I have seen in Trinity College in Cambridge, annexed to a Psalter described at large by the learned Mr. Wanley, in his Catalogue<sup>k</sup>, and judged by him to have been written about the time of King Stephen. So that this is about a hundred years later than the former, or about 580 years old; no title to the Creed.

3. There is a third, of much the same age with the former, of some years older, in the Bodleian at Oxford, marked Laud. H. 61. the title of the Creed, Fides Catholica Sancti Athanasii Episcopi.

4. In the Bodleian also is another, (Laud. E. 71. Catal. N. 994.) Athanasii Symbolum cum Glossa. This, as I am certified by a learned gentleman, is Bruno's comment. The title of the Creed, Fides Sancti Athanasii Episcopi.

5. In Merton College is another, an ancient copy of Bruno's comment. Catal. N. 675-208.

<sup>h</sup> Psalterium vetus obelis et asteriscis distinctum, cum commentariis S. Brunonis, studio Joannis Cochleæ editum, in fol. Herbipoli, 1531. in 4to. Lipsiæ 1533. Le Long, tom. i. p. 274.

<sup>i</sup> Posteris filiis suis (S. Bruno) memorabilem et sanctum Psalmorum librum, ex quo ille impressus est, sumptuose scriptum, quasi hæreditatis spiritualis non minimam portionem reliquit. Prolog. ad editionem anni 1494.

Preciosum istum thesaurum posteritati post se reliquit, et quidem insigni scriptura sumptuose descriptum— extat donum illud memorabile et conspicuum in locuplete antiquorum voluminum bibliotheca Herbipolensis Ecclesiæ: quod sane religiosa pietate, velut hæreditas quædam hujus Sancti Patris custoditur. Joan. Coch. prolog. ad edit. an. 1533.

<sup>k</sup> Wanleii Catalog. MSS. Septentr. p. 168.

6. In St. John Baptist's College, Oxon. (Catal. N. 1874. G. 42. Commentarius in Symbolum Athanasii. By the beginning and concluding words, (a transcript of which has been sent me by a worthy member of that society,) I am well assured that it is Bruno's comment.

7. There is another in Balliol College, (Catal. N. 210. marked B. I.) Athanasii Symbolum cum Commentario.

8. Another I have seen in the Cathedral library at York, which may be 500 years old. No title.

9. There is another, in the library of St. German de Prez, about 500 years old. Montfaucon, having met with it, published it<sup>1</sup> as an anecdote; not knowing that it was Bruno's comment. It is not indeed quite so full, nor any thing near so correct as the printed copies: but still it is plainly Bruno's comment. The title, Tractatus de Fide Catholica.

10. There is also, in my Lord Oxford's library, a modern manuscript of this comment, written at Augsburg in the year 1547, copied from Bruno's original manuscript, (by order of Charles Peutenger, son to the famous Conrad,) where the title is, Fides Catholica Sancti Anastasii Episcopi. The mistake of Anastasii for Athanasii, we find, had crept into the German copies some centuries before: wherefore this is not to be wondered at. All the older copies, as well as the original manuscript, have Athanasii in the title, where there is a title, and Athanasius in the beginning of the comment.

The manuscripts which I have here recited, all but the first, seem now to be of no great use; if it be true, as I suppose, that the first prints were taken from the very original at Wurtzburgh. It is certain that they are very imperfect and incorrect, (I have collated three of them,) in comparison of the printed copies: I could not observe above two or three places, and those not very material, where the printed copies seem to have followed a false reading, or may be corrected by those manuscripts. One thing I a little wondered at, that the three manuscripts of St. German's, Trinity College, and York, should all leave out some paragraphs, which appear in the printed copies, and the same paragraphs: but I have since found, that those very paragraphs were taken out of Fortunatus's comment, and belong not properly to Bruno's. This, I presume, the first copiers understood, and therefore omitted them. Probably Bruno's own copy might at first want them, (though they must have been added soon after,) or if Bruno himself inserted them, yet he had left some mark of distinction, which was understood at that time; though not by the editors of this comment so many years after. But to proceed.

<sup>1</sup> Montfaucon, Athanas. Oper. tom. ii. p. 735.

1120. In the next age, the famous Peter Abelard wrote comments upon this Creed: which are printed amongst his other works. The title in the prints is, Petri Abaëlardi Expositio Fidei, in Symbolum Athanasii. I suspect that the editor has added the latter part, in Symbolum Athanasii, as a hint to the reader. The comment is a very short one, scarce three pages in quarto, and, for the age it was wrote in, a pretty good one; though, as I conceive from some flaws in it, printed from a copy not very correct.

1170. Of the same century is Hildegarde, the celebrated Abbess of St. Rupert's Mount, near Bingen, on the Rhine. She wrote explications of St. Benedict's Rule, and of the Athanasian Creed: which may be seen, Bibl. PP. tom. xxiii. p. 596.

1210. Simon Tornacensis, Priest of Tournay, in the beginning of the thirteenth century, taught divinity at Paris, with great reputation. His manuscript works are in many libraries: and, among his other writings, there is an Exposition of the Athanasian Creed<sup>m</sup>. Oudin reckons up four manuscript copies of it, in as many distinct libraries, and acquaints us where they are to be found, and of what age they probably are.

1215. Contemporary with the former is Alexander Neckham, an Englishman, Abbot of Cirencester, or Circeter, in Gloucestershire. He wrote a comment on the Athanasian Creed, which is extant in manuscript in the Bodleian at Oxford, (marked E. 7. 8. Catal. N. 2339.) coeval probably with the author.

There is another copy of the same comment, in the Bodleian also, E. 6. 11. n. 2330. The title, Expositio Fidei Catholicæ a Magistro Alexandro edicta. This copy is about fifty years later than the former. It may be of use to note down the first words of the comment<sup>n</sup>. It is drawn up in the scholastic way,

<sup>m</sup> Expositio Symboli, per Simonem Tornacensis Ecclesiæ Canonicum, et Parisiensem Doctorem, quæ sic incipit: Apud Aristotelem argumentum est ratio faciens fidem, sed apud Christum argumentum est fides faciens

rationem. Oudin. tom. iii. p. 30.

<sup>n</sup> Hæc est enim victoria quæ vincit mundum, fides nostra. Signanter dicit vult, et non dicit, Quicumque salvus erit.

and is pretty large, making ten folio leaves with double columns, in E. 7, 8. and four folio leaves with three columns, and a very small hand, in E. 6. 11.

1230. Not long after, Alexander Hales, before mentioned, wrote comments upon the same Creed, which are published in his Summa, part the third, under Quæst. 69. His method of commenting is, to raise doubts and scruples all the way he goes, and to answer them in the scholastic form: referring sometimes to the Fathers of the Church, and particularly to St. Austin: to whom he ascribes Gennadius's treatise De Ecclesiasticis Dogmatibus, according to the common error of that time. But I proceed.

1340. There is another commentary upon this Creed, written, as is said, by Richardus Hampolus, Richard Rolle of Hampole, a native of Yorkshire, and a monk of the order of St. Austin. It contains, in a manner, Bruno's comment entire, with several additions and insertions either of the author's own, or such as he had borrowed elsewhere. It has been twice printed, first at Cologne in the year 1536, and afterwards in the Bibliotheca Patrum, Lugdun. tom. xxvi. p. 624.

I am in doubt concerning the author of that comment, having reason to believe that the three copies mentioned by Tenzelius<sup>o</sup>, preserved in the Gotha, Basil, and Leipsic libraries, are so many copies of this very comment which passes under the name of Hampole: and yet one of them is judged to be above 500 years older<sup>p</sup> than 1686, which is 150 years before Hampole's days. It is possible that Joachim Fellerus, the compiler of the catalogue of the Leipsic library, might mistake in judging of the age of the manuscript: but it appears much more probable that the editors of that comment were mistaken in ascribing it to Hampole. However that be, I would here observe, that there is in

<sup>o</sup> Tenzel. Jud. Eruditor. Præfat. et p. 224.

<sup>p</sup> Tenzelius writes thus:

Opportune ad manus meas pervenit Responsio Ampl. Felleri, qua rationem codicis Latini Lipsiensis in præfatione a me citati prolixius exposuit. Ait enim, membranaceum istum codicem ante CCCC annos et ultra, eleganter scriptum videri; additas etiam esse non interlineares tantum notas, sed et marginales utrinque; in dextro videlicet et sinistro paginarum latere;

Rubricam autem Symboli nostri ita se habere; Fides Anastasii Papæ. In dextro primæ paginæ hæc legi verba: Hæc ratio Fidei Catholicæ traditur in veteribus codicibus, et reliqua, quæ antea ex MS. bibliothecæ ducalis attuli. Unde patet, easdem plane glossas in utroque codice reperiri; præsertim quum in sinistro alterius margine, hæc etiam verba legi referat Fellerus: Hic beatus Anastasius liberum arbitrium posuit, &c. Tenzel. p. 225.

Magdalen College, in Oxford, a comment entitled, Expositio in Symbolum Athanasianum per Januensem, (N. Catal. 2256—115.) which is no other than this very comment that passes in the prints under the name of Richard Hampole. The Catalogue's ascribing it to Januensis was owing, I suppose, to an occasional passage in that manuscript, relating to the Athanasian Creed, cited from Johannes Januensis's Catholicon, or Dictionary, under the word symbolum. The comment however, I say, is the same with that which passes for Hampole's, as may plainly appear from the beginning of it, which I have transcribed into the margin; only filling up an omission in it, occasioned, as is very common, by the repetition of the same word. There may be a good use made of that manuscript in Magdalen College, for correcting the printed copy, which is very faulty, both in words and order. The comment ought to begin as it begins in that manuscript; and not with the words, Hic beatus Athanasius, as in the prints. The editors did not understand, or did not consider, the nature and composition of that comment. The author, whoever he was, had made two columns, one on each hand, with the Athanasian Creed in the middle. On the left hand, which is the first place, he set Bruno's comment, and on the right hand, in the other column, he carried down another comment either of his own or borrowed. The first note on the right hand was plainly designed for an introduction to the rest, and therefore ought to be set first; though the editor's considering only the position of the notes, began from the left hand, with the first words of Bruno's comment. The Oxford copy observes the true natural order, and may very probably be of good use all the way through, for the better digesting and methodizing that comment, or comments, being in reality two comments mixed and blended together.

I should observe of the Oxford copy, that after the comment there is, in the same hand, this note; Hæc conscripta sunt a quodam antiquo libro. Possibly this may be of some use for the determining whether that comment be really Hampole's or no. For if hoc est, Diabolus, excitavit per Arrium; quam tempestatem] qui fugere desiderat, hanc fidei unitatem (al. œritatem) integram et inviolabilem teneat. Ita enim incipit ipsum opusculum, dicens, Quicumque vult salvus, &c. Hic beatus Athanasius liberum arbitrium posuit, &c.

¶ Hæc ratio Fidei Catholicæ traditur etiam in veteribus codicibus a beato Athanasio Alexandrino conscripta. Et puto, quod idcirco tam plano et brevi sermone tradita sit, ut omnibus Catholicis, et minus eruditis, tutamen defensionis præstaret adversus illam tempestatem [quam contrarius ventus,

the manuscript be not much later than 1415, (it must be so late, since it fixes that very date to Dr. Ullerston's Exposition of the Six Psalms,) it may be probably argued that any thing of Hampole's, who flourished but about eighty years before, would not have been called antiquus liber, an ancient book. But this I leave to further inquiries, not insisting upon it, since the argument is but probable at the best; and I do not know but the manuscript may be several years later than 1415, though hardly later than the middle of that century. Ullerston is undoubtedly the latest author in that collection. Petrus Florissiensis, or Floreffiensis, (otherwise called Petrus de Harentals,) wrote in 1374: Januensis Gorrham, Lyra, and Hampole are all older than he: the last therefore is Ullerston, who was probably still living when that manuscript was written. But enough of this.

1380. To the Latin comments here mentioned I may add an English one, which I may suppose to be Wickliff's. If it be not his, yet certainly it is of his time, and not far from the middle of the fourteenth century. I will first give some account of this English comment, and then shew both why I ascribe it to Wickliff, and why I do it not with full assurance, but with some degree of diffidence. I first met with it in a manuscript volume (in 12mo) belonging to the library of St. John's College in Cambridge. The volume contains an English version of the Psalms and Hymns of the Church, with the Athanasian Creed produced paragraph by paragraph in Latin, interspersed with an English version of each paragraph, and commented upon quite through, part by part. After the comment, follow Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Song of Songs, Wisdom, and Ecclesiasticus, all in old English, without gloss or comment. Now the reasons why I incline to ascribe the comment to Wickliff are these:

1. Dr. Langbaine, of Queen's College in Oxford, in a letter to Bishop Usher, bearing date A. D. 1647, testifies that he had seen such a comment, and that he found it to be Wickliff's, by comparing the beginning of it with Bale's. This, very probably, is the same comment; though there is no such manuscript now in Magdalen College, Oxon, as was in Dr. Langbaine's time.

<sup>2</sup> See Oudin, tom. iii. p. 1218.

<sup>3</sup> While I was there, (in Magdalen College Library,) tumbling amongst their books, I light upon an old English comment upon the Psalms, the Hymns of the Church, and Athanasius's Creed; which I presently conjectured (though there be no name to it) to be Wickliff's. And comparing the beginning with Bale, found that I had not erred in the conjecture. Langbaine, among Usher's Letters, p. 513.

2. All those parts of Scripture which go before and after this comment, in the same volume, are of the same version with that of Wickliff's Bible in the library of Emanuel College, without any difference, (except that St. John's copy, being older, retains the more ancient spelling,) as I am well assured by comparing them together: so that if those parts be Wickliff's, it may appear very probable that the comment is his too. Indeed, our very learned Wharton was of opinion, that the version commonly ascribed to Wickliff<sup>t</sup> was really John Trevisa's; who flourished in the time of Richard the Second, was a Cornish man by birth, and Vicar of Berkely in Gloucestershire, about the year 1387<sup>u</sup>: in which year he finished his translation of the Polychronicon. But Mr. Wharton's reasonings in this matter have appeared to others not satisfactory<sup>x</sup>, and have in part been confuted<sup>y</sup>. I shall not enter far into that dispute, being almost foreign to my purpose: and it is not very material whether Wickliff or Trevisa (if either) be judged the author of the comment. This only I may observe, by the way, that Mr. Wharton's argument drawn from the Norfolk manuscript of the Gospels, (Cod. 254,) which he is positive belongs to Wickliff, appears to be of some weight, so far as concerns the New Testament; and the inference may reach to several parts of the Old Testament also. Either Mr. Wharton must have been mistaken in ascribing the Norfolk copy to Wickliff, or else, for any thing I see, his argument will stand good. The characteristic which he lays down whereby to distinguish Wickliff's version (namely, the frequent insertion of synonymous words) will by no means agree with the common version: and then the specimen he gives of the two different renderings of Luke ii. 7. is directly contrary<sup>z</sup>. But a fuller discussion of that point may be left with those who have more leisure, and

<sup>t</sup> Wharton Auctarium Histor. Dogmat. p. 425, 426.

<sup>u</sup> In that year he finished his version of Higden's Polychronicon, as the manuscripts testify; and as is plain from its being finished in the thirty-fifth year of Thomas Lord Berkley, the fourth of that name, which agrees exactly with that year, and with no other.

<sup>x</sup> Oudin. Comment. de Scriptor. Eccles. vol. iii. p. 1044.

<sup>y</sup> Vid. Le Long, Bibl. Bibl. vol. i. p. 426.

<sup>z</sup> Wicklefus sic reddit: "And put-

"tide him in a cratche; for place was not to him in the comyn stable."

Alter interpretes sic: "And leide him in a cratche; for there was no place to him in no chaumbre." Wharton, p. 426.

I have a manuscript of the New Testament, belonging to our college library, which reads Luke ii. 7. according to the first reading, and which has many instances of synonymous insertions every where: it is a different version from that which is commonly ascribed to Wickliff.

have more particularly studied it. I am content to suppose that the common version ascribed to Wickliff is really his: perhaps he might give two editions of it<sup>a</sup>; or else Trevisa's may be little more than Wickliff's version, corrected and polished with great liberty, both as to sense and expression, where it appeared needful. That Trevisa really did translate the whole Bible into English is positively asserted by Caxton, in his preface to Trevisa's Translation of Higden's Polychronicon<sup>b</sup>; and by Bale<sup>c</sup>, who gives us the first words of the preface to it. To proceed.

3. A third reason I have for the ascribing the comment to Wickliff is, that some parts of it seem to suit exactly with his humour, and manner, and way of thinking; particularly the gird upon popes and cardinals in the close<sup>d</sup>.

Nevertheless, I am far from being positive in this matter: much may be offered to take off the force of these reasons, or to counterbalance them. 1. This very comment is annexed to a manuscript commentary upon the Psalms and Hymns of the Church, now in Trinity College library in Cambridge: which commentary appears not to be Wickliff's, though supposed to be his by Mr. Wharton<sup>e</sup>. The English version of the Psalms going along with that commentary is not the same with that of Wickliff's Bible: I have compared them. The commentary, and version too, are reasonably judged to be Hampole's. I find by

<sup>a</sup> Patet, aut antiquiorem fuisse quandam S. Scripturæ translationem Anglicam, aut duplicem fuisse translationis Wiclevianæ editionem. Wharton. Auctor. Hist. Dogm. p. 436.

<sup>b</sup> Ranulph monke of Chestre first suctour of this book, and afterward Englished by one Trevisa Vicarye of Barkley; which atte request of one Sr. Thomas Lord Barkley translated this sayd book, the Byble, and Bartylmew de Proprietatibus Rerum out of Latyn into Englysh. Caxton. Prohemye to his edit. 1482.

<sup>c</sup> In Anglicum idioma, ad petitionem prædicti sui Domini de Barkeley, transtulit totum bibliorum opus: utrumque Dei Testamentum lib. ii. (His preface beginning) "Ego Johannes Trevisa Sacerdos." Bale. cent. vii. c. 18. p. 518.

N. B. Bale seems to be mistaken in saying that Trevisa continued the Polychr. to 1397. For Trevisa ended with 1357. And Caxton declares that himself continued the history for 103 years further, to 1460.

<sup>d</sup> And algif this Crede accorde unto Prestis, netheles the higher Prelatis, as Popis and Cardynals, and Bisshops shulden more specially kunne this Crede, and teche it to men undir hem. Comm. on the Athan. Creed.

Compare some words of Wickliff's Bible.

I suppose, over this, that the Pope be most oblishid to the keping of the Gospel among all men that liven here; for the Pope is highest Vicar that Christ has here in erth. Collier, Eccl. Hist. vol. i. p. 728.

<sup>e</sup> Commentarius in Psalmos, aliosque Sacræ Scripturæ ac Liturgiæ Ecclesiasticæ Hymnos. MS. in Collegio S. Trinitatis Cantab. F. Commentarius in priores 89 Psalmos habetur MS. in Bibliotheca Lambethana. Wharton. sub Wicklef. Append. ad Cav. H. L. p. 54.

a note left in a blank page at the beginning, (signed J. Russel,) that there is a copy of this commentary in the Royal library, (B. 15. 12.) but imperfect; the prologue the very same, and expressly ascribed to Richard of Hampole: from whence it may be justly suspected, that the comment upon the Athanasian Creed at the end, appearing in part, (for two leaves are cut out,) is Hampole's, as well as the rest. There is in Bennet library, in Cambridge, another manuscript copy of the same commentary, (marked 1—1. Catal. p. 69,) with the comment upon the Creed entire. The prologue I found to be the same as in the other, as also the comment on the first Psalm; by which I judge of the rest. The comment on the Canticles at the end is likewise the same; only the Canticles are not all placed in the same order. At the bottom of the second leaf of the commentary, there is left this note, by an unknown hand: Author hujus libri, Richardus, Heremita de Hampole. Now, if this commentary really be Hampole's, of which I can scarce make any question, it will appear highly probable that the comment on the Creed is his too.

2. What favours the suspicion is, that here the comment is annexed to other comments in like form with itself, and not to mere versions, as in the manuscript of St. John's library. Nay, further, this comment on the Creed, as it appears in St. John's copy, has the several parts of the Creed in Latin, and in red letter, prefixed to the respective version and comment; just as we find, in Hampole, the several parts of each Psalm exhibited first in Latin, and in red letter: which circumstance is of some weight.

3. Add to this, that there are some expressions in the comment on the Creed very like to those which are familiar with the author of that commentary on the Psalms: such as these; "It is seid comunly, that ther ben &c. clerkis sein" thus and thus; so that from similitude of style an argument may be drawn in favour of Hampole, as well as for Wickliff. These considerations suffer me not to be positive on the other side. The comment may be Hampole's; or it may be Wickliff's; which latter opinion I the rather incline to for the reasons before given, appearing to me something more forcible than the other. And I may further observe, that there is in Sidney College in Cambridge, a very old copy of Hampole's commentary, which runs through the Psalms, and all the ordinary Hymns and Canticles, but has no comment upon the Athanasian Creed annexed, though the manuscript appears very whole and entire. This makes me less inclinable to suspect the comment upon the Creed being Hampole's; it is more probably Wickliff's, as I before said. However it be, the comment may be useful: and if it should prove Hampole's, it must be set forty years higher than I have here placed it. The distance of thirty or forty years makes no great alteration in any language: so that merely from the language, especially in so small a tract, we can draw no consequence to the author; excepting such peculiarities as may have been rather proper to this or that man, than to this or that time.

<sup>1</sup> Q. Whether there be not one or two more copies of the same in the Bodleian. See the Bodleian Manuscripts, in the General Catalogue, N. 2438. 3085.

1478. To the comments before mentioned I may add one more, a Latin one, printed, as I suppose, about the year 1478, though it carries not its date with it. The author is Peter d'Osma, called in Latin Petrus de Osoma $\epsilon$ , or Petrus Oxomensis, or Uxomensis. The comment makes about seventy pages in quarto, and is drawn up in the scholastic way, with good judgment and accuracy, considering the age it was written in. The book was lent me by Mr. Pownall of Lincoln, a gentleman of known abilities, and particularly curious in searching out and preserving any rare and uncommon pieces, printed or manuscript. I do not find that this comment has been at all taken notice of in any of our Bibliothèques, or in any of the catalogues of the books printed before 1500. Even those that give account of the author, yet seem to have known nothing of the printing of this piece. Probably there were but very few copies, and most of them soon destroyed upon the author's falling under censure in the year 1479. The author, if I judge right, was the same Peter Osma who was Professor of Divinity in Salamanca, and adorned the chair with great reputation for many years. He began to be famous about the year 1444, and at length fell under the censure of a provincial synod, held under Alphonsus Carrillus, Archbishop of Toledo, in the year 1479<sup>h</sup>. He was condemned for some positions advanced in a book which he had written upon the subject of Confession. The positions, nine in number, are such † Commentaria Magistri Petri de Osoma in Symbolum Quicumque vult, &c. finiunt feliciter. Impressaque Parisiis per Magistrum Udulricum, cognomento Gering.

<sup>h</sup> Nicol. Antonii Bibliotheca Hispana Vetus, tom. ii. p. 203.

as every Protestant professes at this day<sup>1</sup>, being levelled only at the corruptions of Popery in doctrine and discipline: but the good man was forced to submit and abjure, and to profess an implicit belief in whatsoever was held for faith by the then Pope Sixtus IV. Such, in short, is the account of our author, one of the most learned and valuable men of his time, by confession even of his enemies. At what particular time he composed his comment on the Athanasian Creed, I cannot say; only that it was between 1444 and 1479. I have placed it according to the time it was printed, as nearly as I am able to judge of it.

These are all the ancient comments upon the Athanasian Creed that I have hitherto met with or heard of; excepting only such as have no certain author, or none mentioned.

Muratorius informs us of two comments without names, which are in manuscript, in the Ambrosian library, near six hundred years old. One of them bears for its title, Expositio Fidei Catholicæ; the other has no title. By the age of the manuscripts (if Muratorius judges rightly thereof) one may be assured that they are distinct and different from any of the comments below Abelard: and that they are neither of them the same with Bruno's or Fortunatus's may reasonably be concluded, because Muratorius was well acquainted with both, and would easily have discovered it. Whether either of them may prove to be Abelard's, which has for its title Expositio Fidei, and may suit well with the age of the manuscripts, I know not. Muratorius, while he makes mention of Bruno and Hildegardis, whose comments he had seen, says nothing of Abelard's: so that possibly one of his manuscript comments may prove the same with that. But if neither of them be the same with Abelard's, nor with each other, they must be allowed to pass for two distinct comments, whose authors are not yet known.

Nothing now remains, but to close this chapter with a table, as I have the former, representing in one view a summary of what is contained in it.

<sup>1</sup> See the positions and censure in Carranza. Summ. Concil. p. 88o, &c.

A. D.	Commentators.	Country.	Title of Creed.
570	Venant. Fortunatus	Poictiers	Fides Catholica.
852	Hincmar	Rheims	Symbolum Athanasii.
1033	Bruno	Wurtzburgh	Fides Catholica S. Athan. Episc.
1110	MS. Ambrosian.	Italy	Fides Catholica.
1110	MS. alter Ambros.	Italy
1120	Pet. Abaelardus	France	Symbolum Athanasii.
1170	S. Hildegardis	France
1210	Simon Tornacensis	France	Symbolum Athanasii.
1215	Alex. Neckham.	England	Fides Catholica.
1230	Alexander Hales	England	Athanasii Symbolum.
1340	Rich. Hampolus	England	Athanasii Symbolum.
1380	John Wickliff	England	Crede, or Salm, of Attanasie.
1478	Petr. de Osoma	Spain	Athanasii Symbolum.

CHAP. IV.

Latin Manuscripts of the Athanasian Creed.

I CONFINE myself in this chapter to the Latin manuscripts, since the Creed was undoubtedly written originally in Latin; and therefore the manuscripts in any other languages will be more properly treated of in another chapter, among the versions. None of the learned at this day make any question but that the Creed was originally a Latin composure. This they pretend to be certain of, and unanimously agree in; however doubtfully they may speak of other things, or however they may differ in their opinions about the age or author. Even those, many of them, who have ascribed the Creed to Athanasius, have yet been obliged by plain and irresistible evidence to acknowledge, with the legates of Pope Gregory IXth, that it was originally Latin. The style and phraseology of the Creed; its early reception among the Latins, while unknown to the Greeks; the antiquity and number of the Latin manuscripts, and their agreement (for the most part) with each other, compared with the lateness, scarceness, and disagreement of the Greek copies, all concur to demonstrate that this Creed was originally a Latin composure, rather than a Greek one: and as to any other language besides these two, none is pretended.

I proceed then to recount the Latin manuscripts as high as we can find any extant, or as have been known to have been extant; and as low as may be necessary or useful to our main design.

A. D. 600. The oldest we have heard of is one mentioned by Bishop Usher, which he had seen in the Cotton library, and which he judged to come up to the age of Gregory the Great. This manuscript has often been appealed to since Usher's time,

‡ Latino-Gallicum illud Psalterium in Bibliotheca Cottoniana vidimus: sicut et alia Latina duo, longe majoris antiquitatis; in quibus, præter Hymnum hunc (sc. Te Deum) sine ullo auctoris nomine, Hymni ad Matutinas, titulo inscriptum, et Athanasianum habebatur Symbolum, et Apostolicum totidem omnino quot hodiernum nostrum continens Capitula. In priore, quod Gregorii I. tempore non fuisse

recentius, tum ex antiquo picture genere colligitur, tum ex literarum forma grandiuscula, Athanasianum quidem, Fidei Catholicæ, — alterum vero Symboli Apostolorum præfert titulum. In posteriore, quod Regis Æthelstani aliquando fuit, Apostolicum, vice versa, Symbolum simpliciter, alterum autem Fides Sancti Athanasii Alexandrini nuncupatur. Usher. de Symb. præf. p. 2, 3.

and upon the credit of Usher, by the learned on this subject: as particularly by Comber, L'Estrange, Tenzelius, Tillemont, Le Quien, Muratorius, Natalis Alexander, and perhaps several more. Montfaucon takes notice of Usher's manuscript; but observes that Usher himself allowed the character to be much later than the time of Gregory<sup>k</sup>. Which would have been a strange inconsistency in Usher, who forms his argument for the antiquity of the manuscript from the character itself, and from the ancient kind of picture. But Montfaucon is plainly mistaken, confounding what Usher had said of another manuscript, in Bennet library at Cambridge<sup>l</sup>, with what he had said of the Cotton manuscript at Westminster. The two manuscripts are very distinct, and different as possible; nor has the Bennet manuscript any Athanasian Creed in it: only its being called Gregory's Psalter occasioned, I suppose, the mistake of making it the same with the other. Tenzelius<sup>m</sup> seems first to have confounded them together: and probably Montfaucon followed him implicitly, not having Usher at hand to consult; which would immediately have discovered the fallacy. Were there no other objection against Usher's manuscript beside what hath been mentioned, all would be well. But it is of greater weight to observe, that there is not, at this day, in the Cotton library any such manuscript copy of the Athanasian Creed; nor indeed any Latin Psalter that can come up to the age of Gregory, or near it. There is an ancient Psalter (marked Vespasian A) written in capitals, and illuminated; and which might perhaps by the character be as old as the time of Gregory the Great; were it not reasonable to think, from a charter of King Ethelbald, written in the same hand, and at the same time, and formerly belonging to it<sup>n</sup>, that it cannot be set higher than the date of that charter, A. D. 736. But I should here observe, that

<sup>k</sup> Codicum omnium qui hactenus visi memoratique sunt, antiquissimus ille est qui ab Usserio laudatur, ævo Gregorii Magni conscriptus; si tamen ea vere sit ejus MS. ætas: nam addit Usserius, scripturam ævo Gregorii longe esse posteriorem. Montf. Diatr. p. 721.

<sup>l</sup> In Psalterio Græco Papæ Gregorii, ut præfert titulus (scriptura enim ævo Gregorii longe est posterior) Psalterio videlicet Græco et Romano, Latinis utroque literis descripto, quod in Benedictini, apud Cantabrigienses, collegii bibliotheca est reconditum.

Usser. de Symb. p. 9.

<sup>m</sup> Tenzelii Judic. Eruditor. p. 49. Et Exercit. Select. p. 29.

<sup>n</sup> Constat vero ex Historia et Synopsi Biblioth. Cottonianæ, quam in ingens reipublicæ literariæ beneficium edidit, amplificandis bonis literis natus, doctissimus Thomas Smithus noster, et indiculo Psalterii Latini in majusculis scripti cum versione Saxonica interlineari, quod notatur Vespasian. A. I. Chartam hanc (Æthelbaldi R. Australium Saxonum) ex isto MS. excissam esse. Quod etiam il-that charter is not in the larger capitals, as the Psalter itself is, but in the smaller capitals, the same hand that the several pieces in that manuscript, previous to the Psalter, are written in: and how far this may affect our present argument, I cannot say. Possibly the Psalter itself being in a different hand may be older than those previous pieces; as it is certainly much older than the additional pieces at the end, which are not in capitals great or small.

This Psalter has the Te Deum annexed to it, with the title of Hymnus ad Matutinum, as Usher's had; and also the Athanasian Creed, with the title of Fides Catholica; but both in a very different and much later hand than that of the Psalter itself; later by several centuries, as the very learned Mr. Wanley<sup>o</sup> judges, who sets the age of the Psalter about 1000 years, but of the Athanasian Creed, &c. at the time of the Norman Conquest. A suspicion, however, may from hence arise, that this very Psalter, with what belongs to it, might be the Psalter, &c. which Usher spake of; especially since there is none other in the Cotton library at all like it. But, on the contrary, it is to be considered, that this manuscript has no Apostolical Creed at all in it, which Usher affirms his to have had: nor has it the Hymnus Matutinus, beginning with Gloria in excelsis Deo, which Usher's also had<sup>p</sup>: nor is the Creed in capitals, as one would imagine Usher's to have been by what he says of it. Neither is it at all probable, that, if Usher had intended the Psalter now extant in the Cotton, he should give no hint of the Saxon version going along with it; especially considering that it might be made an objection to its antiquity. Nor do I think that so inquisitive a man as Usher could either have been ignorant of the age of Ethelbald, or of his charter having been once a part of that manuscript. In his Historia Dogmatica<sup>q</sup>, he takes notice of this very Psalter, (now marked Vespasian A.) lius quum mensura quæ cum foliis illius MS. quadrat, tum etiam manus in utroque prorsus eadem, tum denique locus MSS. unde scissa est, inter folia x et xi. codicem vertentibus ostendit. Hickes, Dissert. Epist. in Lingu. Septentr. Thesour. p. 67.

<sup>o</sup> Vid. Wanleii Catal. MSS. Septentrion. p. 222.

<sup>p</sup> Ad finem veterum Psalteriorum Latinorum, cum Apostolico et Athanasiano Symbolo, etiam Hymnus iste

(sc. Gloria &c.) habetur adjectus. In antiquissimo Cottoniano ἀνετίγραφος est; in Æthelstaniano proximo, Hymnus in die Dominico ad Matutinas, inscribitur. Usser. de Symbol. p. 33.

<sup>q</sup> In Bibliotheca D. Roberti Cotton extat Psalterium Romanum vetustissimum, cum versione interlineari Saxonica: character idem cum charta Æthilbaldi Anglorum Regis, anno 736 data. Usser. Histo. Dogmat. p. 104.

and of the Saxon version in it, and likewise of its being in the same hand with Ethelbald's charter: and there he sets the age of it no higher than the year 736, (that is, above 130 years later than Gregory I,) without the least hint that he had ever mistaken the age of it before, or had thought otherwise of it than he did at the time of his writing this later treatise. These considerations persuade me that Bishop Usher had seen some other manuscript, which has since that time, like many more<sup>r</sup>, been lost, or stolen from the Cotton library. He that was so accurate in every tittle of what he says of King Athelstan's Psalter, (mentioned at the same time,) could never have been so negligent, or rather plainly careless, in respect of the other. I conclude therefore, that there really was such a Psalter as Usher describes, with the Athanasian Creed in it; such as he judged to be of the age of Gregory I. from more marks than one: and how good a judge he was in those matters is well known to as many as know any thing of that great man. But how far his judgment ought to sway, now the manuscript itself is lost, I must leave with the reader.

660. Next to this of Bishop Usher we may place the famous manuscript of Treves, from which the Colbert manuscript (to be mentioned hereafter in its place) was copied. Mr. Antelmi sets it as high as the year 450, upon a presumption that the Colbert manuscript is as old as the year 600, and that 150 years may reasonably be allowed between the Colbertine copy and that from which it was copied. Tillemont, supposing, or admitting the Colbertine to be near the age that Antelmi mentions, yet thinks fifty years' difference might be sufficient; and that therefore the age of the Treves manuscript might be fixed at 550, or thereabout<sup>s</sup>. But since the Colbert manuscript cannot reasonably be set much higher than 760, as we shall see in its proper place; I shall not pretend to set the Treves manuscript above 660; and that only under the favourable allowance of a probable conjecture. The authority of this manuscript of Treves stands upon the credit of a passage prefixed to the Colbertine copy<sup>t</sup>, which declares that the latter was copied from a manuscript found at Treves. It was not a copy of the entire Creed, <sup>r</sup> Vid. Tho. Smithi Præfationem ad Catalog. MSS. Bibl. Cotton.

<sup>s</sup> Tillemont, Mémoires, tom. viii. p. 670.

<sup>t</sup> Hæc inveni Trevis in uno libro

scriptum, sic incipiente, "Domini nostri Jesu Christi et reliqua. Domini nostri Jesu Christi fideliter credit." Apud Montf. Diatrib. p. 728.

but began at the second part which relates to the incarnation. For after the words, "believe rightly the incarnation of our " Lord Jesus Christ," (being only part of the foregoing sentence,) follows; " For, the right faith is, that we believe," and so on to the end of the Creed. This remaining part of the Creed is very different from the common copies, and seems to have been so contrived with design, as I shall have occasion to observe more at large in the sequel. And it is to me an argument that the manuscript was written while the Eutychian controversy was at the height, about the end of the fifth century, or beginning of the sixth; though I here set it a great deal lower, because this is not the place to explain that matter fully, nor would I too far indulge a bare conjecture. It is sufficient to suppose it written in the seventh century, as it was undoubtedly copied from, as early, if not earlier, than the eighth.

700. After the manuscript of Treves, may justly follow the Ambrosian manuscript, which is in the Ambrosian library at Milan; a copy of which has been published by Muratorius, in his second tome of Anecdota. It was brought thither from the famous monastery of Bobbio, (of High Lombardy, in the Milanese,) founded by Columbanus, A. D. 613. The character of the manuscript is Langobardic; and it is judged by Muratorius (who has more particularly examined it) to be above 1000 years old<sup>u</sup>. By his account then, who wrote in the year 1698, he ought to set the age of this manuscript higher than 698. Yet because Montfaucon, who in his travels through Italy had also seen it, puts it no higher than the eighth century<sup>x</sup>, we shall be content to place it between the seventh and eighth, or in the year 700, to make it a round number. There are in this manuscript some readings different from the common copies; which shall be carefully noted hereafter. It is without any title.

703. We may next set down K. Athelstan's Psalter, of which Bishop Usher had taken notice, making it next in age to the

<sup>u</sup> In alio etiam vetustissimo Ambrosianæ bibliothecæ codice ante mille et plures annos scripto, Symbolum idem sum nactus. Murator. tom. i. p. 16.

Ceterum opusculum hoc (Bacharii Fides) mihi depromptum est ex antiquissimo Ambrosianæ bibliothecæ codice, quem ante annos minimum mille conscriptum, characterum forma non dubitanter testatur. Fuit autem olim celebris monasterii Bobiensis, et ex illo in Ambrosianam translatus a magno Card. Frederico Borromæo, &c. Murator. tom. ii. p. 8. item p. 224.

<sup>x</sup> Codex VIII. Sæculi, caractere Langobardico, in quo Gennadii liber de Ecclesiasticis Dogmatibus, Bacharii Fides, Symbolum Athanasii, omnia eadem manu. Montfauc. Diatr. Ital. p. 18.

other most ancient one of the age of Gregory I. He and Dr. Grabe both fix the date of it to the year 703, from the rule of the calendar found in it<sup>y</sup>. Dr. Smith, in his Catalogue of the Cotton manuscripts, inclines to think that the manuscript is later than that time, but taken from one that was really as early as the year 703; the later copyist transcribing (as sometimes has been) the book and the rule word for word, as he found them<sup>z</sup>. Allowing this to have been the case here, (though it be only conjecture,) it may still be true that there was a manuscript of the age of 703, with this Creed in it; from whence the later one, now extant, was copied: which serves our purpose as well, and the rest is not material. But it should not be concealed, that the Psalter (in this manuscript) is in small Italian, and the above mentioned rule in a small Saxon hand; which may in some measure weaken the argument drawn from the age of one to the age of the other: so that at length our evidence from this manuscript will be short of certainty, and will rise no higher than a fair, probable presumption. I have nothing further to observe, but that the Psalter, wherein this Creed is, is the Gallican Psalter, not the Roman; and the title is, Fides Sancti Athanasii Alexandrini, The Faith of St. Athanasius of Alexandria.

760. We may now take in the Colbertine copy, of which I have before spoken, referring the date of it to the year 760, or thereabout. Montfaucon sets it above the age of Charles the Great<sup>a</sup>, allowing it to have been written about the time of Pepin, <sup>y</sup> Psalterium illud anno æræ nostræ Christianæ 703, longe ante Æthelstani regnantis tempora, ex Regulis Kalendario in libri initio subjunctis scriptum fuisse deprehendi. Usser. de Symb. p. 6.

Quod regis Æthelstani fuisse dicitur, atque anno 703 scriptum est. Grabii Prolegom. in Psalt. Alexandr. cap. 3.

<sup>z</sup> Hic vero venerandæ antiquitatis liber fere ante mille annos descriptus; ut quibusdam ex Calendario, quod annum Christi 703, certo designat, illic præfixo videtur. Sed cum librariis eandem temporis adnotationem, quæ ad vetustissimos codices proprie et peculiariter spectat, suis exemplaribus apposuisse sæpissime observaverim——an sit ille ipse codex autographus qui tantam præ se ferat ætatem, vel annon potius sæculo, aut cir-

citer, ante tempora Æthelstani descriptus, vix pro certo præstarem; ad posteriorem sententiam faventiori animo inclinaturus. Smith. Bibl. Cotton. Histor. p. 44.

<sup>a</sup> Nongentos superat annos Colbertinus codex 784. Saxonice descriptus literis, et, mea quidem sententia, ante ætatem Caroli Magni editus——Sunt qui codicem illum 1100 annorum esse adfirmarunt: verum periti quique ævo circiter Pipini exaratum arbitrantur. Montf. Diatr. p. 721.

Nec tamen codicis Colbertini auctoritate nititur hæc opinio, quem arbitratur Antelmus 1100 annorum. Etenim (quod pace viri eruditissimi, mihi que amicissimi dicatur) multo minoris ætatis codex esse comprobatur; nemo enim peritus cui librum exhiberim, octavo eum sæculo antiquiorem æstimavit. Montf. ib. p. 724.

who began to reign in the year 752. So that I cannot be much out of time in placing it as I have done. It is written in Saxon character, and is imperfect; wanting the first part, above one half of the Creed, just as the manuscript of Treves from which it was copied.

760. The manuscript of St. Germans, at Paris, is entire, and of the same age with the former<sup>b</sup>. It is marked num. 257, and written in a Saxon letter, as well as the other. A specimen of the hand, with the three first paragraphs of the Creed, may be seen in Mabillon<sup>c</sup>. The title, Fides Sancti Athanasii Episcopi Alexandriæ. It differs in some places from the common copies, (as shall be noted hereafter,) though not near so much as the Colbert manuscript before mentioned.

772. Next to these is the famous manuscript of Charles the Great, at the end of a Gallican Psalter, written in letters of gold, and presented by Charlemagne, while only King of France, to Pope Adrian I. at his first entrance upon the pontificate, in the year 772. Lambecius in his Catalogue of the Emperor's library at Vienna, where this manuscript is, gives a large account of it<sup>d</sup>. The title is, Fides Sancti Athanasii Episcopi Alexandrini.

800. There is another manuscript in the Royal library at Paris marked 4908, which Montfaucon judges to be near 900 years old<sup>e</sup>. He wrote in the year 1698. So if we place it in the year 800, we shall want a little of 900 years from that time. He supposes it of very near the same age with the Vienna manuscript. It bears no title, nor any name or note of the author. It contains no more than the first part of the Creed, as far as the words, et tamen non tres æterni; sed unus—the rest is torn off and lost.

850. I may here place a manuscript of Bennet College library in Cambridge, whose age I cannot certainly fix to a year; but by all circumstances it cannot well be supposed later than this time. It is at the end of a Psalter, which by comparing I find

<sup>b</sup> Paris saltem antiquitatis est Saxonianensis noster, num. 257. Saxonice pariter literis exaratus, qui titulum habet, Fides Sancti Athanasii Episcopi Alexandriæ. Montf. p. 721.

<sup>c</sup> Mabill. de Re Diplom. p. 351.

<sup>d</sup> Lambecii Catal. Biblioth. Vindobonens. lib. ii. cap. 5. p. 261, 296, &c. Carolus Magnus proprio carmine suo testatur se illum codicem summo to be a Gallican Psalter. Bishop Parker left a remark in it about its being in the possession first of one of the Archbishops of Canterbury, and at length conveyed down to the hands of Becket<sup>f</sup>, who was Archbishop of Canterbury in the year 1162. The great antiquity of the manuscript appears from the martyrs, confessors, and virgins addressed to in it; all of the early times. There are some few variations in this copy, such as are also found in the most ancient manuscripts of this Creed; particularly the word et, frequently inserted before Spiritus Sanctus, which has been since erased by some officious hand. The title is observable; Fides Sancti Anasthasii Episcopi: Anasthasii for Athanasii, by a transposition of syllables.

Pontifici Hadriano I. dono misisse; et quidem, ut ego arbitror, illo ipso anno 772. cujus die decimo Februarii jam memoratus Hadrianus in summum Pontificem electus est. Lambec. ibid.

<sup>e</sup> Regius Codex, num. 4908. annorum pene nongentorum, nullum habet titulum, nullumque auctoris nomen. Æqualis ipsi est, qui memoratur a Lambecio &c. Montf. ibid. p. 721.

860. Montfaucon informs us of a manuscript in the Colbert library, num. 1339, which once belonged to Charles the Bald<sup>h</sup>, who died in the year 877; began to reign 840. It cannot therefore be much amiss to fix upon 860 for the date of it. The title it bears is, Fides Athanasii.

883. There is a second manuscript copy of the Athanasian Creed, in the library of Bennet (or Corpus Christi) College, marked N. O. V. It is at the end of a Gallican Psalter, in the same hand, and carrying its certain date with it. It was written in France by order of Count Amadeus, or Achadeus<sup>i</sup>; and in the year 883, as appears from the Litany<sup>k</sup>. The title is, Fides Catholica.

930. Mr. Wanley gives us an account of a Roman Psalter in the Royal library, (formerly of St. James's,) with an interlinear Saxon version to it, written about the time of King Athelstan<sup>l</sup>.

<sup>f</sup> Hoc Psalterium [N. X.] laminis argenteis deauratum, et gemmis ornatum, quondam fuit N. Cantuar. Archiep. tandem venit in manus Thomæ Becket quondam Cant. Archiep. quod testatum est in veteri scripto. Matth. Cant. Vid. Catal. MSS. C. C. C. C. p. 43.

<sup>g</sup> In Litaniiis, Orate pro nobis, Sancte Contestor, Sancte Herasme, Sancte Oswolde, &c. martyres. Sancte Cuthberte, Sancte Germane, Sancte Placide, Sancte Columbane, Sancte Laurentine, &c. confessores. Sancta Brigida, Sancta Eugenia, Sancta Eulalia, Sancta Petronella, &c. virgines. Et non sunt hisce recentiores. Catal. MSS. Bibl. C. C. C. C. p. 43.

<sup>h</sup> Colbertinus N. 1339. Qui fuit

Karoli Calvi imperatoris, inscribitur; Fides Athanasii. Montfauc. Diatrib. p. 721.

<sup>i</sup> Ad finem Psalterii, "Achadeus, misericordia Dei comes hunc Psalterium scribere jussit." Vid. Catal. MSS. p. 46.

<sup>k</sup> Oratur, "ut marinum apostolicum in sancta religione conservare digneris, ut Karlomannum Regem perpetua prosperitate conservare digneris: ut reginam conservare digneris: ut fulconem episcopum cum omni grege sibi commisso in tuo apto servitio conservare digneris." Vid. Catalog. MSS. C. C. C. C. p. 47.

<sup>l</sup> Wanleyi Catal. MS. Septentr. p. 182.

Among the Canticles at the end, there is also this Creed, under the title of Hymnus Athanasii de Fide Trinitatis, quem tu concelebrans discutienter intellige: this is in red ink. The title seems to have been then customary in England, as may be probably argued from a Saxon version (to be hereafter mentioned) of the same age, or very near, and bearing the same title<sup>m</sup>.

957. In the Archbishop's library, at Lambeth, there is a Gallican Psalter, written, according to Mr. Wanley<sup>n</sup>, in the time of King Edgar, or a little before. At the end, there is the Athanasian Creed in the same ancient hand, with an interlinear Saxon version. The title, Fides Catholica Sancti Athanasii Episcopi.

970. There is another manuscript copy of this Creed, much of the same age with the former, in my Lord Oxford's elegant library, richly furnished with all kinds of curious and valuable manuscripts. This Creed is at the end of a Gallican Psalter, and has an interlinear Saxon version to it. Mr. Wanley, who was so kind as to acquaint me with it, and to favour me with a sight of it, refers it to the time of King Edgar; who began his reign in 959, and died in 975. The title is, Fides Catholica Athanasii Alexandrini Episcopi.

1031. In the Cotton library there is a Gallican Psalter, with Saxon interlined, (marked Vitellius, E. 18.) which Mr. Wanley refers to the year 1031<sup>o</sup>. The Athanasian Creed at the end, as usual, among the other Canticles, bears the title of Fides Catholica Athanasii Episcopi Alexandrini.

1050. In the Norfolk library, now belonging to the Royal Society at London, there is also a Gallican Psalter, whose age is fixed by Mr. Wanley<sup>p</sup> to the time of Edward the Confessor. The Creed is in it, and has an interlinear Saxon version running along with it. The title, Fides Catholica Athanasii Alex.

1064. In Bennet College library is a manuscript copy of this Creed without any title. The Psalter wherein it is, is called Portiforium Oswaldi, and is marked K. 10. An account of the book may be seen in Mr. Wanley, and in the Catalogue.

<sup>m</sup> Hymnus Athanasii de Fide Trinitatis. Vid. Wottoni Conspectum Brevem Operis Hiccesiani, p. 77.

<sup>n</sup> Wanleii Catal. p. 269. Eadgari regis Anglosaxonum temporibus, aut paulo ante, ut videtur, exaratus.

Wharton. Auctarium Historiæ Dog-

maticæ, p. 374. Alfredo parum recentior videtur.

<sup>o</sup> Wanleii Catal. p. 222, 224. Smith. Catal. Cotton. p. 101.

<sup>p</sup> Wanleii Catal. MSS. Septentr. p. 291.

1066. I may here place the Cotton manuscript before mentioned, bound up with the Ancient Roman Psalter, marked Vespasian, A ; though of a very different and much later hand. The Creed has an interlinear Saxon version, as usual ; and its title is, Fides Catholica. Mr. Wanley judges it to be as old as the coming in of the Normans<sup>q</sup>.

1066. Of the same age is the Roman Psalter in our public library<sup>r</sup> at Cambridge, with the Latin text in black letter, a Saxon version in red, and the titles in green. The Creed is interlined with Saxon, as well as the Psalter, but has no title : for, from this time, I conceive, the title began to be left out in some copies, for brevity sake, or because it was thought superfluous.

It will be needless to take notice of any manuscripts below this time, excepting only such as contain something particular.

1087. Quesnel<sup>s</sup>, and after him Pagi<sup>t</sup>, speaks of a manuscript copy of this Creed in a Breviary and Psalter for the use of the monks of mount Cassin, judged to be about 600 years old. This is the same Breviary that Quesnel has made observations upon in another work<sup>u</sup>. And there he fixes the age a little below 1086 ; paulo post annum 1086. The title of the Creed is, Fides Catholica edita ab Athanasio Alexandrinæ sedis Episcopo. There is the like title to the Creed in the Triple Psalter of St. John's College Cambridge, about the same age, or older, (marked B. 18.) Incipit Fides Catholica edita ab Athanasio Archiepiscopo Alexandrinæ civitatis. And there is such another title in a Psalter of the Norfolk library, (N. 155.) Fides Catholica edita a Sancto Athanasio Episcopi. But the hand is modern.

1120. In my Lord Oxford's library I had a sight of a manuscript written in Germany about 600 years ago, for the use of the Church of Augsburg ; which bears for its title, Fides Anastasii Episcopi.

1150. In the Norfolk library is a Psalter (marked N. 230.) with an interlinear version Normanno-Gallican : the Psalter is Gallican, and the title of the Creed at the end, Fides Catholica.

1240. Usher takes notice of a copy of this Creed then in the Royal library at St. James's, (formerly belonging to Lewis the Ninth,) the title, Fides Catholica.

<sup>q</sup> Wanleii Catal. p. 222. Smith. <sup>t</sup> Pagi, Critic. in Baron. vol. i. Bibl. Cotton. Histor. p. 35. p. 441.

<sup>r</sup> Wanleii Catal. p. 152.

<sup>s</sup> Quesnel Dissert. xiv. ad Leon. &c. in Theodor. Penitentiale, p. 327. Oper. p. 732.

1300. Montfaucon informs us of a Latin and a French copy of this Creed found in a manuscript about 400 years old; placed in opposite columns. What is remarkable is, that the Latin has for its title Canticum Bonifacii, and the French over against the other, Ce chant St. Anaistaise qui Apostoilles de Rome<sup>x</sup>.

1400. In the Bodleian at Oxford there is a manuscript copy of this Creed, (Num. 1204.) which has for its title, Anastasioi Expositio Symboli Apostolorum. It is about 300 years old, and belonged once to the Carthusian monks at Mentz. The Carthusians are particularly noted for their more than common veneration for this Creed, reciting it every day at the prime, as Cardinal Bona testifies both of them and the Ambrosians<sup>y</sup>; which I remark by the way. I observe that the German copies of this Creed, for five or six hundred years upwards, have most commonly Anastasius instead of Athanasius. I make no question but that this first arose from a mistake of the copyists, and not out of any design. One may perceive that Anastasius is sometimes written where Athanasius of Alexandria must have been intended. I suppose, at first, some copies had accidentally Anasthasius for Athanasius, (as one in Bennet College library mentioned above,) by a transposition of letters or syllables; as easily happens in writing or speaking: thus Phrunutus for Phurnutus, Marivadus for Varimadus, and the like. Now when the copyists had thus introduced Anasthasius, (Anas-tha for Atha-nas) those that came after left out the h, to make it Anastasius, that being a common name, which the other was not. This I thought proper to hint, that it may appear how little reason there is for ascribing this Creed to Anastasius, whether of Rome, or of Antioch, or any other.

I have now run through the manuscripts of greatest note, or use, either for antiquity, or for any thing particular, to give light to our further inquiries. Two only I have omitted, which have been thought considerable; not so much in themselves, as upon account of the other tracts they were found to be joined with. The one is the manuscript found in the library of Thuanus (Codex Thuaneus) annexed to some tracts which were once supposed to belong to Vigilus Tapsensis, though now certainly known to be none of his. Quesnel was much pleased with the discovery of this manuscript, as favouring his hypothesis about

<sup>x</sup> Montfaucon, Diatrib. p. 722,      <sup>y</sup> Bona de Divin. Psalmod. cap. 727.      xviii. p. 897, 900.

Vigilius Tapsensis<sup>z</sup>. And Antelmus has taken some pains in confuting him; shewing that the supposed works of Vigilius are none of his<sup>a</sup>, and that if they were, yet no certain argument could be drawn from thence to make Vigilius author of the Creed; since it is a common thing for tracts of several authors, especially if they relate to the same subject, to be tacked to each other.

The second manuscript is one that was found annexed to the Fragments of Hilary of Poitiers<sup>b</sup>; which circumstance was thought a reason for ascribing this Creed to Hilary. Vossius first, and after him many others, throw it off as a very slight argument, since the manuscript pretended is very modern, nor is the Creed ascribed to Hilary in that manuscript, but only bound up with his Fragments, as any other work might be, however little akin to them. Montfaucon takes notice of this matter in few words<sup>c</sup>, Tenzelius more at large<sup>d</sup>. It is sufficient for me just to have hinted it.

Having now given as particular account as was needful of the more ancient Latin manuscripts of this Creed, I may just observe that as to modern ones, they are innumerable, there being scarce any manuscript Latin Psalter of modern date but what has the Creed in it, and generally without a title. I may next subjoin a table of the manuscripts here recited, representing in one view the age, the title, the country where written, and the kind of Psalter wherein found: all which circumstances will be of use to us in our following inquiries. Particularly, as to the

<sup>z</sup> Absoluta dissertationum nostrarum editione, inveni Codicem Thuanum, in quo Dialogus Vigilii Tapsensis adversus Arianos, Sabellianos, et Photinianos legitur, sub hoc titulo: Incipit Altercatio Athanasii cum Hæresibus. Post hunc tractatum habetur Symbolum Nicænum, et formula fidei Ariminensis Concilii, quam proxime sequitur Symbolum Athanasianum cum hæc epigraphe: Fides dicta a Sancto Athanasio Episcopo. Porro, conjecturæ nostræ de auctore hujus symboli non parum suffragatur, quod in antiquissimo codice illigatum reperitur opusculo cui nomen Athanasii pariter præfixum legitur, sed quod Vigilii Tapsensis esse indubitatum habetur &c. Quesnel in Addend. p. 913.

<sup>a</sup> Vid. Montfauc. Athan. Op. tom. ii. p. 603, 724.

<sup>b</sup> Invenitur id similiter in Fragmentis Hilarii historicis in cod. veteri part. 2. sub finem. Felckman. Var. Lect. Oper. Athan. p. 83.

<sup>c</sup> Hilario nonnulli adscriptum voluerunt, quia nimirum in codice quodam exstat post Hilarii Fragmenta. Quasi vero id non vulgo et in plerisque codicibus observetur, ut multa diversorum opera consequenter in manuscriptis describentur. Cum autem in ejusmodi codice post Hilariana opera, nullo præmisso auctoris nomine compareat; hinc, uti jam supra diximus, inferendum, tum exaratum fuisse cum pro Athanasiano nondum vulgo haberetur. Montf. Diatrib. p. 723.

<sup>d</sup> Tenzel. Judic. Erud. p. 2, 3, &c.

Psalters, it will be of moment to observe whether they be Roman or Gallican; because from thence we may be able to discover in what places or countries this Creed was first received, according to their use of this or that Psalter. But because, perhaps, some readers may be at a loss to know what we mean by those different names of Roman and Gallican Psalters; it may not be improper here to throw in a few previous instructions relating to the different kinds of Latin Psalters, and the names they have gone under.

There are four kinds, or sorts, of Latin Psalters; which have passed under the names of Italic, Roman, Gallican, and Hebraic. One of them was before Jerome's time: the three last are all Jerome's; as he had a hand, more or less, in every one of them. I shall treat of them distinctly, in their order, as follows:

I. The Italic Latin Psalter is of the old translation, or version, such as it was before Jerome's time. I shall not enter into the dispute whether it were one version or many. The common opinion is, that there were several Latin versions before Jerome<sup>e</sup>, but one more eminent than the rest called Italic<sup>f</sup>, as being received into common use in Italy<sup>g</sup>. However that be, it is become customary, with such as treat of this subject, to speak of all that was extant before Jerome, as of one version, under the name of Vetus Vulgata, or Versio Italica. There are entire Psalters of this old version, printed and manuscript<sup>h</sup>; though now no where in use in divine Offices, except such parcels of it as, having been anciently taken into the Roman Missals, or other old Liturgies, remain there still, the people being accustomed to them, and there being no great necessity for changing them: but all the entire Psalters in use are of another kind. Martianay, in his edition of Jerome's works, once intended to give us an entire and correct Psalter (with some other of the sacred books) of the old Italic version. But the various lections were so many, and verborum tenacior cum perspicuitate sententiæ. August. ibid. p. 27.

<sup>e</sup> Qui enim scripturas ex Hebræa lingua in linguam Græcam verterunt numerari possunt, Latini autem interpretes nullo modo: ut enim cuique primis fidei temporibus in manus venit codex, et aliquantulum facultatis sibi utriusque linguæ habere videbatur, ausus est interpretari. August. de Doctr. Christian. lib. ii. cap. 11. p. 25. tom. iii.

<sup>f</sup> In ipsis autem interpretationibus Itala cæteris præferatur: nam est

<sup>g</sup> Ecclesia Latina a principio, vel ferme a principio, usa est versione Latina Testamenti Vet. ex Græca τῶν ὀ translatione facta, quæ Itala vulgo dicebatur, quoniam in Italia prius usitata in alias inde Latinorum Ecclesias recipiebatur. Humphr. Hodius, De Biblior. Text. Origin. p. 342.

<sup>h</sup> Le Long, Biblioth. Bibl. vol. i. p. 243.

so different, that the work appeared too laborious and difficult, for which reason he then laid it aside<sup>i</sup>. This version, or versions, is what all the Latins used before Jerome; and many also after him, the Africans especially, down to the sixth century at least, or beginning of the seventh.

2. The Roman Psalter is not very different from the old Italic. It is nothing else but that old version cursorily, and in part, corrected by Jerome, in the time of Pope Damasus, A. D. 383. It has had the name of Roman, because the use of it began the soonest, and continued the longest in the Roman Offices. It obtained in Gaul near as soon as at Rome, but was laid aside in the sixth century, when Gregory of Tours<sup>k</sup> introduced the other Psalter, since called Gallican. The Roman Psalter however still obtained at Rome till the time of Pope Pius<sup>l</sup> the Fifth: and it is still used in the Vatican church, and some few churches besides.

3. The Gallican Psalter is Jerome's more correct Latin translation made from Origen's Hexapla<sup>m</sup>, or most correct edition of the Greek Septuagint, filled up, where the Greek was supposed faulty, from the Hebrew; distinguished with obelisks and asterisks, denoting the common Greek version in those places to be either redundant or deficient. Many of the old manuscripts<sup>n</sup> still retain those marks: but more have left them out, I suppose, to save trouble. This more correct Psalter was drawn up by Jerome in the year

<sup>i</sup> Appendicem sacrorum aliquot voluminum, juxta Veterem Vulgatam usu receptam ante Hieronymum, hoc loco edendam statueramus: sed quum operi manus jamjam accederet, tantam inter MSS. Codices hujus versionis Latinae deprehendimus dissonantiam, ut impossibile esset vel solas variantes horum codicum lectiones adnotasse nisi maximo temporis intervallo. Quare ne in sequentem annum differretur editio hujus Divinae Bibliothecae, appendicem praedictam latiori operi, ac majori otio reservavimus. Martian. Not. ad Hieronym. vol. i. p. 1419.

<sup>k</sup> Psalmos autem cum secundum LXX Interpretes Romani adhuc habeant; Galli et Germanorum aliqui secundum emendationem quam Hieronymus Pater de LXX editione composuit, Psalterium cantant: quam Gregorius, Turonensis episcopus, a

partibus Romanis mutuatum, in Gallicanarum dicitur Ecclesias transtulisse. Walafrid. Strab. de Reb. Eccles. cap. xxv. p. 690.

<sup>l</sup> Vid. Card. Bona Rerum Liturgic. lib. ii. cap. 3. Humphr. Hod. p. 383. Mabillon. de Curs. Gallican. p. 398.

<sup>m</sup> Vid. Hieron. Epist. ad Sunn. et Fretel. p. 627. ed. Bened. tom. 2.

<sup>n</sup> The Cotton manuscript of 703, and the Benet of 883, Lambeth of 957, Lord Oxford's of 970, and Bruno's own manuscript of 1033: besides many more in France, England, and other countries. Quanta porro fuerit diligentia nostratum in describendo hocce Psalterio, cum asteriscis et obelis, non aliunde testatum volumus quam ex infinita copia Codicum MSS. qui cum talibus distinctionibus supersunt in Gallicanis Bibliothecis. Martin. Hieronym. Op. vol. i. Prolegom. ii. c. 5.

389, and obtained first in Gaul about the year 580; or however not later than 595: from which circumstance it came to have the name of Gallican, in contradistinction to the Roman. From Gaul, or France, it passed over into England before the year 597, and into Germany, and Spain, and other countries. The popes of Rome, though they themselves used the other Psalter, yet patiently connived at the use of this in the western churches, and even in Italy; and sometimes privately authorized the use of it in churches and monasteries<sup>o</sup>; till at length it was publicly authorized in the Council of Trent, and introduced a while after into Rome itself by Pius the Fifth. It was admitted in Britain and Ireland before the coming of Augustine the monk, and prevailed after, except in the church of Canterbury<sup>p</sup>, which was more immediately under the Archbishop's eye, and more conformable to the Roman Offices, than other parts of the kingdom. It has been said, <sup>q</sup>that this very Gallican Psalter is what we still retain in our Liturgy; called the reading Psalms, in contradistinction to the other Psalms in our Bibles, of the new translation. But this is not strictly true: for the old translation, though it be taken in a great measure from the Gallican, has yet many corrections from the Hebrew, (where they were thought wanting,) first, by Coverdale in 1535, and by Coverdale again, 1539, and last of all by Toustall and Heath, in 1541: according to which edition is the Psalter now used in our Liturgy, as I have learned by comparing: and it had been before taken notice of by Durell<sup>f</sup>. But this in passing.

4. The Hebraic Latin Psalter means Jerome's own translation, immediately from the Hebrew, made in the year 391. This, though otherwise of great esteem, was never used in the public Church Offices<sup>s</sup>. There are but few copies of it, in comparison, <sup>o</sup> Anno 1369. Urbani V. autoritate sancitum, ut Cassinenses Psalterio Gallicano uterentur. Montfauc. Diatr. Ital. p. 331. P. Adrian, long before, had recommended the Gallican Psalter to the Church of Bremen. See below in ch. vi. and C. Bona, p. 506.

<sup>p</sup> Ante adventum Augustini monachi, primi Archiepiscopi Cantuariensis, in Angliam, i. e. ante annum 597, Ecclesie Britannicæ et Hibernicæ Psalterium Gallicanum receperant. Augustinus huc a Gregorio M. missus Romanum secum advexit, et Ecclesie suæ Cantuariensi tradidit.

Sed loco illius invaluit tandem, per omnes ecclesias Anglicas, usus Gallicani. Hodius, de Text. Bibl. Origin. p. 384.

<sup>q</sup> Hodiernum in Liturgia Ecclesie Anglicanæ retinetur editio Gallicana: at versio illa quæ habetur in Bibliorum voluminibus, quæque pro authentica agnoscitur, ex Hebræo est. Hod. ibid. p. 384.

<sup>f</sup> Durell. Eccles. Anglican. Vindic. p. 306.

<sup>s</sup> Tertium est de Hebræo in Latinum quod Ieronymus transtulit de Hebræo in Latinum. Sed non est in because this Psalter, as before hinted, having never been in common use, like the Roman and Gallican, has been confined to a few hands. We are not to expect an Athanasian Creed in this Psalter, as not being intended for the use of the choir: neither are we to expect to meet with it in the Italic Psalters, which are few, and which were grown, or growing, out of use before the Athanasian Creed was brought into the public Offices. But in the Roman and Gallican Psalters we may find it: and it will be of moment to observe in which of them it is found. Indeed, some manuscript Psalters there are, which have the Roman and Gallican together in opposite columns, the Gallican always set first<sup>t</sup>. Others have the Hebraic and Gallican set column-wise as the former: and some have all the three versions of Jerome placed in the like order. Dr. Hody informs us of two such manuscripts, to which may be added a third now in Trinity College in Cambridge, which has the Athanasian Creed with Bruno's comment in it; as intimated above. Another such triple Psalter there is in St. John's College of the same University, as before hinted; and in my Lord Oxford's library is a fine old Latin Bible, where the Psalms appear under all the three versions. Nay, some manuscripts have the Greek also with the other, making a fourth column: an account of this last sort may be seen both in Dr. Hody and Le Long<sup>u</sup>. These double, triple, or quadruple Psalters came not in, I presume, before the end of the tenth century, or beginning of the eleventh. For Berno Augiensis of that time acquaints us with the occasion and use of them, and how they came to be so contrived<sup>x</sup>. When the Roman way of singing, first adapted to the Roman Psalter, had usu Ecclesiæ, sed viri studii literati et sapientes eo utuntur. Roger. Bacon. apud Hodium de Text. Original. p. 384.

Hæc autem (versio ex Hebræo) ideo recepta non fuit, quia duæ priores, quotidiano usu in ecclesiis frequentatæ, sine magna divini officii perturbatione non poterant abrogari. Bona, Rerum Liturg. lib. ii. cap. 3. p. 506. Vid. etiam Hodium, p. 385.

<sup>t</sup> Hody de Text. Bibl. Original. p. 385.

<sup>u</sup> Le Long, Biblioth. Bibl. vol. i. p. 244.

<sup>x</sup> Inter cætera, ex emendata LXX Interpretum translatione Psal. ex Græco in Latinum vertit (Hieronymus) illudque cantandum omnibus Galliæ, ac quibusdam Germaniæ ecclesiis tradidit. Et ob hoc Gallica-

num Psalterium appellavit, Romanis adhuc ex corrupta vulgata editione Psalterium canentibus; ex qua Romani cantum composuerunt, nobisque usum cantandi contradiderunt. Unde accidit quod verba, quæ in diurnis vel nocturnis officiis canendi more modulantur, intermiscantur, et confuse nostris Psalmis inserantur; ut a minus peritis haud facile possit discerni quid nostræ, vel Romanæ conveniat editioni. Quod pius pater ac peritus magister intuens, tres editiones in uno volumine composuit: et Gallicanum Psalterium, quod nos canimus, ordinavit in una columna; in altera Romanum, in tertia Hebræum. Berno Augiens. Epist. inedit. apud Mabill. de cursu Gallicano, p. 396. Hodius de Text. Original. p. 382.

been introduced into France and Germany, (which was first done in the eighth century,) in process of time it bred some confusion in the two Psalters, mixing and blending them one with the other; that it was difficult to distinguish which words belonged to this, and which to that. To remedy this inconvenience, a way was found out to have both the Psalters distinctly represented to the eye together, in two several columns: and thus came in the kind of Psalters before mentioned. We easily see why the Gallican used to be set in the first column; namely, because those Psalters were contrived by the French and Germans, who made use of the Gallican, and so gave the preference to their own. If I have detained my reader a little too long in this digression about the Psalters; I hope the usefulness of the subject may make him some amends, and be a just apology for it. I now return to our Creed, and what more immediately belongs to it; closing this chapter, as I promised, with a table representing a summary, or short sketch of what hath been done in it.

A.D.	MSS.	Psalters.	Titles of the Creed.
600	Bp. Usher's		Fides Catholica.
660	Treves
700	Ambrosian
703	Cotton 1	Gallican	Fides Sancti Athanasii Alexandrini.
760	Colbert 1
760	St. German's		Fides Sancti Athanasii Episcopi.
772	Vienna	Gallican	Fides Sancti Athanasii Episc. Alexandr.
800	Regius, Paris
850	Benet Coll. Cant. 1	Gallican	Fides Sancti Anasthasii Episcopi.
860	Colbert 2		Fides Athanasii.
883	Benet C. 2	Gallican	Fides Catholica.
930	St. James's 1	Roman	Hymnus Athanasii.
957	Lambeth	Gallican	Fides Catholica S. Athanasii Episcopi.
970	Harleian 1	Gallican	Fides Catholica Athanasii Alexand. Episc.
1031	Cotton 2	Gallican	Fides Catholica Athanasii Alexand. Episc.
1050	Norfolk 1	Gallican	Fides Catholica Athanasii Alexandrini.
1064	Benet C. 3
1066	Cotton 3		Fides Catholica.
1066	Cambridge	Roman
1087	Cassinensis		Fides Catholica edita ab Athanasio &c.
1120	Harleian 2		Fides Anastasii Episcopi.
1150	Norfolk 2	Gallican	Fides Catholica.
1240	St. James's 2		Fides Catholica.
1300	Friars Minors	Gallican	Canticum Bonifacii. Ce Chant fust St. Anaistaise qui Apo- stoilles de Rome.
1400	Bodleian		Anastasii Expositio Symboli Apostolorum.

CHAP. V.

Ancient Versions, printed or manuscript.

SOME account of the ancient versions of the Athanasian Creed may be of use to shew when and where it has been received, and what value hath been set upon it, at several times, and in several countries. I shall note the time in the margin, when the first version into any language appears to have been made: and I shall rank the versions of the several countries according to the chronological order of those first versions respectively.

FRENCH VERSIONS.

850. Under the name of French versions, I comprehend all versions made at any time into the vulgar language then current in France, whatever other name some may please to give them. I beg leave also to comprehend under the same name all oral versions delivered by word of mouth, as well as written ones: otherwise I am sensible that I ought not to have begun with French versions. I do not know that the Gauls or French had any written standing version of this Creed so early as 850, or for several centuries after. Their oldest versions of the Psalter are scarce earlier than the eleventh century  $\gamma$ , and of the entire Scripture scarce so early as the twelfth  $\gamma$ : and we are not to expect a written version of the Athanasian Creed more ancient than of their Psalter. But what I mean by setting the French versions so high as I here do, is that the Athanasian Creed was, as early as is here said, interpreted out of Latin into the vulgar tongue for the use of the people, by the clergy of France, in their verbal instructions. This is the same thing, in effect, with a written standing version, as supplying the place of it; and is as full a proof of the general reception of the Creed, at that time, as the other would be. Now, that the Athanasian Creed was thus interpreted into the vulgar tongue in France as early as the year 850, or earlier, I prove from the words of Hincmar, above cited  $z$ , giving orders to the clergy of his province to be able to express this Creed communibus verbis, that is, in their vulgar, or mother tongue. What that mixed kind of language which they then used should be called, is of no great moment to our present purpose to inquire. Some perhaps, with Vitus Amerbachius and Bishop Usher<sup>a</sup>, will call it Teutonic, or German, because Franks and Germans, being originally the same, spake the same language. But I see no consequence that because Franks and Germans used the same language, therefore Franks and Gauls mixed together must still keep the same; any more than that a mixed nation of Normans and Saxons must all agree either in Norman or Saxon. One would rather expect in such a mixed people, a mixed language too, as usually happens in such cases. As to France in particular, at that time, Mr. Wharton has plainly shewn that the language there spoken was very widely different from the Teutonic, or German.

$\gamma$  See Le Long, Biblioth. Bibl. vol. i. p. 313, &c.

$z$  See above, p. 123.

The Concordate between the two brothers Lewis and Charles, at Strasburg, puts the matter out of dispute: where one expressed himself in the Teutonic, the other in the language then current in France, called Romanensis, or Rustica Romana, corrupt Roman, or Latin<sup>b</sup>; nearer to the Latin than to the German, but a confused mixture of both. Such was the language then vulgarly spoken in France, as appears from the specimen of it given by Wharton from Nithardus. And this I presume is the language into which our Creed was interpreted in Hincmar's time; for which reason I have set the French versions first. If any one shall contend that the Teutonic prevailed then in the diocese of Rheims, though not in the other parts of Gaul more remote from Germany, I shall not think it of moment to dispute the point, since it is not material to our present purpose.

As to the French versions, properly so called, written standing versions, I have said that none of them reach higher than the eleventh century. Montfaucon gives us one, though imperfect, 600 years old<sup>c</sup>; that is, of the eleventh century, and very near the end of it, about 1098, six hundred years before the time of his writing: and this is the oldest that I have any where found mentioned. Next to which, perhaps we may reckon that in Trinity College in Cambridge; I mean the interlinear version which Mr. Wanley<sup>d</sup> calls Normanno-Gallican, about 580 years old. And next to that, the Norfolk manuscript (N. 230.) before mentioned, about the same age with the other: and Mr. Wanley

<sup>a</sup> Usser. Histor. Dogmat. pag.

III.

<sup>b</sup> Vid. Wharton. Auctar. Histor. Dogmat. p. 344.

<sup>c</sup> Montfaucon, Diatrib. p. 721, 727,

733.

<sup>d</sup> Wanleii Catal. MSS. Septentr. p. 168.

informed me of two more in my Lord Oxford's library. There is one in the Cotton library (Nero, C. 4.) above 500 years old, according to Mr. Wharton<sup>e</sup>. Montfaucon give us another above 400 years old<sup>f</sup>. But it is needless, and foreign to my purpose, to number up all the versions: the first in its kind is what will be chiefly serviceable to our following inquiries.

GERMAN VERSIONS.

870. As to written and standing versions, the German, so far as we find any records, ought to have the first place. There is in the Emperor's library at Vienna<sup>g</sup>, a German, or Teutonic version of this Creed made by Otfridus, monk of Weissenberg, in the ninth century: the manuscript, as Lambecius assures us, is coeval with the author. There have been several later German versions, a brief account of which may be seen in Lambecius<sup>h</sup>, Tentzelius<sup>i</sup>, and Le Long<sup>k</sup>; but more particularly in Tentzelius. It is sufficient to my purpose to have taken notice of the first, and most considerable in its kind.

ANGLO-SAXON VERSIONS.

930. There have been Anglo-Saxon versions of this Creed as early as the time of K. Athelstan; as appears from the manuscript of the Royal library with an interlinear version, noted above; and which I place in 930. The Lambeth manuscript of 957 has also an interlinear Saxon version: both which manuscripts confirm the account given of an Anglo-Saxon copy of this Creed printed from a Latin manuscript, interlined with Saxon, out of the Church of Salisbury. The version itself seems to have been made about the middle of the tenth century, or about 950; which suits very well with the age of the manuscripts before mentioned. Only, this we may expect, that the Saxon copies of those manuscripts will be found much more correct than the Sarum copy, (and so I find that of Lambeth is, having a copy of it by me, which I owe to the civility of the very learned Dr. Wilkins,) being written at a time when the Saxon language was less corrupted, and retained more of its primitive purity;

<sup>e</sup> Wharton. Auctar. Histor. Dogmat. p. 390.

<sup>f</sup> Montf. Diatr. p. 722.

<sup>g</sup> Lambec. Catal. Biblioth. Vindobon. lib. ii. p. 460, 760.

<sup>h</sup> Lambec. Catal. lib. ii. p. 763.

<sup>i</sup> Tentzel. Judic. Erudit. Præf. et p. 226.

<sup>k</sup> Le Long. Biblioth. Biblic. vol. i. p. 376.

whereas the Sarum copy was written<sup>1</sup>, as is conjectured, after both Danes and Normans had much altered the language. I before observed, that the title in Dr. Wotton's copy is Hymnus Athanasii, as in St. James's copy: and there is something further worth the noting, which is the rubrick following the title, directing the Creed to be sung alternately<sup>m</sup>; which confirms the account given by Abbo Floriacensis of the custom of the Gallican and English churches in that age. But to proceed; from the time we have had any version of this Creed into our country language, we may reasonably conclude that such versions have varied, by little and little, in every age, in proportion to the gradual alteration in our language; till at length the version became such as it stands at this day. Such as are desirous of having a specimen of the Creed in very old English verse, may find one in Dr. Hickes's Thesaurus<sup>n</sup>. And they may see a good part of a prose version in old English, (though considerably later than the other,) in Wickliff's comment, before mentioned: or an entire version into the English of that time, in a manuscript of Pepys's library now belonging to our College, N. 2498. p. 368. I may here note, that all our Saxon and English versions down to the time of the Reformation, or to the year 1548, were from the Latin only, and not from any Greek copy: and after that time, upon the return of Popery, the old version from the Latin came again into use for a while, as appears by the Primmer set forth by Cardinal Pole in Queen Mary's days, A. D. 1555. But these and the like observations are out of the compass of my design, and so I pass on.

GREEK VERSIONS.

I have before intimated that this Creed was originally Latin, and therefore the Greek copies can be no more than versions: and they appear to be very late also, in comparison to the former,

<sup>1</sup> Versionem istam circiter medium decimi sæculi esse factam ipsius sermonis cum puritate (ubi non hallucinatur interpres) conjuncta proprietate ostendit. Recentius vero descriptam fuisse, sub Nortmannorum in Angliam adventum, non tantum librarii linguæ Saxonice hæud gnari recentior manus in qua exaratur, sed pravum illud Anglo Danicum, vel forsàn Anglo Nortmannicum, scribendi genus demonstrat. Wotton. Not. ad Brevem

Conspect. Operis Hickesiani, p. 75.

<sup>m</sup> Hymnus Athanasii, de Fide Trinitatis.

* Quem tu concelebrans, discutienter intellige. Incipit de Fide.

On which Dr. Wotton makes this note.

* Ita MS. hoc est, quem tu antiphonatum, vel alternatim psallens, animo percipe, p. 77.

<sup>n</sup> Hickes. Thesaur. Linguar. Septentr. p. 332.

However, since the Greek is one of the learned languages, since the Creed has been ascribed to a Greek author, and has been also supposed by many to have been written in Greek; it will therefore be proper to give as particular and as distinct account as is possible of the Greek version, or versions. Our inquiries here will lie within a little compass: for the Greek copies are neither many nor ancient. Montfaucon, a very diligent searcher into these matters, frankly professes that he had never seen any Greek copy of this Creed so old as 300 years; nor ever heard of any that was ancient°. He scruples not to say further, that there had not been yet seen any Greek record, of certain and undoubted credit, whereby to prove that this Creed had been known to the Greek Church for more than 500 years upwards<sup>p</sup>. He speaks only of Greek records: as to Latin ones, they afford sufficient proof that this Creed was pleaded against the Greeks in the dispute about the procession, in the eighth or ninth century at latest, and therefore must have been in some measure known to them. The Greeks and Latins had some dispute on that head in the Synod of Gentilly, not far from Paris, in the year 767, under King Pepin. But perhaps this Creed was not pleaded at that time: at least it does not appear that it was.

It cannot be doubted but that the Greeks had heard something of this Creed from the Latins, as early as the days of Ratram and Æneas Parisiensis; that is, above 850 years ago, when the dispute about the procession between the Greeks and Latins was on foot: this the testimonies above cited plainly shew. But this is not enough to prove that the Greek Church had yet any value for this Creed, or that there was then extant any Greek copy of it.

1200. Nicolaus Hydruntinus, cited above, who flourished under Alexius IV. emperor of the east, and Pope Innocent the Third, that is, in round numbers about 1200, he gives us the first notice ° Sane nullum vidimus Græcum hujus Symboli codicem qui trecentorum sit annorum; nec antiquum alium a quoquam visum fuisse novimus. Montfaucon. Diatrib. p. 727.

<sup>p</sup> Adjicere non pigeat non visum hactenus fuisse Græcorum quoddam monumentum (certum scilicet ac indubitatum) quo ab annis plus quingentis notum Ecclesiæ Græcæ fuisse Symbolum, Quicumque, possit comprobari. Montf. ibid. p. 721.

To the same purpose speaks Combefis of this Creed.

Vix enim extat præterquam in recentiorum collectaneis, librisque eorum polemiciis, quibus ipsum vel impugnant, vel etiam defendunt; idque volunt illi qui aiunt non haberi in Græcorum libris; non enim sic stupidi videntur ut negent Græcæ haberi. Combef. Not. ad Man. Calec. p. 297.

of this Creed being extant in Greek in his time. He observes, that the article of the procession from the Son was not in the Greek copy of this Creed, as neither in the Nicene, blaming the Latins, as I apprehend, for interpolating both. The censure was just with respect to the Nicene Creed, but not with respect to the Athanasian, which certainly never wanted that article; as is plain from the agreement of the Latin copies, and the earliest of them, those of a thousand years' date: which I remark by the way. As to our present purpose, this is certain, that some time before Nicolaus of Otranto wrote, the Creed had been translated into Greek, by a Greek, or at least by one that took part with the Greeks in the question about the procession. It can hardly be imagined that Nicolaus had translated it himself, and that he appealed to his own version. There must have been a version before undoubtedly: and one can scarce suppose less than 50 or 100 years before, since both the time and author of it were forgotten, and this Greek version passed with Nicolaus for Athanasius's original. Manuel Caleca<sup>q</sup>, who wrote about the year 1360, intimates that there had been Greek copies long before his time, and that the most ancient of all had the article of the procession from the Son; and that the older Greeks who wrote against the Latins did not pretend to strike out that article, as those did that came after. Could we depend upon this report, we might then be certain that the Greek copies of the time of Nicolaus Hydruntinus were late in comparison, and that there had been other Greek copies much more ancient. But this I leave to the consideration of the learned. However this fact be, one thing is certain, that the oldest Greek copy could be only a version, whether sooner or later.

As to Greek copies now extant in manuscript, they are but few, and modern: I may here give a short account of them, of as many as I have hitherto found mentioned in books, or catalogues of manuscripts.

1. There is one in the Emperor's library at Vienna, said to be in paper, ancient, and of good value<sup>r</sup>. These words are too

<sup>q</sup> Testantur autem hanc ipsam Fidei Confessionem sancti viri (Athanasii) esse, atque id dictum ita se habere, qui contra Latinos multo ante scripserunt; quam sibi ut adversam frustra labefactare nituntur. Atque, ut intelligi datur, tunc quidem adhuc servabatur; postmodum vero pertinaciores

ad contradicendum facti, omnino auferre voluerunt: etsi modo nihilominus curiose inquirentibus raro, licet in vetustissimis codicibus, ita habere invenitur. Man. Calec. contr. Græc. lib. ii. B. PP. tom. xxvi. p. 414.

<sup>r</sup> CXXIV. codex MS. theologicus Græcus est chartaceus, antiquus, et general to fix any certain date upon: one may guess from the paper that the manuscript is not very ancient; since paper came not into frequent or common use before the thirteenth century. But not to insist upon a disputable argument, (since cotton paper, though not common, was however sometimes used as early as the tenth century,) one may judge more certainly from what is written in the same volume, and, I suppose, in the same hand, (for Nesselius makes no distinction,) that the copy of the Creed is not earlier than the middle of the fourteenth century. Maximus Planudes makes a part of the manuscript: he flourished about the year 1340.

2. There is another Greek manuscript of this Creed in the same library, a paper one too, and said to be pretty ancient, by Nesselius, who gives account of it<sup>s</sup>. From the mention therein made of the Creed's being presented to Pope Julius, I should be apt to conclude that the manuscript is not earlier, nor copied from any earlier than Manuel Caleca's time, or the fourteenth century: but there are other marks, particularly some pieces of Julianus Cardinalis, which demonstrate that the manuscript cannot be much older than the middle of the fifteenth century.

3. Felckman had a manuscript copy of this Creed in Greek, without any title to it, or any author named<sup>t</sup>. I can say nothing to the age of it, for want of further particulars.

4. Felckman had another manuscript out of the Palatine library, (which library is since transferred partly to the Vatican, the rest to Munich, &c.) with a title to it, σύμβολον τοῦ ἁγίου Ἀθανασίου, St. Athanasius's Creed<sup>u</sup>. The title alone is a suffi*bonæ note*, in 4to. constatque foliis 341.

Continentur eo hæc.

Imo, &c.

2do et quidem a fol. 77. ad fol. 79. S. Athanasii Archiepiscopi Alexandrini Symbolum Fidei, cujus titulus et principium, Τοῦ ἁγίου Ἀθανασίου τοῦ μεγάλου. Ὅστις δ' ἂν βούληται σωθῆναι, πρὸ πάντων χρημάτων κρατεῖν πίστεως, &c. Nessel. Catal. vol. i. p. 344.

<sup>s</sup> CXCmus codex MS.—est char-taceus, mediocriter antiquus, et bonæ note, in 4to. constatque nunc foliis 332, et ad Johannem Sambucum olim pertinuit. Continentur eo hæc. I. primo, &c.

18<sup>o</sup> Et quidem a fol. 303. ad fol. 304. S. Athanasii magni, Archiepiscopi Alexandrini, Confessio Catholica Fidei, ad S. Julium Pontificem Romanum; cujus et titulus et principium, Τοῦ ἐν ἁγίοις πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀθανασίου τοῦ μεγάλου Ὁμολογία τῆς καθολικῆς πίστεως ἣν ἔδωκε πρὸς Ἰούλιον Πάπαν Ῥώμης. Τῷ θέλοντι σωθῆναι &c. Nessel. Catal. vol. i. p. 281.

<sup>t</sup> Extat hoc Symbolum in nostro codice 2 anonymo, sed absque titulo et nomine auctoris; unde et sic editum. Felckman. ed. Athanas. Commelin. p. 83.

Incipit; Εἴ τις θέλοι σωθῆναι, πρὸ πάντων χρημάτων τὴν καθολικὴν κρατῆσαι πίστιν, &c.

<sup>u</sup> Invenimus id ipsum etiam post in codice quodam Palatinæ bibliothecæ, expresse Athanasio inscriptum cient argument of its being modern, to any that consider what were the more usual and ancient titles, represented above. It is to be noted that those two manuscript copies are so nearly the same, that they make but one copy in print, which has been inserted in all the editions of Athanasius's works after Felckman's, as well as in his, and makes the fifth in Gundlingius<sup>x</sup>, who gives us six Greek copies of this Creed. It is observable, that this copy owns not the procession from the Son: from whence we may infer that it was not made by the Latins, or however not by any who were not friends to the Greeks.

5. Lazarus Baius's copy<sup>y</sup>, which he had from Venice, in the time of Francis I. in the year 1533, was published by Genebrard, anno 1569. This copy probably was contrived by a Latin, (having the procession from the Son in it,) or at least by some honest Greek, who would not vary from the original. I conclude this Greek copy to be modern, from the title; for a reason before hinted.

6. There was another manuscript copy<sup>z</sup> of this Creed, which Nicolaus Bryling first printed at Basil, and afterwards H. Stephens in France, in the year 1565. This also must, in all probability, be very modern, because of σύμβολον in the title. It acknowledges the procession from the Son, conformable to the original.

7. In the Royal library at Paris, (Numb. 2502,) there is another manuscript Greek copy of this Creed<sup>a</sup>, written in the year 1562, published by Genebrard 1569, and said by him to (licet id recentiores Græci nolint, ut videre est ex epistola Meletii Constantinopolitani Patriarchæ ad Douzam) ex quo etiam discrepantias quasdam notabimus.

Incipit; Εἴ τις θέλει σωθῆναι, πρὸ πάντων χρεία ἐστὶν ἵνα τὴν καθολικὴν κρατήσῃ πίστιν, &c. Felckman. ibid.

<sup>x</sup> Gundlingii not. ad Eustrat. et p. 76.

<sup>y</sup> Titulus; "Εκθεσις ὁμολογίας τῆς καθολικῆς πίστεως τοῦ μεγάλου Ἀθανασίου πατριάρχου Ἀλεξανδρείας πρὸς Ἰούλιον Πάπαν.

Incipit; "Ὅστις ἀν βούληται σωθῆναι, πρὸ πάντων χρὴ κρατεῖν τὴν καθολικὴν πίστιν.

<sup>z</sup> Titulus; Σύμβολον τοῦ ἁγίου Ἀθανασίου.

Incipit; "Ὅστις βούλεται σωθῆναι, &c.

<sup>a</sup> De Græcis autem codicibus pauca suppetunt dicenda, cum unum tantum nobis inspicere licuerit, scil. Reg. 2502. In quo extat Symbolum superiore sæculo exaratum. Montf. Diatrib. p. 722.

Secunda, quam edimus formula, jam olim publici juris facta per Genebrardum anno 1569, quam ait ille esse Ecclesiæ Constantinopolitanæ, extat in regio codice num. 2502. olim ex bibliotheca Johannis Huralti Boistallerii a Carolo IX. Venetias legati, in qua codice hæc leguntur, ante Dialogum S. Athanasii cum Ario—"transcriptus et recognitus liber hic est, ex vetustissimo exemplari cretico; Venetiis anno 1562, impensa facta a reorum X. Zacharias Sacerdos transcriptis et habuit." Montf. Diatrib. p. 727.

belong to the Church of Constantinople. This was taken from an older manuscript, but how much older cannot certainly be known<sup>b</sup>. One may imagine from the title<sup>c</sup> and beginning of it, that the form is the same with one of those in the Emperor's library, and that they were copied one from the other, or both from a third copy. This manuscript acknowledges the procession from the Son. I had understood, from Montfaucon's general way of expression, that Genebrard had published his copy from this very manuscript of the Royal library, Num. 2502. But observing that Genebrard's wants some words (ἀίδιος ὁ πατήρ, ἀίδιος ὁ υἱός, ἀίδιον τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον) which Montfaucon's copy has, I conclude that he meant only the same form, as to matter and words, for the most part, not the same manuscript.

8. There is another manuscript Greek version, or rather paraphrase of this Creed, having several interpolations, published by Bishop Usher anno 1647, from a copy sent him by Patrick Young. It has been often since printed; in the Councils, in Gundling, and in Montfaucon.

It leaves out the article of procession from the Son; from whence we may judge that it was composed by a Greek, or Grecizing Latin. The title insinuates that the Creed was drawn up in the Nicene Council<sup>d</sup>: an opinion entertained by Johan. Cyparissiota, about the year 1360, as observed above. When this story or fiction first came in, I cannot pretend to determine. Bishop Usher speaks of a very ancient manuscript, partly in Irish and partly in Latin, which hints at the same thing: but he fixes no date to the manuscript; the words, very ancient, are too general to give satisfaction in it. The Creed is there said to have been composed in the Nicene Council, by Eusebius and Dionysius, and a third left nameless<sup>e</sup>, as not being known. The author of that book of Hymns must have been very ignorant, not to know Athanasius, who was undoubtedly the third man,

<sup>b</sup> Incertum autem utrum ex illo quod memorat vetustissimo exemplari Symbolum etiam sit mutuatus; codex quippe amplè molis multa et varia complectitur, quæ dubitare licet ex unone codice exscripta fuerint, an ex compluribus. Montf. ibid.

<sup>c</sup> Titulus; Τοῦ ἐν ἁγίοις Πατρὸς ἡμῶν Ἀθανασίου τοῦ μεγάλου ὁμολογία τῆς καθολικῆς πίστεως ἣν ἔδωκε πρὸς Ἰούλιον Πάπαν Ῥώμης.

Incipit; Τῷ θέλοντι σωθῆναι, &c.

<sup>d</sup> Ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας καὶ οἰκουμενικῆς τῆς ἐν Νικαίᾳ, περὶ πίστεως κατὰ συντομίαν, καὶ πῶς δεῖ πιστεύειν τὸν ἀληθῆ Χριστιανόν. Usser. de Symb. p. 26.

<sup>e</sup> In hymnorum, partim Latino partim Hibernico sermone scriptorum, codice vetustissimo — notatum reperi, trium Episcoporum opera, in eadem Nicæna Synodo illud fuisse compositum, Eusebii, et Dionysii, et nomen tertii (sic enim ibi legitur) nescimus. Usser. de Symb. præf.

and for whose sake (to account for the Creed's being written in Latin) the whole story seems to have been contrived. By Eusebius must have been intended Eusebius of Vercell in Piedmont, a Latin, and a great friend and intimate of Athanasius: by Dionysius undoubtedly is meant Dionysius Bishop of Milan, of the same time and of the same principles, and well acquainted with Eusebius<sup>f</sup>. Had the contrivers of the fable laid their scene at Alexandria, where Athanasius and this Eusebius, with several other Latins, met together in the year 362, they had made it the more plausible. But let us return to our Greek copies, from which we have a little digressed.

This is observable of the Greek copies in general, that they differ very widely from each other, and therefore cannot be copies of one and the same version. Possibly, three or four of them may be thrown into one, admitting however many various lections: but still there will be as many remaining, which cannot be so dealt with, but must be looked upon as distinct and different versions. Such as desire to see all the copies together may find them in Gundling and Montfaucon; four at large, the rest exhibited only by various lections. I do not know whether the manuscripts of the Vienna library have been collated for any of the printed editions: perhaps not; I do not remember that I have met with any mention of them in any of the editors of the printed copies.

It may be of use to set the printed editions, after our account of the manuscripts, in chronological order, as distinctly as may be, since we cannot fix the dates of the manuscript copies.

1540. 1. The first printed edition was by Nicolaus Brylings, a printer of Basil. My authors have been deficient in not setting down the date of it. I have endeavoured to fix the year, but have not yet been so happy as to come to a certainty in it. Wherefore, I hope, my reader will excuse it, if, rather than set no year at all, I choose one which I know cannot be very much

<sup>f</sup> It seems highly probable, that the whole fable about Eusebius and Dionysius was first raised out of a passage of St. Ambrose, which might be thought to hint some such thing. The words are:

“Itaque ut Eusebius Sanctus prior levavit vexillum confessionis, ita beatus Dionysius in exilii locis, priori martyribus titulo vitam exha-

lavit.” Ambros. ad Vercellens. Ep. lxxiii. p. 1039.

<sup>g</sup> Quod olim evulgavit Basileæ Nicolaus Bryling; deinde in Gallia anno 1565, Henricus Stephanus. Genebrard. in Symb. Athanas. p. 8.

Quam post Nic. Brylingium, et Mich. Neandrum, H. Stephanus in lucem edidit. Fabric. Bibl. Græc. vol. v. p. 315.

over or under, because of other pieces printed by the same Bryling about that time. Fabricius mentions Michael Neander as editor of the same copy after Bryling, and before Stephens: but what year is not said. Sebastian Lepusculus's<sup>b</sup> edition of the same was in 1559<sup>i</sup>; and Stephens's in 1565.

1569. 2. The second printed copy was taken from the manuscript of Lazarus Baiffius, which he received from Dionysius<sup>k</sup>, a Greek, in the year 1533, as before hinted. This was first printed by Genebrard in the year 1569, again in 1585, and oftentimes since. This copy is sometimes called the Dionysian copy: and it is observed by Gundling to differ from the first copy but in seven places; and therefore these two have been commonly thrown into one, by the editors of both.

1569. 3. The third copy was also first printed by Genebrard, at the same time with the other. It has gone under the name of the Constantinopolitan copy, because Genebrard supposed it to have been in use at Constantinople<sup>l</sup>. It differs considerably from both the other, and is never thrown into one with them, but kept distinct by itself.

1600. 4. The fourth is the Commeline, or Felckman's copy, from the Palatine manuscripts, often reprinted with Athanasius's works. This also stands by itself as a distinct version.

1647. 5. The fifth was first published by Usher, in the year 1647. This differs extremely from all the rest, having, besides many variations and slight insertions, one very large interpolation. It hath been often reprinted since Usher's time.

1671. 6. The sixth and last was first published by Labbe and Cossart in the second tome of Councils. This copy comes the nearest to the two first, and therefore is sometimes thrown into

<sup>b</sup> Sebastian. Lepusculi compendium Josephi Gorionidis, cum Collectaneis quibusdam, p. 49. Basil. 1559.

<sup>i</sup> Nic. Serarius, who wrote in the year 1590, speaking of that first copy printed by Bryling and Stephens, says as follows:

“Quarum prima vulgata dici potest, eo quod hactenus ea sola hic apud nos, Germania et Gallia, typis evulgata fuerit.” Nicol. Serar. de Symb. Athanas. Opusc. Theolog. tom. ii. p. 9.

<sup>k</sup> Hoc Symbolum reperi in libro Græco MS. de processione Spiritus Sancti, quem Lazaro Baiffio oratori regis Francisci I. apud Venetos, obtu-lit Dionysius Græcus, Episcopus Zienensis et Firmiensis anno 1533. Genebr. Comm. in Symb. Athanas. p. 8.

In manus meas pervenit liber quidam Græcus, de processione Spiritus Sancti, oblatum Lazaro Baiffio clero regis nostri Francisci I. apud Venetos oratori, anno Christi 1533. Quem manu sua elegantissime pinxerat Nicolaus Sophianus Patrum nostrorum ævo vir valde doctus. Genebr. ibid. p. 2.

<sup>l</sup> Superius Symbolum, Athanasii verbis aliquantulum immutatis, Constantinopolitanis sic Græce legunt, et recitant. Genebr. ibid. p. 14.

one with them: but it differs from both in about forty places, according to Gundling's computation.

These are all the printed copies; which are sometimes called four, and sometimes six: four, because the first, second, and sixth may be tolerably thrown into one; six, because they may also be kept distinct, and may be reckoned as so many copies at least, if not so many several versions. So much for the Greek versions of our Creed.

To the versions already mentioned may be added the Slavonian, of several dialects, and, as I conceive, pretty ancient: but we have little or no account of them; only, as I shall shew in the sequel, we may be certain that there have been such. There are Italian, Spanish, Irish, and Welsh versions; but whether any that can justly be called ancient, I know not. Future searches into libraries may perhaps produce further discoveries. Fabricius makes mention of an Hebrew version of late date, and of an Arabic one still later<sup>m</sup>: but these or the like modern versions will be of no use to us in our present inquiries.

CHAP. VI.

Of the reception of the Athanasian Creed in the Christian Churches.

FROM the materials here laid down, we may now be able to determine something about the reception of the Creed, especially in the western Churches; among which the Churches of France, or Gaul, ought undoubtedly to be named first.

FRANCE, OR GAUL.

A. D. 550. This Creed obtained in France in the time of Hincmar, or about 850, without all dispute. We may advance higher up to 772: for it was then in Charles the Great's Psalter, among the Hymns of the Church. The Cotton manuscript Psalter, with this Creed in it, will carry us up to 703: and the

<sup>m</sup> Hebraice versum a Julio Marcello Romano MS. in bibliotheca Vaticana memorat Imbonatus in bibl. Latino Hebraica, p. 149. Sed omitto recentiores versiones, ut Arabicam a Nisselio editam Lugd. Bat. 1656. 4to, una cum Cantico Canticor. Fabric. Bibl. Græc. v. 5. p. 315.

Georgius Nisselius Symbolum Athanasii Arabico idiomate cum Cantico Canticorum Æthiopice et Arabice edito Lugd. Bat. anno 1656, conjunxit — id tamen non hausit ex codice MS. sed ipse in Arabicum sermonem transtulit. Tentzel. p. 125.

Canon of the Council of Autun to 670; at which time the Gallican clergy, at least of the diocese of Autun, in the province of Lyons, were obliged to recite this Creed together with the Apostles', under pain of episcopal censure. Which shews of how great value and esteem the Creed was at that time, and affords a strong presumption (as Quesnel and Pagi<sup>n</sup> well argue in the case) that it had been in use there long before. There will be some doubt, as I intimated above, about the supposed Canon of the Council of Autun; which will in some measure abate the force of our evidence, and of the argument built upon it. But as it is certain from other evidence, that this Creed was received in the Gallican churches as high as 772 or 703; so it must be owned that this very much confirms the supposition of the Council of Autun: and the concurring circumstances give very great light and strength to each other. But what most of all confirms the foregoing evidence, and the reasoning upon it, is, that Venantius Fortunatus, a full hundred years before the Council of Autun, had met with this Creed in the Gallican parts, and found it then to be in such esteem as to deserve to be commented upon, like the Lord's Prayer, and Apostles' Creed: accordingly he wrote comments upon it, as well as upon the other. This wonderfully confirms the reasoning of Quesnel and Pagi, that this Creed must have been in use there near a hundred years before the Council of Autun, that is, as high as 570, about which time Fortunatus flourished and wrote. And considering that this Creed must have been for some time growing into repute, before it could be thought worthy to have such honour paid it, along with the Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed; I may perhaps be allowed to set the time of its reception, in the Gallican churches, some years higher: reception of it, I mean, as an excellent formulary, or an acknowledged rule of faith, though not perhaps admitted into their sacred Offices. Upon the whole, and upon the strength of the foregoing evidences, we may reasonably et illam e regione cum Symbolo Apostolico ponerent, nisi jam longo usu recepta, approbata, et inter germanas Magni Athanasii lucubrationes numerata fuisset; quod nisi post plurium annorum seriem fieri vix potuit. Quesnel, Dis. xiv. p. 731.

<sup>n</sup> Dubium non est quin multis ante Synodum illam Augustodunensem annis compositum esset, et jam olim per totam Ecclesiam celebre evasisset: nunquam enim sapientissimi præsules id commisissent, ut istam fidei formulam omnium ordinum clericis amplectendam, et irreprehensibiliter, ut aiunt, recensendam, Synodali edicto sub condemnationis pœna præciverent; imo

Quare jam ante centum fere annis opus illud Athanasio attributum fuerat. Pagi, Critic. in Baron. vol. i. p. 441.

conclude, that the reception of this Creed, in the Gallican churches, was at least as early as 670; understanding it of its reception into the public Offices: but understanding it of its reception as a rule of faith, or an orthodox and excellent formulary and system of belief, it may be justly set as high as 550, which is but twenty years, or thereabout, before Fortunatus commented upon it. Le Quien scruples not to set it as high as 500°.

SPAIN.

630. Next to France, we may mention her near neighbour Spain, which seems to have received this Creed very early, and within less than a hundred years after the time before fixed for its reception in France. As to the truth of the fact, it may be argued two several ways. 1. From the near affinity and relation between the Spanish and Gallican Offices, before either France or Spain had received the Roman. 2. From the fourth Council of Toledo, their quoting passages from this very Creed.

1. As to the first argument, though a general one, it must appear of great weight. If the Sacred Offices in France and Spain were in those times the same, or very nearly so; then the reception of this Creed in France will afford a very considerable argument of its reception in Spain also.

Cardinal Bona is very large and diffuse in setting forth the agreement and harmony of the old Gallican Offices with the Spanish, in sundry particulars<sup>p</sup>. And he supposes this uniformity of the two Churches to have been as early, at least, as the days of Gregory Bishop of Tours, who died in the year 595. Mabillon, after him, frequently asserts the same thing<sup>q</sup>, and with greater assurance than Bona had done; having met with new and fuller evidences to prove it: only, he dates the agreement of the Spanish Mosarabick Offices with the Gallican, from the third and fourth Councils of Toledo<sup>r</sup>, the latter of which was in the year 633. Mr. Dodwell, speaking of the same matter, says, "Nor does Mabillon himself judge it probable that the innovations attempted by Pope Vigilius in Spain held long, of what kind soever they were. All Spain was soon after united in one form, and that different from the Romans, and agreeing

° Non nisi ex eodem Symbolo, quod jam ante receptum esset, Avitus Viennensis—alicubi scribebat &c. Le Quien, Dissert. Damascen. p. 98.

<sup>p</sup> Bona, Rerum Liturg. lib. i. cap.

12. p. 372.

<sup>q</sup> Mabillon, de Liturg. Gallican. præf. et lib. i. cap. 3. p. 20, 23.

<sup>r</sup> Mabillon, lib. i. c. 4. p. 32.

“with the Gallican<sup>s</sup>.” It is therefore a plain case, that the Gallican and Spanish Offices were very much the same in the beginning of the seventh century, and so continued for some time. If therefore the Gallican churches received the Athanasian Creed into their public Offices before the year 670, it will appear extremely probable that the Spanish received it also, and about the same time. I here make a distinction, as I did before, between receiving the Creed as a rule of faith, and receiving it into the solemn Offices, to be recited or sung in churches. The reception of it, in the first sense, I conceive to have been somewhat earlier in Spain, as well as in France, than its reception in the latter sense. But as different churches in France had anciently different customs, so also was it in Spain: and therefore it is probable that the reception of this Creed into the public Offices was in some churches sooner, and in others later, according to the various rites, customs, and circumstances of the several churches.

But I proceed to the second article, whereby we are to prove the reception of this Creed in Spain.

2. The fourth Council of Toledo cites a considerable part of this Creed, adopting it into their own Confession<sup>t</sup>. We may be confident that the Creed did not borrow the expressions from them, but they from the Creed; since we are certain that this Creed was made long before the year 633. The reference to this very Creed appears so plain in the words of that Council, that most of the learned have concluded from thence, that the Spanish Fathers had both seen and approved this Creed. Baronius is positive that the Council took their expressions from it<sup>u</sup>. Calvisius dates the publication of the Creed from that Council<sup>x</sup>:

<sup>s</sup> Dodwell of Incense, p. 190.

<sup>t</sup> Nec personas confundimus, nec substantiam separamus. Patrem a nullo factum, vel genitum dicimus: Filium a Patre non factum, sed genitum, asserimus: Spiritum vero Sanctum nec creatum, nec genitum, sed procedentem a Patre et Filio profite-mur, ipsum autem Dominum Jesum Christum—ex substantia Patris ante sæcula genitum—æqualis Patri secundum divinitatem, minor Patre secundum humanitatem.—Hæc est Ecclesiæ Catholicæ Fides: hanc confessionem conservamus, at-que tenemus. Quam quisquis fir-

missime custodierit, perpetuam salutem habebit. Concil. Tolet. IV. Capitul. 1.

<sup>u</sup> Ex eodem Athanasii Symbolo ea verba primi Capituli Toletani quarti Concilii deducta noscuntur, quibus dicitur, Patrem a nullo factum, &c. Baron. Annal. tom. iii. p. 436.

<sup>x</sup> Repositum fuit in archivis publicatum, nisi, quantum ex historiis conjicere licet, post trecentos fere annos, ubi in Concilio Toletano quarto quædam ex eo translata verba recensentur. Seth. Calvis. Op. Chronolog. p. 396.

so also Alstedius<sup>y</sup>. Gavantus, in his comments upon the Roman Breviary, concludes from thence that this Creed had been read in the Church, as high as that time<sup>z</sup>. Helvicus<sup>a</sup> falls in with the opinion of Calvisius and Alstedius, grounded upon the expressions of this Council being parallel to those of the Creed. These authors have perhaps carried the point too far, in supposing this a sufficient proof of any public reception of the Creed in Spain, at that time, or of its being read in their churches: but it is clear enough, that the Spanish Fathers had both seen and approved it; otherwise they could not, or would not, have borrowed so plainly from it. Thus much is allowed by most of the learned moderns, as Quesnel<sup>b</sup>, Natalis Alexander<sup>c</sup>, Montfaucon<sup>d</sup>, Tillemont<sup>e</sup>, Muratorius, Oudin<sup>f</sup>, and others, that the expressions of that Council and this Creed are parallel, and one borrowed from the other, and the words of the Council from the words of the Creed: only, Muratorius hints as if a doubt might be made whether the Council took from the Creed, or the Creed from the Council; which may seem strange in him, who supposes the Creed to have been made by Fortunatus, many years before that Council was held. But, I suppose, he is there speaking of the argument drawn from the words of that Council alone, abstracting from the other circumstance, and previous to the consideration of Fortunatus's comment: otherwise he is guilty of a very great oversight. It appears then, that this

<sup>y</sup> Symbolum Athanasii ab illo scriptum est in Romæ itidem contra Arium. Publicatum est post 300 fere annos in Concilio Toletano, et inde usque ad nostra tempora in Ecclesia usurpatum. Alsted. Thesaur. p. 178.

<sup>z</sup> Athanasius dum esset Romæ, scripsit Latine Symbolum—et recitavit coram Pontifice et ei assidentibus, anno 340, ut scribit Baronius; et est illud idem, non mutatum, legique solum in Ecclesia, ante annos nongentos sexaginta. Vide Annales ad Annum prædictum. Barthol. Gavant. Commentar. in Rubric. Breviarii Romani, p. 106.

<sup>a</sup> Athanasius Symbolum scribit Romæ, et Concilio offert; non tamen publicatur, nisi post 300 ferme annos in Concilio Toletano. Helvic. Theatr. Hist. ad an. 339.

<sup>b</sup> Imo et jam ab anno 633 aliqua ex isto Symbolo descripta mihi videntur

in ea Confessione Fidei, quæ edita est a Concilio Toletano 4. habeturque Capit. 1. ejusdem. Quesnel, Dissert. xiv. p. 731.

<sup>c</sup> Natal. Alexand. tom. iv. p. 109.

<sup>d</sup> Montfaucon. Diatrib. p. 720.

<sup>e</sup> Tillemont, Mémoires, tom. viii. p. 670.

<sup>f</sup> Oudin. Comment. de Script. Eccl. p. 348.

<sup>g</sup> Verum ne majoris quidem momenti sunt verba illa, quæ in Concilii Toletani quarti professione leguntur: quamvis enim phrases nonnullæ ibidem inveniuntur Symboli phrasibus oppido similes, attamen ejusmodi non sunt ut iis patribus Symbolum jam innotuisse demonstrent. Quin ex eodem Concilio has formulas quis delibasse videri potest, ut inde Symbolum istud conflaret. Muratorii Anecd. Ambros. tom. ii. p. 223.

Creed was known and approved in Spain as early as 633 : and it is observable how exactly this falls in with the time, when the Spanish churches are supposed to have received the Gallican Offices, according to Mabillon's account. Wherefore it is extremely probable, that about this time they received this Creed from the Gallican churches ; received it as an orthodox formulary, and an approved rule of faith. As to their taking it into their public Service and Psalmody, I pretend not to set it so high, having no proof that they did receive it, in that sense, so early : but as soon as the Gallican churches made it a part of their Psalmody, we may reasonably think that the Spanish did so too ; or within a very short time after.

GERMANY.

787. Next to France and Spain, we may mention Germany ; not only because of their nearness of situation to France, but also because of their mutual intercourse and affinity with each other. This Creed, very probably, was received in some parts of Germany, soon after it obtained in the Gallican Church. The mutual intercourse of the German and Gallican Churches makes it probable : and the ancient manuscript of the Creed found at Treves, or Triers, in Germany, may persuade the same thing. Our positive evidence is however clear and certain for the reception of the Creed, as early as 870, being then translated by Otfridus into the German or Teutonic language. Ansharius's Instructions to his Clergy (above mentioned) will afford an argument for the reception of this Creed in Germany, from the time of his holding the see of Hamburg, or from 830 : and it was received at Basil, as we learn from Hatto, Bishop of the place, before 820. Indeed, I have above referred Basil to France, considering how it stood in Hatto's time, and that it was part of ancient Gaul : but then it was upon the confines of Germany, and has in later times been reckoned to it ; and we have good reason to think that the customs of the German churches in the ninth century were nearly the same with those of the Church of Basil in 820. What passed in the council of Frankfort (if I mistake not in my construction of it) may warrant the carrying it up as high as 794. And it was seven years before that, namely in the year 787<sup>h</sup>, that Pope Adrian sent to St. Willehad, Bishop of Breme, the famous Psalter of Charles the Great<sup>i</sup>, with this Creed in it, the same that I have spoken of above. No wonder therefore that Ansharius and Rembertus, afterwards Archbishops of Hamburg and Breme, so very highly valued this Creed. The particular regard paid to this Creed by Charles the Great, in the year 772, may plead perhaps in favour of a more early date: at least, no doubt can be made but as soon as he came to be emperor, if not a great deal sooner, the German churches (as well as the Gallican before) admitted this Creed, even into their public Offices. It is of this time that an anonymous author cited above, in a tract directed to Charlemagne, then Emperor, says, that this Creed was "professed by the universal Church." We cannot however be mistaken in setting the reception of it in Germany, as high as the year 787. So high may pass for certain fact: and there is great probability for the running it up many years higher.

<sup>b</sup> Mabill. Act. Sanct. sæc. iii. part. 2. p. 409.

ENGLAND.

800. As to our own country, we have clear and positive proof of the Creed's being sung alternately in our churches in the tenth century, when Abbo of Fleury, an ear-witness of it, was here; and when the Saxon versions, still extant, were of standing use for the instruction and benefit both of Clergy and people. These evidences alone will prove the reception of this Creed in England to have been as early as 950 or 930, or the time of Athelstan, whose Latin Psalter, with the Creed in it, remains to this day. The age of the manuscript versions will warrant us thus far: but, possibly, if those versions were thoroughly examined by a critic in the Saxon, it might appear that the version or versions were some years older than the manuscripts. But it may be worth the observing further, that among several other ancient professions of faith drawn up by our bishops of the Saxon times there is one of Denebert Bishop of Worcester, presented to Archbishop Athelard in the year 799, which contains in it a considerable part of the Athanasian

<sup>i</sup> Codex iste———in bibliotheca cubiculari summi pontificis Hadriani I. permansit usque ad annum DCCLXXXVIII. quo S. Willehadus ab eodem, cum consensu Caroli M. primus Episcopus Bremensis declaratus est. Tunc videlicet P. P. Hadrianus eundem illum codicem Psalterii, quem ipse in principio pontificatus sui tanquam munus gratulatorium a Carolo Magno acceperat, eadem ratione donavit S. Willehado, ut ille, in novo Episcopatu suo, frueretur usu sacri istius muneris. Lambec. Catal. Bibl. Vindob. lib. ii. cap. 5. p. 297.

Creed<sup>k</sup>. From whence may be concluded, that this formulary was well known here and well approved, among the learned at least, in those times. Wherefore, upon the whole, and all circumstances considered, I may presume to name the year 800, or thereabout, for the reception of this Creed in England. Further inquiries may perhaps carry it up higher: but it cannot reasonably be brought lower, and so there I leave it.

ITALY.

880. We learn from Ratherius, above cited, that this Creed was in common use in some parts of Italy, particularly in the diocese of Verona in Low Lombardy, in his time; that is, about 960. He then speaks of it as a man would do of a formulary that had been customary amongst them, and of long standing. He exhorts his clergy to make themselves masters of the three Creeds, Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian; without the least intimation of the last of them being newly introduced. I incline to think that from the time that Lombardy became a province of the French under Charles the Great, (about the year 774,) this Creed obtained there by means of that prince, who had so great a value for it, and whose custom it was to disperse it abroad wherever he had any power or influence. He presented it to the pope himself in 772: he delivered it, about the same time, or before, to the monks of Mount Olivet in Jerusalem, of his foundation. And it appears to have been with his consent, or perhaps at his request, that pope Adrian conveyed it to Willehad, the first Bishop of Breme, in 787. These circumstances make it highly probable, that the same Charles the Great introduced this Creed into Lombardy soon after his conquest of it. And indeed nothing could be more serviceable at that time, in a country which had so long before been corrupted with Arianism. Add to this, that it appears highly probable that the Gallican Psalter was introduced into the churches of Italy soon after Lombardy became a province under the kings of France: and if their Psalter came in, no doubt but their Creed, then a part of their Psalter, came in with it. Cardinal Bona observes, and seems to wonder at it, that the Gallican Psalter obtained in most parts of Italy in the eleventh century<sup>1</sup>. He might very probably have set the date higher, as high perhaps, or very near, as the conquest of Lombardy by Charlemagne. Thus far at least we may reasonably judge, that those parts which were more immediately subject to the kings of France, Verona especially, one of the first cities taken, received the Gallican Psalter sooner than the rest. However, since I here go only upon probabilities, and have no positive proof of the precise time when either the Creed or the Psalter came in, and it might take up some years to introduce them, and settle them there, (new customs generally meeting with difficulties and opposition at the first,) these things considered, I am content to suppose the year 880 for the reception of this Creed in Italy; which is but eighty years higher than Ratherius, and is above one hundred years from the entire conquest of Lombardy by Charles the Great. There may be some reason to suspect that this Creed had been known in Italy, and received, at least in some of the monasteries there, near two hundred years before. The manuscript of Bobio, in Langobardick character, and written about the year 700, or sooner, will afford a very strong presumption of it. And if we consider how from the year 637, in the time of Rotharis, one of the Lombard kings of Italy, there had been a constant struggle between the Catholics and Arians, and a succession of bishops on both sides kept up, in almost every city of his dominions, for many years together; I say, from these considerations, one might reasonably presume that the Catholics had about that time procured this Creed, together with Bachiarii Fides, and Gennadius's tract, out of the Gallican parts, to arm themselves the better against the spreading heresy. But as this does not amount to a public reception of it, nor is the fact so clear as not to be liable to dispute, I pretend not to insist upon it.

<sup>k</sup> Orthodoxam, Catholicam Apostolicam Fidem, sicut didici, paucis exponam verbis, quia scriptum est, Quicumque vult salvus esse—&c. Profess. Deneberti Ep. Wigorn. apud Text. Roff. p. 252.

ROME.

930. Rome is of distinct consideration from the other parts of Italy, and was always more desirous of imposing her own Offices upon other churches, than of receiving any from them. The Filioque, in the Constantinopolitan Creed, had been long admitted into all the other western churches before Rome would accept it; which was not (at least it does not appear that it was) till the middle of the eleventh century, or about 1050. The custom of reciting the Nicene, or Constantinopolitan Creed, in the Communion Service, had prevailed in Spain, France, and Germany, for several centuries; and was at length but hardly admitted at Rome in the year 1014. It was thought civil enough of the Popes of Rome to allow the other western churches to vary from the Roman customs in any thing: and those other churches could not enjoy that liberty and privilege in quiet, without complying with the Roman Offices in most things besides. The use of the Athanasian Creed was one of those things wherein they were beforehand with the Church of Rome, and in which they were indulged; as was also the use of the Gallican Psalter, which the western churches in general were allowed<sup>m</sup> to have, while the Romans were tenacious of their own. But though the Romans retained their own Psalter all the way down to the middle of the sixteenth century; yet they had long before borrowed this Creed from the Gallican, and received it into their Offices. This is certain fact; but as to the precise time when it was first done, it may not be easy to determine. It was, without all question, before Thomas Aquinas's day; who tells us, (as above cited,) that this Creed was "received by the authority of "the Pope:" I wish he had told us what Pope. That it was not received into the Roman Offices so soon as the year 809 may be probably argued from a case that then happened, which has been hinted above. The Latin monks of Mount Olivet, (founded by Charles the Great,) in their Apologetical Letter to Pope Leo III, made the best defence they were able of their own practice in their public professing that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Son. They pleaded the open acknowledgment of the same doctrine in Charles the Great's own chapel; and that the same doctrine had been taught them, in St. Gregory's Homilies, and in the Rule of St. Benedict, and in the Athanasian Creed, and in a Dialogue given them by Pope Leo himself<sup>n</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> Bona, Rerum Liturg. lib. ii. c. 3. p. 506.

<sup>m</sup> Alexander IV. in sua Constitutione quæ est sexta in Bullario ordinis Eremitarum Sancti Augustini, mandat Priori Generali et reliquis fratribus in Tuscia, ut recitent Officium juxta morem Romanæ Ecclesiæ, excepto Psalterio. Bona, Rer. Liturg. lib. ii. c. 3. p. 506.

Sic quoque S. Franciscus, ut testatur Frassenius (Disqu. Bibl. c. vi. s. 1.) illius ordinis frater, in regula suorum præcipit: Clerici faciant divinum Officium secundum ordinem sancte Romanæ Ecclesiæ, excepto Psalterio. Hod. de Text. Bibl. p. 383. Vid. etiam supra p. 134.

<sup>n</sup> Benignissime pater, dum essem ego Leo, servus vester, ad sancta vestigia vestra, et ad pia vestigia Domni Karoli, piissimi Imperatoris, filii que vestri, audivimus in capella ejus dici in Symbolo Fidei, qui ex Patre Filioque procedit. Et in Homilia S. Gregorii, quam nobis filius vester Dom-

Now, had the Athanasian Creed been at that time recited in the public Offices at Rome, those monks who were so particular in every little circumstance pleadable in their favour, could not have failed (especially upon their mentioning the Athanasian Creed) to have pleaded a thing so notorious, and which would have given the greatest countenance and authority possible to them and their doctrine; and must have been of the greatest weight and force with Pope Leo, to whom they were writing, and whose protection they were then seeking, and humbly imploring. From hence then one may reasonably infer, that this Creed was not received into the Roman Offices so early as the year 809. Let us now inquire whether we can fix upon any later time for its coming in.

Genebrard testifies, that in the oldest Roman Breviaries he could meet with or hear of, this Creed always made a part of the Service<sup>o</sup>. But this is too general, nor can we be certain how ancient those oldest Breviaries were, nor whether they belonged to the Roman Church, strictly so called, or to other western churches. And indeed I know not how we can come to any certainty in this matter, unless it be by examining into the Roman Psalters which have this Creed in them. Whenever the Creed came into the Roman Psalters, we may justly conclude, that at the same time it came into the Roman Offices. We have in our public library at Cambridge a Roman Psalter, written for the use of the Church of Canterbury, (as our judicious Mr. Wanley reasonably conjectures<sup>p</sup>.) and about the time of the Conquest, or a little before, suppose 1060. The church of Canterbury more especially used the Roman Psalter, as hath been observed above, and was in all things conformable, of old time, to the Roman Offices. Now if this Creed, which had long before been introduced into the Gallican Psalters, did at nus Karolus Imperator dedit, in parabola Octavarum Paschæ, ubi dixit: Sed ejus missio ipsa processio est, qui de Patre procedit et Filio. Et in Regula S. Benedicti, quam nobis dedit filius vester Dominus Karolus,—et in Dialogo quem nobis vestra sanctitas dare dignata est, similiter dicit. Et in Fide S. Athanasii eodem modo dicit. Epist. Monach. Montis Olivet. apud Le Quien, Damasc. Dissert. Præv. p. 7.

<sup>o</sup> In vetustissimis Romanæ Ecclesiæ

ὁρολογίαις (hæc nunc vocamus Breviaria) sub Athanasii nomine ejus ad primam recitatio usu recepta est. Genebr. in Symb. Athanas. p. 3.

<sup>p</sup> Notandum vero in Litania extare hæc verba: Ut archiepiscopum nostrum, et omnem congregationem illi commissam, in sancta religione conservare digneris, te rogamus: quibus pene inducor ut credam hunc cod. olim pertinuisse ad ecclesiam Christi Salvatoris Cantuariæ. Wanleyi Catal. p. 152.

this time obtain in the Roman also ; it is obvious to conclude, that it at the same time made a part of the Roman Offices, even at Rome itself, as well as Canterbury, since one was conformable to the other. This argument may carry us up some years higher : for there is another, an older Roman Psalter, taken notice of above, which has this Creed in it ; written about the year 930, in the time of King Athelstan. It is said to have belonged formerly to Archbishop Cranmer. Perhaps this also might have been written for the use of the Church of Canterbury : I know of no Church, amongst us, which at that time used the Roman Psalter, but the Church of Canterbury. However, it is highly improbable that any church which complied so far with Rome, as to use the Roman Psalter, should take this Creed into that Psalter before such time as Rome itself had done the same thing. Upon the strength of this argument, though it be not demonstrative, but probable only, (such as the case will admit of, and such as may very well pass till we can fix upon something more certain,) I say upon the strength of this, I incline to date the reception of this Creed at Rome from the tenth century, and the beginning of it, about the year 930. From this time forwards, I presume, the Athanasian Creed has been honoured with a public recital, among the other sacred Hymns and Church Offices, all over the west. The way has been to recite it at the prime, or first hour, (one o'clock in the Latin account, with us seven in the morning,) every Lord's day<sup>q</sup>; and in some places every day<sup>r</sup>. But as the custom of making it only a part of the Sunday Service is the most ancient, so has it likewise been the most general and prevailing; and is at this day the common and constant usage of the churches within the Roman communion. And let this suffice so far as concerns the western churches.

Of the GREEK and ORIENTAL CHURCHES.

AS to the Greek, or Oriental Churches, I reserved this place for them, that I might not entirely omit them. It has been questioned, whether any of them ever received this Creed at all.

<sup>q</sup> Die Dominico ad primam recitur. Hatt. Basil. A. D. 820.

Per omnes occidentis ecclesias Dominicis semper diebus psallitur—in cunctis ecclesiis publice cani præcepta. Mansel. Calec. Bibl. PP. tom. xxvi. P. 414.

<sup>r</sup> Fidem, Quicumque vult, quotidie

ad primam iterat. Honor. August. Ad primam dicunt quotidie Symbolum Athanasii. Bona de Carthusianis, p. 897. Psalmod.

Ad primam—quotidie subditur Symbolum Athanasii. Bona de Ambrosianis, p. 900. Divin. Psalmod.

Vossius<sup>a</sup> seems to have thought that they never have: and so also Combefisius<sup>t</sup>. And Dr. Smith, in his account of the Greek Church, is positive that "as to the Creed of Athanasius, the Greeks are wholly strangers to it."<sup>u</sup>

Nevertheless, I find some very considerable men of a contrary persuasion, and not Romanists only, as Baronius, Spondanus<sup>x</sup>, Muratorius<sup>y</sup>, Renaudot<sup>z</sup>, and others, but Protestants also; as particularly Gundling, whose words I have put into the margin<sup>a</sup>. We may observe however, that thus far is agreed on all hands, that this Creed is not received in all the Greek churches; and if it is in any, yet it is there differently read in the article of procession. It is not pretended that any of the African churches, Alexandrian, Nubian, or Ethiopian, (which are, most of them, of the Jacobite or Eutyhian sect,) have received it. So far from it, that they have not (at least the Ethiopian or Abassine churches have not) so much as the Apostles' Creed amongst them, if we may believe Ludolphus<sup>b</sup>: so little are they acquainted with the Latin forms or confessions. Nor is it pretended that the more eastern Christians, belonging to the Patriarchates of Antioch and Jerusalem, have any acquaintance with the Athanasian Creed: no not the Maronites, though they

<sup>a</sup> Nec qui nostra ætate Patriarcha Alexandrinus, et Præses Constantinopoleos fuit, pro germano illud Symbolum habuit. Sic enim Meletius litteris suis Constantinopoli, anno 1597, ad Johannem Douzam, Nordovicem datis, et a filio Georgio Douza editis. "Athanasio falso adscriptum Symbolum, cum appendice illa Romanorum " Pontificum adulteratum, luce lucidius contestamur." Voss. de Trib. Symb. Dissert. ii. c. 20. p. 521.

<sup>t</sup> Combef. not. ad Calec. p. 297. et notatione 48 in vitam Basilii Pseudo-Amphiloch.—Symbolum Athanasii Græci ut ejus non recipiunt.

<sup>u</sup> Smith, Account &c. p. 106.

<sup>x</sup> Spondanus epitomizing the words of Baronius, as I find quoted by Tentzelius, p. 152.

Cum autem e Romanæ Ecclesiæ antiquis monumentis, veluti eruderatum emersit in lucem, tum a Latinis omnibus, tum a Græcis æque susceptum est: non ab Ecclesia Constantinopolitana tantum, sed Serviana, Bulgarica, Russica, Moscovitica, et aliis; licet ab eis dempta inde pars illa fuerit, qua Spiritum Sanctum a Patre Filioque procedere expressum habetur.

<sup>y</sup> Re vera, non Ecclesia tantum Constantinopolitana, sed Serviana, Bulgarica, Russica, Moscovitica, aliæque ritui Græco addictæ, etsi Athanasiano Symbolo in sacris Liturgiis utuntur, hanc tamen particulam, et Filio, inde excludere. Murator. tom. ii. p. 227.

<sup>z</sup> Quod dicitur Domini Filius assumpsisse hominem &c. rectum est, Symbolo quod Athanasius dicitur, et a Græcis Latinisque recipitur, conforme. Renaud. Orient. Liturg. vol. ii. p. 643.

<sup>a</sup> Mirari quis possit cur Græci processionem Spiritus Sancti a Filio negent, additionem ad Symbolum Nicænum tam ægre ferant, cum tamen Symbolum Athanasii recipiant. Gundling. Not. ad Eustrat. &c. p. 68.

<sup>b</sup> Ludolph. Histor. Æthiop. lib. iii. c. 5. Symbolo Fidei Catholicæ Nicæno communiter utuntur—illo quo nos utimur, uti cæteri orientales, carent: haud levi indicio Apostolos illius auctores non esse.

formerly submitted to the see of Rome, and are still supposed to hold communion therewith, and to acknowledge the Pope for their head. All that is pretended, with respect to this Creed, is, that the churches of Constantinople, Servia, Bulgaria, Russia, and Muscovy, acknowledge it as Athanasius's, or make use of it in their common and sacred Offices. And for proof of this, it has been usual to appeal to a passage of Cazanovius, a Polish knight, in a letter of his to Calvin: which letter I have not seen, but find quoted both by Genebrard<sup>c</sup> and Vossius<sup>d</sup>, men of opposite principles, and therefore the more safely to be relied on where they agree. But what does Cazanovius confess? That the Greek, Servian, Russian, and Muscovite churches acknowledge the Athanasian Creed as Athanasius's; only curtailed (or, as they would say, corrected) as to the point of the procession. A confession from a Socinian adversary, in this case, is of some weight; and especially if it can be enforced by any corroborating evidence. Let us see then what may be further learned concerning the several churches here named, and the reception of this Creed in them. I may take them one by one.

1. To begin with Muscovy, where the matter of fact seems to be most fully attested of any. In the account given of the Lord Carlisle's embassy from King Charles II. to the great Duke of Muscovy, in the year 1663<sup>e</sup>, I meet with this passage, relating to the Muscovites, and their divine Service: "The whole Service is performed by reading of certain Psalms, or chapters in the Bible: sometimes the Priest adds Athanasius's Creed, or sings certain hymns, and St. Chrysostom's Homily." In another treatise entitled, Of the Ancient and Modern Religion of the Muscovites, written in French, and printed at Cologne 1698, and since translated into English, there is this account of the Muscovites: that "they receive the Creed of the Apostles, and that of Nice and Athanasius<sup>f</sup>." These two testimonies are undoubtedly sufficient, so far as concerns Muscovy. Now the non in Latina solum Ecclesia, sed etiam in Constantinopolitana, Serviana, Bulgarica, Moscovitica. Voss. de Symb. Diss. ii. c. 1. p. 516.

<sup>c</sup> Si Athanasii est, cujusnam illud erit quod nunc Græcorum, Serviorum, Russorum, et Moscorum ecclesiæ sub ejusdem Athanasii titulo retinent, ac pro genuino agnoscunt? Cazanov. ad Calvin. Epist. apud Genebr. de Symbol. Athanas. p. 7.

<sup>d</sup> Cazanovius sarmata—etsi multum ei hoc Symbolum displiceat, agnoscit tamen Athanasianum vocari,

<sup>e</sup> Harris's Complete Collection, &c. vol. ii. p. 181. See also the Duke of Holstein's Travels, ibid. p. 36.

<sup>f</sup> Harris's Collection of Travels, vol. ii. p. 238. See also p. 240, 241.

Muscovites received their religion and their orders from the Patriarch of Constantinople, about the tenth century, or beginning of the eleventh: and their receiving of this Creed will be a presumptive argument in favour of its reception at Constantinople also, if there be no evident reason against it. That the Muscovites did not receive the Creed from the Latins, but from the Greeks, is very plain, because their copies of the Creed are without the article of the procession from the Son <sup>ε</sup>. For they pretend that the Latins have interpolated the Creed, appealing to their own uncorrupted copies; and they blame the Latins, further, for inserting the Filioque into the Nicene <sup>h</sup>. From what hath been said, it appears to be certain fact, that the Muscovites receive the Athanasian Creed: how long they have had it, or how far short of seven hundred years, (reckoning from the time that Christianity was received, or restored amongst them,) I cannot say. I should observe, that the Muscovites always perform their Service in their own vulgar tongue, as is allowed on all hands <sup>i</sup>: since then the Athanasian Creed is a part of their Service, they must have had a version of it in the Muscovite language, which is a dialect of the Slavonian. Wherefore this also, after our proof of the thing, may now be added to the other versions above mentioned.

2. Russia, as distinguished from Muscovy, must mean Russia Minor, or the Black Russia, a province of Poland. As many as there follow the Greek rites are of the same account with the Muscovites before spoken of: and therefore what has been said of the former, with respect to the use of the Athanasian Creed, will be applicable to these also; and so I need not be more particular about them. The Patriarch of Muscovy ordains their Archbishop, who is therefore subject to him, and follows the same rites and customs: and their language is also a dialect of the Slavonian, like the other.

<sup>ε</sup> Vid. Tentzel. Judic. Erudit. p. 151.

<sup>h</sup> See Harris, ibid. p. 240.

<sup>i</sup> In cæteris autem regionibus, videlicet in Servia, Mysia, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Russia Minori regi Poloniæ subdita, in Volhnia, Podolia, et parte quadam Lituaniæ, aliisque finitimis provinciis, ritu Græco divinum peragitur officium, translatis Græcorum typicis in Slavonicam linguam. Eosdem Græcos ritus, eadem lingua, servant Muscovitæ, quorum regio Russia

Major, seu Roxolania nuncupatur &c. Bona de Divin. Psalm. cap. xviii. sect. 17. p. 911. Vid. etiam Usser. Histor. Dogmat. p. 246.

Armeni suo quoque nativo sermone dudum sacra celebrant, tum qui orthodoxam fidem retinuerunt, tum Jacobitæ, ut Muscovitæ seu Rutheni, Constantinopolitanæ sedi subjecti, Russo; et alii quidam de quibus pauca scimus. Renaudot. Liturg. Orient. vol. i. Dissertat. 6. p. 43.

3. Servia, now a large province of the Turkish empire, part of Northern Turkey in Europe, first received Christianity about the year 860, by the means of Cyrill and Methodius, who are said to have invented the Slavonian letters, and to have translated the Scriptures into the Slavonian tongue. Cyrill was a Greek, and came from Constantinople: and Methodius was a Greek too, both sent by the Greek emperor to convert the country; which therefore became instructed in the Greek rites and religion. It is not improbable that they should have the Athanasian Creed, as well as the Muscovites and Russians; or perhaps before them, being converted sooner: and they also must have received it from the Greeks, and not from the Latins, because of their varying, in the article of the procession, from the western churches.

4. Bulgaria is likewise part of Turkey in Europe, and has been so from the year 1396. Christianity was planted there in the year 845. There were of old great disputes between the two Bishops of Rome and Constantinople, upon the question to whose Patriarchate the Bulgarians did of right belong. In conclusion, about the year 870, the Greek Patriarch prevailed over the Roman, by the interest of the then Emperor of Constantinople. The Bulgarians of consequence fell to the share of the Greek Church, and so have been educated in their rites and customs. Their language is a dialect of the Slavonian, in which they perform their sacred Offices: and therefore, if they make use of the Athanasian Creed, they must be supposed to have it in their own vulgar tongue. I have no particular evidence of their using it, beyond what has been mentioned from Cazanovius and the Romish writers; which yet seems to be sufficient, since it has been fully proved that it is used in Muscovy, and in Russia, to whom the Bulgarians are neighbours, and with whom they conform in their other religious rites derived from the same fountain, namely, the Constantinopolitan Greeks.

5. It remains then that we consider the fact in respect of Constantinople itself, and the Greek church there: for this also, as we have seen, has been named with others, as receiving the Athanasian Creed. Genebrard is positive in it, and gives us the very Creed itself, which the Constantinopolitans, as he says, use and recite<sup>k</sup>. He wrote in the year 1569. The truth of his report is very much doubted, because the form, which he exhibits, acknowledges the procession from the Son, which the Constantinopolitans admit not: and even those who, as before seen, assert or allow that they receive this Creed, yet at the same time intimate that it is not the entire Creed, but curtailed in that article. However, Genebrard might be in the right, as to the main thing, that the Constantinopolitans do receive the Creed, though mistaken in the particular form: or possibly some Latinizing Greeks at Constantinople might have one form, and the rest another, and thus all will be well. But let us inquire what further evidence there is of this Creed's having been ever received at Constantinople, and by the Greeks properly so called. An argument thereof may be drawn from the Greek copies that vary from the Latin, in the article of procession. For who should draw up and curtail the Greek copies but the Greeks? And why should they be at the trouble of correcting (as they will call it) the Creed, if they did not receive it? A second argument may be drawn from the Creed's being found in the Horologia belonging to the Greeks; that is, in their Breviaries, (as we should call them,) their books of Service for the canonical hours. How should the Creed come in there, unless the Greeks received it into their sacred Offices? As to the fact, Bishop Usher's copy found in such a Breviary is a sufficient evidence: and it is plain from the copy itself, that it was no Latinizing Greek that made it, or used it; since the procession from the Son is struck out. Further, this Horologion belonged to a monk of Constantinople<sup>1</sup>; which argues the reception of the Creed in that very city: and, as a token of their esteem of it and value for it, it is ascribed to the Nicene Council itself, which all the Greeks receive and respect with the greatest veneration. From hence then it is plain, that the Constantinopolitan Greeks (some of them at least) receive, or have received this Creed, but with some alterations proper to their peculiar tenets in opposition to the Latins. This fact of the Constantinopolitans their receiving this Creed might be further proved from the Confession of Metrophanes Critopulus, (in the year 1620, published in 1667<sup>m</sup>,) who admits the Creed, and looks upon it as owing to a very particular providence, that the Greek copies (as he supposes) have been preserved pure and entire, while the Latin ones have been corrupted or interpolated. We find by Nicolaus Hydruntinus, above cited, that such had been the general persuasion of the Greeks, five hundred years upwards, in relation to this Creed; not rejecting the Creed, but the Latin interpolation only, as they take it to be.

<sup>k</sup> Superius Symbolum, Athanasii stantinopolitani sic Græce legunt, et recitant. Genebrard. in Symb. Athan. p. 14.

<sup>1</sup> In Thecaræ, Constantinopolitani monachi, Græcorum Hymnorum Horologio (a Ravió nostro ex oriente huc advecto) Symbolum hoc, eo quo post finem hujus diatribæ cernitur interpolatum modo, Nicænæ Synodo adscriptum—reperi &c. Usser. de

Symb. p. 1.

<sup>m</sup> Metrophanis Critopuli, Protosyngeli Constantinopolitani ὁμολογία τῆς ἀνατολικῆς ἐκκλησίας edit. Helmstad. in 4to a Joann. Horneio: vid. cap. i. p. 18. apud Tentzel. p. 150.

Which when I consider, reflecting withal how the Muscovites, Russians, &c. (who derived their religion from the Greeks since the ninth century,) have all come into this Creed, and that no good account has been given of such agreement, except it be that they all received the same form when they first received their religion; I say, when I consider and compare these things together, it cannot but give me a suspicion, that this Creed had been received by the Greeks soon after their first disputes with the Latins about the procession; only they took care to strike out a part of it, hoping to solve all by charging the Latins with interpolation. Or possibly, the Latin Patriarchs of Constantinople, between the years 1205 and 1260, might first introduce the Creed there. They made use of it, as it seems, then and there in their Offices for the instruction of catechumens; as I learn from a Pontifical of the church of Constantinople, about five hundred years old, published in part by Martene, who gives an account of it<sup>n</sup>, and also an extract of the Office relating to catechumens, which I have transcribed<sup>o</sup> into the bottom of the page. It is not improbable that the use of the Creed at Constantinople might first come in such a way: and when it had prevailed there for forty or fifty years, the returning Greeks might think it not improper to continue its use, only taking out the article which concerns the procession.

However this be, one thing is certain, and, I think, hath been <sup>n</sup> Constantinopolitanæ Ecclesiæ Pontificale vetus, ad Latinos ritus accommodatum, cujus character ad annos 500 accedit; scriptum proinde eo tempore quo urbe a Gallis occupata, Latinis ritibus serviebat. Ex bibliotheca R. R. P. P. prædicatorum majoris conventus Parisiensis. Martene Syllab. Ritual.

<sup>o</sup> Interrogatio. Fides quid tibi præstat? R. Vitam æternam. Ait ei sa-

cerdos—Fides autem est, ut unum Deum in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in Unitate venereris, neque confundendo Personas, neque substantiam separando. Alia est enim Persona Patris, alia Filii, alia Spiritus Sancti: sed horum trium una est, et non nisi una Divinitas. Exeat ergo de te spiritus malignus &c. Martene de Antiq. Eccl. Ritualibus, p. 44, 45.

proved abundantly, that the professed Greeks, even under the Patriarch of Constantinople, have in former times received and still do receive this Creed, with such alterations or corrections as are proper to their principles: and so I understand Dr. Covell<sup>p</sup>, where he says, speaking of what is done amongst the Greeks, that "Athanasius's Creed is owned as corrupted;" that is, with such corruptions as the Greeks have made to it. Upon the whole, therefore, I cannot but close in with those many learned Romanists who have affirmed, and still do affirm, that this Creed is received both by Greeks and Latins. If the expression be thought too general, since it is certain that the Creed is rejected by innumerable Greeks, or more properly Orientalists, in Asia and Africa; as the Cophtes, and Nubians, and Abassines, and Maronites, Armenians, Nestorians, &c., I say, if this be objected, it is to be considered, that the Romanists, under the name of Greeks, mean generally the orthodox Greeks only, the Melchite Greeks, or as many as hold communion with the Patriarch of Constantinople; making no account of the rest, as being by their heresies cut off from the Church, and therefore of little or no consideration<sup>q</sup>. Now, in this sense, it is excusable enough to say, that the Creed is received both by Greeks and Latins.

To sum up what hath been said of the reception of this Creed: from the foregoing account it appears that its reception has been both general and ancient. It hath been received by Greeks and Latins all over Europe: and if it hath been little known among the African and Asian churches, the like may be said of the Apostles' Creed, which hath not been admitted, scarce known, in Africa, and but little in Asia<sup>r</sup>, except among the Armenians, <sup>p</sup> Covell, Account of the Greek Church, præf. p. 9. to which I may add a remark of the learned Dr. Hickee, that "this Creed, though of "an uncertain author, was, for its "excellent composure, received into "the Greek and Latin Churches." Hickee's Serm. vol. ii. p. 235.

<sup>q</sup> Attamen hoc ævi sub Orientalis Ecclesiæ nomine diversarum nationum orientalium ecclesiæ veniunt; quæ licet a Græca suam cognoscant originem, propter tamen variarum hæresium colluviem et alia præter mores Christianos pessima introducta a Græca longissime absunt. Græci

enim illius religionis homines, tanquam a se disjunctos, atque improbissimos, arcent, et detestantur. Leo Allat. de perpet. Consens. Eccl. Occid. et Orient. p. 9.

<sup>r</sup> Illo quo nos utimur, uti cæteri orientales, carent (Habessini) haud levi indicio, Apostolos illius autores non esse, quamvis doctrinæ ratione Apostolicum recte vocetur. Ludolph. Hist. Æthiop. lib. iii. c. 5. n. 19. Ἡμεῖς οὐτε ἔχομεν οὐτε εἶδομεν σύμβολον τῶν Ἀποστόλων. Marc. Ephesius in Concil. Florent. ann. 1439. Sylop. Syurop. Hist. sect. vi. c. 6. p. 150.

Symbolum nec ab Apostolis, nec a who are said to receive it<sup>a</sup>. So that, for generality of reception, the Athanasian Creed may vie with any, except the Nicene, or Constantinopolitan, the only general Creed common to all the churches. As to the antiquity of its reception into the sacred Offices, this Creed has been received in several countries, France, Germany, England, Italy, and Rome itself, as soon, or sooner than the Nicene; which is a high commendation of it, as gaining ground by its own intrinsic worth, and without the authority of any general council to enforce it. And there is this thing further to be said for it, that while the Nicene and Apostles' Creeds have been growing up to their present perfection in a course of years, or centuries of years, and not completed till about the year 600, this Creed was made and perfected at once, and is more ancient, if considered as an entire form, than either of the other; having received its full perfection, while the others wanted theirs. No considerable additions or defalcations have been made to it (it has needed none) since its first compiling, till of late years, and in the Greek Church only; which yet are so far from correcting or amending the form, that they have rendered it so much the less perfect: and the only way of restoring it to its perfection is to restore it to what it was at the first. But I pass on.

CHAP. VII.

Of the Time when, and Place where, the Creed was composed.

HAVING observed when and where this Creed hath been received, we may now ascend higher, and consider when and where it was made. Our inquiries here will be in some measure dark and conjectural; strong probabilities will perhaps be as much as we can reach to: which made it the more necessary for me to begin, as I have, at the lower end, where things are more plain and clear, in hopes to borrow some light to conduct our searches into what remains still dark and obscure. Whatever we have to advance in this chapter must rest upon two things. 1. Upon external testimony from ancient citations, manuscripts, comments, versions, and the like, such as have been previously laid down. 2. Upon the internal characters of the Creed.

Synodo ulla generali factum est: sia Romana. Suicer. Thesaur. p. 1093.
adhæc, nec in Græc. nec in Orient. <sup>o</sup> Sir Paul Ricaut, Present State of ullis Ecclesiis obtinuit, sed in Eccle- the Greek Church, p. 409.

1. To begin with the external evidence ; our ancient testimonies, above recited, carry up the antiquity of the Creed as high as the year 670, if the first of them be admitted for genuine ; as it reasonably may, notwithstanding some objections. Our manuscripts, now extant, will bring us no higher than 700 ; but such as have been known to be extant may reach up to 660, or even 600. This must be thought very considerable to as many as know how great a rarity a manuscript of eleven hundred, or of a thousand years date is ; and how few books or tracts there are that can boast of manuscripts of such antiquity. The injuries of time, of dust, and of moths, and above all, the ravages of war and destructions of fire, have robbed us of the ancient monuments, and left us but very thin remains ; that a manuscript of the fourth century is a very great rarity, of the fifth there are very few, and even of the sixth not many. So that our want of manuscripts beyond the sixth or seventh century is no argument against the antiquity of the Creed, however certain an argument may be drawn from those we have, so far as they reach. But, beyond all this, we have a comment of the sixth century, of the year 570, or thereabout ; and this certain, and unquestionable : which may supersede all our disputes about the ancient testimonies or manuscripts of more doubtful authority. Here then we stand upon the foot of external evidence : the Creed was, about the year 570, considerable enough to be commented upon, like the Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed, and together with them. Here is certain evidence for the time specified ; and presumptive for much greater antiquity. For who can imagine that this Creed, or indeed any Creed, should grow into such repute of a sudden, and not rather in a course of years, and a long tract of time ? Should we allow one hundred or one hundred and fifty years for it, though it would be conjecture only, yet it would not be unreasonable or improbable conjecture. But we will let this matter rest here, and proceed to our other marks of direction.

2. The internal characters of the Creed. The Creed contains two principal doctrines ; one of the Trinity, and the other of the incarnation. Possibly from the manner wherein these doctrines are there laid down, or from the words whereby they are expressed, we may be able to fix the true date of the Creed, or very nearly at least ; certain however thus far, that it must be somewhere above 570.

From the doctrine of the incarnation, as expressed in this Creed, we may be confident that it is not earlier than the rise of the Apollinarian heresy, which appeared first about the year 360, and grew to a head about 370, or a little later. This Creed is so minute and particular against those heretics, (without naming them, as it is not the way of the Creed to name any,) obviating every cavil, and precluding every evasion or subterfuge, that one cannot suppose it to have been written before the depths of that heresy were perfectly seen into, and the whole secrets of the party disclosed: which we have no reason to think could be before the year 370, if so soon. This consideration alone is to me a sufficient confutation of those who pretend that Athanasius made this Creed either during his banishment at 'Treves, which ended in the year 338, or during his stay at Rome in the year 343; or that he presented it to Pope Julius, or Pope Liberius, who were both dead before the year 367.

I must add, that Epiphanius<sup>t</sup> marks the very time when the Creeds first began to be enlarged in opposition to the Apollinarian heresy; namely, the tenth year of Valentinian and Valens, and the sixth of Gratian, (it should be seventh,) which falls in with A. D. 373, the very last year of Athanasius's life, according to those that place his death the latest; some say he died a year or two sooner. If therefore he made this Creed at all, it must be about that time. And, indeed, were there no stronger objections against the antiquity of the Creed, or against its being made by Athanasius, than the common objection about the supposed condemnation of the Nestorian and Eutychian heresies; I should scarce think it at all improbable that Athanasius should be the author, admitting that he lived to the year 373. For Epiphanius's larger Creed, made about that time, appears to me as full and express against both those heresies, as the Athanasian can be supposed to be, and in some respects more so: and yet neither of those heresies were then in being, nor for many years after. But there are many other reasons which convince me that the Athanasian Creed must be placed lower than this time. I take Epiphanius's larger Creed to have been the first that enlarged the article of the incarnation, in opposition chiefly to the Apollinarians: and that Creed being drawn up, as Epiphanius expressly testifies, by the joint advice of all the orthodox bishops, and the whole Catholic Church, became a kind of rule, or model, for most of the Creeds that came after; among which I reckon the Athanasian.

<sup>t</sup> Epiphanius. Ancorat. c. 121. p. 123.

For, from the doctrine of the Trinity, as particularly and minutely drawn out in that Creed, it is to me very plain, that it must be some years later than the Creed of Epiphanius: which will evidently appear to any man who will but be at the pains to compare the two Creeds together.

One very observable particular is the manner of expressing the Unity by a singular adjective; unus æternus, unus immensus, &c. one eternal, one incomprehensible, &c. and the condemning the expression of tres æterni, tres immensi, &c. The Greeks never laid down any such rule of expression, never observed or followed it, but have sometimes run counter to it<sup>u</sup>; meaning indeed the very same thing, but not so expressing it. As to the Latins, we shall find none of them (at least I have not observed any) coming into that way of expression before Ambrose<sup>x</sup> and Faustinus<sup>y</sup>, (in the years 381 and 384,) who are the first that use it, and that but once, or very sparingly; not repeating and inculcating it, like the Athanasian Creed, nor leaving it destitute of explication. But St. Austin, afterwards, in his books of the Trinity, in the fifth especially, enlarges in justification of this rule of expression, and is full and copious upon it. His proofs, illustrations, example, and authority gave new strength and credit to this rule, which might then pass current, and become fit to appear, without further explication, in a Creed. For this reason, principally, I incline to think that this Creed was not made before St. Austin's books of the Trinity were public, (which was not till 416,) or not before 420, or thereabout, to allow some time for his works to be read, considered, approved, and to gain a general esteem. If it be said, that St. Austin might as well copy from this Creed as the Creed from him; I say, no: for the reason is different. Creeds and other the like formularies, which are to be put into every one's hands, and spread round

<sup>u</sup> Τριῶν ἀείρων ἄπειρον συμφυΐαν. Nazianz. in Bapt. Orat. xl. p. 668.

<sup>x</sup> Ergo sanctus Pater, sanctus Filius, sanctus et Spiritus Sanctus: sed non tres Sancti, quia unus est Deus sanctus, unus est Dominus. Una est enim vera sanctitas, sicut una est vera divinitas, una illa vera sanctitas naturalis. Ambros. de Sp. S. lib. iii. c. 16. p. 688.

<sup>y</sup> Sed ne duos omnipotentes intelligas,

præcavendum est: licet enim et Pater sit omnipotens, et Filius, tamen unus est omnipotens, sicut et unus est Deus: quia Patris et Filii eadem omnipotentia est, sicut et eadem deitas &c. — Ostenditur Unitas divinitatis in Patre et Filio, sicut et omnipotentia, et quicquid omnino divinae substantia est; hoc solo differens a Patre Filius, quod ille Pater est, et hic Filius. Faustin. de Trinit. c. 3. p. 123, 124.

about, ought not to contain any thing till it has been maturely weighed, long considered, and fully explained, as well as proved, and generally acknowledged by the churches of Christ. It is therefore much more reasonable to believe that St. Austin's writings should go first, and a general approbation of them in that particular; and then the Creed might conveniently follow, the way being now opened for it<sup>z</sup>.

I may observe the like of another article of the Athanasian Creed; namely, the procession from the Son: a doctrine entertained indeed both by Greeks and Latins, (as may appear by the testimonies commonly cited for that purpose,) and expressed frequently in sense, though rarely in terms; but such as came not to be much inculcated or insisted upon, till St. Austin undertook to assert and clear it, and to render it less liable to any dispute hereafter. For which reason the modern Greeks have looked upon him, in a manner, as the Father of that doctrine, being at least the principal man that brought it into vogue; however weakly they may pretend that he invented it. Thus far is certain, that his elaborate arguments, and solid proofs from Scripture, of the truth and of the importance of the doctrine, made it pass the more readily; and gave it credit and authority enough to have a place in a standing Creed or Confession: which is to me another argument of the Creed's being made after St. Austin's writings were well known in the world; in that place, at least, where the Creed was made. From the premises then I presume to infer, that the Athanasian Creed is not earlier than the year 420.

I will next endeavour to shew, that it cannot reasonably be set lower than the Eutychian times, nor later than the Council of Chalcedon, or than the year 451: and this also I shall attempt from the internal characters of the Creed, in like manner as above.

1. There is not a word in the Creed directly and plainly expressing two natures in Christ, or excluding one nature: which critical terms, against the error of Eutyches, are very rarely or never omitted in the Creeds drawn up in the Eutychian times, or the times immediately following. It is true, there is, in the Athanasian Creed, what may be sufficient to obviate or preclude the Eutychian heresy; as there is also in the larger Creed of Epiphanius, A. D. 373, and in the works of Nazianzen and Ambrose, about the year 380; and in Pelagius's Creed, A. D. 417; and in the writings of Austin, and Vincentius of Lirins, both before the year 435, many years before Eutyches. The strongest expression of the Creed against the Eutychians, and which has been most frequently urged in this case, is, Unus omnino, non confusione substantiæ, sed unitate Personæ: One altogether, not by confusion of substance, but by unity of Person: which yet is used by Vincentius<sup>a</sup>, and by Austin<sup>b</sup> too almost in terms. And if this be no reason for making either of those authors, or the tracts ascribed to them, later than Eutyches; why shall the like expression be of any force in respect to the Athanasian Creed? There is nothing in the Creed but what was common and ordinary in Catholic writers before the Eutychian times: but there are wanting those critical, distinguishing terms of two natures, or one nature, necessary to be inserted in the Creeds after these times, and never, or very rarely, omitted; which is one reason, and a very considerable one, for setting the date of the Creed higher than 451.

<sup>z</sup> Combefis, speaking to this point, seemed inclinable to suppose that St. Austin had borrowed from the Creed; but correcting himself afterwards, he supposes rather that the Creed borrowed from him. His words are these: "Ejus Symboli, seu Formulæ Fidei, antiquitatem produunt illi ejus versiculi quos totidem verbis habet August. in libris de Trinitate et alibi, quos non aliunde desumpsisse videtur quam ex eo Symbolo— "Quanquam nihil vetat dicere ipsum potius Symboli auctorem ex Augustino, aliisque P. P. sua consarcinasse." Combefis. not. in Man. Calce. Auctar. tom. ii. p. 296.

2. Another argument of the same thing, near akin to the former, is, that this Creed makes no mention of Christ being consubstantial with us in one nature, as he is consubstantial with the Father in another: a tenet expressly held by some of the ecclesiastical writers before Eutyches's time: but seldom or never omitted in the Creeds or Confessions about that time, or after. To be convinced of the truth both of this and of the preceding article, one need but look into the Creeds and Formularies of those times: namely, into that of Turribius of Spain in 447, of Flavian of Constantinople, as also of Pope Leo in 449, of the Chalcedon Council in 451, of Pope Felix III. in 485, and Anastasius II. in 496, and of the Church of Alexandria in the same year: as also into those of Pope Hormisdas, and the churches of Syria, and Fulgentius, and the Emperor Justinian, and Pope John II. and Pope Pelagius I. within the sixth century. In all which we shall find either express denial of one nature, or express affirming of two natures, or the doctrine of Christ's consubstantiality with us, or all three together, though they are all omitted in the Athanasian Creed. This is to me a second reason for setting our Creed higher than the Eutychian times.

<sup>a</sup> Unus autem, non—divinitatis et humanitatis confusione, sed—unitate Personæ. Vincent. Lirin. c. 19. p. 58.

<sup>b</sup> Idem Deus qui homo; non confusione naturæ, sed unitate Personæ. August. tom. v. p. 885.

3. I may argue this point further from a passage of the Athanasian Creed, running thus: "One, not by conversion of the " Godhead into flesh, but by taking of the manhood into God." This would not, I conceive, have run in these words, or in this manner, in the Eutychian times. For though the Eutychians were sometimes (as well as the Apollinarians often) charged with the doctrine of a conversion of the Godhead into flesh; yet nothing more certain than that the generality of them absolutely disowned and detested any such tenet, teaching rather a conversion of the manhood into God, just the reverse. And, by the way, I would here offer it to the learned reader to consider, whether we may not from hence give a probable account of a very noted variation observable in many of the most ancient copies of this Creed, which run thus; Unus autem, non conversione divinitatis in carne, sed assumptione humanitatis in Deo: where there is carne for carnem, and Deo for Deum. A slight alteration in the words, but a very great one in the sense. A change of the Godhead in the flesh the Eutychians admitted, by making the two natures become one; though they allowed not a change into flesh: so that by this little alteration of carne for carnem, the Creed would strike more directly at the Eutychian principles. Then again as to Deum, if that reading was to stand, the Creed, instead of confuting the Eutychians, would seem rather to favour them; for they taught that the manhood was assumed into God, and that in so literal and strict a sense as really to become God, or to be absorbed and lost in the divine nature, both natures becoming one divine nature. Such a construction might the words of the Creed be liable to. But put Deo for Deum, and it is entirely defeated: for then the sense is not that the manhood is assumed into God, but that God assumed the human nature; which is true, and not liable to any such misconstruction as the other. However this be, as to the variation of the copies, and the reason here assigned for it, (which I offer only as a probable conjecture to be further inquired into,) yet this is certain, that these words of the Creed, according to the common copies, are not so cautiously or accurately chosen as they might or would have been, had the Creed been drawn up after the Eutychiean times.

4. A fourth argument may be drawn from the similitude in the Creed, running thus: "As the reasonable soul and flesh is "one man; so God and man is one Christ." This familiar and easy comparison was much made use of by the Catholics, down from the Apollinarian times to the time of Eutyches: by Nazianzen, Austin, Vincentius, Claudianus Mamertus, and others. But no sooner did the Eutychians wrest the comparison to their own sense, pleading for one nature in Christ, like as soul and body make one nature in man, but the Catholics grew strangely averse to the similitude, and rarely made use of it: or when they did, it was either to dispute against it, and condemn it, or else to guard and qualify it with proper cautions and restrictions. Wherefore it is by no means probable that this similitude would have been inserted, at such a time, in a Catholic Creed, and there left without guard or caution, for the Eutychians to make an ill use of. This fourth argument I take from the learned and acute Le Quien, whose words may be seen in the margin<sup>c</sup>. And may we not from hence give a probable guess at the reason why the ancient manuscript of Treves, and the Colbertine copied from it, have entirely omitted this similitude, throwing in a few words, both before and after, to salve the breach in some measure, and to preserve a connection: which shews that it was no casual omission, but made with design. But I pass on.

These reasons convince me that the Creed was not made so late as the Council of Chalcedon, but before the year 451. It cannot therefore be ascribed to Vigilius Tapsensis in the year 484: not to mention that the phraseology of it agrees not with that writer's usual manner of expression, as Le Quien hath ex Deitate et humanitate compositam evincerent. Quinimo omnes ingenii vires explicare coacti sunt, ut varias discrepantias reperirent inter unionem Deitatis cum humanitate in Christo, et unionem animæ cum corpore in homine. Le Quien, Dissert. Damasc. p. 10. Confer. Petav. Dogm. Theol. tom. v. lib. iii. cap. 9, 10, &c.

<sup>c</sup> Quod quidem simile, quo theologus etiam, alique patres Apollinaristas confutarunt, tanti posthac non fecerunt insequentis seu quinti sæculi desinentis Doctores, ut illud in Expositione Fidei insererent; cum Monophysitæ, Severo præsertim duce, eo vehementius contra Catholicos pugnant, ut unam in Christo naturam esse

observed<sup>d</sup>. Besides that the principal reasons, on which Quesnel rested his opinion in regard to that author, are now found to have been grounded on a false presumption of certain works being Vigilius's which are none of his<sup>e</sup>. And I may add, that to me there does not appear in Vigilius's pieces any thing of that strength, closeness, and acuteness, which we find in the Athanasian Creed.

But I proceed to shew that this Creed is earlier than even the times of Nestorius, or the Ephesine Council of the year 431. It is certain that this Creed does not condemn the Nestorian heresy in such full, direct, critical terms, as the Catholics found to be necessary against the wiles and subtilties of those men. There is not a word of the mother of God, or of one Son only, in opposition to two Sons, or of God's being born, suffering, dying: which kind of expressions the Creeds are full of after Nestorius's times, and after the Council of Ephesus, to guard the more certainly against equivocations, and to express the Catholic doctrine in strong terms, such as could not be eluded. As to what the Athanasian Creed really does express, and is conceived to strike directly at the Nestorian heresy; it is demonstration that the words are not more full, or expressive, than may be found in elder Creeds, and in the Fathers that wrote against the Apollinarians and others, before ever Nestorius was heard of<sup>f</sup>. I know not how to give my reader a clear and just idea of this whole matter, but by setting down in chronological order the doctrine of the Incarnation, as expressed in Catholic writings from the Apollinarian times down to the Nestorian, from the year 373 to the year 431. One thing only I would remark beforehand, to make the following account the clearer, that the

<sup>d</sup> Sunt qui suspicentur expositionem istam fidei fuisse concinnatam a Vigilio Tapsensi, qui scripsisse existimatur libros tres contra Varimadum Arianum: sed ab illorum opinione me deterruit versus iste, Unus omnino, non confusione substantiæ, sed unitate Personæ. Nam Vigilius in libris quinque contra Eutychem nusquam unitatem Personæ dicit, sed passim, et frequentissime unionem Personæ — Cumque varæ supersint hodie Vigili Confessiones Fidei de Trinitate et incarnatione, nulla earum similitudo et convenientia cum Symbolo Athanasiano, quoad stylum animadver-

titur. Le Quien, Dissert. Damasc. p. 9.

<sup>e</sup> Vid. Montf. Diatrib. p. 724. Antheim. Disquis. p. 33. 34.

<sup>f</sup> Le Quien is beforehand with me in the observation, whose words I may here cite:

“Nec cuiquam negotium facessat, quod Nestorii et Eutychem hæreses ea (Formula) prius pessundatæ essent, quam ipsarum autores emergerent: alibi siquidem ostensum fuit SS. Patres, qui contra Apollinarium calamum strinxerant, disertissimis etiam verbis amborum impietates proscrispisse.” Le Quien, Dissert. Damasc. p. 9.

Apollinarians really held a doctrine very near akin to that which afterwards was called Eutychian; and they maliciously charged the Catholics with that very doctrine which was afterwards called Nestorian: so that the Catholics, in their charge upon the Apollinarians, condemned the Eutychian doctrine long before Eutyches; and, in their defence of themselves, they also condemned the Nestorian tenets before Nestorius. I shall first justify the truth of this remark in both its parts, and then shall proceed further to what I intend.

As to the first part, that the Apollinarians held a doctrine very near akin to that which was afterwards called Eutychian, it is a thing so well known, that I need not cite many testimonies for it. It was one of the commonest charges against the Eutychians, that they had revived the heresy of the Apollinarians§ in some considerable branches of it: Petavius briefly shews what those branches were<sup>h</sup>.

As to the other part of my remark, that the Apollinarians charged the Catholics with the opposite extreme, afterward called Nestorian, that has not been so much observed, but is no less true than the other; as may abundantly appear from the testimonies in the margin<sup>i</sup>; besides others that will occur as we pass along. This also is observed by Le Quien in his Notes to Damascen<sup>k</sup>, whereupon he rightly infers, that it will be a false

§ Eutyches—per impios veterum hæreticorum volutatus errores, tertium Apollinaris dogma delegit; ut negata humanæ carnis atque animæ veritate, totum Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum unius asserat esse naturæ, tanquam verbi Deitas ipsa se in carnem animamque converterit. Leon. Epist. xcviij. p. 633. Quesnel. ed. confer Ep. 134. p. 699.

<sup>h</sup> Sane cum et multiplex, et ab autore suo interpolata sæpius Apollinaris hæresis fuerit, ut capite sexto docuimus; ea parte cum isto consensit Eutyches, qua carnem Christi non ex utero sumptam B. Virginis sed e cælo delapsam Apollinaris credidit: tum quatenus uterque unicam naturam asseveravit, et utriusque permistam ac confusam substantiam. Petav. Dogmat. Theol. tom. v. lib. i. c. 16. p. 37.

<sup>i</sup> Neque vero alium Jesum Christum, alium Verbum dicimus, ut nova

hæresis calumniatur, sed eundem, et ante sæcula, et post sæcula, et ante mundum et post Mariam; imo, ex Maria magnum Deum appellamus. Hieronym. in Tit. cap. 3. p. 431.

Qui Apollinarii dogmata defendunt, per querimoniam quam adversus nos faciunt sua confirmare conantur, carnale Verbum et Dominum sæculorum, hominis Filium immortalem Filii Deitatem construentes. Proferunt enim quod aliqui quasi Ecclesiæ Catholicæ existentes, duos colunt Filios in dogmate; unum quidem secundum naturam, alterum autem secundum adoptionem postea acquisitam; nescio a quo talia audientes—nondum enim novi eum qui hæc subloquitur. Gregor. Nyssen. cit. Concil. V. Collat. vi. p. 106. Harduin. Vid. etiam Ambros. de Incarn. c. 7. p. 721. Athanas. Epist. ad Epictet. p. 907.

<sup>k</sup> Le Quien, Not. in Damascen. vol. i. p. 95.

conclusion to argue that such or such writings must belong to the Nestorian times, only because of their treating of an unity of Person in Christ.

These things premised, I now proceed to lay down the doctrine of the incarnation, as expressed in Catholic writers from the year 373 down to the year 431, inclusive.

I begin with the larger Creed of Epiphanius, which sets forth the incarnation in the following terms :

373. "The Word was made flesh, not by undergoing any change, nor by converting his Godhead into manhood, but by co-uniting it into his one holy perfection and Godhead. For there is one Lord Jesus Christ, and not two; the same he is God, the same he Lord, the same he King<sup>1</sup>."

Here we may observe that the Creed guards, just as the Athanasian does, against the two extremes; against the Apollinarian notion of the Godhead being converted into flesh, and against the Apollinarian calumny that the Catholics made two Christs instead of one.

380. Gregory Nazianzen, not long after, expresses himself in terms to the like effect: "We divide not the man from the Godhead, but we make them one and the same (Person)—— If any one imagines Mary not to be the mother of God, he has no part with God.—If any man introduces two Sons, one of God and the Father, and a second of the Virgin-mother, and not one and the same him, let him forfeit the adoption of sons promised to true believers. For God and man are indeed two natures, like as soul and body: but they are not two Sons, nor (two) Gods<sup>m</sup>."

Here again we find the Nestorian tenets very fully obviated, while Nazianzen is answering the Apollinarian calumny against the Catholics: and at the same time, the Eutychian heresy (afterwards so called) is as plainly precluded, while Nazianzen is laying down the Church's faith in two natures against the Apollinarians, who made but one.

<sup>1</sup> Ὁ γὰρ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο, οὐ τροπήν ὑποστάς, οὐδὲ μεταβαλὼν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ θεότητα εἰς ἀνθρωπότητα· εἰς μίαν συνενώσαντα ἑαυτοῦ ἁγίαν τελειότητα τε καὶ θεότητα· εἰς γὰρ ἐστὶν Κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς καὶ οὐ δύο, ὁ αὐτὸς Θεός, ὁ αὐτὸς Κύριος, ὁ αὐτὸς Βασιλεὺς. Επιφ. Ancor. p. 124. Petav.

<sup>m</sup> Οὐδὲ γὰρ τὸν ἀνθρώπων χωρίζομεν τῆς θεότητος, ἀλλ' ἓνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν δογματίζομεν.— εἴ τις οὐ θεοτόκος

τὴν Μαρίαν ὑπολαμβάνει, χωρὶς ἐστὶ τῆς θεότητος.— εἴ τις εἰσάγει δύο υἱοὺς ἓνα μὲν τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ καὶ Πατρός, δεύτερον δὲ τὸν ἐκ τῆς μητρὸς, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ ἓνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν, καὶ τῆς υἰοθεσίας ἐκπέσοι τῆς ἐπηγγελμένης τοῖς ὀρθῶς πιστεύουσιν. Φυσεῖς μὲν γὰρ δύο Θεὸς καὶ ἄνθρωπος, ἐπεὶ καὶ ψυχὴ καὶ σῶμα, υἱοὶ δὲ οὐ δύο, οὐδὲ θεοί. Gregor. Nazianz. ad Cledon. Ep. i. p. 738, 739.

382. Ambrose, in like manner, confutes the Apollinarians without naming them. "We ought also to condemn those who, in another extreme, teach not one and the same Son of God, but that he who is begotten of God the Father is one, and he that is generated of the Virgin another: when the Evangelist saith, that the Word was made flesh, to instruct us that there is but one Lord Jesus, not two.—There are others risen up who pretend that our Lord's flesh and Godhead are both of one nature. — And when they say that THE WORD was converted into flesh, hairs, blood, and bones, and changed from its own nature; after such a pretended change of the divine nature, they may take the handle to wrest any thing to the weakness of the God-head, which belongs to the infirmity of the flesh <sup>n</sup>."

Ambrose seems here to intimate as if there were really some at that time who had run into that very error which the Apollinarians charged upon the Catholics, and which was afterwards called Nestorian. However that be, he condemns it in the name of the Catholics; as he condemns also the Apollinarian extreme, which afterwards became Eutychian. There is another passage of Ambrose cited by Theodoret, seemingly so full and express against the Nestorian and Eutychian heresies, that one can hardly be persuaded to think it really Ambrose's. But, on the other hand, it appears to be so well attested, that the late learned editor of Ambrose could not but yield to place it among his genuine works. Tom. ii. p. 729.

417. There is a Creed of Pelagius (as learned men now agree) inserted among the works both of Jerome<sup>o</sup> and Austin<sup>p</sup>. It was made several years before the Nestorian controversy. Our learned Dr. Wall has translated it into English<sup>q</sup>, subjoining some excellent notes of his own to it: I shall transcribe as much ossa conversum est, et a natura propria mutatum est, datur illis locus ut infirmitatem carnis ad infirmitatem Divinitatis, quadam facta divinæ naturæ mutatione, detorqueant. Ambros. de Incarn. c. 6.

<sup>n</sup> Et illos condemnare debemus qui adversa erroris linea, non unum eundemque Filium Dei dicunt, sed alium esse qui ex Deo Patre natus sit, alium qui sit generatus ex virgine; cum Evangelista dicat quia Verbum caro factum est, ut unum Dominum Jesum non duos crederes — emergunt alii qui carnem Domini dicant et divinitatem unius esse naturæ — Deinde, cum isti dicant quia Verbum in carnem, capillos, sanguinem, et

<sup>o</sup> Hieronym. Oper. tom. v. p. 123. Bened. ed.

<sup>p</sup> Augustin. Oper. tom. v. Append. p. 388.

<sup>q</sup> Wall's History of Infant Baptism, p. 200.

as is to our purpose. “ We do in such manner hold that there “ is in Christ one Person of the Son, as that we say there are “ in him two perfect and entire substances, [or natures,] viz. of “ the Godhead and of the manhood, which consists of body and “ soul.—We do abhor — the blasphemy of those who go “ about by a new interpretation to maintain that since the time “ of his taking flesh, all things pertaining to the divine nature “ did pass into the man, [or manhood,] and so also that all things “ belonging to the human nature were transferred into God, “ [or the divine nature.] From whence would follow, (a thing “ no heresy ever offered to affirm,) that both substances, [or “ natures,] viz. of the divinity and humanity, would by this con“ fusion seem to be extinguished, and to lose their proper state,
 “ and be changed into another thing: so that they who own in “ the Son an imperfect God and imperfect man, are to be ac“ counted not to hold truly either God or man.”

Dr. Wall hereupon judiciously remarks, that “ there wanted “ only the accuracy of speaking, which Pelagius had here used,
 “ to clear and settle the dispute between the Nestorians and “ Eutychians.” I would remark further, that if Pelagius’s Creed, in the year 417, had so plainly obviated both the Nestorian and Eutychian heresy, before Nestorius or Eutyches was known; it may easily be conceived that the Athanasian Creed might do the same thing, at or about the same time.

422. I might next shew how St. Austin likewise has expressed himself in as strong terms against both those heresies, as the Athanasian Creed has done: but, because I shall have another occasion to cite the passages, where I draw out a select number of expressions parallel to those of the Creed; I may spare myself the trouble of doing it here.

426. I might go on to observe what passed in the case of Leporius, a man of the same principles, in the main, with Nes-torius, but some years before him. His recantation treatise, (Libellus Satisfactionis,) supposed to be drawn up by St. Austin in the year 426, would furnish me with many full and strong expressions against the Nestorian principles, beyond any to be met with in the Athanasian Creed; so that there is no just argument to be drawn from any expressions in that Creed, for setting it so low as the Nestorian times.

431. I shall conclude this account with the recital of a Creed made about the same time, or in the same year that the Council of Ephesus was held against Nestorius. It is the Creed of John, Patriarch of Antioch, approved by Cyril of Alexandria, and thought sufficient to wipe off all suspicion of Nestorianism from the author of it. It runs thus: "We confess then that Jesus " Christ our Lord, the only begotten Son of God, is perfect God

 " and perfect man, of a reasonable soul and body; born of the " Father before the worlds, as touching his Godhead; the same
 " also in the end of days, for us and for our salvation, (born) of " the Virgin Mary, as touching his manhood, consubstantial with " us according to his manhood. But there was an union made " of two natures, on which account we profess one Christ, one " Lord, one Son. Conformable to this sense of an union without " confusion, we acknowledge the holy Virgin as mother of God,
 " because that God the Word was incarnate and made man,
 " and from the very conception united to himself a temple which " he had taken of her†."

Here we may observe several expressions nearly resembling those of the Athanasian Creed; but withal several others more particular and explicit against the Nestorian principles than that Creed is: one Son, and him consubstantial with us, in respect of his manhood; the Virgin, mother of God, and the like. Such is the constant strain and tenor of the Creeds, and Confessions, and Catholic writings, treating of the incarnation, at this time and after: as might be shewn at large from Cassian about 431, and Vincentius in the year 434, and from Flavian, and Pope Leo I. and others before the Council of Chalcedon. We have therefore very great reason to believe, that the Athanasian Creed was drawn up either before the Nestorian controversy had made much noise in the world, or at least before the compiler had notice of it. The sum then of my argument is this; there is nothing in the Athanasian Creed but what might have been said, and had been said by Catholic writers before the time of Nestorius: but the Creed wants many of those particular and critical

† Confitemur igitur Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum, Filium Dei unigenitum, Deum perfectum et hominem perfectum, ex anima rationali et corpore; ante sæcula quidem ex Patre natum secundum Deitatem: in fine vero dierum eundem propter nos et propter nostram salutem de Maria Virgine secundum humanitatem, consubstantiali nobis secundum humanitatem. Duarum vero naturarum

unitio facta est; propter quam unum Christum, unum Dominum, unum Filium confitemur. Secundum hunc inconfusæ unionis intellectum, confitemur sanctam Virginem Dei genitricem, propter quod Deus Verbum incarnatus est et inhumanatus, et ex ipsa conceptione subimet univit templum quod ex ipsa suscepit. Johan. Antioch. Harduin. tom. i. p. 1558.

expressions, which came into use after that time: therefore, since the internal characters of the Creed suit exactly with the Apollinarian times, and not with the Nestorian, it ought to be placed somewhere between Apollinarius and Nestorius, not lower than 430, or 431 at the utmost. And it is some confirmation of what hath been said, that Venantius Fortunatus, who lived in the Eutychiean times, and commented upon this Creed about the year 570, as before observed, yet in his comment takes not the least notice of any part of this Creed being opposed to the errors of Nestorius or Eutyches, but only to those elder heresies of Sabellius, Arius, and Apollinarius; whom he specially makes mention of. I persuade myself therefore, that this Creed ought not to be placed lower than 430, or thereabout; and I have before shewn why it should not be set higher than 420; so that now we have brought it within the compass of ten years; where we may let it rest a while, till we consider further what place, or country, the Creed was most probably composed in; which may help us to settle the time of its date within somewhat stricter and narrower limits than before.

There is great reason to believe that this Creed was made in Gaul. The considerations which persuade us thereto are these following. 1. Its early reception in the Gallican Church, so far as appears, before all other churches. 2. The great esteem and regard anciently paid to it by the Gallican Councils and Bishops<sup>a</sup>. 3. The Creed's being first admitted into the Gallican Psalter, and first received in those countries where that Psalter was received, as in Spain, Germany, and England. As the Gallican churches delivered their Psalter to other churches, so is it reasonable to believe that the Creed was received from them likewise. 4. The oldest version we hear of is Gallican, in the time of Hincmar. 5. The oldest authors that make mention of it are likewise Gallican: for proof of which I refer to the ancient testimonies above. 6. The first that cite the words of it (as it seems) are likewise Gallican. I will here mention two; Avitus of Vienne in Gault, and Cæsarius of Arles<sup>u</sup>: I have set their words in the margin. 7. The oldest commentator upon it, though an Italian by birth and education, had yet travelled into France, and was at length Bishop of Poitiers. 8. The number and antiquity of the manuscripts of this Creed found in France confirm the same thing: which has made several very learned men subscribe to this opinion<sup>v</sup>, that the Athanasian Creed came first from Gaul. And it is certain, that no other country or church in the world has so fair, I may now say, so clear a pretence to it: many circumstances concur to make good their title, as we have already seen; and more will appear in my next chapter, when I come to inquire who was the author.

<sup>a</sup> Tanti namque apud Gallos Symbolum hoc fuit ut una cum Symbolo Apostolorum memoriæ commendari Presbyteris præcipiat Hincmarus idem in capitulis, clericis omnibus Synodus Augustodunensis. Sirmond. Oper. vol. ii. p. 978. Conf. Anthelm. p. 30.

<sup>u</sup> The words of Avitus Viennensis, who was Bishop in 490, died in 523. De divinitate Spiritus Sancti, quem nec factum legimus, nec creatum, nec genitum—Nos vero Spiritum discimus ex Patre et Filio procedere—Sicut est proprium Spiritui Sancto a

Let it be allowed then, for the present, that our Creed was originally Gallican, and made between 420 and 430: we may next consider, whether we cannot come a little nearer towards fixing the time of its composition. We must point out some season when St. Austin's works were known, and studied, and well esteemed of in Gaul; and when the circumstances of the place might the most probably give occasion for the compiling such a Creed. Now it is observable that about the year 426 St. Austin held a very close and intimate correspondence with Patre Filioque procedere, istud Fides Catholica etiamsi renuentibus non persuaserit, in suæ tamen Discipline Regula non excedit. Sirmond. Op. Vid. Le Quien, Panopl. contr. Schism. Græc. p. 241.

Non nisi ex eodem Symbolo, quod jam ante receptum esset, Avitus Viennensis alicubi scribebat De Divinitate Sp. S. &c. Le Quien, Dissert. Damascen. p. 98.

<sup>u</sup> The words of Cæsarius, who was Bishop in 503, died in 543.

Rogo et admoneo vos, fratres carissimi, ut Quicumque vult salvus esse, Fidem rectam et Catholicam discat, firmiter teneat, inviolatamque conservet.—Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus et Spiritus Sanctus: sed tamen non tres Dii, sed unus Deus. Qualis Pater, talis Filius, talis et Spiritus Sanctus. Attamen credat unusquisque fidelis quod Filius æqualis est Patri secundum divinitatem, et minor est Patre secundum humanitatem carnis, quam de nostro assumpsit. Cæsar. Arelat. apud August. Op. tom. v. App. p. 399.

N. B. The editors of St. Austin adjudge this to Cæsarius; as does also the Gallican churches. Leporius had for some time spread false doctrine in Gaul, chiefly relating to the incarnation. His heresy was much the same with what Nestorius's was afterwards. The Gallican bishops censured him; and he was forced to quit his country, having given general offence to all there. He took his leave of Gaul, and passed over into Africa, with several others of the same party and principles: where lighting upon Aurelius, Bishop of Carthage, and St. Austin, he was by them brought to a sense of his error, and induced to sign a full recantation, called Libellus Satisfactionis; whereupon St. Austin, and Aurelius, and other African bishops became intercessors with the bishops of Gaul, in favour of Leporius, that he might be again received and restored by them. One can scarce imagine any more likely time, or more proper occasion, for the compiling such a Creed as the Athanasian is. All the lines and characters of it suit extremely well with the place, the time, the occasion, and other circumstances; which concur to persuade us that the Creed was, in all probability, composed in Gaul, some time between the year 426 and the year 430; so that now we are confined to the narrow compass of four or five years, upon the most probable conjecture, and upon such evidences as a case of this nature can admit of, where more cannot be expected.

Oudinus. Comment. de Script. Eccl. vol. i. p. 1348.

<sup>v</sup> Cæterum cum ex allatis supra testimoniis videatur in Galliis primum celebrari cœpisse hoc Symbolum, haud abs re conjectant eruditi viri, in Galliis illud fuisse elucubratum. Quod idem forte suadeat antiquissimus ille in Galliis et in Anglia mos Symboli alternatim concinendi; itemque MSS. Gallicanorum copia et antiquitas. Montfauc. Diatrib. p. 726.

E Gallis primum prodidiisse Symbolum Athanasianum animadvertimus, tum quod a Gallis scriptoribus ante omnes celebratum, a synodis episcopisque Galliarum receptum, et commendatum antiquitus fuerit, tum etiam quod Treveris in Galliarum metropoli illud lucubratum fuisse opinio increbuerit. Quapropter Pithœus, ac Vossius, alique eruditissimi viri Gallum hominem Symboli parentem opinati sunt; Antelmius vero, hac potissimum ratione ductus, non Vigilium in Africa Episcopum, sed Vincentium Lirinensem opusculi hujus auctorem affirmavit. Lud. Murator. tom. ii. p. 229.

CHAP. VIII.

Of the Author of the Creed.

IF we have hitherto gone upon sure grounds about the time and place, we cannot long be at a loss for the author of this Creed. Who were the most considerable men, and best qualified for such a work, at that time in Gaul? Antelmus will point out Vincentius Lirinensis. But I have several reasons to persuade me that it was not, or could not be Vincentius. No contemporary of his, nor any ancient writer, ever gives the least hint of his composing such a work. Antelmus supposes it to be after his Commonitory, that is, after 434; which if it had been, we should undoubtedly have found the Creed more particular and explicit against the Nestorian heresy: we should have read in it Mother of God, one Son only, and something of God's being born, suffering, dying, or the like; it cannot therefore be justly ascribed to Vincentius. Not to mention, that such a work appears to have been much fitter for a bishop of a church, than for a private presbyter; inasmuch as bishops generally were obliged to give an account of their faith, upon their first entrance upon the episcopate: and they had the privilege likewise of making Creeds, and Forms of Prayer, for their respective dioceses: for which reasons, cæteris paribus, this Creed ought rather to be ascribed to some bishop of that time than to an inferior presbyter. And who more likely to compose such a Creed than Hilary, Bishop of Arles, a celebrated man of that time, and of chief repute in the Gallican Church? His title to it will stand upon the following circumstances:

1. He was made Bishop in Gaul within the time mentioned, about the year 429. 2. He is allowed to have been a man of great parts and capacity, of a neat wit, and elegant style for the age he lived in; insomuch that Livius, a poet, and a celebrated writer of that time, did not scruple to say, that if Austin had come after Hilary, he would have been judged his inferior<sup>x</sup>. 3. Gennadius's character of Hilary's writings, that they were small tracts<sup>y</sup>, but extremely fine, suits well with our present supposition: but what most of all confirms and strengthens it, is what Honoratus of Marseilles, the writer of his life, tells us; that Hilary composed an admirable exposition [Symboli Expositio ambienda] of the Creed<sup>z</sup>. He calls it an Exposition of the Creed, (not a Creed,) which is the proper title for it, and more proper than that of Symbolum, or Creed, which it now bears. And so we find that it was but very rarely called Symbolum by the ancients; once, I think, by Hincmar, and never after for several centuries:

<sup>x</sup> Quid plura dicam? Nisi dicendi pausa desuper eidem advenisset, sermonem finire non potuerat, tanta gratia exundante, et miraculo et stupore crescente, ut peritissimis desperationem tunc autoribus sæculi ejus inferret oratio: in tantum ut Livius temporis illius poeta, et autor insignis, publice proclamaret; Si Augustinus post te fuisset, judicaretur inferior. Honoratus, in Vita S. Hilarii, p. 740. edit. Quesnel.

<sup>y</sup> Ingenio vero immortalis, aliqua et parva edidit, quæ eruditæ animæ, et fidelis linguæ indicio sunt; in quibus præcipue &c. Gennad. de Hilario Arelat. cap. lxix. p. 32.

<sup>z</sup> Gratia ejus ex his operibus, quæ eodem dicendi impetu concepit, genuit, ornavit, protulit, possit absque hæsitatione dignosci: Vita scilicet antistitis Honorati, Homiliæ in Totius Anni Festivitatibus expeditæ, Symboli Expositio ambienda, epistolarum vero tantus numerus, &c. Honorat. Vit. Hilar. p. 740.

N. B. There is some doubt whether Ravennius of Arles, successor to Hilary, or Honoratus of Marseilles be the author of this life: but there is good reason to ascribe it to the latter. See Quesnel, vol. ii. p. 730. and Antelmus, de veris Operibus Leon. M. p. 367.

and when it was, yet it was observed, by Thomas Aquinas, that that was not so proper a name for it, not being composed per modum Symboli, in the way of a Creed; as indeed it is not. What the more ancient and usual titles were may appear in one view in the tables above. Among others, we sometimes find the title of Expositio Catholicæ Fidei, or yet nearer, Expositio Symboli Apostolorum, An Exposition of the Apostles' Creed, which is as proper a title as any, and not unlike to this of Honoratus. 4. I may further observe, that this Hilary of Arles was a great admirer and follower of St. Austin<sup>a</sup>, and had studied his writings; which may account for his often following St. Austin's thoughts in the compiling of the Creed, and sometimes his very expressions; and indeed forming the whole composition, in a manner, upon St. Austin's plan, both with respect to the Trinity and Incarnation. He did not indeed come heartily in to St. Austin's doctrine about Grace, Predestination, Free-will, &c. any more than the other Gallican bishops: but for other points, as Prosper observes, Hilary was entirely in Austin's sentiments. 5. Hence likewise we may account for the similitude of thoughts and expressions between Vincentius Lirinensis, and the author of the Creed; which Antelmus insists much upon to justify his ascribing it to Vincentius. Hilary and Vincentius were contemporaries and countrymen, both of the same monastery in the isle of Lerin, much about the same time: so that it is natural to suppose that they should fall into the like expressions, while treating on the same things; or that Vincentius might affect to copy from so great a man as Hilary, (first Abbot of Lerin, and then Archbishop of Arles,) when writing on the same subject. 6. As to the style of Hilary, though we have but little of his left to compare the Creed with, yet what there is answers very well to the idea one should have of a man that might be able to draw up such a piece. His life of the elder Honoratus, who was his predecessor in the see of Arles, is an excellent performance, and comes nothing short of the character he had raised for wit and eloquence. The style is clear and strong, short and sententious, abounding with anti-

<sup>a</sup> Unum eorum præcipuæ auctoritatis, et spiritualium studiorum virum, Sanctum Hilarium, Arelatensem Episcopum, sciat beatitudo tua admiratorem, sectatoremque in aliis omnibus

tuæ esse doctrinæ: et de hoc quod in querelam trahit, jam pridem apud sanctitatem tuam sensum suum per literas velle conferre. Prosper ad Augustin. Ep. cccxxv. p. 825. Bened. ed.

theses, elegant turns, and manly strokes of wit. He does but touch a little, in that piece, upon the subject of the Trinity: so that one cannot from thence discover how he would have expressed himself upon that head. Only, that little there is there, is very like to a paragraph in the Athanasian Creed, both for turn and expression. Speaking of Honoratus, or rather to him, in the way of a rhetorical apostrophe, he observes<sup>b</sup> how clear and expressive he had been in his discourses concerning the Trinity in the Godhead; making the Persons distinct, but co-uniting them in Glory, Eternity, and Majesty. Which may remind us of the words of the Athanasian Creed, "there is one Person of the Father, &c. but the Godhead of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost is all one, the Glory equal, the Majesty coeternal." However that be, this we may learn from it, how great a commendation it was, in Hilary's account, to be able to speak clearly and accurately upon the subject of the Trinity, and how ambitious he might be of so doing himself: and we know, from his dying instructions<sup>c</sup> to his friends about him, how much he had the subject at heart. These, I confess, are but little circumstances: yet they are of some weight along with others more considerable, and therefore ought not to be entirely omitted. What weighs most with me is, that he was, in his time, a man of the greatest authority in the Gallican Church<sup>d</sup>, without whose advice, or privity at least, such a Creed would hardly have passed; and that he actually was the author of such a work as this is, and which must either be this, or else is lost. This Creed has been sometimes ascribed to the elder Hilary of Poitiers, though neither the diction, nor the matter,

<sup>b</sup> Quotidianus siquidem in sincerissimis tractatibus confessionis Patris, ac Filii, ac Spiritus Sancti testis fuisti: nec facile tam exerte, tam lucide quisquam de Divinitatis Trinitate disse-ruit, cum eam Personis distingueres, et gloriæ (gloria) æternitate, ac majestate sociares. Hilar. Vit. Honorat. p. 770. Quesnel. ed.

<sup>c</sup> Among which this is one, and the first.

Fidem Trinitatis immobiliter retinete. Vit. Hilar. p. 747.

<sup>d</sup> Quesnel quotes this eulogium of him, from Constantius Presbyter of the same time.

Illustrabatur hæc civitas Hilario sacerdote, multimoda virtute pretioso: erat enim Fidei igneus torrens, cælestis eloquii, et præceptionis divinæ operarius indefessus. Quesnel, p. 543.

To which may be added one line of his epitaph:

Gemma Sacerdotum, plebisque, orbisque Magister. Quesnel, ibid.

Tanta fuit ejus in dicendo vis, ut Silvius Eusebius, Domnulus, auctores coævi, admiratione successi in hæc verba proruperint: Non doctrinam, non eloquentiam, sed nescio quid super homines consecutum. Natal. Alexand. sec. v. cap. 4. art 19. ex Honorati Vit. Hilar. cap. 11.

nor the manner of it look any thing like his; only, it seems, this Creed in one manuscript was found tacked to some pieces of that Hilary. I pretend not to draw any argument from hence in favour of our Hilary: though had the manuscript been a very ancient one, or copied from one that was, (neither of which appears,) I should have thought it of some moment; since the similitude of names might possibly have occasioned it.

Having considered such reasons as seem to favour the conjecture about Hilary of Arles; it will next be proper to consider also what may be objected against it.

1. It may be objected, that this Hilary lived to the year 449, saw the rise, progress, and condemnation of the Nestorian heresy, and the beginning at least of the Eutychian. May it not therefore be reasonably presumed that, had he been to compile a Confession of Faith, he would have made it more full and particular against both those heresies than I have supposed the Creed to be? To this I answer, that the objection would be of weight, if I supposed this Creed to have been made by him in the last years of his life: but as I take it to have been made a little after his entrance upon his episcopate, (to be a rule to his clergy all his time, as well as to satisfy his colleagues of his own orthodoxy,) the objection affects not me. Admit the Creed to have been drawn up by him about the year 429 or 430; and then it is just what it should be, exactly suited to the circumstances of time and place: and as to his enlarging or altering it afterwards, upon the rise of the two heresies, it might not be in his power when once gone out of his hands: nor would it be necessary, since both these heresies are sufficiently obviated in this Creed, though not so explicitly condemned as in many that came later.

2. It may be asked, how the author's name came to be so studiously concealed even by those that received and admired the Creed; and how it came to take at length the name of Athanasius, rather than of Hilary? I answer: this objection will equally lie against any other author assignable whatever, except Athanasius himself, whom we cannot, with any colour of reason, ascribe it to. It will be as easy to account for the studious concealment of the author's name, supposing it Hilary, as for any other, or perhaps easier. This Hilary had stoutly defended the rights of his see against Pope Leo's encroachments, in the matter of appeals and other branches of jurisdiction. This brought the good man under disfavour and disrepute ; as must happen to the best of men when they have persons of greater figure and authority than themselves to contend with, however righteous and clear their cause may be. Besides this, Hilary had entertained a dislike to some of St. Austin's prevailing doctrines about grace, growing much in vogue ; so that St. Austin's more zealous disciples had a pique against him on that account, and had the less value for his name. The way then to have this Creed pass current, and make it generally received, was to stifle as much as possible the name of the author, and to leave it to stand by its own intrinsic worth and weight. As to the name of Athanasius, I take it to have come thus. Upon the revival of the Arian controversy in Gaul, under the influence of the Burgundian kings, it was obvious to call one side Athanasians, and the other side Arians ; and so also to name the orthodox faith the Athanasian Faith, as the other Arian. This Creed therefore, being a summary of the orthodox and Catholic Faith, might in process of time acquire the name of the Athanasian Faith, or Fides Athanasii, in opposition to the contrary scheme, which might as justly be called Fides Arii, or the Arian Faith. The equivocalness of the title gave a handle to those that came after to understand it of a form of faith, composed by Athanasius ; just as the equivocal title of Apostolical given to the Roman Creed occasioned the mistake about its being made by the Apostles. This appears to me the most probable account of the whole matter : and it is very much confirmed by what we see of several tracts, wrote in the fifth and sixth centuries dialogue-wise, where Athanasius is made the mouth of the Catholic side, and Arius of his party, and Photinus of his : not meaning that Athanasius, Arius, and Photinus were really the speakers in those conferences, but the readers were to understand the Athanasian, Arian, and Photinian principles, as being there fairly represented under those leading names.

3. If it be asked further, why this Creed was not cited during the Nestorian and Eutychian controversy, when there was so frequent occasion for it ; I answer, partly because the Creed was not particular and explicit enough to have done much service ; but chiefly, because the author had been eclipsed, and his reputation obscured by greater names than his, so that his authority had weighed little ; and to produce it without a name would have signified less. This objection therefore, though it might be of great force in the question about Athanasius, is of no weight at all against our present supposition about Hilary of Arles.

These are all the objections which to me occur: and they seem to be so far from weakening the grounds upon which I proceed, that they rather tend to strengthen and confirm them. And though I do not pretend to strict certainty about the author of the Creed; yet I persuade myself that none that have been hitherto named have any fairer, or so fair a claim to it as the man I have mentioned. Not Athanasius, nor Hilary of Poitiers, not Eusebius of Vercell, not Pope Anastasius I, nor any of that name; not Vincentius Lirinensis, nor Vigilius Tapsensis, nor Athanasius of Spire, nor Fortunatus, nor Bonifacius, nor any other that has been thought on. From the many conjectures heretofore advanced by learned men, one may perceive that it has been judged to be a thing worth the inquiring after: and as others have taken the liberty of naming such author or authors as to them appeared most likely to have made the Creed, so have I, in my turn, not scrupling to add one more to the number.

The sum then of what I have presumed to advance upon probable conjecture, in a case which will not admit of full and perfect evidence, is this: that Hilary, once Abbot of Lerins, and next Bishop of Arles, about the year 430 composed the Exposition of Faith which now bears the name of the Athanasian Creed. It was drawn up for the use of the Gallican clergy, and especially for the diocese or province of Arles. It was esteemed, by as many as were acquainted with it, as a valuable summary of the Christian Faith. It seems to have been in the hands of Vincentius, monk of Lerins, before 434, by what he has borrowed from it; and to have been cited in part by Avitus of Vienne, about the year 500, and by Cæsarius of Arles before the year 543. About the year 570, it became famous enough to be commented upon like the Lord's Prayer and Apostles' Creed, and together with them. All this while, and perhaps for several years lower, it had not yet acquired the name of the Athanasian Faith, but was simply styled the Catholic Faith. But before 670, Athanasius's admired name came in to recommend and adorn it; being in itself also an excellent system of the Athanasian principles of the Trinity<sup>e</sup> and incarnation, in

<sup>e</sup> Romanæ ego Ecclesiæ quasi Sym- Athanasii dictum et putatum quod
bolum, incerto autore, existimem, hinc dilucide Catholicam, ipsamque Athaopposition chiefly to Arians, Macedonians, and Apollinarians. The name of the Faith of Athanasius, in a while, occasioned the mistake of ascribing it to him, as his composition. This gave it authority enough to be cited and appealed to as standard, in the disputes of the middle ages, between Greeks and Latins about the procession: and the same admired name, together with the intrinsic worth and value of the form itself, gave it credit enough to be received into the public Service in the western churches; first in France, next in Spain, soon after in Germany, England, Italy, and at length in Rome itself; while many other excellent Creeds drawn up in Councils, or recommended by Emperors, yet never arrived to any such honour and esteem as this hath done. The truly good and great author, (as I now suppose him,) though ill used by the then Pope of Rome, and not kindly treated, with respect to his memory, in after-ages, has nevertheless been the mouth of all the western churches, and some eastern too, for a long tract of centuries, in celebrating the glories of the coeternal Trinity. And so may he ever continue, till the Christian churches can find out (which they will not easily do) a juster, or sounder, or more accurate form of faith than this is.

CHAP. IX.

The Creed itself in the Original Language with Parallel Passages from the Fathers.

MY design in this chapter is,

1. To exhibit the Creed in its native language, that is, in Latin, according to the most ancient and most correct copies. The various lections will be placed at the bottom, under the Creed: the manuscripts therein referred to shall be denoted by such names or marks as appear above in the table of manuscripts.

2. Opposite to the Creed, in another column, I place parallel passages, selected from authors that lived and wrote before 430, principally from St. Austin: and this with design to enforce and illustrate my main argument before insisted on; namely, that the Creed contains nothing but what had been asserted, in as full and express words as any words of the Creed are, by Church writers before the time specified.

nasii Fidem (de Trinitate, maxime) complecteretur; cujus inter Catholicos sic spectata fides, ut ejus communicio velut tessera Catholici esset; censereturque ejus condemnatio ipsa	Nicænæ et Catholicæ Fidei ejuratio; uti se res habuit in Liberio Romano antistite &amp;c. Combesis. not. in Calec. Nov. Auctar. Patr. tom. ii. p. 296.
---	--

3. I subjoin under these, at the bottom of the page, some further select passages from Church writers before or after the time mentioned; partly to serve as comments upon some places of the Creed, and partly to shew how some writers of the fifth century, Vincentius especially, expressed themselves on the same heads, that the reader may from thence judge whether they appear prior to the Creed, or the Creed prior to them.

I ought to ask my English reader's pardon for this part; which he may please to pass over, and to go on to the next chapter, intended chiefly for his satisfaction, and to make him some amends for the present interruption: for my design in subjoining an English commentary is to serve much the same purposes with what is here intended by the Latin; though not all of them, but as many as the nature of the thing will allow.

FIDES CATHOLICA.

1. Quicumque vult salvus esse, ante omnia opus est ut teneat Catholicam Fidem.

2. Quam nisi quisque integram inviolatamque servaverit, absque dubio in æternum peribit.

Variantes Lectiones.

1. (salvus esse) esse salvus. Cod. Ambros. et Fortunat. in MS. Ambros.

2. (quisque) quis. Cod. Ambros. (inviolatamque) inviolabilemque. Cod. San-germ. (absque dubio) deest in Cod. Reg. Paris. (in æternum peribit) peribit in æternum. San-germ.

Loca parallela excerpta ex Variis; ante an. 430.

1. Catholicæ disciplinæ majestate institutum est, ut accedentibus ad Religionem Fides persuadeatur ante omnia. August. tom. viii. p. 64.

Hæc est Fides nostra, quoniam hæc est Fides recta, quæ etiam Catholica nuncupatur. Tom. viii. 729.

2. Hæretici—Simplici Fide Catholica contenti esse nolunt; quæ una parvulis salus est. August. tom. iv. p. 60.

Excerpta ex Patribus.

1. Credamus ergo fratres: hoc est primum præceptum, hoc est initium religionis et vitæ nostræ, fixum habere cor in fide. August. tom. v. p. 195.

2. Catholicorum hoc fere proprium, deposita sanctorum Patrum et commissa servare, damnare profanas novitates: et sicut dixit, et iterum dixit Apostolus: si quis annuntiaverit, præterquam quod acceptum est, anathemare. Vincent. cap. xxxiv. p. 111.

3. Fides autem Catholica hæc est, ut unum Deum in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in Unitate veneremur :

4. Neque confundentes Personas, neque Substantiam separantes.

5. Alia est enim Persona Patris, alia Filii, alia Spiritus Sancti.

6. Sed Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, una est Divinitas, æqualis Gloria, coæterna Majestas.

7. Qualis Pater, talis Filius, talis et Spiritus Sanctus.

5. (alia Filii) alia Persona Filii. Cod. Ambros. item Fortunat. (alia Spiritus) alia Persona Sp. Sanct. Cod. Ambros.

6. (coæterna) Codd. nonnulli habent et coæterna. Deest et in Cod. Ambros. et in Fortunat. et Brunon. aliisque multis.

7. (talis et Spiritus Sanctus.) Ita Codd. Ambros. Reg. Paris. C. C. C. C. 1. Cotton. 1. Jacob. 1. Fortunat. item Cæsarius Arelat. antiquissimus. MSS. recentiores, et editi omittunt et.

3. Νῦν δὲ διδάσκει τοσοῦτον εἶδέναι μόνον μονάδα ἐν τριάδι, καὶ τριάδα ἐν μονάδι προσκυνουμένην, παράδοξον ἔχουσαν καὶ τὴν διαίρεσιν καὶ τὴν ἔνωσιν. Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxiii. p. 422.

4. Et hæc omnia nec confuse unum sunt, nec disjuncte tria sunt. Augustin. tom. ii. p. 639.

5. Impietatem Sabellii declinantes, tres Personas expressas sub proprietate distinguimus— Aliam Patris, aliam Filii, aliam Spiritus Sancti— Personam. Pelagii Symbol. p. 274. apud Lambec. Catal. Bibl. Vindob.

6. Confutantes Arium, unam eandemque dicimus Trinitatis esse substantiam. Pelag. Symb.

Patris, et Filii et Spiritus Sancti unam Virtutem, unam Substantiam, unam Deitatem, unam Majestatem, unam Gloriam. August. tom. viii. p. 744.

7. Qualis est Pater secundum Substantiam, talem genuit Fi-

3. Catholica Ecclesia unum Deum in Trinitatis plenitudine, et item Trinitatis æqualitatem in una Divinitate veneratur. Vincent. cap. xxii. et c. xviii.

4. Ut neque singularitas substantiæ Personarum confundat proprietatem, neque item Trinitatis distinctio unitatem separet Deitatis. Vincent. cap. 22.

5. Quia scilicet alia est Persona Patris, alia Filii, alia Spiritus Sancti. Vincent. cap. 19.

6. Sed tamen Patris et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti non alia et alia, sed una eademque natura. Vincent. cap. 19.

7. Qualis immensus est Pater, talis est et Filius, talis est Spiritus Sanctus. Et Philastr. Hær. li. p. 106. Conf. p. 178.

8. Increatus Pater, increatus Filius, increatus et Spiritus Sanctus.

9. Immensus Pater, immensus Filius, immensus et Spiritus Sanctus.

10. Æternus Pater, æternus Filius, æternus et Spiritus Sanctus.

11. Et tamen non tres æterni, sed unus æternus.

12. Sicut non tres increati, nec tres immensi, sed unus increatus, et unus immensus.

13. Similiter, Omnipotens

8. (et Spiritus Sanctus.) Deest vocula et in recentioribus codicibus: retinent plerique antiquiores hoc in loco, et similiter in subsequentibus, ante Spiritus Sanctus. Quæ lectio, opinor, vera est, ab autore Symboli profecta; scilicet, ad majorem emphasisim, propter hæresim Macedonianam nondum penitus extinctam, nostrum autem est Symbolum exhibere quale se primitus habuit.

12. (unus increatus, et unus immensus.) Unus immensus et unus increatus. Cod. Ambros.

lium: et Spiritus Sanctus—es ejusdem et ipse Substantiæ cum Patre et Filio. Faustini Fid.

8. Quicquid ad seipsum dicitur Deus, et de singulis personis singulariter dicitur, et simul de ipsa Trinitate. August. tom. viii. p. 838.

9. Magnus Pater, magnus Filius, magnus Spiritus Sanctus. August. tom. viii. p. 837.

10. Hoc et de bonitate, et de æternitate, et de omnipotentia Dei dictum sit. August. ibid. p. 839.

Æternus Pater, coæternus Filius, coæternus Spiritus Sanctus. August. tom. v. p. 543.

12. Non tamen tres magni, sed unus magnus. Aug. tom. viii. p. 837.

13. Itaque Omnipotens Pater,

8. Illud præcipue teneamus, quicquid ad se dicitur præstantissima illa et divina sublimitas, substantialiter dici; quod autem ad aliquid non substantialiter, sed relative: tantamque vim esse ejusdem substantiæ in Patre et Filio et Spiritu Sancto, ut quicquid de singulis ad seipso dicitur, non pluraliter in summa, sed singulariter accipiatur. Augustin. tom. viii. p. 837.

12. Nec magnos tres dicimus, sed magnum unum, quia non participatione magnitudinis Deus magnus est, sed seipso magno magnus est, quia ipse sua est magnitudo. August. de Trin. lib. v. cap. 10.

13. Sed ne duos Omnipotentes intelligas præcavendum est: licet enim et Pater sit Omnipotens, et Filius, tamen unus est Omnipotens, sicut et unus est Deus, quia Patris et Filii eadem Omnipotentia est, sicut et eadem Deitas. Faustin. p. 123.

Pater, Omnipotens Filius, Omnipotens et Spiritus Sanctus.

14. Et tamen non tres Omnipotentes, sed unus Omnipotens.

15. Ita Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus et Spiritus Sanctus.

16. Et tamen non tres Dii, sed unus est Deus.

17. Ita Dominus Pater, Dominus Filius, Dominus et Spiritus Sanctus.

18. Et tamen non tres Domini, sed unus est Dominus.

19. Quia sicut singillatim unamquamque Personam et

14. (Et tamen) deest tamen in Cod. Ambros.

16. (est Deus) deest est in MS. Ambros.

18. (est Dominus) deest est. Cod. Ambros.

19. (et Deum et Dominum) Ita MS. Ambros. et MS. Oxon. Fortunat. rectissime. Cod. Fortunat. Ambros. alique, tum MSS. tum impressi, habent Deum et Dominum. Brunonis Cod. et Coll. Joh. MS. Deum ac Dominum. San-germanensis, Dominum

Omnipotens Filius, Omnipotens Spiritus Sanctus. Aug. de Trin. lib. v. cap. 8.

14. Nec tamen tres Omnipotentes, sed unus Omnipotens. August. ibid.

15. Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus Spiritus Sanctus. August. Trin. lib. viii. c. 1. et Serm. 105. p. 542. tom. v.

16. Nec tamen tres Dii—sed unus Deus. Aug. ibid.

17. Sic et Dominum si quæras, singulum quemque respondeo— August. tom. viii. p. 729.

18. Sed simul omnes non tres Dominos Deos, sed unum Dominum Deum dico. August. ibid.

19. Cum de singulis quæritur, unusquisque eorum et Deus, et

14. Sicut simul illi tres unus Deus, sic simul illi tres unus omnipotens est, et invisibilis unus, Deus Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus est. Augustin. tom. viii. p. 654. Vid. p. 865.

16. Unus Deus propter inseparabilem Divinitatem; sicut unus Omnipotens propter inseparabilem Omnipotentiam. August. de Civit. Dei, p. 290.

In illa summa Trinitate, quæ incomparabiliter rebus omnibus antecellit, tanta est inseparabilitas, ut cum Trinitas hominum non possit dici unus Homo, illa unus Deus et dicatur et sit. August. de Trin. lib. xv. cap. 23.

18. Non sunt enim duo Domini ubi Dominatus unus est; quia Pater in Filio, et Filius in Patre, et ideo Dominus unus. Ambros. de Sp. S. lib. iii. cap. 15. p. 686.

Deum et Dominum confiteri Christiana veritate compellimur; ita tres Deos, aut Dominos, dicere Catholica religione prohibemur.

20. Pater a nullo est factus, nec creatus, nec genitus.

21. Filius a Patre solo est, non factus, nec creatus, sed genitus.

22. Spiritus Sanctus a Patre et Filio, non factus, nec creatus, nec genitus est, sed procedens.

23. Unus ergo Pater, non tres Patres; unus Filius, non et Deum. Plerique editi, Deum aut Dominum. Quæ lectio, me iudice, omnium pessima est. (aut Dominos) Ita plerique MSS. et editi: sed nonnulli, ac Dominos. (prohibemur) MS. Ambr. legit prohibemus: male.

22. (sed procedens) Cod. Ambros. adjecta habet ista; Patri et Filio co-æternus est. Glossa, uti videtur, ex margine in textum immissa: nisi forte librarius verba illa ex Bachiarii Fide, quam simul descripserat, huc transtulerit; sive oscitanter, sive majoris elucidationis gratia. Vid. Bachiari. Fid. apud Murator. tom. ii. p. 16, 18.

Omnipotens esse respondeatur; cum vero de omnibus simul, non tres Dii, vel tres Omnipotentes, sed unus Deus Omnipotens. August. de Civit. Dei, lib. xi. c. 24. p. 290.

20. Dicimus Patrem Deum de nullo. August. tom. v. p. 680.

Non enim habet de quo sit, aut ex quo procedat. Aug. tom. viii. p. 829.

21. Filius Patris solius — hunc quippe de sua substantia genuit, non ex nihilo fecit. Aug. Ep. 170. alias 66.

22. De Filio Spiritus Sanctus procedere reperitur. August. de Trin. lib. xv. c. 17.

Neque natus est sicut unigenitus, neque factus, &c. Id. lib. v. c. 15. p. 841.

23. Unus est Pater, non duo vel tres; et unus Filius, non duo

22. Spiritus quoque Sanctus non, sicut creatura, ex nihilo est factus; sed sic a Patre Filioque procedit, ut nec a Filio, nec a Patre sit factus. August. ep. 170.

Τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα — οὔτε γεννητὸν οὔτε κτιστὸν — ἀλλ' ἐκ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον. Epiphani. p. 742.

23. Οὔτε οὖν τρεῖς πατέρες, οὔτε τρεῖς υἱοὶ, οὔτε τρεῖς παράκλητοι: ἀλλ' εἰς πατέρα, καὶ εἰς υἱὸς, καὶ εἰς παράκλητος. Pseud. Ignat. ad Philipp. c. ii. p. 118. Cotel. ed. Vid. Epiphani. H. 69. p. 742.

tres Filii; unus Spiritus Sanctus, non tres Spiritus Sancti.

24. Et in hac Trinitate nihil prius aut posterius, nihil majus aut minus, sed totæ tres Personæ coæternæ sibi sunt, et coæquales.

25. Ita ut per omnia, sicut jam supra dictum est, et Unitas in Trinitate, et Trinitas in Unitate veneranda sit.

26. Qui vult ergo salvus esse, ita de Trinitate sentiat.

27. Sed necessarium est ad æternam salutem, ut Incarnationem quoque Domini nostri Jesu Christi fideliter credat.

24. (Et in hac) deest et in Cod. San-germ.

vel tres; et unus amborum Spiritus, non duo vel tres. August. contr. Maxim. p. 729.

24. In hac Trinitate, non est aliud alio majus, aut minus. August. tom. v. p. 948.

Nec enim prorsus aliquis in Trinitate gradus: nihil quod inferius, superiusve dici possit. Pelagii Symb.

25. Vid. supra, in articulo 3.

26. Vid. supra, artic. 2.

27. Dominus autem manens cum discipulis per quadraginta dies, significare dignatus est quia per istud tempus necessaria est omnibus Fides Incarnationis

24. Increata et inæstimabilis Trinitas, quæ unius est æternitatis et gloriæ, nec tempus nec gradum vel posterioris recipit vel prioris. Ambros. de Fid. lib. iv. c. 11. p. 547.

25. Ita tota Deitas sui perfectione æqualis est, ut exceptis vocabulis quæ proprietatem indicant Personarum, quicquid de una Persona dicitur, de tribus dignissime possit intelligi. Pelag. Symb.

26. Si quis hanc Fidem non habet, Catholicus dici non potest, quia Catholicam non tenet Fidem; et ideo alienus est ac profanus, et adversus veritatem rebellis Fides. S. Ambros. apud Lambec. Catalog. Bibl. Vindob. lib. ii. p. 268.

27. Ideo conversatio ipsius in carne post resurrectionem per quadraginta dies erat necessaria, ut demonstraret tamdiu esse necessariam Fidem Incarnationis Christi quamdiu in ista vita docetur arca in diluvio fluctuare. August. tom. v. p. 1078.

28. Est ergo Fides recta, ut credamus et confiteamur, quia Dominus noster Jesus Christus, Dei Filius, Deus pariter et Homo est.

29. Deus est ex substantia Patris ante sæcula genitus: Homo ex substantia Matris in sæculo natus.

30. Perfectus Deus, perfectus Homo ex anima rationali et humana carne subsistens.

31. Æqualis Patri secundum Divinitatem: minor Patre secundum Humanitatem.

28. (confiteamur, quia) Cod. Ambros. atque editi nonnulli legunt quod. Plures habent quia. (Deus pariter et Homo est) Ita Codd. Bened. 1. Colbertin. Jacob. 1. et Fortunat. Ambros. et San-germ. legunt, et Deus pariter et Homo est. Editi, Deus et homo est.

29. (ex substantia) Colbertin. de substantia: et infra, de substantia Matris. (Homo) Ambros. Cod. legit et Homo est. Fortunat. et Homo. Post Matris, San-germ. Cod. habet, in sæculo genitus perfectus Homo.

30. (rationali) rationabili. Codd. Ambros. Colbert. et San-germ.

31. (minor Patre) minor Patri. Colb.

Christi; quæ infirmis est necessaria. August. Serm. 264. tom. v. p. 1077.

28. Proinde, Christus Jesus, Dei Filius, est et Deus et Homo. August. Ench. tom. vi. p. 210.

29. Deus ante omnia sæcula: Homo in nostro sæculo — unus Dei Filius, idemque Hominis Filius. August. ibid.

30. Confitemur in Christo unam esse Filii personam, ut dicamus duas esse perfectas atque integras substantias, id est, Deitatis, et Humanitatis quæ ex anima continetur et corpore. Pelag. Symb.

31. Æqualem Patri secundum Divinitatem, minorem autem Patre secundum carnem, hoc est, 29. Idem ex Patre ante sæcula genitus, idem in sæculo ex matre generatus. Vincent. c. 19.

30. Adversus Arium, veram et perfectam Verbi Divinitatem; adversus Apollinarem, perfectam Hominis in Christo defendimus veritatem. August. Op. tom. v. Append. p. 391.

Perfectus Deus, perfectus Homo: in Deo summa Divinitas, in Homine plena humanitas: quippe quæ animam simul habeat et carnem. Vincent. c. 19.

32. Qui licet Deus sit et Homo, non duo tamen, sed unus est Christus.

33. Unus autem, non conversione Divinitatis in carnem, sed adsumptione Humanitatis in Deum.

34. Unus omnino, non confusione Substantiæ, sed unitate Personæ.

35. Nam sicut anima rationalis et caro unus est Homo; ita Deus et Homo unus est Christus.

36. Qui passus est pro salute

32. Deest et Colb.

33. (in carnem) in carne. MSS. Ambros. Colbert. San-germ. alique plurimi, et vetusti. Habent etiam in Deo, pro in Deum. At multi etiam Codices, cum Fortunati Cod. Ambrosiano, receptam lectionem præferunt; quæ utique præferenda videtur. Cod. San-germ. pro conversione habet conversatione. Cod. Colbert. totam hanc pericopen sic exhibet: Unus autem, non ex eo quod sit in carne conversa Divinitas, sed quia est in Deo adsumpta dignanter humanitas.

34. (Unus omnino) unus Christus est. Colbert.

35. (Nam sicut &c.) Totum omittit Cod. Colbertinus. Scilicet, uti credo, ne simile illud in erroris sui patrociniū arriperent Monophysitæ. (rationalis) rationalis. Ambros.

36. (Qui passus est pro salute no- secundum Hominem. Aug. Epist. 137. p. 406.

32. Agnoscamus geminam substantiam Christi; divinam scilicet qua æqualis est Patri, humanam qua major est Pater: utrumque autem simul non duo, sed unus est Christus. Aug. Tract. in Joh. p. 699.

33. Verbum caro factum est, a Divinitate carne suscepta, non in carnem Divinitate mutata. August. Enchirid. c. 35.

34. Idem Deus qui Homo, et qui Deus idem Homo: non confusione naturæ, sed unitate Personæ. Aug. tom. v. p. 885.

35. Sicut enim unus est Homo anima rationalis et caro; sic unus est Christus Deus et Homo. Aug. Tract. in Joh. p. 699.

36. Descendit ad inferna, ter-

32. Caro Christus, et anima Christus, et Verbum Christus: nec tamen tria hæc tres Christi, sed unus Christus. August. in Johan. p. 612.

33. Nemo ergo credit Dei Filium conversum et commutatum esse in Hominis Filium; sed potius credamus, et non consumpta divina, et perfecte assumpta humana substantia, manentem Dei Filium factum Hominis Filium. August. tom. v. p. 887.

Deus ergo Hominem assumpsit, Homo in Deum transivit: non naturæ versibilitate, sicut Apollinaristæ dicunt, sed Dei dignatione. Gennad. Eccl. Dogm. c. 2.

34. Unus autem, non — Divinitatis et humanitatis confusione, sed unitate Personæ. Vincent. Lir. c. xix. p. 58.

36. Quis ergo, nisi infidelis, nenostra, descendit ad inferos, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis.

37. Adscendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris; inde venturus judicare vivos et mortuos.

38. Ad cujus adventum omnes homines resurgere habent cum corporibus suis, et redditori sunt de factis propriis rationem.

39. Et qui bona egerunt, ibunt in vitam æternam, qui vero mala, in ignem æternum.

tia die resurrexit a mortuis. Symb. Aquileiæ, apud Ruffin.

37. Ascendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris; inde venturus judicare vivos et mortuos. Symb. Roman. Vet.

38. Resurrectionem etiam carnis confitemur et credimus, ut dicamus nos in eadem qua nunc sumus veritate membrorum esse reparandos. Pelag. Symb.

39. Et procedent qui bona fecerunt in resurrectionem vitæ, qui vero mala egerunt in resurrectionem iudicii. Joh. v. 28.

Ibunt hi in supplicium æternum, justi autem in vitam æternam. Matt. xxv. 46.

stra) Qui secundum fidem nostram passus et mortuus. Colbert.

(ad inferos ad inferos. Cod. Sangerm. ad inferna. Fortunat. MS. Oxon. ad inferna descendens. Cod. Colbertin.

(tertia die,) deest in Cod. Ambros. Sangerm. Cotton. 1. Jacob. 1. (resurrexit surrexit. Cod. Ambros. Fortunat.

37. (sedet sedet. Cod. Ambr. (dexteram Patris) Ita Codd. Ambros. et Fortunat. et Symb. Roman. Vet. dexteram Patris Omnipotentis. Cod. Sangerm. dextram Omnipotentis. Cod. Brunonis. dexteram Dei Patris sedet, sicut vobis in Symbolo traditum est. Cod. Colbert. dexteram Dei Patris Omnipotentis. Codd. recentiores, cum excusis.

38. (resurgere habent cum corporibus suis, et) desunt in Cod. Ambros. Colbertinus legit: ad cujus adventum erunt omnes homines sine dubio in suis corporibus resurrecturi. Sed nihil mutamus.

39. (egerunt egerint. Cod. Ambros. Totum hunc articulum sic legit Colbertinus: Ut qui bona egerunt, eant in vitam æternam; qui mala, in ignem æternum.

(qui vero) Cod. Ambros. et Cotgaverit fuisse apud inferos Christum?—

Quamobrem teneamus firmissime quod fides habet fundatissima auctoritate firmatum—et cætera quæ de illo testatissima veritate conscripta sunt; in quibus etiam hoc est, quod apud inferos fuit. August. ep. clxiv. p. 574, 578.

38. Si id resurgere dicitur quod cadit, caro ergo nostra in veritate resurget, sicut in veritate cadit. Et non secundum Origenem, immutatio corporum erit &c. Gennad. Eccl. Dogmat. c. 5.

39. Post resurrectionem et iudicium, non credamus restitutionem futuram, sicut Origenes delirat, ut dæmones vel impii homines post tormenta quasi suppliciis expurgati, vel illi in angelicam qua creati sunt re-ton. 1. omittunt vero. Codices nonnulli legunt, et qui vero: alii, et qui mala.

40. Hæc est Fides Catholica, quam nisi quisque fideliter, firmiterque crediderit, salvus esse non poterit.

40. Cavete, dilectissimi, ne quis vos ab Ecclesiæ Catholicæ Fide ac unitate seducat. Qui enim vobis aliter evangelizaverit præterquam quod accepistis, anathema sit. Aug. tom. v. p. 592.

40. (quisque) Cod. Ambros. unusquisque. Colbertinus pergit: Hæc est Fides sancta et catholica, quam omnis homo, qui ad vitam æternam pervenire desiderat, scire integre debet, et fideliter custodire.

deant dignitatem, vel isti justorum societate donentur. Gennad. ibid. c. 9.

40. Ὁ ταῦτα πιστεύσας ὡς ἔχει, ὡς γεγένηται, μακάριος ὁ ταῦτα μὴ πιστεύων ἐναγῆς οὐχ ἦτρον τῶν τὸν κύριον σταυρωσάντων. Pseud. Ignat. ad Philipp. p. 118.

CHAP. X.

A Commentary on the Athanasian Creed<sup>a</sup>.

1. WHOSOEVER will be saved, before all things it is necessary that he hold the Catholic Faith.

By the words, before all things, is meant in the first place. Faith goes before practice; and is therefore first in order, though practice may be, comparatively, more considerable, and first in value, as the end is above the means.

2. Which Faith, except every one do keep whole<sup>b</sup> and undefiled, without doubt he shall perish everlastingly.

Which faith, that is, the Catholic Faith before spoken of, which is another name for the true and right faith as taught in Scripture

<sup>a</sup> In the Primer of 1539, and another of 1555, where the version is made from the Latin, and joined with the Popish Service of that time, the English title of the Creed was, The Symbole or Crede of the great Doctor Athanasius, dayly red in the Church.

In King Edward's Prayer Book, A. D. 1549, it is barely entitled, This Confession of our Christian Faith: and it was ordered to be song, or sayed, upon six feasts in the year. At the revisal of the Common Prayer, in 1552, it was appointed to be used on several feasts in the year, the whole number thirteen. But the title still continued the same, till the last review under Charles the Second; when were added thereto, commonly called the Creed of St. Athanasius: from which time the running title has been S. Athanasius's Creed, as before Whicunque vult, in our Prayer Books.

<sup>b</sup> In King Edward's Prayer Books, and so down to the year 1627, holy was read for what is now whole. Which I suppose was intended for wholly: as one may reasonably imagine from Queen Elizabeth's of 1561, where it is wholy: and from the metrical version, which plainly meant wholly, by holy, answering to undefiledly: and it is certain that holy was the ancient spelling for what we now write wholly.

ture; called Catholic, or universal, as being held by the universal Church of Christ, against which the gates of hell shall never prevail. The meaning then is, that every one is obliged, under pain of damnation, to preserve, as far as in him lies, the true and right faith, in opposition to those that endeavour to corrupt it either by taking from it, or adding to it. That men shall perish eternally for unbelief, for rejecting the faith in the lump, cannot be doubted; when it is expressly said, (Mark xvi. 16.) "He " that believeth not shall be damned:" and as to rejecting any particular branch, or article of it, it must of consequence be a sin against the whole; against truth and peace, and therefore damnable in its own nature, as all wilful sins are without repentance. As to the allowances to be made for invincible ignorance, prejudice, or other unavoidable infirmities; as they will be pleadable in the case of any other sin, so may they, and will they also be pleadable in this: but it was foreign to the purpose of the Creed to take notice of it in this case particularly, when it is common to all cases of like nature, and is always supposed and understood, though not specially mentioned.

3. And the Catholic Faith is this; That we worship one God in Trinity, and Trinity in Unity.

One of the principal branches of the Catholic Faith, and which is of nearest concernment, (since our worship depends upon it, and the main body of the Christian religion is bound up in it,) is the doctrine of a Trinity in Unity, of three Persons and one God, recommended in our baptism as the object of our faith, hope, and worship. He that takes upon him to corrupt or deprave this most fundamental part of a Christian's faith cannot be innocent; it being his bounden duty to maintain and preserve it, as he will answer it another day.

4. Neither confounding the Persons, nor dividing the Substance.

Here would be no need of these particular cautions, or critical terms, in relation to this point, had men been content with the plain primitive faith in its native simplicity. But as there have been a set of men, called Sabellians, who have erroneously taught, that the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are all one Person, who was incarnate, and suffered, and rose again; making the Father (and Holy Ghost) to have suffered, as well as the Son, (from thence called Patripassians,) hence it becomes necessary to caution every pious Christian against confounding the Persons, as those men have done. And as there have been others, particularly the Arians, who have pretended very falsely, that the three Persons are three substances, and of different kinds, divided from each other, one being before the other, existing when the other two were not, as also being present where the other two are not present; these false and dangerous tenets having been spread abroad, it is become necessary to give a caution against dividing the substance, as these have done, very much to the detriment of sobriety and truth.

5. For there is one Person of the Father, another of the Son, and another of the Holy Ghost.

The Sabellians therefore were extremely to blame in confounding the Persons, and running them into one, taking away the distinction of Persons plainly taught in Scripture.

6. But the Godhead of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is all one, the Glory equal, the Majesty coeternal.

The Arians therefore were equally to blame for dividing the substance and Godhead, in the manner before hinted. To be a little more particular on this head, we may go on to open and explain this Unity of Godhead, equality of Glory, and coeternity of Majesty.

7. Such as the Father is, such is the Son, and such is the Holy Ghost.

That is, as to their substance and Godhead, there is no difference or inequality amongst them; though there is a difference in respect of some personal acts and properties, as shall be observed in its place. In real dignity and perfection they are equal and undivided, as in the instances here following:

8. The Father uncreate, the Son uncreate, and the Holy Ghost uncreate.

These three Persons were never brought into being by the will of another; they are no creatures, nor changeable, as creatures are; they are all infinitely removed from dependence or precarious existence, one as much as another, and every one as much as any one: they exist in the highest and most emphatical sense of existing, which is called necessary existence, opposed to contingent or precarious existence. In a word; every Person must, and cannot but exist; and all must exist together, having the same unchangeable perfections.

9. The Father incomprehensible, the Son incomprehensible, and the Holy Ghost incomprehensible.

These words are not a just translation of the Latin original, though containing as true and just a proposition as the Latin words do. Immensus signifies omnipresent, rather than incomprehensible in the modern sense of incomprehensible. But if by incomprehensible be understood, not to be comprehended within any bounds, it will then answer to the Latin pretty nearly. The translator here followed the Greek copy<sup>c</sup>, taking perhaps the Greek to be the original language wherein the Creed was written. However, some Latins have understood by immensus, incomprehensible<sup>d</sup>, in such a sense as has been hinted.

10. The Father eternal, the Son eternal, and the Holy Ghost eternal.

None of the Persons ever began to be, nor shall ever cease to be; they always were, they always will be, and must be; the same yesterday, to-day, and for ever.

11. And yet they are not three eternals, but one eternal.

Some account ought to be given of this manner of speaking, because it often occurs in the Creed, and may be thought most apt to offend the malicious, or to mislead the unwary. The way of speaking came in a little after the middle of the fourth century, and then only into the Latin Church; for the Greeks never used it, but taught the same things under a different form of expression. What Greeks and Latins both intended was, that as the three Persons are one substance and one God, so every divine perfection, and every substantial attribute, belonging to any one Person, is common to all; and there is nothing peculiar to any one but the divine relations: to the Father, paternity, and whatever it implies or carries with it; to the Son, filiation; to the Holy Ghost, procession. In this account, eternity, immensity, omnipotence, and the like, being substantial attributes, are common to all the three Persons; who have therefore one eternity, one immensity, one omnipotence, and so on, as one substance and one Godhead: thus far Greeks and Latins agreed both in versions exactly follow the Latin original. As does also the Primmer of 1539, set forth by John Bishop of Rochester; and the other later one of 1555, by C. Pole. The first has unmeasurable, (where we have incomprehensible;) the other has without measure.

<sup>c</sup> There are two printed Greek copies which read ἀκατάληπτος, Stephens's, first printed by Bryling, and Baifius's, first printed by Genebrard: which two copies are in the main one. Our translators, in 1548, could have seen none but Bryling's, that is, Stephens's copy. The Constantinopolitan copy published by Genebrard reads ἄπειρος; the Palatine copy, by Felckman, ἄμετρος. The Saxon, French, and old English

<sup>d</sup> Immensus Pater: non mole, sed potestate omnia concludente. Vel immensus, id est, incomprehensibilis. Abelard. in Symb. Athanas. p. 368.

doctrine and expression. But the Latins, building hereupon, thought it very allowable to go a little further, (which the Greeks did not,) and to express the same thing by saying, of the three Persons, that they are one eternal, one immense, one omnipotent, one holy, one uncreated, &c. And this was the current language at the making, and before the making of this Creed. The Arians were the sole occasion of introducing both kinds of expression, which must therefore be interpreted accordingly. Two things were designed by them: one, to obviate the Arian tenet, that the three Persons were differing in kind, and in degree, as being of unequal perfections; the other, to obviate the Arian charge, or calumny, upon the Church, as making three Gods. In regard to the former, when the Catholics speak of one Divinity, they intend equal Divinity, not Divinities differing in kind or degree: and in regard to the latter, they further mean undivided and inseparable Divinity, not many Divinities. The true meaning then, and the full meaning of the expressions of the Creed will be very clear and obvious. The three Persons are equal in duration, and undivided too; one eternity (one, because undivided, and inseparable) is common to all, and therefore they are not *three eternal*s, but one eternal.

The oldest writers who have used this way of expression are, so far as I have observed, Ambrose, Faustinus, and Austin; and their meaning in it is very plain and certain from the places themselves where they make use of it. Fulgentius, who came not long after them, sometimes falls into the same manner of expression<sup>e</sup>; but sparingly, as if he either did not fully attend to it, or had some scruple about it: for his general way is to say, “not three eternal Gods, but one eternal Godf,” instead of the

<sup>e</sup> Relativa nomina Trinitatem faciunt, essentialia vero nullo modo triplicantur. Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus Spiritus Sanctus. Bonus Pater, bonus Filius, bonus Spiritus Sanctus. Pius Pater, pius Filius, pius Spiritus Sanctus. Justus Pater, justus Filius, justus et Spiritus Sanctus. Omnipotens Pater, omnipotens Filius, omnipotens et Spiritus Sanctus. Et tamen non dicimus nec tres Deos, nec tres bonos, nec tres pios, nec tres justos, nec tres omnipotentes, sed unum Deum, bonum, pium, justum, omnipotentem, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum. Fulgent. de Trin. c. ii. p. 330.

<sup>f</sup> Æternus est sine initio Pater, æternus est sine initio Filius, æternus est sine initio Spiritus Sanctus: nec tamen tres Dii æterni sed unus æternus Deus. Fulgent. ad Ferrand. p. 234.

Immensus est Pater, sed immensus est Filius, et immensus est et Spiritus Sanctus: nec tamen tres Dii immensi, sed unus Deus immensus. Fulgent. ibid. p. 232.

Omnipotens est Pater; sed omnipotens est Filius, omnipotens est Spiritus Sanctus: nec tamen tres Dii omnipotentes, sed unus Deus omnipotens est Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus. Fulgent. ibid.

other in the Creed; and so in the like cases. Which indeed is a very insipid and dull way of expressing it, and if applied to every article in the Athanasian Creed, would make it a very flat composition in comparison to what it is. It is true, that all at length resolves into this, that the three Persons are not three Gods, but one God: this is the ground and foundation, and the other is the superstructure. But then it is a fine and elegant, as well as a solid superstructure; improving the thought, and carrying on a train of new and distinct propositions, and not merely a jejune and sapless repetition of the same thing.

12. As also there are not three incomprehensibles, nor three uncreated; but one uncreated, and one incomprehensible.

Not three incomprehensibles, &c. as not differing either in kind or degree of incomprehensibility, nor yet divided in those perfections: but one incomprehensible, and one uncreated, one as to the kind and degree of those attributes, or perfections; and one in number too, as much as union and inseparability, infinitely close and perfect, can be conceived to make, or do really make one.

13. So likewise the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty, and the Holy Ghost Almighty.

Equally Almighty every one, without any difference or inequality in kind or degree.

14. And yet they are not three Almighties, but one Almighty.

One omnipotence, or almightiness, is common to all three; one in kind as being of equal extent, and equally reaching over all; and one also in number, because of the inseparable union among the three, in the inward perfection, and outward exercise, or operation.

15. So the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God.

The whole three persons equally divine, and enjoying every perfection belonging to the Godhead.

16. And yet they are not three Gods, but one God.

Because the Godhead, or Divinity, which belongs to one,

‡ Here again, one may perceive what copy our translators followed, namely, Bryling's Greek copy. All the other copies, Greek and Latin, place the words in a different order: not three uncreated, nor three incom- prehensibles, but one uncreated, &c. Only the Ambrosian Latin copy reads, not three uncreated, nor three incomprehensibles, (immense,) but one incomprehensible (immense) and one uncreated.

belongs to all: the same in kind because of the equality, and the same in number because inseparably one.

17. So likewise the Father is Lord, the Son Lord, and the Holy Ghost Lord.

Having the same right of dominion, and of equal dominion; and equally exercising it, when and where they please.

18. And yet not three Lords, but one Lord.

Because one dominion is common to all three, jointly possessing, and jointly exercising every branch of it; undividedly and inseparably bearing supreme rule over all.

19. For like as we are compelled by the Christian verity to acknowledge every Person by himself to be God and Lord; so are we forbidden by the Catholic religion to say, There be three Gods or three Lords.

That is to say, the whole foundation of what hath been before taught rests upon this, that the same Christian verity, or truth, laid down in Scripture, obliges us to acknowledge every Person distinctly considered to be God and Lord; and at the same time to reject the notion of three Gods or three Lords: which being so, all that has been here taught must of course be admitted as true, right, and just. And now, having considered the equality and union of the three sacred Persons, it may next be proper to consider their distinction, as it is set forth to us in Scripture by the several personal characters belonging to the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

20. The Father is made of none, neither created, nor begotten.

Were I at liberty to make conjectural emendations, I would here read, Pater a nullo est: neque factus, nec &c. The Father is of none: neither made nor created, &c. And thus the next article (The Son is of the Father alone) would better answer, and the whole would be more elegant. But having met with no copy<sup>h</sup> to countenance such a correction, I must not pretend to it, lest it should appear like correcting the author. However, the sense is very plain and obvious. All the three negatives here <sup>h</sup> Lazarus Baius's copy, in Genebrard, reads ὁ πατήρ ἀπ' οὐδενός ἐστι. But then it entirely omits ποιητός, which, as is plain from what follows in the Creed, ought not to be omitted. Had the copy run thus, ἀπ' οὐδενός ἐστι, οὐτε μὴν ποιητός, οὐτε κτιστός &c. it would have answered my meaning.

Indeed, the first Greek copy in Labbe's Councils, and third in Montfaucon, run in such a way as I suppose: but then I take them to have been patched up from several distinct copies, at the pleasure of the editor or editors: and none of the Latin copies will warrant such a reading.

predicated of the Father amount to this one, that he is absolutely of none: this is his peculiar property, his distinguishing character, to be first in order, and the head of every thing; to whom even the Son and Holy Ghost are referred, but diversly and in different manner.

21. The Son is of the Father alone; not made, nor created, but begotten.

The Son is here said to be of the Father alone, in contradistinction to the Holy Ghost, to be named after, who is not of the Father alone, but of both. The Greeks that struck out the words, and of the Son, below, and left the word alone here, were not aware of it. This conduct of theirs betrayed a shortness of thought, and at the same time served to shew that the Latins had not been interpolators of the Creed, but that the Greeks had been curtailers. It must however be owned, that the Greeks who drew up that form which Bishop Usher printed from Junius were wise enough to observe how this matter stood; and therefore struck out the word alone here, as well as and of the Son, below.

22. The Holy Ghost is of the Father and of the Son; neither made, nor created, nor begotten, but proceeding.

The peculiar and distinguishing character of the Holy Ghost is to proceed, and to proceed both from Father and Son. Indeed, the Son and Holy Ghost are both of the Father, but in a different manner, to us inexplicable; one by the way of generation, the other by procession, though the word procession, in a lax sense, has been sometimes applied to either. However, to proceed from the Father and the Son, or, as the Greeks will needlessly cavil, from the Father by the Son; that is peculiar to the Holy Ghost. The Greeks and Latins have had many and tedious disputes about the procession. One thing is observable, that though the ancients, appealed to by both parties, have often said that the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father, without mentioning the Son, yet they never said that he proceeded from the Father alone; so that the modern Greeks have certainly innovated in that article, in expression at least, if not in real sense and meaning. As to the Latins, they have this to plead, that none of the ancients ever condemned their doctrine; that many of them have expressly asserted it; that the Oriental churches themselves rather condemn their taking upon them to add any thing to a Creed formed in a general council, than the doctrine itself; that those Greek churches that charge their doctrine as heresy, yet are forced to admit much the same thing, only in different words; and that Scripture itself is plain that the Holy Ghost proceeds at least by the Son, if not from him; which yet amounts to the same thing.

I should here observe, that some time before the compiling of this Creed, the usual Catholic way of speaking of the Holy Ghost was to say, that he was nec genitus, nec ingenitus, neither begotten nor unbegotten, while this Creed, by barely denying him to be begotten, seems to leave room to think that he is unbegotten. This raised a scruple in the minds of some, here in England, concerning that part of the Creed, above seven hundred years ago; as we learn from Abbo Floriacensis of that time. For Gregory's Synodicon admitted here, as well as this Creed, had the very expression concerning the Holy Ghost, nec ingenitus, nec genitus. It might have been easy to end the dispute, only by distinguishing upon the equivocal meaning of the word ingenitus. It had been taken from the Greek ἀγένητος, which signifies not barely unbegotten, but absolutely underived: in this sense the Holy Ghost could not be said to be ingenitus. But if it barely means not begotten, it may be applied to him, as it is in the Creed. The whole difficulty then arose only from the scantiness of the Latin tongue, in not affording a single word which should fully express the Greek, ἀγένητος, unoriginate. Ingenitus might tolerably do it; but the word was more commonly taken in a narrower construction. Peter Abelard has hit off the whole difficulty very clearly; whose words therefore I have thrown into the margin<sup>1</sup>.

23. So there is one Father, not three Fathers; one Son, not three Sons; one Holy Ghost, not three Holy Ghosts.

Whether this paragraph be borrowed from St. Austin, or from an elder writer under the name of Ignatius, I know not. The foundation of it was laid in 1 Cor. viii. 6. "One God the "Father," and "one Lord Jesus Christ;" to which it was usual to add, after reciting it, and one Holy Ghost, to complete the whole number of the divine Persons. The intent and purport of the words, in this Creed, is to set forth the distinction of the three Persons, and their several offices and characters: that there is one Father, and that he alone is unoriginate, is first Person, is Head, &c. and neither the Son nor Holy Ghost have any share in these titles or characters, to make three Unoriginates, three Heads, &c. That there is one Son, and he alone begotten, and afterwards incarnate, &c. which characters and offices belong not to the other two, but are distinct, and appropriate to one. And there is one Holy Ghost, whose character is to proceed, and whose office is to sanctify, which character and office are not to be ascribed, in the same sense, to the other two: for that would be confounding the personal characters and offices, and making three Holy Ghosts, instead of one.

<sup>1</sup> Solum itaque Patrem ingenitum dicimus, hoc est, a seipso non ab alio: unde Augustinus adversus Felicianum Arianum; Patrem ingenitum dico, quia non processit ab altero—Aliud itaque dicere est Patrem ingenitum, aliud non genitum—Spiritus vero Sanctus ipse quoque est non genitus—Nec

tamen ideo est ingenitus, cum ipse ab alio sit, tam a Patre scilicet quam a Filio procedens. Solus itaque Pater ingenitus dicitur, sicut solus Filius genitus: Spiritus vero Sanctus nec genitus est, nec ingenitus, sed, ut dictum est, non genitus. Abelard. Introd. ad Theolog. lib. i. p. 983.

24. And in this Trinity, none is afore or after other; none is greater or less than another; but the whole three Persons are coeternal together, and coequal.

The compiler of the Creed now returns to the equality and unity of the Persons; that he may at length sum up and throw into a short compass what he had said upon the Trinity, before he should pass on to the other great article, the Incarnation. When it is said, none is afore or after other, we are not to understand it of order; for the Father is first, the Son second, and the Holy Ghost third in order. Neither are we to understand it of office; for the Father is supreme in office, while the Son and Holy Ghost condescend to inferior offices. But we are to understand it, as the Creed itself explains it, of duration and of dignity; in which respect, none is afore or after, none greater or less, but the whole three Persons coeternal and coequal.

25. So that in all things, as is aforesaid, the Unity in Trinity and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped.

In all things, (per omnia,) as is aforesaid. One of the Greek copies tacks these words to the former article, making them run thus; coequal in all things, as aforesaid. Another Greek copy reads them thus, coequal in all things: so that in all things, as is now said, &c. Both interpret the all things of the coequality in all things. And indeed Venantius Fortunatus, in his comment, long before, seems to have understood per omnia in the same way, to signify that the Son is what the Father is, in all essential or substantial perfections. And it is favoured both by what goes before and after: for from speaking of the coeternity and coequality, the author proceeds to say, So that in all things, as aforesaid, the Unity in Trinity and the Trinity in Unity is to be worshipped; namely, on account of their perfect coeternity and coequality: to which he subjoins, He therefore that will be saved, &c. Wherefore I incline to the moderate opinion of those who think that the author here does not lay the stress upon every little nicety of explication<sup>k</sup> before given, but upon the main doctrine, of a coequal and coeternal Trinity. Which is the very construction given by Hincmar, nine hundred years ago, or nearly<sup>l</sup>. And Wickliff's comment upon the same passage, when put into a modern dress, may appear not contemptible. "And so we conclude here, as is before said, that there is "both an Unity of Godhead, and a Trinity of Persons; and "that the Trinity in this Unity is to be worshipped above all "things; and whosoever will be saved must thus think of the "Trinity, if not thus explicitly, (or in every particular,) yet "thus in the general, or implicitly."

26. He therefore that will be saved must thus think of the Trinity.

Thus, as consisting of three Persons, coeternal and coequal, and all one God; distinct enough to be three, united enough to be one; distinct without division, united without confusion.

27. Furthermore, it is necessary to everlasting salvation, that he also believe rightly<sup>m</sup> the Incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ.

Much depends upon our having true and just sentiments of the Incarnation, in which the whole economy of our salvation is nearly concerned. To corrupt and deprave this doctrine is to

<sup>k</sup> Le Quien's ingenuous and handsome reflection, upon the conduct of Pope Gregory the IXth's Legates, may deserve a recital here.

Quamquam non possum quin ingenue fatear nuncios apostolicos consultius facturos fuisse, si ab ejusmodi sententia pronuntianda sibi temperassent; Qui credit Spiritum Sanctum non procedere ex Filio, in via perditionis est: tunc quippe temporis Ecclesia Catholica in nulla synodo generali hoc de capite iudicium definitorium tulerat. Panopl. contr. Schism. Græcor. p. 360.

<sup>l</sup> Et in hac Trinitate nihil est prius, nihil posterius; nihil majus, aut minus; sed totæ tres Personæ coeternæ sibi sunt et coæquales: ita ut per omnia, et Unitas Deitatis in Trinitate Personarum, et Trinitas Personarum in Unitate Deitatis veneranda est. Hincm. de non Trin. Deit. tom. i. p. 540.

<sup>m</sup> ὀρθῶς πιστεύσῃ. So Bryling's Greek copy. The Latin copies have fideliter credat. Some Greek copies read πιστῶς, or βεβαιῶς, though two, besides Bryling's, have also ὀρθῶς.

defeat and frustrate, in a great measure, the gospel of Christ, which bringeth salvation; wherefore it is of great moment, of everlasting concernment to us, not to be guilty of doing it ourselves, nor to take part with those that do.

28. For the right Faith is, that we believe and confess, that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is God and Man.

There have been heretics who would not allow that our Saviour Christ was man, but in such a sense as a shadow, or a picture of a man, may be called a man: and there have been others who would not allow that Christ is God, but in such a sense as any creature whatever might be called or may be made a God. But all good Christians have ever abhorred those vile tenets, and conformably to Scripture, rightly and justly interpreted, have believed and confessed that Christ is both really God and really man, one God-man.

29. God, of the Substance of the Father, begotten before the worlds; and Man, of the Substance of his Mother, born in the world.

We are forced to be thus particular and expressive, in the wording of this article, because of the many wiles, equivocations, and disguises of those who endeavour to corrupt the faith. The Arians make of Christ a created God, and call him God on account only of his office, and not of his nature or unchangeable substance. For this reason, we are obliged to be particular in expressing his substance, as being not frail, mutable, perishing, as the substance of creatures is, but eternal and unchangeable, and all one with the Father's. On the other hand, the Apollinarians and other heretics have pretended, either that Christ had no human body at all, or that he brought it with him from heaven, and took it not of the Virgin-Mother: we are therefore forced to be particular in this profession, that he was man of the substance of his mother: which, though it be not taught in express words, yet is very plainly the sense and meaning of holy Scripture on this article; and was never questioned, till conceited men came to pervert the true doctrine of sacred Writ by false glosses and comments of their own.

30. Perfect God, and perfect Man of a reasonable soul and human flesh subsisting.

Here again, the perverseness of heretics has made it necessary to guard the faith by strong and expressive words that cannot easily be eluded. Christ is perfect God, not such a nominal imperfect God as Arians and Photinians pretend. He is moreover perfect man, which it is necessary to insist upon against the Apollinarians, who pretended that he had a human body only without any rational soul; imagining the Logos to have supplied the place of the rational or reasonable soul: whereas in reality he had both soul and body, as all men have, and was therefore perfect man.

31. Equal to the Father, as touching his Godhead: and inferior to the Father, as touching his Manhood.

Which needs no comment.

32. Who although he be God and Man, yet he is not two, but one Christ.

This is said, to guard against calumny and misconstruction. For because the Church asserted two natures in Christ, whereby he is both perfect God and perfect man, the Apollinarians, having an hypothesis of their own to serve, pretended that this was making two Christs, a divine Christ as to one nature, and a human Christ in the other: which was a vain thought, since both the natures joined in the one God-man make still but one Christ, both God and man.

33. One, not by conversion of the Godhead into flesh, but by taking of the Manhood into God.

The Apollinarian way of making one Christ by confounding the two natures in one, and by subjecting the Godhead to change, is here condemned. There is no need of running these injudicious and absurd lengths for solving the difficulty how the two natures make one Christ: he did not change his divine nature, or convert it into flesh, though he be said to have been made flesh; he took flesh upon him, he assumed human nature, took man into an union with God, and thus was he one Christ.

34. One altogether, not by confusion of Substance, but by unity of Person.

We are thus forced to distinguish, with the utmost nicety and accuracy, to obviate the cavils and pretences of heretics. Christ then is one altogether, entirely one, though his two natures remain distinct. He is not one by confounding or mingling two natures or substances into one nature or substance, (as the Apollinarians pretended,) but by uniting them both in one Person; one I, one He, one Christ, as Scripture every where represents.

35. For as the reasonable soul and flesh is one man; so God and Man is one Christ.

That is to say, there are two very distinct and different substances in man, a body and a soul; one material, the other immaterial, one mortal, the other immortal; and both these substances, nevertheless, make up but one man. Not by confounding or mingling those two different substances, (for they are entirely distinct, and different, and will ever remain so,) but by uniting them in one Person. Even so may the two distinct natures, divine and human, in Christ, make one Person; and this is really and truly the case in fact.

36. Who suffered for our salvation, descended into hell, rose again the third day from the dead.

The author having finished his explication of the great article of God incarnate, now goes on to other parts of the Creed, such as were commonly inserted in the Creeds before. The article of the descent into hell had not indeed, at this time, come into the Roman, otherwise called the Apostles' Creed; but it had been inserted in the Creed of Aquileia, and had been all along the standing doctrine of the Church. I shall leave it, as our Church has left it, without any particular interpretation; referring the reader to those who have commented on the Apostles' Creed, and particularly to the much admired author of the history of it, who hath exhausted the subject.

37. He ascended into heaven, he sitteth on the right hand of the Father, God Almighty, from whence he shall come to judge the quick and the dead.

These are all so many articles of the Roman Creed, and probably taken from it: excepting only, that the words God Almighty appear not in the most ancient manuscripts; and, very probably, were not originally in this Creed, any more than in the ancient Roman.

38. At whose coming all men shall rise again with their bodies, and shall give account for their own works.

Here are two very expressive phrases, all men, all that have died, or shall die, to obviate the false opinion of a partial resurrection; and with their bodies, to obviate the notion of those, who either thought that the soul only should continue for ever, while the body should be left to perish, or that the resurrection-body should be quite of another matter, form, or kind, than what our bodies are here. I have hinted in my Latin notes above, that some words are wanting in the Ambrosian manuscript; and I may here observe further, that in the words of the Creed, as they commonly run, there is not all the accuracy that might have been: for all men shall not rise, but only all that die. However, it seems that about that time there was some variety of sentiments in respect of that article, as we may learn from Gennadius<sup>n</sup>; which was owing to the different reading of 1 Cor. xv. 51. from whence probably arose some variation in the copies of this Creed. See Pearson on the Apostles' Creed, Artic. 7.

39. And they that have done good shall go into life everlasting, and they that have done evil into everlasting fire.

This is the express doctrine of Scripture, and appears almost in the same words, John v. 28. Matt. xxv. 46. to say nothing of many other texts to the same effect. Yet this article, or rather these two articles, had not gained admittance into the Apostles' Creed so early as the fourth century, the latter of them not at all. But, I suppose, the opinion said to have been started by Origen, that wicked men, and even devils, after a certain revolution, should have their release and restoration, might make it the more necessary, or convenient at least, to insert these articles in the Creeds, and to express the punishment of the damned by the words eternal fire: for the Origenists, at that time, denied both the eternity of the fire, and also its reality, as appears from Orosius in St. Austin<sup>o</sup>.

40. This is the Catholic Faith, which except a man believe faithfully, he cannot be saved.

This is to be understood, like all other such general propositions, with proper reserves and qualifying constructions. As clesiæ lege, carnis resurrectionem credere futuram de morte. Gennad. Eccles. Dogm. c. 7.

<sup>n</sup> Omnium hominum erit resurrectio; si omnium erit, ergo omnes moriuntur, ut mors ab Adam ducta omnibus filiis ejus dominetur, et maneat illud privilegium in Domino, quod de eo specialiter dicitur: Non dabis sanctum tuum videre corruptionem. — Hanc rationem, maxima patrum turba tradente, suscepimus. Verum quia sunt et alii, æque Catholici et eruditi viri, qui credunt, anima in corpore manente, mutandos ad incorruptionem et immortalitatem eos qui in adventu Domini vivi inveniendi sunt, et hoc eis reputari pro resurrectione ex mortuis, quod mortalitatem immutatione deponant, non morte; quolibet quis adquiescat modo, non est hæreticus, nisi ex contentione hæreticus fiat. Sufficit enim in Ec-

<sup>o</sup> Ignem sane æternum, quo peccatores puniantur, neque esse ignem verum, neque æternum prædicaverunt, dicentes dictum esse ignem propriæ conscientiæ punitionem, æternum autem, juxta etymologiam Græcam, non esse perpetuum, &c. Epist. Orosii ad August. inter Aug. Op. tom. viii. p. 607.

<sup>p</sup> Πιστῶς πιστεύῃ. So Bryling's copy, which our translators followed. The Latin copies have fideliter, firmiterque crediderit. And the other Greek copies, πιστῶς τε καὶ βεβαίως πιστεύῃ. Or, ἐκ πίστεως βεβαίως πιστεύῃ.

for instance, if after laying down a system of Christian morality, it be said, This is the Christian practice, which except a man faithfully observe and follow, he cannot be saved; it would be no more than right and just thus to say: but no one could be supposed hereby to exclude any such merciful abatements, or allowances, as shall be made for men's particular circumstances, weaknesses, frailties, ignorance, inability, or the like; or for their sincere intentions, and honest desires of knowing, and doing the whole will of God; accompanied with a general repentance of their sins, and a firm reliance upon God's mercy, through the sole merits of Christ Jesus. There can be no doubt, however, but that men are accountable for their faith, as well as for their practice: and especially if they take upon them to instruct and direct others, trusting to their own strength and parts, against the united judgment and verdict of whole churches ancient and modern.

CHAP. XI.

The Church of England vindicated, both as to the receiving and retaining the Athanasian Creed.

THERE would be no occasion for this chapter, had not a late author<sup>9</sup> of name and character, out of his abundant zeal to promote Arianism, taken upon him to disparage this excellent form of faith; nay, and to apply, with some earnestness, to the governors of our Church, to get it laid aside. He thinks "it may well deserve the most serious and deliberate consideration of the governors of the Church, whether it would not be more advantageous to the true interest of the Christian religion, to retain only those more indisputable forms<sup>9</sup>;" that is, to have this wholly taken away, or at least not imposed in our Articles or Liturgy. Then he subjoins his reasons: which because they may be presumed to be the closest and strongest that can be offered on that side, and because they have hitherto stood without any particular confutation on one hand, or retractation on the other, I shall here take upon me to answer them, as briefly as may be.

OBJECTION I.

The first is, that "this Creed is confessed not to be Athana-

<sup>9</sup> Clarke's Script. Doctr. edit. 1st, p. 446, 447.

“sius’s, but the composition of an uncertain obscure author, written in one of the darkest and most ignorant ages of the Church; having never appeared till about the year 800, nor been received in the Church till so very late as about the year 1000.”

ANSW. As to the false facts contained in this article, I need only refer to the preceding sheets. As to the Creed being none of Athanasius’s, which is certainly true, it is to be considered, that our Church receives it not upon the authority of its compiler, nor determines any thing about its age or author: but we receive it because the truth of the doctrines contained in it “may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture,” as is expressly said in our eighth article. I may add, that the early and general reception of this Creed by Greeks and Latins, by all the western churches, not only before, but since the Reformation, must needs give it a much greater authority and weight than the single name of Athanasius could do, were it ever so justly to be set to it. Athanasius has left some Creeds and Confessions, undoubtedly his, which yet never have obtained the esteem and reputation that this hath done: because none of them are really of the same intrinsic value, nor capable of doing the like service in the Christian churches. The use of it is, to be a standing fence and preservative against the wiles and equivocations of most kinds of heretics. This was well understood by Luther, when he called it, a bulwark to the Apostles’ Creed<sup>r</sup>; much to the same purpose with what has been above cited from Ludolphus Saxo<sup>s</sup>. And it was this and the like considerations that have all along made it to be of such high esteem among all the reformed churches, from the days of their great leader.

OBJECT. II.

The second reason assigned for laying this form aside is, “that it is so worded, as that many of the common people cannot

<sup>r</sup> Athanasii scilicet Symbolum est paulo prolixius, et ad confutandos Arianos hæreticos, aliquanto uberius declarat et illustrat articulum alterum de divinitate Christi Jesu—estque hoc velut propugnaculum primi illius Apostolici Symboli. Luther. de Trib. Symbol. Oper. tom. vii. p. 138.

<sup>s</sup> Thus also Alexander of Hales, 100 years before Ludolphus.

Causa multiplicationis Symbolorum fuit triplex: instructio fidei, veritatis explanatio, erroris exclusio. — Erroris exclusio, propter hæreses multiplices pullulantes, causa fuit Symboli Athanasii, quod cantatur in prima. Alexand. Alens. part. iii. Q. 69. Membr. ii. p. 541. Johan. Januensis in his Catholicon, (an. 1286.) under symbolum, says the same thing.

“but be too apt to understand it in a sense favouring either “Sabellianism or Tritheism.”

ANSW. This objection is not particularly levelled against this Creed, but against all Creeds containing the doctrine of a coeternal Trinity in Unity: it is therefore an objection rather against the faith of the Church, (which those gentlemen endeavour constantly to run down, under the notion of Sabellianism or Tritheism,) than against this particular form of expressing it.

I may further add, that the common people will be in no danger of running either into Sabellianism or Tritheism, if they attend to the Creed itself, (which fully obviates and confutes both those heresies,) instead of listening to those who first industriously labour to deceive them into a false construction of the Creed, and then complain of the common people's being too apt to misunderstand it. This is not ingenuous nor upright dealing with the common people.

OBJECT. III.

A third reason is, that “there are in this Creed many phrases, “which—may seem to give unbelievers a needless advantage “of objecting against religion; and among believers themselves, “cannot but to the vulgar have too much the appearance of “contradictions: and sometimes (especially the damnatory “clauses) have given offence to the pious and most learned “men, insomuch as to have been the principal reason of Mr. “Chillingworth's refusing to subscribe the XXXIX Articles.”

ANSW. As to unbelievers and their objections, the Church has been always able and willing to answer them; sorry at the same time to find that any, who call themselves Christians, should join with the unbelievers in the same trifling objections, thereby giving the unbelievers a very needless advantage, and the most pernicious encouragement. As to vulgar believers, they suspect no contradictions, till some, who think themselves above the vulgar, labour to create such a suspicion in them. Leave the vulgar to their better guides, and their true orthodox pastors, without endeavouring to corrupt or seduce them; and then all will be safe and easy.

As to Mr. Chillingworth, he had for a while, it is owned, some scruples upon him, about the Fourth Commandment as appertaining to Christians, and about the damnatory clauses in the Athanasian Creed; and therefore refused to subscribe for a time. This was in the year 1635. But within three years after, upon more mature consideration, he happily got over his difficulties, and subscribed, July the 20th, in the year 1638; as stands upon record in the Office of Sarum, where he was instituted Chancellor of the Church<sup>t</sup>.

OBJECT. IV.

A fourth reason offered, not for laying aside this Creed, I suppose, but for the governors' taking it into consideration, is, that "the preface to the Book of Common Prayer declares that "particular forms of divine worship, and rites and ceremonies "appointed to be used therein, being things in their own nature "indifferent and alterable, may, upon the various exigency of "times and occasions, be changed or altered."

ANSW. No doubt but the Church may, if it be thought proper or expedient, throw out all the Creeds out of her daily Service, or Articles, and retain one only, in the Office of Baptism, as formerly. But, I suppose, the authors of the preface to the Book of Common Prayer had no thought of excluding any of the three Creeds amongst their alterable forms of worship, or rites and ceremonies: nor will the revival of Arianism be ever looked upon as one of those exigencies of times that shall make it expedient to part with our Creeds; but a reason rather for retaining them the more firmly, or even for taking them in again, had any of them ever been unhappily thrown out.

OBJECT. V.

A further reason pleaded is, that "Scripture alone is sufficient; that the primitive Church was very cautious about "multiplying Creeds; that the Council of Ephesus forbad, under "the penalty of an anathema, any other Creed after that of Nice "to be proposed or received in the Church."

ANSW. The whole design and end of Creeds is to preserve the rule of faith, as contained in the holy Scriptures, and not in the false glosses and corrupt inventions of men<sup>u</sup>. And when endeavours are used to poison those fountains of truth by ill concontentis volens et ex animo subscribo, et consensum meum eisdem præbeo, vicesimo die Julii, 1638. Gulielmus Chillingworth.

<sup>t</sup> Ego Gulielmus Chillingworth, Clericus, in Artibus Magister, ad Cancellariatum Ecclesiæ Cathedralis Beatæ Mariæ Sarum. una cum Præbenda de Brinworth, alias Bricklesworth, in comitatu Northampton Petriburgensis dioceseos in eadem ecclesia fundata, et eidem Cancellariatui annexa, admittendus et instituendus, omnibus hisce Articulis, et singulis in eisdem

<sup>u</sup> Οὐ γὰρ ὡς ἔδοξεν ἀνθρώποις συνετέθη τὰ τῆς πίστεως· ἀλλ' ἐκ πάσης γραφῆς τὰ καιριώτατα συλλεχθέντα μίαν ἀναπληροῦ τὴν τῆς πίστεως διδασκαλίαν. Cyrrill. Catech. V. c. 12. p. 78.

ments and forced constructions, preservatives must be thought on to keep the fountain pure, and the faith sound and whole.

As to the primitive churches, their constant way was to enlarge their Creeds in proportion to the growth of heresies; that so every corruption arising to the faith of Christ might have an immediate remedy: without which prudent and wise caution, the faith would have been lost, in a little time, through the wiles and artifices of subtle, intriguing men.

The Council of Ephesus made no order against new Creeds, that is, Creeds still more and more enlarged, if there should be occasion, but against a new faith, (ἐρέπαι πλοῦν), a faith different from and repugnant to that of Nice, such as was offered by the Nestorians in that Council. This is the literal construction, and real intended meaning of that decree of the Ephesine Council<sup>x</sup>: though, had they intended it against the receiving any other form but the Nicene, all that follows from it is, that they thought no more necessary at that time; or that definitions in councils, (as in the Council of Chalcedon afterwards,) or condemnation of heretical tenets, might suffice, leaving the baptismal Creed (all Creeds were such at that time) just as was before. However, the practice of the Church afterwards, in multiplying Creeds as need required, at the same time that they acknowledged the Ephesine Council, shews fully how they understood it. Nay, the constant reception of the Constantinopolitan Creed (which is the Nicene interpolated, and yet was never understood to be excluded by the Ephesine Canon) shews plainly the sense of the Synod in that matter. It is to be noted, that the Ephesine Council, by Nicene Creed, meant the Nicene strictly so called<sup>y</sup>, and which had already been interpolated by the Constantinopolitan Council.

OBJECT. VI.

<sup>z</sup> Another plea offered is, that in the year 1689 many wise

<sup>x</sup> Vid. Stephan. de Altimura (i. e. Le Quien) Panopliam contra Schism. Græc. p. 230, 158. et Dissertat. Damascen. p. 14, &c.

<sup>y</sup> Vid. Le Quien, ibid. p. 230. et Dissert. Damascen. p. 18.

<sup>z</sup> Since writing the above, I have received a copy of that very Rubrick, which I shall here add, for the information of the reader, and to put an end to all further dispute upon that head.

“ Upon these Feasts, Christmas-Day, Easter-Day, Ascension-Day, Whit-Sunday, Trinity-Sunday, and upon All-Saints, shall be said at Morning Prayer, by the minister and people standing, instead of the Creed, commonly called the Apostles' Creed, this confession of our Christian faith, commonly called the Creed of St. Athanasius: the articles of which ought to be received and believed as being agreeable to and good prelates of our own (commissioned to review and correct our Liturgy) “unanimously agreed, that the use of the “Athanasian Creed should no longer be imposed.”

ANSW. There may be reason to question the truth of this report. There are two accounts which I have seen of this matter; one of Dr. Nichols, the other of Dr. Calamy, which he received of a friend. Dr. Nichols’s account runs thus: “Athanasius’s Creed being disliked by many, because of the damnatory clauses, it was left to the minister’s choice, either to use it, “or to change it for the Apostles’ Creed<sup>a</sup>.” Dr. Calamy’s account is thus: “About the Athanasian Creed they came at last to this conclusion: that lest the wholly rejecting it should “by unreasonable persons be imputed to them as Socinianism, “a Rubrick shall be made, setting forth or declaring the curses “denounced therein not to be restrained to every particular “article, but intended against those that deny the substance of “the Christian religion in general<sup>b</sup>.” Now, from these two accounts compared, it may be reasonable to believe that those wise and good prelates had once drawn up a scheme to be debated and canvassed, in which scheme it was proposed to leave every minister at liberty with respect to the Athanasian Creed: but, upon more mature consideration, they came at last to this conclusion: to impose the Creed as before, and to qualify the seeming harshness of the damnatory clauses by a softening Rubrick. They were therefore, at length, unanimously agreed still to retain and impose this Creed; quite contrary to the Objector’s report. And indeed it must have appeared very astonishing in the eyes of all the reformed churches, Lutheran and Calvinist, (who have the greatest veneration for this Creed,) to have seen it wholly rejected by the English Clergy, when there had been no precedent before of any one Church in Christendom that had done the like. All that ever received it have constantly retained it, and still retain it. It is further to be considered, that what those very worthy prelates at that time

“the holy Scriptures. And the condemning clauses are to be understood as relating only to those who “obstinately deny the substance of “the Christian faith.”

This, word for word, is the Rubrick as it was settled and finally agreed on by the commissioners in 1689, and as it stands in the original book now in the hands of my Lord Bishop of London. Novemb. 7, 1727.

<sup>a</sup> Nicholsii Appar. ad Defens. Eccl. Angl. p. 95.

<sup>b</sup> Calamy’s Life of Baxter, vol. i. p. 455.

intended, sprung from a just and becoming tenderness towards the Dissenters, because of their long scruples against the damnatory clauses: but there is not the same reason at this day. The wiser and more moderate part of the dissenting ministers<sup>c</sup> seem very well reconciled to the damnatory clauses, modestly expounded; as Dr. Wallis particularly has expounded them, justly and truly, as well as modestly. And I am confident the soberer Dissenters would not, at this time, wish to see so excellent and so useful a form of faith laid aside, only to serve the interests of our new Arians. However, since the damnatory clauses were the main difficulty, a better way might have been contrived than was then thought on; namely, to have preserved the whole Creed, except those clauses which are separable from it. But the best of all, as I humbly conceive, is what has prevailed, and still obtains, to let it stand as before; since the damnatory clauses have been often and sufficiently vindicated by the Reformed Churches abroad<sup>d</sup>, as well as by our own here.

OBJECT. VII.

It is pleaded further, mostly in the words of Bishop Taylor, that the "Apostles' Creed is the rule of faith," that this only is "necessary to baptism," that what was once "sufficient to bring men to heaven must be so" now; that there is no occasion for being so minute and particular in the matter of Creeds; with more to the like purpose.

<sup>c</sup> This Creed, by whomsoever framed, hath been long received in the Church, and looked on as agreeable to the Scriptures, and an excellent explication of the Christian faith. Constantinople, Rome, and the Reformed Churches have owned it—our pious and excellent Mr. Baxter, in his Method of Theol. p. 123. speaks thus of it: "In a word, the damnatory sentences excepted, or modestly expounded," (such a modest explication of the damnatory clauses see in Dr. Wallis, &c.) "I embrace the Creed commonly called Athanasius's, as the best explication of the Trinity." And in vol. ii. of his Works, p. 132. says he, "I unfeignedly account the doctrine of the Trinity, the sum and kernel of the Christian religion, as expressed in our Baptism, and Athanasius's "Creed, the best explication of it I ever read." Doctrine of the Trinity stated, &c. by some London Ministers, p. 62, 63.

<sup>d</sup> Tenzelius, a Lutheran, is very smart upon this head against the Arminians, for their objecting to the damnatory sentences.

Verum injuste, atque impudenter accusant initium Symboli, quod primum vindicarent nostrates theologii. Dannhaverus in Stylo vindice, p. 200. Hulsemannus de Auxiliis Gratiae, p. 218. Kromayerus in Theologia positivo polemica, p. 98, 99. et in Scrutinio Religionum, p. 205. alique passim. Tenzel. p. 110. To these which Tenzelius has mentioned, I may add David Pareus, (a Calvinist,) in his comment upon this Creed, published at the end of Ursinus's Catechism, A. D. 1634, by Philip Pareus.

ANSW. 1. Dr. Taylor goes upon a false supposition that the Creed called the Apostles' was compiled by the Apostles.

2. He has another false presumption, appearing all the way in his reasonings on this head, that the Apostles' Creed has been always the same that it is now : whereas learned men know that it was not brought to its present entire form till after the year 600<sup>e</sup>; is nothing else but the baptismal Creed of one particular church, the Church of Rome, and designedly short for the ease of those who were to repeat it at baptism. Now when we are told of the Apostles' Creed containing all that is necessary to salvation, and no more than is necessary; we would gladly know whether it be meant of the old short Roman Creed<sup>f</sup>, or of the present one, considerably larger: and if they intend the old one, why application is not made to our governors to lay the new one aside, or to curtail and reduce it to its primitive size; by leaving out the Belief, or profession of God's being Creator of heaven and earth, and of Christ's being dead, and of his descent into hell, and of the Church being Catholic, and of the communion of saints, and life everlasting, as unnecessary articles of faith. For why may not that suffice now, which was once sufficient? Or how can any thing be necessary at this day, that was not so from the beginning?

3. To set this whole matter right, it ought to be considered, that Creeds were never intended to contain, as it were, a certain quantity of faith, as necessary to bring men to heaven, and no more than is necessary. Were this the case, all Creeds ought precisely to have consisted of an equal number of articles, and the same individual articles: whereas there are no two Creeds any where to be found which answer to such exactness. A plain argument that the Church, in forming of Creeds, early and late,

<sup>e</sup> I know not whether the words, Maker of heaven and earth, can be proved, by any certain authority, to have come into that Creed before the eighth century: for after the best searches I have been hitherto able to make, I can find no copy (to be depended upon) higher than that time, which has that clause.

<sup>f</sup> The old Roman (or Apostles') Creed was no more than this, as may be seen in Bishop Usher, de Symbol. p. 6 and 9.

"I believe in God the Father

"Almighty: and in Jesus Christ his "only Son our Lord; who was born
 "of the Holy Ghost and the Virgin "Mary; crucified under Pontius
 "Pilate, and buried, rose again the "third day from the dead, ascended
 "into heaven, sitteth at the right "hand of the Father, from whence
 "he shall come to judge the quick "and dead. And in the Holy Ghost,
 "the holy Church, the remission of "sins, the resurrection of the body.
 "Amen."

went upon no such view, but upon quite another principle. The design of all was, to keep up as strictly as possible the whole compages, or fabric of the Christian faith as it stands in Scriptures: and if any part came to be attacked, they were then to bend all their cares to succour and relieve that part, in order still to secure the whole. Some few of the main stamina, or chief lines, were taken care of from the first, and made up the first Creeds: particularly the doctrine of the Trinity briefly hinted, and scarce any thing more, because the form of baptism led to it. As to other Articles, or larger explications of this, they came in occasionally, according as this or that part of the Christian faith seemed most to be endangered, and to require present relief. And as this varied in several countries or churches, (some being more disturbed than others, and some with one kind of heresy, others with another,) so the Creeds likewise varied; some insisting particularly upon this article, others upon that, as need required, and all still endeavouring to keep up and maintain one whole and entire system of the Christian faith, according to the true and full meaning of sacred Writ. There is nothing more in it than the very nature and circumstance of the thing necessarily leads to. I may illustrate the case a little further by an easy parallel between matters of faith and matters of practice. The sum of Christian practice is contained in two brief rules; to love God, and to love one's neighbour; which comprehend all. No one needs more than this; nor indeed can there be any thing more. But then a perverse man may possibly understand by God, not the true God, the God of Jews and Christians, but some other of his own devising, or such as has been received by Pagans or heretics: and he may understand by neighbour one of his own country only, or tribe, or sect, or family. Well then, to obviate any such method of undermining Christian practice, it will be necessary to be a little more particular than barely to lay down in brief to love God and one's neighbour: we must add, the true God, the God of Jews and Christians, that very God and none else: and as to neighbour, we must insist upon it, that it means, not this or that sect, tribe, party, &c. but all mankind. And now our rule of practice begins to extend and enlarge itself

Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ οὐ πάντες δύναται τὰς γραφὰς ἀναγινώσκειν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς μὲν ιδιωτεία, τοὺς δὲ ἀσχολία τις ἐμποδίζει πρὸς τὴν γνώσιν ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ τὴν ψυχὴν εἰς ἀμαθίας ἀπολέσθαι, ἐν ὀλίγοις τοῖς στίχοις τὸ πᾶν δόγμα τῆς πίστεως πε-ριλαμβάνομεν. Cyrill. Catech. V. n.

12. p. 78.

beyond its primitive simplicity; but not without reason. To proceed a little further: mistakes and perverse sentiments may arise in the interpreting the word love, so as thereby to evacuate and frustrate the primary and fundamental rule: to correct and remove which, it may be necessary still further to enlarge the rule of practice, and to branch it out into many other particulars; which to mention would be needless. Now if such a method as this will of course be necessary to preserve the essentials of practice; let it not be thought strange if the like has been made use of to preserve the essentials of faith. There is the same reason and the like occasion for both: and if due care be taken in both, to make all the branches hang naturally upon the primary and fundamental rules, and to adopt no foreign ones, as belonging thereunto when they really do not; then there is nothing in this whole affair but a just and prudent care about what most of all deserves it, and such as will be indispensably required in every faithful minister, or steward of the mysteries of God. To return to our point in hand: as more and more of the sacred truths, in process of time, came to be opposed, or brought in question; so Creeds have been enlarged in proportion; and an explicit profession of more and more articles required of every candidate for baptism. And because this was not security sufficient, since many might forget, or not know, or not attend to what they had professed in their baptism, (by themselves or by their sureties,) it was found highly expedient and necessary to insert one or more Creeds in the standing and daily Offices of the Church, to remind people of that faith which they had solemnly engaged to maintain, and to guard the unwary against the wily attempts of heretics to pervert them. This is the plain and true account of Creeds, and of their use in the Christian churches. And therefore, if any man would talk sense against the use of this or that Creed in any Church, he ought to shew either that it contains such truths as no man ever did, or in all probability ever will oppose, (which will be a good argument to prove the Creed superfluous,) or that it contains articles which are not true, or are at best doubtful; which will be a good argument to prove such a Creed hurtful. Now, as to the Athanasian form, it will hardly be thought superfluous, so long as there are any Arians, Photinians, Sabellians, Macedonians, Apollinarians, Nestorians, or Eutychians in this part of the world: and as to its being hurtful, that may then be proved when it can be shewn that any of those forementioned heresies were no heresies, or have not been justly condemned.

If it be pleaded that the vulgar, knowing little of any of those heresies, will therefore know as little of what the Creed means; and so to them it may be at least dry and insipid, if not wholly useless: to this I answer; that there are no kinds of heretics but hope to make the vulgar understand their tenets respectively, and to draw them aside from the received faith of the Church: and therefore it behoves the pastors of the Church to have a standing form, to guard the people against any such attempts. The vulgar will understand, in the general, and as far as is ordinarily to them necessary, the main doctrines of a Trinity in Unity, and of God incarnate: and as to particular explications, whenever they have occasion to look further, they will find the true ones laid down in this Creed; which will be useful to prevent their being imposed upon at any time with false ones. If they never have occasion to go further than generals, there is no hurt done to them by abundant caution: if they have, here is a direction ready for them to prevent mistakes. It is not pretended that all are capable of seeing through every nicety, or of perceiving the full intent and aim of every part of this form, and what it alludes to. But as many as are capable of being set wrong in any one branch, (by the subtilty of seducers,) are as capable of being kept right by this rule given them: and they will as easily understand one side of the question, as they will the other. The Christian churches throughout the world, ever since the multiplication of heresies, have thought it necessary to guard their people by some such forms as these in standing use amongst them. The Oriental churches, which receive not this Creed into their constant Offices, yet more than supply the want of it, either by other the like Creeds<sup>b</sup>, or by their solemn stated Prayers in their Liturgies, wherein they express their faith as fully and particularly (or more so<sup>1</sup>) as this Creed does: and they are not so much afraid of puzzling and perplexing the vulgar by doing it, as they are of betraying and exposing them to the attempts of seducers, should they not do it. For which reason also they frequently direct their prayers to God the Son, as well as to God the Father; being in that case more solicitous than the Latin churches have been, because they have been oftener disturbed by Arians, and other impugnors of Christ's divinity<sup>k</sup>.

<sup>b</sup> See the Creed of the Armenians lib. iii. c. 5. and Renaudot's Orient. in Sir P. Ricaut, p. 411, &c. Liturg. passim.

<sup>1</sup> See Ludolphus Histor. Æthiop.

Upon the whole, I look upon it as exceeding useful, and even necessary, for every church to have some such form as this, or something equivalent, open and common to all its members; that none may be led astray for want of proper caution, and previous instruction in what so nearly concerns the whole structure and fabric of the Christian faith<sup>l</sup>. As to this particular form, it has so long prevailed, and has so well answered the use intended, that, all things considered, there can be no sufficient reason for changing any part of it, much less for laying the whole aside. There are several other Creeds, very good ones, (though somewhat larger,) which, had they been made choice of for common use, might possibly have done as well. The Creeds I mean (of which there is a great number) drawn up after the Council of Chalcedon, and purposely contrived to obviate all the heresies that ever had infested the Christian Church. But those that dislike this Creed would much more dislike the other; as being still more particular and explicit in regard to the Nestorian, Eutychian, and Monothelite heresies and equally full and clear for the doctrine of the Trinity.

To conclude; as long as there shall be any men left to oppose the doctrines which this Creed contains, so long will it be expedient, and even necessary to continue the use of it, in order to preserve the rest: and, I suppose, when we have none remaining to find fault with the doctrines, there will be none to object against the use of the Creed, or so much as to wish to have it laid aside.

<sup>k</sup> Nam cum omnes orationes Latini Canonis, ex vetustissima traditione, ad Deum Patrem dirigantur; in Oriente plures ad Filium: nempe, quia magis conflictata est Arianorum, et aliorum qui ejus divinitatem impugnabant, contentionibus Orientalis, quam Occidentalis Ecclesia. Renaudot. de Orient. Liturg. vol. i. p. 262.

<sup>l</sup> To this purpose speaks Johannes Pappus, in the name of the Lutheran churches, commenting on the Augsburg Confession.

Semper in Ecclesia scriptorum quo-rundam publicorum usus fuit, quibus doctrinæ divinitus revelatæ de certis capitibus summa comprehenderetur, et contra hæreticos, aliosque adversarios defenderetur. Talia scripta, licet perbrevia, sunt Symbola illa totius Ecclesiæ, omnium hominum consensu recepta, Apostolicum, Nicænum, Athanasianum. Joan. Papp. Comm. in Confess. August. fol. 2.

I take this upon the credit of Nic. Serarius, who quotes the passage from Pappus. Serar. in Symb. Athanas. p. 9. tom. 2.

AN APPENDIX TO CHAPTER THE THIRD.

570. I INTIMATED above, p. 136. that Fortunatus's comment upon the Athanasian Creed, though before published, might deserve a second publication, and be made much more correct than it appears in Muratorius's second tome of Anecdota.

I have made frequent use of it in the preceding sheets: and now my design in reprinting it is, to let the reader see what the comment is which I so frequently refer to; that so he may judge for himself whether it really be what I suppose, and I think with good reason, a comment of the sixth century, and justly ascribed to Fortunatus. I have endeavoured to make it as correct as possible, by such helps as I could any where procure; which are as follow:

1. The printed copy of it, published by Muratorius from a manuscript of the Ambrosian library, about 600 years old.

2. A manuscript copy from Oxford, found among Franciscus Junius's manuscripts, which appears, by the character, to be about 800 years old. As it is older than Muratorius's, so is it also more faithful; and though it has a great many faults both in the orthography and syntax, owing either to the ignorance of the age or of the copyist, yet it does not appear to have been interpolated like the other, or to have been industriously altered in any part.

3. Besides those two copies of the entire comment, I have had some assistance from such parcels of it as are to be met with in writers that have borrowed from it. Bruno's comment furnishes us with some parts which he had taken into his own. But there is, among the supposititious works ascribed to St. Austin, a treatise entitled Sermo de Symbolo<sup>m</sup>, which has several scattered fragments of this very comment in it. The whole treatise is a farrago, or collection from several other writers; as Ruffinus, Cæsarius, Pope Gregory I, and Ivo Carnotensis. By the last mentioned, one may be assured that the collection is not older than the close of the eleventh century; it may be later. It will be serviceable however, so far as it goes, for restoring the true readings where our copies are corrupt; which is the use I make of it.

<sup>m</sup> Augustin. Oper. tom. vi. in Appendice, p. 278. ed. Bened.

Nothing now remains but to lay before the learned reader Fortunatus's comment in its native language, and therewith to close up our inquiries concerning the Athanasian Creed.

The various lections, all that are properly such, are carefully noted at the bottom of the page; that so the reader may judge whether the text be what it should be, or correct it, if it appears otherwise. But I should hint, that there are several little variations in the Oxford manuscript, which I take no notice of, as not being properly various lections.

1. Such as are merely orthographical: as a permutation of letters; using d for t, in capud and reliquid, for caput and reliquit; e for i, in trea for tria; and i for e, in calit for calet, and the like: o for u in servolis, p for b in optenit for obtinēt; v consonant for b, in enarravit for enarrabit; though such as this last is might be noted among various lections, in cases more disputable.

To this head may be referred some antique, and now obsolete spellings: immensus for immensus, immortalis for immortalis, inlesus for illæsus, conlocavit for collocavit, dinoscitur for dignoscitur, and the like.

2. Active terminations of verbs, for passive: as finire for finiri, cogitare for cogitari; though these may be referred to the former head, being only changing the letter i for the letter e. Dominat for dominatur I take notice of among the various lections.

3. Faults in the formation of verbs: as abstuleret for tolleret, vivendos for viventes; to which may be added morsit for momordit, having been long out of use.

4. Manifest faults in concord: as humani carnis, for humana; eodem captivitate, for eâdem. But where there can be any doubt of the construction, I mark such among the various lections, leaving the reader to judge of them.

These and other the like niceties are generally neglected in editions of authors; it being both needless and endless to note them. But I was willing to hint something of them in this place, because they may be of use to scholars for the making a judgment of the value of a manuscript; and sometimes of the time or place; as also of the manner how a copy was taken, whether by the ear or by the eye, from word of mouth, or merely from a writing laid before the copyist. Besides that if we can distinguish in the present case, as perhaps a good critic may, the particularities of the author from those of his transcribers; they may possibly afford some additional argument for the ascertaining the author of the comment.

EXPOSITIO FIDEI CATHOLICÆ FORTUNATI.<sup>a</sup>

Scripta anno circiter
520.

QUICUNQUE vult salvus esse<sup>b</sup>, ante omnia opus est ut teneat Catholicam Fidem: quam nisi quisque integram, inviolatamque servaverit, absque dubio in æternum peribit<sup>c</sup>.

Fides dicitur credulitas, sive credentia<sup>d</sup>. [Primo ergo omnium fides necessaria est, sicut Apostolica docet auctoritas dicens; sine fide impossibile est placere Deo. Constat enim neminem ad veram pervenire posse beatitudinem, nisi Deo placeat; et Deo neminem placere posse, nisi per fidem. Fides namque est bonorum omnium fundamentum, fides humanæ salutis initium. Sine hac nemo ad Filiorum Dei potest consortium pervenire; quia sine ipsa nec in hoc seculo quisquam justificationis consequitur gratiam, nec in futuro vitam possidebit æternam. Et si quis heic non ambulaverit per fidem, non perveniet ad speciem beatam Domini nostri Jesu Christi<sup>e</sup>.] Catholica universalis dicitur, id est, recta, quam Ecclesia universa<sup>f</sup> tenere debet. Ecclesiæ dicitur congregatio Christiano-

<sup>a</sup> Ita se habet titulus in Codice Muratorii. Aliter in Oxoniensi, viz. Expositio in Fide Catholica: pro in Fidem Catholicam, ex corrupta loquendi ratione apud Scriptores ætatis mediæ.

<sup>b</sup> Esse salvus. Cod. Murat.

<sup>c</sup> Posterior hæc Symboli clausula, incipiens a quam nisi, non habetur in Cod. Oxoniensi.

<sup>d</sup> Ita Cod. Oxon. prima hæc pericope deest in Murator. Conf. Brun. in Symb.

<sup>e</sup> Quæ uncinulis includuntur, non comparent in MS. Oxoniensi. Nec enim Fortunati videntur esse, sed Alcuini potius; apud quem eadem fere verbatim leguntur. (De Fid.

Trin. lib. i. cap. 2. p. 707.) Alcuinus vero maximam partem mutuatus est a Fulgentio. (De Fid. ad Petrum Prolog. p. 500. ed. Paris.) Sed varia exemplaria varie sententiam claudunt. Fulgentius legit, non perveniet ad speciem; nec quicquam ultra. Alcuinus, non perveniet ad speciem beatæ visionis Domini nostri Jesu Christi. Ab utrisque abit lectio Muratorii.

<sup>f</sup> Universa Ecclesia. Cod. Mur. et Brunonis.

<sup>g</sup> Cod. Muratorii habet quippe, post Ecclesia: quam voculam, utpote ineptam, saltem otiosam, expunximus, fide Cod. Oxoniensis. Conf. Brunon. in hoc loco.

rum, sive conventus populorum. [Non enim, sicut conventicula hæreticorum, in aliquibus regionum partibus coarctatur, sed per totum terrarum orbem dilatata diffunditur<sup>h</sup>.]

Ut unum Deum in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in Unitate veneremur: et credamus, et colamus, et confiteamur [Trinitatem in Personis, unitatem in substantia. Hanc quoque Trinitatem Personarum, atque unitatem naturæ propheta Esaias revelatam sibi non tacuit, cum se dicit seraphim vidisse clamantia, Sanctus, Sanctus, Sanctus, Dominus Deus Sabaoth. Ubi prorsus in eo quod dicitur tertio Sanctus, Personarum Trinitatem; in eo vero quod semel dicimus Dominus Deus Sabaoth, divinæ naturæ cognoscimus unitatem<sup>i</sup>.]

Neque confundentes Personas: ut Sabellius errat, qui ipsum dicit esse Patrem in Persona quem et Filium, ipsum et Spiritum Sanctum. Non ergo confundentes Personas, quia tres omnino Personæ sunt<sup>k</sup>. Est enim gignens, genitus, et<sup>l</sup> procedens. Gignens est Pater, qui genuit Filium; Filius est genitus, quem genuit Pater; Spiritus Sanctus est procedens, quia a Patre et Filio procedit. Pater et Filius coæterni sibi sunt et coæquales; et cooperatores, sicut scriptum est; Verbo Domini cæli firmati<sup>m</sup> sunt, id est, a Filio Dei creati, Spiritu<sup>n</sup> oris ejus, omnis virtus eorum. Ubi sub singulari numero, Spiritus<sup>o</sup> ejus dicit<sup>p</sup>, [unitatem substantiæ Deitatis ostendit; ubi sub plurali numero, omnis virtus eorum dicit<sup>q</sup>.] Trinitatem Personarum aperte demonstrat, quia tres unum sunt, et unum tres.

Neque substantiam separantes: ut Arius garrit, qui sicut tres

<sup>h</sup> Uncis hic inclusa non habentur in Codice Oxoniensi. Verba nimirum sunt, non Fortunati, sed Isidori Hispal. Orig. lib. viii. cap. 1.

<sup>i</sup> Quæ uncis comprehensa hic legere est, non comparant in Codice Oxoniensi. Verba sunt Alcuini (de Trin. lib. i. cap. 3. p. 709.) in quo eadem plane, similique ordine invenias. Sunt porro eadem, uno vocabulo dempto, apud Fulgentium (de Fid. ad Petrum, p. 503.) ordine etiam tantum non eodem. Verba autem illa introductoria; (viz. Trinitatem in Personis, unitatem in substantia) non leguntur in Fulgentio, nec quidem in Alcuino. Interpolator ipse, uti videtur, ex proprio illa penu deprompta præmisit cæteris. Connexionis forte aliqualis conservandæ gratia.

<sup>k</sup> Tres Personæ omnino sunt. Murat.

<sup>l</sup> Deest et in Cod. Oxon.

<sup>m</sup> Formati. Cod. Oxon. Vid. Symb. Damasi dictum (apud Hieronym. tom. v. p. 122.) unde hæc noster, mutatis mutandis, desumpsisse videtur.

<sup>n</sup> Spiritus. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>o</sup> Leg. Spiritu, uterque vero Codex habet Spiritus.

<sup>p</sup> Dicitur. Cod. Murat.

<sup>q</sup> Lacunam in Muratorio manifestam (quippe cum desint ea verba uncis inclusa) ex Codice Oxoniensi supplevimus. Scilicet, vox dicit proxime recurrens librarii oculos (uti fit) fefellit.

Personas esse dicit, sic et tres substantias esse mentitur<sup>r</sup>. Filium dicit minorem quam Patrem, et creaturam esse; Spiritum Sanctum adhuc minorem quam Filium, et Patri et Filio eum esse administratorem<sup>s</sup> adserit. Non ergo substantiam separantes, quia totæ tres Personæ in substantia Deitatis<sup>t</sup> unum sunt.

Alia est enim Persona Patris: quia Pater ingenitus est, eo quod a nullo est genitus. Alia Persona Filii, quia Filius a Patre solo est<sup>u</sup> genitus. Alia Spiritus Sancti, quia a Patre et Filio Spiritus Sanctus<sup>x</sup> procedens est.

Sed Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti una est Divinitas: id est, Deitas. Æqualis Gloria: id est, claritas. Coæterna Majestas: Majestas gloria est, claritas, sive potestas<sup>y</sup>.

Qualis Pater, talis Filius, talis et Spiritus Sanctus. Id est, in Deitate, et Omnipotentia.

Increatus Pater, increatus Filius, increatus et Spiritus Sanctus. Id est, a nullo creatus<sup>z</sup>.

Immensus Pater, immensus Filius, immensus et Spiritus Sanctus. Non est mensurabilis in sua natura, quia inlocalis est,<sup>a</sup> incircumscriptus, ubique totus, ubique præsens, ubique potens.

Æternus Pater, æternus Filius, æternus et Spiritus Sanctus. Id est, non tres æterni, sed in tribus Personis unus Deus æternus, qui sine initio, et sine fine æternus permanet.

Similiter Omnipotens Pater, Omnipotens Filius, Omnipotens et Spiritus Sanctus. Omnipotens dicitur, eo quod omnia potest, et omnium obtinet potestatem<sup>b</sup>. Ergo, si omnia potest, quid est quod non potest? Hoc non potest, quod Omnipotenti non competit posse<sup>c</sup>. Falli non potest, [quia veritas est; infirmari non

<sup>r</sup> Ita clare Cod. Oxon. Aliter Muratorius ex vitioso Codice; quia tres Personas esse dicit, si et tres substantias esse mentitur. Sensus impeditus, aut nullus.

<sup>s</sup> Et Patris et Filii eum administratorem esse adserit. Cod. Murat. Conf. Brunon.

<sup>t</sup> Divinitatis. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>u</sup> A Patre est solo. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>x</sup> Desunt Spiritus Sanctus in Cod. Murat. quæ tamen retinuimus, tum fide Cod. Oxoniensis, tum quia in antecedentibus Pater, et Filius bis ponuntur, sicut et hic Sp. Sanctus.

<sup>y</sup> Cod. Oxoniensis legit claritatis, sive potestas.

<sup>z</sup> Cod. Oxoniensis legit creati.

<sup>a</sup> Muratorii exemplar insertum habet et, quod delendum esse censui, cum absit a Codice Oxon. et otiosum videatur.

<sup>b</sup> Fortunatus, in sua Exposit. Symb. Apostolici, hæc habet; Omnipotens vero dicitur, eo quod omnia possit, et omnium obtinet potentatum. ed. Basil. obtineat potestatem. ed. Lugd. Præluserat Ruffinus, in Symbolum.

<sup>c</sup> S. Bruno, hunc opinor locum præ oculis habens, his verbis utitur: Ergo, si omnia potest, quid est quod non potest? Hoc non potest, quod non convenit omnipotenti posse. Brun. in Symb. Athanas.

potest,] quia sanitas est<sup>d</sup>; mori non potest, quia immortalis vita est; finiri non potest, quia infinitus et perennis est.

Ita, Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus et Spiritus Sanctus. [Deus nomen est potestatis, non proprietatis<sup>e</sup>]. Proprium nomen est Patris Pater; et proprium nomen est<sup>f</sup> Filii Filius; et proprium nomen est Spiritus Sancti Spiritus Sanctus.

Ita, Dominus Pater, Dominus Filius, Dominus et Spiritus Sanctus. Dominus dicitur, eo quod omnia dominat, et omnium est Dominus dominator<sup>g</sup>.

Quia sicut singillatim (id est, sicut distinctim<sup>h</sup>) unamquamque Personam et<sup>i</sup> Deum et Dominum confiteri Christiana veritate compellimur. Quia si me interrogaveris quid sit<sup>k</sup> Pater, ego respondebo; Deus, et Dominus. Similiter, si me interrogaveris<sup>l</sup> quid sit<sup>m</sup> Filius, ego dicam; Deus, et Dominus. Et si dicis<sup>n</sup>, quid est Spiritus Sanctus? Ego dico<sup>o</sup>; Deus, et Dominus. Et in his tribus Personis, non tres Deos, nec tres Dominos, sed in<sup>p</sup> his tribus, sicut jam supra dictum est,<sup>q</sup> unum Deum, et unum Dominum confiteor.

Unus ergo Pater, non tres Patres: id est, quia<sup>r</sup> Pater semper Pater, nec aliquando Filius. Unus Filius, non tres Filii: id est, quia Filius semper Filius, nec aliquando Pater. Unus Spiritus

<sup>d</sup> Muratorius sententiam mancā, vitiatamque exhibet: Falli non potest, quia Sanctus est; omissis intermediis. Scilicet, vocabulum proxime repetitum describentis oculum delusit: et ne nullus inde eliceretur sensus, pro sanitas substitutum est sanctus. Hæc porro sibimet adoptavit S. Bruno, pauculis mutatis, vel interjectis, ad hunc modum: Falli non potest, quia veritas et sapientia est; ægrotari aut infirmari non potest, quia sanitas est; mori non potest, quia immortalis est; finiri non potest, quia infinitus et perennis est.

<sup>e</sup> Deest hæc clausula in Codice Murator. sed confer Symbolum Damasi dictum, quod Gregorii Boetici creditur, apud August. tom. v. p. 387. Append. item apud Hieronym. tom. v. p. 122.

<sup>f</sup> Deest est. Murator. Conf. Brun.

<sup>g</sup> Dominat, pro dominatur, et cum accusativo, ex vitiosa inferioris ævi Latinitate, vel ex scribæ imperitia. Aliter Codex Muratorii, ex Isidori Origin. (lib. vii. cap. 1.) Dominus dicitur, eo quod dominetur creaturæ

cunctæ, vel quod creatura omnis dominatui ejus deserviat.

<sup>h</sup> Distinctum. Oxon. distincte. Murat.

<sup>i</sup> Deest et. Cod. Murator.

<sup>k</sup> Quid est. Murator. Eandem sententiam expressit S. Bruno, his verbis: Quia si me interrogaveris quid est Pater, ego respondeo; Deus, et Dominus.

<sup>l</sup> Et si me rogaveris. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>m</sup> Est. Murator. Locum sic exhibet S. Bruno: Similiter, si interrogaveris quid est Filius, ego dico, Deus et Dominus.

<sup>n</sup> Dicas. Murator.

<sup>o</sup> Dicam. Murator. Apud Brunonem sic legitur: Et si dicis, quid est Spiritus Sanctus? Ego respondeo: Deus, et Dominus.

<sup>p</sup> Deest in. Oxon.

<sup>q</sup> Supra dixi. Cod. Oxon. Sed Brunonis lectio Muratorii lectionem confirmat.

<sup>r</sup> Codex Oxon. pro quia habet qui, in hoc loco, et in duobus proxime sequentibus. Utrumlibet elegeris, eodem fere res redit.

Sanctus, non tres Spiritus Sancti : id est, quia Spiritus Sanctus semper est<sup>a</sup> Spiritus Sanctus, nec aliquando Filius, aut Pater. Hæc est proprietas Personarum.

Et in hac Trinitate nihil prius, aut posterius. Quia sicut nunquam Filius sine Patre, sic nunquam fuit Pater sine Filio, sic et nunquam fuit Pater et Filius sine Spiritu Sancto<sup>t</sup>. Coæterna ergo Trinitas, et inseparabilis Unitas, sine initio et sine fine<sup>u</sup>.

Nihil majus, aut minus. Æqualitatem Personarum dicit, quia <sup>x</sup>Trinitas æqualis est, et una<sup>y</sup> Deitas, Apostolo docente<sup>z</sup>, et dicente : Per ea, quæ facta sunt, intellecta conspiciuntur ; et per creaturam Creator intelligitur, secundum has comparationes, et alias quamplures. Sol, candor, et calor, et tria sunt vocabula, et tria unum<sup>a</sup>. Quod candet, hoc calet, et quod calet, hoc candet : tria hæc vocabula res una esse dignoscitur<sup>b</sup>. Ita<sup>c</sup> Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, tres Personæ in Deitate, substantiâ<sup>d</sup> unum sunt ; et individua unitas recte creditur. Item de terrenis, vena, fons, fluvius, tria sunt<sup>e</sup> vocabula, et tria unum<sup>f</sup> in sua natura. Ita trium Personarum, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, substantia et Deitas unum est<sup>g</sup>.

Est ergo Fides recta, ut credamus et confiteamur, quia Dominus noster Jesus Christus<sup>h</sup>. Jesus Hebraice, Latine Salvator dicitur. [Christus Græce, Latine unctus vocatur. Jesus ergo dicitur<sup>i</sup>] eo quod salvat populum : Christus, eo quod Spiritu Sancto divi-

<sup>a</sup> In Cod. Oxon. deest est.

<sup>t</sup> Paulo aliter huncce locum expressit auctor Sermonis, inter Augustini opera, (Append. tom. vi. p. 281.) Quia sicut nunquam Pater sine Filio, nec Filius sine Patre ; sic et nunquam fuit Pater et Filius sine Spiritu Sancto. Sed nihil mutandum contra fidem exemplarium.

<sup>u</sup> In Appendice prædicta, sic legitur : Coæterna ergo est Sancta Trinitas &c.

<sup>x</sup> Sancta Trinitas. Append.

<sup>y</sup> Una est Deitas. Append. una Deitatis. Oxon. male.

<sup>z</sup> In Cod. Oxoniensi desunt illa docente et. Sed Append. lectionem Muratorii tuetur, alio tamen verborum ordine ; dicente, atque docente.

<sup>a</sup> Ita Muratorius cum Appendice prædict. Aliter MS. Oxon. viz. tria sunt nomina, et res una. Quæ eodem recidunt.

<sup>b</sup> In Appendice sic se habent ; tria

hæc vocabula res una cognoscitur.

<sup>c</sup> Et post ita. Oxon.

<sup>d</sup> Codices habent substantiæ, (quod tamen in Appendice prædicta omittitur prorsus) et comma interponunt post Personæ. Prava interpunctio corrigenda est, et levicula mutatione legendum substantiâ : quod et vidit et monuit vir quidam amicissimus simul et perspicacissimus.

<sup>e</sup> Appendix legit hæc, non sunt, Oxon. tria itemque sunt.

<sup>f</sup> Oxoniensis, res una. Append. cum Muratorio, unum.

<sup>g</sup> Ita Murat. et Append. Oxoniensis legit, substantia, Deitas una est.

<sup>h</sup> Oxoniensis adjicit, Dei Filius et homo est. Inapte hoc loco, quod ex sequentibus patebit.

<sup>i</sup> Muratorii Codex omittit verba illa intermedia, uncis inclusa. Scilicet, illud dicitur proxime repetitum amariensium hic iterum fraudi fuit.

nitus sit<sup>k</sup> delibutus, sicut in ipsius Christi<sup>l</sup> Persona Esaias ait; Spiritus Domini super me, propter quod unxit me, &c. Ita et Psalmista de Christo Domino dicit,<sup>m</sup> unxit te Deus, Deus tuus, oleo latitiae præ consortibus tuis.

Dei Filius, Deus pariter et homo est. Filius a felicitate parentum dicitur: homo ab humo dicitur; id est, de humo<sup>n</sup> factus est.

Deus est<sup>o</sup> ex substantia Patris ante sæcula genitus. Id est, Deus de Deo, lumen de lumine, splendor de splendore, fortis de forti, virtus de virtute, vita de vita, æternitas de æternitate: per omnia, idem<sup>p</sup> quod Pater in divina substantia hoc est et<sup>q</sup> Filius, Deus enim<sup>r</sup> Pater Deum Filium genuit, non voluntate, neque necessitate, sed natura. Nec quærat<sup>s</sup>ur quomodo genuit Filium<sup>s</sup>, quod et angeli nesciunt, prophetis est incognitum: unde<sup>t</sup> eximius propheta Esaias dicit; Generationem ejus quis enarrabit? Ac si diceret<sup>u</sup>, angelorum nullus, prophetarum nemo<sup>x</sup>. Nec inenarrabilis, et inestimabilis Deus<sup>y</sup> a servulis suis discutiendus est, sed fideliter credendus<sup>z</sup>, et pariter diligendus.

Et homo<sup>a</sup> ex substantia matris, in sæculo natus. Dei Filius, Verbum Patris,<sup>b</sup> caro factum. <sup>c</sup> Non quod Divinitas mutasset Deitatem, sed adsumpsit humanitatem. Hoc est, Verbum caro factum est, ex utero Virginis veram humanam carnem traxit. Et de utero virginali verus homo, sicut et verus Deus, est in sæculo natus, salva virginitatis gratia; <sup>d</sup> quia mater, quæ genuit, virgo ante partum, et virgo post partum permansit<sup>e</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Divinitus sit desunt in Cod. Oxon.

<sup>l</sup> Deest Christi. Murator.

<sup>m</sup> Oxoniensis breviter, Item in Psalmo, unxit &c. Notandum porro, quod quædam habet Fortunatus noster, in commentario suo in Symb. Apostol. hisce jam proxime descriptis perquam similia. Confer etiam Ruffin. in Symb. inter Oper. Hieronym. (tom. v. p. 131.)

<sup>n</sup> De humo terræ. Murator.

<sup>o</sup> Non habetur est in Murat.

<sup>p</sup> Pro idem, id est. Murator.

<sup>q</sup> Deest et Cod. Oxon. His quoque gemina fere habes in Exposit. in Symb. Apostolicum.

<sup>r</sup> Deest enim Cod. Oxon. Confer Symb. Damasi dictum.

<sup>s</sup> Quomodo genitus sit, quod angeli — Oxon. At Muratorii lectioni astipulatur Appendix ad Augustin. (tom. vi. p. 279.) et Fortunatus ipse, Expos.

in Symb. Apostol.

<sup>t</sup> Unde et isdem. Cod. Murat. Conf. Fortunat. in Symb. Apostolicum.

<sup>u</sup> Muratorius habet dixisset.

<sup>x</sup> Angelorum nemo, prophetarum nullus. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>y</sup> Deest Deus. Oxon.

<sup>z</sup> Confer Fortunat. in Symb. Apostol. et Append. apud August. p. 279. et Ruffin. Symb.

<sup>a</sup> Homo est. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>b</sup> Dei Filius, Verbum caro. Murat. Dei Filius Verbo Patris caro. Cod. Oxon. Ex utrisque veram, opinor, lectionem restituimus.

<sup>c</sup> Et non. Cod. Murator. Expunximus illud et, fide Codicis Oxon.

<sup>d</sup> Salva virginitatis gratia desunt in Cod. Oxoniensi.

<sup>e</sup> Ita Cod. Oxon. Muratorius, quia mater genuit, et virgo mansit ante partum, et post partum.

In sæculo. Id est, in isto sexto miliario, in quo nunc sumus, [secula enim generationibus constant, et inde secula, quod sequantur; abeuntibus enim aliis, alia succedunt<sup>f</sup>]. “Deus et homo Christus “Jesus, unus Dei Filius et ipse Virginis Filius. Quia dum Deitas
“in utero Virginis humanitatem adsumpsit, et cum ea per por-“tam Virginis integram, et illæsam, nascendo mundum ingressus “est Virginis Filius; et hominem (leg. homo) quem adsumpsit, “id (leg. idem) est Dei Filium (leg. Filius) sicut jam supra dixi-“mus; et Deitas et humanitas in Christo; et Dei Patris pariter “et Virginis Matris Filius.”

Perfectus Deus, perfectus homo. Id est, verus Deus, et verus homo. <sup>ε</sup> Ex anima rationali: et non ut Apollinaris<sup>h</sup> hæreticus dixit primum, quasi Deitas pro anima fuisset in carne Christi; postea, cum per evangelicam auctoritatem fuisset<sup>i</sup> convictus, dixit: Habuit quidem animam quæ vivificavit corpus, sed non rationalem. <sup>k</sup> E contrario, dicit qui Catholice sentit; ex anima rationali et humana carne subsistens<sup>l</sup>: id est, plenus homo, atque perfectus.

Æqualis Patri secundum Divinitatem; minor Patre secundum humanitatem. Id est, secundum formam servi quam adsumero dignatus est.

Qui licet<sup>m</sup> Deus sit et homo, non duo tamen, sed unus est Christus. Id est, duæ substantiæ in Christo, Deitas et humanitas, non duæ Personæ, sed una est Persona<sup>n</sup>.

Unus autem, non conversione Divinitatis in carnem<sup>o</sup>, sed adsump-

<sup>f</sup> Non comparent in Codice Oxoniensi. Verba sunt Isidor. Orig. lib. v. cap. 38. Quæ sequuntur proxime, Deus et homo &c. usque ad matris Filius, desunt omnia in codice Muratorii: ex Oxoniensi solo descripta dedimus. Videntur mihi Fortunati re vera esse, sed librarii culpa (ut alia multa) mirum in modum vitiata; quæ quidem ex conjectura aliquatenus corrigere volui, ut Syntaxis saltem sibi constet, donec certiora, et meliora ex Codicibus (si forte supersint aliqui) eruantur. Cæterum, ut Fortunato nostro hæc ascribam, illud suadet maxime, quod in expositione sua in Symbolum Apostolicum gemina fere habet de porta Virginis, eisdemque ibi nonnullis phrasibus utitur quibus hic usus est. Confer Symbolum Ruffini, a quo solenne est nostro (quippe qui et ipse Aquileiæ olim doctrina Christiana initiatus fuerat) tum verba, tum sententias mutuari.

<sup>ε</sup> Deest hæc clausula in Cod. Oxon. ob vocabulum repetitum.

<sup>h</sup> Paulinarius. Cod. Oxon. Lectio nata ex sermone simplici et plebeio.

<sup>i</sup> Fuit. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>k</sup> Et e contrario iste dicit. Murat. Delevimus illa et, atque iste — quæ sententiam turbant, fide Codicis Oxoniensis.

<sup>l</sup> Subsistit. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>m</sup> Certe, loco rōi licet. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>n</sup> Est Persona desunt in Cod. Oxon.

<sup>o</sup> Cod. Oxoniensis habet carne, et Deo: errore, uti credo, pervetusto, multisque et antiquissimis exemplaribus communi. Quod si verbis in

tione humanitatis in Deum °. Id est : non quod Divinitas, quæ immutabilis est, sit conversa in carnem <sup>p</sup>; sed ideo unus, eo quod humanitatem adsumsit, cœpit <sup>q</sup> esse quod non <sup>r</sup> erat, et non amisit quod erat; cœpit esse homo <sup>s</sup> quod antea non fuerat, non amisit Deitatem quæ incommutabilis in æternum permanet <sup>t</sup>.

Unus omnino, non confusione substantiæ, sed unitate Personæ. Id est; Divinitas incommutabilis <sup>u</sup> cum homine, quem adsumere dignata <sup>x</sup> est, sicut scriptum est; Verbum tuum, Domine, in æternum permanet. Id est, Divinitas cum humanitate; ut diximus duas substantias unam Personam <sup>y</sup> esse in Christo: ut sicut ante adsumptionem [carnis, æterna fuit Trinitas, ita post adsumptionem <sup>z</sup>] humanæ naturæ, verâ maneat Trinitas; ne propter adsumptionem humanæ carnis dicatur esse quaternitas, quod absit a Fidelium cordibus, vel sensibus, dici, aut cogitari, cum, ita <sup>a</sup> ut supradictum est, et Unitas in Trinitate, et Trinitas in Unitate veneranda sit.

Nam sicut anima rationalis et caro unus est homo; ita Deus et homo unus est Christus. Etsi Deus <sup>b</sup>, Dei Filius, nostram luteam et mortalem carnem, nostræ redemptionis conditionem <sup>c</sup> adsumserit, se tamen nullatenus <sup>d</sup> inquinavit, neque naturam Deitatis mutavit. Quia si sol, aut ignis aliquid immundum tetigerit, quod tangit purgat, et se nullatenus coinquinat: ita Deitas sarcinam quoque <sup>e</sup> nostræ humanitatis adsumpsit, se nequaquam

commentario immediate sequentibus (ex Muratorii lectione) steterimus, Fortunatus ipse nobis auctor erit, ut et Deum, et carnem, pro genuina lectione habeamus.

<sup>p</sup> Quæ immutabilis et inconvertibilis est, caro; sed &c. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>q</sup> Incipit. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>r</sup> Deest non. Cod. Murat. male.

<sup>s</sup> Deest homo in Cod. Oxon. perperam, item, incipit pro cœpit.

<sup>t</sup> Muratorius legit, quia incommutabilis in æternum permanet: Cod. Oxoniensis, quæ immutabilis in æternum permansit. Ex utrisque tertiam lectionem confecimus; quæ, opinor, cæteris et venustior est, et aptior.

<sup>u</sup> Immutabilis. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>x</sup> Dignatus. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>y</sup> Personam perperam omittit Cod. Oxoniensis.

<sup>z</sup> Desunt in Codice Oxoniensi: prætermissa scilicet festinantis librarii in-curia, ob vocem iteratam.

<sup>a</sup> Pro cum ita, habet Cod. Oxon. nisi ita.

<sup>b</sup> Murator. Cod. omittit Deus.

<sup>c</sup> Cod. Oxoniensis, nostræ redemptionis conditionis adsumpsit. Nescio an melius Muratorius; nostram luteam, et mortalem carnem nostræ conditionis adsumserit. Sed levi mutatione, recte incedunt omnia. Conditio, apud Scriptores quinti et sexti sæculi, est servile onus, opusve.

<sup>d</sup> Cod. Oxon. legit se nullatenus. Murator. Sed tamen se nullatenus. Noster vero in Exposit. in Symb. Apostol. in simili causa, hac utitur phrasi, se tamen non inquinat.

<sup>e</sup> Oxoniensis habet, Deitas sarcinamque nostræ humanitatis adsumpsit, se nequaquam &c. Muratorius hoc modo, Deitas sarcinam, quam ex nostra humanitate adsumpsit, nequaquam coinquinavit. Lectio frigida prorsus, coinquavit, sed nostram naturam carnis,<sup>f</sup> quam adsumpsit, purgavit, et a maculis, et sordibus peccatorum, ac vitiorum expiavit: sicut Esaias ait; Ipsè infirmitates nostras accepit, et ægrotationes portavit. Ad hoc secundum humanitatem natus est, ut infirmitates nostras acciperet, et ægrotationes portaret: non quod ipse infirmitates, vel ægrotationes in se haberet, quia salus mundi est; sed ut eas a nobis tolleret, dum suæ sacræ passionis gratia, et sacramento<sup>g</sup>, chirographo adempto, redemptionem pariter et salutem animarum nobis condonaret.

Qui passus est pro salute nostra. Id est, secundum id quod pati potuit: quod est, secundum humanam naturam; nam secundum Divinitatem, Dei Filius impassibilis est.

Descendit ad inferos<sup>h</sup>. Ut<sup>i</sup> protoplastum Adam<sup>k</sup>, et patriarchas, et prophetas, et omnes justos, qui pro originali peccato ibidem detinebantur, liberaret; et de<sup>l</sup> vinculis ipsius<sup>m</sup> peccati absolutos, de eadem captivitate, et<sup>n</sup> infernali<sup>o</sup> loco, suo sanguine redemptos, ad supernam patriam, et ad perpetuæ vitæ gaudia revocaret. Reliqui,<sup>p</sup> qui supra originale peccatum<sup>q</sup> principalia crimina<sup>r</sup> commiserunt, ut adserit Scriptura, in pœnali Tartaro remanserunt: sicut in Persona Christi dictum est per prophetam; Ero mors tua, o Mors; id est, morte sua Christus humani generis inimicam Mortem interfecit, et vitam dedit. Ero morsus tuus, inferne. Partim<sup>s</sup> momordit infernum, pro parte eorum quos liberavit: partem reliquit, pro parte eorum qui pro principalibus criminibus in tormentis remanserunt.

Surrexit a mortuis primogenitus mortuorum: et alibi Aposto-

et inepta. Juvat huc conferre quæ Fortunatus noster ad Symb. Apost. in eandem sententiam breviter dictavit.

“Quod vero Deus Majestatis de Maria in carne natus est, non est sordidatus nascendo de Virgine, qui non fuit pollutus hominem condens de pulvere. Denique sol, aut ignis, si lutum inspiciat, quod tetigerit purgat, et se tamen non inquinat.” Conf. Ruffin. Symb. p. 133.

<sup>f</sup> Nostræ naturæ carnem. Murat.

<sup>g</sup> Muratorius legit, dum suæ sacræ passionis gratiam, et sacramenta: nullo sensu. Oxoniensis, dum suæ sacræ passionis gratiæ (pro gratiâ) ac Sacramento.

<sup>h</sup> Ad inferna. Cod. Oxon. Q. annon vetustissima hæc fuerit lectio in Symbolo Athanasiano, sicut in Apostolico?

<sup>i</sup> Qui, loco rōi ut. Cod. Oxon. At Sermo de Symbolo, in Append. ad August. (tom. vi. p. 281.) legit, cum Muratorio, ut.

<sup>k</sup> Adam protoplastum. Append.

<sup>l</sup> Et ut de. Append.

<sup>m</sup> Ipsius deest. Append.

<sup>n</sup> Deest et Cod. Oxon.

<sup>o</sup> Inferni. Append.

<sup>p</sup> Muratorius habet vero post reliqui. Oxon. non agnoscit. nec Append.

<sup>q</sup> Ita legitur in Appendice. Oxoniensis, supra originale peccato. Muratorius, supra originali peccato.

<sup>r</sup> Principalem culpam. Append.

<sup>s</sup> Muratorius, et Oxoniensis, in utroque loco, Partem. Appendix, in utroque, Partim. Media mihi lectio maxime arridet.

lus dicit; Ipsè primogenitus ex multis fratribus. Id est, primus a mortuis resurrexit. Et multa corpora<sup>t</sup> sanctorum dormientium cum eo surrexerunt, sicut evangelica auctoritas<sup>u</sup> dicit: Sed ipse, qui caput est, prius, deinde qui<sup>x</sup> membra sunt continuo.

Postea ascendit ad celos: sicut Psalmista ait; Ascendit in altum, captivam duxit captivitatem: id est, humanam naturam, quæ prius sub peccato venundata fuit, et captivata; eamque redemptam captivam<sup>z</sup> duxit in cœlestem altitudinem; et ad cœlestis Patriæ<sup>a</sup> regnum sempiternum, ubi antea non fuerat, eam<sup>b</sup> collocavit, in gloriam sempiternam.

Sedet ad dexteram Patris: id est, prosperitatem paternam, et in<sup>c</sup> eo honore, quod<sup>d</sup> Deus est.

Inde venturus<sup>c</sup> judicare vivos et mortuos. Vivos dicit eos quos tunc adventus Dominicus in corpore viventes invenerit; [et mortuos, jam ante sepultos. Et aliter dicit<sup>f</sup>,] vivos justos, et mortuos *peccatores*g.

Ad cujus adventum omnes homines resurgere habent cum corporibus suis; et redditori sunt de factis propriis rationem: et qui bona egerunt, ibunt in vitam æternam; qui vero, mala, in ignem æternum. Hæc est Fides Catholica, quam nisi quisque fideliter, firmiterque crediderit, salvus esse non poterit.

<sup>t</sup> Deest corpora in Cod. Oxon.

<sup>u</sup> In evangelica auctoritate. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>x</sup> Quæ membra. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>y</sup> Ascendens. Murator.

<sup>z</sup> Conf. tractatum anonymi apud Hieronym. tom. v. p. 130. et apud Augustin. tom. viii. p. 69. Append. et Isid. Hisp. p. 560. ed. Paris.

<sup>a</sup> Cœlestem Patriam. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>b</sup> Et pro eam. Murator.

<sup>c</sup> In deest. Cod. Oxon.

<sup>d</sup> Mallem quo, si per codices liceret; sed et quod, adverbialiter hic positum pro quia, sensum non incommodum præ se ferre videtur.

<sup>e</sup> Venturus est. Murator.

<sup>f</sup> Quantum hic uncis includitur, omittit Codex Oxoniensis. Delusus est fortean librarius per binas literulas it bis positas: vel, simili errore deceptus, integram lineam præterierit, dum in proxime sequentem oculos conjecerat.

<sup>g</sup> Operæ pretium est pauca hic subjicere, quæ noster habet in expositione sua in Symb. Apostolicum, “judica-turus vivos et mortuos. Aliqui dicunt vivos, justos; mortuos vero “injustos: aut certe, vivos, quos in “corpore invenerit adventus Domini-cus, et mortuos, jam sepultos.
“*Nos tamen intelligamus vivos et “mortuos, hoc est animas et corpora
“pariter judicanda.”* Confer Ruffin.
Symb. p. 140. et Method. apud Phot.
Cod. 234. p. 932. Isid. Pelus. epist.
222. lib. i. p. 64. Pseud. Ambros. de Trin. p. 331.

AN

INDEX OF AUTHORS.

- ABBO, or Albo (Floriacensis) 125, 170, 184, 238.
Abelard 140, 148, 233, 238.
Adalbertus 124.
Adrian I. (Pope) 156, 183, 185.
Æneas Parisiensis 109, 124.
Agobardus 123.
Alcuinus 259, 260.
Alexander (of Hales) 128, 141.
Alexander (Natalis) 115, 151, 182, 216.
Allatius (Leo) 110, 128, 196.
Alstedius 182.
Ambrose (St.) 176, 200, 206, 208, 224, 225, 226.
Amerbachius 168.
Anastasius I. (Pope) 115, 219.
Anastasius II. (Pope) 202.
Anastasius (Antioch.) 160.
Anscharius 124, 183, 184.
Antelmius 114, 126, 153, 161, 213, 214.
Antonius (Nicol.) 147.
Aquinas 129, 187, 215.
Arnoldus 127.
Ashwell (George) 110.
Athanasius (Alex.) 199.
Athanasius (of Spire) 111.
Augustinus (S.) 118, 162, 200, 201, 202, 204, 208, 209, 212, 215, 221, 222, 229, 257.
Avitus Viennensis 180, 211.
Autun (Council of) 118, 136, 179.
Bacon (Roger) 165.
Baifius (Lazarus) 174, 177.
Baldensal (William) 131.
Bale 145.
Baluzius 121.
Baronius 111, 114, 181, 190.
Beleth 127.
Berno (Augiensis) 165.
Beveridge 113.
Bingham 115, 121.
Bona (Cardinal) 110, 131, 160, 163, 180, 185, 186, 189, 192.
Bruno (Bp. of Wurtzb.) 136, 137.
Brunswick (Abbot) 227.
Bryling (Nicol.) 174, 176.
Cabassutius 113, 121.
Cæsarius (of Arles) 211, 212, 257.
Calamy (Dr.) 250.
Caleca (Manuel) 131, 172, 189.
Calvisius 182.
Cantilupe (Walter) 129.
Carranza 148.
Cassian (John) 212.
Cave (Dr.) 112, 116.
Caxton 145.
Cazanovius 191.
Chalcedon (Council of) 202.
Charles the Great 122, 155, 178, 184, 185, 187.
Chillingworth 247, 248.
Clarke (Dr.) 116, 245.
Claudianus Mamertus 204.
Cochleus (Joh.) 137, 138.
Le Coint 120.
Combesis 131, 132, 190, 201, 219, 220.
Comber 113, 151.
Covel 196.
Cudworth 111.
Cyparissiota (Johannes) 131, 175.
Cyril (of Jerus.) 248, 253.
Danhawerus 251.
Denebertus (Bp.) 184.
Dionysius (Milan) 176.
Dodwell 180.
Dupin 113, 120.
Durants (William) 130.
Durell 164.
Ephesine Council, 248, 249.
Epiphanius, 199, 207.
Euphronius Presbyter 136.
Eusebius (Verceil) 131, 176.
Exeter (Council of) 130.
Fabricius 110, 115, 121, 127, 176, 178.
Faustinus 200, 223.
Felckman 161, 173, 177.
Felix III. (Pope) 202.
Fellerus (Joachim) 141.
Flavian (Constantinop.) 202, 210.
Fortunatus (Venant.) 114, 134, 179, 211, 257.
Frankfort (Council of) 121, 183.
Fulgentius 203, 234, 259, 260.
Gavantus (Bartholm.) 182.
Gaudentius (Brix.) 118.
Genebrard 174, 177, 188, 193.

- Gennadius Massil. 141, 214, 228, 229, 230.
 Gentilly (Council of) 171.
 Gorrham 143.
 Grabe (Dr.) 155.
 Gregory I. (Pope) 150, 238, 257.
 Gregory IX. (Pope) 108, 128, 150.
 Gregory (Nazianz.) 118, 200, 204, 207, 222.
 Gregory Nyssen 206.
 Gregory of Tours, 136, 163.
 Gualdo Corbeiens. 126.
 Gundling (Wolfg.) 112, 174, 175, 176, 190.
 Hampole (Rich.) 141, 142, 146.
 Harduin 118, 121, 124, 129, 206, 210.
 Harris (Dr.) 191, 192.
 Hatto (Basil) 122, 183, 189.
 Heideggerus 112.
 Helvicus 182.
 Hermantius (Godfr.) 120.
 Hicques (Dr.) 151, 152, 170, 196.
 Hilary (of Arles) 214, 215.
 Hilary (Poitiers) 161, 216.
 Hildegarde 140.
 Hinemar 109, 119, 123, 137, 167, 240.
 Hody (Dr.) 162, 163, 164, 165, 187.
 Honoratus (of Arles) 215.
 Honoratus (of Marseilles) 214.
 Honorius (Autun) 126.
 Hormisdas (Pope) 202.
 Hulsemannus 251.
 Hydruntinus (Nic.) 127, 171, 195.
 Jannensis (Johan.) 129, 142, 246.
 Jerome (St.) 163, 206, 208.
 Ignatius 230.
 John (of Antioch) 210.
 John II. (Pope) 203.
 Isidorus (Hispan.) 118, 260, 262, 265.
 Isidorus (Pelus.) 268.
 Julianus (Cardin.) 173.
 Ivo Carnotensis 257.
 Justinian (Emp.) 203.
 Kirkham (Walter) 129.
 Kromayerus 251.
 Labbe (Phil.) 111, 120.
 Lambecius 156, 169, 184, 226.
 Le Lande (Peter) 120.
 Langbaine (Dr.) 143.
 Leo I. (Pope) 202, 206, 210.
 Leo III. (Pope) 122, 187.
 Leodegarius 118, 120.
 Leporius 209, 213.
 Lepusculus (Sebastian) 177.
 Livius (Poet) 214.
 Le Long 138, 144, 162, 165, 169.
 Ludolphus (Job) 190, 196, 255.
 Ludolphus Saxo 130.
 Lupus (Troyes) 136.
 Luther 246.
 Lyra 143.
 Mabillon 156, 180.
 Marcus Ephesius 196.
 Martene 195.
 Martianay 162, 163.
 Methodius 268.
 Metrophanes Critopolus 194.
 Montfaucon 114, 121, 139, 151, 154, 155, 156, 157, 160, 161, 171.
 Muratorius 114, 120, 135, 151, 182.
 Neander (Mich.) 177.
 Neckham (Alex.) 140.
 Nesselius 173.
 Nichols 250.
 Nisselius 178.
 Nithardus 168.
 Olivet Mount (Monks of) 122, 185, 187.
 Orosius 244.
 Otrifridus 130, 183.
 Otho (Frising.) 126, 130.
 Oudin (Casim.) 116, 120, 123.
 Pagi 114, 121, 159, 179.
 Papbrochius 119.
 Pappus (Johan.) 256.
 Pareus (David) 136, 251.
 Paululus (Rob.) 127.
 Pearson (Bp.) 111, 244.
 Pelagius I. (Pope) 203.
 Pelagius (Monk) 208, 209.
 Petavius 109, 206.
 Petrus de Harentals 143.
 Petrus de Osoma 147.
 Planudes (Max.) 173.
 Plusiadenus 131.
 Prosper 215.
 Quesnel (Paschal.) 111, 120.
 Le Quien 115, 122, 151, 204, 206.
 RATHERIUS (Verona) 125, 185.
 Ratram (Corb.) 109, 124.
 Regino 121.
 Rembertus 124.
 Renaudot 190, 255.
 Ricaut (Sir Paul) 197, 255.
 Riculphus (Bp. Soiss) 125.
 Ruelius (Johan. Lud.) 111.
 Ruffinus 257, 261, 264, &c.
 Sandius 111.
 Serarius (Nic.) 256.
 Simon (of Tournay) 140.
 Sirmondus 122, 123, 211.
 Smith (Dr.) 155, 190.
 Spondanus 190.
 Stephens (H.) 174, 177.
 Strabus (Walaf.) 163.
 Suicer (Casp.) 197.
 Taylor (Bp.) 110, 251, 252.
 Tentzelius 110, 113, 120, 151.
 Textus Roffensis 185.
 Thecaras (Monachus) 194.
 Theodolphus 122.
 Tillemont 114, 121, 151, 153.
 Toledo III. Council 180.
 Toledo IV. Council 181.
 Trevisa (John) 144.
 Turribius 202.
 Vigilius Tapsensis 111, 112, 204.
 Vincentius Lirin. 114, 204, 213, 215.
 Ullerston 143.
 Vossius (Gerard) 108, 121, 190.
 Usher 109, 137, 150, 152, 168, 175, 177, 192, 194, 252.
 Wall (Dr.) 208.
 Wanley 138, 152, 158.
 Wharton 144, 158, 168, 169.
 Wickliff 143, 240.
 Willehad 183, 184, 185.
 Wotton (Dr.) 158, 170.
 Zialowski (Eustrat. Johannid.) 112.

AN

INDEX OF MANUSCRIPTS.

---

- AMBROSIAN I. Athanasian Creed 154, 166, 202, 221.
Ambrosian II. Anonymous Comments on the Creed 148, 149.
Ambrosian III. Fortunatus's Comment 114, 134.
Baifius. Greek Copy of the Creed 174, 177.
Balliol. Oxon. Bruno's Comment 138.
Basil. Bruno's and Hampole's Comment 141.
Benet Camb. (N. X.) Athanasian Creed 156, 227.
Benet (N. O. V.) Athanasian Creed 157, 163.
Benet (K. 10.) Athanasian Creed 158.
Benet (1-1.) Wickliff's Comment 146.
Benet (N. 15.) Gregory's Psalter 151.
Bodleian. (Junius 25.) Fortunatus's Comment 135, 257.
Bodleian. (Laud. H. 61.) Bruno's Comment 138.
Bodleian. (Laud. E. 71.) Bruno's Comment 138.
Bodleian. (G. 39.) Athanasian Creed 160.
Bodleian. (E. 7. 8.) Neckham's Comment 140.
Bodleian. (E. 6. 11.) Neckham's Comment 141.
Bryling. Greek Copy of the Creed 174.
C. C. C. C. Vid. Benet.
Cambridge. Athanasian Creed 159, 188.
Cassinensis. Athanasian Creed 159.
Colbert I. Athanasian Creed 153, 155, 204, 227, &c.
Colbert II. Athanasian Creed 157.
Constantinopolitan. Greek Copy of the Creed 175, 177.
Cotton I. Athanasian Creed in Athelstan's Psalter 154, 155, 163, 178, 229.
Cotton II. (Vitell. E. 18.) Athanasian Creed 158.
Cotton III. (Vespas. A.) Athanasian Creed 151, 159.
Cotton IV. (Nero. C. 4.) Gallican Version 169.
Dionysian. Greek Copy. See Baifius.
Emanuel Cambr. Wickliff's Bible 144.
Felckman. Greek Copy of the Creed 173.
Friars Minors. Latino-Gallican Creed 160.
Germans (St.) Athanasian Creed 156, 221, &c.
German de Prez. Bruno's Comment 139, 140.
Gotha. Bruno's with Hampole's Comment 141, 142.
Harley I. Athanasian Creed 158, 163.
Harley II. Athanasian Creed 159.
Harley III. Bruno's Comment 139.
Harley. Triple Psalter 165.
Hilarian. Athanasian Creed 161.

- James (St.) Hampole's Comment 145.
James II. Athanasian Creed 157, 170.
James III. Athanasian Creed 159.
John's (St.) Cambr. Triple Psalter 159, 165.
John's (St.) Cambr. Wickliff's Comment 143.
John's (St.) Oxon. Bruno's Comment 139.
Lambeth. Athanasian Creed 158, 164, 169.
Leipsick. Bruno's with Hampole 141.
Magd. Cambr. Wickliff's N. Testament 144, 145.
Magd. Cambr. Athanasian Creed old English 144.
Magd. Oxon. Hampole's Comment 142.
Merton. Oxon. Bruno's Comment 138.
Norfolk I. Athanasian Creed 158.
Norfolk II. Athanasian Creed 159, 168.
Norfolk III. English Gospels 144.
Palatine. Greek Copy of the Creed 173, 177.
Patrick Young. Greek Copy of the Creed 175.
Regius Paris I. Athanasian Creed 156.
Regius Paris II. Greek Copy of the Creed 174.
Sarum. Saxon Version of the Creed 169.
Sidney. Cambr. Hampole's Comment on the Psalms, English 146.
Thuanus. Athanasian Creed 160.
Treves. Athanasian Creed 153, 204.
Trinity Coll. Cambr. Bruno's Comment 138, 139, 165, 168.
Trinity Coll. Cambr. Wickliff's Comment 145.
Trinity Coll. Cambr. Rythmus Anglicus 130.
Trinity Coll. Cambr. Hampole's Comment on the Psalms 145.
Vienna I. Athanasian Creed 156, 184.
Vienna II. Greek Creed 172.
Vienna III. Greek Creed 173.
Vienna IV. German Version 169, 183.
Usher I. Athanasian Creed 150.
Usher II. Book of Hymns 175.
Wurtzburgh. Bruno's Comment 138, 163.
York. Bruno's Comment 139.

AN ANSWER
TO SOME QUERIES
PRINTED AT EXON, RELATING TO THE ARIAN CONTROVERSY.

AN ANSWER
TO SOME QUERIES.

---

QUERY I. Whether the term GOD in the singular number can be proved to be used, in any one place of the Scripture, to denote more persons than one?

ANSW. 1. It is not necessary for the defenders of the received doctrine of a coessential Trinity to assert, that the term GOD, in the singular number, can be proved to be used in Scripture to denote more Persons than one: for as the Arians suppose Father and Son to be two Gods, though they are never called two Gods, or Gods in the plural number, through the whole Scripture: so the Catholics may as well suppose that Father and Son are one God, though the term GOD could not be proved to be used to denote more Persons than one. Or if it be said, that the Arians do not suppose Father and Son to be two Gods, whatever pleas they allege to clear themselves of Ditheism will as effectually clear the Catholics of Tritheism; so that the Catholics will stand at least upon as good a foot as the Arians.

2. It is not necessary even so much as to suppose that the term GOD is ever so used. For admitting that the term GOD in Scripture is always used to denote one Person only, all that follows is, that one Person only is spoken of, whenever the term GOD is used. Not that there are not other Persons essentially and coeternally included in him and with him. It may be the method of Scripture, and generally is, when it speaks of GOD, to mean it of one Person, yet not excluding, but only abstracting from, the consideration of the other two persons included in the same Godhead.

3. They may reasonably suppose it, after proof of their general doctrine, since the doctrine of a coessential Trinity of three Persons being divine, and being one God, is demonstrable from Scripture, (though too long a subject to be here considered,) we may reasonably suppose, that when God is spoken of, and neither the context nor any other circumstances do confine the signification of the word, in that place, to one Person only; I say we may reasonably suppose, that not one Person only, but all the three Persons are denoted by it. And,

4. They have moreover grounds for it from some particular texts. Gen. i. 26. one God is spoken of, and yet the words run, LET US (in the plural) make, and IN OUR image. Gen. iii. 22. one Lord God is spoken of, and yet it is said, "the man is become "as one of us." The like may be observed of Gen. xi. 7. In Isaiah vi. 3. mention is made of the true God, the Lord of hosts, who, by confession of all, is the Father; and that the same Lord of hosts is also the Son and Holy Ghost, appears from John xii. 40, 41. and Acts xxviii. 25, 26. which is also intimated even by the Prophet himself introducing the Lord speaking both in the singular and plural. "I heard the voice of the "Lord, saying, Whom shall I send, and who will go for us?" Ver. 8.

QUERY 2. Whether we have not the same evidence from the Scripture, that God is one Person, that we have, that either the Father, or the Son, or the Holy Ghost, is one Person.

ANSW. We have the same evidence, that the word God is sometimes used to denote one Person, that we have, that either the Father, or Son, or Holy Ghost, is one Person. But to conclude from thence, that the word God always denotes one divine Person only, is just as if we should conclude, that the word man always denotes one human person only, purely because it does so sometimes, or most commonly. It is desired by the Querist, that "some Scripture argument may be alleged to prove any one of the "Trinity to be one distinct Person, which may not with equal "evidence be applied to prove that God is one distinct Person." I suppose the Querist means, that the personal characters, I, thou, he, if they prove any one of the TRINITY to be one distinct Person, do equally prove God to be one distinct Person. To which it is answered, that the personal characters, I, thou, he, do not certainly prove, that whatever they are applied to is one Person, and no more; for they are often applied in Scripture to a whole city, tribe, or family, or to the head of a family considered with his whole seed or race. But the personal characters are a good proof of one distinct Person, where there are not plain reasons to be given why we should believe they are to be understood of more. Now, since plain reasons may be given, why GOD is more Persons than one; and no plain reasons can be given why any one of the Trinity is more Persons than one; therefore it is, that the Scripture argument to prove any one of the Trinity to be one Person does not equally prove that GOD is one Person.

QUERY 3. Whether there be any one text of Scripture, which treats of the unity of God, and places it in any other Person than the Father? It is humbly desired, that some text may be alleged where it is said, the one God is the FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST.

ANSW. It is written, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth: for I am God, and there is none else. I have sworn by myself, the word is gone out of my mouth in righteousness, and shall not return, That unto me every knee shall bow, every tongue shall swear." Isaiah xlv. 22, 23. Compare the New Testament. "We shall all stand before the judgment-seat of Christ; for it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every knee shall bow to me, and every tongue shall confess to God." Rom. xiv. 10, 11. "At the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii. 10, 11. The application of Isaiah xlv. 23. to Christ is manifest from these two passages of St. Paul. It is as manifest, that the Person spoken of in Isaiah is the only God, ("I am God, and there is none else.") Therefore Scripture treating of the unity of God, places it in another Person besides the Father, namely, in God the Son. Again, it is plain, in the Old Testament, that the unity is placed in the Jehovah: but Christ is Jehovah, as may be proved from numerous passages, and is now generally confessed. Therefore the unity is not placed in the Person of the Father only, Isaiah vi. 1, 9. with John xii.

The Querist desires some texts where it is said, that the one God is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost.

This is no where said in one single text, but it is in many compared together. That Jehovah is the one God, and that the one God is Jehovah, is often said in the Old Testament: but the Father is Jehovah, the Son Jehovah, and the Holy Ghost Jehovah; therefore Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are one Jehovah. Or the one God is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Again; it may be proved from Scripture, that God is one; and from the same Scripture, that the Father is God, the Son is God, and the Holy Ghost is God. Therefore again, the one God is Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Compare Isaiah vi. 1, 9, with John xii. 40, 41, and Acts xxviii. 25, 26.

N. B. It is unreasonable to demand any particular text, where it is said, that these three are one God: unless our adversaries could produce a text, where it is said, that any two of them are called two Gods, or Gods in the plural. They pretend no more than Scripture consequences for their doctrine, not express Scripture: and they cannot prove their consequences, when we can ours.

QUERY 4. Whether the same arguments that prove the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to be three distinct Persons, will not with equal strength conclude they are three distinct Beings?

ANSW. No; because all the arguments that prove the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to be three distinct Persons, prove only that they are three distinct Persons. Whether intelligent being and person are reciprocal, remains a question as much as ever: or whether three persons may not be one individual being is still a question, and must be so; neither can it be resolved at all either way, merely from the nature and reason of the thing itself, for want of a certain principle of individuation.

QUERY 5. Whether any man can properly be said to believe that God is three Persons, and but one intelligent Being, without having some notion of the difference he hereby makes between a person and an intelligent being?

ANSW. Any person may have this notion, that God is not three separate Persons, and therefore is not three intelligent Beings: but that God is three united Persons, and therefore one intelligent Being. The precise difference between the idea of a divine Person, and that of a divine intelligent Being, is, that a divine Person is not a separate Being independent of all other things. A divine intelligent Being is separate and independent of any thing. The one is ens relativum, the other ens absolutum. I may add further, that a man may believe the omnipresence of God, without having any distinct notion of the difference between God's being present, in whole or in part, with or without extension; and of the divine prescience, without having any clear notion of the difference between what certainly will be and what certainly must be; and of eternity, without having a clear notion of the difference between succession and an eternal now, and without being able to answer every minute or captious question which may be raised in a point so abstruse, and above human capacity. It is therefore no just objection against the doctrine of the TRINITY, that we are not able perfectly to explain the modus or manner, how three Persons are one Being, or one God. It is sufficient to know, that the Persons are distinct and real, as any other persons are; but so united withal, as no other persons are or can be; and therefore they are not (like other persons) as many beings as persons, but one being only.

QUERY 6. Whether (if no difference can be assigned between an intelligent being and a person) it be not a contradiction to say, that God is three Persons and one Being? that is, whether it be not all one, as to say, he is three Persons, and but one Person; or three Beings, and but one Being?

ANSW. A difference has been assigned in the answer to the preceding Query. Nothing is properly called a being, but a separate being. Thus, those who suppose the soul, or the divine Being to be extended, do not call the parts of the soul, or of God, beings. This I mention, only to shew the nature and usage of language, and what it would be by consent of mankind, on such or such suppositions, be they true or false. Now, since the three Persons are conceived to be more intimately united than the parts of any being (though they are not parts) are or can be; it is very right and just, not to call them three Beings, but one Being. A separate person is rightly called an intelligent being, because a separate person is a separate being: but a person considered as essentially adhering to, and united with another person, does with that other person make but one being; and therefore cannot properly be called a being, unless the word being admits of two senses: and yet then the one is proper, the other improper. The Querist therefore runs into a double falsity; first, in making two senses of being, proper and improper, and arguing from one to the other: secondly, in confounding both together, as if they were really but one sense.

QUERY 7. Whether, if the Father, Son, and Spirit are but one

Being, it is possible to hold, that the Being of the Son was incarnate, without holding that the Being of the Father and the Spirit was incarnate?

ANSW. The Being of the Son is an improper expression; because it supposes the Son to be a Being, (properly so called,) that is, a separate Being, which he is not. But one Person, the Person of the Son may be incarnate, and the Person of the Father or Holy Ghost at the same time not incarnate, without any contradiction, because one person is not another person. Yet it may be said, the Godhead is incarnate; i. e. the divine Being, as personalized in the Son, is incarnate in the Person of the Son. These philosophical niceties, in a point so sublime and mysterious, ought to be neglected and despised. Let any man tell us, whether the Being of God is present in heaven, and whether the same Being of God is present on earth; and let him inform us distinctly what he means by it. Let him say, whether God will be a day older to-morrow than he is to-day, and clear either the affirmative or negative of all appearance of contradiction. Let him determine whether God be extended or not extended, and disentangle either side of the question from all appearance of repugnancy. Let him unriddle the mysteries of eternity; acquaint us how eternity can be past unless it was once present, or how it could be ever present if it never began. But enough of this.

QUERY 8. Whether the imposing side can pretend that the consequence they draw from the unity of God, and from the Father and Son's being severally called God, is more clear and certain than the consequence which others draw from the same consideration?

ANSW. The imposing side (as he calls them) do not argue merely from the Father and Son's being severally called God; but from the Scriptures describing both one and the other to be God in such a sense as to have a right to be adored. Now, in this sense, there cannot be more Gods than one, consistently with the First Commandment, which excludes all but one God from religious service and adoration. Any God, after this one God, is no God, in any true and proper sense: but the Son is the one true God, because he is adorable, and God: and there are not more true and more adorable Gods than one. This consequence they take to be certain and undeniable: but the consequence which others draw, viz. that Father and Son cannot be called God in the same sense of the word GOD, (for so it should have been expressed by the Querist,) has nothing at all to support it, because the exclusive term cannot be proved to have been intended in opposition to God the Son. Or if they be, they must exclude him entirely among the nominal, fictitious deities, which is absurd enough. And because those emphatical appellations of one, or only God, applied to the Father, are easily accounted for, by admitting a different manner of existence, or a priority of order, without any recourse to a different sense of the word GOD. Besides, the Scripture plainly shews by the divine titles, attributes, and glory, which it ascribes to God the Son, that he is God in the strict and proper sense, and not in any lower or different sense, as is pretended.

QUERY 9. Whether men being liable to mistake in drawing consequences, modesty should not teach the imposing side to be as forward to bear with their brethren, as they are to bear with the imposers?

ANSW. When it is once declared what is meant by bearing with their brethren, this Query may have a determinate answer. As to men's being liable to mistake, it is no argument against their being certain of many things; and if they be certain of such a truth, and that it is very important, all Christian and prudent methods must be used to maintain and preserve it.

QUERY 10. Whether it is not dangerous rashness to censure men as to their everlasting state, for not believing a doctrine which is not expressly declared in any one place in the Bible?

ANSW. There is no rashness at all in censuring men, as to their everlasting estate, for disbelieving, and especially for publicly opposing a doctrine of so vast importance, which is both expressly and by necessary consequence declared in many places of Scripture compared together. "If an angel from heaven preach "any other Gospel unto you, than that which we have preached "unto you, let him be accursed." Gal. i. 8.

QUERY 11. Whether they who say, the Son did know the day and hour of the last judgment, when he said expressly, that he did not; whether, I say, they do not make Christ to have been guilty of an equivocation? And whether such their assertion is not very dangerous, as tending to introduce, by his example, a practice which will destroy all credit among Christians?

ANSW. There was no equivocation in saying what was literally true, that the Son, as Son of man, did not know the day and hour of the last judgment. The context itself sufficiently limits his denial to his human nature. The Querist tells us, that, "according to this way of equivocating, a man (as one observes) may deny that he saw a thing which he actually saw; meaning, he did not see it with one eye, which he wilfully kept shut, while he beheld it with the other." But, as one observes, (see Mr. Boyse in his reply to that pretence of Mr. Emlyn's,) in answer to this idle stuff, there might be some colour for the pretence, if a man had two visive powers, or two souls, as well as two eyes: but since he has but one visive power, and one soul, which one soul sees, whether one eye only, or both be open, it would be a downright falsehood to say, I saw not a thing at all, because I saw it but with one eye. But the case is quite different, where there are two knowing principles, belonging to two different natures; one of which may see or know, while the other doth not see or know; and consequently it may be denied of one, which may be affirmed of the other. It could not indeed be absolutely and indefinitely denied of Christ, that he knew the day: neither is it so denied in Scripture, but in a certain respect only, which the reason of the thing and the very context determines it to: for it speaks not of the Son of God as such, but of the Son of man, or of Christ considered as Son of man.

QUERY 12. Whether, if the Holy Spirit be the supreme God, he must not have as much right to give the Father, as the Father can have to give him? And whether, upon this supposition, it can be proper for Christians to pray to the Father to give them his Holy Spirit?

ANSW. As to the rights and privileges among the sacred Three; they are best known to themselves. And who are we, that we should pretend to fathom the depths of the divine nature, or the ineffable economy of the three Persons? Scripture calls the Spirit, the Spirit of the Father, and not vice versa, and directs us to ask the Father to give his Spirit to us. This is sufficient for us to know, and is a direction to our practice.

QUERY 13. Whether it be an intolerable crime in ministers, and such as deserves ejectment, for them to hold, that Christ alone is the King of his Church? And that Christians are to receive his words only, as the authentic rule of their faith, without subjecting their faith to the authoritative interpretations of any men upon earth?

ANSW. This Query is too loose and general to admit of any close determinate answer. I shall only observe, that these gentlemen know at other times how to interpret the alone King, or only Potentate, so as to leave room for subordinate governors. And I know not any one that contends for more, or ever pretends to equal themselves to Christ. Arians, perhaps, or Socinians, having brought Christ down to the rank of creatures, or of men, may in time take upon them farther: but the Trinitarians will never be wanting in their honour to Christ, or the alone King, and the alone God, not exclusive of, but in conjunction with God the Father and the Holy Ghost; not abridging all or any of the three sacred Persons of the liberty of appointing subordinate ministers, rulers, or governors, to act under them, according to such rules, laws, and measures, as infinite wisdom shall see good and proper.

THE SCRIPTURES

AND

THE ARIANS

COMPARED

IN THEIR ACCOUNTS OF

GOD THE FATHER

AND

GOD THE SON:

BY WAY OF REJOINDER TO A PAMPHLET,

ENTITLED,

THE SCRIPTURE AND THE ATHANASIANS COMPARED,

&c.

IN TWO PARTS.

Let them be taken in the crafty wiliness that they have imagined. Psalm x. 2.

THE SCRIPTURES

AND

THE ARIANS

COMPARED, &c.

---

PART I.

---

I SHALL lay before the reader the plain account of Scripture in one column, and the true account of what the modern Arian scheme is in the other: which I will endeavour to make as plain as any thing of that nature can be; and leave the reader to judge whether it be agreeable to Scripture or no, and so choose or refuse it after a rational and faithful examination.

SCRIPTURE.

There is but one GOD, one adorable GOD<sup>a</sup>, Jehovah<sup>b</sup>, and GOD of Israel. Before whom was there no GOD formed, neither will there be after him<sup>c</sup>. This one GOD will not give his glory

ARIANISM.

Our modern Arians all implicitly or consequentially teach, some expressly say<sup>a</sup>, that there are more GODS than one: two GODS at least, both of them adorable, and to be served with religious worship. One of the GODS is supposed to be after to another<sup>d</sup>; that is, will not allow any other God to claim the glory of being adored, either against him, or with him; being extremely jealous<sup>e</sup> of his honour, the honour of being served with religious worship, which both under the Old and New Testament was due to God alone<sup>f</sup>, and by which his superlative MAJESTY and peerless perfections are to be acknowledged<sup>g</sup> through the whole creation.

<sup>a</sup> Exod. xx. 3. Isa. xlv. 8. xlv. 5. 1 Cor. viii. 4. <sup>b</sup> Deut. vi. 4. Mark xii. 29. Isa. xlv. 21. xlii. 8. <sup>c</sup> Isa. xliii. 10.

<sup>a</sup> The Scriptures and Athanasians Compared, p. 4.

the other in duration<sup>h</sup>, and in every perfection. The greater God has given the glory of religious worship to the lesser God; thereby, so far, resigning up his peculiar privilege, and his appropriate honours: only the glory of being underived, which he cannot possibly give away if he would, he will not<sup>c</sup> (good reason why) part with at any rate. The sacrifice of prayer and praise, however, is common to both the Gods; who are accordingly to be honoured with the like outward acts of worship, to be made higher or lower worship by the worshipper's inward intention; and there are no outward acts left whereby common Christians may visibly distinguish the supreme God from the inferior God; though one be infinitely more excellent than the other; and though reason itself teaches that there ought to be as great a difference between the outward honours paid to this God, and that God, as there is between this God and that God.

SCRIPTURE.

Our Lord JESUS CHRIST is LORD GOD<sup>h</sup>, Jehovah<sup>i</sup>, (a title expressing necessary existence

ARIANISM.

Our Lord Jesus Christ is by no means necessarily existing<sup>d</sup>, but precarious in existence, and deand all perfection<sup>k</sup>), True God<sup>l</sup>, Great God<sup>m</sup>, and Mighty God<sup>n</sup>, as well as the FATHER. He is moreover Alpha and Omega, the Beginning and the Ending, the First and the Last<sup>o</sup>, which is expressive of unlimited eternity, and so understood when applied to GOD the FATHER, or to the one GOD of Israel<sup>p</sup>. He is also the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come, the Almighty<sup>q</sup>, than which nothing higher or stronger can be said even of GOD the FATHER.

<sup>d</sup> Isa. xlii. 8. xlviii. 11. <sup>e</sup> Exod. xx. 5. xxxiv. 14. <sup>f</sup> Matth. iv. 10. Rev. xix. 10. xxii. 9. <sup>g</sup> 2 Kings xix. 15. Isa. xl. 9, 10, &c. xlv. 5, 6, 7. Jer. x. 10, 11, &c. <sup>h</sup> Luke i. 16, 17. John xx. 28. <sup>i</sup> Compare Isa. vi. with John xii. 41. Zech. xii. 10. with John xix. 37. Psalm cii. 25. with Heb. i. 10. Zech. xi. 12. with Matt. xxvii. 9, 10. Isa. xl. 3. with Mark i. 3. Hosea i. 7. with Luke ii. 11.

<sup>b</sup> Mr. Whiston plainly; the rest covertly. <sup>c</sup> Modest Plea, &c. Continued, p. 7. Reply to Dr. Waterland's Defence, p. 201. <sup>d</sup> Modest Plea, &c. p. 17, 217. Second letter to Dr. Mangey, p. 27.

<sup>k</sup> Exod. iii. 14. Isa. xlii. 8. xlv. 21. Mal. iii. 6. <sup>l</sup> I John v. 20. <sup>m</sup> Tit. ii. 13. <sup>n</sup> Isa. ix. 6. <sup>o</sup> Rev. i. 8, 17. xxii. 13. <sup>p</sup> Isa. xli. 4. xlv. 6. xlvi. 12. Rev. xxi. 6. <sup>q</sup> Rev. i. 8.

pending entirely on the good pleasure of the greater God; who being of course infinitely above him, can, consequently, whenever he pleases, make other Gods as great, or greater than he is. And though CHRIST be styled  $\text{J}\epsilon\text{H}\text{O}\text{V}\text{A}\text{H}$ , it means only that he is faithful to his promises<sup>e</sup>, or that he once personated<sup>f</sup> the true  $\text{J}\epsilon\text{H}\text{O}\text{V}\text{A}\text{H}$ ; which any inferior angel might have done<sup>g</sup>. And though he be a great GOD, and a true GOD, and a mighty GOD; yet there is another GOD, a greater GOD, a truer<sup>h</sup> GOD, and a mightier GOD, by far, than he; to whose good pleasure and free appointment he owes all his greatness and divinity. And though the title of First and Last, &c. may signify an unlimited eternity, when applied to the FATHER, (if the FATHER's eternity be any where revealed in the Old Testament, which is doubtful<sup>1</sup>), yet it must not, it shall not signify any such thing when applied to the SON. And though Rev. i. 8. has been understood by all the primitive churches of GOD the SON, and such application be favoured by the context; yet it shall be understood of the FATHER only; or, at least, shall bear a subordinate sense, if understood of the SON. For there are several metaphysical reasons about derived and underived, about generation, causes, acts, will, indi- viduals, identicals, &c. which so require, and Scripture must yield to them.

<sup>e</sup> Collection of Queries, p. 19.

<sup>f</sup> The Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 5. Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 89. <sup>g</sup> Reply to Dr. Waterland's Defence, p. 177. <sup>h</sup> Unity of God not Inconsistent, &c. p. 34. <sup>i</sup> Collection of Queries, p. 50.

SCRIPTURE.

Our Lord JESUS CHRIST was GOD before any dominion commenced, before any creatures existed, before the world was<sup>r</sup>. He is over all GOD blessed for ever<sup>s</sup>: and to him is ascribed glory, praise, and dominion for ever and ever<sup>t</sup>, jointly also with the FATHER<sup>v</sup>. From whence it is evident, that as he was GOD before the creation, before any creature began, and consequently from all eternity; so he will be honoured as GOD to all eternity.

<sup>r</sup> John i. 1, 2, 3, 10. Coloss. i. 15, 16. <sup>s</sup> Rom. ix. 5. <sup>t</sup> 1 Pet. iv. 11. <sup>2</sup> Pet. iii. 18. Rev. i. 6. Heb. xiii. 21. Heb. i. 8. <sup>v</sup> Rev. v. 12, 13.

ARIANISM.

Some of the modern Arians say, that CHRIST is GOD, in the sense of dominion: others make his exaltation, after his rising from the dead, to be the sole foundation of his personal Godhead<sup>k</sup>. Others suppose his personating the FATHER to have been all that his Godhead meant before his incarnation<sup>l</sup>. All which accounts must appear miserably vain and presumptuous, as coming vastly short of what St. John has declared of him in respect of what he was antecedently to the creation. Sometimes therefore they are pleased to allow that he was GOD before the world was, as being partaker of divine power and glory<sup>m</sup>. But then they tell us not what they mean by it. Whatever it be, they suppose him to have been really stripped and emptied of that glory, that is, of all the Godhead he had of his own; that he sunk his perfections, his power, and his wisdom<sup>n</sup>, when he became man; being then really weaker and lower than the angels<sup>o</sup>; so that he ceased for a time to be GOD, and wanted to be made a GOD again after his resurrection<sup>p</sup>: which Godhead then obtained, or regained, is to last no longer than his mediatorial kingdom; after the ceasing whereof, it seems, he is to lay down his Godhead, and never to be a God more to all eternity<sup>q</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Collection of Queries, p. 75.
<sup>l</sup> Clarke's Scripture Doctrine, p. 73. edit. 2nd. <sup>m</sup> Ibid. p. 240. <sup>n</sup> Emlin's Examination of Dr. Bennet, p. 15, 16. <sup>o</sup> Modest Plea, p. 93. Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 15. <sup>p</sup> Collect. of Queries, p. 75. Scripture and Athanasians Comp. p. 16.

SCRIPTURE.

Our blessed Lord is described as having the divine attributes, the distinguishing marks and characters of the one true God supreme.

1. Knowledge of the heart. He knoweth the hearts of all men<sup>w</sup>. It is he that searcheth the reins and the heart<sup>x</sup>. He is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart<sup>y</sup>.

2. Omniscience. There is no creature but what is manifest in his sight: all things are naked and opened to his eyes<sup>z</sup>. In him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge<sup>a</sup>. He knoweth all things<sup>b</sup>.

3. Unchangeable eternity. He is always the same<sup>c</sup>, yesterday, to-day, and for ever<sup>d</sup>.

4. Omnipresence. He is Creator of all things, and by him all things consist<sup>e</sup>. He is worshipped by the whole creation<sup>f</sup>. He is in the midst of all that call upon him.

5. Omnipotence. He can do all that the FATHER doth<sup>h</sup>. He <sup>w</sup> Acts i. 24. <sup>x</sup> Rev. ii. 23. <sup>y</sup> Heb. iv. 12. <sup>z</sup> Heb. iv. 13. <sup>a</sup> Col. ii. 3. <sup>b</sup> John xvi. 30. xxi. 17. <sup>c</sup> Heb. i. 12. Rev. i. 8. <sup>d</sup> Heb. xiii. 13. <sup>e</sup> Col. i. 17. <sup>f</sup> Rev. v. 8. <sup>g</sup> Matt. v. 20. <sup>h</sup> John v. 19.

ARIANISM.

The modern Arians are pleased to allow, in words, that divine attributes belong to CHRIST; meaning by divine, quite another thing than others mean in this case.

CHRIST is omniscient, they say, relatively<sup>r</sup>; that is, while ignorant<sup>s</sup> of much more than he knows, as he must be if ignorant at all: eternal also, provided he be not coeternal; that is, provided the FATHER be but infinitely (as he must be, if at all) more ancient than he: omnipresent also, but within bounds: omnipotent, but by the FATHER'S power, not by his own: unchangeable, I think, they never directly say, but the contrary<sup>t</sup>; making his generation and incarnation arguments of his being subject to change. And, indeed, upon the whole, they suppose him the most changeable being in the universe, running through more, and more prodigious changes, than any other creature ever did, or will do.

<sup>q</sup> Reply to Dr. W. by the Author of Unity, &c. p. 49. Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 16, 17, 22. Peirce's Western Inquis. p. 148, 149. <sup>r</sup> Collect. of Queries, p. 48. <sup>s</sup> Ibid. Unity of GOD not inconsistent, &c. p. 8. <sup>t</sup> Reply to Dr. Waterland's Defence, p. 271. Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 12, 13. Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 145.

and the FATHER are one<sup>i</sup>. He is Almighty<sup>k</sup>.

They criticise away the force of the texts pleaded in favour of the divine attributes of CHRIST, till they leave themselves no Scripture proof of the divinity of GOD the FATHER; none but what may be eluded by the same, or the like subtleties: as if they were resolved to give up every proof of the FATHER's real divinity, rather than admit any which may happen to prove as much of GOD the SON. The strength of their objections against the divine attributes of CHRIST, consists chiefly in meta-physical speculations; that generation is an act, that every act implies free choice, that free choice argues precarious existence, and that precarious existence is a contradiction to divine attributes, strictly so called. Thus vain philosophy is brought in, to overrule the infallible word of God.

SCRIPTURE.

Our blessed LORD is Creator. He is the LORD Jehovah, who in the beginning laid the foundations of the earth, and the heavens are the works of his hands<sup>l</sup>. All things were created, not only by him<sup>m</sup>, as the efficient cause, but also for him<sup>n</sup>, as the final cause of all things; in whose glory they all centre and terminate. In him likewise do all things consist. The whole universe, all worlds visible and <sup>l</sup> John x. 30. <sup>k</sup> Rev. i. 8. <sup>i</sup> Heb. i. 10. <sup>m</sup> John i. 3, 10, 11. <sup>1</sup> Cor. viii. 6. Ephes. iii. 9. Heb. i. 2. <sup>n</sup> Coloss. i. 16, 17.

ARIANISM.

The modern Arians pretend that CHRIST is an instrument<sup>u</sup> only in the work of creation; though they do not tell us what they mean by it, nor how it is possible to reconcile their notion to Heb. i. 10. Some of them suppose CHRIST an inferior Creator, making two Creators in like manner as two Gods; one of the Creators being himself a creature. Others scruple to allow CHRIST to be a Creator, saying only that GOD created all things by him, or through him; and they confusedly mutter several invisible are upheld and sustained by him. He is therefore Creator, Preserver, and Governor of all worlds: than which nothing more august or grand can be said of the one God supreme.

<sup>u</sup> Modest Plea, p. 93. Unity of GOD not Inconsistent, &c. p. 26.

things about the prepositions by and through; never acquainting us what their precise notion is, nor shewing how it is possible ever to make it consistent with those texts which so expressly ascribe creative powers to CHRIST. Whatever hand they suppose him to have had in creating, (which appears to be very little,) they imagine him afterwards weak enough to want the assistance of his creatures<sup>x</sup>, weak enough to be literally inferior to the angels<sup>y</sup>, weak enough to be passible<sup>z</sup> and mutable; and low enough to be literally exalted<sup>a</sup>; which yet they would think blasphemy to say of one that is very GOD.

SCRIPTURE.

The Scriptures say, that he that built all things is God<sup>o</sup>; thereby supposing the work of creating to be a demonstration of the real divinity of the Person who created all things. St. Paul elsewhere intimates that the creation of the world is a visible and sensible proof of the eternal power and Godhead of its Maker<sup>p</sup>. Creation is every where, in Scripture, represented as a divine work, a work peculiar to God alone, setting forth his supreme excellency and unbounded perfections<sup>q</sup>. And <sup>o</sup> Heb. iii. 4. <sup>p</sup> Rom. i. 20. <sup>q</sup> 2 Kings xix. 15. Job xxvi. 7, &c. Psalm xcvi. 5. xix. l. lxxxix. 11, 12. Isa. xl. 12, 26. xlii. 5. xliii. 1. xlv. 5, 6.

ARIANISM.

The Arians pretend that the creating the whole universe is in itself no demonstration of infinite power, nor any certain argument of the real and necessary divinity of its maker<sup>b</sup>. It seems a creature might create the whole world, visible and invisible. Only, it is observable, that they are sometimes pleased to say, that the SON is no creature. No creature, yet brought into existence<sup>c</sup>, as well as any creature; no creature, but yet precarious in existence, as well as the Gods that have not made the heavens and the earth, they shall perish from the earth<sup>r</sup>. So that if CHRIST be Creator, there can be no reasonable doubt made of his real, eternal, and essential Godhead: or, if he be not Creator, he cannot be God, cannot, upon the Scripture foot, be adored or worshipped as God with any degree of religious worship.

<sup>x</sup> Modest Plea, p. 93. <sup>y</sup> Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 15. Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 145. Modest Plea, ibid. <sup>z</sup> Collect. of Queries, p. 143. <sup>a</sup> Modest Plea, p. 97, 98. <sup>b</sup> Collect. of Queries, p. 58. Reply to Dr. Waterland's Defence, p. 249. Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 120. <sup>c</sup> Collect. of Queries, p. 51.

any creature; no creature, but yet dependent on the free-will and pleasure of another, as much as any creature; no creature, but yet ignorant of much more than he knows, as well as any creature; no creature, but yet capable of change from strength to weakness, and from weakness to strength again, capable of being made wiser, and happier, and better in every respect, as well as any creature; no creature, but yet having nothing of his own, nothing but what he owes to the gratuity and favour of his Lord and Governor, as much as any creature. Such a creature, and no creature, they suppose all things to have been created by; and yet by all things, meaning only all other things, (for he could not have any hand in creating himself.) and by the words created by, meaning they know not what. This they call interpreting Scripture, and doing justice to common readers.

SCRIPTURE.

According to Scripture no one is to be worshipped who is not God by nature<sup>s</sup>, no creature but the Creator only<sup>t</sup>. From whence it is evident that there is no middle between Creator and creature, Creator and creature being opposites; so that a creature cannot be Creator, nor Creator a creature. Scripture knows nothing of creature-

ARIANISM.

The modern Arians, after the Pagans and Papists, plead for creature-worship; for the thing, I mean, but they are frightened at the name: and whether to save themselves the trouble of answering the many plain and invincible reasons against creature-worship, or the shame of not being able to talk a word of sense on that head, they pretend<sup>d</sup> not to be pleading

<sup>r</sup> Jer. x. 11, 12.

<sup>s</sup> Gal. iv. 8.

<sup>t</sup> Rom. i. 25.

<sup>d</sup> Author of Unity, &c. His Reply to Dr. Waterland, p. 31.

worship; nothing of inferior, relative, or mediate worship distinct from divine; nothing of two worships of different kinds, either before the Gospel or after. The one fundamental rule of worship, from Genesis down to Revelations, is to worship God alone, the God of Israel, the Jehovah, the Creator, Sustainer; Preserver of all things. There was never any distinction made of supreme and inferior sacrifices, vows, oaths, prayers, prostrations. All religious worship is God's peculiar, all of the same nature, and of like import and significance.

for creature-worship, all the while they are doing it. They call this kind of worship inferior and mediate worship: a thing that Scripture knows not of: and what was once sufficient to nonplus the devil, they can elude. Upon their principles, any Jew, formerly, might have eluded all the laws of the Old Testament against idolatry, might have sacrificed to other Gods (if supposed subordinate to the one supreme) without breaking the First Commandment, and without peril of Polytheism. They acquit the generality of the Pagans (as many as worshipped one supreme God) of Polytheism<sup>e</sup>, or of the worship of many Gods: as they of consequence must, otherwise they condemn themselves. The Pagans then were not Polytheists, but idolaters only: and their idolatry consisted not in making Idol-Gods, but Idol-Mediators<sup>f</sup>. A thing which the sacred penmen were never aware of; having constantly laid the charge wrong upon the setting up Idol-Gods, and never Idol-Mediators.

SCRIPTURE.

Christ is to be worshipped with religious worship by men<sup>v</sup>, by angels<sup>w</sup>, by every creature<sup>x</sup>; either singly and by himself, or jointly with the FATHER in the same acts of worship. He is therefore God by nature, and not by office only, appointment, <sup>v</sup> Acts vii. 59. ix. 14. John v. 23. Rev. v. 8. <sup>w</sup> Heb. i. 6. <sup>x</sup> Rev. v. 13.

ARIANISM.

The modern Arians teach, that CHRIST is made a GOD by voluntary appointment and designation; and are yet ridiculously forced to say, that he is God by nature<sup>g</sup>, and as truly as man is by nature truly man<sup>h</sup>:

<sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 17, 30. See also Reply to Dr. Waterland's Defence, p. 309. <sup>f</sup> Clarke, Script. Doctrine, p. 344, 2nd edition. Author of Unity, &c. p. 30. <sup>g</sup> Scripture and Athanasians Compared, p. 9. <sup>h</sup> Clarke's Replies, p. 81.

or designation. The worship of him must of consequence stand upon the same foot whereon Scripture has founded all religious worship; upon his real and essential divinity, his being God, Jehovah, Almighty, &c. which he must be because he is adorable; and which if he be, then the worship of him comes within the reason, intent, and even the letter of the law about worship. And it is very observable how the Scripture rule of worship exactly harmonizes with what the same Scripture teaches of the divinity of God the SON. For as, on one hand, his claim of worship confirms the doctrine of his divinity; so, on the other hand, his divine titles and attributes confirm his claim of worship: and thus is Scripture uniform, consistent, and harmonious throughout.

God by nature, and truly God, without the nature of the true God; God by nature, but not naturally, or necessarily God; God by nature, but having his nature before his dominion; that is, before his Godhead commenced; and he is to continue, after his dominion, or Godhead, shall expire and be extinct: in a word, God by nature, as much as man is by nature man, and yet wanting the most essential character of God, which makes God to be God<sup>1</sup>.

They found his worship on the power of judging, and his mediatorial kingdom<sup>k</sup>, committed to him in time, and in time to cease. Neither his being God, before the world was, (John i. 1.) nor his being the only-begotten, nor his being Creator and Sustainer of all things, nor his laying the foundation of the heavens and the earth; none of these considerations are thought of sufficient weight to found his worship upon: but a late office of yesterday, and shortly to be laid down; that, and that only is made the foundation of religious worship, and such worship as, by all the Scripture accounts, is to continue for ever and ever: which they are pleased to understand of the end of the world only<sup>1</sup>, though the same phrase or phrases which denote the continuance of the FATHER'S worship, are used likewise for the SON'S; and even in the same common doxology, jointly offered to both. Verily, if these things are not absurdities, it is pity that they should look so like them.

<sup>1</sup> Ibid. p. 92. <sup>k</sup> Clarke's Scripture Doctrine, Propos. 48, 60, 61. Replies, p. 239. <sup>1</sup> Author of Unity not Inconsistent. His Reply, p. 49.

SCRIPTURE.

The Scriptures ever supposing but one object of worship, which is God Supreme, never give us any rules about raising or lowering the intention of the worshipper, to make the worship supreme or inferior, as occasion may require. Whatever may be said of a few speculative heads, or refined wits, the vulgar, it is to be feared, would never be capable of proportioning their intentions in such cases; but would often pay subordinate worship only, instead of supreme, which would be next to blaspheming, or supreme instead of subordinate, which would be idolatry.

Scripture never makes any distinction between offering and terminating worship; but supposes all worship to terminate where offered. God interprets all image-worship and creature-worship to terminate on the image, or creature, notwithstanding any intention of the worshipper to terminate the worship in him. It is worshipping of the idol, the image, the creature, not the worshipping of God, in Scripture style. And indeed how can any act of idolatry, any creature-worship

ARIANISM.

The Arians imagine, that the same outward acts of religious worship become higher or lower, according to the intention of the worshipper: which is following their own inventions, and putting the matter of worship on such a foot as must inevitably run the bulk of mankind either into idolatry on one hand, or profaneness on the other, as often as they mistake in the just and proper elevation of their thoughts or intentions.

They are teaching us also to offer worship here, and terminate there; which must likewise run the vulgar at least into inextricable labyrinths; as perhaps terminating the worship in the inferior object, when they ought not; or not offering when they ought. Besides that, for want of knowing precisely what worship is inferior and what supreme, what mediate and what ultimate, they will be often apt to mistake the one for the other: and hence will arise all imaginable confusion in sacred offices. In a word, their whole foundation is wrong, since no inferior worship can, without blasphemy, be supposed to terminate in the supreme, nor any supreme worship be made to fall upon the medium, without idolatry. Their inferior worship must be ultimate, and their supreme cannot be mediate: so that their terminate upon God, who has absolutely prohibited it, who abhors and detests it? The reason of the thing shews that so it must be: for if worship be paid to an inferior object, be it sovereign or inferior worship, the absurdity is manifest. If it be sovereign, then it is plainly idolatry to give any part of it to the inferior object: if it be inferior, it cannot terminate in the supreme object, who would be affronted and dishonoured thereby. It must therefore terminate in the inferior object: and thus a creature is honoured with ultimate worship, terminating where offered, which is, confessedly, idolatry.

SCRIPTURE.

The Scriptures assure us that CHRIST increased in wisdom, which is to be literally understood, as well as his increasing in stature is literal. He was, at times, afflicted with grief: his soul was exceeding sorrowful<sup>z</sup>, and full of trouble<sup>a</sup>, crying out in great agonies<sup>b</sup>. These and the like weaknesses and infirmities can never reasonably be supposed to suit with the divine Logos; who had wisdom, strength, and power sufficient to create, sustain, and govern all worlds. From these two devised distinctions necessarily confound and destroy each other; and they must either not worship CHRIST at all, or worship him with ultimate worship, even upon their own principles.

<sup>y</sup> Luke ii. 52. <sup>z</sup> Matt. xxvi. 38. Mark xiv. 34. <sup>a</sup> John xi. 33. xii. 27. xiii. 21. <sup>b</sup> Luke xxii. 44. Matt. xxvii. 46. Mark xv. 34.

ARIANISM.

Our modern Arians persuade themselves, that CHRIST had no human soul, but that the Logos supplied its place. Some<sup>m</sup> expressly say it; and as many others mean it, as bring a charge against the Athanasians of making two Persons in one CHRIST: which charge has been brought against us by most<sup>n</sup> of our modern Arians. They are therefore of opinion, that all the high things and all the low things, spoken in scripture of CHRIST, meet in the one Logos clothed with flesh. He was once wise enough to make, or however to frame and model the whole uni-considerations, besides sundry others, the Christian churches have ever firmly believed, that, besides the Logos, or divine nature, there was also a human soul in CHRIST; which, together with the Logos and a human body, made up the whole Person of CHRIST.

<sup>m</sup> Whiston, Emlyn, &c. See also Answer to Peirce's Inquisition, p. 34. 35. <sup>n</sup> Morgan, Jackson, Author of the Appeal, &c. and others.

verse, (according to some of them,) as well as to support and govern it when made. But upon his taking flesh, his wisdom and his extraordinary abilities departed from him<sup>o</sup>. He became a child, a child in understanding as well as stature; falling, as it were, into a profound lethargy, and suspension of thought. By slow and insensible degrees, he again began to recover; his dormant faculties revived, and thus he increased in wisdom; growing up, first, to the perfection of a wise man, but not yet arrived to the pitch of an angel<sup>p</sup>. In process of time, he became wise enough and of sufficient ability to be made a God of once more: His honour and his brightness returned unto him, he was established in his kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto him. So saith the Scripture of Nebuchadnezzar, (Dan. iv. 36.) who, if this account be true, was (with reverence be it spoken) none of the least eminent, or least considerable types of CHRIST. But this is not all; the worst is to come. This mighty God (according to those gentlemen) is at last to lay down, or surrender his Godhead and mightiness, that is, his kingdom; all the kingdom they allow him to have<sup>q</sup>. His worship, his divine honours and robes of majesty are to continue with him no longer than to the end of the world<sup>r</sup>. It seems, when his friends and followers are to receive their crowns, to have and to hold to all eternity, he is to lose and forfeit his. They must increase, but he must decrease: they are to grow up, he is to grow down, and sink out of Godhead. A shocking thought! to as many as have any just regard for sacred Writ, any love or veneration for their blessed LORD; and have not lost the grace of discernment, and the spirit of a sound mind, by affecting to be wiser than all the churches of God.

<sup>o</sup> Emlyn's Examination of Dr. Bennet, p. 15. See also Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 145. <sup>p</sup> Modest Plea, p. 93. The Scriptures and Athanasians Compared, p. 15. Appeal to a Turk, &c. p. 145. <sup>q</sup> The Scripture and Athanasians, &c. p. 16, 17, 22. Reply to Dr. W. by the Author of

Unity, &c. p. 49. Peirce's Western Inquisition, p. 148, 149. <sup>r</sup> Reply to Dr. Waterland, by the Author of the Unity, &c. p. 49.

Judge for yourselves what is RIGHT.

---

PART II.

IN the former part, I have taken the like method as the writer of the pamphlet had done. Only there is this difference, that whereas he has often charged the Athanasians with things which they neither hold, nor can by any certain consequence be proved upon them; I have took care to charge the Arians with nothing but what some or other of them expressly maintain, or else what may be fixed upon them by clear and evident consequence.

My design, in this Second Part, is to give the common reader a few useful hints, such as may serve to prevent his being imposed upon by the writer of the pamphlet, whom I am here answering. I shall throw what I have to say under two heads: one shall contain short remarks upon his six preliminary propo- sitions ; the other shall be some brief strictures upon his two ingenious columns.

I. His first proposition is intended to prove, that there is but one infinite Person, (whom he styles a Being,) namely, GOD the FATHER. His Old Testament texts prove, that JEHOVAH (that is, as we say, FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST) is the only GOD, and knows no equal. The New Testament texts prove, that the FATHER is sometimes styled, by way of eminence, the one or only GOD ; which no man questions.

II. His second proposition is to prove, that GOD the FATHER has some titles common to him with men ; such as Potentate, King, Lord, Saviour, &c. And that when they are applied to him, they are to be understood in the highest and most absolute sense. This, I think, he has well proved. And it may pass for a true, but trifling proposition.

III. His third is to prove, that the name GOD is likewise common to GOD the FATHER, angels, and men ; which is true also. But he forgot to observe, that the word GOD is not applied to angels or men in a proper sense, (as the name of Potentate, King, or Lord may) but in a loose, figurative, improper sense only.

IV. His fourth is to shew, that the FATHER has some characteristics annexed to the name GOD, which determine him to be the first Cause. He is the high GOD, most high GOD, &c. In proof hereof, he produces about fourteen passages of the Old Testament, which certainly prove all that they prove of the JEHOVAH, or GOD of Israel, in opposition to nominal or reputed Gods ; not of the FATHER only, in opposition to the SON, who is himself JEHOVAH as well as the FATHER. He has also three texts out of the New Testament, which undoubtedly prove that the FATHER is GOD Most High, or GOD Supreme, (which is equally true of GOD the SON, Rom. ix. 5.) above all reputed or nominal Gods : but it is not proved that he has any real, and true, any adorable God besides him, or under him.

V. His fifth is designed to reconcile two contradictory propositions, that there are more Gods than one, and not more Gods than one ; where he comes off very indifferently. For his intent is to intimate that there are more adorable Gods, more true Gods than one ; which is directly repugnant to the Scripture doctrine of one GOD. There are many reputed or nominal Gods ; that is very certain. But more adorable Gods than one neither Law nor Gospel can bear.

VI. His sixth proposition carries on the same design with the fifth, to make FATHER and SON two adorable GODS, and to teach us to serve the creature besides the Creator, and to pay our homage and acknowledgments to one that by nature is no God. It will be hard to persuade any into those measures who have the use of their Bibles; which will teach them the contrary, quite through from Genesis down to the Revelations.

Brief Strictures upon his two Columns.

Page 6, he cites some texts to prove, that the FATHER alone, exclusive of the SON, is the only God, or only true GOD: which the texts neither say nor mean. For the same Scriptures assert that the SON is GOD, True GOD, Great GOD, JEHOVAH, Almighty, &c. as well as the FATHER. Therefore the exclusive terms could never be intended in opposition to God the SON, but to idols, or pretended deities.

Page 7, he makes a dull harangue about person and essence; instead of shewing that FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST may not be or are not one God. This is a Scriptural doctrine, independent of the names of person or essence, and such as was fully believed and taught for a century and more before ever those terms came in. Not but that those terms are useful, in opposition to the wiles and equivocations of heretics, which were the first occasion of them: nor are they difficult to understand, whenever considered without prejudice and with an honest mind. But it is enough for common Christians to believe, that FATHER, SON, and HOLY GHOST are all equally divine, that one is not another, nor all together three Gods, but one God: one God, into whom we have been baptized, and whom we are ever to serve, worship, and adore, with all our heart, mind, and might.

Page 8, he insists much upon the personal pronouns, I, thou, he: which can never be proved to be constantly applied in Scripture to none but single persons. Besides that the arguments from the pronouns, at most, can prove no more than this; that it is the Scripture way to speak but of one Person at a time, (be it FATHER, or SON, or HOLY GHOST,) under the title of GOD, LORD, JEHOVAH, &c. tacitly considering the other two Persons as united to, or comprehended in, that one Person spoken of: which, if it be the case, is so far from proving that all the three are not one God, that it is rather a confirmation of it, that they really are. But we have examples where one GOD, or LORD of hosts, is mentioned, and yet the expressions are plural as to the Persons. "God said, Let us make man in our image," Gen. i. 26. "God created man in his own image, in the image of God," ver. 27. God creates, while more Persons than one create: and it is God's image, which is the image of more Persons than one: therefore more Persons than one are included in God there mentioned. The like may be shewn of the one LORD of hosts mentioned Isa. vi. 3. compared with verse the 8th, and with John xii. 41. and Acts xxviii. 25, 26.

In page 9, he represents it as a strange thing, that the SON should be "that very God whose Son he is: the image, and "that which he is the image of." This kind of banter and abuse runs through his whole performance. It is observable, that the force of the cavil lies only in the expression. Say, that the SON, a distinct Person, is united in substance and Godhead with GOD the FATHER; and there is no appearance of absurdity in it. Say, that the SON is personally distinct from the FATHER, and yet one GOD with him; and there is nothing strange or shocking in it. But say, that he is that very God whose Son he is, or that very thing of which he is the image; and here begins to appear something harsh and odd. What is the reason? Because the words sound as if the SON were the FATHER himself; were distinct and not distinct at the same time. The Arian notion, of God's being but one Person, is first insinuated in the phrase, that very God whose Son he is; and next the Athanasian is feigned to join his notion (inconsistent with the other) thereto: and thus he is made to say things that he never meant. The sophistry lies wholly in the artificial blending of ideas. The SON is not that very Person whose Son he is, nor that very Person whose image he is: but he is one GOD with him; a name common to more Persons than one.

Page 10, he takes notice, that GOD led Jacob alone, yet by the hands of Moses and Aaron: and GOD created the heavens alone, yet by JESUS CHRIST. He should have added, that if GOD the FATHER be TRUE GOD alone, yet it is to be understood, together with JESUS CHRIST. The word alone, in such instances, is not intended in opposition to GOD the SON, but to others: and exclusive terms are not always to be interpreted with the utmost rigour.

Page 11, 12, he pretends that CHRIST, before his incarnation, was GOD's angel, and messenger, and servant. He cannot prove servant at all; nor angel, or messenger, from any parts of Scripture but what, in the very same places, declare him to be Ho Theos, GOD absolutely, Jehovah, LORD GOD, Almighty GOD, &c. From whence it is plain, that the name of angel concerns only his office, not his nature; and is an argument only of the SON's voluntary condescension to transact matters between GOD the FATHER and mankind.

Page 12, 13, he has some wise reasonings against the SON's glory being eclipsed in the incarnation. He asks, how it could be eclipsed from men, who "then beheld his glory more than ever?" By his argument, if, the first time a man sees the sun at all, it should be under a cloud, or an eclipse, it is therefore under no cloud, nor under any eclipse to that man. In short, though men "behold his glory more than ever," yet even then his glory was shrouded under the veil of flesh, and did not shine out to the full; which if it had, no mortal could have looked against it.

Page 12th and 13th, he labours to confound real and essential, with outward and accidental glory: and he is marvellously subtle and profound on that head. The short answer is, that one kind of glory can never be increased or diminished, either in FATHER or SON: the other kind of glory may admit, and has admitted of increase or diminution, both in FATHER and SON, and will so again hereafter.

His cavils (p. 13.) about two Persons, in CHRIST are built on nothing but his own mistakes of the definition and meaning of the word person.

His reasoning about even and odd (p. 14.) is odd enough; to answer a jest with a jest.

Page 15, he has some speculations about CHRIST's being exalted to the universal dominion of all worlds, (a likely charge, indeed, for any creature to sustain,) and becoming a Mighty GOD: as if he had not been as Mighty when he made the worlds, and when he laid the foundations of the heavens and the earth.

Page 16, he observes, that Scripture says nothing of two kingdoms of CHRIST. But the Scriptures do speak of a kingdom which is to cease at the day of judgment, (1 Cor. xv.) and of a kingdom which shall not cease, nor ever have an end, Isa. ix. 7. Dan. xii. 13. Luke i. 33. Heb. i. 8. How to make one kingdom of both may be as difficult, perhaps, as to make the same number even and odd.

Page 17, he pretends, that the SON is to be honoured, only because the FATHER hath made him universal Governor of heaven and earth. How is it then that he was GOD, LORD, and Creator, before the world was? Are not these things as considerable as any thing that came after? And how is it that he is to be honoured, together with the FATHER, and with the same acts of worship, (Rev. v. 13,) to all eternity; even after he shall have laid down this universal kingdom and government, according to our wise author? Surely, if the sole foundation of his honour ceases, his honours should cease with it.

Page 19, he observes, that the Disciples and God are one. I know not whether his understanding here failed him most, or his eyesight. How does he read the text? "That they all may be one—that they also may be one in us," John xvii. 21. Not that they and we may be one, not that they may be one with us; but only, one with each other in us.

These few Strictures may be sufficient to shew, that the author is not to be depended on, in his representations or reasonings. I designed brevity, and therefore I pass over his other fallacies and misconstructions: which are either stale things, such as have been abundantly answered over and over by better hands; or else are too mean and trifling to have been either objected on one side, or answered on the other, by any that have well studied this controversy.

F I V E L E T T E R S

TO

MR. STAUNTON.

FIVE LETTERS

TO

MR. STAUNTON.

---

LETTER I.

SIR,

ABOUT eight weeks ago, I had the favour of a letter from you, together with some papers relating to the subject of the Trinity. I have had no time since, more than to give them a cursory reading. But my month of waiting being September, when, probably, the Prince or young Princesses might be, as usual, at Hampton Court; I thought I might then take an opportunity of waiting upon you, and discoursing with you, before I enter into any epistolary correspondence. I am yet uncertain where the court will be in September. If you can inform yourself where the king's chaplains must wait the next month, I shall be obliged to you for acquainting me with it.

My hands, you must be sensible, are pretty full at present, in maintaining the Catholic cause (allow me so to call it) against the Arians; who seem to be now the most prevailing sect of the Anti-Trinitarians, Socinianism being almost grown obsolete amongst us. Your scheme seems to me to be Socinian in the main; only taking in the preexistence of Christ's human soul, excluding him from worship, and interpreting some texts in the Sabellian way, and not after Socinus. I know not whether my leisure will permit me to examine all the grounds upon which you go, and to give a particular answer to every difficulty you have to urge. But if, upon discoursing with you, the controversy, so far as concerns you, may be shortened, and reduced to two or three points which are most material; I may perhaps find time hereafter to give you my thoughts upon them in writing. You will consider, in the meanwhile, that you are as much concerned to answer, I mean to yourself, the reasons which I have given for my persuasion, as to require answers to those reasons, which seem to you to favour your principles. The reasons, for instance, which I have given against the Sabellian construction of the first chapter of St. John, are of equal force against yours. And my arguments to prove Christ to be properly Creator, (not to mention several others to prove his Divinity, drawn from his titles, and attributes, and from the form of baptism,) directly strike at your hypothesis, as much as at the Arian. There are many great objections, as you see, lying against your principles; and there are some, not contemptible, against mine also. Weigh both equally, and balance them one against another: this will be the true method to form a right judgment. I believe you to be as sincere and impartial in your inquiries as most men are; making allowance for such prejudices as are often apt to steal upon any of us, without our perceiving it. I wonder a little how one that talks so well about suspending assent where there is not sufficient evidence, can prevail with himself to think that there is any prescription for your scheme of 500 years before the commencement of my scheme. The proof of this fact can never be made good. The contrary is plain and evident. I am in hopes that I have mistook your meaning: if I have, I ask your pardon. I shall add nothing more at present, but my thanks to you for your very civil manner of writing to me; assuring you, that so far as my leisure, abilities, or opportunities permit, I shall be ever ready to give you the best satisfaction I can in any thing relating to this controversy; being,

SIR,

Your most humble Servant,

DAN. WATERLAND.

Magd. Coll. Aug. 9, 1720.

---

LETTER II.

SIR,

I CAN now acquaint you, that I shall not be in waiting at Kensington before the 16th of September. I intended to be there at the beginning of the month; but my wife being ill, I have wrote to my brother chaplains to take care of the first fortnight: and they will be so kind as to do it. I shall be very glad to see you at Kensington any time after the 16th. There are lodgings provided for the chaplains, as I well know, having so found it the last year. The lodgings are in or near the square: which is all that I remember of them.

I thank you for the favour of your last, and again ask your pardon for mistaking your meaning. I shall think my time there very agreeably and usefully spent in friendly debates upon so important a subject. Not that I think either of us shall be able thoroughly to discuss the main question, in a verbal conference, and without books at hand. But we may settle some preliminaries; may throw out several things as agreed on between both; and so prepare the way for a short and clear examination of the matter in debate, to be done afterwards by way of letter. In the interim, I am, with very true and sincere respect,

SIR,

Your most humble Servant,

DAN. WATERLAND.

Magd. Coll. Aug. 30, 1720.

---

LETTER III.

SIR,

I HAVE had the favour of two letters from you, and am not unmindful of the promise I made to enter into an epistolary correspondence with you, as far as my leisure may permit, and provided the dispute may be brought into a narrow compass. I might reasonably decline all private conference, having sufficiently done my part in this controversy, till some or other shall undertake, in the same public way, to confute what I have publicly asserted. Yet since you have been pleased to apply yourself to me, with much civility, and with an air of strict sincerity, entreating me not to think it too great a task, though in respect of a single soul, to take particular notice of what you have publicly and privately advanced upon the subject; I shall not scruple to comply with your desires, so far as may be sufficient to answer the end intended.

The points which, after our conference at Kensington, I promised to go upon, were these : 1. The interpretation of the first of St. John. 2. The question whether Christ be Creator. 3. The point of worship. Under these three is contained all that is material ; and upon these the main of the controversy turns. I must insist upon it with you, as a preliminary article, that you confine yourself, for the present at least, within these bounds ; avoiding all wanderings and unnecessary diversions, attending to one point only at a time, and contentedly suffering it to be distinctly and fully debated, before we proceed to any new one. You are first to be upon the defensive, and to bear the part of a respondent. You shall have your turn to object afterwards (if we continue our correspondence) what you please to my scheme ; but, for the present, you are only to defend your own.

These things premised, I shall now begin with your interpretation of St. John. You construe the words Θεὸς ἦν ὁ Λόγος, God was reason or wisdom. To which I object as follows :

1. The article ὁ before Λόγος, and the want of the article ὁ before Θεὸς, make one presumption against your interpretation. Please to observe St. John's manner of expressing himself elsewhere, ὁ Θεὸς ἀγάπη ἐστίν, "God is love," twice, 1 John iv. 8, 16. ὁ Θεὸς φῶς ἐστίν, "God is light," 1 John i. 5. Now these are just such propositions as that of yours, God was wisdom : wherefore had St. John intended it, he would have expressed it thus ; ὁ Θεὸς Λόγος ἦν. This observation is of weight, not only because of St. John's manner of expressing himself, but also because the Greek idiom requires it. See Erasmus's comment upon the place, who was a good judge in such matters.

2. Another objection against your interpretation is this, that the Λόγος is the principal subject, the theme which the Apostle took to discourse on. He is there shewing what the Λόγος was, not what God the Father was. The Λόγος was in the beginning, the Λόγος was with God, the world was made by the same Λόγος, and so on. The whole first fourteen verses are, in a manner, little else but a description of the several powers and attributes of the Λόγος. Wherefore it is more natural and consonant to understand that the Apostle intended to tell us that the Λόγος was God, than vice versa : since the Apostle was recounting the attributes of the Λόγος, his principal theme, not the attributes of God the Father.

3. I must not forget to add, that all antiquity has construed the words as we do. Now, whether you consider the ancients as the properest judges of the idiom of the language in or near their own times; or whether you consider them as faithful conveyers of the Apostle's meaning, (some having been his immediate disciples, as Ignatius; others having conversed with those that had been,) either way, the verdict of the ancients, especially in so noted and so important a passage of Scripture, ought to be of great weight, and indeed decisive; unless there appeared (as there does none) some plain reason or necessity, in text or context, for another construction. You seem indeed to lay some stress upon this consideration, that, in our way, we construe the words backwards. But this is slight. Would you call it construing backwards, if we rendered the first sentence, (ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Λόγος,) "The Word was in the beginning?" It is not construing backwards, to render πνεῦμα ὁ Θεός, "God is spirit:" John iv. 24. or to render μάρτυς γάρ μου ἐστίν ὁ Θεός, "God is my witness:" Rom. i. 9. Multitude of like examples may be given, where the different idioms of languages require that the sense should run under a different order of the words.

Your other observation, borrowed from Bishop Pearson, that the Evangelist makes "the last word of the former sentence the "first of that which follows," appears to be of very little moment. By this rule, the second verse should have begun with ὁ Λόγος instead of οὗτος. Or if you answer this by saying, that still οὗτος refers to the last word preceding, then by the same rule δι' αὐτοῦ, in the third verse, should refer to τὸν Θεὸν preceding. But enough of fancies: let us rather attend to dry criticism and strict reasoning.

I proceed to your construction of δι' αὐτοῦ, by it, or according to it, as in or by an exemplar. It is sufficient here to observe, that this construction is ungrammatical. The preposition διὰ cannot bear any such sense. The English particle by is indeed sometimes so used, but I want some example of any such use of the Greek διὰ. Give me one, at least, out of Scripture: or I shall be content if you can produce me any either in sacred or profane writer.

Mr. Norris's speculations upon this head I am well acquainted with. They may pass for pretty fancies, and that is all. Allowing the thing itself to be true, yet it neither can be made appear that John has here asserted it, nor was Mr. Norris himself sanguine enough to affirm that he ever intended it. See his preface to part i. p. 14. Add to this, that the ideal world is nobody knows what. Strip it of flight and figure, and there is no more in it than this, that God knew all things before he made them: but the modus of it infinitely surpasses all created understanding. If we come to plain good sense, we can conceive nothing of God, but what is either substance or attribute. The ideal world, in your hypothesis, must either be the substance of God the Father, that is, God himself, or only some attribute of him. You make it to be his reason, or his wisdom, and therefore must of consequence suppose it an attribute; and so you say in your first letter, though in the same place you observe that it is "of the substance of God," the meaning of which I should be glad to know distinctly. To me there appears no medium between an attribute of God, and God himself. You suppose wisdom to be an attribute, not God himself precisely considered; and accordingly you say by it, not by him: so that, at length, allowing only for a small difference in words, your hypothesis falls in with the Sabellian scheme, and I have already confuted it in my first Sermon. However, I shall not scruple to make a little more particular application of what I have there said to your hypothesis.

I argue thus. Either you must understand by the Λόγος, God the Father himself, or an attribute of God the Father: but neither of these suppositions can be reconciled to St. John's Gospel, therefore your scheme falls. If you understand by the Λόγος, God the Father, try if you can make sense of verse the 1st, 2nd, and 14th; if you understand any attribute of him, as you seem to do, I object as follows:

1. The Logos was with God, πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. What accurate writer would not rather have said of an attribute, that it was ἐν τῷ Θεῷ, in God? And yet πρὸς τὸν Θεόν is again repeated.

2. St. John lays some stress upon the Logos's being in the beginning with God. He repeats, he inculcates it. What need of this, if the Logos means only God's wisdom? Can any man doubt whether God was always wise? But there might be some doubt whether any other Person was in the beginning with God the Father; and therefore, if a Person be meant, we see the reason of the Evangelist's repeating it, and laying a stress upon it.

3. The pronoun οὗτος (verse the 2nd) put by itself, and beginning a sentence, seems rather to denote a Person than an attribute, and to be more justly rendered he than it. I know not whether any the like instance can be given of οὗτος put absolutely and beginning a sentence, and not denoting a person.

4. Verse the 8th, "He (John the Baptist) was not that light." The he here, of whom this is denied, plainly refers to some other he, of whom the thing is affirmed. How would it sound to say, he was not, but it (an attribute of God) was that light?

5. Proceed to verse the 11th, and read it in your way, thus: It came unto its own, and its own received it not. Where is the sense or the propriety?

6. Go on to verse the 12th. But as many as received it, to them it gave power to become the sons of God. Is not the sense flat, and the sentence very odd and unnatural?

7. Lastly, consider verse the 14th. The Logos (an attribute of God the Father) was made flesh, and it tabernacled amongst us, and we beheld its glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father, &c. Now, how comes wisdom or reason to be the only begotten of the Father, more than power, or goodness, or any other attribute?

8. St. John in his Revelations seems to have determined, that ὁ Λόγος is the name of a Person, not an attribute, the Person of Jesus Christ: Rev. xix. 13.

These are the principal difficulties against your scheme, which at present occur to me. Be pleased to answer them severally and distinctly, or give them up as unanswerable. In the interim, I rest,

SIR,

Your faithful Friend,

And humble Servant,

DAN. WATERLAND.

Magd. Coll. Oct. 27, 1720.

LETTER IV.

SIR,

I RECEIVED a letter from you, containing some exceptions to the evidence and reasons which I offered against your interpretation of the first chapter of St. John. Your exceptions, or pleas, I shall examine one by one ; and then leave you to judge of what weight they ought to be : charitably believing that you will not industriously deceive your own soul.

1. To my critical reasons your general answer is, that you are illiterate, and pretend not to criticism.

But this plea will be of no service in the case. You correct the English translation, and indeed all the versions that ever were, appealing to the original itself. I shew you from the idiom of the language, from the Apostles' manner of expressing himself elsewhere, and from his principal drift and design through the chapter, that you misconstrue the original, and that the words cannot bear your sense. Now either you are obliged to answer these reasons, or else to own frankly, that you have taken upon you to judge in a point you understand not, have been confident without grounds, and pronounced in the dark. Consider well what St. Peter has observed, namely that the unlearned and unstable wrest the Scriptures to their own destruction, 2 Pet. iii. 16. How know you but this may be your own case, while against the idiom of the tongue, the author's manner of expression, as well as against the wisest and ablest judges ancient or modern, you wrest a passage of such importance to a new and strange meaning ?

I do not doubt but an illiterate man may be capable of understanding the Gospel : and I hope you are capable of understanding the passage of St. John in the vulgar sense, as well as in any new invented one of your own.

2. To my argument drawn from the sentiments of antiquity, you except, that if the sense of a text can be fixed, any different sense of Fathers against it is of no weight.

But what is this to the purpose ? Have you fixed the sense of the text, that is, ascertained it ? So far from it, that you have hardly the shadow of a reason, from text or context, to support it. On the contrary, it is rather fixed to another sense, as I have shewn you, and given you reasons which you are not able to answer.

3. You plead that the five first verses are a train of progressive propositions, and that generally the predicate of the former is the subject of the succeeding.

I answer, that your rule fails in the very two first propositions, for  $\delta$  Λόγος is the subject in both. It fails again in verse the 2nd, where, by your rule, it should have been  $\delta$  Λόγος, instead of οἱ. Your rule is again broke in verse the 3rd, where δι' αὐτοῦ should, by that rule, refer to Θεὸν going before. But enough of fancies.

4. To my argument drawn from St. John's making the Logos his principal theme, and his intending to tell us, not what God the Father was, but what the Logos was: to this you except, that the Apostle's declaring the Logos to be an attribute of God, is declaring what the Logos is, and is therefore consonant to the Apostle's design. I answer,

You do not here carefully distinguish between subject and predicate. When we say, God is reason, God is the subject, and reason is predicated of him. But when we say, the Logos is God, the Logos is the subject, and that he is God, is predicated of the Logos. Now St. John's scope and design, which runs through the first fourteen verses, is to predicate of the Logos, not to predicate of God the Father: wherefore I must still insist upon it, that the Apostle's drift all along is against your construction.

5. You conceive that you have some strength and countenance from the 5th verse, which you desire me to account for. Please to compare John iii. 36. v. 40. x. 10. v. 25, 26. vi. 33, &c. xiv. 11. and especially John viii. 12. xi. 25. Col. iii. 3, 4. You will find Christ to have been the life and light of the world, as being the Author and Fountain of the resurrection, and the Giver of life eternal. Not a word do you meet with about the ideal world, which, whether it be a truth or no, has no foundation in Scripture, but is borrowed from the Platonic philosophy.

6. You pass some high commendations on Mr. Norris, reflecting not very kindly (I am sure, without Mr. Norris's good leave) on the clergy in general.

I readily allow all you can say in commendation of that good man. But will you abide by his authority in every thing? If you will, our dispute will be at an end. But it is in vain to contend by authorities instead of reasons. How many authorities might I produce against your sentiments, particularly against your construction of St. John! The whole Christian world, in a manner, from the beginning downwards to this day, not to mention that Mr. Norris, in the main, is of my side of the question, and interprets the Λόγος of a distinct Person, not of God the Father, or any attribute of him.

7. You except to my notion of an attribute, and (without understanding what you say) call it Sabellian. My notion of an attribute is the same that all Divines, whether Sabellian or others, have ever had of it. Power, wisdom, goodness, are attributes of God, not his substance precisely considered: in like manner, as reason is a property of something rational, not the very thing itself precisely considered. They are abstract partial ideas, and are not the very same with the notion of the substance itself. For if you say that power is the substance, and wisdom the substance, and goodness the substance, precisely considered; then power is goodness, and both together are wisdom; and wisdom is omnipresence, &c. and there is no difference between one attribute and another, nor any sense in saying that the substance of God is wise, good, powerful, &c. because it will be only saying, that the substance is substance.

8. You take hold of Bishop Pearson's saying, that God is an attribute of the Λόγος. But it is plain that the Bishop there used the word attribute in an improper sense, for predicate; meaning only that Θεός was predicated of the Λόγος, or, in plain English, that it is there said of the Λόγος, that he was God.

When you speak of wisdom, power, and goodness being coessential and consubstantial, you use words either without a meaning, or with a meaning peculiar to yourself. Things are with one another coessential or consubstantial, not properties, nor abstract notions.

As to my rendering John iv. 24, I have the same right to render πνεῦμα Spirit, (not a Spirit,) as our translators had to render πνεύματι, in the same verse, Spirit, not a Spirit. But that by the way only, having little relation to our present dispute.

As to the preposition διὰ, neither you nor Mr. Norris has given any instance of its ever being used in the exemplary sense. The rest is of no moment.

Thus, Sir, I have, I think, considered every exception in your letter that appears to have any weight. As you are pleased to apply to me under the character of a Ductor Dubitantium, so I have endeavoured to answer every the least scruple, that so you may the more readily come into those reasons which I before offered, and which return now upon you in their full force. I beg leave to assure you, that I offer you nothing but what appears to me plain good sense, and sound reason, and such as has weight with myself as much as I desire it may have with you. I sincerely wish you a right judgment in all things, and remain,

Your Friend and Servant,

DAN. WATERLAND.

Magd. Coll. Nov. 13, 1720.

---

LETTER V.

SIR,

I GAVE you time to consider upon what I had before offered, that you might at length give up what you could no longer maintain. It was with me a preliminary article, that we should not run from point to point, to make a rambling and fruitless dispute of it; without settling and clearing any thing. I will not undertake to go through the obscurer parts of the controversy with you, while I find you so unwilling to apprehend plain things. It would be endless for me to explain my meaning every time you mistake it: for every explanation will still want a further explanation, and so on ad infinitum. I have neither leisure nor inclination to proceed in this way; nor do I see to what purpose it is. I have shewed my willingness, upon your own earnest request, to serve you in this controversy; but despair of any success in it. The civilest way now is, to break off a correspondence which can serve to no good end. You are well pleased with your own opinions, and I as well satisfied with mine. Which of us has the most reason, we shall both know another day. I am,

SIR,

Your Friend and Servant,

DAN. WATERLAND.

Magd. Coll. Dec. 25, 1720.

A DISSERTATION
UPON
THE ARGUMENT A PRIORI
FOR PROVING THE EXISTENCE OF A FIRST CAUSE:
IN A LETTER TO MR. LAW.

A DISSERTATION
UPON
THE ARGUMENT A PRIORI
FOR PROVING THE EXISTENCE OF A FIRST CAUSE:
IN A LETTER TO MR. LAW.

---

SIR,

WHEN I last had the pleasure of your conversation, in company with one or two more ingenious friends, I remember we soon fell to asking each other, what news from the republic of letters; what fresh pamphlets stirring; what works, relating either to religion or science, had appeared lately, or were soon likely to appear. Hereupon several things were mentioned, and passed off in discourse: but what we happened more particularly to dwell upon was, the consideration of some metaphysical pieces concerning the proving the existence of a Deity a priori, (as the Schools term it,) that is to say, from some supposed antecedent necessity, considered as a ground, or reason, or foundation, or internal cause, or formal cause of the Divine existence. And here, if I remember, we were inquisitive to know what those scholastic terms imported, and whether the thought contained in them was entirely new, a recent product of the eighteenth century; as also what weight or solidity there was in it: and, if there were none, whether it portended any detriment to religion or science, and might be worth the opposing or confuting. Upon the debating and canvassing the particulars now mentioned, my opinion then was, and I am since more and more confirmed in the same, that those who have appeared as advocates for that argument a priori seem to have had no clear notion of the thing itself, or of the terms they make use of; that the thought however was not a new thought, though perhaps it might be justly called a new tenet, as having been constantly exploded for many centuries upwards, and never once maintained by metaphysicians or divines; that moreover it was absolutely untenable, yea and carried its own confutation along with it, as soon as understood; and lastly, that such principles might be prejudicial, in some measure, both to religion and science, if they should happen to prevail; and that consequently it would be doing good service to both, if due care were taken, in a proper manner, to prevent their growth.

With these sentiments (which seemed also to be pretty nearly the common sentiments of all then present) I departed from you at that time. And no sooner was I returned to my books, and had some vacant leisure on my hands, but I thought of throwing out what occurred to me on those heads into paper, digesting it into a kind of dissertation, which I here send you for your perusal, and which I leave entirely to your disposal. The method, which I have chalked out for myself, in the essay here following, is;

- I. To give some historical account of what the most eminent metaphysicians and divines have taught, so far as concerns the point in question.
- II. To consider the argumentative part, in order to take off the ambiguity of words, and thereby to prevent confusion of ideas.
- III. To examine into the tendency of the new tenets, with respect either to religion or science.

These three heads will furnish out so many distinct sections or chapters.

CHAP. I.

Containing an Historical View of what Metaphysicians or Divines have formerly taught, so far as concerns the Argument a priori for the Divine existence.

I SHALL begin with two ancient Theists, both of the same time, or nearly, and both declaring against the possibility of demonstrating a priori the existence of a Deity, or first Cause. One of them was a Christian Divine, and the other an acute Pagan Philosopher.

The Christian Divine was Clemens of Alexandria, who flourished about A. D. 192. He expresses himself thus in Dr. Cudworth's<sup>a</sup> translation :

“ God is the most difficult thing of all to be discoursed of : because, since the principle of every thing is hard to find out, the first and most ancient principle of all, which was the cause to all other things of their being made, [and of their continuance after they were made,] must need be the hardest of all to be declared or manifested.—But neither can [God] be apprehended by any demonstrative science : for such science is from things before [in order of nature] and more knowable ; whereas nothing can exist before that which is altogether unmade<sup>b</sup> [or self-existent.]”

The other ancient Theist is Alexander Aphrodisiensis, a celebrated Peripatetic, who flourished between A. D. 199 and 211<sup>c</sup>. After he had proposed an argument for the existence of a first Cause, drawn from the consideration of motion, according to the Aristotelic principles, he proceeds to observe as follows : “ This argument [or proof] is in the way of analysis only, it being not possible that there should be a [strict] demonstration of the first principle of all : wherefore we must here fetch our beginning from things that are after it, and manifest, and

<sup>a</sup> Cudworth Intellect. Syst. p. 716.

<sup>b</sup> Ναί μὲν ὁ δυσμεταχειριστότατος περὶ Θεοῦ λόγος οὗτός ἐστιν· ἐπεὶ γὰρ ἀρχὴ παντὸς πράγματος δυσεύρετος, πάντως που ἡ πρώτη καὶ πρεσβυτάτη ἀρχὴ δύσδεικτος, ἥτις τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀπασιν αἰτία τοῦ γενέσθαι καὶ γενομένους εἶναι, —’ΑΛΛ’ οὐδὲ ἐπιστήμη λαμβάνεται τῇ ἀποδεικτικῇ· αὕτη γὰρ ἐκ προτέρων καὶ γνωριμωτέρων συνίσταται· τοῦ δὲ ἀγενήτου οὐδὲν προϋπάρχει. Clem. Alex. p. 696. edit. Oxon.

<sup>c</sup> See an account of him in Fabricius, Bibl. Græc. lib. iv. cap. 25. p. 62.

“thence by way of analysis ascend to the proof of that first nature which was before them<sup>d</sup>.” So Dr. Cudworth renders the passage: and the reflection or comment, which he makes upon what has here been quoted from these two ancient Theists is in these words: “The true meaning of those ancient Theists, who denied that there could be any demonstration of a God, was only this, that the existence of a God could not be demonstrated a priori, himself being the first Cause of all things.”

Such were the sentiments of metaphysicians and divines at that time, founded upon plain and cogent reason, such as must equally hold at all times, and such as seem to evince, not that the existence of a first Cause may be demonstrated a priori, but rather that it is really demonstrable a priori, if not self-evident, that no such proof can be made, being indeed contradictory and impossible, repugnant to the very nature or notion of a first Cause. But I shall speak to the argumentative part afterwards: I am now upon the historical. It is certain that the Fathers of the Church, Greek or Latin, never admitted any such proof a priori of the divine existence, but either directly or indirectly, either expressly or implicitly, condemned it all along. It would be tedious to enter into a particular detail of their sentiments, in relation to the proof of the existence: I shall content myself with one general observation, that they had not so much as the terms or phrases of necessary existence, or necessity of existence, but utterly rejected the very name of necessity, as not applicable to the Deity at all, understanding it constantly in its ancient, proper, compulsive sense<sup>e</sup>. Now it is very well known, that the supposed proof a priori, lately contended for, is built in a manner entirely upon the word necessity, and instantly sinks without it. For, put immutable, or natural, or independent, or emphatical existence, (according to the ancient way,) instead of necessary existence, or necessity of existence, and then it is certain that the very medium of the whole argument drops and vanishes, and there is not so much as any colour or appearance of the proof left. I say then, since it is undoubted fact that the Fathers all along admitted of no such terms as necessary, or necessity, in this case, but rejected them as not applicable either to the Divine existence or attributes; it is very plain that they therewith rejected any such pretended argument a priori as has been since raised from those terms.

<sup>d</sup> Ἡ δεῖξις κατὰ ἀνάλυσιν οὐ γὰρ οἶόντε τῆς πρώτης ἀρχῆς ἀπόδειξιν εἶναι· ἀλλὰ δεῖ ἀπὸ τῶν ὑστέρων τε καὶ φανερῶν ἀρξαμένους, κατὰ τὴν πρὸς ταῦτα συμφωνίαν ἀναλύσει χρωμένους συστή-

σαι τὴν ἐκείνου φύσιν. Aphrodis. Physic. Schol. lib. i. cap. i.

<sup>e</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. viii. p. 569, &c. Preface to Sermons, vol. ii.

To shew how late it was before necessity gained admittance in the Church, and became, as it were, christianized, with respect to our present subject, I may observe that Archbishop Anselm<sup>f</sup> of the eleventh and twelfth century, yea and Alexander Hales<sup>g</sup> of the thirteenth, were yet scrupulous of making use of the term, and were very tender of applying it to the Divine acts or attributes, except it were with great caution, awe, and reserve; at the same time owning the word to be both harsh and improper. And as to applying it to the Divine existence, I do not find that they ventured upon it at all; though others frequently did it afterwards in the decline of the thirteenth century, and downwards, when Aristotle's Metaphysics, translated into barbarous Latin, and the Arabian philosophy, (of Avicen, Averroes, and Algazel,) had paved the way for it<sup>h</sup>.

Let us see however how this matter stood after those improper

<sup>f</sup> Deus nihil facit necessitate, quia nullo modo cogitur aut prohibetur aliquid facere. Et cum dicimus Deum aliquid facere quasi necessitate vitandæ inhonestatis, quam utique non timet, potius intelligendum est quod facit necessitate servandæ honestatis: quæ scilicet necessitas non est aliud quam immutabilitas honestatis ejus, quam a seipso et non ab alio habet; et idcirco improprie dicitur necessitas. Anselm. Opp. tom. iii. p. 55.

<sup>g</sup> Ad aliud vero quod objicitur de necessitate bonitatis, dicendum est quod nomen necessitatis non congrue hic dicitur de Deo. Unde Anselm. In Deo nulla cadit necessitas. Necessitas enim videtur dicere coactionem. Sed nec est necessitas utilitatis a parte sua, sicut habitum est in præcedente autoritate. Si vero dicatur necessitas congruitatis, sive idoneitatis, sicut tangitur in quadam autoritate, tunc potest dici quod ex necessitate bonitatis condidit res. Non tamen videtur congruere quod dicatur ex necessitate naturæ: licet enim sit idem bonitas quod natura ejus, tamen si diceretur ex necessitate naturæ, videretur ponitatis necessitas qualis est in rebus naturalibus. In rebus enim naturalibus ignis ex necessitate naturæ generat ignem, et homo hominem: non sic autem est cum creaturæ fiunt a Deo. Alex. Alens. part. ii. p. 15.

N. B. This author flourished about 1230, died 1245. Albertus Magnus, who flourished about 1260, and died in 1280, made no scruple of applying the word necessary or necessity (in a sober but new sense) to the Divine essence or existence: and it is very plain that he learned that language from Aristotle's philosophy, to which he refers for his sense of those terms. See Albert. Mag. Comment. in lib. i. Sentent. Dist. 6. Opp. vol. xiv. p. 121. edit. Ludg.

<sup>h</sup> Quievit autem et siluit philosophia Aristotelis, pro majori parte, — usque post tempora Mahometi, quando Avicenna et Averroes et cæteri revocaverunt philosophiam Aristotelis in lucem plenam expositionis. Et licet alia logicalia et quædam alia translata fuerunt per Boetium de Græco, tamen tempore Michaelis Scoti, qui annis Dom. 1230. transactis apparuit, defrens librorum Aristotelis partes aliquas, &c. remagnificata est philosophia Aristotelis apud Latinos. Rog. Bacon, p. 37. Conf. p. 45, 262, 420.

terms were brought in, and softened into a qualified sense ; whether any Schoolmen or others (now they might seem to have some handle for it) ever attempted to draw out any such argument a priori for the existence of a first Cause, and to commend the same as true and solid reasoning. I would here observe by the way, that the Schoolmen, though they deservedly lie under a disrepute for their excesses in many things, may yet be justly looked upon as carrying great authority with them in a point of this nature, where they had no bias to mislead them, (being inclined to the side of Theism,) and where a question turned upon a right understanding of technical terms or phrases, and a thorough acquaintance with logic and metaphysics ; being a matter of pure abstract reasoning. They were undoubtedly great masters in that way : for “ where they argued barely upon “ the principles of reason,” as a very judicious writer observes, “ they have often done exceeding well, and have improved “ natural reason to an uncommon height<sup>1</sup>.” And I will venture to add, that if the sharpest wits of these later days shall undertake, upon their own stock, to furnish out a new scheme of school divinity, or metaphysical theology, it will be a long while, perhaps some centuries, before they arrive to such perfection in some part as many of the Schoolmen arrived to ; unless they shall be content within a while to take those despised Schoolmen into consultation with them, and to extract the best things from them. This I hint by the way, in order to remove prejudices, with respect to my citing (as I am now going to do) Schoolmen in this cause ; though I intend not to cite them only, but other the most judicious and learned divines and metaphysicians, who have come after them, and have entirely agreed in this article with them. However, as I have already intimated, the Schoolmen are most certainly proper judges within their own province, and in a point of school divinity : and this which we are now upon is very plainly such, as the pretended argument a priori proceeds altogether upon scholastic terms, and is managed in a scholastic way, and therefore must at length stand or fall by scholastic principles and scholastic reasonings. These things premised, I may now proceed in the historical view, according to order of time, beginning from those days when necessary existence, with other the like terms or phrases, had gotten some footing in the Christian theology.

<sup>1</sup> Reflections upon Learning, p. 217, 227.

A. D. 1260. ALBERTUS MAGNUS.

Albertus, surnamed the Great, on account of his great learning and abilities, was one of the most considerable among the divines or metaphysicians of the age he lived in. He was one of the first (I mean among Christian writers) that took upon him to give God the metaphysical title of a necessary Being. Yet he presumed not to found any argument a priori for the existence upon it, but denied expressly, or in words equivalent, that any argument of that kind could be made. He allows, that upon the foot of mere natural light, God may be known a posteriori by the creatures, and no otherwise<sup>k</sup>: for he admits it as a true principle, that a philosopher can search out God no other way than by the creatures, as a cause is known from the effect<sup>l</sup>. Which amounts to the same with saying, that philosophy affords no proof a priori.

A. D. 1270. THOMAS AQUINAS.

From the master or preceptor I may next descend to the scholar, who was almost twenty years younger than Albertus, but died some years before him, namely, in the year 1274. I need say nothing of the fame or the abilities of Aquinas, surnamed (according to the fashion of those times) the Angelical Doctor. He frequently enough makes use of the phrases of necessary Being, or necessity of existing, but yet never builds any argument a priori for the existence upon it, but constantly maintains, that every proof of the existence is a posteriori, from the effects. In one place he writes thus, "There are two kinds " of demonstration. The first is by the cause, and has its name " from shewing why the thing is, and it proceeds upon some- " thing simply prior. The second is by the effect, and has its " name from shewing that the thing is, and it proceeds upon " things prior with respect to us.—Now the existence of God, " as it is not knowable in itself, is demonstrable to us by the " effects to us known<sup>m</sup>." That is to say, the existence of God in philosophia nisi per creaturas, sicut causam per effectum. Ibid. p. 55.

<sup>k</sup> Posita creatura tanquam effectu Dei, necesse est Deum creatorem poni: et sic a posteriori ex creatura potest Deus cognosci. Albert. Magn. in lib. i. Sentent. dist. iii. Opp. tom. xiv. p. 66.

<sup>l</sup> Philosophus non investigat eum

<sup>m</sup> Duplex est demonstratio. Una quæ est per causam, et dicitur propter quid; et hæc est per priora simpliciter: alia est per effectum, et dicitur demonstratio quia; et hæc est per ea cannot be demonstrated a priori, but a posteriori only: and so the title of that article explains it<sup>n</sup>, in some editions of his Sum. In another work, Aquinas maintains the same thing in words somewhat different, thus: "In arguments brought to prove the existence of the Deity, it is not proper to argue from the Divine essence, or from what he is, but instead thereof to argue from the effects, like as in the demonstrations a posteriori: and from some such effect is the name of God taken<sup>o</sup>." I use a little liberty in rendering his words, to make his sense appear the clearer. It is very plain from both the passages here cited, that he utterly rejected all arguments a priori for the proving the existence of a Deity. Yet I shall not conceal from you, that he elsewhere argues from necessary existence to the eternity of the divine Being<sup>p</sup>; which may be thought to be arguing a priori: I will not say that it is not arguing a priori: but then it is not arguing from attribute to existence, but from one attribute to another, from existence and one or more attributes before proved, to an attribute not yet proved; which is a fair and just way of reasoning, and may perhaps not improperly be called arguing a priori; though some would scruple the giving it that title. However, as to this by-point, I shall have occasion to say more in the sequel, and so may dismiss it for the present, and proceed in my method.

A. D. 1276. ROGER BACON.

Roger Bacon, of the order of Friars Minor, was a person of strong parts and clear judgment, and had perhaps a greater compass of erudition than any other of that age. He was styled the admirable Doctor, after the way of giving titles at that time. It will not be improper to shew what his judgment was upon the present question, as he occasionally delivered it.

quæ sunt priora quoad nos.—Unde Deum esse secundum quod non est per se notum, quoad nos demonstrabile est per effectus nobis notos. Aquin. Summ. q. ii. art. 2. p. 14. edit. Lugd. 1588.

<sup>n</sup> Deum esse, quamvis non a priori, a posteriori tamen demonstrari potest ex aliquo ejus notiori nobis effectu. Aquin. Summ. q. ii. art. 2. p. 4. edit. Paris. 1615.

<sup>o</sup> In rationibus autem in quibus demonstratur Deum esse, non oportet assumi pro medio divinam essentiam, sive quidditatem, sed loco quidditatis accipitur pro medio effectus, sicut accidit in demonstrationibus quia; et ex hujusmodi effectu sumitur ratio hujus nominis Deus. Aquin. Summ. contr. Gentiles, lib. i. cap. 12. p. 14. edit. Lugd. 1587.

<sup>p</sup> Oportet ponere aliquod primum necessarium quod est per seipsum necessarium; et hoc est Deus, cum sit prima causa ut dictum est: igitur Deus æternus est cum omne necessarium per se, sit æternum. Aquin. contr. Gentil. lib. i. cap. 14. p. 21.

“ In metaphysics there can be no demonstration made but by “ arguing from the effect: because things spiritual are discovered “ by the sensible effects, and the Creator by the creature, as is “ manifest in that science<sup>9</sup>.” From which words it is plain that he rejects all pretence to arguing a priori in the question of the existence, and allows of nothing in that case but the proofs a posteriori only.

A. D. 1290. RICHARDUS DE MEDIA VILLA.

Richard of Middleton was a man famous in his time, dignified with the title of the solid Doctor. His determination of the question about proving the existence a priori is clear and full; as here follows: “ There is one kind of demonstration propter “ quid, [from antecedent reason,] in which what belongs to the “ subject is demonstrated by its cause: and there is another kind “ of demonstration quia, [from subsequent reason,] in which the “ cause is demonstrated by the effect. In the former way of “ demonstration, I say, we cannot demonstrate the existence of “ God, because the Divine existence has no cause prior to found “ such proof of the existence upon: but in the latter way of “ proof from the effect, I assert that we can demonstrate the “ existence of the Deity by variety of arguments<sup>r</sup>.” Here we may observe, as likewise in the three authorities before cited; that it was not through haste, oversight, or forgetfulness, that they avoided arguing a priori in that instance, but through deep consideration and judgment. They had all thought of the thing, and very deliberately rejected it, as amounting to a palpable absurdity, making a cause prior to the first.

I may further take notice, that this author has besides a whole chapter about the conceivable or notional order of the Divine attributes well worth the perusal, for the right understanding how, or in what sense, one may be said to argue a priori from existence to attributes, or from attribute to attribute.

<sup>9</sup> In metaphysicis non potest fieri demonstratio nisi per effectum: quoniam inveniuntur spiritualia per corporales effectus, et Creator per creaturam, sicut patet in illa scientia. Rog. Bacon. Opus majus. p. 62. edit. Jebb. 1733.

<sup>r</sup> Est quædam demonstratio propter quid, qua demonstratur passio de subiecto per causam: et est quædam demonstratio quia, in qua demonstra-

tur causa per effectum. Loquendo de prima demonstratione, dico, quod non possumus demonstrare Deum esse, quia esse Dei causam non habet, per quam possimus ipsum demonstrare de Deo: loquendo de demonstratione quæ est per effectum, sic dico quod possumus demonstrare Deum esse multipliciter. Rich. de Med. Vill. in IV. Libr. Sentent. lib. i. dist. 3. q. 3. p. 41.

I shall cite some parts of that chapter for a specimen<sup>s</sup>: but the whole deserves a reader's careful notice, for the solid judgment appearing in it. The sum is, that the Divine existence is considered in the first place, and after that, the attributes in their most natural order of conception. And when they are so placed or ranked, we may argue from them in that order; and such arguing may, without impropriety, be styled arguing a priori, as arguing from something antecedent, in natural order of conception, to something subsequent in conception to it. I know not whether the judicious author has marshalled the attributes with the utmost exactness, or has assigned to every one of them its most proper place: but he appears to have determined very right in the main point, and to have digested every thing with a kind of masterly hand. Had those matters been considered always with the like care and judgment, there could have been no room for arguing a priori to the existence at all, nor for arguing to any attribute from any thing conceived as antecedent, in order of nature, to the existence. But existence and some attributes may rationally be conceived as antecedent, in order of nature, to other attributes: and this kind of arguing a priori, which is reasonable, ought not to be confounded with the other, which is manifestly ὑστερον πρότερον, and palpably absurd. But I pass on.

A. D. 1301. JOHANNES DUNS SCOTUS.

Johannes Duns, surnamed Scotus, and dignified with the title of Doctor Subtilis, was considerable enough to support a kind of rivalry against Thomas Aquinas, and to be founder of a new citatis et unitatis sunt in divina essentia ratio infininitatis: et ista tria, ratio immutabilitatis; et immutabilitas cum prædictis, sunt ratio æternitatis. Unde inferius per divinæ essentiae simplicitatem probabitur in divina essentia esse infinitas, et per divinam simplicitatem et infininitatem, immutabilitas, et per immutabilitatem æternitas. Inter perfectiones etiam quæ conveniunt Deo in quantum est vita, priores sunt illæ, in nostra ratione intelligendi, quæ respiciunt ipsum intelligere, quam illæ quæ respiciunt ipsum velle; et inter primas, prior veritas quam sapientia.—Inter perfectiones quæ respiciunt divinum velle, prima est bonitas, secunda misericordia, tertia justitia. Ricard. de Med. Vill. lib. i. dist. 2. qu. 4. p. 32, 33.

<sup>s</sup> Non est inconveniens ponere quod inter divina attributa sit aliquis ordo secundum rationem intelligendi, in quantum intellectus noster priorem conceptionem de uno facit quam de alio. Unde prius in nostra ratione intelligendi est divinum esse quam aliquod attributum ejus, et intelligere quam velle, et attributa respicientia intellectum priusquam respicientia voluntatem.—inter suas perfectiones priores sunt, in nostra ratione intelligendi, illæ quæ respiciunt ipsum in quantum est essentia, quam illæ quæ respiciunt ipsum in quantum est vita: et inter primas, prior est unitas, secunda simplicitas; communior est enim ratio unitatis quam simplicitatis: omnis enim simplex unum est, sed non convertitur, &c.—Ratio summæ simplici-

sect or division among the Schoolmen. However, their difference in other points makes their authority the greater as to those articles in which they agree: and it is certain that both Thomists and Scotists do agree in condemning and rejecting all argumentation a priori in proof of the existence of a first Cause, as manifestly absurd. Scotus declares in express words, that it is not possible for us to demonstrate as from a cause, or antecedent principle, [propter quid] the existence of an infinite Being, but that we may demonstrate it a posteriori, [demonstratione quia] from effects, namely from the creatures<sup>t</sup>. He further observes and proves, that the first Cause is absolutely uncaused, having neither external nor internal cause; neither efficient, nor final, nor material, nor formal, and consequently none at all. His reasoning is indeed wrapped up in a most wretched style, and very barbarous Latin: but it may perhaps be thrown into intelligible English, and will be found to contain excellent sense. It runs thus: “<sup>u</sup>If the first Cause is above any efficient cause, “it must of consequence be absolutely uncaused, since it cannot “have any other kind of cause, as final, or material, or formal. “As to final cause, that it cannot have any such, is proved thus: “inasmuch as it has no efficient cause, it follows of course that it “can have no final: because a final cause is no more than a “metaphorical cause, moving the efficient to act; nor does the “existence of the thing so caused essentially depend upon it, as “prior to it, in any other view. Now nothing can be justly “looked upon as a cause in itself, unless the thing caused “essentially depends upon it as prior to it; [which cannot be said “of a final cause.]

<sup>t</sup> De ente infinito non potest demonstrari esse propter quid quantum ad nos (licet ex natura terminorum propositio esset demonstrabilis propter quid) sed quantum ad nos propositio est demonstrabilis demonstratione quia, ex creaturis. Scot. in Libr. Sentent. lib. i. dist. 2. qu. 2. p. 28.

<sup>u</sup> Si illud primum est ineffectibile, ergo erit incausabile; quia non finibile, nec materiale, nec formabile. Probatur prima consequentia, videlicet quod si est ineffectibile ergo non est finibile, quia causa finalis non causat, nisi quia metaphorice movet ipsum efficiens ad efficiendum: nam non alio modo dependet ab ipso essentialiter entitas finiti, ut a priore. Nihil autem est causa per se, nisi ut ab ipso tanquam a priore essentialiter dependet causatum.

Duæ autem aliæ consequentiæ (videlicet, quod si est ineffectibile, ergo immaterialabile et non formabile) probantur simul: quia cujus non est causa extrinseca, ejus non est causa intrinseca. Quia causalitas causæ extrinsecæ dicit perfectionem sine imperfectione: causalitas autem causæ intrinsecæ necessario requirit imperfectionem annexam, quia causa intrinseca est pars causati. Ergo, ratio causæ extrinsecæ est naturaliter prior ratione causæ intrinsecæ: negato ergo priore, negatur posterius. Scot. ibid. p. 30.

“As to the other two consequences before hinted, (that if a being has no efficient cause, it can have neither material nor formal.) they follow of course, and are proved at the same time: because whatever is without any external cause, must of consequence be without any internal one. An external cause carries with it a perfect causality, which is more than an internal cause does; for an internal cause carries imperfection along with it, as being only a part of the thing caused. Wherefore if there be no room, as in this case, for an external cause, which naturally is prior to the internal, much less can there be any for the internal cause, which presupposes the other.” I have been forced to render the passage paraphrastically, to make the sense clear, and to do justice to the argument contained in it. It amounts to a demonstration, that a first cause must be absolutely, and in every view, uncaused. And I judged it worth the noting, because it has been sometimes suggested, that though absolute necessity cannot be deemed a cause of a first cause by way of efficient cause, yet it may by way of formal cause be the ground of that existence*. Duns Scotus has here effectually confuted or obviated any such thought, by observing, that every formal, every internal cause is but a part, or a partial conception of the thing itself, presupposing the thing, and therefore properly not prior in conception to it, nor the cause of it.

He has a second argument in the same place to enforce the former, and it is to this effect: that internal or intrinsic causes owe their very nature and being as causes, or as constituent causes, to some external efficient; for they are not causes in themselves, but by the external agent which makes them such. Therefore where there is no external efficient cause, there can be no internal cause properly so called. The force of the argument, as I understand it, lies here: that matter and form (called internal causes) are, in themselves considered, no more than constituent parts of the compound, not causes of it. It is their supposed relation to some external agency which alone makes them carry an idea of causality along with them. If therefore we suppose all external agency or efficiency to be away (as we * See Dr. Clarke's Answer to the Sixth Letter, p. 33. edit. 6th.

† Aliter probantur eadem consequentiæ: quia causæ intrinsecæ sunt causatæ ab extrinseca, vel secundum esse earum, vel in quantum causant compositum, vel utroque modo. Quia causæ intrinsecæ non seipsis, sine agente, causant compositum, vel constituunt. Scot. ibid. p. 30.

must in this case, respecting the divine Being which has no efficient cause,) the very idea of causality, as to any internal cause, ceases and vanishes at once; it cannot be considered as a cause at all<sup>z</sup>. Wherefore, any being that is above having any efficient cause is much more above any other kind of cause, is absolutely uncaused; which was the thing to be proved.

A. D. 1591. GREGORIUS DE VALENTIA.

This writer, in his Commentaries upon Aquinas's Sum, expresses himself fully and clearly to our purpose. "The existence of God cannot be evidently shewn a priori: in this point all are agreed. For the existence of the Deity admits of no cause whereby it should be demonstrated a priori. Neither can it be demonstrated from the Divine essence, considered as prior in conception. 1. Because the existence of a being ought not to be proved by the essence of that being, since the question of the existence [whether any thing is] must precede the other question concerning the essence, [what it is,] as Aquinas rightly observes. 2. Besides, the essence of God is not sufficiently known to us<sup>a</sup>."

Here it is observable, that this author looked upon it as a ruled point, a thing universally agreed to, that there neither was nor could be any demonstration a priori of the existence of God. It may be observed also by the way, that the phrase of demonstratio a priori was now become a more familiar phrase than formerly. The elder writers which I have cited used to call it demonstratio propter quid, answering to the Greek  $\delta\iota' \omicron\upsilon\iota$ . Both signify a proof drawn from some prior cause, or from something naturally, or in the natural order of conception, antecedent

<sup>z</sup> The argument may receive some light from a passage in Durandus relating to this head.

Quod compositum ex materia et forma causam habeat, patet; habet enim duas causas intrinsicas, scilicet, materiam et formam, ex quibus componitur: habet etiam causam efficientem, quia unio materiæ et formæ fit per agens quod introducitur formam in materia. Unde philosophus, 8. Metaphysicæ, cum quæreret quare ex materia et forma fit unum, dicit, quod non est aliqua causa, nisi unum principium motus, quod est causa agens. Durand. lib. i. dist. 8. qu. 4. fol. 3.

edit. Paris.

<sup>a</sup> Deum esse non potest evidenter demonstrari a priori: de hac inter omnes convenit. Nam Dei esse nullam habet causam per quam a priori demonstrari possit: neque etiam id potest demonstrari per essentiam et quidditatem Dei, tanquam per aliquid prius secundum rationem. 1. Quia esse rei non debet demonstrari per quidditatem rei, cum quæstio an sit prior sit quæstione quid sit; ut recte D. Thom. &c. 2. Nam quidditas Dei non satis est nobis nota. Gregor. de Valent. tom. i. disp. i. qu. 2. p. 59. edit. Lugd.

to the thing demonstrated by it<sup>b</sup>. A posteriori is just the reverse<sup>c</sup>.

A. D. 1600. VASQUEZ.

Gabriel Vasquez, another eminent Schoolman of that time, declares his sentiments to the same purpose; that there can be no demonstration a priori of the existence of a Deity, but a posteriori only<sup>d</sup>.

A. D. 1614. SUAREZ.

Suarez, the famous Schoolman and Jesuit, deserves a more particular consideration, because he really had a strong inclination to make out something that should look like an argument a priori, or however should (for ostentation sake, I suppose) be set forth with that name: for, in reality, he expressly and absolutely condemned all reasoning a priori to the existence of a Deity, as others before him had done; and yet by a kind of artificial turn, by interpreting the proof of the unity so as to amount to the same with the proof of a Deity, he conceived he had done the thing, only by changing of names. But let us observe how he managed the whole affair: we shall see afterwards what censures were passed upon it by the judicious, though it was mostly a difference in words. He states the main question thus: "Whether the existence of God may in some sort [or in some sense] be demonstrated a priori:" and he determines in the affirmative. The whole tenor of his reasoning is as here follows: "We are first to premise, that, absolutely

<sup>b</sup> Demonstratio a priori ea est qua probatur effectus per causam, sive proximam sive remotam, aut probatur conclusio per aliquod prius, sive sit causa, sive antecedens tantum. Chauvin. Lexic. p. 170.

<sup>c</sup> Demonstratio a posteriori dicitur illa, qua vel probatur causa per effectum, vel conclusio per aliquod posterius, sive sit effectus sive consequens. Chauvin. ibid.

<sup>d</sup> Deum esse, non potest a priori demonstrari: a posteriori tamen et per effectus demonstrari potest. Vasq. q. ii. art. 2. p. 60.

<sup>e</sup> Utrum aliquo modo possit a priori demonstrari Deum esse. Suarez. Metaphys. tom. ii. disp. 29. sect. 3. p. 28.

<sup>f</sup> Supponendum est, simpliciter lo-

quando non posse demonstrari a priori Deum esse; quia neque Deus habet causam sui esse, per quam a priori demonstratur, neque si haberet, ita exacte et perfecte a nobis cognoscitur Deus, ut ex propriis principiis (ut sic dicam) illum assequamur. Quo sensu dixit Dionysius, capite septimo de divinis nominibus, nos non posse Deum ex propria natura cognoscere.

Quoniam vero hoc ita sit, nihilo minus postquam a posteriori aliquid de Deo demonstratum sit, possumus ex uno attributo demonstrare a priori aliud: ut si ex immensitate, v. g. concludamus localem immutabilitatem. Suppono enim ad ratiocinandum a priori, modo humano, sufficere distinctionem rationis inter attributa.

Resolutio questionis. Ad hunc ergo

“ speaking, the existence of God cannot be proved a priori; as “ well because God has no cause of his existence whereby it “ should be proved a priori, as also because if he had, yet we “ have no such exact and perfect knowledge of God as might “ enable us to trace him up (if I may so speak) to his own “ proper principles. To which purpose Dionysius (in his seventh “ chapter of the divine names) observes, that we cannot know God “ according to his proper nature.

“ But though that be so as I have here said, yet notwith“ standing, after we have once demonstrated a posteriori some“ thing concerning God, we may go on to demonstrate a priori
 “ one attribute from another: as for instance, when we infer “ unchangeableness of place from the omnipresence before proved.
 “ I suppose all the while, that a notional distinction of the Divine “ attributes (after an human way of conception) is foundation “ sufficient for reasoning a priori.

“ Now, for the resolution of the question, I proceed thus:
 “ having demonstrated a posteriori, that God is a necessary and “ self-existent Being, we may be able to prove a priori from this “ attribute, [of necessary existence,] that there cannot be another “ necessary and self-existent being besides that one; from whence
 “ it follows, that that Being is God.

“ You will object, that this is proving the existence of God
 “ from the essence of God before known, (for it is supposed that
 “ the essence of God is, that he is a necessary and self-existent “ Being,) which is plainly repugnant; since the question what “ he is presupposes the other question whether he exists; as modum dicendum est: Demonstrato a posteriori Deum esse ens necessarium et a se, ex hoc attributo posse a priori demonstrari, præter illud non posse esse aliud ens necessarium et a se, et consequenter demonstrari Deum esse.

Dices, Ergo ex quidditate Dei cognita, demonstratur Deum esse, quia quidditas Dei est quod sit ens necessarium et a se: hoc autem plane repugnat, quia quæstio Quid est supponit quæstionem An est; ut recte ad hoc propositum notavit divus Thomas. Part. i. q. 2. art. 2. ad secund.

Respondeo, Formaliter ac proprie loquendo, non demonstrari esse Dei per quidditatem Dei ut sic, quod recte argumentum probat; sed ex quodam attributo (quod re ipsa est essentia Dei, a nobis autem abstractius concipitur ut modus entis non-causati) colligi aliud attributum, et ita concludi illud ens esse Deum. Unde ad concludendum hoc modo, esse Deum, sub ratione Dei, supponitur esse probatum, dari ens quoddam per se necessarium, nimirum ex effectibus ejus, et ex negatione processus in infinitum. Atque ita quod primum de hoc ente probatur est esse; deinde esse ab intrinseco necessarium; hinc esse unicum in tali ratione ac modo essendi; ideoque esse Deum. Atque in hunc modum prius aliquo modo definitur quæstio An est, quam Quid est. Suares, ibid. p. 28.

“ St. Thomas [Aquinas] has justly observed on this head. Part i.
“ qu. 2. art. 2.

“ I answer, that strictly and properly speaking, we infer not “ the existence of God from his essence, considered as such,
“ (which the objection justly excepts to,) but from one certain “ attribute, (which though really identified with the essence, is yet “ conceived abstractedly by us as a mode of the Being uncaused)
“ we deduce another attribute; and so we at length prove that “ that Being is God. Wherefore, in order to prove in this way
“ that there is a God, precisely considered as God, we suppose it “ proved beforehand, that there is a certain Being necessary in “ himself; proved namely from his effects, and from the absurdity
“ of an infinite progression. So the first thing we prove of this “ Being is, that he exists; the next, that he is necessarily exist- “ ing; then, that he is the only one existing in such a way; and “ so of consequence he is God. And thus, after some sort, we “ do first determine whether he exists, and next the other ques“ tion, what he is.”

Thus far the acute and learned Suarez; of whom I have many things to observe, before I go on to other writers; 1. That he appears to have been ambitious to make out something that should be called an argument a priori, and was probably able to do as much in it as any one before or after him can justly be presumed to be. 2. That the method which he took for it, proving first something a posteriori, and then proceeding to argue a priori for the rest, is very like to that which others have taken since. 3. That he differs however from those later advocates for the argument a priori in the main thing of all, and determines expressly against their notion, that necessity can be conceived antecedent to existence. He looked upon that as flat absurdity and self-contradiction, utterly repugnant to the nature of a first Cause; and so he made no use of antecedent necessity, or internal cause, or formal reason, ground, or foundation, in proving his point: he was too knowing a logician and metaphysician, to offer any thing of that kind. 4. All that he admits is, that after the existence and one or more attributes have been proved a posteriori, we may then proceed to argue a priori for the rest: not from antecedent necessity, not from any thing conceived as prior, in order of nature, to the existence itself; but from the existence and one attribute or more considered as before proved, and as prior in conception to all the rest. 5. One thing Suarez was very singular in, and upon that the whole stress of his cause lies, so far as concerns the making out an argument a priori for the existence of God: he would have it supposed that God is not proved to be God, till the unity is proved; and so he suspends, as it were, the proof of a Deity upon the proof of the unity. This was an ingenious thought, but too weak to bear. For in that way there could be no room for the question whether God be one, since the very name would imply it: besides, it is universally allowed, that the proof of the existence of a Deity is both clearer and stronger than any proof of the unity, and is sufficiently determined and settled in the first place, before the consideration of the unity comes in at all. When we have proved, for instance, that there is an intelligent, eternal, self-existent Being, (one or more,) which is most easily proved from our own existence; we have then competently proved that there is a God, though we have not yet proved or considered every attribute that belongs to him. Such has been the way of divines and metaphysicians, first to prove the existence of a Deity, under that confuse general conception; and next to proceed to the proof of the unity and other attributes in due place and order: and it is not reasonable to suggest, that if a man should fail in the proof of the unity, or of some other Divine attribute, (for the reason is the same in all,) that he has therefore failed in his proof of a Deity. That would be going against rule, and risking the whole for a part; and, in short, resting the proof of a Deity (the plainest thing in the world) upon very obscure conditions, very unequal terms. But we shall have more of this matter in the sequel, as we take in other later writers, who have directly or indirectly passed their censures upon Suarez for his excesses on this head. 6. Upon the whole, one may observe, that this pretended proof of a Deity, as drawn a priori, is rather a fetch, or a subtilty of that great man, than any thing solid; a nominal proof, rather than a real one; or an affected manner of miscalling things by wrong names.

A. D. 1610. CHRISTOPH. GILLIUS.

Contemporary with Suarez lived Christopher Gillius, a Spanish divine and Jesuit, one of a subtle wit and penetrating genius. He has a pretty large chapter §, spent entirely upon our present question. He takes notice, that there were not wanting some of that time who contended that the existence of a Deity might be proved a priori<sup>h</sup>. He had Suarez in his eye, as is plain enough, (though he does not name him,) because, a little after, he quotes the very words which Suarez had made use of in that argument. He mentions also Scotus, and some of his followers, as aiming at the like conclusion in a more far-fetched and roundabout way<sup>i</sup>; allowing, that if God should extraordinarily or supernaturally infuse some higher degrees of knowledge, then some kind of proof a priori (however fruitless, and superseded by such illumination) might be made from it. See how solicitous and industrious some have been in searching for every appearance of a proof a priori, as much as others have been in searching for the philosopher's stone, or for the squaring of the circle, or the like, and with the like success.

§ Gillii Commentationes Theologicæ de Essentia et Unitate Dei, lib. i. tract. 8. c. 4. p. 391—396.

Our judicious author first observes, that all pretences of any formal demonstration of that kind had been utterly exploded<sup>k</sup> by the judicious; particularly by Albertus Magnus, and Henricus de Gandavo, and Richardus de Media Villa, and Scotus, and Lyra, and Gasp. Casalius, and many others referred to elsewhere<sup>l</sup>: so that it might be justly looked upon as a ruled point, that no proper demonstration a priori could be made of the Divine existence; all such attempts at length resolving either into some petitio principii, or some equivocation of terms, or other the like fallacy, or foreign subtilty.

He proceeds to examine the question with the utmost strict-

<sup>h</sup> Non desunt recentiores, qui affirmant esse demonstrabilem a priore, etiam respectu viatorum, si non per se primo, saltem posita cognitione Dei acquisita per discursum: quoniam, inquit, postquam ex creaturis convincitur Deum esse ens necessarium, et a se, et unum, necessario concluditur a priore hunc esse Deum, &c. Ibid. p. 391.

<sup>i</sup> Alio modo eandem conclusionem tueretur Scotus in I. dist. 2. qu. 2. Cum Scotistis interpretibus ibidem: Ochamus in I. dist. 3. qu. 4. lit. F. Gabriel. qu. 4. conclus. 3. Rubionius, dist. 2. qu. 1. art. 2. concl. 4. Nam quamvis existiment de lege ordinaria non haberi a nobis demonstrationem propter quid, hujus propositionis Deus est; censent tamen fieri posse ut demonstretur, si Deus infunderet alicui notitiamevidentem eorumdem terminorum, vel saltem termini Dei, &c. p. 391.

<sup>k</sup> Propositio, Deus est, sub neutra acceptatione ex prædictis, est viatoribus de lege formaliter demonstrabilis a priore. Hæc est Alberti in Summa, tract. iii. qu. 17. Henrici in Summa, art. xxii. qu. 4. Richardi in I. dist. 3. art. 1. qu. 1. Scoti in I. dist. 2. qu. 2. et quodlibeto 7. Lyrani in Sapient. xiii. Gaspa Casalii, lib. i. de Quadripart. justit. cap. xvi. conclus. 2. Et est de mente doctorum quos referam cap. seq. num. 7. Qui omnes non agnoscunt demonstrationem Dei nisi ex creaturis. — Notitia vero sumpta ex creaturis non potest esse a priore, ut patet. Gillius, ibid. p. 392. conf. p. 394.

<sup>l</sup> Gillius, c. v. p. 400.

ness and nicety, traversing it through all its mazes, and unravelling every ambiguity and subtle intricacy, whereby some had endeavoured to support what they would call a demonstration a priori in that case; and shewing that none of them sufficiently answered the purpose, or came up to the point<sup>m</sup>. From whence we may remark, that Suarez's attempts that way were not approved by the most judicious divines of his own time, but were condemned by the generality, and even by those of his own order, (for Gillius was a Jesuit,) and that soon after: for as his Metaphysics had first appeared in 1600, so this censure of Gillius was finished and licensed in 1606, though not published before 1610.

A. D. 1615. ESTIUS.

At the same time with Gillius lived the learned Estius, who delivered his sentiments of the present question in the manner here following: "As there are, among logicians, two kinds of demonstration, one demonstrating the effect from the causes, and the other, the cause from the effects; it is manifest, that the existence of a Deity cannot be proved in the former way of demonstration, since no cause in any kind can be assigned either of God, or of his existing. But it may be demonstrated in the latter way, as St. Thomas [Aquinas] rightly judges, (I. q. 2. art. 2, 3.) and as the Schoolmen upon this distinction do universally teach."

<sup>m</sup> Ex his constat firmum non esse fundamentum sententiæ asserentis demonstrari Deum esse a priore per rationem necessitatis, quoniam non est radix attributorum habentium ordinem ad creaturas: et quamvis esset, cum ipsa non cognoscatur a nobis a priore, vel ex terminis evidenter conjuncta cum Deo sub ratione illa attributalis fieri nequit ut eadem demonstratio sit formalis a priore.—Primum initium illius demonstrationis sumitur ex cognitione creaturarum,—resolvitur in principia cognita ex posteriore, et ideo demonstratio non constat formaliter ex primis.—Quodnam peto est ens, de quo primum probatur esse? Ipsene est Deus, an vero ens necessarium? Si Deus, totus discursus sequens erit superfluous, quoniam procedit ad probandum id quod supponitur probatum: si ens necessarium, aut sumitur secundum absolutam et omnimodam necessitatem, et tunc hoc ipso supponitur esse necessarium ab intrinseco; aut, &c.—Ita patet ex illo principio, ens necessarium est, nullo modo demonstrari posse a priore hanc propos. Deus est. Gillius, p. 396.

<sup>n</sup> Cum duplex sit apud dialecticos demonstratio, alia quæ ex causis effectum, alia quæ contra ex effectis causam monstrat; manifestum est, priori demonstrationis modo non posse doceri Deum esse, cum nec Dei nec ejus existentiæ possit in ullo genere causa proferri. Potest autem demonstrari posteriori modo, quemadmodum recte S. Thom. I. qu. 2. art. 2. et 3. Et in universum scholastici circa hanc distinctionem tradunt. Estius in Libr. Sentent. Comm. tom. i. p. 4.

So Cardinal Lugo also, a little later in the same age. Dico tertio, Deum esse, non est demonstrabile a priori. Sic cum Sancto Thoma, cæteri fere doctores, et latissime Gillius. Lug. lib. i. disp. 14. c. 2. s. 8.

A. D. 1627. JOHANNES PUTEANUS.

This writer expresses his judgment in the terms here following<sup>o</sup> :

“ Though the existence of a Deity cannot be demonstrated a priori, yet it must be allowed, that as to some of the Divine attributes, they may be demonstrated a priori.

“ 1. As to the first particular, it is plain from hence ; that every proof a priori proceeds by causes either real or virtual, or, which comes to the same, by some prior reason ; but of the Divine existence there are no causes real or virtual, nor any prior reason : for existence is included in the formal conception of the Divine essence, insomuch that it is impossible to conceive the Divine essence but as existing. The Divine essence is being simply necessary : now it is contradictory to the notion of being simply necessary, not to have existence ; for it is usually defined, as that which so exists that it cannot but exist.

“ 2. As to the second particular, it is manifest from hence, that eternity is demonstrated from immutability in this manner : Every thing immutable is eternal : God is immutable : therefore God is eternal. In like manner, the Divine ubiquity is commonly proved from the immensity. And so in many other cases.”

The author here well distinguishes between arguing a priori from existence and attributes already proved, to other attributes, and arguing a priori from attributes, or from any thing else, to the existence itself. The one he allows as just and rational, the other he rejects as manifestly absurd : and so far he is certainly right. Some indeed may scruple to call it arguing a priori, when a man argues from attribute to attribute ; conceiving that it should rather be styled arguing ex absurdo, and that nothing short of a

<sup>o</sup> Licet existentia Deitatis nequeat demonstrari a priori, concedendum tamen est de quibusdam attributis divinis, quod possint demonstrari a priori.

1. Prima pars conclusionis ex eo innotescit, quod demonstratio quaerit a priori consurgat ex causis vel veris, vel certe virtualibus, aut, quod idem est, ex ratione aliqua priori. Existentiæ autem divinæ nullæ sunt causæ, nec veræ, nec virtuales, nec ratio prior : hæc enim includitur in conceptu formali essentiæ divinæ, et quidem ita, ut impossibile sit concipere essentiam divinam quin concipiatur existens. Est enim essentia divina ens simpliciter necessarium ; repugnat autem enti simpliciter necessario, non habere existentiam : definitur enim hoc communiter, id quod ita est ut non esse nequeat.

2. Posterior vero pars constat ex eo, quod æternitas demonstratur per immutabilitatem, hoc modo : Omne immutabile est æternum ; Deus est immutabilis : ergo, Deus est æternus. Ubiquitas etiam divina demonstratur communiter per immensitatem ; et sic in aliis multis. Joan. Putean. Opp. tom. i. part. 1. qu. 3. p. 24.

real (as opposed to notional) priority is sufficient to denominate or constitute an argument a priori. But that I take to be a fruitless nicety, and such is not worth the insisting upon; for at last it will terminate in a dispute about words. It is sufficient, that there is nothing prior to the existence, no not so much as in order of nature, or notion, or conception; and so all arguing a priori, as to that case, is for ever excluded. But as to the other case, the manner of arguing is undoubtedly right, whatever name we give to it: and there seems to be no just objection against calling it a priori, so long as the existence is looked upon as always first in conception, and that the most natural order of conception be followed in arguing from attribute to attribute, and the process be not made too arbitrary <sup>p</sup>.

A. D. 1642. RODERICUS DE ARRIAGA.

This acute metaphysician and divine delivers his sentiments as follows: "The being or existence of God cannot be demonstrated a priori. So St. Thomas, Albertus, Durandus; and " of our order (of Jesuits) Valentia, Molina, Suarez, and Vasquez, whom Tanner mentions and follows<sup>q</sup>." After this, he enters minutely into the merits of the question, assigning his reasons why the existence cannot be proved a priori: which being much the same with those before mentioned, I choose, for brevity sake, to omit them, and proceed. Only, I may observe, that here are three authors, Durandus, Molina, and Tanner, beyond what I have quoted upon the question: and it is further observable, that he takes in Suarez amongst them, as one that had declared against the argument a priori; as indeed he really had, though verbally he might seem to differ, as I have before <sup>p</sup> Richardus de Media Villa, in a chapter before referred to, observes well to this purpose, that the order of the attributes ought not to be settled in an arbitrary manner, but as reason requires.

Nec loquor hic de ordine qui tantum est ex parte voluntatis (quia tali ordine posset, in nostra ratione intelligendi, quandoque unum esse prius, quandoque posterius, sicut placeret nobis) sed loquor de ordine qui est in conceptionibus nostri intellectus intelligentis divina attributa secundum illum ordinem secundum quem magis sunt apta nata intelligi: et sic intelligendo divinas perfectiones, est talis ordo ex parte nostra. Prius enim, secundum rationem intelligendi, intelligimus divinum esse, quam aliquam ejus perfectionem; secundo, suum intelligere; tertio, suum velle. Ricard. de Med. Vill. lib. i. p. 32.

<sup>q</sup> Prima conclusio, Deum esse, seu existere, non potest demonstrari a priori. Ita D. Thomas, Albertus, Durandus: et e nostris, Valentia, Molina, Suarez, et Vasquez, quos refert et sequitur Tannerus loco citato. Roderic. de Arriag. tom. i. p. 30.

hinted. So universal hitherto had been the agreement of metaphysicians and divines in this article.

A. D. 1644. DIONYSIUS PETAVIUS.

The very learned Petavius is but short upon this question, mentioning it transiently, as it came in his way: but he is too considerable a person to be omitted in this recital. He takes notice, that the existence of a Deity is not to be proved from any thing prior or antecedent, but from effects only, and a posteriori; and from the absurdities which lie against the contrary persuasion<sup>r</sup>.

A. D. 1652. NATHANAEL CULVERWELL.

I shall now mention a protestant writer of our own of some note in his time. He was Fellow of Emanuel College in Cambridge. In his book, entitled, An Elegant and Learned Discourse of the Light of Nature, he occasionally drops a few words to our purpose: "There can be no demonstration of him [God] a priore; for he is the first cause: and all demonstrations fetched from such effects as flow from him, they do only shew you that he is; they do not open and display the divine essence," &c.

A. D. 1658. BISHOP BARLOW.

A more considerable writer of our own, so far as concerns the present question, was Thomas Barlow, then fellow of Queen's College, Oxon. and afterwards (A. D. 1675) Bishop of Lincoln. He published some Metaphysical Exercises, wherein he discovers great learning, and no less acuteness. The edition of 1658, which I follow, is the second edition. I shall produce his sentiments at large, because he entered deep into the question, viewed it on every side, and withal passed his censure (though rather too severe) upon the learned Suarez.

He writes thus: "Our knowledge of God, arising from the light of nature, is not a priori, and di' erti. The reason is, because then God could not be eternal, if there were any prin-sunt, atque etiam iis ex incommodis et absurdis quæ in contradicentium altera parte cernuntur, argumenta licet colligere, quibus Deus esse monstretur. Petav. Dogm. Theolog. tom. i. lib. 1. c. 1. p. 2, 3.

<sup>r</sup> Verum hæc iisque similia tum nos commoverent, si probationum id genus ageretur quod ex antecedentibus et prioribus ducitur, ac demonstrationem et scientiam parit: ejusmodi enim locum in Deo non habent.—Nihilominus ex effectis et iis quæ posteriora

<sup>s</sup> Culverwell, p. 212.

“ ciple prior to God : for eternity, in the very notion of it, ex“ cludes any prior principle. Consequently, if God be eternal,
 “ there cannot be any prior principle whereby he may be known
 “ a priori.—Were there any principle by which God might be “ known a priori, then, 1. God would not be the first Original “ and first Cause, as having by the supposition another cause “ prior to him.—2. That supposed antecedent principle, by which “ the existence of God should be proved, must be either external,
 “ (of the final or efficient kind,) or else internal, of the material “ or formal kind. Now it cannot be of the final kind, because “ God is the chief end, and there cannot be any higher final cause, “ whereby to demonstrate a priori the existence of God. It “ cannot be of the efficient kind ; because if God had any ante“ cedent efficient cause, then God would be an effect, &c.—Nei“ ther can it be said, that such prior cause is either material or “ formal: for the perfect simplicity of the Divine nature admits
 “ not of any such causes, as is self-evident : consequently there “ is no room for any cause whereby to demonstrate a priori the “ existence of a Deity<sup>t</sup>.”

Our learned author here enters into the heart of the question, and reasons his way through, like a knowing and judicious man. Only he seems rather too short as to what concerns the two internal causes, called material and formal : but that brevity of his may be competently supplied from what has been said above. under Duns Scotus. I proceed to observe how he animadvertes upon Suarez.

“ I am aware, that Suarez is of opinion, that we may, in some “ sort, demonstrate a priori the existence of a Deity : not by “ the essence of God as such, but by some certain attribute which

<sup>t</sup> Hæc nostra de Deo cognitio, a lumine naturali orta, non est a priori et dicitur ōri. Ratio est, quia sic Deus non esset æternus, modo esset aliquod principium Deo prius : ipsa enim æternitas intrinseca dicit negationem principii ; et per consequens, si Deus sit æternus, non potest esse aliquod principium prius, per quod a priori cognoscetur.—Si esset aliquod principium quo Deum a priori cognosceremus ; tum, 1. Deus non esset principium primum et causa prima, utpote qua alia causa esset prior.—2. Principium prius ex quo probari possit a priori Deum esse, vel erit externum (finale vel effi- ciens) vel internum, scil. materiale vel formale. Non primum, quia cum Deus sit finis ultimus, non possit esse causa finalis prior, per quam demonstrari possit dicitur ōri Deum esse. Non secundum, quia si Deus habuisset causam efficientem priorem, tum Deus esset effectus, &c.—Nec dici possit, quod illa causa sit materialis, aut formalis, summa Dei simplicitas tales causas non admittit, ut manifestum est : et per consequens non est causa ulla, per quam a priori demonstrari possit esse Deum. Barlow, Exercit. Metaph. iv. p. 28.

“ is really the essence of God, only considered by us, in an abstract way, as a mode of the uncaused Being. But, to say the truth, I approve not this bold assertion of the learned Jesuit. Because it is a manifest contradiction to say, that the existence of God can be proved a priori from any attribute whatever, when every attribute, as such, in the very notion of it, denotes something posterior to the essence of which it is the attribute. For if the attribute be really distinct, [from the essence,] then it is really subsequent to it: or if it be only notionally distinct, (which is the case in the divine Being,) then it is likewise notionally subsequent to the essence, whose attribute it is conceived to be. It is not possible so much as to imagine any attribute but what presupposes some essence whose attribute it is. Consequently our knowledge of God’s existence is a posteriori only: and of that kind are all the demonstrations brought by metaphysicians and schoolmen<sup>u</sup>.” The learned author here argues the point against Suarez with great strength and acuteness: only he seems to fix an opinion upon Suarez which never was his: for Suarez himself plainly disowned any such arguing a priori for the existence, in that crude and gross sense which Barlow appears to take it in, while he is disputing against it. All that Suarez really meant, as I have before hinted, was, that the unity might be proved a priori, after having proved the existence a posteriori: and such proof of the unity he improperly called, or erroneously conceived to be, proving the existence of God a priori, inasmuch as God should not be deemed to be God, till proved to be one. Our author afterwards very well confutes that peculiar fancy, which Suarez and some few est etiam ratione essentia posterius, cuius attributum concipitur: cum attributum nec fingi posset quin presupponitur essentia aliqua cuius est attributum. Et per consequens Deum esse non nisi a posteriori cognoscimus; tales enim sunt demonstrationes omnes a metaphysicis et scholasticis adducta ad ostendendum Deum esse; ut videre est apud Fran. Suarez. Metaph. p. ii. disp. 29. sect. 2. num. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5. Aquin. contra Gent. lib. i. c. 13. p. 11. et Ferrariens. ibid. Nazarium in I. P. qu. 2. art. 3. et apud Aquin. I. P. qu. 2. art. 3. et commentatores. Barlow, ibid. p. 129, 130. conf. p. 165, 186.

<sup>u</sup> Novi quod Suarez putat, nos posse aliquo modo a priori demonstrari Deum esse: non per quidditatem Dei, ut sic, sed ex quodam attributo quod re ipsa est essentia Dei, a nobis autem abstractius consideratur ut modus entis non causati, &c. Sed ut quod res est dicam, non probo hoc docti Jesuitæ audax pronuntiatum. Quia manifeste implicat Deum esse demonstrari posse a priori per attributum quodcunque, cum attributum omne, qua tale, intrinseca dicit aliquid essentia illa posterius cuius est attributum.—Nam si sit attributum re distinctum, tum re vera est posterius: si sit attributum solum ratione distinctum (quod in divinis accedit) tum

others had countenanced in that article: I say, our author well confutes that notion by observing, that the existence of a Deity is sufficiently proved, as soon as an infinite, eternal, uncreated, independent (he should have added intelligent) Being is proved; and that the question of the unity comes not properly in till afterwards*. Valentia had effectually obviated that pretence of Suarez some time before, in what he had said against Cajetan, who had been beforehand with Suarez in that piece of subtilty.

One thing further I would observe of Barlow, before I dismiss him, that he was very scrupulous as to admitting that any of the Divine attributes might be demonstrated a priori. For though he allowed the way of arguing from one attribute before proved, to another not proved, and makes use of it himself more than once; yet considering that the attributes are in reality (however notionally distinguished) identified with the essence, he apprehended such reasoning could not justly be accounted reasoning a priori<sup>z</sup>, since the Divine essence could not be conceived prior * Hoc dato, quod non ostendunt Deum esse unum, tamen et adhuc erunt argumenta prædicta satis valida, et in demonstrationem thesisi antedictæ valitura: quia in præsentī hoc solum demonstrandum suscepimus, nempe esse aliquod ens quod Deum dicimus, infinitum, æternum, increatum, et independentens. Sed an hoc ens unum sit aut multiplex, alterius est loci et quæsitī opus demonstrare. Barlow, Exercit. iv. p. 161.

† In proposito igitur, cum Dei nomen audimus, communiter solemus concipere imperfecte et confuse, vel primam causam, vel primum movens, vel alia quæ rationes Thomæ concludunt. Quamobrem rationes ejusmodi, quæ scilicet probant esse aliquod primum movens, efficiens, &c. etsi non probant quid, et quale illud sit, scilicet immateriale, infinitum, unum numero, &c. satis tamen probant Deum esse. Illa enim alia probare, pertinet ad quæstionem de natura et quidditate divina, et probantur etiam non admodum difficulter, constituta jam veritate divinæ entitatis, juxta quæstionem an est. Atque hinc fit quod D. Thomas non nisi post expeditam hanc quæstionem an est, disputat de unitate, simplicitate, æternitate, et aliis ejusmodi perfectionibus divinis, ut videbimus in sequentibus quæstionibus. Quocirca cum Cajetanus hic negat, probari per se his rationibus D. Thomæ, Deum esse, eo quod non probatur illis Dei unitas et infinitas; et concedit tantum, id probari per accidens, (ut scilicet ejusmodi rationes concludunt esse quædam prædicata quæ ei rei veritate soli Deo conveniunt,) non satis distinctissime videtur inter quæstionem an est, et quid est. Greg. de Valent. tom. i. p. 64.

‡ Fateor Suarezium et scholasticos usitate affirmare æternitatem (ut et alia nonnulla attributa Dei) demonstrari posse a priori, et admittere medium ratione prius; ita ut illud medium licet in re ipsa non sit æternitate prius, tamen quoad modum nostrum conciipiendi, imperfectum possit esse prius. Sed, ut quod sentio libere proferam, minutias has scholasticas non probo, et tutius esse judico, et Deo dignius, si de Deo et perfectionibus suis loquamur prout sunt, non prout ab intellectu nostro fingantur. Et sic rectius dices æternitatem a priori demonstrari non posse quia in re ipsa ita est prout affirmatur, quam æternitatem posse a priori demonstrari, cum in re ipsa non ita fit, nec esse possit medium ullum in re prius, ut supra demonstravimus. Barlow, Exercit. v. p. 187.

to itself. There is certainly weight in the suggestion. But the point is not worth the contesting, as I have before intimated, since it will terminate only in a dispute about words or names. That it is reasonable and right to argue from existence and attributes proved, to other attributes not proved, is agreed on all hands: and whether such arguing shall be called reasoning ab absurdo, or a priori, is not very material. I have hinted above, under what restrictions or cautions I conceive it may be justly termed reasoning a priori. But whatever way this by-point, of slight consideration in the main, be determined, the other more material question concerning the arguing a priori for the existence, (or for any of the attributes from any thing considered as antecedent to the existence,) is no way affected by it. For such kind of arguing will undoubtedly be still condemned as wrong, in every view, and in every construction, and upon every the most favourable supposition that can with any colour of reason be made for it.

A. D. 1662. FRANCISCUS BONE SPEI.

This author likewise declares his judgment, that there can be no demonstration a priori of the existence of God, and further testifies, that it was then a settled point amongst all, about which there was no dispute<sup>a</sup>.

A. D. 1678. DR. CUDWORTH.

Dr. Cudworth's judgment in this article cannot but be of great weight, as he was a person of eminent learning and abilities, a Protestant writer, and therefore the less apt to take any thing implicitly from the Popish Schoolmen; extremely desirous besides, to draw together every plausible argument, that could with any show of reason be urged for the existence of a Deity, and to make the utmost improvement of them. Notwithstanding all which he frankly declares, in his preface to his great work, his judgment against the argument a priori, in these remarkable words: "We do therein also demonstrate the absolute impossibility of all Atheism, and the actual existence of a God: we say, demonstrate; not a priori, which is impossible and contradictious, but by necessary inference from principles altogether undeniable<sup>b</sup>."

<sup>a</sup> Dico, Deum existere demonstrari non potest demonstratione a priori: Sp. disp. i. dub. 2.
<sup>b</sup> Cudworth's Intellect. Syst. preface.
ita omnes communiter. Franc. Bon.

In the book itself he has a great deal more to the same purpose, part of which has been cited above; and for the rest I am content to refer the reader to the pages where he will find it<sup>c</sup>.

A. D. 1683. LE BLANC.

Le Blanc is another Protestant writer, of great learning and judgment, who freely declares his sentiments against the possibility of demonstrating a priori the existence of God. He does it nearly in the same words<sup>d</sup> with Estius above cited; though without taking notice from whom he borrowed them.

A. D. 1690. ARCHBISHOP TILLOTSON.

This great and good Prelate seems to have thought, that neither the existence nor the attributes of God could be demonstrated a priori, falling in with the sentiments of Bishop Barlow, mentioned above. He expresses himself in these words, speaking of the Divine spirituality: "This is not to be proved by way of demonstration, (for there is nothing before God, or which can be a cause of him,) but by way of conviction, by shewing the absurdity of the contrary<sup>e</sup>."

Again, speaking of the Divine immensity, he says, "I have told you formerly, there being nothing before God, nor any cause of his being, his perfections cannot be proved by way of demonstration, but of conviction, by shewing the absurdity of the contrary<sup>f</sup>." He repeats the same observation afterwards, applying it to the Divine *eternity*s. In a popular discourse, he avoided the Latin and scholastic phrase a priori. But it is very plain from his manner of expressing himself, that he meant the same as to say, there could be no demonstration a priori, either of the existence or attributes of the Deity: and that as to the attributes in particular, the way of reasoning by a reductio ad absurdum was the best we could have, the utmost we could come up to. Indeed, the reducing the contrary persuasion to a flat absurdity is a kind of demonstration, and such as the mathematicians nec ejus existentiæ possit in ullo genere causa proferri: sed demonstrari potest posteriori modo, nimirum ex effectis. Le Blanc, Theis. p. 91.

<sup>c</sup> Cudworth, book i. ch. iv. p. 715, 716.

<sup>d</sup> Cum duplex sit demonstratio apud dialecticos, altera quæ ex causis effectum, altera vero quæ contra ex effectis causam monstrat, manifestum est, priori demonstrationis modo non posse doceri Deum esse, cum nec Dei

<sup>e</sup> Tillotson, vol. ii. serm. 100. p. 671. fourth edit.

<sup>f</sup> Ibid. serm. 101. p. 678. fourth edit.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. serm. 102. p. 683.

themselves frequently make use of: but then it must be owned, that it is the lowest kind of demonstration, (as not directly and immediately inferring the thing to be proved<sup>h</sup>), and comes not up to the perfection of the direct ostensive demonstration a posteriori, much less to the demonstration a priori. It is a good and sufficient proof, but not the highest kind of proof; sufficient for conviction, but not amounting to demonstration emphatically so called: which is what our judicious Prelate had an eye to, in the distinction which he thrice made use of.

A. D. 1712. MR. HUMPHREY DITTON.

I shall close this historical account with a very good writer and close reasoner, Mr. Humphrey Ditton, who appeared after the time that the new tenet of an argument a priori had been offered to the world. He either knew not of it, or was not aware of its force: for he determines as the whole stream of metaphysicians and divines had before done, "that our demonstrations of the existence of a God are all of them ōri, and a posteriori, as proceeding from the effects<sup>i</sup>."

Now, to sum up the amount of this Historical View, it appears at length, that as to the point of demonstrating a priori the existence of a Deity, it is no new thought, but very ancient, and what has been turned and tried every way, and very maturely considered time after time, and as often rejected and thrown aside as contradictory and absurd; by men of the brightest parts and coolest judgment, and men no way prejudiced against it, but sincerely disposed to accept it, and make use of it, if it had been capable of serving. It has been frequently and seriously considered by persons of different times and tempers, parties and professions; by ancients and moderns, by philosophers and divines, by Pagans and Christians, by Fathers and Schoolmen, by Realists and Nominalists, by Thomists and Scotists, by Romanists and Reformed; and by all of them, as it were, with one voice, condemned and exploded. One shall scarce meet with so clear and so universal an agreement for the reception of any article, as there appears to have been for the non-reception of this, among persons every way well qualified to judge of it, and fitly disposed for judging right, and having all the light before them which any one can now have, or which ever could be necessary for determining the point, to the entire satisfaction of the common reason of mankind. Besides those whom I have mentioned, (to which many more of like kind might be added,) as expressly rejecting all demonstration a priori in respect of the Divine existence, great numbers might be further mentioned, who tacitly disregarded it, and made no use of it in proving the existence when occasion offered: and they also may be justly looked upon, for the most part, as witnesses against it, since they could not well be totally ignorant of it, nor unwilling to take it in and make the best of it, were it really of any force. For what man of discernment would not prefer an ostensive demonstration, where it can be had, before any other of a less perfect kind? Or who would not choose an argument a priori to come at his conclusion by, rather than be content to work his way by effects only, which, in comparison, is feeling in the dark? Yet such is the method that the ablest and wisest men have taken, aiming no higher: Bishop Ward for instance, in his treatise of the existence and attributes, and Bishop Wilkins in his, and Bishop Pearson on the same subject, and Dr. Barrow, and Mr. Locke, and Mr. Wollaston; besides a great many more: men that could not have failed to take in the argument a priori, had they not been persuaded that there was no soundness, no solidity in it.

<sup>h</sup> See Ditton on the Resurrection of Christ, p. 135.

<sup>i</sup> See Ditton on the Resurrection of Christ, p. 134.

If now it should be asked, of what use or service this Historical View can be, in a point of pure reasoning, and not depending at all upon authorities; I answer, that it may be serviceable for several good ends and purposes.

1. As it is not merely historical, but in part argumentative also; as discovering the reasons upon which wise men before us have proceeded in forming their judgment upon the question in hand: and possibly those reasons may meet with the more favourable attention and reception, on account of the hands they come from. For demonstration itself must often be content to borrow all its relative force from the instrument of conveyance.

2. It is of use in all questions which have before passed through many hands, and have been often and carefully considered, to look back to what others have thought and determined upon them. For it may reasonably be presumed, in such cases, that the point has been carried to as great perfection as it is capable of, since the extent of human reason, in all ages where the light is equal, is very nearly the same. Besides, it seldom happens, that a single person, who takes upon him to go on proprio Marte, without consulting others, will be able at once to view the argument on all sides, or to be aware of every difficulty which may occur in it. Plus vident oculi quam oculus: In a multitude of counsellors there is safety. I am aware that sometimes attending too much to others may forestall a man's own better judgment, or cramp a good invention. But then, on the other hand, the following one's own thoughts too much, disregarding what others have said or written, is often a means to make a man self-conceited and superficial. The way therefore to avoid both extremes is, to try first how far we can go with our own unassisted inquiries, upon any question of pure abstract reasoning; and afterwards to compare what we have done, with what others have done in the same kind before us.

3. To such as choose to be led by authority and great names, in points of an abstruse nature, (which they have neither inclination nor leisure to inquire closely into,) it is of use to know on what side the authority and the great names really are, ancient and modern. And it may reasonably be presumed, that truth is with them; unless some fair account can be given, how it came to pass that so many wise and great men, so well prepared to make a true judgment, and so fitly disposed for it, should notwithstanding widely mistake in it.

However, I mention not these things as if any authority ought to prevail over clear and cogent reason, or as if the question now in hand wanted any authority at all to decide or determine it. The same reasons which obtained formerly are of equal force now, and are never the worse for the wearing, as time can never alter eternal truths. I proceed therefore to examine this question over again, (as if it had never been debated or considered before,) and to see how it will now stand at the bar of sober and impartial reason.

CHAP. II.

Considering the Merits of the Debate about the Argument a priori.

HERE it will be proper to shew, but as briefly as may be, 1. That the supposed argument a priori is very loose and precarious, having nothing in a manner to stand upon, except it be an ill use made of equivocal terms or phrases. 2. That it is, moreover, when fully understood, palpably wrong and absurd. 3. That the several pleas or excuses invented for it, are fallacious, and of no real weight.

1. I would observe, that the supposed argument a priori is at the best very loose and precarious, having nothing to stand upon, but an abuse of equivocal terms or phrases. The whole seems to amount to little more than the ringing of changes upon the word necessity; as shall be seen presently. But because that word is capable of many senses, and consequently apt to usher in many fallacies; it will be proper here to note the various acceptations of that instrument of delusion.

Necessity is but of modern date (comparatively speaking) in our language. It comes from the Latin necessitas; which, though otherwise ancient enough, yet seems to have been brought but late into our present subject<sup>1</sup>. I know not what good the Schools did by introducing it, or by substituting the improper and ambiguous phrases of necessary existence, or necessity of existence, instead of the more ancient and more proper expressions; such as natural existence, or emphatical existence; or such as eternal, immutable, unmade, independent, permanent, and the like. The new word necessity, as here applied, and as opposed to precarious or contingent, affords no new idea beyond the other, but is apt to excite false conceptions, and to promote false reasoning. But since the mischief is already done, as to the introducing this improper Pagan term into Christian theology, and it is now too late to undo it; the only way left to provide against the misapprehensions arising from it, is to distinguish, as carefully as we can, the several senses which have been commonly affixed to the words necessary or necessity. The most comprehensive division of necessity is into four kinds; logical, moral, physical, and metaphysical. Let us take those kinds singly in their order, and minutely examine what they mean.

(1.) Logical necessity is, where it is an express contradiction to say the contrary<sup>k</sup>. Which resolves into this, that the same idea, under different terms, or expressions, is still the same idea, and necessarily agrees with itself. Thus there is a necessity that man should be rational, as rationality is implied in the general idea of man. Not that there is any physical necessity that this or that man should be so, (for he may cease to be rational, or to exist at all,) but there is a logical necessity, that the definition should agree to the thing defined, and that the idea expressed by the word man should be what it is, while supposed to be so. This kind of necessity is otherwise called necessity of predication; importing an ideal and undeniable connection between subject and predicate<sup>1</sup>. As if man is said to be rational, or to be an animal. To the head of logical necessity is to be referred what the Schools call necessitas consequentis, and likewise necessitas consequentiæ, expressing the indissoluble connection between premises and conclusion<sup>m</sup>; that is, again, between one idea and another, or between proposition and proposition, or one part of a proposition and another part. In short, logical necessity is nothing else but a name for the supposed inviolable connection between idea and idea, or between proposition and proposition, or between subject and predicate.

<sup>1</sup> See above, p. 326, 327, 328.

<sup>k</sup> Necessarium logicum est, cum ex terminis repugnat non esse. Sic necessarium est, hominem esse rationalem. Chauvin. p. 435.

(2.) Moral necessity imports a connection, but not so constant and invariable, between end and means<sup>n</sup>. As when we say, there is a necessity of temperance to preserve health; or if it be said, that man is under a moral necessity of doing his duty, as it is a means to happiness, his chief end. It is called moral, in opposition to physical, which comes next to be mentioned. If any man is violently forced or compelled to any thing, he is then under a physical necessity, and so far ceases to be a moral agent.

(3.) Physical necessity imports an inviolable connection between natural causes and effects<sup>o</sup>. This is often called absolute necessity, in opposition to moral, which is not absolute, but conditional, or hypothetical, or liable to some exceptions or limitations. It is called causal necessity, when intended to express what influence the cause will have in producing the effect: as there is a causal necessity for the appearing of light when the sun is risen. An antecedent necessity, or a necessity a priori, denotes the same thing. But a necessity a posteriori is a name intended to express what reference the effect has to some cause or causes: as

<sup>1</sup> Necessarium in prædicando dicitur, quando datur necessitas enuntiationis, seu in enuntiatione. Pendet a connectione necessaria prædicati cum subjecto; id est, ex insolubili harum partium nexu, adeo ut prædicatum non possit negari de subjecto: ut cum dicitur, Homo est animal. Chauvin. p. 435.

<sup>m</sup> See Chauvin. ibid.

<sup>n</sup> Necessarium morale est id sine quo, quamvis absolute fieri possit effectus, nunquam tamen, vel raro fit. Chauvin. ibid.

<sup>o</sup> Necessarium physicum est, quod ex causis naturalibus tale est: ut necessaria est eclipsis solaris ex interpositione lunæ. Chauv. ibid.

if there are things made, there is a necessity of a maker. There cannot be motion without a mover; nor external light without a luminous substance.

(4.) The fourth kind of necessity is metaphysical, and imports immutable existence proper to God only<sup>p</sup>. It is opposed to mutable, precarious, contingent, dependent existence. It is the same with what Dr. Cudworth somewhere calls a necessary schesis to existence, expressing the inseparable connection between the existence and the subject of it, between existence and essence. Creatures are considered as coming from non-existence, and as being liable to lose the existence which they enjoy; therefore their existence is precarious and perishable. But the Deity never wanted existence, never can cease to exist; therefore his existence is immutable, unperishable, firm, stable, and enduring, (independently) from everlasting to everlasting. This permanency of being is considered as a mode of existence, presupposing existence, as modal being always supposes pure being<sup>q</sup>. It may be called modal necessity, as expressing that perfect manner of existence proper to the Deity: God's manner of existing is above all chance, change, or failure. This modal necessity, or self-sufficiency, ought to be carefully distinguished from causal before mentioned, metaphysical from physical. Causal necessity is antecedent, effective, operative; modal is posterior and subsequent, in order of nature and conception, to the existence or existing subject, whereof it is the mode, and to which it is referred up as to its source or centre, its substratum or support.

Having thus competently explained the several kinds of necessity, I have one thing to observe of them, that the idea of some sort of firm connection runs through them all; and that is the proper general import of the name necessity. Connection of mentionem mutabilitatis, idque ad oppositionem contingentiæ. Chauvin. p. 434.

<sup>p</sup> Necessarium metaphysicum est quod immutabiliter existit: ut Deus. Chauvin. ibid. p. 435.

<sup>q</sup> Necessarium dicitur illud quod non potest non esse, aut aliter se habere. Quocunque autem modo definitur vel describitur, duo importat. Quia, quod non potest non esse dicitur esse; et præterea negat desitionem in esse. Quod vero dicitur rem sese aliter habere non posse, rem præsupponit esse, eamque existere ait cum modo immutabilitatis. Adeo ut necessarium formaliter debeat explicari per remo-

Necessitas accipitur pro vehementia essendi illius quod per se et primo est necessesse esse, quod est Deus, et sic proprie definiri non potest. Describitur tamen et notificatur utcumque, et hoc melius per affirmationem quam negationem; scilicet per vehementiam et firmitatem essendi, quam per impossibilitatem seu non-possibilitatem non essendi. Bradwardin. de Causa Dei, p. 678.

tal or verbal propositions, or of their respective parts, makes up the idea of logical necessity. Connection of end and means makes up the idea of moral necessity. Connection of causes and effects is physical. And connection of existence and essence is metaphysical necessity. This last is what our present argument is solely concerned in. It has been sometimes styled simple or absolute necessity, as opposed to relative. For though physical necessity may also be called absolute, as opposed to limited or conditional, (as before hinted,) it is not absolute as opposed to relative; because it stands in the relation between causes and effects. But metaphysical necessity has no relation to any thing extraneous to the subject of it; it subsists only in the Divine essence, considered as inseparably connected with its own existence. This is that pure, simple, absolute, transcendental necessity, which the later schoolmen and metaphysicians speak of.

These things premised, I may now proceed to inquire what the argument a priori (as it is called) has to stand upon, or how it is supported. The way of coming at it is first to prove a posteriori the existence of an independent Being, thus: Something now is, therefore something has existed from all eternity; therefore some one unchangeable and independent Being, one at least; therefore there is some one self-existent or necessarily existing Being<sup>r</sup>. Thus far is right and well, for the coming at necessary existence in the way of arguing a posteriori. Call it necessity of existence, and then that necessity imports a mode of the existence before proved, subsequent, in order of nature and conception, to the existence, and referred up to the subject of it. This modal necessity is a property of the independent Being, denoting his immutable permanency, his infinite stability. But it happens, that the word necessity often stands for causal and physical necessity, (very different from modal and metaphysical,) and so here begins the first double. The subsequent necessity is soon after dropped, and antecedent necessity is slipped upon us in its room. Under the cover of an ambiguous name, the idea which we began with is first changed for another, altogether new and foreign, and then enters the argument a priori with all its train. There is now conceived I know not what antecedent necessity, and internal cause, and prior reason, ground, and foundation of the independent Being; and all built upon nothing but the equivocation of a word, or a quick transition made from necessity, considered in the modal and proper sense, to necessity taken in a causal and foreign meaning. This "necessity," it is said, must be "antecedent, in the natural order of our ideas, to our supposition of its being<sup>s</sup>." Why must it be antecedent? No necessity had been proved before, but what was conceived subsequent (in the natural order of our ideas) to the existence of the independent Being, being a mode of it, and referred up to it: why then must it be antecedent? There is no reason at all for it; unless it be that an argument a priori required such an antecedency, and would drop without it. The supposed antecedency in this case appears to be all fancy and fiction, not collected from what went before, by any regular deduction, but arbitrarily fetched in, under the umbrage and protection of an equivocal name. Put but immutability of existence, or independence, or durability, instead of necessity of existence, (which really signifies no more than the other,) and then it will be presently seen how the notion of antecedency drops and disappears: which makes it plain, that the notion is here false and foreign, not deducible from any regular train of ideas, but brought in, at all adventures, only because the technical term necessity admits of two senses, and is a serviceable word for the sinking one idea and bringing up another.

<sup>r</sup> See Dr. Clarke's Demonstration, &c. prop. 1, 2, 3.

But to favour this new notion of antecedency, (so arbitrarily introduced,) it is added, "This necessity must antecedently force "itself upon us whether we will or no, even while we are endeavouring to suppose that no such being exists. For example; when we are endeavouring to suppose, that there is no being in the universe that exists necessarily, we always find "in our minds, (besides the foregoing demonstration of some thing being self-existent, from the impossibility of every thing's "being dependent,) we always find in our minds, I say, some "ideas, as of infinity and eternity; which to remove, that is, to "suppose no being, no substance in the universe, to which these "attributes, or modes of existence, are necessarily inherent, is a "contradiction in the very terms. For modes and attributes "exist only by the existence of the substance to which they "belong<sup>t</sup>."

In answer to this paragraph, I may observe briefly, 1. That there is no arguing from ideal to real existence; unless it could first be shewn, that such ideas must have their objective realities, and cannot be accounted for, as they pass within, except it be by supposing such and such real existence, ad extra, to answer them.

<sup>s</sup> Clarke, ibid. p. 14. sixth edition.

<sup>t</sup> Clarke, ibid. p. 15.

2. Allowing that we find such ideas in our minds, and that they antecedently force themselves upon us, this proves no more than a kind of order of antecedency in our conceptions, but does not prove any real antecedency with respect to the Divine existence, as if that were preceded by something prior in order of nature to it.

3. Whatever necessity we may find ourselves under as to conceiving or imagining thus or thus; yet we are under no antecedent necessity of believing that these conceptions or imaginings do infer the existence of a Deity, till it be regularly proved to us, or till it can be clearly shewn what certain connection there is between ideas and realities, between thoughts and things. 4. If such certain connection could be proved, yet such proof would not amount to a demonstration a priori, being that the process of such an argument is altogether a posteriori, from effects to causes, from things posterior to something antecedent. For the process runs thus: we have such and such ideas, which ideas must have objective realities as their cause or ground; and those objective realities, or real attributes, must have their subject, as all modes and attributes have: and thus at length by this analysis, or in the way of ascent, we come up to a first Cause, which is antecedent, in order of nature, to every mode and attribute supposed to inhere in it, and to belong to it. So that, even in this way, we can never arrive to any thing which can be justly conceived prior or antecedent, in order of nature, to the existence of a first Cause. It appears then, that antecedent necessity is very arbitrarily introduced into this subject, having no regular chain of reasoning, no proper connection of ideas, nor indeed any thing, but an equivocation upon the word necessity, to support or countenance it.

I would next take notice, that the use made afterwards of this antecedent necessity is altogether as arbitrary and fanciful as the introducing it. The uses it is made to serve are, to prove the eternity<sup>v</sup>, omnipresence<sup>w</sup>, and unity<sup>x</sup> of the self-existent Being. And here it is observable, that necessity is furnished with epithets (all in the arbitrary way) just as the occasion requires; epithets suitable to the points to be proved. When it is to prove the eternity, then it is to be styled "absolute, not depending " on any thing external, always unalterably the same<sup>y</sup>." When it is to prove the infinity, or the omnipresence, then it is characterized as being again absolute in itself, and "not depending " on any outward cause;" and now it must be every where, as well as always, unalterably the same; having no relation to time, or place, or any thing else<sup>z</sup>. But when it is to serve for proof of the unity, then it is to be simple, and uniform, and universal, without any possible difference, diformity, or variety whatsoever<sup>a</sup>. That is to say, it shall be what the demonstrator pleases to make it, that he may adapt it variously to the various purposes he intended by it. The neater and shorter way would have been, to have denominated it at once an absolute, omnimodous, all-perfect necessity; and then not only eternity, and omnipresence, and unity, but infinite wisdom, power, and goodness, and every perfection whatever might have been instantly inferred from it. For it might have been pleaded, that such necessity had no relation to one perfection more than to another, being uniform and universal, extending equally to all, and operating<sup>b</sup> as much with respect to every perfection, as to any, having nothing to limit it, nothing to control it. This reasoning appears equally clear and forcible with the other: and both are alike weak and precarious, having no solid foundation of reason to rest upon; nothing but an obscure unintelligible principle, floating in the mind, and managed at pleasure, to make some appearance of demonstration in a way wherein none can be had, or to cover a petitio principii, which yet betrays itself immediately in every instance.

<sup>v</sup> Demonstrat. p. 39.

<sup>w</sup> Ibid. p. 41.

<sup>x</sup> Ibid. p. 44.

I have hitherto been observing, that the pretended antecedent necessity is arbitrarily introduced, and then as arbitrarily carried on: and now I am only to remark further, that it is, at length, as arbitrarily dismissed. For indeed there is as much reason for going on with it in infinitum, as for taking it in at all: and there is no more reason for stopping at one fresh antecedent necessity, than for stopping at five hundred; nor any more reason for stopping there, than for going on infinitely. If every thing that exists, and every circumstance of it, must have a reason a priori, why it is, rather than not<sup>c</sup>, (a supposition which the argument a priori is built upon,) then the antecedent necessity

<sup>y</sup> Demonstrat. p. 39.

<sup>z</sup> Ibid. p. 41.

<sup>a</sup> Ibid. p. 44.

<sup>b</sup> See Letters, p. 19, 34.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 33.

itself must have a reason a priori to fix and determine it, and that another, and so on infinitely. Wherefore if we admit but one antecedent necessity as prior, in order of nature, to the first Cause, there is no reason at all for stopping at the first remove, or for dismissing the notion of an antecedent necessity so soon, or at all. The same thought, the same suggestion, will come over again at every new advance higher in the series of antecedent necessities: for every one of them will want a new ground, a new internal cause, a new antecedent necessity, to determine its being; and all for the same reason as the first Cause was supposed to want one. Therefore, I say, it is perfectly arbitrary and unaccountable, to make a full pause at one single antecedent necessity, and not to continue and carry on necessities higher and higher, without number and without end. Thus much may suffice for exposing the precarious and fanciful nature of the pretended proof a priori.

2. But I proceed further to observe, that it is not only precarious, but manifestly absurd. It is demonstrable a priori, that there neither is nor can be any proof a priori of the existence of a first Cause, because there is no cause prior to the first<sup>d</sup>. But, to be a little more distinct and particular, imagine something prior or antecedent, in order of nature or conception, to the first Cause, what must that something be? There are but three possible suppositions, and all of them flatly contradictory and absurd. Suppose either the substance itself, or some property of that substance, or something extrinsic to both, to be that antecedent ground, reason, or foundation, prior in conception to the first Cause: they are every one of them uncapable and incompetent for it.

(1.) To begin with the last of them, a principle extrinsic. One would think by the turn of the argument, in several passages where it is handled, that the antecedent necessity were considered as something extrinsic to the first Cause: particularly where it is represented as operating<sup>e</sup> every where, and always, so as to make the divine Being eternal and omnipresent, or the like. And indeed if the words carry any idea at all in them, and any force

<sup>d</sup> Hæc propositio Deus est, non habet medium terminum quo a priore demonstratur.—Non potest dari medium desumptum a causa extrinseca, nam Deus est, a seipso, independens omnino ab alia re: non potest etiam sumi medium a causa materiali intrin-

seca, nam hoc non cadit in Deum: non a formali, nam in Deitate non est ulla ratio formalis prior ipso esse divino, quæ nostro modo intelligendi sit ratio cur Deus sit. Gillius, p. 386.

<sup>e</sup> Letters, p. 19, 34.

of argument, they must be so understood; just as we understand them of any external cause producing its effect. But, as an extrinsic principle is absurd in itself, and is besides expressly rejected<sup>f</sup> by the advocates for the proof a priori, I need not here say a word more of it.

(2.) Take we then next the substance itself, and consider whether that can be conceived as prior or antecedent to itself. It is very plain that it cannot: and so much also is confessed on all hands<sup>g</sup>, and therefore we may dismiss this article, and proceed.

(3.) The only remaining supposition is, that some attribute or property of the self-existent Being may be conceived antecedent, in order of nature, to the same Being. But that is, if possible, still more absurd than the last preceding. An attribute is attributed to its subject as its ground and support; and a property, in the very notion of it, is proper to the substance whereunto it belongs, and subsequent in order of nature and conception to it. An antecedent attribute, or property, is as great a solecism, and almost as flat a contradiction, as an antecedent subsequentity, or a subsequent antecedency, understood in the same sense, and same respect. Every property, or attribute, as such, presupposes its subject, and cannot be understood otherwise. To make the property antecedent is inverting the natural order, and confounding the idea; and, in short, is denying it to be what it is. The truth of what is here said is so glaring and forcible, that it sometimes extorts the assent even of those who upon other occasions affect to gainsay it. It is confessed, that “the scholastic way “ of proving the existence of the self-existent Being from the “ absolute perfection of his nature, is ὑστερον πρότερον for, [N.B.] “ all or any perfections presuppose existence; which is petitio “ principii<sup>h</sup>.” If therefore properties, modes, or attributes in God, be considered as perfections, (and it is certain they must,) then by this account they must all or any of them presuppose existence. Indeed, it is immediately added, in the same place, “ that bare necessity of existence does not presuppose, but infer, “ existence.” That is to say, if such necessity be supposed to be a principle extrinsic: but if it be a mode or a property, it must presuppose the existence of its subject, as certainly and as evidently as it is a mode or a property. It might perhaps a posteriori infer the existence of its subject, as effects may infer a cause: but to infer in the other way a priori, is altogether as impossible as that a triangle should be a square; which is joining repugnant ideas together.

<sup>f</sup> Letters, p. 32.

<sup>g</sup> Letters, p. 33, 40. Demonstration, &c. p. 21.

<sup>h</sup> Letters, p. 33.

In another place, it is observed by the same learned author “that the idea of space (as also of time or duration) is an idea “of a certain quality or relation, which not being itself a substance, [N.B.] necessarily presupposes a substance, without “which it could not exist<sup>1</sup>.” Now if the necessity spoken of be a property or mode, and not a substance, it must, for the very same reason, necessarily presuppose a substance without which it could not exist. So true it is, that a mode, or property, cannot be conceived antecedent in order of nature to its subject, without running into a flat absurdity, and the greatest confusion of ideas imaginable.

The sum then is, that, to make out an argument a priori, there must be a cause, or however a priority or antecedency, brought in to argue upon, and to draw an inference from, to the existence of a Deity: and yet no sooner is the idea of cause, or priority, or antecedency (though in conception only) introduced, but we immediately subvert the idea of a property, and of a first Cause. It is a vain thing to insist one while upon the antecedency, for the sake of the pretended demonstration, and then presently to drop it, by retreating to the idea of a property, for the sake of warding off insuperable objections. Either there is no antecedency in this case at all, to form the argument upon; or, if there be, the antecedent principle is no property, but a principle extrinsic. So then either the antecedency must drop, and the argument a priori drop with it: or if the antecedency be kept up, the idea of a property is destroyed instantly, and we are yet to seek for a first Cause. Turn we the thing which way we will, the presumed argument a priori is all over contradictory and absurd. It is not merely abstruse or unintelligible, but plainly and clearly repugnant to reason, and to itself. It is tacking together disjointed and incompatible ideas, which can never stand together, but must inevitably clash and destroy one another. However, as there is no cause whatever so defenceless and destitute, but that something or other may be pleaded for it, and a skilful advocate may lay colours upon any thing: so it is here. A very ingenious defence has been drawn up for the argument a priori, in which we have the spirit and quintessence of what the cause can afford<sup>k</sup>. A just reply was made to it some time after<sup>l</sup>, by a very good hand, which might save me the labour of saying any thing more to it : but perhaps it may be of service to have the same things represented in different lights ; or if it be only abridging what has been said before more at large, even that perhaps may not be altogether without its use. I proceed then,

<sup>1</sup> Letters, p. 25.

3. To examine the several pleas or excuses invented for the support of the argument a priori, in order to shew that they are none of them sufficient for the purposes intended. I shall break the discourse into so many distinct parts, or pleas, for the distinct and methodical conception of the subject.

PLEA I.

“ Though it is indeed most evident, that no thing, no being can “ be prior to that Being which is the first Cause and original of “ all things ; yet there must be in nature a ground or reason, a “ permanent ground or reason, of the existence of the first “ Cause : otherwise its existence would be owing to, and depend “ upon, mere chance<sup>m</sup>.” To which I answer,

(1.) If by ground or reason be meant a cause, the idea of it is repugnant to the notion of a first Cause, which must be absolutely uncaused, both with respect to itself and to every thing else. But if by ground or reason be meant only a ground or reason for asserting such existence, that we may readily admit, as meaning only that there is a reason a posteriori whereby we prove the truth of the thing that so it is. Reason and ground are softer names in this case than cause is, and may sometimes serve to hide the absurdity which appears at once upon the naming of a cause prior to the first. It may, or rather must be allowed, that there is a reason for every existence, a reason of one kind or other, either a priori or else a posteriori : but it is nevertheless certain, that there is not a reason a priori for every thing, because there must be a first in the ascending line ; as also, on the other hand, there is not a reason a posteriori for every thing, because there must be a last in the order of descent<sup>n</sup>.

<sup>k</sup> Answer to the Seventh Letter, p. 40, &c.

<sup>l</sup> Dr. Gretton's Review of the Argument a priori. Printed for B. Lintot, A. D. 1726. See also Concio ad Clerum, upon the same subject, and by the same author. Cantabrigiæ, 1732.

<sup>m</sup> Answer to the Seventh Letter, p. 40.

<sup>n</sup> Observa, multas veritates posse a priori et posteriori simul demonstrari : ut v. g. esse admirativum, demonstratur a priori per rationale, a posteriori vero per risibile. Alias vero esse veritates quæ tantum vel a priori,

(2.) Though the uncaused Being has neither ground nor cause to determine its existence, yet it is not owing to, or dependent upon, mere chance, because it is not owing or dependent at all, but entirely underived and independent. If the force of the objection lies in this, that unless the existence be dependent on something, it cannot be firm and stable; this amounts to saying, that a first cause, or an independent existence, is a contradictory notion in itself. It is certain, that if the existence be dependent on any thing, it is not the firmer, but may be the more precarious for being so. The highest possible stability is to be absolutely independent, absolutely uncaused: this is the strongest security against all possible chances or failures: and therefore it never can be allowed, that assigning it a cause, a ground, or foundation, is fixing the existence; when the supposing it to have no cause, no ground, &c. nor to need any, is really the top perfection of being, the very highest and best thing that we can either say or conceive of it.

(3.) But supposing that there might yet remain some difficulty in our scheme, (as difficulties there must be in conceiving eternity, and in searching the mysterious nature and existence of the unsearchable Being,) yet if the difficulty be rather shifted than taken away, by the expedient here proposed, or if absurdities be brought in instead of difficulties, how then are we at all relieved by it, or the better for it? That such is the case here, is plain at first sight. For what if we go on to assign a cause, a ground, or a foundation for the first Cause, it is but going one step further, and there the same difficulty occurs as before, besides several new ones. That cause, that ground, that foundation, that antecedent necessity (or whatever else we call it) will still want another cause, another ground, another foundation, another antecedent necessity to fix and support it; or else, by the same reasoning, its existence will be owing to, and dependent upon, mere chance<sup>o</sup>. If we still go higher up, to a second or a third remove, or to as many more as we can think on, the same difficulty will haunt us all the way in the wandering progress, vel a posteriori demonstrari possunt: quia cum necessario sistendum sit in aliquo primo conceptu, ante quem non sit alius, inde fit, illum non posse demonstrari a priori, quia nullam habet causam sui: e contrario vero etiam sistendum sit in aliquo ultimo, post quem non sit alius, inde rursus sequitur, illum non posse demonstrari a posteriori, quia (ut supponimus) nihil habet posterius se. Roderic. de Arriag. Curs. Philos. p. 222.

<sup>o</sup> See Dr. Gretton's Review, p. 15.

and we shall never find rest for the sole of our foot, till we return to the place where we first stepped aside, till we come back to the first Cause of all things, and there terminate our inquiries. They that attempt to move but one step higher, are sure to involve themselves in inextricable mazes, and are doubly to blame: first, for inventing a cause prior to the first, or a reason higher than the highest; and next, for making that newly-invented support (according to their own argument) owe its existence to mere chance. Let the discerning readers therefore judge upon the whole, who it is that makes the Divine existence contingent and precarious, they or we.

PLEA II.

“The existence of the first Cause is necessary, necessary absolutely and in itself; and therefore that necessity is a priori, “and, in order of nature, the ground or reason of its existence<sup>p</sup>.” To which I reply,

(1.) It is allowed that the existence of the first Cause is necessary, not contingent: and because that necessity is only a mode of the presupposed existence, therefore it is not a priori, or, in order of nature, an antecedent ground or reason, but it is subsequent and posterior, in order of nature and conception, to that whereof it is the mode: for all modes, as such, are subsequent to their subject, which is the ground and support of them.

(2.) Necessity absolute (in the metaphysical sense, as here used,) is a contradiction to the notion of antecedent ground, or cause, having no relation<sup>q</sup> to any thing of that kind. It imports an inviolable connection between the essence and the existence in a being uncaused and independent. To make connection the ground and reason of the existence, either means that the essence is the ground of itself, or means nothing, amounting only to so many words of amusement.

PLEA III.

“That which exists necessarily (or in the idea of which existence and necessity are inseparably and necessarily connected) “must either therefore be necessary because it exists, or else it “must therefore exist, because its existence is necessary.” I answer,

(1.) It is improper to say, that existence and necessity are

<sup>p</sup> Answer to Seventh Letter, p. 41.

<sup>r</sup> Answer to Seventh Letter, pag.

<sup>q</sup> See above, p. 354, 355.

41.

connected: for since necessity, as here applied, imports nothing but connection, it amounts to saying, that existence and connection are so connected; whereas, in truth and propriety, the existence and the essence are what are here supposed to be connected. But all the confusion arises from want of distinguishing between causal and modal, between physical and metaphysical necessity.

(2.) We do not say, that the first Cause is therefore necessary because it exists, (for then every thing existing would be necessary;) but rather, because it exists in such a manner, exists independently. Not that independency is properly the cause of necessary existence, or vice versa, (for both are but names or expressions for one and the same property or perfection,) but all resolves into this, that God is what he is, and such as we prove him, a posteriori, to be. We can go no higher than to say, that his nature is such, that he exists independently, immutably, necessarily, as opposed to contingency. It is wrong to ask for a wherefore in this case: it is supposing no first Cause at all. The plea sets out upon a false principle, that a therefore must be given in every instance assignable, or a reason a priori admitted. We have done with reasons a priori, as soon as we are arrived to the top of all existence. For as in abstract necessary truths, the highest pitch we can come up to is, that the same idea is the same idea, or every idea is what it is; so in our running up to the top of real existence, (as opposed to ideal), the highest pinnacle of all is, that the same being is the same being, or is what it is. Such then is the nature or perfection of the Deity, that he exists independently. To assign a cause for that existence, is to make it less; it is to suppose it dependent on something else: it is destroying with one hand what we build with the other. We pretend not therefore to give a reason a priori why God exists necessarily, (for if such reason could be given, it would sink the idea of necessary instead of raising it,) but we assign reasons a posteriori why we believe and maintain it; which is giving the  $\tau\acute{o}\ \delta\epsilon\iota$ , not the  $\tau\acute{o}\ \delta\iota\acute{o}\tau\iota$ , and is all that can be or ought to be given in this case, as is self-evident.

(3.) But suppose we should attempt to go higher up beyond the first Cause, to something conceived prior or antecedent to it, will not the same difficulty recur in every stage of the progression? The same dilemma is applicable to the next higher cause, and to every other, in infinitum. For it may still be pleaded, that such antecedent ground must either be necessary because it exists, or else must therefore exist because its existence is necessary; and so the mind is again set afloat, without stay or anchor, in an endless pursuit after more and more antecedent absolute necessities.

PLEA IV.

“ The eternity of God can no otherwise be proved, than by “ considering a priori the nature of a necessary or self-existent “ Cause.—That the first Cause has existed from eternity, and “ shall exist to eternity, cannot be proved from the temporary “ phenomena, but must be demonstrated from the intrinsic nature “ of necessary existence.” I answer,

(1.) The question here is not, by what other ways the eternity can be proved, but whether it can be proved in this. Be the other proofs, which proceed a posteriori, ever so lame or insufficient, their defects will be of no service for the healing the absurdities of this: so the plea is foreign, and wide of the purpose; unless the design were to plead for the usefulness of a proof, which cannot be shewn to be a proof.

(2.) The suggestion here offered is not true, especially as to God’s existing from eternity. The natural, regular, and indeed the common way, has been to prove the eternity before the necessary existence; and that is the very way which the author himself took to come at necessary existence<sup>s</sup>: and no one has better answered this plea than himself hath done in another place<sup>t</sup>.

(3.) If any one were first to prove the existence and an attribute or two more, and then proceed to demonstrate the eternity from the existence, &c. before proved, such a method of arguing

<sup>s</sup> Demonstration, prop. ii. p. 11.

<sup>t</sup> “ Not to philosophers only, but “ even to the meanest capacities, are “ there obvious arguments in reason, “ to prove clearly the necessity of this “ Divine perfection, [eternity,] and to “ set it before them in a practical and “ useful light. For since it is in some “ degree a perfection to be; and a “ greater degree of that perfection to “ continue in being; it is evident, when “ we conceive of God the most perfect “ Being, we must conceive him to be “ infinite in this perfection also, as “ well as in others.

“ Again: it is evident even to the “ meanest capacity, which considers “ things at all; that he who first gave “ being to all other things, could not “ possibly have any beginning him- “ self, and must therefore necessarily “ have existed from all eternity: and “ that he who hath already existed “ from all eternity, independently, “ and of himself, cannot possibly be “ liable to be deprived of his being, “ and must therefore necessarily exist “ for an eternity to come.” Clarke’s “ Posthumous Sermons, vol. i. p. 80.

a priori we should not except to, neither do we condemn it<sup>v</sup>. All that we object to is the imagining any ground, cause, or necessity, (or whatever it be called,) antecedent, in order of nature, to the existence. One attribute may perhaps rationally be considered as prior in conception to another, and existence as prior to all<sup>w</sup>: therefore the way of arguing a priori from existence and attributes before proved, to other attributes not yet proved, we may allow of as a rational and just procedure. We distinguish here between arguing a priori to attributes, and arguing in like manner to existence.

(4.) It is self-evident that nothing can be proved by a repugnant notion of antecedent necessity, conceived prior to the existence: and therefore eternity, both a parte ante and a parte post, must either be proved some other way, or not at all. That it may be proved in another way, and without the help of antecedent necessity, (proved, I say, a posteriori, yea, and perhaps a priori also,) is abundantly manifest from the many excellent treatises which have handled that point at large; and St. Paul himself has testified the same thing; namely, that the temporary phenomena are sufficient to make men clearly see the eternal power and Godhead of their Creator, and to render them inexcusable in their disbelief of it, or disregard to it<sup>x</sup>.

PLEA V.

“ If the first Cause exists absolutely without any ground or “ reason of existence, it might as possibly in times past, without “ any reason, have not existed; and may as possibly in times to “ come, without any reason, cease to exist. Can it be proved “ a posteriori, that the first Cause of all things will exist to-mor“ row? Or can it be proved any otherwise than by shewing that <sup>v</sup> The Schoolmen have often taken that method of proving the eternity, understanding it to be arguing a priori: and it seems that it may properly enough be so styled; though some would scruple to give it that name, because there is no real order among the attributes. (See Bp. Barlow on this head, Exercit. iv. p. 183, &c.) But if there may be an order of conception, it suffices: and that there may appear very plainly. See Richard. de Media Vill. who handles this question at large, lib. i. distinct. 2. quæst.

iv. p. 32. And Gillius, lib. ii. tr. 2. c. 9. p. 538.

<sup>w</sup> Vera superiora sunt, quæ in solo Deo consistunt; ut Deus est potens, sapiens, atque bonus. Horum autem hæc quidem sunt quodammodo posteriora naturaliter, hæc priora. Posterior enim est Deum velle, quam cognoscere; et cognoscere quam esse: esse enim naturaliter hæc præcedit, et universaliter omnia talia attributa. Bradwardin. in Causa Dei, lib. i. cap. 12. p. 201.

<sup>x</sup> Rom. i. 20.

“necessity is a certain ground of future, as well as of present existence?” I answer,

(1.) By asking, what must be the certain ground of that necessity's existing? Or how will it be proved that that prior necessity will exist to-morrow, unless it be by assigning another necessity, and so on infinitely?<sup>z</sup> This kind of reasoning, if it proves any thing, proves that there neither is nor can be a first Cause: and so it is choosing to admit a manifest absurdity, only to avoid an appearing difficulty.

(2.) To answer more directly, it is not possible in the nature of things to have any higher or stronger security as to the first Cause's existing to-morrow than this; that he never had any cause, ground, or support of his existence, never needed any, being independent and self-sufficient<sup>a</sup>, the prop and stay, the ground and foundation of all existences. If indeed he himself were to have any ground, foundation, or cause of his being, we might then have some handle for doubting whether his relation to that ground might continue, or how long it might subsist: but when he is above and beyond all grounds and causes, we have all the reason in the world to believe, that he is infinitely secure from change, is independently the same, “yesterday, to-day, and for ever.” It is very odd to think of ascertaining his existence by assigning him a prior cause, which is the only way to unsettle it, and to make it less certain than it is: but it is a great confirmation of the truth of our doctrine in this particular, that every argument formed against it is at length found to stand on its side, and to make for it.

PLEA VI.

“When atheistical writers affirm, that the material universe, and every existing substance in particular, was eternal, absolutely without any ground or reason of existence, can this assertion be confuted by him who shall himself affirm that God was eternal absolutely, without any ground or reason of existence<sup>b</sup>?”

<sup>y</sup> Answer to Seventh Letter, p. 42.

<sup>z</sup> See Dr. Gretton's Review, p. 74.

<sup>a</sup> Nam, quod est a se, et non ab alio, non habet principium durationis. Cum enim in seipso habet sufficiens principium existendi, et existat per essentiam, concipi nequit non-existens antequam existat; atque adeo non habet principium durationis. Prætera, id quod non est ab alio, non habet in suo esse admistam potentiam ad non esse; ac proinde non est vertibile in non esse, atque adeo est æternum. Gillius, p. 1032.

<sup>b</sup> Answer to a Seventh Letter, p. 43.

Ans. Yes, very easily, by shewing that what those men foolishly ascribe to the material universe (subject to innumerable changes and imperfections<sup>c</sup>) does and can belong only to some unchangeable, independent Being, whose existence we can demonstrate a posteriori. It is his privilege, and his only, to be above all ground or antecedent reason of existence, to be absolutely uncaused, being indeed the first Cause. But those atheistical writers, most certainly, never can be solidly confuted by one that shall assert a cause prior to the first: because it is, in effect, denying any first Cause at all, and maintaining an endless progression; which is what every Atheist would readily come into: not to mention how easy it were for them to play with antecedent necessity, (an arbitrary principle,) adapting the same to their own schemes<sup>d</sup>.

PLEA VII.

“The infinity, or immensity, or omnipresence of God can no otherwise be proved, than by considering a priori the nature of a necessary or self-existent Cause.—That this Author of nature is himself absolutely immense or infinite, cannot be proved from the finite phenomena, but must be demonstrated from the intrinsic nature of a necessary existence<sup>e</sup>.” To which I rejoin;

(1.) From antecedent necessity, or from any thing prior to a first Cause, (a notion self-contradictory and palpably absurd,) nothing at all can be proved. So then whatever becomes of other proofs for the immensity, it is certain and manifest, that nothing can be done with this, which is no proof at all.

(2.) As to necessary existence, soberly and justly understood in the modal sense, and as subsequent in order of nature to its subject, (amounting to the same with independent, immutable, or infinitely durable existence,) we have nothing to object against arguing from it, so far as it may carry us, or against calling it arguing a priori, as it is inferring one or more attributes from existence and some attribute or attributes before proved. This is quite another thing from the argument a priori contended for, and ought to be carefully distinguished from it: we find no fault with any one’s arguing from attribute to attribute; but what we blame is, the arguing from a supposed ground, founda- tion, or internal cause of existence, to either existence or attribute.

<sup>c</sup> See Wollaston, p. 76.

<sup>e</sup> Answer to the Seventh Letter,

<sup>d</sup> See Dr. Gretton, p. 21, 22, 23, &c. p. 43.

(3.) As to immensity, or omnipresence, if the finite phenomena are sufficient to prove that it extends to all real existence, it suffices: no one, after that, will scruple to admit as large an infinity as can be desired, though the proof be not drawn out in mood and figure. Mischief is often done by pretending to strict and rigorous demonstrations, where we have no occasion for them, and where the subject is too sublime to go far in, with clear and distinct ideas. Such attempts serve only to make that become matter of question, which before was unquestionable, while standing only on reasonable presumption or moral proof.

PLEA VIII.

“ If the first Cause exists, absolutely without any ground or reason of existence, it may as possibly be finite as infinite; it may as possibly be limited as immense†.” I answer,

This is repetition of the same argument a little diversified, and so has been sufficiently answered in the articles preceding. But I may briefly observe, that the supposed ground or reason is so far from securing us that the first Cause shall not be finite or limited, that it seems to endanger it the more, by making it dependent upon a ground, and subject to a prior causality. Besides, what shall secure that ground itself from being finite and limited? Must it be another ground, and then another, and so on infinitely? Such reasoning destroys itself. And how are we at all the wiser for being told, that the absolute necessity must be every where, or that it must operate every where alike<sup>h</sup>? If a petitio principii were allowable, it were better to say (and it is as easily said) that the independent first Cause must be every where, and in all places alike; for this is sense at least, if it does not amount to a proof: while the other is as much a petitio principii, (for who knows how or where such imaginary cause must operate?) and besides is talking either without ideas, or with contradictory ideas, as has been often shewn. To be short, our physical, moral, or scriptural proofs, of the omnipresence are clear enough, and full enough, to answer all intents and purposes, † Answer to the Seventh Letter, p. Dr. Gretton's Review, p. 80.

43.

<sup>h</sup> Letters, p. 13. Demonstrat. p. 41.

§ See the Plea strongly retorted in and to satisfy every reasonable mind<sup>l</sup>; as the author allows elsewhere<sup>k</sup>.

PLEA IX.

“ The unity of God, (which, I think, has always been allowed to be a principle of natural religion: otherwise St. Paul could not justly have blamed the heathen as inexcusable in that they did not retain God in their knowledge, &c.) the unity of God, I say, can no otherwise be demonstrated, than by considering a priori the nature of a necessary or self-existent Cause. — That this supreme Author and Governor of this nature, or of these phenomena, is the Supreme Author and Governor of universal nature, cannot be proved by us from our partial and imperfect knowledge of a few phenomena, in that small part of the universe which comes within the reach of our senses, but must be demonstrated from the intrinsic nature of necessary existence<sup>l</sup>.” To all which I reply distinctly, as follows :

(1.) It looks not well to make the unity a principle of natural religion, and at the same time to declare that there is no proof of it from natural reason, excepting only this pretended proof a priori; which, by the confession of its greatest advocates, is not capable of being understood but by a few and those very attentive minds, never to be made obvious to the generality of men<sup>m</sup>; which moreover, has been as universally rejected by the learned who have thought of it, as it has been totally unknown to the vulgar in all past ages; and which, lastly, is not only an inconclusive argument for the unity, or for any thing else, but demonstrably absurd. If natural religion affords no other argument of the unity but this now mentioned, it is evident that the unity is no principle of it.

<sup>l</sup> See Bp. Barlow, Exercitat. vi. p. 283, &c. Bp. Wilkins, Nat. Relig. p. 117, &c.

<sup>k</sup> “ It cannot but be evident, even to the meanest capacity, upon careful consideration, that he who made all things, as he could not but be before the things that he made, so it is not possible but he must be present also with the things that he made and governs. For things could not be made without the actual presence of the power that “ made them; nor can things ever be governed with any certainty, unless the wisdom that governs them be present with them. Whatever arguments therefore prove the being of God, and his unerring providence, must all be understood to prove equally likewise his actual omnipresence.” Clarke, Posth. Sermons, vol. i. Sermon 8. p. 173.

<sup>l</sup> Answer to a Seventh Letter, p. 44.

<sup>m</sup> Answer to a Sixth Letter, p. 32.

(2.) It looks still worse to plead St. Paul's authority in this case, who if he thought of the unity at all, in the texts cited or referred to, yet certainly had no view to this argument a priori, as rendering the heathen inexcusable. For how could they be inexcusable for not seeing what none but a few, and not without very attentive minds, can see, what can never be obvious to the generality, what the wisest and most thoughtful men have constantly rejected as absurd, and what plainly and inevitably is so? If St. Paul had any view at all to the proofs of the unity in that place, (which is questionable<sup>n</sup>,) it was to such only as may be drawn a posteriori, (from the few phenomena in our system, or from tradition,) which the plea rejects as no proofs<sup>o</sup>. Therefore St. Paul's authority is very improperly alleged to give shelter or countenance to the argument a priori.

(3.) Men may be very blamable for not admitting the unity, though it be supposed that they have only moral presumption or traditional proofs of it; because the greater probability ought to determine their judgment, and because it is unquestionable matter of duty, in dubious cases, to take the safer side. There was plain reason for receiving and worshipping one God, while there was no apparent reason at all for worshipping many, but rather the contrary. Therefore the heathen were blamable in admitting a plurality; and yet much more so for admitting such a plurality as they did; which St. Paul chiefly alludes to, condemning their creature worship<sup>p</sup> as altogether inexcusable.

(4.) A distinction should have been made, as in some former articles, between the different ways of arguing a priori. It is

<sup>n</sup> See Dr. Gretton, p. 84.

<sup>o</sup> But the learned author elsewhere allows them to be sufficient, and so in effect has obviated or answered this plea himself. His words are:

"The plain connection of one thing upon another, through the whole material universe, through all parts of the earth, and in the visible heavens; the disposition of the air, and sea, and winds; the motions of the sun, moon, and stars; and the useful vicissitudes of seasons, for the regular production of the various fruits of the earth; have always been sufficient to make it evidently appear, even to mean capacities. (had they not been perpetually prejudiced by wrong instruction,) that all things are under the direction of one power, under the dominion of one God, to whom the whole universe is uniformly subject. And in fact,—the wisest and best men, in all heathen nations, have ever seen, and in good measure maintained, this great truth.—But it is with greater clearness from all appearance of doubt, and with greater assurance of authority, confirming the dictate of reason, that the Scripture sets forth to us this first principle of religion." Clarke, Posth. Serm. vol. i. Serm. 2. p. 29, 30.

<sup>p</sup> Rom. i. 23, 24, 25. compare Gal. iv. 8.

not amiss to argue for the unity from the existence, and some one attribute or attributes (as omnipotence, immensity, independence, &c.) before proved; nor should we scruple the propriety of calling it an argument a priori: but as to any arguing from antecedent necessity, or from any ground, cause, or reason, considered as prior to the existence, (which is the way of arguing now contended for,) that is what we can never admit of. Such antecedent absolute necessity carries no more idea with it than antecedent absolute nonentity; unless it means a cause prior to the first, which is infinitely absurd.

(5.) Allowing that the natural proofs of the unity are probable only, not demonstrative, and that upon the foot of mere reason it is a tenet rather to be reckoned among the pia credibilia, than as a demonstrated truth; this is saying no more than what several very wise and good men have made no scruple to confess: and if such be really the case, we are the more obliged to Scripture for ascertaining to us that great truth, as well as for placing it in a clear and just light. Demonstrations (strictly so called) are very good things where they are to be had: but when we cannot come at them, strong probabilities may properly supply their place. It is certain, that the bulk of mankind are not fitted for metaphysical or mathematical demonstrations; nor was it ever intended that moral or theological matters should be governed by them. Blessed are they, who having neither had ocular nor other demonstration, but moral probabilities only, have yet believed. Such conduct is justly accounted rational in

<sup>9</sup> The learned John Gerhard, and John Vossius, cite Gabriel Biel to this purpose, adding their own reflections upon what Biel had said.

Sed Biel (I. Sant. dist. 2. qu. 10. art. 3.) statuit quod tantum unum esse Deum, sit creditum, et non-demonstratum ratione naturali nobis in via possibili. Id nos ita interpretamur; etiamsi ex naturæ libro rationes non contemnendæ pro unitate divinæ essentiæ asserenda erui possint, eas tamen ad fidei πληροφορίαν cordibus nostris ingenerandam, non satis efficaces esse. Ergo mens prius confirmanda est ex verbo Dei, et illustribus testimoniis in quibus se Deus generi humano patefecit: postea utiliter potest addi consideratio philosophicarum demonstrationum. Gerhard. Loc. Comm. tom. i. p. 106.

Dissentit Gabriel Biel, qui ante annos hosce 140 Tubingensi Gymnasio præfuit. Is censet probabiles magis rationes esse quam evidentes et certas.—Verum esto sane, ut solæ non sint ἀποδεικτικά: at magnum iis pondus addit traditio vetus; tum autem quod argumenta isthæc, si non prorsus ἀποδεικτικά, saltem usque adeo probabilia sint, ut τῆς πολυθείας patroni nihil ullius momenti adferre valeant, cur plusquam unum statuere Deum potius conveniat. Voss. De Idololatr. lib. i. cap. 2. p. 6.

Note: There were several other Schoolmen, besides Biel, who would not allow that the unity could be demonstrated: see them numbered up in Gillius, lib. ii. tract. 3. cap. 7. p. 575.

secular affairs of greatest moment ; and it ought to be so accounted in religious also. The adversaries may have a crafty design in requiring more than is necessary, and perhaps more than our faculties can reach to ; and it may often be exposing a good cause, and giving the common enemies a needless advantage, to enter the lists with them upon such unequal terms. But this I hint by the way only, and pass on.

PLEA X.

“ If the first Cause exists absolutely without any ground or “ reason of existence, it is altogether as possible, and as probable, “ and as reasonable to suppose, that there may, without any “ reason, exist numberless finite, independent, coexistent first “ Causes—in different parts of the immense universe, as that “ there should, without any reason, exist one only, infinite, im- “ mense, omnipresent first Cause, Author and Governor of the “ whole<sup>r</sup>.” To which it may be replied :

(1.) That this amounts to saying, that unless there be a cause prior to the first, (for a reason a priori means a cause,) there may as well be numberless first Causes as one : which is directly arguing, as usual, against the very name and notion of a first Cause. But though a first Cause may or must be allowed to be mysterious and incomprehensible, yet it should not be thus constantly treated as an impossible or contradictory idea. If there is any such thing as a first Cause, it must be uncaused, and can have no reason a priori for it. Therefore to what purpose is it to dispute how many first Causes there might be, when if this way of reasoning be just and conclusive, there could not be so much as one ?

(2.) The question about the number of first Causes can never be determined by taking in antecedent necessity ; because the same difficulty will always recur, toties quoties, about the number of antecedent necessities. For if every one of them, in the long progression, has not another to fix and determine it, there will still be the like danger of numberless antecedent necessities<sup>s</sup>, or reasons a priori, at every remove higher, in infinitum.

(3.) Scripture has very plainly and fully determined the question : and both tradition and reason are on the same side. For though there is not perhaps strict demonstration, yet there are fair probabilities, (as before hinted,) both in the moral and metaphysical way, well known to Divines: and there is no colour of reason for the contrary side. These are sufficient to build a rational belief upon: and with these we ought to rest content.

<sup>r</sup> Answer to Seventh Letter, p. 44, 45.    <sup>s</sup> See Gretton's Review, p. 90.

PLEA XI.

“ To argue a priori concerning the existence and attributes of “ the first Cause is no absurdity: for, though no thing, no being “ can indeed be prior to the first Cause, yet arguments may and “ must be drawn from the nature and consequences of that “ necessity by which the first Cause exists<sup>t</sup>.”

Ans. It is allowed, that arguments may or must be drawn from the nature and consequences of that necessity by which the first Cause exists, but not from the nature and consequences of that necessity by which the first Cause does not exist. Now the first Cause (if it be proper to say it exists by any necessity) exists by a modal, not a causal necessity; by a metaphysical necessity, not a physical; by a necessity subsequent in order of nature to the existence, (whereof it is the mode,) not by any antecedent necessity. Therefore let us keep to the idea of modal necessity, (meaning permanency, stability, noncontingency, independency, immutability, and the like;) I say, let us keep closely to that idea of modal necessity, without changing it into causal; and then, if any arguments can be justly drawn from the nature and consequences of it, let them be admitted. But it is very certain and self-evident, that no arguments can be drawn a priori to the existence, from a mode of the same existence, subsequent and posterior, in conception, to it.

PLEA XII.

“ Mathematical necessary truths are usually demonstrated a “ priori, and yet nothing is prior to truths eternally necessary.
 “ To confine therefore the use of the term to argumentations “ about such things only as have other things prior to them in “ time, is only quibbling about the signification of words.”

Ans. No one goes about to confine the notion of priority to priority in time only: it is allowed, that there is a priority of order, or of nature, or of conception, where there is no priority in time. But it is insisted upon, that there is nothing at all prior to the existence of the first Cause, in any sense of priority whatever; nothing prior to it so much as in conception, or order of nature; and therefore there is no arguing a priori at all in that case. The insisting upon this is not quibbling about words, but reasoning justly and soberly about things, and things of the greatest consequence. The fundamental doctrine of a first Cause is directly concerned in it, and several other very important articles hang upon it.

<sup>t</sup> Answer to the Seventh Letter, p. 45.

(2.) As to mathematical necessary truths, they may be demonstrated a priori, as long as there is any other truth prior in conception, or order of nature, to them: but when once we ascend up to first principles or axioms, which have no truths prior in conception, there is then no more arguing a priori, no ascending up higher in the scale of ideas, or in the chain of truths<sup>u</sup>. In like manner, as to real existence there is a first, which is at the top of that scale; and we can go no higher than to the highest. There all reasoning a priori ceases, or ought to do so; because there is no existence prior, in order of nature or of conception, to argue from; no possible causality, no imaginable antecedency to build such reasoning upon. There all our searches must terminate; there our aspiring and wearied thoughts take rest. And though an uncaused Being is an unfathomable abyss, and we can scarce forbear asking childishly, how and why, or for what reason it exists, and must exist? yet our recollected thoughts must tell us, that such questions are improper and impertinent, and resolve only into a fond conception or contradictory notion of something still higher than the highest, and prior to the first.

PLEA XIII.

“To the objection, that an attribute cannot be the ground or reason of the existence of the substance itself, (which is always, on the contrary, the support of the attributes,) I answer, that in strictness of speech, necessity of existence is not an attribute in the sense that attributes are properly so styled; but it is (sui generis) the ground or foundation of existence both of the substance and of all the attributes<sup>x</sup>.”

Ans. The sum of this evasive plea is, that necessity of existence (since it is absurd to make an attribute antecedent) must be a kind of attribute which is no attribute properly speaking; an attribute sui generis, a privileged attribute, not subject to the ordinary rules and laws, to which all attributes, as such, must be subject: a postulatum too large and too arbitrary to be granted by any man that will not be content to take sound for sense, or words and syllables for ideas. Either let this admired necessity be called an attribute, and acknowledged to be subsequent to its subject, and then there is an end of the argument a priori: or if it must be antecedent, for the sake of the argument, let it be called (what it is supposed confusely to be) a principle extrinsic, and so it will import a cause prior to the first. One of these titles it must wear: for there is no breaking the horns of the dilemma; that the said necessity must either be subsequent as an attribute, or else a principle extrinsic, if it be supposed antecedent. The truth is, strictly speaking, necessity in this case is not the attribute, but necessary existence is; and the necessity considered abstractedly, or by itself, is the mode of such existence, expressing the manner or perfection of it. Now certainly, if every attribute, in the very notion of it, is subsequent to the substance whereby it is supported; a mode, which is still one remove further off, and so much the more subsequent, in order of nature and conception, can never be looked upon as antecedent, in any view whatever.

<sup>u</sup> See Dr. Gretton's Review, p. 95.

<sup>x</sup> Answer to Seventh Letter, p. 46.

PLEA XIV.

“Thus, in other instances, immensity is not an attribute in the sense that wisdom, power, and the like, are strictly so called, but it is (sui generis) a mode of existence both of the substance and of all the attributes. In like manner, eternity is not an attribute or property in the sense that other attributes, inhering in the substance, and supported by it, are properly so called, but it is (sui generis) the duration of the existence both of the substance and of all the attributes.”

(1.) The design of this plea is to intimate, that attributes may be distinguished into several kinds; which is not disputed. Nevertheless all attributes agree in that which makes or denominates them to be attributes; namely, in being attributed to some subject considered as their support, and of course antecedent in conception to them.

(2.) As to immensity and eternity, considered either as attributes of the Divine Being, or as modes to other attributes, they are under one conception subsequent to the substance, and under the other conception subsequent both to the substance and attri*butes*; that is to say, still more subsequent. And such also is the case of necessity, as abstracted from existence, it is a mode of existence, and so it is doubly subsequent under that formality; which the author himself seems to have been sensible of, and therefore was afraid of calling it a mode of existence, though he allows it of the other two.

PLEA XV.

“Attributes or properties, strictly so called, cannot be predicated one of another: wisdom cannot be properly said to be powerful, or power to be wise. But immensity is a mode of existence both of the Divine substance and of all the attributes. And necessity is the ground, or reason, or foundation of existence, both of the Divine substance, and of all the attributes.”

Answ. Existence being common to whatever is, no doubt but it may be predicated both of the substance and the attributes: and as necessity in this case is a mode of the existence, and ought to have been called so as well as immensity, and is predicated even of existence, it must of course be predicated of every Divine attribute, because the existence which it goes along with, and adheres to, is so predicated. But to infer from thence, that necessity, a mode of being, is a ground, or reason, or foundation of being, is jumping to a conclusion without any premises; yea and against the premises; because a mode of existence presupposes existence. To be short, all those words, ground, reason, foundation, internal cause, and the like, are only so much foreign language, fetched from another subject, and improperly brought in here; sounds and syllables only, if they do not mean a cause prior to the first; flat contradiction and palpable absurdity, if they do. But the word necessity seems to carry a kind of a charm in it to deceive the eye or to beguile the fancy, while by a subtle sort of legerdemain it steals away the true idea intrusted with it, and returns you a counterfeit for it.

∇ Answer to Seventh Letter, p. 46.

CHAP. III.

Briefly intimating the hurtful Tendency of insisting so much upon the pretended Argument a priori, both with regard to Religion and Science.

IT would not be worth the time or the pains, to confute any false notion, were there no harm in it, or if it no way tended, directly or indirectly, to the prejudice of the world. But whatever hurts religion or science, hurts the public of course; and that these new principles are of ill tendency, in that respect, will appear from diverse considerations, which come now to be mentioned.

1. It may be of ill consequence to rest any important and unquestionable truth upon precarious principles, too weak to support it. It tends to expose, rather than to serve the cause so pleaded; to render it suspected, rather than to bring credit to it; and to give the adversaries a handle for ridicule or triumph. One would not indeed altogether discourage any religious and well meant endeavours to strike new light into an important subject, and to confirm established truths by additional topics, or supplemental reinforcements. Were it not for the attempts of that kind, made by lively and enterprising geniuses, time after time, we should, no doubt, have wanted many considerable improvements both in philosophy and theology, which we rejoice in at this day: and were there not scope given for essays or trials which may happen to fail, (as all cannot hit,) we should scarce have field large enough for those that might be approved, and stand. Nevertheless in truths which have already passed through an infinite number of hands, (such as is the existence of a Deity,) there is the less occasion for looking after new topics. Probably, there are no new ones now to be thought on, after the utmost stretch of human faculties has been long exercised upon the subject; but those that appear new will be commonly found no other than old exploded speculations. Thus it happened to Des Cartes, who seems to have valued himself for the inventing a new argument for the existence; and he had several admirers and followers, for a time, of considerable name and figure, who closed in with it, conceiving it to be firm and solid. But within a while it was suspected to be no better than a paralogism; and not only so, but was found to have been of ancient date too, as early as Anselm, and confuted afterwards by Thomas Aquinas <sup>a</sup>, and others, and at length dropped by all, because it had been weighed in the balance, and proved wanting. So it will rarely happen, that any new thought can be offered upon a subject so trite and well nigh exhausted : or, if there should be any new topic invented, it will probably be found much short in value and efficacy of the more common ones, which have been of long standing. The commonest arguments, in such cases, may be justly looked upon as the best ; because they have been proved and tried, and have survived many others of inferior note, by reason of their known weight and significancy above the rest. Opinionum commenta delet dies, naturæ judicia confirmat. For the maintaining of doctrines, which have been universally received in all places and times, there is more need of judgment than invention, in making choice of the best proofs that have been before offered, rather than offering new ones ; which will not come up to the other, but are likely to fail upon trial, however they may please for a while by their novelty. The more important a cause is, the more need of caution : because there is a particular reverence due to such a cause, and the risk is the greater, if it be made to lean on quirk and subtilty, upon weak and sandy foundations. Now there cannot be a more important cause than the cause of Theism ; neither can we any where more dangerously give a loose to fancy, than upon that head.

2. It is still worse to rest such a cause upon principles, which are not only too weak to bear it, but which also in their obvious natural tendency threaten to overturn it : such is really the case with respect to the argument a priori ; which is so far from establishing the existence of a first Cause, (the point aimed at,) that it proceeds upon such premises as admit no first Cause at all. The pleas made for it directly strike at the very notion of a first Cause, proving (if they proved any thing) that there can be no such thing as a being uncaused. This has been observed over and over in the preceding chapter ; and so I need only refer back thither for the proof of what I here say. Such an argument therefore, however piously intended, and offered with very upright views, yet cannot but be looked upon as an argument of

<sup>a</sup> Vid. Parker, Disputat. de Deo, p. 567. Conf. Gillius, lib. i. tract. 8. c. 3. p. 385, &c.

In Gillius may be seen a list of those Schoolmen who adhered to Anselm in that argument ; as also a recital of others who appeared against it, and confuted it.

pernicious tendency: and every true lover of Theism, who perceives where such reasoning terminates, cannot be too jealous of it. When Des Cartes proposed a new argument (as it was thought) for the existence of a Deity, all the hurt of it was, that it fell short of the point, and disserved the cause, only by resting it upon what would not bear: but this other argument, besides its being inconclusive for the purpose aimed at, is attended with this further inconvenience, that it proceeds upon principles, which run directly cross to it, and which make it impracticable to prove any first Cause at all. For if every cause must have a cause, (which is the maxim it sets out with, and proceeds upon all the way,) the consequence is inevitable, that there can be no first Cause. It is highly proper to declare against so pernicious a maxim, which can tend only to undermine the proofs of a Deity, instead of improving them.

3. There is another circumstance in this matter which deserves consideration, namely, that this pretended demonstration is not only offered as a proof, but is zealously insisted on, and highly magnified above the many solid and standing demonstrations which have hitherto been received and approved by the common reason of mankind; as if it were not sufficient to give us a paralogism for demonstration, but every other demonstration (justly and properly so called) must be undervalued and slighted in comparison. For instance, it is alleged that the arguments a posteriori (though the best that we have) for the Divine eternity and omnipresence are short of proof: which is not true, even in the strictest sense of demonstrative proof: and if it were true, yet so long as there is other sufficient proof, (such as every reasonable man must readily acquiesce in,) it should not be slightly spoken of; neither should it be suggested that those attributes cannot be proved. The moral proofs, after all, if not so strictly demonstrative as the metaphysical, are yet better suited to common capacities, and apter to persuade the bulk of mankind<sup>b</sup>; and are therefore of more extensive use, and consequently ties of all unprejudiced men, who have any probity of mind. And this is what, I suppose, God expects (as a moral Governor) that moral agents should be determined by." Answer to Sixth Letter, p. 31, 32.

<sup>b</sup> "The proof a posteriori is level to all men's capacities: because there is an endless gradation of wise and useful phenomena of nature, from the most obvious to the most abstruse; which afford (at least a moral and reasonable) proof of the being of God, to the several capaci-

"The proof a priori is—capable of being understood only by a few of more intrinsic value than the other. However that be, it is certainly of ill consequence to depreciate the solidest arguments hitherto urged in proof of the existence, for the sake only of magnifying a flight of fancy. When an imaginary proof is thus advanced as a real one, and not only so, but superior to all others, it then becomes more and more dangerous, as doing great disservice to the cause of God and religion<sup>c</sup>.

4. I must further remark, that this argument a priori, or some appendages of it, look not very favourably towards revealed religion, particularly as to the article of the Trinity; as hath been observed at large by a learned hand<sup>d</sup>, and need not here be repeated. This is an additional evidence of the mischievous tendency of those false metaphysics, which as they do in one view sap the first and fundamental article of natural religion, by destroying the notion of a First Cause; so do they, in another view, strike at some of the prime fundamentals of the Gospel.

5. Add to this, the mischief done to true philosophy, by adopting one absurd principle, which may probably draw after it many other, (as one error leads to more,) or may introduce a fallacious way of reasoning, such as may affect science in general. For example: in order to maintain antecedent necessity, the ideas of infinity and eternity are fetched in as antecedently forcing themselves upon us<sup>e</sup>; and it is supposed to be intuitively evident<sup>f</sup>, that those ideas have their objective realities ad extra. Then space and time are advanced, as amounting to the same with infinity and eternity, and are supposed really to exist ad extra, and as certainly as that twice two makes four: whereupon they are exalted into modes, or attributes, or properties of the Divine substance<sup>g</sup>, and God himself is imagined to be the sub-

“ attentive minds; because it is of “ use only against learned and meta- “ physical difficulties.” Ibid.

<sup>c</sup> What Mr. Locke says, in relation to another sophistical argument for the existence, once contended for by the Cartesians, is very applicable in this case:

“ It is an ill way of establishing “ this truth, and silencing Atheists, to “ lay the whole stress of so important a “ point upon that sole foundation— “ and out of an over fondness of that “ darling invention cashier, or at least “ endeavour to invalidate, all other “ arguments, and forbid us to hearken

“ to those proofs, as being weak or “ fallacious, which our own existence “ and the sensible parts of the universe “ offer so clearly and cogently to our “ thoughts, that I deem it impossible “ for a considering man to withstand “ them.” Locke, Hum. Understand. book iv. chap. x. sect. 7. Letter i. to Stillingfleet, p. 112.

<sup>d</sup> Dr. Gretton’s Preface to his Review, p. 5, 6, &c.

<sup>e</sup> Demonstration, p. 15.

<sup>f</sup> Demonstration, p. 15. Letters, p. 34.

<sup>g</sup> Demonstration, p. 15. Letters, p. 15, 16, 20, 35.

stratum of both<sup>h</sup>. Besides all which, the idea of a necessarily existing Being is made to be the idea of a Being, the supposition of whose not existing is an express contradiction: and necessity is interpreted a plain impossibility, or implying a contradiction, to suppose the contrary, like the relation of equality between twice two and four<sup>i</sup>. Nay it is further said; “If I have in my mind “an idea of a thing, and cannot possibly in my imagination take “away the idea of that thing as actually existing, any more than “I can change or take away the idea of the equality of twice two “to four, the certainty of the existence of that thing is the same, “and stands on the same foundation as the certainty of the “other relation<sup>k</sup>.” It is said further, “that absolute necessity “(that is, antecedent) is the cause of the unalterable proportion “between twice two and four<sup>l</sup>.” Now it is more than probable, that this whole train of suppositions, or assertions, brought in as part of the retinue to wait upon the argument a priori, is little else but a train of error and false reasoning. It would be tedious to enter into a large examination of every particular, but I shall make a few strictures upon each.

1. As to the ideas of infinity and eternity, considered as antecedently forcing themselves upon us, there is no truth in it, if it means forcing themselves upon our reason, and extorting assent. Perhaps they may in some sense force themselves upon the imagination, (like many other fancies, or waking dreams,) but as to believing that the ideas of infinity and eternity have objective realities ad extra, we are not forced to it, antecedently or otherwise, till rational conviction shall render us certain of it.

2. As to the ideas of space and time, they are not the same ideas with those of immensity and eternity, but are constantly thought of and spoken of in a very different manner. Immensity and eternity are considered as attributes of something, and spoken of accordingly: whereas space and time are conceived and spoken after the manner of substances; as several other abstract general ideas (nature, fortune, death, &c.) are. Immense immensity is an improper expression, is blunder and solecism: but immense space carries no impropriety in the expression; which shews that the ideas are different. So again, eternal eternity is mere solecism: but time eternal (in the large sense of time) is a proper expression. Space and time are considered not as being themselves properties,

<sup>h</sup> Letters, p. 20, 24.

<sup>i</sup> Demonstration, p. 16, 18, 19.

<sup>k</sup> Ibid. p. 20.

<sup>l</sup> Letters, p. 33.

but as being invested with properties: that is, they are considered after the manner of substances, as many other abstract ideas are. And because it is certain, that they are not substances, (much less can they be attributes,) they are, most probably, nothing else but general abstract ideas, common measures and receptacles formed by the mind, for the better lodgement, rangement, and adjustment of our other ideas.

3. As to existence ad extra, it is not to be proved by strength of imagination, but by reasons proper to the case. So it cannot be justly pretended, that we have intuitive evidence. We know and feel our own existence, and from thence can demonstrate the existence of God. I say, demonstrate: for our knowledge of God here is demonstrative only, not intuitive, as will be shewn hereafter. We neither see nor feel space or time as existing ad extra: we contemplate nothing but our own ideas: and from ideas within, to realities without, there is no immediate consequence to be drawn; but whatever we may draw, justly, must be worked out by deduction and inference, and perhaps a long chain of reasoning, before we can come at certainty as to real external existence.

4. To pretend, that our ideas within are as necessarily connected with actual existence without, as the ideas of twice two and four, is mistaking imagination for reason, and association of ideas for connection. That twice two is equal to four, is as certain as that the same idea is the same idea: and the connection of the idea of equality is plain and certain. This is only pronouncing upon the relations of ideas with each other, and so far we cannot be mistaken, having a clear and distinct perception of such relations: but ideal existence is not necessarily connected with real existence, like as idea with idea; and therefore the comparison here made is wide and foreign. There is no resemblance between the two cases, but they are as different as possible from each other, as much as fancy and fiction from truth and reason.

5. To make God the substratum of space and time (which really are not attributes or properties, nor ever spoken of as such) is mere solecism and impropriety of expression; a certain mark of as great an error in thought. Not to mention many other just objections which lie against the gross notion of an extended or expanded Deity.

6. Necessary existence is inaccurately and preposterously explained by impossibility of non-existence: for the affirmative is in order of nature prior to the negative<sup>m</sup>; and, strictly speaking, the existence is not necessary, because non-existence is impossible; but on the reverse, non-existence is impossible, because existence, in that instance, is necessary, or infinitely permanent<sup>n</sup>. The negative truth in this case resolves into its correspondent affirmative, as into its principle, from which it is deduced.

7. In the making the idea of a necessarily existing Being to be the idea of one whose non-existence is an express contradiction, there appears to be a twofold confusion; one between physical and logical necessity; another between a contradiction a priori and a contradiction a posteriori. There is in a necessarily existing Being a physical impossibility of non-existence: which is not the same thing with a logical repugnancy, referring to our ideas as contradictory and repugnant. Those two things are distinct, and ought not to have been confounded<sup>o</sup>.

A contradiction a priori is, when we perceive from the idea of such a cause, that it is a contradiction for that cause not to produce such an effect. There is no such contradiction as this comes to in the supposition of the non-existence of a Deity: for we see not a priori why he must be; we see no cause of it; but, on the contrary, we perceive, that he is absolutely uncaused.

But a posteriori we find it resolve at length into a contradiction, to suppose that no First Cause exists: it is a contradiction to our ideas of cause and effect: for effects must have a cause, and if something now exists, something always existed, something independent; for from nothing could arise nothing. This

<sup>m</sup> At vero necessitas describi vel intelligi haudquaquam potest absque ratione ipsius esse: nam necessarium est, quod non potest non esse. Quare ipsum esse prius est ratione necessitatis. Gillius, lib. i. tract. 8. cap. 4. p. 396.

<sup>n</sup> Necessarium nequaquam recte per possibile, nec per impossibile definitur; nihil enim recte definitur per aliquid posterius eo, sicut secundo Post. et septimo Metaph. demonstratur; sed utrumque istorum est posterius necessario. Non ergo recte definitur necessarium per hoc quod non est possibile non esse, vel per hoc quod impossibile est non esse. Ideoque

Avicen. 1. Metaph. 5. reprobatur definitiones antiquorum de necessario, possibili, et impossibili, eo quod definiabant illa per se invicem circulando; ut patet de definitionibus quas ibi recitat ab antiquis, dicitque id quod ex his tribus dignius est intelligi, est necesse esse: quoniam necesse esse significat vehementiam essendi, esse vero notius est quam non esse: esse enim cognoscitur per se, non esse vero per esse. Bradwardine, De Causa Dei, p. 204.

<sup>o</sup> See Dr. Gretton upon the distinction between logical and physical reason. Review, p. 69.

kind of contradiction a posteriori we admit; not the other a priori, which is fiction only, though much has been built upon it.

8. As to absolute (antecedent) necessity's being the cause of the unalterable proportion between twice two and four, it is all a mistake. There is no antecedency in the case. First principles and axioms shine by their own light, have nothing antecedent to demonstrate them by, are perceived by intuition, not demonstration; and resolve only into this, that every thing is what it is, or the same idea is the same idea. The idea of equality is the idea of equality, and the idea of twice two is the idea of twice two, and the idea of four the idea of four: and, as soon as ever the terms expressing those ideas are understood, the proposition is admitted of course, requiring no antecedent necessity to ascertain it, no cause to fix it: it is above all causes, being intuitively, not demonstrably discerned. But enough has been said to shew how the erroneous notion of the argument a priori has served to usher in a great deal of confusion and false reasoning in other articles hanging upon it, or ministering to it: so that the letting in that one false principle cannot but tend to the detriment of science in general; which I undertook to shew.

And now, to look back to what has been observed in these papers concerning the pretended demonstration a priori, the sum is as follows: that the thought is in some sense old enough, having been suggested, considered, and rejected by the judicious fifteen hundred years ago: that it has been frequently taken notice of since by the schoolmen and others; and drawn out into public light, but always like a criminal, in order to be condemned: that though attempts have been made in favour of something under the name of an argument a priori, yet as to the gross sense of it, in which it is now contended for, (viz. as an antecedent ground, reason, foundation, internal cause of the Deity,) it appears not to have met with any professed patrons before the eighteenth century; when probably what former ages had been doing was not remembered, or not duly attended to: that the new countenance given to a notion that had been so long and universally exploded, brought it into some degree of credit and repute, before it was understood: that as soon as it came to be more minutely looked into, it began presently to decline, and to sink as it formerly used to do: that it is now found to carry in it such insuperable absurdities, as must of course be a bar to its reception in an inquisitive and discerning age: that, lastly, it seems to promise no good to religion or science, while sapping the fundamental articles of one, and crossing the established principles of the other.

This appears to me to be a true report and fair account of what concerns the argument a priori, after the most attentive and impartial inquiries I have hitherto been able to make into it.

THE IMPORTANCE
OF THE
DOCTRINE OF THE HOLY TRINITY
ASSERTED, &c.

---

In necessariis, Unitas : in non-necessariis, Libertas : in omnibus, Prudentia et Charitas.

He that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God. John iii. 18.

CONTENTS

OF THE

IMPORTANCE OF THE DOCTRINE OF THE HOLY TRINITY ASSERTED, &c.

AN Introduction, briefly intimating the Occasion of the Work, and treating severally,

- I. Of those that deny the Importance of the Doctrine of the Trinity, being,
  - 1. Either such as disbelieve the Doctrine. . . . . 396
  - 2. Or such as suspend their Faith in it . . . . . ibid.
  - 3. Or such as believe its Truth. . . . . 397
- II. Of those that assert the Importance of the Doctrine, conceiving,
  - 1. That some Scripture Doctrines are more important than others . . 399
  - 2. That Faith in the Gospel is necessary to Salvation . . . . . 400
  - 3. That we are obliged to preserve it whole and entire. . . . . ibid.
  - 4. That in the slighter matters Christians should bear with each other ; but in the necessaries, must insist upon conformity . . . . . 403

CHAP. I.

Shewing that the Doctrine of the Trinity is sufficiently clear to be admitted as a fundamental Article . . . . . 405

- 1. Clear with Regard to the Matter of it . . . . . ibid.
- 2. Clear with Respect to the Proofs on which it rests . . . . . 411

CHAP. II.

Shewing that the same Doctrine is sufficiently practical to be a Fundamental . . . . . 416

- 1. As containing a right Knowledge of God, and regulating our Worship. . . . . ibid.

2. As forming proper Dispositions of Mind ..... 421
  3. As raising and strengthening the Motives to Christian Practice .. 422
  4. As having a close connection with the Doctrine of Satisfaction .. 425
  5. As having the like Connection with the Doctrine of Grace ..... 431
  6. As belief is Obedience, and all Obedience practical ..... 434
- But this to be understood of the main Doctrine, not of the minute Circumstances or Appendages ..... 437

CHAP. III.

Shewing that the Doctrine is sufficiently insisted on in Scripture to be judged a Fundamental ..... 440

1. Episcopius's Sentiments on this Head considered and confuted. . . ibid.
2. Limborch's Sentiments on the same examined and disproved. . . 450

CHAP. IV.

Shewing that Communion ought not to be held with Persons who openly reject and impugn the fundamental Doctrines of the Gospel, and persist in so doing. Proved

1. From Scripture ..... 456
2. From the reason of the thing ..... 470

CHAP. V.

Objections removed, and vulgar Mistakes rectified ..... 473

1. Objected, that insisting upon the Doctrine as important, is running into an extreme ..... 474
  - Denied ..... ibid.
  - Retorted ..... 476
2. That a wicked Life is the worst Heresy. The fallacy of that saying laid open and confuted ..... 478
  - A Life of Heresy a wicked Life ..... ibid.
3. That Heretics may be sincere. Allowed with Distinction, and the Plea shewn to be wide and foreign ..... 485
4. That there can be no Certainty on the Trinitarian side, without Infallibility, denied ..... 494
  - Certainty maintained against Papists ..... 495
  - Against Sceptics. .... 498
5. That such Zeal in this matter is Persecution and Popery ..... 506
  - Denied. .... 507
  - Retorted. .... ibid.
6. That it is assuming Dominion over Men's Faith, &c. denied and disproved. .... 510
  - Retorted ..... 511
7. That censuring others may provoke them to make Reprisals .... 512
  - Admitted, and justified ..... 513
  - The Use to be made of that Consideration ..... 516

8. That none should be censured who are ready to declare their Faith in Scripture Terms ..... 517 Allowed in one Sense ..... ibid.
     Denied in another. .... ibid.
 9, That censuring of Heretics is encouraging sanguinary proceedings .. 519 Denied and disproved ..... 520

CHAP. VI.

Containing the Judgment of the primitive Churches, with respect to the Importance of the Doctrine of the Trinity ..... 523

1. Shewn from Creeeds ..... 524
 2. From Censures passed upon the Impugners of it ..... 537 Upon Cerinthus ..... ibid.
     Upon Ebion ..... 554
     Upon Theodotus ..... 577
     Upon Artemon ..... 581
     Upon Beryllus ..... 582
     Upon Paul of Samosata ..... 585
     Upon Arius ..... ibid.
 3. From the Sentiments of particular Fathers..... 589
     Ignatius ..... ibid.
     Justin Martyr..... 591
     Irenæus ..... 592
     Athenagoras ..... 593
     Tertullian ..... 595
     Cyprian ..... 596
     Novatian..... 597
     Dionysius of Rome ..... ibid.
     Dionysius of Alexandria ..... 598
     Alexander of Alexandria ..... 600

CHAP. VII.

Shewing the Use and Value of Ecclesiastical Antiquity in Controversies of Faith ..... 601

1. Extremes to be avoided ..... 604
 2. The true State of the Case premised ..... ibid.
 3. The Use of the Ancients explained in eight particulars..... 607
 4. Objections answered in ten particulars ..... 624

CHAP. VIII.

The Catholic Interpretation of John i. 1. and Hebrews i. vindicated, and shewn to be preferable to the Arian ..... 666

- Of John i. 1. .... 668
 Of Hebr. i. .... 674

ADDENDA.

To pages 406, 441, 460.....	684
To pages 468, 469, 485.....	685
To page 508 .....	688
To pages 510, 511, 544.....	689
To page 554.....	690
To pages 568, 649 .....	692
To page 667 .....	694

THE INTRODUCTION.

---

THERE has appeared, very lately, a small pamphlet<sup>a</sup> of seventy-six pages, entitled, A Sober and Charitable Disquisition concerning the importance of the Doctrine of the Trinity; endeavouring to shew, that “those in the different schemes “should bear with each other in their different sentiments, and “should not separate communions.” The treatise appears to be written in a good manner, and with a Christian spirit; on which account it deserves the more notice: and the question debated in it is undoubtedly important in every view, whether with regard to peace in this life, or happiness in the next. And as I have formerly spent some time and pains in discussing the truth of that high and holy doctrine, from Scripture, reason, and antiquity; so now I think it concerns me the more, to debate, in like manner, the importance of it: which I shall, by God’s assistance, endeavour to do, fully and fairly, with all due care and attention, and with all becoming reverence for the subject, as well as respect towards the reader.

<sup>a</sup> Printed for John Gray, at the Cross Keys in the Poultry, near Cheapside, 1732.

N. B. There were several other pieces which preceded, or soon followed it, relating to the same cause.

1. Mr. Nation’s Sermon, preached Sept. 8, 1731.

2. A Letter to Mr. Nation, by P. C. 1732.

3. A Vindication of Mr. Nation’s Sermon: with a Letter from Mr. Nation.

4. A Letter to the Author of the Vindication: with a Second Letter to Mr. Nation. by P. C.

5. A Reply to Mr. P. C.’s Letter.

6. A Postscript, or a Third Letter to Mr. Nation, by P. C.

Before I enter upon the main debate, it will be proper to clear the way by some preliminary observations concerning the several sorts of persons who deny the importance of the doctrine of the Trinity, and their views in doing it; as also concerning the advocates, on the other side, who assert the importance of that sacred doctrine, and the general principles on which they proceed.

I. As to the persons who deny the importance of the doctrine, they are reducible to three kinds; being either such as disbelieve the doctrine itself, or such as are in some suspense about it; or, lastly, such as really assent to it as true doctrine. It is with this last sort only, that our present debate is properly concerned. But yet for the clearer apprehending those three different kinds of men, and their different views in joining together so far in the same cause, it will not be improper to say something severally and distinctly of each.

1. Those that disbelieve the doctrine itself, while they join with others in decrying the importance of it, are to be looked upon as a kind of artful men, who think it policy to carry on a scheme gently and leisurely, and to steal upon the unwary by soft and almost insensible degrees—a method which is indeed commonly slower in producing the effect, but is the surer for being so; as it is less shocking and more insinuating. They are content therefore, at first, to make men cool and indifferent towards the doctrine; as thinking it a good point gained, and a promising advance made towards the laying it aside. With these views, both Socinians and Arians, who disbelieve the doctrine itself, may yet be content, for a time, to declare only against the importance of it. Deists also may join in the same thing, conceiving, that indifference, as to a prime article of Christianity, may in time draw on the same kind of indifference towards Christianity itself. They are disbelievers with respect to the doctrine of the Trinity, and with respect also to all revealed religion: and they will of course favour and encourage the denial of any part, in order to bring on the subversion of the whole. However, our present concern is not directly with Deists, nor with such as deny the doctrine of the Trinity: for our dispute now is, not about the certainty of revealed religion, (which is supposed in our present question,) nor about the truth of the doctrine of the Trinity, (which is also supposed,) but about the importance, use, or value of it.

2. A second sort of persons, before mentioned, are such as seriously believe Christianity in the general, and do not disbelieve the doctrine of the Trinity in particular, but suspend their belief of it, and are a kind of sceptics on that head. These men deny the importance of the doctrine, because they think it doubtful whether it be a doctrine of holy Scripture or no: and they judge very rightly in the general, that a stress ought not to be laid upon uncertainties, upon things precarious and conjectural, which cannot be proved to the satisfaction of the common reason of mankind. They are right in thesi, and wrong in hypothesi, as shall be shewn in the sequel. Only I may hint, by the way, that our present debate is not directly with this kind of men: for they are rather to be referred to what has been written for the truth of the doctrine, than to what more immediately concerns the importance of it. Yet because the presumed uncertainty or doubtfulness of the doctrine, is by these men made the principal objection against the importance of it, and the author of the Sober and Charitable Disquisition seems to lay the main stress of the cause there, quite through his performance; it will be necessary to give that objection a place in this discourse, and to return an answer to it in the general, or so far as may be proper; not to draw the whole controversy about the truth of the doctrine into this other question concerning the importance of it.

While I am speaking of men doubtful in this article, I would be understood of serious and religious men, and not of such persons whose minds are purely secular, and who are indifferent to every thing but what concerns this world: such persons are of no consideration in our present question; neither are they men proper to be reasoned with, as they have no relish at all for inquiries of this nature. But I proceed.

3. A third kind of men are those that believe the truth of the doctrine, but demur to the importance of it. And as Episcopus was, in a manner, their father or founder, and great leader, they have been frequently called after him, Episcopians. These are properly the persons whom we have here to dispute with: for they are the men who make the truth and the importance of the doctrine two distinct questions, admitting the one and rejecting the other, or however demurring to it. The design of this middle way was to reconcile parties, if possible, and to favour the Soci-nians so far, as to condemn their doctrines only, without condemning the men. But this new and fruitless expedient was very much disliked by all that had any warm and hearty concern for the true and ancient faith. Such coldness and indifferency, with regard to a prime article of Christianity, appeared to many to be nothing else but an artful, specious way of betraying it, and likely to do more mischief than an open denial of it. The ablest and soundest Divines, as well Lutheran<sup>b</sup> as Reformed<sup>c</sup>, have reclaimed strongly against it, detesting the neutrality of the remonstrant brethren, as tending to undermine the Gospel of Christ. The Divines of our Church, however otherwise supposed to be against Calvinism, and to favour Arminianism, yet smartly condemned the Remonstrants in that article. Dr. Bull, particularly, appeared against them in a very accurate and learned treatise<sup>d</sup>, in the year 1694. And it is worth observing, how Dr. Nicholls afterwards expresses himself, in the name of our whole body. "There is another Arminian doctrine, which we avoid as deadly poison, their assertion that there is no necessity of acknowledging three Persons in the divine nature, nor that Christ in particular is the eternal Son of God: this heretical notion our Church abominates and detests, as an heinous impiety, and what was never heard of in the writings of the primitive Christians<sup>e</sup>." Thus far he, in relation to our Divines of the Church of England.

<sup>b</sup> For the Lutherans, I shall cite Buddeus only, who is as mild and moderate in his censure of Episcopus, as any of them.

Nimio enim concordia, dissentientesque tolerandi studio, ea interdum ad fidem et salutem minime necessaria judicavit, quae vetus Ecclesia ipsa, Scripturae suffragio hac in re non destituta, adeo necessaria pronuntiavit, ut aeternae salutis spem non habeat qui ea negare aut impugnam ausus fuerit. Buddei Isag. p. 422.

<sup>c</sup> The learned Witsius may speak for the Reformed.

Injuri in Deum Remonstrantes sunt, quando palpum obtrusuri, quos plus justo amant, Sociniani, eos describunt quasi qui vitam suam ex Evangelii praescripto sic instituunt, ut Patrem in Filio ejus colant, et ab utroque Spiritus Sancti gratiam sanctis piusque precibus ambire studeant. Quid audiemus tandem? Illine vitam ex Evangelii praescripto instituunt, qui satisfactionem Christi negantes, Evangelium evertunt? Illine Patrem in Filio colunt, qui aeternum Dei Filium  $\psi\lambda\delta\upsilon$

$\alpha\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi\omicron\nu$  esse calumniantur, quem uti talem adorantes convertunt in idolum? Illine piis precibus Spiritus Sancti gratiam ambiunt, qui Spiritum Dei accedens, et creaturam, vel saltem medium quid inter Deum et creaturam esse blasphemant? Wits. in Symb. Apost. p. 76.

<sup>d</sup> Judicium Ecclesiae Catholicae de necessitate credendi, &c.

<sup>e</sup> Nicholls's Defence of the Church of England, part i. chap. 9. Mr. Scrivener, long before, (A. D. 1672.) had passed the like censure:

Hunc [Socinium] non minima ex parte secutus Episcopus, et ipse antiquitatis (quod norunt Docti) imperitus, novam credendi imo et philosophandi licentiam, regulamque affectavit: et — mysteria Christianae fidei summa, tam singulari et inaudito acumine, vel crasso potius fastu, tractavit, ut non pertimescat liberos cuius fidelis eos articulos de S. S. Trinitate permittere, absque quibus constans et federalis fides docuit, nullum ad vitam immortalem aditum patere Christianis. Scrivener. Apolog. adv. Dallæum, in Praefat.

As to the Divines of the separation, they are known to have been as zealous as any men could be, for the necessity of believing the doctrine of the Trinity, as the sum and kernel of the Christian religion, the basis, or foundation of the Christian faith. The testimonies of Mr. Baxter, Mr. Corbet, Dr. Manton, and Dr. Bates, to this purpose, may be seen at one view in a late writer<sup>f</sup>: to those might be added Dr. Owens, and Mr. Loh<sup>h</sup>, and perhaps many more. In short, all parties and denominations of Christians, who appear to have had the truth of the doctrine at heart, or any good degree of zeal for it, have contended equally for the necessity of believing it, and have refused communion with the impugners of it.

II. I come next to observe something of the general principles upon which they build, who assert the importance of the doctrine of the Trinity, and who refuse communion with the open impugners of it.

1. They lay it down as a certain and indisputable principle, that there are some Scripture-doctrines of greater importance than others: and they generally make their estimate of that greater importance, by the relation or connection which any doctrine is conceived to have with Christian practice or worship, or with the whole economy of man's salvation by Christ<sup>i</sup>; or by its being plainly, frequently, or strongly inculcated in holy Scripture. Doctrines of this character are commonly styled necessaries, essentials, fundamentals, prime verities, and the like. Not that I mightily like the word necessary, in this case, being a word of equivocal meaning, and great ambiguity, leading to mistakes, and furnishing much matter for cavils. For when we come to ask, necessary to what? or, necessary to whom? and in what degree? then arises perplexity; and there is need of a multitude of distinctions to set the matter clear, so as to serve all possible cases. A doctrine may be said to be necessary to the being of the Church, or to the salvation of some persons so and so qualified, or to the salvation of all: and many questions may arise about the precise degree of the necessity in every instance. But it is easily understood how one doctrine may be said to be more im-

<sup>f</sup> Mr. Eveleigh's preface to a treatise entitled, The Deity of Christ proved fundamental.

<sup>g</sup> Owen's Vindiciæ Evangelicæ, præf. p. 64.

<sup>h</sup> Growth of Error, p. 3, 50, 69, 75, &c.

<sup>i</sup> See Dr. Sherlock's Vindication of the Defence of Dr. Stillingfleet, printed in 1682, ch. v. p. 256, &c.

portant than another; as more depends upon it, or as it more affects the vitals of Christianity, than doctrines of another kind: and we need look no further than to the nature and reason of things, and to the analogy of faith, to be able to distinguish what doctrines are thus important in the general, and what not. Yet there is no giving an exact catalogue of those important or fundamental doctrines; though it is for the most part easy to say of any particular doctrine which may be mentioned, what class it may be reasonably referred to; and whether, or how far, it may be worth contending for. We cannot give a complete catalogue of virtues, any more than of articles of faith, so as to be positive, that those particular virtues, and in such a particular degree, are necessary to all persons, or to any person that shall be named. The precise quantity of virtue (if I may so call it) absolutely necessary to salvation, is no more to be defined, than the precise quantity of faith. Yet we know, in the general, that sincere and universal obedience to what God commands (allowing for infirmities) is necessary to salvation: and in like manner, sincere and universal assent to what God reveals makes up the other part of the terms of acceptance; as faith and obedience together make up the whole.

2. They who assert the importance of the doctrine of the Trinity take it for granted, among Christians, that faith in the Gospel of Christ is necessary to the salvation of all men who are blessed with Gospel light; and that men shall perish eternally for unbelief, for rejecting that Gospel faith, once sufficiently propounded to them: "Go ye into all the world, and preach " the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be " damned<sup>k</sup>."

3. They conceive further, that as we are in duty bound to receive the Gospel-faith, so are we likewise obliged, and under pain of damnation, to preserve it whole and entire, so far as in us lies; and neither to deprave it ourselves, nor to take part with them that do. It is our bounden duty to "hold fast the form " of sound words—in faith and love, which is in Christ Jesus<sup>l</sup>:" to be "sound in the faith<sup>m</sup>:" to "speak things which become

<sup>k</sup> Mark xvi. 15, 16. compare John iii. 36. Revel. xxi. 8.

<sup>l</sup> 2 Timothy i. 13.
<sup>m</sup> Titus i. 13. ii. 2.

“ sound doctrine<sup>n</sup> :” to “ examine whether we be in the faith<sup>o</sup> ;” and in a word, to “ contend earnestly for the faith once delivered “ unto the saints<sup>p</sup> .” So much for the obligations we lie under, to keep the faith of Christ whole and undefiled. Next, we are to observe how dangerous a thing it is to corrupt the true faith in any heinous degree, either by adding to it or taking away from it. One of the earliest instances of gross corruption by adding to the faith of Christ appeared in the converted Jews, or Judaizing Christians, who taught the necessity of observing circumcision and the law of Moses together with Christianity. Against those false apostles, who taught such pernicious doctrine, St. Paul drew his pen, looking upon them as subverters of the Gospel of Christ<sup>q</sup>. And he was so zealous in that matter, as to say, “ Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel “ unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him “ be accursed<sup>r</sup> .” Where by another Gospel he does not mean another religion substituted in the room of Christianity ; (for those false teachers were Christians still, not apostates ; ) but some adulterous mixtures, tending to evacuate the Gospel-law, and to frustrate the grace of God<sup>s</sup>.

I shall give a second instance of gross corruption ; not in adding to, but in taking from the Christian doctrine, in an article of very great importance. There was in the days of the Apostles, and after, a sect of opiniators, who (whether being ashamed of the cross of Christ, or whether thinking it impossible for God to become man<sup>t</sup>) were pleased to deny that Christ Jesus had any real humanity, but that he was a kind of walking phantom, or apparition ; had no human flesh, but imposed upon the eyes and other senses of the spectators. These men were afterwards called Docetæ and Phantasiastæ ; which one may well enough render Visionists, or Visionaries. We are next to take notice how St. John treated them, and what directions he gave to other Christians concerning them. He considered them as deluding teachers, that subverted foundations ; and he gave them the name and title of antichrists. “ Every spirit that

<sup>n</sup> Tit. ii. 1. 1 Tim. i. 10. 2 Tim. iv. 3.

<sup>o</sup> 2 Cor. xiii. 5. comp. Rev. xiv. 12.

<sup>p</sup> Jude 3. compare 1 Tim. iv. 6.

<sup>q</sup> Gal. i. 6, 7.

<sup>r</sup> Gal. i. 8.

<sup>s</sup> Gal. ii. 21. v. 2.

<sup>t</sup> Alii quoque hæretici usque adeo Christi manifestam amplexati sunt divinitatem, ut dixerint illum fuisse sine carne, et totum illi susceptum detraxerint hominem, ne docoquerent in illo divini nominis potestatem, &c. Novat. c. xxiii. p. 87. edit. Welchman.

“ confesseth not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh is not of God : and this is that spirit of antichrist<sup>u</sup>,” &c. In another place, speaking of the same men, he says, “ Many deceivers are entered into the world, who confess not that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh : this is a deceiver and an antichrist<sup>x</sup>.” It is manifest that he does not point his censure at the Jews, who denied that the Messiah was come ; for he speaks of new men, that had then lately “ entered into the world,” whereas the Jews had been from the beginning : besides, that the Jews did not deny that Jesus (or the man called Christ Jesus) had come in the flesh. Therefore, I say, St. John levelled not this censure of his against the Jews, but against some Christian heretics of that time, and those particularly that denied our Lord’s humanity ; in opposition to whom, he exhorts the brethren to “ abide in the doctrine of Christ<sup>y</sup>,” and not to receive the gainsayers into their houses, nor to salute them with God speed, lest they should become thereby partakers of their evil deeds<sup>z</sup>. By evil deeds I understand the overt acts of that heresy, the teaching, spreading, and inculcating it. Thus heresies, that is, the teaching or promoting of pernicious doctrines, are reckoned among the works of the flesh<sup>a</sup> by St. Paul : who also calls false teachers deceitful workers<sup>b</sup>, and evil workers<sup>c</sup> ; because the promoting and encouraging of false and dangerous doctrines is a very ill practice, a wicked employ : which I hint, by the way, for the clearer explication of St. John’s meaning in the phrase of evil deeds.

I shall mention a third Scripture instance of gross corruption in doctrine, which was the denial of a future resurrection ; dangerous doctrine, subversive of Christianity. St. Paul very solemnly admonished the Corinthians<sup>d</sup>, to prevent their giving ear to such pernicious suggestions : and he afterwards excommunicated Hymenæus, Philetus, and Alexander, for spreading and propagating them, delivering the men over to Satan, that they might learn not to blaspheme<sup>e</sup>.

From the three instances now mentioned, it may sufficiently appear, that the corrupting or maiming Christianity in its vitals, by denying or destroying its prime articles, or fundamental doctrines, is a very dangerous thing ; and that we are obliged, under pain of damnation, neither to do it ourselves, nor to abet,

<sup>u</sup> 1 John iv. 3.

<sup>y</sup> 2 John 9.

<sup>a</sup> Gal. v. 19, 20.

<sup>x</sup> 2 John 7.

<sup>z</sup> 2 John 11.

<sup>b</sup> 2 Cor. xi. 13.

<sup>c</sup> Philipp. iii. 2.

<sup>d</sup> 1 Cor. xv.

<sup>e</sup> Compare 1 Tim. i. 20.

2 Tim. ii. 16, 17, 18.

countenance, or encourage those that do, by communicating with them.

4. But it is further to be observed, that in slighter matters, in things not nearly affecting the vitals of Christianity, the rule is for Christians to bear with one another; not to divide or separate, but to agree among themselves; so to disagree in harmless opinions, or indifferent rites, as to unite in faith and love, and in Christian fellowship. Peace is a very valuable thing, and ought not to be sacrificed even to truth; unless such truth be important, and much may depend upon it. A man is not obliged, in all cases, to declare all he knows; and if he does declare his sentiments, and knows them to be true, yet he need not insist upon them with rigour, if the point contested be of a slight nature or value, in comparison to the Church's peace. Let him enjoy his own liberty in that case; and let others have theirs too; and so all will be right. Let them differ so far, by consent, and yet live together in peace and charity. But then, as to weightier matters, it concerns us carefully to observe, that rules of peace are but secondary and subordinate to those of piety or charity, and must veil to them. Peace must be broken in this world, whenever it is necessary to do it for the securing salvation in the next for ourselves or others: and a breach of peace, in such instances, is obedience to the higher law of charity, is conforming to the primary and great commandments, the love of God, and the love of our neighbour. Therefore peace, in such cases, must be sacrificed to truth and charity, that is, to the honour of God, and the eternal interests of mankind.

These things premised, it remains now only to inquire what kind of a doctrine the doctrine of the Trinity is; whether it be of such a slight and indifferent nature as not to be worth the insisting upon at the expense of peace; or whether it be of such high value and importance, that it ought to be maintained as an essential of Christianity against all opposers. This is the great question now before us, and I shall endeavour to examine into it with due care and application.

The gentlemen who look upon it as a non-fundamental have several things to urge, but such as may most of them be reduced to three heads, as follow: 1. That the received doctrine of the Trinity is not clear enough to be admitted for a fundamental.

† Rom. xiv. xv. Coloss. ii. 16, 17.

2. That it is merely speculative, or, however, not practical enough to be important. 3. That it is not sufficiently insisted upon in Scripture, as of necessity to salvation. Now, in return to these three considerations, I shall endeavour to shew, in so many distinct chapters, that the doctrine is sufficiently clear, and also practical, and insisted upon likewise in Scripture, as much as the nature of the thing needs or requires.

THE IMPORTANCE
OF THE
DOCTRINE OF THE HOLY TRINITY
ASSERTED, &c.

---

CHAP. I.

Shewing that the Doctrine of the Trinity is sufficiently CLEAR to be admitted as a FUNDAMENTAL Article.

CLEAR may be considered in two views, either with respect to the matter of the doctrine, or with respect to the proofs upon which it rests. Let us examine the thing both ways.

1. It may be suggested, that the doctrine is not clear, with regard to the matter of it: it is mysterious doctrine. Be it so: the tremendous Deity is all over mysterious, in his nature and in his attributes, in his works and ways. It is the property of the divine Being to be unsearchable: and if he were not so, he would not be divine. Must we therefore reject the most certain truths concerning the Deity, only because they are incomprehensible, when every thing almost belonging to him must be so of course? If so, there is an end, not only of all revealed religion, but of natural religion too; and we must take our last refuge in downright Atheism. There are mysteries in the works of nature, as well as in the word of God; and it is as easy to believe both as one. We do not mean by mysteries, positions altogether unintelligible, or that carry no idea at all with them: we do not mean unsensed characters, or empty sounds: but we mean propositions contained in general terms, which convey as general ideas, not descending to particulars. The ideas are clear, so far as they go; only they do not reach far enough to satisfy curiosity. They are ideas of intellect, for the most part; like the ideas which we form of our own souls: for spiritual substance, at least, (if any substance,) falls not under imagination, but must be understood, rather than imagined. The same is the case with many abstract verities, in numbers especially; which are not the less verities for being purely intellectual, and beyond all imagery. Reason contemplates them, and clearly too, though fancy can lay no hold of them, to draw their picture in the mind. Such, I say, are our ideas of the divine Being, and of a Trinity in Unity; ideas of intellect, and general; intelligible as far as the thing is revealed, and assented to so far as intelligible. We understand the general truths, concerning a Father, Son, and Holy Ghost: we understand the general nature of an union and a distinction; and what we understand we believe. As to the minute particulars relating to the manner or modus of the thing, we understand them not: our ideas reach not to them, but stop short in the generals, as our faith also does. For our faith and our ideas keep pace with each other; and we believe nothing about particulars whereof nothing is revealed<sup>a</sup>, neither expressly nor consequentially.

Such a general assent as I have mentioned is what we give to the truth of the divine perfections, necessary existence, eternity, ubiquity, prescience, and the like<sup>b</sup>. Whatever obscurity or defect there is in our ideas of those divine attributes, we think it no good reason for denying either the general truths or the importance of them. So then, no just objection can be made against the importance of any doctrine from its mysterious nature. The most mysterious of all are in reality the most important; not because they are mysterious, but because they relate to things divine, which must of course be mysterious to weak mortals, and perhaps to all creatures whatever. But even mysterious doctrines

<sup>a</sup> See the subject of mysteries treated of more at large, either in my First Defence, Qu. xxi. vol. i. p. 453, &c. or in Norris's Account of Reason and Faith, p. 117, 118. or in Mr. Browne's have a bright side, as well as a dark one; and they are clear to look upon, though too deep to be seen through.

Lecture Sermons for Lady Moyer, p. 257—262.

<sup>b</sup> See my First Defence, Qu. xxi. vol. i. p. 451, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. xxi. p. 692.

It has been sometimes objected, that however clear the doctrine may seem to be to men of parts and learning, yet certainly it cannot be so to common Christians. But why not to common Christians as well as to others? It is as clear to them as most other high and divine things can be. It is as clear, for instance, as the divine eternity or omnipresence. Every common Christian professing Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to be so distinct as not to be one the other, and so united as to be one God, has as clear an idea of what he says, as when he prays, "Our Father " which art in heaven;" or when he repeats after the Psalmist, "Thou art about my path, and about my bed, and spiest out all " my ways<sup>c</sup>." And, I am persuaded, upon examination, he will be as able to give as good an account of the one as he will of the other. The thing is plain and intelligible in either case, but in the general only, not as to the particular manner. Ask how three are one, and probably both catechumen and catechist will be perfectly at a nonplus: or ask, how God is in heaven, and how about our path, or our bed, and they will both be equally confounded. But, by the way, let it be here considered, whether common Christians may not often have clearer ideas of those things, than the bolder and more inquisitive, because they are content to rest in generals, and to stop at what they understand, without darkening it afterwards by words without knowledge. The notion of eternity, for instance, is a clear notion enough to a common Christian: but to a person that perplexes himself with nice inquiries about succession, or past duration, that very first notion which in the general was clear, may become obscure, by his blinding perplexities with it. The like may be said of omnipresence; the general notion of it is competently clear: but when a man has been perplexing his thoughts with curious inquiries about a substantial or a virtual presence, about extension or non-extension, and the like; I question whether at length he may come away with so clear or just ideas of the main thing as may be found in any common Christian. So again as to divine fore-knowledge and free-will, they are both of them clearly understood, as far as they need be, by every plain Christian; while many a conceited scholar, by darkening the subject with too minute inquiries, almost loses the sight of it. In like manner, to apply these instances to our present purpose, common Christians may sometimes better preserve the true and right general notion of the doctrine of the Trinity, than the more learned inquirers: and it is observable, what Hilary of Poitiers, an honest and a knowing man of the fourth century, testifies, that the populace of that time, for the most part, kept the true and right faith in the Trinity<sup>d</sup>, when their ministers, several of them, by prying too far into it, had the misfortune to lose it.

<sup>c</sup> Psalm cxxxix. 2.

While I am treating of the case of common Christians, I cannot omit the mentioning an artifice much made use of by those who would depreciate the doctrine of the Trinity, as not clear enough to be an important article: they first enter into all the niceties and perplexities which subtle disputants have ever clogged the subject with, and then they ask, whether common Christians can be supposed to see through them. No, certainly: neither need they trouble their heads about them. It is one thing to understand the doctrine, and quite another to be masters of the controversy. It is not fair dealing with us, to pretend it necessary for every common Christian, if he believes in the Trinity, to form just conceptions of it in every minute particular: for, by the same argument, it might as well be pleaded, that they are not obliged to believe in God, nor indeed in any thing. God is without body, parts, or passions, according to the first article of our Church. How many minute perplexing inquiries might there not be raised upon the three particulars now mentioned! And who can assure us that common Christians may not be liable to entertain some wrong conceptions in every one of them? Must we therefore say that the general doctrine of the existence of a Deity is not clear enough to be important doctrine, or that common Christians are not bound to receive it as a necessary article of their faith? See how far such objections would carry us. But since these objections ought to have no weight at all in other parallel cases, or nearly parallel, they ought certainly to be the less regarded in respect to the doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity. Let but this doctrine have as fair usage as other Christian and important doctrines are allowed to have, and then I am persuaded there will be no pretence left for saying, that it is not a clear doctrine, clear in the general, clear in the main thing, to any Christian whatever. It is horrible misrepresentation of the case, to pretend as if we taught, that "the eternal interest of every ploughman or mechanic hangs on "his adjusting the sense of the terms, nature, person, essence, substance, subsistence, coequality, coessentiality, and the like." No; those are technical terms, most of them, proper to divines and scholars: and not only ploughmen and mechanics, but very great scholars too, lived and died in the conscientious belief of the doctrine of the Trinity, long before any of those terms came in. They are of use indeed for settling the controversy with greater accuracy among Divines, who understand such terms: but the doctrine itself is clear without them, and does not want them, but stands firm and unshaken, independent of them. Any plain man may easily conceive, that Father, Son, and Holy Ghost are properly divine, are not one the other, and yet are one God, by an intimate union; and that the Son in particular, being God and man, is one Christ. These prime verities, and whatsoever else is necessarily implied in them, may be conceived to be right; and whatsoever is contrary to them, or inconsistent with them, will of consequence be wrong. This is enough for any plain Christian to know or believe; and he is not ordinarily obliged to be more minute in his inquiries, or to understand scholastic terms. It is not to be expected that common Christians should be expert disputants in controversies of faith, any more than that they should be profound casuists in relation to practice: yet Christian practice is necessary to salvation, and so is Christian faith too; and the obligation to obey a general precept, or to believe a general truth, is not superseded or evacuated by a man's being unacquainted with terms of art, or by his being liable to mistake in some remote or minute circumstances belonging to the doctrine itself.

<sup>d</sup> Et hujus quidem usque adhuc impietatis fraude perficitur, ut jam sub Antichristi sacerdotibus Christi populus non occidat, dum hoc putant illi fidei esse quod vocis est. Audiunt Deum Christum; putant esse quod dicitur. Audiunt Filium Dei; pu-

tant in Dei nativitate inesse Dei veritatem. Audiunt ante tempora; putant id ipsum ante tempora esse quod semper est. Sanctiores aures plebis, quam corda sunt sacerdotum. Hilary. contr. Auxent. 1266. edit. Bened.

To make the thing yet plainer, let us take some general rule of Christian practice; the rule, suppose, of dealing with others as we would be dealt with: a rule of such importance, that, by our Lord's account of it, it is the sum and substance of the Law and the Prophets<sup>e</sup>. Surely then, it is a rule designed for common ¶ Matt. vii. 12.

Christians, and such as both deserves and requires their most careful notice. Next, let us view this rule under all its minutenesses or particularities; its distinctions, limitations, and explications, with which it is dressed out by knowing and able Divines<sup>f</sup>. Observe thereupon, what an operose business is made of this so plain and familiar rule, what pains are taken to clear it of all seeming repugnancies, to make it reasonable, to make it certain, to make it practicable, and to guard it most effectually against the many possible ways, whereby it may be misconstrued, eluded, perverted, frustrated. Are common Christians equal to all those niceties, or are they able to grasp them? I conceive, not. And yet I dare be confident that a plain unlettered man, of tolerable sense, and who has not a mind to deceive himself, might be safely trusted with the naked rule, and would but seldom, if ever, either misunderstand it (so far as concerns his own case) or misapply it. He would keep the plain even road, and would scarce believe the man that should tell him that it was strewed with thorns, or that hundreds had been or might be either embarrassed in it or bewildered by it. The same thing is true with respect to the general doctrine of the Trinity. For though there are many possible ways of mistaking it, or perverting it, (as there are many crooked lines to one straight,) and it concerns Divines to guard minutely against all; yet less may suffice for common Christians; ordinarily, I mean, at least. The right faith in the Trinity is short and plain; and whatever crosses upon it is wrong: Index est rectum sui, et obliqui; truth shews itself, and is for the most part to every honest mind a guard sufficient against the mazes of error.

I have dwelt the longer upon this article, because the objection about common Christians appears a popular and plausible one, and is often repeated in this cause, though there is really no weight in it. The author of the Sober and Charitable Disquisition need not be in pain for common Christians, lest they should not "have skill enough to unite the two natures in Christ "without confounding them, or dividing the Person, in their "apprehensions" They will as easily conceive that God and man is one Christ, as that soul and body is one man; and they need not look further. Without troubling themselves at all with the names either of natures or persons, they may joyfully and thankfully remember, that he "who is over all God blessed for "ever<sup>h</sup>," became a man for their sakes, and died for them, in order to bring them to God. What is there in all this that should either offend or perplex, or should not rather greatly edify common Christians? They may be "more accurate in their "thoughts on this head, than the great patriarch and abbot "Nestorius and Eutyches<sup>i</sup>," (for they were not both patriarchs, as this author styles them,) because they will indulge their fancies less, and rest in the general truth, without drawing a false modus, or any modus upon it, either to corrupt or to obscure it: they will abide in the true doctrine, without defiling it (as those great men did) with over officious and presumptuous speculations. It may be allowed, that "common Christians have "but very little apprehension<sup>k</sup>" of some minute or remote considerations given in by way of answer to as minute and remote objections, in order to clear the doctrine in every punctilio: and in like manner, they have but very little apprehension of several such remote considerations thrown in by Divines, in their disputes with Atheists or Deists, in order to clear the doctrine of the divine being and attributes, or of the authority of Scripture, and to make every thing at length conformable and consistent. But what then? Does it therefore follow, that common Christians may not believe in God, or in God's word, or that such belief is not important? Common Christians believe enough, if they believe the main things under a general view, without branching them out into all the minute particulars which depend upon them or belong to them. Let Divines see that every article of faith is clear and consistent throughout, when traversed as far as the acutest objector can carry it: but let common Christians be content with every article in its native simplicity, as laid down in Scripture for edification of the faithful, and not as it appears in controversial books, or confessions, with all its armour about it, for the conviction or confusion of gainsayers. But I am afraid I have exceeded on this head, and have overburdened the reader. Upon the whole, the doctrine of the Trinity must be allowed to be sufficiently clear, as to the matter of it.

<sup>f</sup> See particularly Archbishop Tillotson's Sermon on Matt. vii. 12. separately published in 1709, and Collier's

Essay of Honesty, part iv. p. 56, &c.
<sup>g</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 22.

2. The next consideration is, that it is clear also, as to the proofs upon which it rests: it may be clearly proved, as well as clearly conceived. Indeed, the truth of the doctrine ought to be supposed in our present question, as previously known and admitted. Accordingly, our remonstrant brethren, who first disputed the importance of our doctrine, made no scruple of allowing the truth of it, as I have before hinted. They allowed the Scripture proofs to be so far clear, as to oblige us to admit the doctrine for a certain truth<sup>1</sup>. Neither are we much beholden to them for this seeming courtesy, since the proofs are so numerous and so cogent, that every ingenuous and sensible man must plainly see, that were Scripture alone to decide the question, and no false philosophy or metaphysics brought in to confound or perplex it, there could scarce be any room left for debate about it. I do not mean that many Scripture texts may not be speciously urged on the other side: but what I mean is, that upon the summing up of the evidence on both sides, and after balancing the whole account, the advantage is so plainly ours, according to all the approved rules of grammar or criticism, that there is nothing at all left on the other side, whereby to turn the scale, except it be some pretended absurdity, or absurdities, in point of reason, charged upon us, by the help of dialectical or metaphysical subtilities; which yet, after all, are mere fallacy and sophistry, and have no real strength in them. We must therefore insist upon it as certain fact, that our doctrine is clear enough, with respect to the Scripture evidences produced for it. Scripture, in its plain, natural, obvious, unforced meaning, says it, and reason does not gainsay it: upon these two pillars our cause rests. Upon this bottom Bishop Bull fixes it: "The Antitrinitarians can never produce a demonstrative reason to prove that "it cannot be, and divine revelation assures us that so it is<sup>m</sup>." To the same purpose speaks Mr. Howe: "That there is a "Trinity in the Godhead, of Father, Son, (or Word,) and Holy "Ghost, is the plain obvious sense of so many Scriptures, that "it apparently tends to frustrate the design of the whole "Scripture revelation, and to make it useless, not to admit this "Trinity, or otherwise to understand such Scriptures<sup>n</sup>." In

<sup>h</sup> Rom. ix. 5.

<sup>i</sup> See Sober and Charitable &c. p. 22.

<sup>k</sup> Ibid. p. 23.

<sup>1</sup> Hinc colligo, mirum videri non debere, si tribus hisce personis una eademque natura divina tribuatur, cum iis scriptura divina, istas perfectiones, quæ naturæ divinæ propriæ snnt, tam exerte attribuat. Episcop.

Institut. lib. iv. sect. 2. cap. 32. p. 333.

<sup>m</sup> Bull, Posth. Works, vol. iii. p. 833.

<sup>n</sup> Howe's Calm Discourse of the Trinity in the Godhead, p. 136, 137.

like manner Dr. Burnet of the Charter-House, a noted man, and known to have had as little of a bigot in him as any one, says thus: "We are obliged, according to that light which God hath vouchsafed to us in the dispensation of the Gospel, to believe and profess that Jesus of Nazareth is the Messiah, and likewise God. If we mistake in this faith, the mistake is so far from being voluntary, that it is inevitable. For we follow, according to the best of our apprehension, the guides which God hath given us, St. John, and Paul the Apostle. To these sacred writers we assent and adhere, interpreting them according to the genuine force and received use of words: for neither Christ nor the abovesaid writers have told us, that those sacred Oracles were written in any other style, or that they were to be interpreted in any other manner<sup>o</sup>."

The late learned Professor Franck, of Halle in Saxony, speaking to the Antitrinitarians, expresses himself thus: "Though you allow the Scriptures of the New Testament, you nevertheless boldly and arrogantly contradict the truth, clearly shining before your eyes, and express testimonies proposed in such simple and plain words, that even a child may read and understand them<sup>p</sup>."

I cite these testimonies, not in the way of authority, but only to give the reader a clearer idea of what the Trinitarians go upon: for they are all, so far, in the same strain, and these testimonies are offered only as samples, whereby to judge of the rest. Any indifferent stander-by may easily perceive what, for the most part, has led the Christian world to contend earnestly for the doctrine of the Trinity; namely, a conscientious dread of dishonouring him whom God the Father has commanded them to honour even as himself, a profound reverence for sacred Writ, and an invincible persuasion that those Scriptures cannot, without the utmost violence, and most daring presumption, be interpreted otherwise than they interpret them. It would be tedious here to cite the particular texts which we ground our faith upon; and it would be highly improper to fetch in the whole dispute about the truth of the doctrine into this other debate, which concerns only the importance of it. Therefore referring the readers for the truth of the doctrine to other treatises lately printed, in great abundance, and well known, I shall content myself here with hinting two general arguments or considerations, such as may give the readers some notion of the irresistible force of our Scripture proofs in this cause.

<sup>o</sup> Judgment of Dr. Thomas Burnet, p. 11, 12. printed for Roberts, 1732. See the Original, de Fid. et Offic. cap. viii. p. 134. And compare my seventh Sermon, vol. ii. p. 166, 167, 168.

<sup>p</sup> Franck's Christus sacræ Scripturæ Nucleus, p. 181, 182. translated out of German: printed by Downing, 1732.

1. One is, that the proofs which we insist upon cannot be evaded by any approved rules of language or criticism, but the last resort of our opposers commonly is to some philosophical principle, some pretended reason, drawn from the supposed nature of the thing, rather than from the Scripture style, or from the force of Scripture expressions. I have observed elsewhere<sup>q</sup>, that such has been the method of eluding John i. 1. and several other texts, which are full and express as possible, for the real and proper divinity of our Lord. They are eluded, I say, upon this principle, that person and intelligent being are equivalent and reciprocal; or that there can be no medium between Tritheism and Sabellianism, or by something else of like kind: which is running off from the question about the Scriptural proof of the doctrine, to the natural possibility of the thing; and is not submitting to the obvious and apparent sense of sacred Writ, but is tantamount to saying, that no Scriptures can prove it: an evasion which might equally serve for any texts whatever, were they ever so numerous, plain, and express. This kind of conduct on the opposite side, manifestly shews how hard they are pressed upon the foot of Scripture; when, in the last result, they remove the cause from Scripture to philosophy, from considerations of language, and style, and propriety of expression, to a foreign consideration, the rationale of the thing. This is a plain token that the letter is against them; only they take the reason of the thing to plead so much in their favour, that it ought to overrule any force of expression. So they lay the main stress upon metaphysical subtilties<sup>r</sup>; that is to say, upon human conjectures about things naturally unsearchable, in opposition to the express declarations of the word of God: which, by the way, is first setting up a false measure of truth; and, next, is making a new rule of faith. It is a false measure of truth to make human conception the standard of it, since there may be a thousand or ten thousand verities, which we cannot account for, or explain the manner of: and it is making a new rule of faith, if we resolve to believe nothing but what we can comprehend; or if in cases where we can see no plain contradiction or absurdity, we choose to make the letter of Scripture bend to our own conceptions, rather than submit our wisdom to the wisdom of God. But this is not the point which I am now upon; and so it suffices to have briefly hinted it in passing. The use which I intended of the observation in this place, was to intimate the strength of our Scripture proofs, which drive the adversaries to such extremities.

<sup>q</sup> Defence, Qu. xxii. vol. i. p. 464. Second Defence, Qu. xxii. vol. ii. p. 701, &c.

<sup>r</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 464, &c. 554. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 384, 432, 468, 697, 701, 702.

2. Another yet more affecting and sensible argument of the same thing is, that our antagonists, in eluding the Scripture proofs of the divinity of God the Son, have scarce left themselves any for the divinity even of God the Father; indeed none but what by the same artificial way of eluding may be evaded and frustrated, as well as the other. This is a consideration of great weight, which has been pressed upon them over and over<sup>s</sup>, and has never yet received a satisfactory answer. So it remains as a standing evidence of the glaring force of our Scripture proofs, and will ever remain so.

Upon the whole then, the doctrine of the Trinity must be acknowledged clear enough with respect to the Scripture proofs upon which it stands; provided always, that there is nothing plainly repugnant or contradictory in the notion. For, on the other hand, it must be allowed, that were the thing plainly absurd or impossible, no Scriptures could prove it; but, in such a case, we should be obliged either to deny the authority of such Scriptures, (in whole, or in part,) or to have recourse to trope or figure, or any possible interpretation to solve the difficulty. This is not the case here: and therefore since the doctrine cannot be proved to be impossible in the nature of the thing, it is abundantly proved from Scripture to be both possible and true. Reason never has, never can demonstrate the thing to be impossible: after repeated trials, 1400 years upwards and more, and all to no purpose, that should now be looked upon as a ruled point<sup>t</sup>. I conclude then, from what has been offered in this chapter, that the doctrine of the Trinity is clear enough to be important, both with respect to the matter of it, and the

<sup>s</sup> Defence, vol. i. p. 341. See: Defence, vol. ii. p. 565, &c. The Defence, vol. iii. p. 46, &c. Compa Abbadie on Christ's Divinity, p. 24

<sup>t</sup> See the state of the question,

Scripture proofs upon which it stands : and therefore its pretended obscurity, or uncertainty, can be no sufficient reason for throwing it off as a slight or indifferent article, not worth contending for, or insisting upon, as an essential of faith, and a term of Christian communion.

CHAP. II.

Shewing, that the same Doctrine is no SPECULATIVE or NOTIONAL thing, but strictly PRACTICAL, and closely interwoven with the Principles of the Christian Life.

A RIGHT knowledge of God, and a practice conformable to it, and both in order to a more complete and blissful enjoyment, are not speculative or indifferent matters, but matters properly practical, and of infinite concernment. If religious practice in any measure depends upon a previous knowledge of God, (as undoubtedly it does,) then certainly, for the like reason, the perfection of that practice depends upon the perfection of such knowledge. A general and confuse notion of God may produce as general and confuse rules of demeanour towards him ; while a more particular and explicit apprehension of the Deity will of course produce a more particular and explicit service. It is true, where God has not afforded such distinct knowledge, a less perfect service may and must suffice ; but wherever much is given much will be required, and from peculiar circumstances will arise peculiar obligations. If God be Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, the duties owing to God will be duties owing under that trine distinction ; which must be paid accordingly : and whoever leaves out any of the three out of his idea of God, comes so far short of honouring God perfectly, and of serving him in proportion to the manifestations made of him. Supposing our doctrine true, (as we are now to suppose,) there will be duties proper to be paid to the Father as Father, and to the Son as Son, and to the Holy Ghost as the eternal Spirit of both ; duties correspondent to their distinct offices and personalities, besides the duties common to all three, considered as one God. In short, the specification of our worship, and the right direction of it, are nearly concerned in this doctrine : and therefore, if worship be a practical matter, this doctrine also is practical, and not a point of mere speculation<sup>u</sup>. That worship is a practical thing, I suppose no man of sense will dispute; or if any one does, it must be a dispute only about words, and not affecting the main thing: wherefore, it must be altogether wrong to imagine, that the doctrine of the Trinity is purely notional, or has no connection with practice<sup>x</sup>. If the doctrine be true, it is sacrilege, and great impiety, in every Christian to refuse to worship Father, Son, or Holy Ghost: but if the doctrine be false, it is polytheism and idolatry to pay religious worship to any person but the Father only. So much depends upon this single article.

<sup>u</sup> See Dr. Webster's introductory Discourses to Maimburg's History of Arianism, p. 43, &c.

The author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition labours this point extremely, for several pages together<sup>y</sup>, and has perhaps said as much and as well as the cause will admit of. He endeavours to clear the Arian worshippers of Christ from formal polytheism; and to retort the charge upon the orthodox worshippers; and so upon consideration that both parties may mean well, or in some respects may both offend, they may consent to bear with each other, and to unite in Christian fellowship together. But, in my humble opinion, the thought is wide, and the project impracticable. There is no patching up any lasting or rational agreement of that kind, while the parties cannot unite so much as in the object of divine worship. He allows, that the opposers of Christ's Divinity, (properly so called,) can pay him no more than inferior worship, such as if tendered to God would manifestly dishonour and degrade him, would directly deny him to have divine perfections, and, instead of honouring him as God, would degrade him into somewhat that is not God<sup>z</sup>. Can those then who believe Christ to be God, and who honour him as such, ever think it reasonable or pious, to hold communion with men who, by what they call inferior worship, do thus manifestly dishonour and degrade their God and Saviour, denying his divine perfections, degrading him into somewhat that is not God? Can the Catholic believers ever suffer or connive at such affronts offered (as they must esteem them) to God blessed for ever?

<sup>x</sup> Nihil falsius est ea Remonstrantium calumnia, qua articulum de S. S. Trinitate ullum ad praxin usum habere inficiantur. Omnis doctrina veritatis, secundum pietatem est. Tit. i. 1. Et hæc tam notabilis, tam fundamentalis, non esset? Imo totius fidei, totius veræ religionis scaturigo est. — Nulla etiam religio est, nisi quis verum Deum colat: non colit verum Deum, sed cerebri sui figmentum, qui non adorat in æquali divinitatis majestate, Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum. I nunc, et doctrinam eam ad praxin inutilem esse clama, sine qua nulla fidei aut pietatis Christianæ praxis esse potest. Wit-sius in Symb. Apost. p. 76.

<sup>y</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 4—23. <sup>z</sup> Ibid. p. 8, 9.

How can they ever justify either to God, or to the world, or to their own consciences, such a guilty neutrality in an affair of the highest consequence, in an article of the last importance? Mutual forbearance in doubtful points of speculative opinion, is very becoming fallible men, in consideration of our common frailty : but it is unreasonable, and morally impracticable, to come to any composition, where the parties differ so widely, and in so material a concern, as the object of divine worship. Religious men will be zealous for the honour of their Lord God, because they know that they ought to be so ; neither will they nor can they countenance any coldness or indifference in so weighty a concern. Excessive heats perhaps may sometimes arise in such cases ; for so long as religion is held in esteem, and believed to be worth the contending for, there must be contests about it, which may sometimes rise too high : but it is an error on the right hand, and much to be preferred to a cold indifference ; as a strong athletic constitution, though subject sometimes to fevers, is yet vastly preferable to a constant lethargy. To return, the sum is, that the point of divine worship is a critical point, a difficulty which cannot be got over, while both sides retain their respective principles ; one looking upon the Son and Holy Ghost as creatures, and the other esteeming them as one God with the Father. For supposing that both parties were to join in the same solemn acts of outward worship offered to Christ, (for that he ought to be worshipped both sides allow,) yet since the Catholic side conceive that those religious acts are on the other side defiled by an irreligious meaning, and amount rather to a solemn mockery of their God and Saviour, than to a respectful remembrance of him ; and that they are in reality, though not intentionally, flat polytheism and idolatry ; I say, while the Catholic believers are so persuaded, they cannot in prudence or in conscience, in piety to God or charity to men, consent to such known defilements of their solemn service ; because it would be directly partaking in other men's sins. If it be said, that they need not judge all creature-worship to be polytheism and idolatry ; I answer, they cannot avoid it, while they consider either Scripture itself, or the universal suffrage of antiquity in the best and purest ages. If it be further said, that they need not however think so hardly of creature-worshippers, as to charge them with guilt, since they may intend well ; I answer, that a good intention is not sufficient to warrant an ill thing : besides that, were they ever so guiltless, yet those of the contrary persuasion could not be so in countenancing by their own communion, what they cannot but look upon as great impiety and profanation. So, turn we this matter which way we will, the point of worship must be a parting point betwixt them, while they retain their opposite sentiments, with regard to the strict and proper Divinity of Christ.

I shall not here enter into the debate about creature-worship, having distinctly and fully considered it elsewhere <sup>a</sup>: besides, that I may properly wave it, as it is wide and foreign to the cause now in hand. For whether such creature-worship be right or wrong, those that believe in Christ as a divine Person cannot join with those that worship him under the notion of a creature, and do not worship him as divine; because, it has been before intimated, such inferior worship, (whatever else we call it) is dishonouring and degrading him, and cannot but be rejected with abhorrence by all that seriously believe him to be really and strictly God.

As to what the author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition objects, that possibly some of our own people, who believe Christ to be God, may yet consider him merely as Man, or as Mediator <sup>b</sup>, and not as God, in their acts of worship, it may be purely a surmise: but however the fact stands, there is no argument in it. We cannot answer for vulgar Christians, as to the notions they may possibly entertain even of God the Father in their worship of him; neither can we be certain, whether sometimes they rise higher than those of an Anthropomorphite. But I presume, if any vulgar Christians ignorantly or innocently mistake, they are very willing to be set right by their more knowing guides, or by other sensible friends: which makes their case widely different from that of those who take upon them to justify creature worship upon principle, and who separate Christ from the one Godhead in the worship of him, knowingly, and out of set purpose and design. We are not involved in guilt, merely by communicating with persons, whose errors (though perhaps great)

<sup>a</sup> Defence, vol. i. Qu. xvi. p. 408. &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. xvi. p. 656, &c. Compare Bull's Primitiva et Apostol. Traditio, c. vi. p. 386, &c. Bishop Smalbrooke's Idolatry charged on Arianism. Mr. Abr. Taylor's True

Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, p. 69, 448, &c. Dr. Bishop's Sermons, p. 271—281. Archbishop Tillotson's Sermons, vol. i. p. 547, &c. fol. edit.

<sup>b</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 21, 22, 23.

we know nothing of, or who probably would correct them upon better instruction, or the first gentle admonition. Guilt is contracted by communicating with those who openly and resolutely corrupt the faith (knowingly or ignorantly) in very important articles. To join with such persons, is partaking in their impiety: it is not charity, but men-pleasing, and betraying a disregard for the honour of God. But this general question will come over again, and will be more fully debated in a proper place.

Enough has been said to shew, that Christian-worship is very nearly concerned in the question about the Trinity; and therefore the doctrine is strictly practical, and has a close connection with the Christian life. I declined entering into the main debate about creature-worship, for the reasons above hinted. Yet because the author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition has advanced some things upon that article, which every reader may not know how to answer, I shall suggest a few considerations here by the way, to serve as hints or heads of solution to the difficulties objected.

1. If that gentleman means to say, that the outward acts of civil homage and religious worship are so equivocal and ambiguous, that there is no way left to distinguish them, it is disputing against fact, and amounts to telling us, that no one can distinguish in a case where no one can easily mistake, or ever has been mistaken. Civil homage is distinguishable from religious worship, by the circumstances<sup>c</sup> always, and often by the nature of the acts themselves. That burning incense to Daniel<sup>d</sup> was merely civil respect, will not be easily proved: neither will the example of an idolatrous king, who would have done as much to an image, be sufficient to justify it; though the author speaks of it<sup>e</sup>, as if both these points were indisputable.

2. Those outward acts, so and so circumstantiated, as to become religious worship, are what God has appropriated to the Jehovah, to the true God, in the holy Scriptures of the Old Testament, as exterior and visible acknowledgments of the divine sovereignty over all creatures, and of the dependence which creatures have upon their Creator: for the reasons which God insists upon, why he, and he only, is to be worshipped, are such as exclude all creatures whatever, viz. his being Jehovah, Creator,

<sup>c</sup> See Stillingfleet's Defence of the Discourse concerning Idolatry in Works, vol. v. p. 344, 357.

<sup>d</sup> Dan. ii. 46.

<sup>e</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 6.

Sustainer, Preserver of all things<sup>f</sup>. 3. To pay these exterior services, once so appropriated to God, to any creature, is idolizing the creature, or deifying the creature, and is both idolatry and polytheism. 4. Therefore the paying such exterior religious services to Christ, considered as a creature, must, according to the whole tenor of the Old Testament, be plain idolatry and polytheism. 5. The same rule for religious worship obtains under the New Testament, as before under the Old: which appears, as from several other places, so particularly from our Lord's answer to Satans, and from the angel's admonitions to St. John in the Revelations<sup>h</sup>.

The author of Sober and Charitable &c. asks, why the paying worship to an invisible Being must imply its having divine perfections, and therefore must be divine worship<sup>i</sup>? The reason is, because God has appropriated all such addresses, so and so circumstantiated, to the one Lord Jehovah; thereby making them (if they were not in their own nature before) a virtual recognition of divine perfections<sup>k</sup>; and therefore they interpretatively amount to divine worship. He adds, that "this is "proving the point, by taking it for granted, that none but "God is to be worshipped." No, but it is proving the point in the best manner, and by the strongest evidences, namely, express Scripture evidences, all the way from Genesis down to the Revelations, of such appropriation as hath been mentioned. In short then, God has so appropriated religious worship, as to exclude all creatures from any share in it: therefore all religious worship is divine worship; and therefore to worship Christ, under the notion of a creature, is idolatry and polytheism. So stands this matter, which I have but briefly hinted, to take off this author's exceptions; referring the reader, as above, to other treatises, where the subject is considered at large. Now I return to the point I was upon, the practical nature of the doctrine of the Trinity.

Besides the influence which this doctrine has upon worship, it may be considered further in a more general view, as tending to form within our minds dispositions proper for such state and cir-

<sup>f</sup> Isaiah xl. xlv. 5, 6, 7. 2 Kings xix. 15. Jer. x. 10, 11, 12. Compare my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 43, 44.

<sup>g</sup> Matt. iv. 10.

<sup>h</sup> Rev. xix. 10. xxii. 9. See those texts fully explained in Bishop Bull's

Primitiva et Apostolica Traditio, c. vi. p. 388.

<sup>i</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 8.

<sup>k</sup> See preface to my Sermons, vol. ii.

cumstances as we are to expect hereafter. It is an allowed truth, that the good dispositions which men contract in this life are their qualifications for the happiness of the life to come ; and that the more refined and raised such their good dispositions are, the more fitly qualified they are for the higher degrees of blessedness in heaven. Put the case then, that the three Persons of the Trinity are equally divine, and that a man has been trained up to esteem them accordingly, it cannot be doubted but that he goes out of the world more fitly disposed, in that respect, to be taken into their friendship, and best qualified (other circumstances being equal) for the beatific enjoyment. Consequently, the belief of the doctrine of the Trinity (supposing it true) is no slight or insignificant theory, no barren notion or speculation ; since it has a direct influence upon the dispositions of our minds here, and upon our happiness hereafter. I make not this an argument of the truth of the doctrine, (for that is not the point I am now upon,) but of the importance of it, after admitting it for a sacred truth : and I add, that if it may have such influence upon us, in creating proper dispositions, that comes to the same as to say, that it raises and improves our virtues, and all virtue is practical.

A further consideration of like kind may be drawn from the influence which the same doctrine has upon the motives to Christian practice. There are no two motives more affecting or more endearing, or more apt to work upon ingenuous minds, than the love of God the Father in sending his beloved Son to redeem us, and the love and condescension of our blessed Lord, in submitting to be so sent. "God so loved the world, that he gave "his only begotten Son<sup>1</sup>," &c. "In this was manifested the "love of God towards us, because that God sent his only "begotten Son into the world, that we might live through "him<sup>m</sup>." We see here what a stress and emphasis is laid, not merely upon this, that life, eternal life, is the benefit bestowed, but that it is conveyed in such a manner, and by such endearing means, by the only begotten Son. The Socinians, when pressed upon this article, do nothing but trifle and shuffle with us : they fall to magnifying the love of God, in giving us so high, so inestimable a blessing, as life eternal. Very true ; but does not Scripture, besides that, lay a particular emphasis upon the means made use of in conveying the grant ? And how is this emphasis made out upon their hypothesis, that Christ is a mere man? But suppose him a creature, and the very first and highest of all creatures, before he came down from heaven; yet neither does that supposition sufficiently answer the purpose. For, considering how honourable the service was, and how unconceivably vast and large the reward for it, it might more properly be said, that God so loved his Son, that he sent him into the world, in order to prefer him to a kind of rivalry with himself, to advance him to divine honours, to make the whole creation bow before him, and pay him homage and obeisance<sup>n</sup>: and all this as the reward of his sufferings of a few years; great indeed, but not apparently greater than many of his disciples suffered after him, nor “worthy to be compared with the glory<sup>o</sup>” that shall accrue to every good Christian, much less with that immense, that incredible glory which was to accrue to him<sup>p</sup>. Now to me it seems, that the supposing Christ a mere creature, is a thought which mightily lessens the force of the Scripture expressions representing God’s sending his Son as an act of stupendous love to man, upon account of the dignity of the Person by whom that salvation was to be wrought: so that the denying the Divinity of Christ robs us in part of one of the most endearing and affecting motives to the Christian life. Wherefore in this view also, the doctrine of the Trinity, if true, is both important and practical, as it raises the motives upon which Christian practice is built. I do not say, there would be no force in the motive considered in an Arian view, and supposing Christ to have been a most excellent creature: but the force of it would be considerably less upon that supposition; and therefore, if the doctrine be a truth, it is a truth of some moment in a view to practice, as raising and enforcing the motives beyond what the other hypothesis does.

<sup>1</sup> John iii. 16.

<sup>m</sup> John iv. 9.

So again, the love of Christ towards mankind appears in a

<sup>n</sup> Phil. ii. 10. Rev. v. 11, 12, 13. vii. 10.

<sup>o</sup> Rom. viii. 18.

<sup>p</sup> Equidem rem attentius perpendenti liquebit, ex hypothesi sive Sociniana, sive Ariana, Deum in hoc negotio amorem et dilectionem suam potius in illum ipsum Filium, quam erga nos homines ostendisse. Quid enim? Is qui Christus dicitur, ex mera Dei eùdokia et beneplacito in eam gratam electus est, ut post brevem hic in terris Deo præstitam obedientiam, ex puro puto homine juxta Socinistas, sive ex mera et mutabili creatura, ut Ario-manitæ dicunt, Deus ipse fieret, ac divinos honores, non modo a nobis hominibus, sed etiam ab ipsis angelis atque archangelis sibi tribuendos assequeretur, adeoque in alias creaturas omnes dominium atque imperium obtineret. Bull. Judic. Eccl. Cathol. cap. v. p. 313.

much clearer and stronger light upon the Trinitarian principles, than upon the Antitrinitarian. For if Christ was in the form of God, equal with God, and very God, it was then an act of infinite love and condescension in him to become man, and die for us: but if he was no more than a creature, it was no surprising condescension to embark in a work so glorious, such as being the Saviour of mankind, and such as would advance him to be Lord and Judge of the world, to be admired, revered, and adored both by men and angels, God himself also glorifying him, and sounding forth his praises through the utmost limits of the universe. Where is the condescension of a creature's submitting to be thus highly honoured? Or what creature could there be, that could modestly aspire to it, or might not think it much above his pretensions or highest ambition? In short, "to become " man, to suffer and die for the redemption of the world, and to " be made the Lord and Judge both of the quick and of the " dead, can be an act of condescending love and goodness only in " God. So that to deny the Divinity of Christ alters the very " foundations of Christianity, and destroys all the powerful argu- " ments of the love, humility, and condescension of our Lord, " which are the peculiar motives of the Gospel." If either the work of redemption was too big for a creature to engage in, or if the honours attending it were too high for a creature to aspire after, then certainly the very notion of condescension is sunk and lost, upon every hypothesis which does not make Christ truly ¶ Addo, neque ipsius Filii Dei unigeniti amorem et charitatem, ergo nos homines (quæ etiam magnifice passim celebratur in S. Scripturis, ac maxime in loco illo Epistolæ ad Ephes. iii. 18, 19.) clare elucere, nisi concipiamus Filium Dei qui ante sæcula ex Patre genitus est, per quem omnia facta sunt, qui propter nos homines, et propter nostram salutem, descendit de cælis et incarnatus est, &c. At vero hoc modo — Filii Dei eminentissima in figmentum suum dilectio —, clarissime conspicitur. Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. v. p. 311.

† Sherlock's Vindication of the Defence of Stillingfleet, chap. v. p. 268.

§ Οἰκονομία, quæ ipsi tribuitur, θεολογίαν necessario supponit, ipsamque omnino statuit. Quid enim? Messiam sive Christum prædicant sacræ nostræ literæ et credere nos profiteremur om-nes, qui sit animarum sospitator, qui nobis sit sapientia, justitia, sanctificatio, et redemptio —, qui preces suorum, ubivis sacrosanctum ejus nomen invocantium, illico exaudiat —, qui Ecclesiæ suæ per universum terrarum orbem disseminatæ, semper præsto sit —, qui Deo Patri. σύνθρονον, et in eadem sede collocatus sit —. Qui denique, in exitu mundi, immensa gloria et majestate refulgens, angelis ministris stipatus, veniet orbem judicaturus, non modo facta omnia, sed et cordis secreta omnium quotquot fuerunt hominum in lucem proditurus, &c. Hæc omnia in purum hominem, aut creaturam aliquam competere? Fidenter dico, qui ita sentiat, non modo contra fidem, sed et rationem ipsam insanire. Bull. Judic. Eccl. Cath. cap. i. p. 291, 292.

and properly God, God eternal. I am very sensible, that while I am arguing for the importance of the doctrine, I may seem at the same time to be pleading for the truth of it, and so to run unawares into the other question. But the two questions are so nearly allied, that I know not sometimes how to avoid it. The same considerations generally which prove one, must of course obliquely glance at the other also; and every Scripture argument, which intimates the use and importance of the doctrine, must at least tacitly suppose and insinuate the truth of it, and so in effect prove both in one. If Scripture has laid down motives which are not naturally or reasonably accounted for, or understood, but upon the supposition of the truth of such a doctrine, then both the doctrine itself and the practical nature of it are at the same time insinuated: which I mention here once for all, to prevent confusion, and now proceed to what remains.

The satisfaction or propitiation for the sins of the world, made by Christ, is of great importance to the Christian life, and seems also to have a close connection with the doctrine of the Trinity. The truth of the satisfaction, and the necessity there was for it, may be substantially proved a posteriori from Scripture itself, independent of the doctrine of the Trinity. But after proceeding so far, it will be difficult to clear and extricate that Scripture doctrine, without admitting this other also: because it is not reasonable to think that any creature could do more than was his bounden duty to do upon God's requiring it; or that he could by any services or sufferings attain to such a degree of merit, as should atone for a world of sinners; or that he should be intrusted with such an office (supposing him otherwise equal to it) as would of course draw after it the adoration and homage both of men and angels. The question properly here, is not, whether any thing less than God could pay an infinite satisfaction, but whether a creature could pay any, or could merit at all. If it be said, that God might accept it as he pleased, it may be said likewise, upon the same principle, that he might accept the blood of bulls or of goats. Yet the Apostle tells us, that "it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins<sup>u</sup>:" which words appear to resolve the satisfaction not merely into God's free acceptance, but into the intrinsic value of the sacrifice. And while we rest it upon that foot, I do not see why we may not say, that it is not possible for the blood of any creature to take away the sins of the world, since no creature can do more than his duty, nor can have any stock of merit to spare for other creatures. In this light, the Scripture doctrine of the satisfaction infers the Divinity of him that made it: and hence it is, that those who have denied our Lord's proper Divinity have commonly gone on to deny any proper satisfaction also; or while they have admitted it in words or in name, (as they admit also Christ's Divinity,) they have denied the thing. Scripture itself seems to resolve the satisfaction into the Divinity of the Person suffering. It was Jehovah that was pierced<sup>x</sup>. It was God that purchased the Church with his own blood<sup>y</sup>: it was ὁ δεσπότης, the high Lord that bought us<sup>z</sup>: it was the Lord of glory that was crucified<sup>a</sup>. And indeed it is unintelligible, how the blood of a creature should make any proper atonement or expiation for sin, as before intimated. This again is another of those arguments, or considerations, which at once insinuate both the truth of our doctrine and the importance of it. However, if Scripture otherwise testifies that Christ is properly God, and if the same Scriptures elsewhere, independently of our present argument, declare that Christ has atoned for us; then from these two propositions put together results this third, that a divine Person has satisfied for us: consequently, whosoever destroys the Divinity of Christ, justly so called, does at the same time destroy the true notion of the satisfaction made by him. Hence it appears, at the lowest, that the doctrine of the Trinity involves several other important doctrines of Christianity with it, and gives another kind of turn and significancy to them, than what they would have without it: and therefore, most undoubtedly, it is no barren speculation, no indifferent or slight matter, but a doctrine of the foundation, nearly affecting the very vitals of Christianity, and the Christian life.

<sup>t</sup> See a late rational and judicious discourse upon the subject, entitled, Jesus Christ the Mediator between

God and Man, printed for J. Noon, 1732.

<sup>u</sup> Hebrews x. 4.

The author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition has spent several pages<sup>b</sup>, to invalidate the argument drawn from the common doctrine of the satisfaction; and so I must stop for a while to examine what he says. He thinks it cannot be proved,

<sup>x</sup> Zechar. xii. 10. compared with John xix. 37.

<sup>y</sup> Acts xv. 28. For the reading, consult Mills in loc.

<sup>z</sup> 2 Peter ii. 1. See Taylor's True that "none but God could make such satisfaction<sup>c</sup>." But I conceive, it may be proved from the nature of the thing, that no creature could merit; and from Scripture, that he who made the satisfaction is God, is Jehovah: and these two considerations taken together do amount to what we pretend to. He himself allows, the truth of our doctrine once proved, as to God's being sacrificed, the consequence to be indisputable, that it "was some way or other necessary<sup>cc</sup>." This indeed is not the whole of what we are able to prove, as may appear from what hath been said: but even this is sufficient to our present purpose; namely, that if our doctrine is true, it must be important, because of the other important doctrines which hang upon it. Therefore the doctrine of the Trinity is no speculative opinion of slight value or significancy. If it be true, it is worth contending for, and earnestly too.

Scripture Doctrine, p. 391, &c.

<sup>a</sup> 1 Cor. ii. 8.

<sup>b</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 24—35.

He asks, whether we are sure, "that no being inferior to God " could make full amends to divine justice<sup>d</sup>?" We conceive, with very good reason, that no creature could merit with God, or do works of supererogation. I pass over what he observes about infinite satisfaction<sup>e</sup>, not affecting the question as here by me stated. He asks, how we can be sure, that God "cannot accept " of the sacrifice of the best and most excellent of created " beings?" I say not, what God can or cannot accept: I know nothing a priori about it. But Scripture, as before observed, rests not this matter upon the foot of divine acceptance, but upon the intrinsic value of the sacrifice: and when we consider the thing in that view, we say, that a creature's services or sufferings carry no proper intrinsic merit in them. And we add further, that God has accepted no sacrifice less than a divine sacrifice, because we prove from other topics, that Christ our passover was strictly God, and he was sacrificed for us. In short, the question is, not what God might have accepted, if he had so pleased, but whether, when he has chosen the way of expiation, and the Scriptures lay a particular stress and emphasis upon it, as carrying intrinsic merit in it, both real and great, whether this can be justly accounted for, on the supposition that our Lord was no more than a creature<sup>f</sup>.

<sup>c</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 24.

<sup>cc</sup> Ibid. p. 25.

<sup>d</sup> Ibid. p. 25. <sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 25, 26, 27.

<sup>f</sup> Verbo dicam: nulli creaturæ, licet excellentissima ea sit, excellentissimo modo operetur, illud competat, ut vitæ æternæ præmium ei ex stricto jure debeatur. Præterquam enim

The author goes on to raise difficulties, and to advance divers subtilities to perplex the notion of a compound person: most of them, I conceive, run beyond the mark, and might as soon prove that soul and body make not one person, or man, as that God and man make not the one Person of Christ. For example; he pleads that a person compounded of God and man “must be inferior “in dignity to a Person wholly and only divines.” By the same argument, a man, being partly spirit and partly body, is inferior in dignity to the separate soul, which is wholly and only spirit: and if there be any force in the argument, I know not how far it may affect the doctrine of a future resurrection. Now, we say, that the divine nature loses nothing of its dignity by assuming the uaman; but retains all the dignity it before had; and therefore the whole Person becomes not inferior. He further pleads, that “it is not God that dies, but God-man.” Allowed; but still that Person, that Christ, who is God, dies: as when a man dies, that Person (who is soul, as well as body) dies. We never suppose that the Godhead dies, any more than we imagine that the soul dies. He says further, that “the “Person which makes the satisfaction is not a divine Person<sup>h</sup>.” How so, when the Person is both God and man (as he had before allowed) in our scheme? Do we make two Persons? He argues next against the humanity becoming part of the Person of Christ. “Nothing can really be this who, but must be the what this who “is, at the same time.” He might as justly argue, that Peter’s body cannot be part of Peter, or of the person of Peter, together with his soul; because nothing can really be this who (Peter’s soul) but must be what this who is, at the same time. Now taking for granted that Peter’s soul is the whole person, the argument is good: and so it is likewise in the other case, taking it for granted, that the Logos in union is still the whole Person; but this is going upon false suppositions: and he might as soon prove that Peter’s body cannot be part of Peter, unless it be his soul, as that Christ’s humanity cannot be part of Christ, unless it be the Logos. I can hardly conjecture what the author means, when he says, “That human substance we call John, is quod bonum æternæ vitæ sit absolutissimum, immensum, infinitum, atque adeo omnia omnium creaturarum opera infinitis gradibus transcendens; illud etiam Apostoli, ἐπὶ τῷ τῷ tale est, ut ei a nemine responderi possit: τῷ προέδωκεν αὐτῷ, καὶ ἀνταποδοθήσεται αὐτῷ; Rom. xi. 35. Bull. Harmon. Apostol. Dissert. ii. c. 12. p. 490.

ε Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 29.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid. p. 30.

“really the Person, and nothing else<sup>i</sup>.” I thought, that John, or John’s person, was made up of two substances, spiritual and bodily: and John, the person of John, dies, though one substance survives. In like manner, Christ the God-man dies, though the Godhead dies not. He adds, much like to what he had said before, that the “human nature can never be really he, unless “he be also the divine nature.” Does he mean by he, part of the person, or the whole person? If he means part, then it amounts to this; the body can never be really a part of Peter’s person, unless it be Peter’s soul: or if he means the whole, then it comes to this, that the body can never be the whole person, unless it be the soul. One of the propositions is manifestly against truth, and the other is not sense: so little can be effected in this way of reasoning. Indeed, all the confusion arises from the want of knowing or considering what the true notion of a person, simple or compound, is, of which I have elsewhere treated at large<sup>k</sup>, and thither I take leave to refer the reader. In the mean while, I cannot but heartily lament and grieve, to find that serious and sensible men can give their minds to oppose a Scriptural and venerable doctrine, which has stood the test of ages, by such fine-spun subtilities: Zeno’s arguments against motion might appear weighty in comparison.

But we have more of the same kind still, which I shall reply to very briefly. “The dying humanity can have no such dignity<sup>l</sup>.” True, but the dying Christ might, and that suffices. “The human nature should really and truly be that divine “Person.” No: part of the Person is sufficient: the human nature constitutes one compound Person with the divine nature. “The Logos could not really be man.” Why? Was not the Word made flesh? that is, the Word became incarnate, assumed humanity. “Humanity could not be assumed into a real communion of his Person, without being assumed into what that “Person is<sup>m</sup>.” He must mean, I presume, without being converted into Godhead. But why not, if bodies at the general resurrection may be assumed into a personal union with souls, without ceasing to be bodies, or being converted into spirits? “For the same thing (Person) to be God and man at once, that

<sup>i</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, ii. p. 650—653.

p. 31.

<sup>k</sup> Second Defence, Query xv. vol.

<sup>l</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 32.

<sup>m</sup> Ibid. p. 33.

“ is, really and truly so, is surely as impossible as transubstantiation<sup>n</sup>.” And yet surely it is not more impossible than for the same human being (call him Peter or John) to be both soul and body at once, really and truly so; which a man may firmly believe as a certain truth, without admitting transubstantiation, a palpable absurdity. “ That man should really and strictly speaking be a divine Person, or a divine Person man, to me seems utterly impossible<sup>o</sup>.” If he means, that the divine nature is not the human, nor the human divine, he says right, and has no opposer: but if he means, that divine substance and human substance together, may not make one Person, or one Christ, let him shew why it is more impossible than for a spiritual substance and a corporeal substance to make one person, or one man. He adds, or repeats, that “ the death of the man is not the death of God<sup>oo</sup>.” But it is the death of Christ, who is God and man. So the death of the body is not the death of the soul; but it is the death of the man, who is both soul and body. Such is the nature of a personal union, and such the manner of speaking of it; and it is so obvious and common a case, that none but philosophers would mistake it.

The author closes his discourse on this head with observing, that our opposers may carry the point of satisfaction as high as we do, and account as handsomely for it. As how? By supposing the Logos to be in as close an union with God, as we suppose Christ’s humanity to be with the Logos<sup>p</sup>. Well then, it must be a personal union, so as to make the Father and the Logos one Person. How then? Then “ the sufferings of the Logos will be as much the sufferings of God, and as much an atonement for sin, as the death of Christ’s human nature in the other scheme<sup>q</sup>.” True: but then the sufferings of the Logos will be the sufferings of the Father, (which is the ancient heresy of the Patripassians,) and the same Person both pays and accepts the ransom, makes an atonement to himself; which is not consonant to Scripture, nor to common sense.

The author concludes his account of this matter with this inference, that the men whom he has been pleading for “ do not seem so deeply culpable, nor so dangerously mistaken<sup>r</sup>,” as is commonly represented. To me it appears quite the contrary;

<sup>n</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 34.

<sup>o</sup> Id. ibid.

<sup>oo</sup> Id. ibid.

<sup>p</sup> Ibid. p. 34.

<sup>q</sup> Ibid. p. 34, 35.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 35.

and from this very representation of his, whereby he intended to favour them. They are deeply culpable, 1. For making God the Son a creature, against the whole tenor of Scripture. 2. For running into Patripassianism, to help out Arianism; heaping error upon error, heresy upon heresy. 3. For doing it upon the strength only of a few dialectical or metaphysical subtilties, scarce worthy to be offered, or so much as named, in so momentous a cause as this is. 4. For making use of such topics against the personal union of God and man, as might with equal force be urged against the personal union of any two substances whatever, and prove (if they prove any thing) that an human person is not made up of soul and body. 5. For condemning their opposers as void of charity, only for their pious, faithful, and extremely charitable endeavours to preserve their flocks from being led aside after Satan, from imbibing sentiments subversive of the Gospel of Christ. But I shall have more to say upon the head of charity in another chapter. I hope my reader will excuse my digressing thus far (if it may be called a digression) upon the article of satisfaction, to attend the author who gave the occasion. Now I return.

I have been representing the practical nature and important uses of the doctrine of the Trinity, with respect to worship, in which all the three Persons are interested; and I have more particularly pressed the importance of the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity, from special considerations relating to the Gospel motives, and the nature of the atonement made for sins. I ought not here to omit the like special considerations concerning the Holy Spirit, and the necessity of believing his Divinity likewise. I shall choose here to express myself in the excellent words of a celebrated writer, whom I have before quoted more than once.

“ Our salvation by Christ does not only consist in the expiation of our sins, &c.—but in the communication of divine grace and power to renew and sanctify us: and this is every where in Scripture attributed to the Holy Spirit, as his peculiar office in the economy of man's salvation. And it must make a fundamental change in the doctrine of divine grace and assistance, to deny the Divinity of the Holy Spirit. For can a creature be the universal spring and fountain of divine grace and life? Can a finite creature be a kind of universal soul to the whole Christian Church, and to every sincere member of it? Can a creature make such close application to our minds, know our “ thoughts, set bounds to our passions, inspire us with new affections and desires, and be more intimate to us than we are to ourselves? If a creature be the only instrument and principle of grace, we shall soon be tempted, either to deny the grace of God, or to make it only an external thing, and entertain very mean conceits of it. All these miraculous gifts, which were bestowed on the Apostles and primitive Christians, for the edification of the Church, all the graces of the Christian life, are the fruits of the Spirit. The divine Spirit is the principle of immortality in us, which first gives life to our souls, and will at the last day raise our dead bodies out of the dust; works which sufficiently proclaim him to be God, and which we cannot heartily believe, in the Gospel notion, if he be not <sup>u</sup>.”

What this excellent writer has here said appears all to be very right and just; and his observation of the doctrine of divine grace being likely to suffer much by a denial of the Divinity of the Holy Spirit has been too sadly verified in the event. How jejune, how sparingly, have the abettors of the new schemes insisted upon the doctrine of grace, and of the invisible workings of the Holy Spirit, though Scripture is full of the subject! So that, besides the danger of losing the salutary doctrine of a proper satisfaction and expiation, we are further in danger of losing the true Scripture notion of grace, by the opposition made to the doctrine of the Trinity. I believe I might appeal to the consciences of those gentlemen, whether their gratitude to Christ, for what he has done and suffered for us, be not in a manner lost, and swallowed up in their regards to the Father for commanding and accepting it; and whether the notion of the grace of the Holy Spirit be not entirely absorbed in the thought of the superior assistance of God. The effect is natural, and I judge in this case by what I should find in myself. Upon their hypothesis, “ the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost <sup>x</sup>,” will amount only to the love of the Father thrice told; which supersedes both the other. And when it is said, that the Father and Son will make their abode with us <sup>y</sup>, and in the same chapter, that the Holy Ghost also will abide with us for ever <sup>z</sup>, the two

<sup>u</sup> Sherlock's Vindication of the Defence of Stillingfleet, p. 270, &c.

<sup>x</sup> 2 Cor. xiii. 14.

<sup>y</sup> John xiv. 23.

<sup>z</sup> John xiv. 16.

creatures superadded to the Creator will appear but as ciphers that add nothing to the sum, while in one we have all, and there is nothing but that one to be at all depended upon. His presence alone will supply every thing, and his lustre will so far eclipse both the other Persons, that it will be hard to say (upon the hypothesis I am mentioning) what occasion there would be for them, or what comfort in them. Such is the appearing change made in the very form and essence of Christianity by these new doctrines, that it seems to lose the very life and soul of it, and by degrees to degenerate into little else but a better kind of Judaism, retaining still the name of Christianity, but giving up the main things.

While we consider the doctrine of the Trinity as interwoven with the very frame and texture of the Christian religion, it appears to me natural to conceive, that the whole scheme and economy of man's redemption was laid with a principal view to it, in order to bring mankind gradually into an acquaintance with the three divine Persons, one God blessed for ever. I would speak with all due modesty, caution, and reverence, as becomes us always in what concerns the unsearchable counsels of Heaven: but I say, there appears to me none so natural or so probable an account of the divine dispensations, from first to last, as what I have just mentioned; namely, that such a redemption was provided, such an expiation for sins required, such a method of sanctification appointed, and then revealed, that so men might know that there are three divine Persons, might be apprised how infinitely the world is obliged to them, and might accordingly be both instructed and incited to love, honour, and adore them here, because that must be a considerable part of their employment and happiness hereafter. I urge not this as an argument of the truth of the doctrine, but as a consideration of great weight, supposing the doctrine true, for the recommending it to our affections, and for the raising our ideas of it. The divine dispensations appear both rational and amiable, considered in this light: and if it be not too bold to offer any rationale of them, I would humbly presume to say, that there is none so satisfactory as what I have now mentioned. I can see no probable reason why the Church of God should be, as it were, first put under the immediate conduct of the Father, then under the Son, and last of all under the Holy Ghost; nor why the honour of creating should be principally ascribed to the first, and the honour of redemption, as considerable as creation, to the second, and the honour of illumination, sanctification, and miraculous gifts, as considerable as any thing before, to the third: I say, I can see no probable reason for these things (when the Father, as it should seem, might as well have had the sole honour of all) but upon the hypothesis which I have hinted <sup>a</sup>.

But however that be, or whatever other reasons divine wisdom, to us unsearchable, might proceed upon in every dispensation towards mankind, certain it is, that the doctrine of the Trinity, if true, (as we here suppose,) runs through every part of Christian theology, and gives, as it were, a new force and spirit to it.

I have been proving, from several topics, that this doctrine is important and practical, no slight, no speculative opinion. I shall add but one consideration more, and that a general one, applicable to all other articles of faith, and proving them to be practical in a large sense of the word, but a just sense too, and well deserving our notice. As we are commanded to believe whatever God reveals, belief itself is an instance of obedience; and unbelief, much more disbelief, is disobedience to the commands of God. Consequently, unless obedience and disobedience are points of mere speculation, there is no room left for any pretence of that kind in the case now before us. Let the matter of the belief be otherwise ever so speculative, (though it is not the case here,) yet to believe Scripture verities, prime verities especially, is under precept, is express duty; and all duty is practical in a large sense, as it is paying obedience to God's commandments. St. Paul therefore, more than once, speaks of the obedience of faith <sup>b</sup>, and with great propriety, since believing is obeying the will of God, and is entitled to a reward. It is true, faith and patefactum: Spiritum denique sacrum veneramus sub titulo Paracleti, Illuminatoris, et Sanctificatoris nostri, cujus adeo divina Majestas demum post descensum ejus in Apostolos primosque Christianos, donorum omne genus copiosissima largitione illustrissimum, clarius emicuerit. Nimirum tum demum Apostoli, idque ex Christi mandato, gentes baptizabant in plenam atque adunatam Trinitatem. Bull. Primitiva Tradit. c. vi. p. 399.

<sup>a</sup> Ac profecto admiranda mihi videntur divinarum Personarum in sacrosanctissima triade oikonomia, qua unaquaque Persona distincto quasi titulo humanum imprimis genus imperio suo divino obstrinxerit, titulo illi respondente etiam distincta unius cujusque imperii patefactione. Patrem colimus sub titulo Creatoris hujus universi, qui et ab ipsa mundi creatione hominibus innotuerit: Filium adoramus sub titulo Redemptoris ac Servatoris nostri, cujus idcirco divina gloria atque imperium non nisi post peractum in terris humanæ redemptionis ac salutis negotium fuerit

<sup>b</sup> Rom. i. 5. xv. 18. xvi. 19, 26. Conf. Act. vi. 7. Vid. Wolfii Curæ Philolog. et Criticæ ad Rom. xvi. 19.

obedience (taking obedience in a more restrained sense) are often contradistinguished: but interpreting obedience in its fullest and most comprehensive meaning; faith is properly a species of it, another kind of obedience. Faith is a virtue, both a moral and a Christian virtue, as a very ingenious and acute writer observes. "As to the nature of faith, it is plain that it is a moral virtue, "as being that natural homage which the understanding, or will, " (for I need not here dispute which<sup>c</sup>.) pays to God, in receiving "and assenting to what he reveals, upon his bare word, or "authority: it is an humiliation of ourselves, and a glorification "of God. And as it is a moral, so it is also a Christian virtue, "as being a duty commanded in the Gospel, and an act of "Christian humility<sup>d</sup>." If it be objected, that faith depends entirely upon evidence, and therefore is no matter of choice, and therefore is no virtue, nor can properly fall under precept; I deny that faith depends entirely upon evidence, though it ought to do so. There are motives to assent or dissent, as well as rational grounds; and those motives often bias and determine the judgment, either without reason or against it: not that men can always believe what they will, but inclination frequently has a great hand in their persuasions. Men can lean, and will lean, to the side which they happen to favour, upon motives of education, habit, authority, or example; or of interest, vanity, pride, passion, resentment, and the like: and when they so lean to a side, they can be partial in examining, rash in judging, or precipitate in resolving; so that the will may much influence belief. And as to unbelief, or disbelief, the influence is still more apparent: for, excepting such glaring facts as force assent by obtruding themselves upon the senses, all other things almost may be slighted and set aside. A man may refuse to attend to the clearest demonstration, or may industriously perplex it, and never let in the light which might convince him of its truth: and what he may do in that case, he may much more easily do in others, where the evidence is not so bright, or strong, or comes not up to perfect demonstration. These things considered, it must be allowed that faith has at least a great dependence upon the will, if it be not itself an act of the will, as appears most probable. Diligence in looking out for evidence, patience and perseverance in attending to it, honesty in considering, comparing, balancing, and then determining on the side of truth, these are all matters of choice, depending on the will; and therefore a right faith is a submission of our wills in that instance to God. Seeing therefore that faith in general is virtue and duty, and therefore practical, it follows most evidently, that faith in the doctrine of the Trinity (supposing the doctrine true) is practical in its nature, is both moral and Christian duty.

<sup>c</sup> See that point fully discussed in Fiddes's Body of Divinity, vol. i. p. 333. &c.

<sup>d</sup> Norris's Christian Prudence, p. 259.

Now to sum up briefly what has been done in this chapter; it has been shewn, that the doctrine of the Trinity is of prime consideration for directing and determining our worship, and that it influences Christian practice many ways, as forming proper dispositions, as raising and strengthening the Gospel motives, and as enforcing the doctrines of satisfaction made by Christ, and of illumination and sanctification by the Holy Spirit; on all which accounts it appears to be strictly practical, and highly important: and it has been further intimated, that all duty is practical, and that faith is duty; and therefore this faith, as well as any other, and because of its important nature, more than many other. I conclude therefore from the premises laid down in this chapter, that the doctrine of the Trinity is practical enough to be a fundamental article of Christianity.

I must own, there is a narrow kind of sense, and very improper, of the word practical, which I have observed in some writers, according to which the doctrine of the Trinity would not be a practical doctrine: for they mean by practical, what concerns practice between man and man, and nothing else. Such persons would not scruple to say, that worship itself is no practical matter: and it must be allowed it is not in that sense; it is not a duty of the second table, but of the first. It may deserve considering, whether that narrow sense of the word practical might not first give rise to the objection, that the doctrine of the Trinity is not practical, but speculative; conceiving every thing to be speculative, excepting the common offices of life which we owe one towards another. Now indeed, according to such interpretation of the words practical and speculative, we should never affirm that this doctrine is practical, or deny that it is speculative: for the duties depending upon it are branches of the first and great commandment, the love of God, and not of the second, viz. the love of our neighbour. But what would all this amount to, more than to a dispute about words or names? For we should still insist upon it that our doctrine is practical, as much as any duties of the first table are practical; which suffices: and so at length, in a just and proper sense of the word, the doctrine of the Trinity is practical enough to be a fundamental, if the love of God may be justly called a fundamental.

But when we speak of the doctrine, we mean it of the general doctrine itself, not of the minute circumstances, or appendages of it, which are either of a doubtful nature, or of slighter consideration. For "though it is necessary and essential to the Christian faith to acknowledge Father, Son, and Holy Ghost to be one eternal God, yet there are a great many little subtilities started by over curious and busy heads, which are not fundamental doctrines, and ought not to be thought so. God forbid that all the nice distinctions and definitions of the Schools, about essence, subsistence, personality, about eternal generation and procession, the difference between filiation and spiration, &c. should be reckoned among fundamentals of our faith. For though we understood nothing of these matters, (as indeed we do not, and it had been happy the Church had never heard of them,) yet if we believe the Divinity of each Person, we believe enough to understand the doctrine of salvation. And though that fatal dispute between the Greek and Latin Church, about the Filioque, be of more importance than such scholastic subtilities, yet I cannot see that it concerns the foundation of our faith. For the Greek Church did firmly believe the Holy Spirit to be true God, though they would not own that he proceeded from the Father and the Son, but from the Father only. And though we must acknowledge this to be a mistake, yet it is not a fundamental mistake: for the doctrine of salvation is secured by believing the Holy Spirit to be true God, without defining the manner of his procession." I may just take notice by the way, that the doctrine of the Trinity hath been but little befriended by the Schoolmen; rather hurt by them<sup>f</sup>, though they did not design it. For, 1. By bringing up all the difficulties and perplexities they could themselves invent, or elsewhere meet with, they furnished out matter for the enemies of the faith to lay hold on; and it was from thence chiefly that the Socinians afterwards borrowed their materials to work with. 2. In the next place, by overlarding a plain doctrine with distinctions and subtilties in great abundance, they disguised and obscured it, that it was not easy to see through the mist they had raised. 3. Further, by thus perplexing and diluting it, they really weakened it: for it is much easier to oppose it as it stands tricked up in that scholastic form, than as it stands in Scripture, and in the ancient Fathers. 4. They brought a kind of scandal and disgrace upon the doctrine, as if it subsisted chiefly upon scholastic subtilties; an imputation which the adversaries to the Christian faith have eagerly laid hold on, and often invidiously charged upon the Trinitarians at large; though nothing can be more false or injurious. The truth is, the very distinguishing character of the Trinitarians, in the days of the Fathers, was their resting their cause wholly upon Scripture and tradition; as the distinguishing character of the Antitrinitarians was their building mostly upon logical or metaphysical quirks and subtilties. What a string of those wanton levities have we in Aëtius, preserved and answered by Epiphanius<sup>b</sup>, enough to fright any common reader, or to nauseate any man of good sense. The like we have again in Eunomius, answered by Basil, and by Gregor. Nyssen. The Catholics scarce ever ran out into metaphysical notions, or expressions, excepting in two cases, and both in the way of self-defence. One was, when they were attacked with false metaphysics, they then laboured to answer them with true, lest the adversaries should triumph on that head, and seduce the populace. The other was, when the scriptural and customary expressions, which were used to convey a good sense, and could justly bear no other, were perverted to a bad one by equivocation and wile; the Church could then have no effectual security against false doctrines and false teachers creeping in among them, to corrupt the faith, and to beguile the unwary, as by adopting some new terms, and chosen expressions, for the supporting old truths<sup>i</sup>. This latter case is so naturally represented by a modern writer, that I shall take the freedom to borrow his words, for the sake of laying it in the most lively manner before the reader. “Let me suppose an Arian standing “before you, and submitting himself to your examination, you “ask him, whether he believes Christ to be God? He answers

<sup>e</sup> Sherlock's Vindication of the Defence of Stillingfleet, p. 273, 274.

<sup>f</sup> See Dr. Berriman's History of the Trin. Controversy, p. 378, &c.

<sup>g</sup> See Socrat. E. H. lib. v. c. 10. Hieron. contr. Lucifer. tom. iv. par. 2. col. 296. ed. Bened.

<sup>h</sup> Epiphanius. Hæres. lxxvi. p. 924, &c.

<sup>i</sup> See Dr. Berriman's History of the Trinitarian Controversy, p. 174—179.

“ in the affirmative. You again inquire, what kind of God he “supposes him to be? He replies, such a God as the Bible “makes him. This, you will complain, is collusive language; “however, you request him to satisfy you, whether he believes “the Son to be truly and properly God? To this he saith, Yes, “consistently enough with his own notion of God, though not “with yours. But you further ask, does he believe him to be “one with the Father? To this he likewise replies in the affirma“tive. You then press him with another question, How is he “one with the Father, is he of the same essence with the Father? “To this the Arian answers, by asking you what you mean by “essence? If you comply with his desire, and explain your “notion of the term, you are unavoidably drawn into metaphysi“cal points<sup>k</sup>.” Thus we see metaphysical terms may be sometimes used by the orthodox side, when it is unavoidable; that is, when it is necessary to guard against equivocation and disguise, for the preserving the true faith, and for the excluding such ministers as would corrupt the Gospel truths, and mislead the people committed to their care. But then it is wrong to blame those honest and conscientious guides for making use of the only remedy which is left them, and which nothing but the utmost necessity, brought upon them by the prevarication of others, would ever make them choose. It is plain by this and the like instances, that they are not fond of metaphysics, not so much as of the terms: nor would there be any occasion for new words, or any use of them, if many had not learned to undermine the ancient faith by affixing new and wrong ideas to the ancient forms. The very nature of the thing speaks itself: and the like methods have been used in most other forms and tests, as daily experience has shewn the necessity of it. Thus, to instance in the common case of oaths to a government, they are usually worded in as full and expressive terms as can be devised: and yet that sometimes is not thought sufficient, unless it be further added, without any equivocation, or mental reservation, or something of like kind. I ask my reader’s pardon for digressing a while from the particular point I was upon: but these reflections came naturally in my way, and may perhaps be of use as to the main thing: and now I pass on to a new chapter.

<sup>k</sup> Reply to Mr. P. C.’s Letter, p. 11, 12.

CHAP. III.

Shewing that the Doctrine of the Trinity is sufficiently insisted upon in Scripture to be deemed an Article of prime Importance.

OUR dispute must here be with the Dutch Remonstrants. The most celebrated men amongst them were Episcopius and Limborch. I shall consider them both with care; that it may be seen by the things wherein they agree, what is it that both aim at, and by the points wherein they differ, how both of them were at a loss for any sound principle of reason to proceed upon: and the conclusion which perhaps may naturally result from all will be this; that they had some motives, or specious colours, for the persuasion which they jointly entertained, but no rational grounds for it.

1. I begin with the learned Episcopius, as the principal man. The sum of what his sentiments on this head amount to is, that the doctrine of the Trinity, as to the main substance of it, is certain and clear, but yet not necessary to be believed in order to salvation, nor important enough to justify an anathema against the impugners of it, or for the rejecting their communion.

First, I say, he admits our main doctrine as true and certain, being plainly taught in Scripture: this appears from the Confession of the Remonstrants, where the doctrine is taught in full and strong terms<sup>1</sup>, as likewise from other places in Episcopius's works<sup>m</sup>. Next, I observe, that in his discussion of the question of the perspicuity of Scripture against Bellarmin, he declares the in sacris literis aperte passim tribuuntur. Remonstrant. Confes. c. 3. apud Episcop. Op. vol. ii. p. 78.

<sup>1</sup> Cæterum distincte ac relate consideratur Deus sub trina Hypostasi, sive tribus Personis.—Solus Pater originis omnis expers—sed qui Deitatem tamen suam, tum Filio unigenito,—tum etiam Spiritui Sancto—ab æterno communicavit.—Filius ergo et Spiritus Sanctus ejusdem cum Patre Deitatis, seu divinæ essentia ac naturæ, absolute ac communiter considerata, consortes sunt: prout inter alia; maxime probatur ex divinis nominibus, seu titulis, item ex divinis proprietatibus, et operationibus, quæ utrique

<sup>m</sup> Certum est tribus hisce Personis Divinitatem, sive divinas perfectiones in Scriptura tribui. Episcop. Instit. lib. iv. p. 333.

Mirum non videri debere, si tribus hisce Personis una eademque natura divina tribuatur, cum iis Scriptura divinas istas perfectiones, quæ naturæ divinæ propriae sunt, tam exerte attribuat. Episcop. ibid.

doctrine of the Trinity (such no doubt he must mean as the Remonstrants' Confession, and his own other writings contain) is clear, perspicuous, and easy to be understood<sup>n</sup>.

Notwithstanding all this, the same Episcopius was pleased to deny the necessity of believing the eternal generation of the Son, (which with him appears to be the same with denying his eternal existence;) and consequently, the necessity of believing the received doctrine of the Trinity. And he denied the necessity of so believing, as for several other reasons, so principally for this, because the Scripture had neither directly nor indirectly declared the necessity of the doctrine, though it had taught the truth of it<sup>o</sup>.

But then again I must observe of him, that he seems to me, not so properly to have denied the necessity of believing that doctrine, (in our sense of necessity;) as the necessity of pronouncing an anathema upon the impugners, which he conceived must follow upon the other, and which he interpreted to such a rigid sense, as to mean sentencing the men directly to hell fire, or to everlasting damnation. This last particular was what he chiefly, or solely hesitated upon, when he came to explain: or he would be thought, at least, to mean no more; as appears from his own words, in his answer to the Leyden Divines<sup>p</sup>; as also from

<sup>n</sup> Atqui, ait, Scriptura tradit summa mysteria. Quæ, inquam, illa? Primo, ait, de divina Trinitate. Atqui ea, prout Scriptura tradit, nego obscura, nedum obscurissima esse. Addo, ea clara, perspicua, et facilia intellectu esse, prout et quatenus ea in Scriptura traduntur. Episcop. Instit. lib. iv. c. 18. p. 269.

<sup>o</sup> Hactenus ergo de veritate articuli hujus agimus, restat, ut videamus de ejus credendi necessitate.—Argumenta pro parte negante mihi longe videntur præponderare. I. Quia nusquam in Scriptura id necessarium creditu esse assersit, nec per bonam nedum necessariam consequentiam ex ea elicitur. Episcop. Instit. lib. iv. c. 34. p. 338.

Certum est iis, qui sic errant, in Scripturis nusquam, nec diserte, neque in terminis, neque per manifestam consequentiam, anathema dici. Quod autem in Scripturis non est, etiamsi verissimum sit, necessarium tamen dogma non esse ipsi doctores in synopsi sua adferunt. Episcop. Opp. vol. ii. p. 295.

<sup>p</sup> Author iste diserte et in terminis Socinianos inter eos collocat quibus salus abjudicanda non est. Id nusquam fecerunt Remonstrantes. At anathema illis non dicunt. Esto: sed nec negant anathema illis dicendum esse. Quid ergo? Ἐπέχουσι, neutrum dicunt.—Ne quid præcipitent, malunt relinquere tam severum ac grave iudicium Deo et tempori usque dum causas satis graves habebunt, ut in alteram partem cum certa animi fiducia descendant.—Ex altera parte occurrere vident diram ac funestam anathematos atque æternæ condemnationis sententiam: a qua tantopere se abhorreere profitentur, ut eam nisi plenissime persuasi ferre non audeant adeoque ferre illicitum sibi credant. Episcop. Respons. ad Specim. Calumn. p. 295.

his manner of wording the question in his Institutions<sup>q</sup>, and elsewhere<sup>r</sup>.

But that Episcopus did not deal fairly and uprightly in this matter may be made appear from several considerations; as,
 1. Because he aggravated the business of an anathema beyond what he had reason for; which makes it look like pretence. 2. Because he was not consistent with himself, either in his doctrine or conduct. 3. Because he has laid down a very fallacious rule for judging of necessaries. 4. Because he has done the like in other instances also, and with as little reason, only to afford shelter for the Socinians.

1. I say, first, he has aggravated the matter of an anathema beyond what he had reason for. When St. Paul delivered over to Satan, the design of it was kind and salutary, that “the spirit might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus<sup>s</sup>.” If men must not have warning given them of their evil ways, all friendly reproof is at an end; and it will be unlawful to tell them, however just or necessary the occasion be, that they are in a dangerous state, and upon the verge of destruction. The declaring such a case publicly, if it be right and true, is an eminent act of charity both to them and to the world.

But further; every anathema upon a doctrine is not an anathema, in Episcopus’s sense, upon the persons teaching it<sup>t</sup>. The doctrine may be censured as pernicious and detestable, and yet the patrons of it believed to be in a salvable state, on account of invincible ignorance, or prejudices, or some unhappy warmth of temper, or enthusiastic disorder of mind. It is no certain alioquin sanctissimarum myriadas expungant, ob ignorantiam earum rerum, quæ sufficiunt ad doctissimi cujusque industriam exercendam ut eas possint intelligere, aut si forte eas intelligant, adeo tenues ac subtiles sunt ut eas persuadere aliis pæne impossibile sit. Apolog. pro Confess. Remonstrant. p. 136.

<sup>q</sup> Utrum scilicet præcise ad salutem scitu et creditu necessarium sit, Jesum peculiari isto quem adstruximus modo Filium Dei esse, iisque qui id negant, aut in dubium vocant, ac proinde id confiteri non audent, anathema sit dicendum? Episcop. Institut. lib. iv. c. 34. p. 338.

<sup>r</sup> Stabat jam animo Remonstrantium hæc sententia; nulli doctrinæ, nulli homini anathema dicere, nisi cui Deus ipse anathema dicit, vel expressis verbis, vel sic, ut per consequentiam omni exceptione majorem et cuivis obviam, id Deum dicere colligi possit. Deum non reperiunt anathema dicere, &c.—Absit a Remonstrantibus, ut tam promptam habeant spongiam qua ex albo vita æternæ infinitas animarum

<sup>s</sup> 1 Cor. v. 5.

<sup>t</sup> Distinguendum judicium de hominibus, a judicio de rebus ipsis. De hominibus, præstat judicium cohibere, eosque Dei judicio relinquere, saltem nisi apertissimæ judicandi rationes adsint: de rebus ipsis, dogmatibus nempe, cultibus, regimine, ex Dei verbo judicare licet. Alphons. Turretin. de Articul. Fundament. p. 39.

consequence, that we must therefore condemn the men to hell fire, or presume to erase them in our opinion out of the Book of Life, only because we pronounce their doctrines false, or wicked, or subversive of the Gospel<sup>u</sup>.

Further, merely renouncing, or refusing communion with some persons, may sometimes not amount to any judicial censure at all, but may be only taking due care of our own salvation, and conscientiously providing that we be not found partakers in other men's sins.

These things considered, it is plain that Episcopius's so tragical exclamations against denouncing an anathema upon the Socinian doctrines, or against renouncing communion with the men, were carried too far, and aggravated beyond reason. He might have condemned their doctrines as pernicious or dangerous; and he might have declared the doctrine of the Trinity highly important, or generally necessary to salvation, without passing any such terrible sentence upon particular men: which yet if he had, might reasonably have been construed as no more than a friendly warning, and a declaration of his sense.

2. I observe further, that he was not very consistent with himself, either in his doctrine or his conduct, so far as concerns our present article. It appears from the public Confession of himself and friends, and from what I have cited besides, that he held the doctrine of the Trinity, as commonly received, to be true, certain, and clear: and yet when he comes to justify himself in his refusing to condemn the Socinians, or their doctrines, there he falls to talking of the obscurity of those articles which the Socinians rejected, such as few besides the learned were able to understand, scarcely they, and fewer could believe<sup>x</sup>. Now one would be glad to know of what kind of things he is there speaking. If he intends his reflection upon the appendages to the main doctrine, or upon scholastic subtilties, (some true and some false,) those were not the things, or however not the only things, which any one could blame the Socinians for rejecting; so that this kind of excuse is entirely wide and foreign, and the making use of it is playing upon his readers: but if he means the main doctrine of the Trinity, for the rejecting whereof the Socinians highly deserve censure, why does he here represent it as obscure, or scarce credible, when at other times he admits it as a clear and a certain truth? I see no way of reconciling Episcopius to Episcopius in things so contradictory and inconsistent.

<sup>u</sup> Adest quippe, et in vitiis, atque peccatis, ita ut in ignorantia atque erroribus, duplex remedium: alterum ex parte nostra, nimirum pœnitentia, seu generalis seu particularis; alterum a parte Dei, puta ejus miseriçordia; quorum ope ut peccatis gravissimis, ita et gravissimis erroribus veniæ locum dari posse, a nemine negari potest. Alphons. Turretin. de Articulis Fundamental. p. 5.

<sup>x</sup> See the last quotation from the Apology &c.

As to his conduct, there was a further inconsistency in his condemning the Calvinistical doctrines of absolute predestination &c. as impiety and blasphemy, and that publicly, and yet refusing to do the like by the Socinian tenets, which certainly had no more claim to favour than the other. And how far was such a censure short of denouncing an anathema against the Calvinists for holding them; though at the same time he professed not to pronounce any anathema where God had not pronounced one? Where could he find any Scripture anathema against absolute predestination, (though I must own I dislike the doctrine as well as he,) or where could he find it said in terms, or by plain consequence, that it is necessary to salvation to believe it conditional, more than he might find for the belief of the doctrine of the Trinity also, if he pleased? His conduct therefore appears, in that instance, to have been inconsistent, and not of a piece with itself. It was objected to the Remonstrants<sup>y</sup>, that they made blasphemers of the Calvinists, but easily passed over the Socinians without such censure: and all the excuse made for it was, that the Calvinistical doctrines were very notorious, and the Calvinists had been very severe, cruel, and inhuman in their way of supporting them<sup>z</sup>. But surely the Socinian blasphemies abstinuisse. Istud ut facerent, gravissimas causas habebant: nam sententia ista hæretica Calvini jam nota erat, vel pueris a furno et lacu redeuntibus: patroni ejus non damnarent tantum contrariam veritatem, sed etiam intolerabilem ecclesiis suis judicaverant; professores exauctoraverant &c.—Istam sententiam ut coloribus suis ad vivum depingerent (Remonstrantes) necessarium erat; idque eo magis quod eam, prout jacet, pestem credant, et venenum religionis omnis, cum qua forte hæresis nulla alia comparari mereatur; et tamen nihilominus eam, ut fundamentum et basin religionis pene totius Christianæ statui et propugnari videant. Apolog. pro Confess. p. 135, 136.

<sup>y</sup> Secundum membrum est, quod Remonstrantes, cum in declaratione sententiam suam de prædestinatione et articulis ei annexis declarent, doctrinam Ecclesiarum Reformatarum non modo kar' avriðeov rejiciant, sed eam quoque impietatis ac blasphemie condemnant; in hac tamen doctrina (sc. Trinitatis) hæreticos nullos, aut hæretica nulla dogmata improbant, damnant, aut anathemate percutiant. Vid. Apolog. pro Confess. Remonstr. p. 135.

<sup>z</sup> Nec enim mirum est Remonstrantes doctrinam istam Calvinisticam rejecisse passim in sua declaratione, et quæ ex ea consequuntur, impietates et blasphemias damnasse ex professo, a cæteris autem ex professo damnandis

were as notorious as any could be: and how could the Calvinistical doctrines (supposing them bad) be ever the worse, or amount to blasphemy or impiety ever the more, for the cruelty of their patrons and abettors? There is no just or consistent account to be given of this unequal conduct, except it be this; that blasphemies of adversaries (supposing them such) are real blasphemies, and deserve an anathema; but blasphemies of friends, or of brethren in affliction, are innocent, and deserve no anathema at all. When the Remonstrants have said all they can, they will not be able to persuade the Christian world that those Calvinistical doctrines (though I take them to be wrong) are worse than the Socinian; or that a charge of horrid impiety, blasphemy, pest, poison, and heresy, is justifiable in one case, and not in the other: so that upon the whole, it might be very easy to retort upon the Remonstrants their own tragical exclamations against denouncing an anathema: for let them but have the direction of it, and they discover no great aversion to it upon weighty occasions, as to them appear; and in doctrines which they judge to be of great importance, they could be very smart and severe in their censures.

3. But the most material thing of all is, to examine Episcopius's rule for determining necessaries, which seems to be very fallacious. He would have a thing declared necessary in Scripture, either expressly, or by plain consequence. Here I know not what he would call a plain consequence: otherwise indeed, the rule may be very just. I take it, if the truth of a doctrine be fully and plainly taught in Scripture, and it appears, from the nature and quality of the doctrine itself, that it is important, and that much depends upon it, that then Scripture has by plain consequence declared the necessity of believing such doctrine by declaring its truth. If the rule be thus interpreted, then by the same rule the doctrine of the Trinity is important in a Scripture view, and ought to be reckoned among the necessaries. By Episcopius's own account of it, (as before observed,) it is true, it is certain, it is clear, as proved from Scripture; and, by many arguments recounted in the last chapter, it has been shewn that it influences our worship, and bears a considerable part in what concerns the Christian life: therefore Scripture, in making known this doctrine, has by plain consequence taught us the necessity of believing it, and the danger of rejecting it. If men have the use of their rational faculties, and are able to argue and infer, they need not be expressly told that such a doctrine as that is, is important and weighty, and worth the contending for: let but Scripture once ascertain its truth, and every man's common sense will supply the rest.

When St. Paul was minded to convince the Corinthians of the necessity of believing the resurrection of the dead, he thought it sufficient to shew the connection which that doctrine had with Christianity itself; to intimate, that their other faith was vain without that, and all preaching vain<sup>a</sup>; and that the denying that doctrine was, in effect, denying the whole Christian religion. Therefore that doctrine was necessary in the highest degree, as common sense must conclude: the very nature of the doctrine, and its connection with the whole frame and body of revealed religion declared it. The like I say of the doctrine of the Trinity; not that it is necessary in the same degree with the doctrine of the resurrection, but in proportion, while much depends upon it, though not so much as does upon the other. Indeed neither of them are so necessary but that natural religion might subsist without them, upon a belief of the immortality of the soul<sup>b</sup>: but both are very highly necessary in a Christian light, and in a Scripture view, as both, in their several ways and degrees, support the fabric of Christianity, and the body of revealed religion. If a right knowledge of God, if dispositions suitable to the heavenly state we expect, if the regulation and specification of our worship, if the due and proper force of Gospel motives, if just ideas of the economy of man's redemption and salvation, and of the doctrine of grace; if these and other the like momentous concerns hang upon the true notion of the ever blessed Trinity, can we after that want any particular text or texts, to declare to us the necessity of our believing it? Not but that particular texts may be found which are explicit enough

<sup>a</sup> 1 Cor. xv. 14, 17.

<sup>b</sup> Some very learned men have been of opinion that the same persons who in that time denied the resurrection, denied also any future state; which they infer from some reasonings which St. Paul made use of against them. (Vitringa, Observ. Sacr. lib. iv. c. ix. p. 924. Buddeus, Eccl. Apostol. p. 299.) But I much question whether they argue justly on that head, or whether St. Paul reasoned upon their hypothesis, or upon some other principles. It seems to me, that all St. Paul's reasonings in that chapter may be accounted for upon this postulatum, that if there be no resurrection, the separate soul, being under the sentence and dominion of death, cannot emerge and rise up to life and happiness, but must inevitably perish under such state of punishment, having no deliverer. But I offer this only as a conjecture, appearing to me not improbable.

upon that head, as I may shew hereafter: but in the mean while I observe, that our cause does not need that additional strength, does not depend upon it.

Besides, I would remark by the way, that a distinction might be properly enough made between a necessity of believing a Scripture doctrine, and a necessity of not denying, or not opposing it: for certainly, a man may be under a stricter obligation not to deny or oppose a Scripture verity, than positively to believe it; and it is a greater sin publicly to deny and oppose a sacred truth, than it is merely not to admit it. Yet the Socinians, whom Episcopius was inclined to screen, did not only forbear giving assent to the doctrine, but they dissented, and publicly opposed it with all possible vigour; nay, and with more wiles and artifices than became plain honest men. Now I take it, that though an explicit knowledge or belief of many inferior Scripture truths is not ordinarily required, yet it may be required, and strictly too, not to deny or oppose even them, supposing them plain; because it is, in effect, denying the veracity of God, or the inspiration of Scripture. I know of no dispensation there is for denying and opposing any one plain Scripture truth, contriving artificial elusions for it, any more than there is for disobeying a plain precept, in like manner eluding it; nor how a partial faith, in such a case, is at all more justifiable than a partial obedience: for indeed disbelief is disobedience, as I observed above. But the observation is much stronger when we find that the truth denied and opposed is a very material truth, one that has much depending upon it, one that lies near the foundation. How Episcopius could own it to be a truth, and yet think it no crime, or none deserving a public censure, to deny and oppose it, is unaccountable. We do not want to have it said in Scripture, that it was necessary in particular explicitly to know and believe it: but certainly, if it be a truth revealed by God, as he allows, and not of the slightest kind neither, it was necessary not to deny or oppose it, and the man would deserve the public censure of the Church that should presume so to do. Therefore the learned Episcopius has, in this instance, imposed a false rule of judging upon us, and such as he himself did not allow of in other cases. For how could he attempt to charge impiety, blasphemy, and the worst of heresies (as he pretends) upon the Calvinists? Was it by citing any Scripture texts which declare the necessity of believing the distinguishing doctrines on his side? No; but he endeavoured to shew that the Calvinian doctrine remotely concluded in impiety, blasphemy, heresy; and that consideration he supposed sufficient to found his severe charge against the Calvinists upon; though in points more perplexed and obscure, and less agreed in among Christians ancient and modern, than the doctrine of the Trinity. So natural is it for men of the greatest pretended moderation to confine it chiefly to their own friends, or party, and to exclude their adversaries from the benefit of it. Faults of this kind will often happen on both sides, while men are men: and the foundation of all is, that men will not agree about necessaries, while they agree that there ought to be unity so far, and no further. Many reconcilers have thought of various expedients, and different degrees of latitude: the worst that could be invented is indifference to all religions; which is like giving up an inheritance and consenting to starve, for the saving of trouble and contest about it. But I pass on.

4. A further fault I observed in the learned Episcopius was, that he extended the same fallacious rule to other doctrines of moment, beside this of the Trinity; and, as it seems, in order to contrive a shelter for his favourite Socinians. He denied the necessity of believing the divine prescience as to future contingents<sup>c</sup>, though at the same time he admitted the truth of the doctrine, in consideration of the Scripture prophecies<sup>d</sup>. Indeed, as to the question taken in the precise terms as he has stated it, "whether it be strictly necessary to salvation to know and "believe it," and "whether a man shall forfeit his salvation for "not believing, or not knowing it;" I say, in this precise view, it is hard to know how to answer, since it seems to proceed upon a wrong supposition of a certain quantity of faith, or of explicit knowledge, as necessary to the salvation of every person; about which we can determine nothing. But put the question, whether the doctrine be not highly important, and richly worth contending for, or whether the impugners of it be not very much to blame, deserving public censure here and punishment hereafter, for such necessitatis indicium, aut vestigium ejus in Scriptura reperire est, sive indicium illud dicatur esse clarus textus, sive consequentia per se evidens.— Qui contra affirmat, ei incumbit probatio. Episcop. Institut. lib. iv. c. 18. p. 302.

<sup>c</sup> Superest ut inquiramus, an ad salutem æternam consequendam, scitu credituque necessarium sit Deo præscientiam talem competere, adeo ut qui Deo eam competere aut negat, aut affirmare non audeat, salute æterna propterea excidat? In genere, nos id ad salutem scitu credituque necessarium esse negamus. 1. Quia nullum

<sup>d</sup> Episcop. ibid. c. 17. p. 299, &c.

pernicious doctrine; and then the answer is easy and certain: it is a very important doctrine, and the denial of it, especially if open and obstinate, highly criminal. Episcopius himself allows, that it is necessary to salvation to believe and know that God foresees whatever he has determined to bring to pass; because God himself strongly insists upon it, as a mark of distinction, whereby he will be proved to be the true God, in opposition to all rival deities<sup>e</sup>. But, with submission, may there not be thousands of illiterate Christians, who have not the explicit knowledge of that matter, or may never consider it? Why then is this more necessary to salvation (in that strict sense of the phrase) than the other? In truth, neither of them are so in that rigorous sense: but both are highly important, and, I conceive, equally so; because one implies the other, and they stand or fall together. God must foreknow future contingents, if he forms decrees long beforehand about them. If he decreed, and foretold long before, that Judas should be permitted voluntarily to betray Christ; he must have foreseen likewise that Judas would voluntarily do it, and how he would do it. There is no accounting for numerous prophecies, without the supposition of God's foreknowing future contingents; and since God makes this the distinguishing character of the true God, it is in effect disowning the truth of Scripture, and denying the true God<sup>f</sup>, to deny the divine prescience. How then can the Socinians be excused in that matter, especially considering how presumptuous they are in it, going upon this proud principle, that they are able to search the Almighty to perfection, or that nothing is to be believed but what they can comprehend? Let but the modus of the divine knowledge be admitted as inscrutable to weak mortals, and then all difficulties are over with us at once: the infinite perfections of the divine Mind ought in this case to silence all objections. But if men will think too meanly of God, and too highly of themselves, and from thence proceed to teach such doctrines as undermine the Scripture prophecies, and the divine perfections, and sap the foundations both of natural and revealed religion; can there be any just excuse made for such a wanton abuse of liberty, and such unwarrantable conduct in affairs of the last consequence to the salvation of mankind? But enough hath been said to shew, that Episcopius's famed rule for judging of necessaries is fallacious and wrong, and such as he himself did not proceed by in condemning the Calvinists; though he was disposed to make use of it for favouring the Socinians. The importance of any doctrine is not to be judged of merely from the declarations of Scripture concerning its necessity, but from the nature and quality of the doctrine itself, and the relation it bears to the other parts of revealed religion, and from the mischiefs likely to follow upon opposing it.

<sup>e</sup> Quænam ista sint quæ de divina scientia, omnibus ac singulis scitu credituque sunt necessaria? Tenemur scire ac credere, Deum scire ea omnia quæ a divino aliquo decreto suo dependent. — Ratio est, quia hanc scientiæ perfectionem Deus sibi tanto cum zelo adtribuit, et adtribui vult, ut per eam, et propter eam, se discernat, discernique velit, ab omnibus demonibus, gentiumque Diis atque idolis, tanquam verum unicumque Deum, qui solus idcirco summo honore, cultu, et obsequio dignus sit, uti videre est ex Isa. xli. 23. Episcop. Institut. lib. iv. c. 18. p. 303.

<sup>f</sup> Mr. Lobb, in few words, well represents the case as follows: "From this notion of theirs, revealed religion receives a wound: for if God doth not know future contingents how can he foretell them? And if he cannot foretell them, of what use is the prophetical part of the holy Scriptures? And if they must be rejected as useless, will not the Deists be abundantly gratified? Or if it be yielded that God doth not foreknow future contingents, it will necessarily follow, that his knowledge is not infinite, and he cannot be God." Growth of Error, p. 188.

II. From Episcopius, the chief leader, I pass on to his kinsman and follower, the learned Limborch; of whose principles in this cause I shall treat the more briefly, because they are the same in the main with what have been mentioned under the preceding article. His acknowledgment of the truth of the common doctrine of the Trinity may be inferred from his admitting the common Confession of the Remonstrants, and from what he has asserted in his own works: wherein he sufficiently expresses the main doctrine, (if we are to judge him an honest man,) and proves it too, though not to advantage. It is true, he afterwards drops a suspicious expression<sup>b</sup>, which requires a candid interpretation to make it bear; and he meanly talks of Petavius's ingenuously confessing<sup>c</sup> that some of the Ante-Nicene * Restat jam ut explicemus, quisnam ille sit Deus cui divinam hanc naturam competere sacræ literæ docent; Pater nimirum et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus. Limborch. Theol. Christ. lib. ii. c. xvii. p. 97. Tribus hisce tribuuntur divinæ perfectiones: unde concludimus Deitatem tribus hisce esse communem. (Ibid. p. 98.) Ea de Jesu Christo Filio Dei enuntiantur, ex quibus liquet ipsum per veram, attamen arcanam et ineffabilem generationem, Filium Dei extitisse—ante omnia sæcula, et per eam naturæ divinæ consortem fuisse, p. 99. Ex hisce colligimus, essentiam divinam et Filio et Spiritui Sancto esse communem, p. 102.

<sup>b</sup> Sed et est quædam supereminencia Patris respectu Filii, et Patris ac Filii respectu Spiritus Sancti, ratione dignitatis et potestatis: dignius siquidem est generare quam generari, spirare quam spirari, p. 102.

<sup>c</sup> Sufficiat hic nobis ingenua Dionysii Petavii, doctoris inter Jesuitas celeberrimi ac doctissimi. Confessio, &c. p. 102.

Fathers disowned the coeternity and coequality of the Son. He did not understand the subtilty of the Jesuit, nor consider that probably it was not so much an ingenuous confession of that great man, as a disingenuous misrepresentation of his to serve the interest of the modern church of Rome<sup>k</sup>. His pretences have been abundantly confuted by Bishop Bull, and several other learned hands.

However, as I said, Limborch has sufficiently expressed the main doctrine, and asserted its truth: we are next to observe what he thought of the necessity of believing it, or of the importance of it. He begins with declaring his scruples against asserting the necessity of believing the eternal filiation and Divinity of God the Son<sup>l</sup>, while he admits the truth. He conceives it not so necessary as the owning Jesus to be the Messiah. Supposing it be not, yet it may be necessary notwithstanding. But if it can be proved that the Messiah predicted in the Old Testament is there described under such characters as can belong only to God, (as certainly it may,) then it will be as necessary to believe him to be God, as to believe him to be the Messiah, because he cannot be the Messiah, unless he be also God<sup>m</sup>. However, as I before said, admitting that one of these doctrines is more necessary or more important than the other, (though they are in just consequence inseparable,) yet both may be fundamentals notwithstanding. He goes on to speak of the obscurity of the doctrine, which is abusing it; because though the thing is mysterious, and the manner obscure, yet the main doctrine is as clear as can be desired, as clear as any doctrines concerning the divine nature or attributes; clear in the general, clear so far as we are bound to believe. See above. He was aware of this answer; and therefore he endeavours next to evade the force of it. He owns the plea, with respect to some other fundamental doctrines, that the main substance of them may be clear, while the circumstantials only are obscure: and he instances in that of the resurrection of objectum necessarium statuitur atque officium Christi de Jesu credendum est, nos, licet veritatem illam amplectamur, eam tamen ut creditu ad salutem necessariam definire non audemus. Limborch, lib. v. cap. 9. p. 413.

<sup>k</sup> See preface to my Second Defence, vol. ii. Bull. Proem. sect. viii. p. 6. Grab. Præfat. ad Bulli Opp. Nelson's Life of Bull, p. 287.

<sup>l</sup> Credimus nos, alibi doceri Personam hanc esse Filium Dei respectu naturæ divinæ ac filiationis æternæ.— Quandiu nobis ea Scripturæ loca non occurrunt quibus naturæ divinæ cum humana unio perinde fidei salutaris

<sup>m</sup> Vid. Bull. Judic. Eccl. Cathol. cap. vii. sect. 5. and Second Letter to Mr. Nation, by P. C. p. 9.

the dead, which he says is clear, and necessary to be believed ; but whether the bodies will be numerically the same, he thinks is not clear, nor a necessary article of faith. This is a point which I need not here debate ; we may admit the instance for argument sake, and now let us apply it, and see how far the same reasoning will bear. We receive the doctrine of the resurrection, considered in a general undeterminate view ; we define not the precise manner ; and we admit the eternal Dicinity of God the Son, and the union of all three in one Godhead, not defining the manner of the union or distinction : so far the cases appear parallel : only indeed the resurrection is a matter that falls under imagination, the other belongs only to pure intellect. But now comes on the stress of the question : he asserts, that the obscurity lies not in the circumstantials of the doctrine of the Trinity, but in the very substance of it. That we deny ; and Episcopius himself denied it, (unless he greatly prevaricated) as observed above. And how will the assertion be proved ? The Professor attempts it, by throwing our main doctrine into scholastic terms<sup>n</sup>, that so it may instantly carry the face of obscurity in the very words : this is not dealing fairly with us. He does not choose to express it so himself in other places, where he admits the verity of the doctrine, and where he declares his own faith ; neither did Episcopius, or the common Confession of the Remonstrants, so express it. Why then must they choose one way of expression for declaring the truth of the doctrine, and another for rejecting the necessity of it, except it be to serve a turn ? The learned Professor, instead of saying one Jehovah, or one God, or one Godhead, here chooses the phrase of one numerical essence : which is a late scholastic phrase, and faulty more ways than one : first, because the terms themselves are technical terms, and no way necessary to the Christian faith ; and next, because they carry an equivocation in them ; and the proposition can neither be admitted nor rejected, till it be carefully distinguished. Numerical essence in a Sabellian sense is heresy : in another sense, it is a truth darkly expressed. That the Persons are one God, one Jehovah, is of the substance of the doctrine ; but that they should be detera genita, tertia spirata sint unica numero essentia——. Quod statim primo suo conceptu varias involvit difficultates quæ a dogmate ipso separari nullatenus possint. Limborch, lib. v. cap. 9. p. 414.

<sup>n</sup> Alia vero est ratio eorum dogmatum quæ non in circumstantiis quibusdam, sed in seipsis suaque substantia, obscuritatem involvunt : quale est dogma de SS. Trinitate, quod tres distinctæ Personæ, una generans, al-

nominated one numerical essence, is not. For, first, it is a question, whether the divine Unity ought to be brought under our distinctions about numerical and specific, contrived for expressing things finite: and if it should, it is still another question, in what precise sense of the word numerical (which is an equivocal term) the proposition can be allowed. Both these questions are *circumstantial*s, and furnishing matter for strife about words and names, not at all affecting the main thing<sup>o</sup>: and the obscurity here complained of lies not in the doctrine itself, but in the unfair manner of expressing it, to give some colour for the complaint: if any person, instead of such a plain expression as God's presence every where, should call it, the infinite expansion or diffusion of the divine essence, it would be unfair and wrong in two views; first, as the terms are scholastic, when plainer words would better serve the purposes of truth; and next, as it is running the reader into an obscure speculation about expansion, what it means, and in what sense it may be admitted. Any doctrines whatever may thus be involved in obscurities, by clothing them in dark and equivocal terms, or by so contriving them as to bring in something of the modus into the main doctrine, when it ought to be entirely left out, either as unknown, or as not material P. I am sensible that the phrase of numerical essence has long obtained in the Schools, and is capable of a good sense: but yet essence of essence (ever since that term came in) was always Catholic doctrine, as God of God; and numerical essence, a more modern phrase, must be so explained as to agree with the other, and to exclude a Sabellian sense. Otherwise it is no doctrine of ours, but an ancient heresy. But enough has been said to shew that the learned Limborch has used a little too much art, in representing our doctrine as obscure, only by the clouds raised from an obscure expression. The doctrine itself is otherwise clear enough, as I have before manifested at large: and every plain Christian will understand as clearly what he means when he says, the "three divine Persons are one God," as when he says, there mento habenda est, non vero modus et circumstantiæ quæ pari evidentiâ, aut cum simili necessitatis characterè revelata non sunt. Et re vera, paucissimæ sunt res, præsertim in divinis, quarum modum et circumstantias perfecte noscamus. Alphons. Turret. de Fundament. p. 20.

<sup>o</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. xxiii. p. 708, &c.

<sup>P</sup> Sæpe res ipsa fundamentalis esse potest, modus vero rei, et circumstantiæ minime fundamentales. Etenim cum res ipsa tantum in genere revelata est, et tanquam necessaria a Deo imposita, tunc certe res ipsa tantum pro funda-

will be “a resurrection of the dead<sup>q</sup>.” Both the expressions are large and indefinite, wrapped up in generals; not descending to the minute circumstances belonging to this and that, but abstracting from them, and leaving them undetermined.

I meet with nothing more in Limborch deserving any particular answer. He has indeed some additional considerations in the same place, but such as amount only to mere assertions without proofs, viz. that it is sufficient to believe in Jesus as the Messiah, and that our faith respects the office, not the Person; that it is enough to consider him as Mediator, and the like; all precarious assertions taking for granted the matter in question, not to mention that the ancient and true notion of Christ as Mediator implies his Divinity, and supposes him to be both truly God and truly man<sup>r</sup>. Strange, that a person of his great abilities could persuade himself, that the believing in Christ as to his several offices of Prophet, Priest, and King, should be necessary<sup>s</sup>, and yet that believing in him as a divine Prophet, a divine Priest, and a divine King, (though the fact be true that he is so,) should be of little or no significancy. One might as easily believe that the soul is of no consideration to the body, as that our Lord's Divinity, which runs through all his offices, and must enliven and invigorate every part, should be of no consideration, or slight, to a Christian's faith in these offices. But this great man, as well as his greater predecessor, had his prejudices; and both of them had imbibed a very false notion of the ancient churches, as if they had not constantly insisted upon the necessity of believing the doctrine of the Trinity, or had not condemned the contrary opinions as heretical. That was Episcopius's firm persuasion, and he insisted much upon it<sup>t</sup>, having taken up the opinion too hastily from misrepresentations made of the Fathers by some moderns, not being himself acquainted, to any degree of perfection, with that kind of learning<sup>u</sup>. And the like may be justly suspected of Limborch also, who trusted to Petavius in that matter, as I have already intimated. Had their surmise in that particular been just, I could not so much have blamed them for the rest. For to make any thing necessary at this time of day

<sup>q</sup> Lib. v. cap. 9. p. 414.

<sup>r</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. xvi. p. 657, 658.

<sup>s</sup> Cum itaque objectum fidei Christianæ proprie respiciat munera Christi, eorum fides ac professio etiam neces-saria est. Limb. lib. v. cap. 9. p. 415.

<sup>t</sup> Episcop. Inst. lib. iv. cap. 34. p. 339, 340. Respons. ad Specim. Columnn. p. 295.

<sup>u</sup> Vid. Bull. Præmonit. ad Lector. de necessitat. credend.

which anciently was not so, or to conceive that the most pure and primitive churches failed in necessaries, is too bold and shocking a thought for any candid considerate man to entertain. But both Episcopus and his disciple were much deceived in that affair, as hath been abundantly shewn by Bishop Bull; and as I shall endeavour also to make plain to the English reader before I have done. And then it will the more easily be admitted, that the necessity of the doctrine is sufficiently inculcated in Scripture, when it appears that the ancient churches collected such necessity from the same Scripture.

I have not yet mentioned any particular texts declaring such necessity, nor do I think it needful, because the truth of such a doctrine infers its necessity to as many as the doctrine is revealed to. But yet I may observe, that the institution of baptism in the name of Father, Son, and Holy Ghost carries with it a very sensible and affecting argument of the importance of the doctrine. It is indeed, when considered in all its views, a strong proof of the truth of the doctrine, as might be shewn at large, and often has been*: but supposing the truth proved sufficiently from other texts, then there cannot be a more convincing argument of the importance of it than this; that our blessed Lord himself has recommended it as the prime and leading doctrine, without the explicit mention whereof a man cannot be made a Christian; that he has conveyed it to us in that solemn form, that most distinguished manner to every disciple of Christ, as the first thing proper for him to be acquainted with, deserving and requiring his most early thoughts and care, and also his constant and tenderest devotion ever after. On this foundation was the Church itself erected, and stands to this day. What stronger or more effectual method could have been devised to proclaim the necessity and high importance of this great article? A consideration which may receive yet further light and strength, by looking into antiquity, and there observing what a stress was laid upon the interrogatories in baptism, and how this article made up the principal part, if not the whole of the first Creed, and what particular care was taken to instruct the candidates in this important doctrine previously to baptism: but what relates to antiquity will more properly come in under a distinct chapter designed for that purpose. I forbear likewise to insist upon another Scripture argument of great force, which St. John's writings afford me; because that also may more conveniently be reserved for another place in these papers.

* See my Sermons at St. Paul's, 813—826. Dr. Trapp's Lecture Sermon. p. 100—104. Mr. Abraham Taylor's True Script. Doct. p. 91, &c. to which may be added, Basil, de Observat. Sacr. tom. ii. cap. 22. p.

I have now run through the three several heads of debate which I undertook; shewing, in so many distinct chapters, that the received doctrine of the Trinity is both clear and practical, and sufficiently inculcated in Scripture to be esteemed an article of high importance, an essential of Christianity, a fundamental doctrine of the Gospel, diffusing itself through the whole of our religion, and being, as it were, the very life and spirit of it. It remains now to be inquired, how we ought to behave towards those who openly reject or impugn it, or take part with them that do.

CHAP. IV.

Shewing, that communion ought not to be held with men that openly reject the fundamental Doctrines of Christianity, and persist in so doing.

THIS may be argued two ways; first, from express Scripture texts; and next, from the very nature and reason of the thing considered upon Scripture principles.

I. I begin with Scripture texts. St. Paul's instructions to the Romans in such cases is: "Mark them which cause divisions and offences contrary to the doctrine which ye have learned; and avoid them: for they that are such serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simpley." The offenders here pointed at were most probably<sup>z</sup> the Judaizing false teachers, those that preach up circumcision and the observance of the law as necessary to salvation; a doctrine subversive of the grace of the Gospel, as observed above. The Apostle therefore exhorts his Christian converts to mark them, that is, to beware of them, in order to avoid them, and to preserve themselves from the infection of their pernicious doctrine. And as he wrote by the Spirit of God, and had the gift of discerning the

<sup>y</sup> Rom. xvi. 17, 18.

<sup>z</sup> See Grotius, and Whitby, and Buddæi Eccles. Apostol. p. 121.

Wolffius, upon the place: and Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. lib. iv. cap. 9.

spirits of men, he could tell his converts, with a certain and well grounded assurance, the insides of the men; that they were men of carnal minds and profligate consciences, using fair and plausible speeches to beguile others, for their own humour, or pleasure, or interest, or vanity. Such indeed is the general character of heresiarchs of all kinds: but yet without very clear and sufficient grounds appearing in overt acts, men ought not to take upon them the liberty of an Apostle, in pronouncing upon the inward motives which heretics are led by: it is sufficient to pass sentence upon the quality of the doctrine, and to condemn it as subversive of the Gospel, (if it really be so,) and to renounce communion with its open favourers and abettors; so much at least is manifestly implied in the advice given to avoid them, or turn from them. Receive them not as ministers of Christ, nor own them as brethren: for they serve not the Lord Jesus Christ; but their fair speeches and false colourings are fitted to deceive unwary souls. Therefore avoid them, shun them, discountenance them, and that openly: for so they which are approved will be made manifest<sup>a</sup>, and not otherwise.

The same Apostle pointing to the same heretics elsewhere says, "There be some that trouble you, and would pervert [subvert] the Gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other Gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed<sup>b</sup>." How strongly here does the Apostle guard against admitting new doctrines, (subversive of the old,) through a common weakness incident to mankind, having men's persons in admiration, on account of their parts or learning, or their appearing goodness, sanctity, sobriety. Though "we or an angel from heaven" should presume to do any such wicked thing, "let him be accursed;" words very expressive and poignant, in order to correct the weakness before mentioned; and another also near akin to it, the natural fondness many have for novelties. And I may further observe, that in such cases we have no concern at all with the virtues or good qualities of false teachers, be they ever so real or great: if they corrupt the faith in any gross instance, that is reason sufficient for refusing communion with them, though they were otherwise bright as angels. A consideration worth the noting, for the obviating some popular pretences on this head. I need not here enter into the dispute, whether the words ἀνάθεμα ἔστω amount to a solemn curse, or are only a form of excommunication<sup>c</sup>. If we take it in the first and most rigorous sense, it seems proper only to an Apostle or Prophet, thus solemnly to curse or bless in the name of the Lord. But as the Christian Church afterwards<sup>d</sup> often used the same form in their excommunications, the milder sense appears most probable. However that be, this solemn sentence of the Apostle amounts at least to a strict injunction or warning to all Christians, that they should not communicate with persons who corrupt the faith, (either by adding to it or taking from it,) in any gross manner, which may be justly interpreted a subversion of the Gospel of Christ. Such attempts are to be held in the utmost abhorrence, and the authors of them shunned as seducers and false apostles. It cannot well be supposed, that less than this is implied in the words of the Apostle.

L

<sup>a</sup> 1 Cor. xi. 19.<sup>b</sup> Gal. i. 7, 8, 9.

He goes on to say, speaking of the same persons in the same Epistle, “He that troubleth you shall bear his judgment, whosoever he be<sup>e</sup>.” “I would they were even cut off that trouble you<sup>f</sup>.” Which last words I understand, with many judicious interpreters, of excommunication; and it is confirmed by what is said in the same place, “a little leaven leaveneth the whole lump<sup>g</sup> ;” intimating the reason why the Apostle wished to have those false teachers cut off from the communion of Christians, viz. to prevent the contagion spreading further. I am aware, that some very learned men<sup>h</sup> dislike the interpretation I have mentioned, but upon a very slender reason, as to me appears. They think the Apostle would not have wished for it only, but would have commanded it in virtue of his apostolical authority. It is true, he might have done it: but who knows for how many, or for what prudential reasons, he might forbear for a time, and be content at that juncture only to throw out a wish, in order to prepare the Galatians for it, and to incline them by slow and gentle methods to concur the more readily with it, when it should be

<sup>c</sup> See Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 808, 809.

<sup>d</sup> See Suicer. Thesaurus in voc. ἀνάθεμα. Bingham's Antiq. of the Christian Church, lib. xvi. cap. 2, 8, 16, 17.

<sup>e</sup> Gal. v. 10.

<sup>f</sup> Gal. v. 12.

<sup>g</sup> Gal. v. 9. compare 1 Cor. v. 6, 7.

<sup>h</sup> Elsner. in loc. p. 196. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 808. Wolfius, Curæ Philolog. et Crit. vol. ii. p. 772.

absolutely necessary. It is not to be presumed, that excommunication, or a formal renouncing of communion, are things to be precipitated at all adventures, or that there may not often be good reasons for delay, that so an affair of the highest consequence may be conducted with the utmost prudence. I am of opinion, that besides the mischievous nature of the heresy itself, several other circumstances of time, place, and persons, ought to have their weight in consultations relating to Church discipline upon offenders. But I pass on.

St. Paul gives advice to Timothy in the words here following; “These things teach and exhort. If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness; he is proud, &c.—from such withdraw thyself<sup>i</sup>.” Perhaps the rendering and the sense would run better thus: <sup>k</sup>If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to the wholesome words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, if he is puffed up, knowing nothing, but doating about questions, &c. from such withdraw thyself. It is a disputable point, what particular sect or set of false teachers the Apostle here refers to, whether Judaizers or Gnostics, or others distinct from both. But one thing is plain, which is sufficient to our present purpose, that the Apostle exhorts Timothy to withdraw from them, and that in order either to discountenance their false doctrines, or to preserve himself and others from receiving contagion by them. To the same purpose is what the Apostle again says to Timothy:

“Shun profane and vain babblings: for they will increase unto more ungodliness. And their word will eat as doth a canker: of whom is Hymenæus and Philetus; who concerning the truth have erred, saying that the resurrection is past already; and overthrow the faith of some<sup>l</sup>.” The heads and patrons of the heresy here mentioned the Apostle had excommunicated before, delivering them over unto Satan, to stop their blaspheming<sup>m</sup>. They appear to have been persons who believed the Scriptures of the Old Testament, but misinterpreted them, allegorizing away the doctrine of the resurrection, resolving it all into figure and metaphor<sup>n</sup>. The delivering over unto Satan

<sup>i</sup> 1 Tim. vi. 2—5.

<sup>k</sup> Vid. Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. tom. i. p. 220.

<sup>l</sup> 2 Tim. ii. 16, 17, 18.

<sup>m</sup> 1 Tim. i. 20.

<sup>n</sup> Vid. Vitringa, Observ. Sacr. lib. iv. cap. 9. p. 925. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 300.

seems to have been a form of excommunication, declaring the person reduced to the state of an heathen: and in the apostolical age it was accompanied with supernatural or miraculous effects upon the bodies of the persons so delivered<sup>o</sup>: though it may be supposed that such effects might last beyond the apostolic age, because other miraculous gifts certainly did so. I am well aware of the disputes which have been among persons of the best learning<sup>p</sup> about the precise meaning of the phrase, whether it signified excommunication, or an appendage to it. I have chosen that interpretation which appears most probable<sup>q</sup>. I must own, there is a notion which appears to run through the debates of several learned men on this head, and which I cannot well understand. They seem to take it for granted that excommunication is a punishment of the soul. I easily conceive it to be a spiritual punishment, as not being a corporal one, and as inflicted by a spiritual, that is, ecclesiastical authority: but how it is properly a punishment of the soul, I apprehend not. Its design is salutary, and the effect also often salutary; so that it is rather medicinal than penal, with respect to the soul: but this by the way only. It would be too large a digression here, to consider that point in such a manner as it deserves to be considered.

I go on to other texts, and shall take one by the way, which though not precisely to the point I am upon, yet is not altogether foreign. "There are many unruly and vain talkers and "deceivers, specially they of the circumcision: whose mouths "must be stopped, who subvert whole houses, teaching things "which they ought not, for filthy lucre's sake——rebuke them "sharply, that they may be sound in the faith<sup>r</sup>." We may here observe the ardent zeal of the Apostle against false teachers, who corrupted the faith, and how great a stress he lays upon being sound in principles. But he does not give orders for excommunicating those deceivers directly, but to admonish them first, and that with some sharpness, in order to shame them, and silence them, and bring them back to the true faith. From all which one may collect these following considerations, which

<sup>o</sup> 1 Cor. v. 5. see commentators.

<sup>p</sup> A summary account of them may be seen in Wolfius's Curæ Philolog. et Crit. ad 1 Cor. v. 5. p. 367. or in Bingham's Eccles. Antiq. lib. xvi. cap. 2. sect. 15.

<sup>q</sup> See Bishop Potter's Church Government, p. 371, &c. Dr. Rogers's Review of a Discourse of the Visible &c. p. 392.

<sup>r</sup> Tit. i. 10, 11, 13.

may be of some use to us: 1. That religion is not a personal thing, which every man may new model or alter for himself, without rebuke from his fellow Christians, or from the governors of the Church. It is the joint patrimony of the whole community, and every man more or less is accountable to his neighbour for any waste made in it. It is the common concern, and every one in his station and degree must give a helping hand to preserve it in its native purity. 2. That the teaching and propagating of false doctrines may subvert whole houses, and do a great deal of mischief: so that truth is not always a gainer by unrestrained liberties of that kind. 3. That sharp rebukes are very proper in such cases, and are no breaches of charity, but the truest instances of brotherly affection and love. 4. That admonitions and inrepatations should first be tried, even in case of great corruption in doctrine, rather than come to extremities at once: a rule expressly taught us in what I am next going to cite.

“A man that is an heretic, after the first and second admonition, “reject; knowing that he that is such is subverted, and sinneth, “being condemned of himself.” This text will deserve a more particular examination, containing much in it directly belonging to the point in hand. Wherefore I shall handle the several parts of it the more distinctly. 1. “A man that is an heretic.” Here the first question is, who, or what is an heretic? To which I answer in the general, not every one that mistakes in judgment, though in matters of great importance, in points fundamental, but he that openly espouses such fundamental error. That I take to be the true and full notion of an heretic, according to the Scripture idea of it. Dr. Whitby adds to the definition, the espousing it “out of disgust, pride, envy, or some worldly “principle;” and “against his conscience.” Indeed that may generally be the case; but that those several particulars are necessary to the definition of heretic is not to be allowed him by any means, for the reasons here following:

1. By that rule, there would be no certain knowing, in most cases, who is an heretic, or who not, since there is no looking into the heart: and how then could we at all observe the Scripture rule of avoiding or rejecting heretics?

2. There is as much danger, or more, when a blind enthusiast, ▪ Tit. iii. 10, 11.

† Whitby on Gal. v. 19.

‡ Whitby on Tit. iii. 10.

or any person of invincible ignorance or prejudice, espouses false doctrines, and corrupts the faith, as when evil-minded men do the same thing out of envy, pride, &c. and against their own consciences: and what shall be done in such cases? The way certainly is, to censure the doctrine as heresy, and to do all that prudence and charity prescribes for the preventing such well meaning but mad teachers from seducing the flock of Christ. It is not possible for men accurately to distinguish one case from the other; and therefore one general rule must serve for both. God will distinguish at the last day. In the mean time, all proper care must be taken to guard against the threatening mischief. For the poison of the doctrine, by whomsoever spread, or upon whatsoever principle, is just the same; only, if it comes from a man otherwise honest, pious, sober, &c. it is likely to insinuate itself deeper, and spread the wider. I say then, heresy lies in espousing pernicious doctrines: that we can judge of, and by that rule can understand how to proceed. The other way involves all in darkness, and leaves a matter of the greatest consequence to the utmost uncertainty. But let us examine what the learned author before mentioned had to plead in behalf of his notion. The strength of all lies chiefly in the word αὐτοκατάκριτος, self-condemned, here used by the Apostle; as if no man could be an heretic that is not self-condemned, or does not go against his own judgment and conscience. But I observe, that the Apostle directs Titus to admonish a heretic once and again. It is supposed that Titus might know a heretic, viz. by his espousing some doctrine subversive of the Gospel: for how could it be certainly known, whether the man believed himself, or taught contrary to his own judgment? If, after being twice admonished for teaching such pernicious doctrine, he should still persist, then he was to be looked upon as αὐτοκατάκριτος, self-condemned. It could no longer be pure ignorance or thoughtlessness, after two several warnings, but must now be looked upon as matter of his own choice or election<sup>v</sup>, as mere wilfulness and obstinacy for him to persist in opposition to the truth. When I say, against the truth, I suppose that to have been a clear case to the admonisher before the first admonition, otherwise there had not been room for admonition at all. Admonish a man that is an heretic; not a man that is really no heretic, which would be contumelious and injurious. And if he persists after two admonitions, then look upon him as αὐτοκατάκριτος, self-condemned, and reject him. It is plain enough from the whole tenor of this passage, that αὐτοκατάκριτος, whatever it means, does not belong to the definition of an heretic as such, but to that of an admonished and still obstinate heretic. He is supposed a heretic before, and therefore was to be admonished once; if need should be, again: and then, if he persisted, he was to be looked upon as desperate and incorrigible; and therefore to be rejected utterly<sup>x</sup>. There is indeed something elliptical in the sentence: knowing that he that is such; as much as to say, knowing that he who continues such after two admonitions is now without excuse<sup>y</sup>, and, as it were, passes sentence upon himself, either as voluntarily cutting himself off from the Church, by an open revolt<sup>z</sup>, or as rendering himself incapable of the privileges and blessings that belong to it, by renouncing its faith; which, in a just construction, is judging or declaring himself unworthy<sup>a</sup> of the blessings tendered. I have been the longer in explaining this text, because the real meaning and purport of it has been frequently misunderstood, or misrepresented. Now I return to Dr. Whitby.

<sup>v</sup> Ideo et sibi damnatum dixit hæreticum, quia et in quo damnatur sibi elegit. Tertull. de Præscript. Hæret. cap. 6.

He pleads, “that the Apostle saith not to Titus, Do thou convince or inform him of his error, but, Do thou admonish him of his fault: which shews, that the crime lay not in his head or his mistaken judgment, (for that can never be corrected by admonition, but only by instruction,) but that it lay in the irregularity of his affections, and the perverseness of his will<sup>b</sup>.” But what if the fault lay in heart and head both, as indeed all

<sup>x</sup> Quare autem post primam et secundam correptionem devitandus sit, reddit causas, dicens: quod subversus est ejusmodi, et peccat, quum sit a semetipso damnatus. Qui enim semel bisque correptus, audito errore suo, non vult corrigi, errare existimat corrigentem: et e contrario se ad pugnas et jurgia verborum parans, eum vult lucrifacere a quo docetur. Hieron. in loc. vol. iv. p. 439.

<sup>y</sup> Ἀναπολόγητος. See Suicer. Thesaur. in αὐτοκατάκριτος.

<sup>z</sup> Hic enim reus sibi erit, qui non ab Episcopo ejectus, sed sponte de Ecclesia profugus, et hæretica præsumptione a semetipso damnatus. Cypr.

Epist. lxi. p. 182. edit. Oxon.

Propterea vero a semetipso dicitur esse damnatus; quia fornicator, adulter, homicida, et cætera vitia per sacerdotes de Ecclesia propelluntur: hæretici autem in semetipsis sententiam ferunt, suo arbitrio de Ecclesia recedentes: quæ recessio, propriæ conscientiæ videtur esse damnatio. Hieron. in loc. p. 439. Compare Hammond upon the text.

<sup>a</sup> See Acts xiii. 46. so Irenæus—est a semetipso damnatus, resistens et repugnans salutis suæ, quod faciunt omnes hæretici. Iren. adver. Hær. lib. iii. c. i. p. 174. Massuet.

<sup>b</sup> Whitby on Tit. iii. 10.

faults do? Omnis peccans ignorat, is a true maxim. There is some error always in judgment, before there is an error in practices; for evil, as evil, cannot be chosen. The fault therefore of an heretic, really such, is, that some corrupt affection (I except the case of invincible infirmity) misleads him first to pass a rash precipitate judgment; and next to espouse that judgment openly. And lastly, (if he proceeds so far,) to persist in it against all advices or admonitions to the contrary. The heart perverts the head; and both conspire in the same false judgment and conduct. The good Doctor pleads further: "No man who acts according to his judgment, how erroneous soever it may be, is self-condemned in that action<sup>c</sup>." Yes, if he made a rash judgment, and might have known or done better, he is self-condemned: for he condemns others who judge rashly and wrongly, when they might and ought to have judged better; and so of course he condemns himself, by the same sentence<sup>d</sup>. There are two kinds of self-condemnation, one direct and explicit, the other indirect, implicit, virtual, consequential. As to direct self-condemnation, few fall into it: for men are so partial towards their own failings, that they seldom see their own false judgment, or wrong conduct, and as seldom condemn themselves for either. It is their fault that they do not: such self-condemnation would be commendable, and a good step towards recovery: it is not such self-condemnation as that, that the Apostle speaks of. There is too little of it every where; presumption and self-applause are the foibles of mankind. And they will easily take care in most cases not to be self-condemned, though condemned by all the world besides. It is not self-condemnation in this sense that makes an ill man, or aggravates a fault, but the want of it<sup>e</sup>. The other kind of self-condemnation, which I call indirect, is what the Apostle may point to as an aggravating circumstance of heresy, after two admonitions. The man justifies himself in opposition to truth and good counsel, does not condemn himself directly, when he ought to do it, and amend: but he condemns himself indirectly, as acting against the law of his mind, against that general law by which he condemns others, and justly, whenever they allow themselves in wrong things, and ought to know better. This is his condemnation, that he approves in a particular instance through partiality, what himself in the general

<sup>c</sup> Whitby on Tit. iii. 10.

<sup>d</sup> See Rom. ii. 1.

<sup>e</sup> See Hammond upon the text.

condemns. All *sinner*s, in this sense, are self-condemned; and so are heretics also among the rest. Indeed, all that do not make a proper use of their rational faculties, when they may and ought to do it, are thus self-condemned: and their own awakened consciences will rise up against them at the last day, as men guilty of great prevarication and self-repugnancy, for allowing in themselves what they otherwise disallow and condemn. "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee, thou wicked servant," will then be the sentence due to all, who having been twice admonished of corrupting the faith, repented not of it, but persevered in their errors both of judgment and practice, when they might have known better.

I defined heresy, not merely a mistake of judgment, (though in fundamentals,) but espousing such erroneous judgment, either teaching and disseminating it, or openly supporting and assisting those that do, siding with them in it. This I conceive to be the true Scripture notion of heresy<sup>f</sup>. Nevertheless, an erroneous judgment in fundamentals has more commonly passed under the name of heresy, and is undoubtedly a great fault, whatever name we call it by. It is running counter to all those texts which recommend zeal and earnestness for the true faith: for how can a man, consistently with himself, be zealous for what he either disbelieves or assents not to? It is likewise running cross to all those texts which exhort to sound faith, or which command us to hold fast what is good, or forbid the being tossed to and fro with every wind of doctrine, and the like. Whether such fault shall be called heresy or no, is only disputing about a name: but that it is in itself (particular circumstances excepted) a great offence against God, cannot be doubted; and it naturally leads to worse.

2. Having largely treated of the nature and notion of heresy, and what properly denominates any man a heretic, I am next to say something of what is meant by rejecting such persons. After all prudent and proper means have been used to reclaim them, or silence them, and they still persist in their heresy, either teaching or otherwise espousing false and pernicious doctrines; then the rule of the Apostle is to reject them, or cast them off, if they have not before cast off themselves. The text does not say, excommunicate them; for that would not be necessary, when they have excommunicated themselves : but it says, shun them, avoid them, reject them ; which, in case they do not cast themselves out, implies and infers a command to exclude them : so that the text, by that general expression, seems to have provided for both the cases.

<sup>f</sup> 1 Cor. xi. 19. Gal. v. 20. 2 Pet. ii. 1.

But I must here again take notice of Dr. Whitby's mistakes and false reasonings. He was sensible, that according to his loose definition of heresy, there would be no knowing, for the most part, who is guilty of it, or who ought to be condemned for it : he produces the objection himself, and afterwards endeavours lamely to answer it. " It is objected," says he, " that there be few who oppose the truth wittingly, and they are only known to God, not to the Church ; which therefore cannot admonish, avoid, or excommunicate them<sup>g</sup>." An insuperable objection against his notion, shewing that it terminates in a flat contradiction to Scripture, and to the plainest reason. Well, how does he reply to it ? The sum of his answer is, " That Titus might have the discerning of spirits, a gift belonging to those times : and the Church that was in the days of the Apostles could easily know, whether the doctrines which others taught in opposition to them were indeed doctrines received from the Apostles or not : if they were not, they who taught them must know they received no such doctrine from them, and so must be self-condemned in teaching it as received from them, or as the faith once delivered to the saints<sup>h</sup>." Never was there a looser reply in so momentous a cause. For, 1. this amounts to saying, that all the precepts about admonishing, avoiding, or excommunicating of heretics, and of consequence, all the other precepts about preserving sound doctrine, or contending earnestly for the faith, expired in a great measure as soon as the miraculous gifts, or gift of discerning spirits ceased. The precepts from that time forwards became impracticable, because nobody now could know what was heresy, or who heretics, since they could not see into men's hearts. Though heretics might subvert whole houses, (and now more than ever, when there should be no Apostle living to control them,) and though their words might eat as doth a canker ; yet the Church is left without remedy : the pastors and guardians of it must not presume to excommunicate, or avoid, or admonish persons as heretics, unless they can first prove them heretics, or ill-designing men: but if it be certain that they are led by an erroneous conscience, they must not be censured at all, but treated as good men and fellow Christians. “So that we are commanded to avoid a heretic; but this heretic is such a sort of a creature as nobody can ever find out, or distinguish from one he is to treat as a brother. But suppose this heretic should tell us, that he did not believe what himself affirmed, then indeed he would be self-condemned, and we might know it: but he must be a fool of a heretic who would declare this, unless he intended to recant and renounce his errors: and whenever he did this, he would no longer be a heretic, no longer to be avoided; and therefore being self-condemned in this sense, would be so far from a reason why we should avoid him, that it would be a reason why we should not avoid him: but treat him as a brother.” 2. From the same principles it will follow, that the whole discipline of the Church, after the time that the gift of discerning of spirits ceased, so far as concerned heretics, was rash and unwarrantable: which no wise man will presume to say or think. 3. It further follows, that, be heresies ever so rife, and the faith ever so much endangered, there is no remedy for it: we cannot know in these times (though the Scriptures are allowed to be clear and perfect) what the doctrines of the Apostles were, or “whether the doctrines which others teach in opposition to them are indeed doctrines received from the Apostles or not:” however, if we may know that, yet without knowing men’s hearts too, all our zeal for the ancient faith is fruitless and vain.

<sup>g</sup> Whitby on Titus iii. 10.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid.

Such are the absurdities which the learned Doctor inevitably runs into, only for the sake of a false favourite notion he had unwarily imbibed. The truth of the whole matter is, we have nothing to do with the inward motives or views of heretics. The mischief lies in the false doctrines which they teach and propagate: and upon that account, and that only, they are to be admonished, avoided, censured, in order to prevent the subverting whole houses, and the like. Possibly such false teachers may intend well: of that God is judge: but the faith of Christ, and the salvation of souls, must not be sacrificed even to the known good intentions of any man or men whatever; no, nor to the preaching even of an angel from heaven, were it a possible supposition. But it may be objected; What! must innocent men suffer for the sake of any good? Is that justice or equity? I answer, that they are innocent in this case, through an erroneous conscience, and invincible ignorance, is more than man knows or can know: of that God is judge. But that corrupting the faith is not an innocent practice, (considered in itself,) but a very ill thing, every one knows, or ought to know; and that is the rule for men to go by in judging, because they can go by no other; and it is in the main both a safe and a certain rule. And if it may sometimes happen, that discerning and upright judges may condemn a man who is innocent in God's sight, (because of some unconquerable infirmity,) while guilty in the eyes of man, this cannot be remedied. The good proceeding from such censures vastly overbalances it. And what if, after all, spiritual censures (for of such only I am speaking) should happen to fall upon such a person, he may be in some measure hurt in his reputation by it, and that is all: and possibly hereupon his errors, before invincible through ignorance, may be removed by wholesome instruction and admonitions, and so he is befriended in it, and may now come to have a covenant right to happiness, who before stood only in uncovenanted mercy. For though God will condemn no man for what he could not help; yet he has promised no man a reward who ever so ignorantly corrupts the faith of the Gospel. But it is said of the unlearned and unstable, that when they wrest the Scriptures, it is to their own destruction. I have dwelt the longer upon this argument, because it appears to me to be a very weighty affair, and not so well considered by many as it ought to be. I now proceed in order to some other texts, relating to the avoiding heretics.

<sup>i</sup> Rogers’s Review of the Visible and Invisible Church, p. 409.

St. John's advice in that case, touched upon before, is, "If there come any one unto you, and bring not this doctrine," (the doctrine of Christ in a material article,) "receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed: for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds<sup>k</sup>." The Apostle here forbids a Christian to salute<sup>l</sup> a man that perverts the Gospel in such a certain article, being a fundamental one: what article he spoke of, I have intimated above. It is observed by interpreters, that denying a person the common forms of salutation was the same with looking upon him as excommunicate<sup>m</sup>. And so these words of the Apostle carry in them the

<sup>k</sup> 2 John 10, 11.
and Whitby.

<sup>l</sup> Χαίρειν αὐτῷ μὴ λέγετε.

<sup>m</sup> See Hammond

force of an excommunication, with respect to the heretics there pointed to, and the force of a prohibition, with respect to other Christians, who are hereby forbidden to receive such heretics into their houses, or to pay them so much as common civilities. This precept of the Apostle may be further illustrated by his own practice, recorded by Irenæus, who had the information at second hand from Polycarp, a disciple of St. John's; that St. John once meeting with Cerinthus at the bath, retired instantly without bathing; for fear, said he, lest the bath should fall, by reason of Cerinthus's being there, the enemy to truth<sup>n</sup>. The like story is there also told of Polycarp himself, with regard to another such heretic, namely, Marcion. And Irenæus's just reflection upon the whole is very observable in these words: "So extremely cautious were the Apostles and their followers to have no communication, no, not so much as in discourse, with any man that adulterated the truth<sup>o</sup>." A conduct, which, as he remarks, was conformable to St. Paul's rule, Tit. iii. 10. The reader will take notice by the way, that though Cerinthus and Marcion might be otherwise ill men, and might perhaps act upon bad motives, yet the stress of the thing lay not there; but it was their being enemies to truth, and their adullerating the truth, (in points fundamental,) which made them so abhorred, and their company so detested by wise and holy men. No matter what their motives were, or their morals in other respects: they corrupted the faith of Christ, and in effect subverted the Gospel: that was enough to render them detestable in the eyes of all men who sincerely loved and valued sound faith.

The bishops of Pergamus and Thyatira are reproved by our Lord for suffering, that is, for not ejecting the Balaamites or Nicolaitans, who taught false doctrine, relating to the fundamentals of Christian practice: they taught the lawfulness of fornication, and of eating things offered to idols. That was a heresy in doctrinals, immediately affecting the agenda of Christianity, the moral commands of Scripture; which they very probably

<sup>n</sup> Καὶ εἰσὶν οἱ ἀκηκοῦτες αὐτοῦ, οἱ Ἰωάννης, ὁ τοῦ Κυρίου μαθητῆς, ἐν τῇ Ἐφέσῳ πορευθεὶς λούσασθαι, καὶ ἰδὼν ἔσω Κηρίνθον, ἐξήλατο τοῦ Βαλαναίου μὴ λουσάμενος, ἀλλ' ἐπειπὼν φύγωμεν, μὴ καὶ τὸ βαλαναῖον συμπέση, ἐνδον ὄντος Κηρίνθου, τοῦ τῆς ἀληθείας ἐχθροῦ. Iren. lib. iii. c. 3. p. 177. Bened. alias 204. Grab. Conf. Eu-

seb. Eccl. H. lib. iii. c. 28. p. 123. Theodoret. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. c. 3. p. 220.

<sup>o</sup> Τοσαῦτοι οἱ Ἀπόστολοι καὶ οἱ μαθηταὶ αὐτῶν ἔσχον εὐλάβειαν, πρὸς τὸ μηδέ μεχρὶ λόγου κοινωνεῖν τινὶ τῶν παραχαρασσόντων τὴν ἀλήθειαν, ὡς καὶ Παῦλος ἔφησεν ἰσχυρῶς ἀνθρώπων, κ. τ. λ. Iren. ibid.

misinterpreted and perverted, much after the same manner as others perverted such texts as contain the credenda, matters of faith strictly so called. There is not much difference in the main between the two cases; excepting that one is more gross and scandalous, and shews itself in more sensible effects. There is the same presumptuous tampering with Scripture, the same kind of artificial elusions, the like wire-drawing of texts in both cases: and there is likewise the same kind of unbelief or disbelief of God's sacred word, only in different articles, and the like opposition to Gospel truths, only to different purposes. If any man through mere weakness of judgment should have imbibed the doctrine of the Nicolaitans, but resolving at the same time never to divulge it, nor practise upon it, I see not what harm a bare opinion, and owing only to infirmity, would do him, while dormant and without effect. But if any person, through the like weakness of judgment, should entertain low and degrading notions of his God and Saviour, though he should never divulge it, he would suffer some harm by it with respect to his religious services, which would be thereby rendered less perfect. For in that case, the ill effect so far is inseparable from the false opinion; though I doubt not but all merciful allowances would be made for it. But as the criminal part in the former case would lie chiefly in practising upon the persuasion, or in divulging it to the hurt of other persons, so in this latter also, the most criminal circumstance would be the espousing and publicly supporting such false persuasion to the detriment of religion. For if he who shall break one of the least moral commandments, and shall teach men so, shall be called least in the kingdom of heaven, (Matt. v. 19.) it must be a very dangerous experiment for any man to presume to teach any thing contrary to the Gospel of Christ in the main articles of faith or doctrine, because the Christian life is nearly concerned in both, and the honour of God and religion are bound up with them. And the pastors or guardians of the Christian religion ought no more to suffer any notorious insults upon the great credenda of our most holy religion, than upon the agenda: since both rest upon the same foundation, have a close connection with each other, and are, for the most part, likely to stand or fall together.

II. I have now proved from direct Scripture-texts, that it is the duty of Christians to refuse communion with those who corrupt the faith of Christ in points fundamental, and persist in so doing, after proper cautions and admonitions given them. I am in the next place to enforce the doctrine yet further, by considerations drawn from the very nature and reason of the thing, upon Scripture principles. Piety towards God, charity towards other men, and justice towards our own souls, all conspire to recommend and authorize such conduct.

1. I say, piety towards God requires such a conduct. For can it be thought, that when the high Lord and Governor of the universe vouchsafes to speak to us from heaven, and to reveal truths of importance, that good men ought patiently to bear the perverting of those sacred truths, or the adulterating of those heavenly instructions. Earthly governors would resent the putting false constructions upon their laws or edicts, or the wresting them to quite different purpose from what they were intended for, to deceive and mislead their people: how much more shall the God of heaven resent any indignities of that kind! It is the cause of God and religion, to rescue the word of God from perverse glosses and comments, and to preserve it in its native purity and perfection. To admit those who corrupt and deprave its sense in any gross manner to the common honours and privileges of fellow Christians, would be the ready way to introduce all imaginable confusion in faith and worship, and to deface Christianity to such a degree, that common Christians at least could not know how or where to find it. For example: had the Cerinthians, Ebionites, Marcionites, Valentinians, Manichees, and other sects too numerous to mention, been all admitted as fellow Christians, Christianity must have been looked upon as the most uncertain, unconstant, inconsistent thing in the world: and both the religion itself, and the Scriptures which contain it, would very probably have been lost before now, or have come down to us so mangled, adulterated, disguised, that no one could know what to depend upon as true and sincere, either as to words or sense. The discriminating of heretics from faithful Christians, and therewith preserving the unity of the Church and the purity of doctrine, has been a principal means of fixing the Christian religion in its most material articles, and of supporting the honour of it against all its enemies without, whether Jews, Pagans, or mere infidels. So necessary was it to discountenance all attempts for subverting or perverting the truth as it was in Christ Jesus, and to separate the clean from the unclean, by rejecting heretics, as unworthy of Christian communion, or even of the name of Christians, except it were in a very large sense.

2. As piety towards God, and reverence towards his sacred word, required such conduct; so likewise did charity towards men; charity towards the offenders, and charity towards all mankind. It was a charitable office towards the corruptors of the faith of Christ, to reject and disown them, in order to make them ashamed<sup>p</sup>, and to bring them to repentance, that so their souls "might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus<sup>q</sup>." It is true, that it often failed of having this salutary effect, as the judgments of God also often fail, and where they do not cure they irritate and harden, and render worse, which is no argument against the salutary nature of the remedy, but shews only the incurable disorder of the patient. Indeed St. Paul does distinguish his coming with the rod of excommunication, from his coming in "love and in the spirit of meekness<sup>r</sup>:" not as if such discipline were not an instance of love, or were not perfectly consistent with a spirit of meekness, but it was not love in every view, or in every sense of the word, like the love shewn towards the faithful in all the outward expressions of approbation and friendliness; for the case did not admit of it. It was love mingled with wholesome severity, the truer love for being so mingled, when the necessity of the case required it: wounds they were, but of a friend still, and in a case where the kindest of friends could not otherwise shew themselves kinder than by so doing. Meekness it was not, under that precise formality, but consistent with all that could be called Christian meekness: for to forbear sharpness and severity, in such a case, is not meekness, but tameness, and a Laodicean lukewarmness. So that the exercise of proper discipline, in such instances, is in reality fervent love and charity towards the offenders themselves, in a spiritual view, but expressing itself in the harsher way, the only way left for it towards men in their circumstances. Palliating medicines would be cruel and barbarous applications, when corrosives are the only means left to recover the patient, and to effect the cure<sup>s</sup>. Upon the whole therefore, charity towards the offenders themselves requires such a conduct as I have been mentioning.

<sup>p</sup> 2 Thess. iii. 14.

<sup>q</sup> 1 Cor. v. 5.

<sup>r</sup> 1 Cor. iv. 21.

<sup>s</sup> The objections made to the method,

as not proper, are abundantly answered by a very learned Prelate, Potter on Church-Government, p. 399, &c.

There can be less appearance for any question, whether it be not also charity towards all men besides. It is charity towards the ignorant, as carrying instruction along with it; charity towards the unwary, as giving them warning to stand off from infection; charity towards the confirmed Christians, as encouraging them still more, and preserving them from insults; charity towards the whole Church, as supporting both their unity and purity; charity towards all mankind, towards them that are without, as it is recommending pure religion to them in the most advantageous light, obviating their most plausible calumnies, and giving them less occasion to blaspheme.

3. I observe, in the third place, that justice to our own souls requires, that we use all prudent and proper endeavours to discountenance heresies, by refusing communion with their open favourers and abettors. For otherwise, as John speaks, we become partakers of their evil doings. To own them as fellow Christians, is to take their guilt upon ourselves, or greater; I say, greater, because supposing them so far innocent as honestly to follow their own judgment, yet while we are of a contrary judgment, it cannot but be guilty practice and conduct in us, and very great too, to smother our sentiments, or not to bear our testimony in such a way as Christ has appointed, against all notorious corruptions either of faith, or worship, or doctrine. It appears then sufficiently, both from Scripture directly, and from the very nature and reason of the thing, that it is our bounden duty to refuse communion with those that persist in opposing the fundamental articles of our most holy religion. I am aware that several objections have been made, and will be made, to what Christ has ordered and the Church has all along practised as concerning our conduct in this article: for what is there so just, so rational, or so commendable, that may not be objected to? However, in order to satisfy reasonable men at least, I design a distinct chapter for the further clearing up the question in hand.

CHAP. V.

Objections removed, and some vulgar mistakes rectified.

HAVING laid down our principles, and the grounds upon which we go, our next concern is to remove or obviate whatever threatens to overturn them, or to lessen their force, lest any weak objections on one side, left unanswered, may prevail more with some persons than the strongest arguments on the other. I proceed then to the business.

I. It may have been sometimes invidiously suggested, that the insisting so strongly upon the necessity of believing, or however of not opposing this doctrine, is carrying matters to an immoderate height, and tends to provoke others to run into a contrary extreme out of a kind of indignation, and excessive renitence. The plea is smooth and specious, and appears to carry a fair show of lenity and moderation in it, which are virtues much to be admired; but in reality it contains little, as here applied, more than artful abuse, and such as is frequently played with in other the like cases. For the purpose: if any person is disposed to undermine the inspiration of sacred Writ, he begins commonly with complaints of the stiffness and dogmaticalness of common Divines, which prejudice men of freer thoughts, as is pretended, against Scripture itself, and almost force them into another extreme. So again, if any man has a mind to relax the strictness of the Gospel-rule, and to bring it down to his taste, he falls to declaiming against the excessive rigour of religionists, which frighten many sober persons, as is said, from embracing religion. Complaints of that kind may sometimes be just, but they are oftener mere artifice. It will be proper to examine, in the first place, what truth there is in the suggestions brought about our running into extremes. Without all question, extremes are carefully to be avoided in every thing: extreme cold may be as bad as extreme heat: and extreme lenity is a fault, as much as extreme severity. But the thing to be proved is, that the insisting upon the doctrine of the Trinity, as an essential article, is an extreme, or that it is not in reality the true and golden mean between rigour on one hand and lukewarmness on the other. It may be true, that the insisting upon this doctrine may have that accidental effect, to prejudice weak minds the more against it, or against religion itself. In like manner, the insisting upon the doctrine of the cross, the duty of self-denial, and the necessity of universal righteousness, may have prejudiced many against Christianity, and yet daily do so. But still if the doctrine be both true and important, it must be taught and inculcated: and the question is not in such cases, whether many may not be offended or scandalized at any doctrine, but whether the doctrine be such as ought to be insisted upon. For, as a very judicious and learned Prelate<sup>t</sup> has appositely observed, “ St. Paul has plainly taught us how we ought to conduct ourselves in such cases. He knew very well that Jew and Gentile took great offence at the doctrine of a crucified Saviour, and he could not but see that Christianity would be more favourably entertained by both, if that offence were removed, and the Gospel reduced to a scheme of mere morality, ratified by a person sent from God, and enforced by stronger assurances of rewards and punishments than had ever been given before. But, notwithstanding all this, we, says he, preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness.” The reason is plain: for the ministers of Christ are under special direction, and must not dare to prevaricate in their sacred employment. They must never presume to betray the truth of the Gospel with any view to prevent offence: for such offence is taken, not given, and is therefore of no moment. They only are to bear the blame, who are causelessly offended at what they ought to receive with the profoundest respect and veneration.

I may here also take notice, that when some persons of more warmth than wisdom have gone upon what they call healing measures, in order to reconcile many (as they supposed) to Christianity shortened and curtailed in its prime articles, they have been for the most part miserably disappointed. Their unwarrantable concessions, instead of making more Christians, (half Christians I should say,) have only made more infidels. And it was natural to think that such would the result be. For when once the advocates for religion begin to recede beyond what they have warrant for, they give very great advantage to the enemy, who may then modestly expect to draw them on further, upon the same motive, or principle, which had before carried them too far. For if they yield to importunity, rather than to reason, in one case, why not in another? Or if the first step taken out of the way could appear rational, why not a second, and a third, and so on, till there be no end of wandering? It is frequently the fate of those over-complying gentlemen, that while they stoop too low in hopes to fetch others up, they are themselves dragged down, and can never recover it. They are insensibly carried over to the party towards which they lean; and instead of preserving a balance, (which they lost in the first decline,) they are at length found to run in with the other extreme. The Episcopian neutrality seldom stays long, before it passes over into Arianism or Socinianism; and these again easily degenerate into Deism and Atheism. It is much to be questioned whether mysteries, after all, are really the things which are most apt to offend the fashionable world: the purity of the Gospel precepts is the hardest of digestion; and one Commandment, very probably, may make greater difficulty than many Creeds. But the principal reason for striking at mysteries first is, because it is more decent to begin there; and after a breach once made in the main fabric, it is easy to go on to a total subversion. The Deists, in their turn, take up the same topics of moderation and lenity: "Let not the men of faith" "despise the men of reason; and again, let not the men of reason despise the men of faith, so long as both agree in the "substantial duties:" this is the cant. And truly, if moderation is to stand for yielding and complying, be it right or wrong, and if that be all the rule we have to go by, I do not see that the men argue amiss. But surely we must stop somewhere: and where can we better stop than at necessaries, at truths, and important truths? For things of that value ought never to be sacrificed to any temporal considerations, or to any views of a false and short-lived peace.

<sup>t</sup> Bishop of London, in his Charge of May 28, 1730, p. 28.

<sup>u</sup> 1 Cor. i. 23.

From hence it may be inferred, that it is not owing to any immoderate rigours of the more cautious Divines, if infidelity happens to gain ground, but to the immoderate and extravagant concessions of those who are not so careful as they should be to keep up the ancient faith in its first purity and perfection. Accordingly it may be observed, how the unbelievers caress and compliment those complying gentlemen who meet them half way, while they are perpetually inveighing against the stiff Divines, as they call them, whom they can make no advantage of. They know their friends from their foes: and it may be learned from them how the case stands: Fas est et ab hoste doceri.

To illustrate and confirm the general observations, let the reader reflect a little upon the unhappy conduct of Socinus, and the upshot of it. He had contrived a system for his friends to abide by, and he hoped they would rest there: but many of them, upon the same principles, whereby he had led them so far, resolved to go further, throwing off the worship of Christ, in consequence of their mean opinion they had entertained of him.

Socinus reclaimed, remonstrated, cried out aloud, hoping to stop their progress by his earnestness, (for he had yielded too much before to talk of reason now,) and to fetch them back; but all to no purpose. He represented to them the dreadful consequences of discarding the divine worship of Christ: "That it was rendering the whole Christian religion weak and precarious, was sapping the main foundation of their faith and hope, and grievously offending God the Father, and Christ Jesus<sup>x</sup>: that he had never yet met with any man of true piety and godliness who durst venture upon it, but that he knew several of them who had thereupon turned Epicureans, or downright "Atheists". All which was true: but why could not he have seen that Atheism hung at the end of the chain, till he came to the last link? Never did man more expose himself than Socinus did in that instance. For indeed the throwing off the divine worship of Christ was but the natural and inevitable consequence of his scheme, if one would act consistently: and the next consequence to that was Deism or Atheism, by his own account. So it was plainly telling the world that he had drawn his disciples into a labyrinth, and knew not how to extricate them. To go back was a mortifying thought to vain men; to go forwards was to plunge into downright Atheism. Such generally is the fate of the self-opinionated, who will not listen to sober counsels in time, but precipitately strike off from the right way to follow they know not what, or to fix they know not where. I might mention those amongst us who began with Christianity not Mysterious<sup>z</sup>, and in a few years after settled in Pantheism<sup>a</sup>, little short of the broadest Atheism: and others might be named,

<sup>x</sup> Ipsius Christi universa religio in dubium revocetur, aut saltem mutationi et fini in hoc ipso seculo obnoxia redditur; summum et præstantissimum nostræ spei et fidei in Deum fundamentum nobis eripitur; ac denique, ne omnia hinc provenientia mala et incommoda, quæ innumerabilia sunt, enumerare hic nunc velle videar, in ipsum Christum et Deum Patrem gravissime peccatur. Socin. ad Radec. Epist. iii. p. 387.

<sup>y</sup> Socinus. "Quotquot ego vidi adorationis Christi oppugnatores, omnes tandem in Atheismum sunt prolapsi; quod et tibi accidet, nisi sententiam mutaveris."

Non dixit Socinus, omnes quos ipse vidisset adorationis Christi oppugnatores tandem in Atheismum fuisse prolapsos; sed neminem se ex istorum numero adhuc novisse, qui Christiana pietate et vitæ sanctimonia esset præditus; imo nonnullos ex ipsis se vidisse aut scivisse Epicureos, et plane Atheos factos. Nec mirum esse, cum hæc ad Epicureismum et Atheismum homini Christi sacris initiato via compendiaria quædam foret. Disput. inter F. S. et Christian. Franken. p. 772, 773.

<sup>z</sup> A book published with that title, A. D. 1696.

<sup>a</sup> The Pantheisticon, published A. D. 1720.

who, from finding fault with the Council of Nice for corrupting Christianity<sup>b</sup>, (as they fondly supposed,) have gradually, and in a course of years, come to reject Christianity itself, as needless and useless, and all revealed religion as mere rubbish<sup>c</sup>. When once men break off from the reverence due to Sacred Writ, and to the eminent lights of the best and purest ages, they roll downwards apace, and very rarely recover it. For if they were not strong enough to stand at first upon plain and firm ground, how shall they keep steady afterwards upon declivity? I say then, that the blame lies not upon those who abide unmovable in the old and well-tried doctrine of the Trinity, but upon those that are soon shaken in mind, and depart from it. To adhere firmly to it is not rigour, but constancy: and to forsake it, or to grow indifferent towards it, is not prudence or moderation, but unmanly levity and wantonness, or something worse.

II. It is sometimes pleaded, that a wicked life is the worst heresy, intimating as if breaches made in our most holy faith were of slight consideration, so long as a man lives a good moral life in other respects. I readily allow that a wicked life is the worst thing imaginable: but I conceive further, that the spreading and propagating of corrupt doctrines is leading a wicked life, in the strictest sense. I speak not of mere mistakes in judgment, but of espousing and propagating them; corrupting the faith in important articles, and diffusing such corruptions. A life so spent is a wicked life, if opposing divine truths, undermining the Gospel, and subverting souls be wicked attempts, as they undoubtedly are. It must be owned, that a good life is every thing to a Christian: but what does a good life consist of? Universal righteousness in faith and manners. Therefore to talk of a man's leading a good life while he is corrupting the faith and disseminating pernicious doctrines, is talking contradictions. As to the sincerity or good meaning of the men who do it, that shall be considered under another article: I speak now of the nature and quality of the thing, abstracted from the circumstances of the person: and I say, it is wickedness and a perfect contradiction to a good life. It is evil in itself, and the iniquity of it is fixed in the nature and reason of things.

Some have seemed to wonder<sup>d</sup> why commonly a warmer zeal

<sup>b</sup> Rights of the Christian Church, p. 196, &c. published 1706.

<sup>c</sup> Christianity as old as the Creation, p. 421. published 1730.

<sup>d</sup> The author of the Defence of Scripture as the only Standard of

should be shewn against heresies, than against ordinary immoralities: the wonder will presently cease, if the case be but rightly stated. Ask, whether one that commits fornication, or one that teaches and inculcates it as lawful practice, is the wickeder man? Here the case is plain, that the heretic who takes pains to spread such dissolute doctrine, and to debauch the principles of the age, is incomparably a viler man than he that barely perpetrates the sin. So then it must be allowed, that an heretic in morality is infinitely a greater sinner than one who through his lusts and passions merely leads an immoral life.

So as to faith, ask, whether a man that perverts any material article, either carelessly or through some prejudice, but lets it go no further, or one that does the same thing, and then takes upon him to teach and inculcate the erroneous doctrine to others; I say, ask which of the two is the wickeder man? The latter, undoubtedly. He is the heretic in teaching and patronizing a corruption of faith, while the other who corrupts it only for himself is no formal heretic, as I conceive, in strict propriety of speech<sup>e</sup>, though not a good man. Thus, while we compare an heretic in morality with a man merely immoral; or an heretic in faith with a man that is merely a misbeliever; it is obvious to perceive, that there is much greater malignity in those that teach or espouse what they ought not, than in those that merely believe wrong, or do wrong: because the leaders and abettors of any ill thing diffuse the mischief all around; the other let it die with them. Thus far, I presume, is plain and clear.

After thus comparing kind with kind, let us next take them, as it were, across, and compare the heretic in faith with an immoral man, in the common sense of the word. We will allow, that an heretic in matters of mere revelation is not so bad a man, generally speaking, as an heretic in morality; but still he may be a much worse man, or, to speak plainer, may do a great deal more mischief by his doctrine, than the immoral man may do by his example. For besides his propagating dangerous errors, subverting souls, it is further to be considered, that he sets himself up as a rival teacher, in opposition to the faithful ministers of Christ: he weakens their hands, frustrates their pious labours, perverts their flocks, lessens their esteem in the eyes of their people, gives the common enemy a handle to insult and blaspheme, raises a kind of flame and war in the Church, and remotely administers to all immorality and dissoluteness of manners, by taking off the influence of the best instructions of their more knowing and more edifying guides. These are no slight mischiefs, but great, and wide, and often of long continuance, and in several respects irreparable<sup>f</sup>. Therefore let it not be thought strange, if the most holy and excellent men have ever expressed the greatest detestation of all attempts of that kind. Scarcely is a man excusable for advancing even a truth, to the detriment of public peace, if it be of a slight nature, not worth the contending for, or such as might innocently be dropped: but to advance falsehoods, (and in points very material, tending to create infinite disturbances here, as well as to betray many to perdition hereafter; these are crimes unpardonable, if the authors see what they do; and if they do not, yet their guilt remains, if they might see, and will not. However, the nature and quality of the thing is not altered by their seeing or not seeing: for heresy is still heresy, though a man intends well, as much as persecution is still persecution, though a person thinks and believes that he does God service in it. Let it not therefore be imagined, that false teachers are to be numbered among the smaller offenders, or that they are not, generally speaking, the greatest of sinners. Accordingly, we find our blessed Lord never shewed a keener resentment against any men whatever,

Faith is one of those wonderers, (p. 40.) But he entirely mistakes the case, opposing imperfection in knowledge, which is his soft name for heresy, to imperfection in practice: whereas heresy is not barely imperfection in knowledge, but it is evil practice; for spreading pernicious doctrines is a fault in the conduct of life. Therefore the opposition lies between one evil practice and another, and the question is, which is worst.

<sup>e</sup> Qui sententiam suam, quamvis falsam atque perversam, nulla pertinaci animositate defendunt, præsertim quam non audacia præsumptionis suæ pepererunt, sed a seductis atque in errorem lapsis parentibus acceperunt; quærunt autem cauta sollicitudine veritatem, corrigi parati cum invenerint, nequaquam sunt inter hereticos deputandi. Augustin. Epist. xliii. p. 88. ed. Benedict.

<sup>f</sup> Mr. Bayle describes it thus: " I do not know where we can find out crimes which are not of a less heinous nature than that of rending the mystical body of Jesus Christ, that spouse which he has redeemed with his blood, that mother which begets us to God, which nourishes us with the milk of that wisdom which is without guile, which leads us to everlasting bliss. What fouler crime can we think of, than rebelling against such a mother, than

" defaming her all the world over, " endeavouring to stir up her children " against her, tearing them from her " bosom by millions, to drag them, " as much as in us lies, into everlasting flames, them and their posterity " from generation to generation? " Where can we find the first-rate " high treason against the divine " Majesty, unless in instances of this " kind?" Supplem. to Philosoph. Commentary, pref. p. 517.

than against false prophets, or those who taught false doctrines<sup>h</sup> in opposition to divine truths. I interpret false prophets so as to include false teachers, such at least as corrupt sound doctrine in any fundamental article: and so Grotius and Hammond interpret, like judicious and knowing men. But Dr. Whitby, disliking that construction, advances some odd speculations of his own to pervert the true meaning of the texts. He pleads that all false teachers<sup>i</sup>, all that assert any thing wrong, are not included. Perhaps not: but yet all that manifestly pervert the faith in any great degree may be included notwithstanding; yea, and must be, by parity of reason. He pretends it to be ridiculous, to judge of false teachers by false doctrines. But how can we judge better of a false teacher, than by the falsehood of what he teaches? It is the very rule which St. John lays down<sup>k</sup>, and so does St. Paul<sup>l</sup>; which might have deterred any considering man from calling it ridiculous. Besides, in the very reason of the thing, what rule could be pitched upon either surer or wiser? False teachers would pretend extraordinary endowments of learning perhaps, or sanctity, or piety, and an affectionate concern for the happiness of those whom they should address themselves to: but they might be detected by their fruits<sup>m</sup>. For if their doctrine should be found contrary to the doctrine of Christ, that is conviction at once, and all their glozing pretences are worth nothing. They are false prophets, because their doctrines are false: what can be a plainer proof of it? Neither is it any objection to this, that our Lord afterwards speaks of doing the will of his Father, and of working iniquity: for maintaining the truth is doing God's will; and corrupting or resisting it, is working iniquity. Therefore let ε Matt. viii. 15. xxiv. 24. Mark xiii. 22. Compare Acts xx. 29, 30. See Grotius and Hammond on Matt. vii. 15.

<sup>h</sup> Matt. xv. 4—9.

<sup>i</sup> Whitby on Matt. vii. 15.

<sup>k</sup> 1 John iv. 2, 3. 2 John 9, 10, 11.

<sup>l</sup> 1 Cor. xii. 3.

<sup>m</sup> Ἄρα γε ἐκ τῶν καρπῶν αὐτῶν ἐπιγνώσεσθε αὐτούς. ἰκανὰ μὲν οὖν καὶ αὐτὰ καθ' ἑαυτὰ τὰ δυσγαγῆ καὶ παμμίαρα δόγματα τὸν οἰκείον ἐπιδείξαι πατέρα· ἐκ γὰρ τοῦ καρποῦ, φησὶ, τὸ δέν-δρον γινώσκεται. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. iii. p. 226.

Sed quid ait Salvator? Ex fructibus eorum cognoscetis eos, id est, cum cœperint divinas illas voces non jam proferre tantum, sed etiam exponere, nec adhuc jactare solum, sed etiam interpretari; tunc amaritudo illa, tunc acerbitas, tunc rabies intelligetur, tunc novitium virus exhalabitur, tunc prophanz novitates aperientur; tunc primum scindi sepem videas, tunc transferri patrum terminos, tunc catholicam fidem cœdi, tunc ecclesiasticum dogma lacerari. Vincent. Lirinens. Commonit. cap. 36.

this be included at least among other bad fruits, other works of iniquity; for it is properly such. Dr. Whitby pretends further, that false prophets is not a name for false teachers at large, or for heretics: that appears to be his meaning. But yet certain it is from the New Testament, and from some of the texts which he himself produces, that it is. St. Peter makes the name of false prophets equivalent to that of false teachers, who should bring in damnable heresies<sup>m</sup>. And St. John gives the name of false prophets<sup>n</sup> to the heretics of his time; namely, to the Docetæ, and Cerinthians, and others of like stamp, as I have partly observed already, and shall more fully shew in a succeeding chapter. Therefore it is right to interpret the false prophets which our Lord speaks of, in such a sense as to include all heretics, all false teachers, who in any grievous manner, or degree, should pervert the Gospel of Christ. And so the primitive Fathers interpret our Lord's words<sup>o</sup>.

As our Lord himself made use of a particular sharpness of expression against false teachers, or heretics, so also did his Apostles after him. St. Paul has done it very often against those grievous wolves, (as he calls them,) which may appear in some measure from what has been cited above: I shall only refer to some noted texts<sup>p</sup> to avoid prolixity; but observing also in passing, that though St. Paul delivered an immoral man over to Satan<sup>q</sup> for his incontinence, yet he did not use so strong an expression as anathema, or accursed, which he pronounced upon heretics<sup>r</sup>. St. Peter is exceeding tart against some false teachers of his days<sup>s</sup>, who “privily brought in damnable heresies, even “denying the Lord that bought them.” They also taught men to sit loose from all decent rule and order, and, under pretence of Christian liberty, to run riot in luxury and dissolute behaviour. They were heretics in morality as well as in faith, and of the worst kind: and therefore what is said of them is not applicable to other false teachers in the same degree, but in proportion to iii. præf. p. 225.

<sup>m</sup> 2 Pet. ii. 1.

<sup>n</sup> 1 John iv. 1.

<sup>o</sup> Justin Martyr. Dialog. p. 100, 101, 249. edit. Jebb. alias 208, 316. Thirlby. Tertullian. Præscript. c. iv. xliv. Cyrill. Hierosol. Catech. iv. 1. Hieronym. in Matt. vii. 15. xxiv. 24. Athanas. ad Episc. Ægypti et Lib. p. 270, 272. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. l.

<sup>p</sup> Acts xx. 29, 30. Rom. xvi. 17, 18. Gal. i. 8, 9. v. 10, 12. 1 Tim. i. 19, 20. iv. 1, 2, 3. vi. 3, 4, 5. 2 Tim. ii. 16, 17, 18. 2 Tim. iii. 1—9. Tit. i. 10—16. iii. 10, 11.

<sup>q</sup> 1 Cor. v. 5.

<sup>r</sup> Gal. i. 8, 9.

<sup>s</sup> 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2, 3.

the malignity of their respective heresy. The Nicolaitans, I suppose, were the men whom St. Peter pointed to<sup>t</sup>. I hinted that they were heretics in faith, because their doctrine, relating to God and Christ, was much the same with that of Cerinthus, as Irenæus testifies of them<sup>u</sup>: and thus we may easily understand why St. Peter says of them, that they “denied the Lord “that bought them.” St. Jude expresses himself with uncommon warmth against the same false teachers, whom St. Peter had before censured<sup>x</sup>. St. John, who was all love, and meekness, and charity, yet severely lashes the heretics of his times, either such as denied Christ’s humanity, or such as impugned his divinity; which I shall shew in due time and place. The names which he bestows upon them are as follows; antichrists, liars<sup>z</sup>, seducers<sup>a</sup>, false prophets<sup>b</sup>, deceivers<sup>c</sup>. He scrupled not to go wandering upon the mountains in quest of a wicked robber, a captain of a gang, in order to recover him to Christ; and he did recover him<sup>d</sup>: but with the heretic Cerinthus, a corrupter of the truth, he would not stay under the same roof<sup>e</sup>: by which it may appear, how much he detested heresies above common immoralities. His disciple Ignatius, an apostolical man, was exactly of the same sentiments. “For,” says he, (speaking of them that commit adultery, and the like,) “they that corrupt “(debauch) families, shall not inherit the kingdom of God: therefore, if they who do such things according to the flesh, perish; “how much more he, who by his pernicious doctrine corrupts “that divine faith, for the which Jesus Christ was crucified! “Such a man so defiled shall go into fire unquenchable; and so “also shall he that hearkens unto him<sup>f</sup>.” See from hence how this holy Bishop, soon after a martyr, abominated heresies beyond even great immoralities, as being of more diffusive and more lasting malignity, and not destroying men’s bodies, but subverting their souls. His scholar Polycarp, another eminent

<sup>t</sup> Vid. Buddæus Eccles. Apostol. p. 600.

<sup>u</sup> Iren. lib. iii. cap. 11. Conf. Buddæus Eccles. Apostol. p. 367, 383, 406.

<sup>x</sup> Vid. Buddæus Eccles. Apostol. p. 594.

<sup>y</sup> 1 John ii. 18, 22. iv. 3. 2 John 7.

<sup>z</sup> 1 John ii. 22.

<sup>a</sup> 1 John ii. 26.

<sup>b</sup> 1 John iv. 1.

<sup>c</sup> 2 John 7.

<sup>d</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. iii. c. 23. Clem. Alex. p. 959. ed. Ox.

<sup>e</sup> See above, p. 469.

<sup>f</sup> Οἱ οἰκοφθόροι βασιλείαν Θεοῦ οὐ κληρονομήσουσιν· εἰ οὖν οἱ κατὰ σάρκα ταῦτα πράσσοντες ἀπέθανον, πόσῳ μᾶλλον ἐὰν πιστῶν Θεοῦ ἐν κακῇ διδασκαλίᾳ φθείρῃ, ὑπὲρ ἧς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐσταυρώθη; ὁ τοιοῦτος ῥυπαρὸς γενόμενος, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἀσβεστον χωρήσει, ὁμοίως καὶ ἀκούων αὐτοῦ. Ignat. ad Ephes. c. 16.

Bishop of those times, was a man of exemplary severity against all kinds of sinners, but against none so much as against Marcion, a noted heretic, whom he calls the first-born of Satans. I shall mention but one authority more, the very pious and holy St. Cyprian, of the third century. He argues the point at length, that a heretic is a much wickeder man than one that lapsed into idolatry under persecution. He states the comparison to this effect: "This is a worse crime than that which the lapsers may seem to have committed, who yet do a severe penance for their crime, and implore the mercy of God by a long and plenary satisfaction. The one seeks to the Church, and humbly entreats her favour, the other resists the Church, and proclaims open war against her. The one has the excuse of necessity, the other is retained by his own wilfulness only. He that lapses only hurts himself; but he that endeavours to make a heresy or schism, draws many after him. Here is only the loss of one soul; but there a multitude are endangered. The lapsers is sensible that he has done amiss, and therefore mourns and laments for it: but the other proudly swells in his crime, pleases himself in his misconduct, divides the children from their mother, draws away the sheep from the pastor, and disturbs the sacraments of God: and whereas a lapsers sins but once, the other sins daily<sup>h</sup>."

From the authorities I have given, it may abundantly appear that Christ and his Apostles, and their followers, have, in a very distinguishing manner, expressed their abhorrence of false prophets, false apostles, false teachers; that is to say, of heretics, and their open favourers or abettors. It is true, there may be great difference between heresy and heresy; and what is said of heresies in general is not applicable in the same measure or degree to every heresy in particular, but in proportion only: in the mean while however it is evident, that heresy is not a thing of slight moment, but a crime of the first magnitude, if understood to mean the espousing of false doctrines, tending to corrupt either faith or morals in any considerable instances. But I suppose, they who think lightly of it, mean only some ignorant or careless eorum qui adulteraverant veritatem. Iren. lib. iii. c. 3. Conf. Euseb. E. H. lib. iv. c. 14. The like is observed of Justin and Irenæus, by Ittigius Histor. Eccles. Sec. ii. p. 91.

§ Polycarpus Marcioni aliquando occurrunt sibi et dicenti, cognoscis nos? Respondit, cognosco te primo-genitum Satanae. Tantum Apostoli et horum discipuli habuerunt timorem, ut nec verbo communicarent alicui

<sup>h</sup> Cyprian. de Unitat. Eccl. p. 117.

mistake in judgment, which a man keeps to himself, and disturbs not the world with: which indeed does not amount to heresy, (as I have more than once said,) does not make a heretic. Heresy lies not merely in the inward thought, but in the overt acts, either teaching pernicious doctrines, or supporting and encouraging them that do. Heresy so considered is evil doing<sup>i</sup>, and is condemned among the works of the flesh<sup>k</sup>. So then, instead of saying, that a wicked life is the worst heresy, which is scarce sense, I should choose rather to say, what is both sense and truth, (generally speaking,) that a life of heresy is a most wicked life: it is joining with Satan and his emissaries, in a formed opposition to God and his Church, is complicated impiety and immorality.

III. But it will be pleaded further, that such as teach false doctrines may be very sincere; and their sincerity will be their protection before the awful tribunal, or however ought to screen them from censure here. But it behoves us to consider well of this so sovereign a preservative, that we may not trust too far to it; because if it should fail at last, there is nothing then left to depend on. Sincerity, I observe, is a very equivocal ambiguous term, used in more senses than one: and therefore, before I enter deeper into the subject, I would distinguish it into two kinds. 1. Sincerity, as opposed to hypocrisy and pretence. 2. Sincerity, as opposed to prejudice and partiality. There is no discoursing clearly upon the point, without attending carefully to this distinction. Next then let us examine how the present question about the iniquity of teaching false doctrines, or the justice of censuring them, is at all affected by what is pleaded of the sincerity of the teachers, taking sincerity either in this or in that sense.

1. Consider we, first, sincerity, as opposed to hypocrisy and pretence. Suppose the teachers of false doctrine to be verily persuaded in their minds and consciences, that such their doctrine is true, and their conduct right, and that they ought to teach it: this is bringing the matter to the case of an erroneous conscience, upon our present supposition, that their doctrine is false, and ours true. Well then, what does an erroneous conscience amount to? Will it justify men in evil practices? or is it sufficient to bear them out against censure from others? No, by no means. Time was, when many thought it their duty to kill Christ's disciples; they believed it to be doing God service<sup>1</sup>: and yet nobody can doubt but those sincere men so far were guilty of murder, and no one can think it an hard censure upon them to declare so. St. Paul in particular, before his conversion, “verily thought with himself, that he ought to do many things contrary “to the name of Jesus<sup>m</sup>:” and yet how often did he afterwards condemn himself as a sinner, for doing those very things; because indeed he had done wickedly, in persecuting the truth, in persecuting the Church of God, when he might have been better informed. The like may be said, when men sincerely deny and oppose the important truths of the Gospel, and by their heresies give great disturbance, and do infinite mischief to God’s Church. Their being verily persuaded that truth is on their side, or that they are doing right, if it may be somewhat of excuse as a mitigating circumstance, yet is no justification of their conduct, before God or man. They are impugners of divine truths notwithstanding, and subverters of souls; and therefore condemned by God, and liable to all such censures from man, as Scripture ordains in case of heresy. So then, sincerity, in the first sense of the word, as opposed to guile, or hypocrisy, is of no avail in this matter. It changes not the nature of things, nor the rules of conduct: we are as much obliged to admonish, to avoid, to reject a man that thus sincerely corrupts the faith, and seduces common Christians, as the man that does it in guile, and against his own conscience: because indeed, though the iniquity may not be altogether so great, yet iniquity it is; and because the mischief, either way, is the same, and it is our bounden duty to guard against it. I must further add, that Scripture mentions a case of God’s sending upon men “strong delusion,” in the way of judicial infatuation, “that they should believe a lie<sup>n</sup>,” and “that they all “might be damned who believe not the truth, but have pleasure “in unrighteousness.” Now, by the rule of sincerity, (in this first sense,) even such abandoned creatures as the Apostle there speaks of might plead not guilty, as teaching nothing but what they really believe, nothing which they condemn themselves for, or conceive to be false. They teach and propagate lies, but they believe them to be true all the while. There is no uncharitableness in judging<sup>o</sup>, that all who propagate Deism and infidelity in

<sup>i</sup> 2 John 11.<sup>k</sup> Gal. v. 20.

<sup>1</sup> John xvi. 2.

<sup>m</sup> Acts xxvi. 9.

<sup>n</sup> 2 Thess. ii. 11, 12.

<sup>o</sup> John iii. 19. 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.
Heb. x. 26—31. 2 Pet. ii. 20, 21, 22.

a Christian country (renouncing their baptism) are under such judicial blindness, if they really believe the lies which they are so industrious to spread: and their pretended sincerity, in that case, is no alleviation of their crime, but the worst symptom of it. Therefore sincerity in this sense, as signifying only believing what one teaches, can scarce amount to a telerable plea by itself, since it is what may be found in men of a seared conscience and a reprobate mind.

2. Let us next consider the second sense of sincerity, as opposed to prejudice and partiality, and see whether, or how far, that alters the case, more than the other. But here a difficulty occurs at the first mention of it; how will it be proved? I do not say merely to other men, but how will it be proved to a man's self? If a man pleads his sincerity in this case, he ought to know that he has it, or he does but trifle with himself and others. He is to prove that he has no prepossession, no bias, no leaning to a side: he is to prove that he has used all due diligence in looking out for evidence; that neither haste, nor sloth, nor impatience has hindered: he is to prove, that he has used all proper care and exactness in comparing and balancing the reasons and arguments on both sides: in short, he is to prove, that he has neither designedly nor carelessly left out any thing in the account, nor at length made a conclusion upon any other view, or motive, but that reason and truth so required: for submitting to reason, without any bias, that is sincerity. When he has proved this, he has proved himself sincere, and then he is justified. But I humbly conceive, that the shorter and plainer way would be to say, that he has examined the question, weighed the reasons, and thereupon finds that his judgment is right and well-grounded, and therefore he abides by it: for that is what the whole comes to; and so the proof of our sincerity, in this second sense of the word, resolves at length into the merits of the main cause. He that has reason on his side, (I except the case of unavoidable incapacity,) he is the sincere man: for if any person jumps to a conclusion without premises, or lays more weight upon it than his reasons will support; it is plain that there is something besides reason, which sways him, and which determines him. Be it warmth of temper, be it weariness and impatience, be it partial fondness for novelty, be it what it will; if it is not reason, it is prejudice and partiality, (I except against unavoidable incapacity,) and the man is not sincere in the strict sense; which yet is the only sense that can be at all to the purpose. One might say then to such a person who pleads his sincerity, prove it, and we admit of it: sincerity without reasons to prove it is a dead sincerity. And we may here apply what St. James says in another case, with a very little change: "Shew me thy sincerity without thy reasons, and I will shew thee my sincerity by my reasons." He that proves his point best proves his sincerity. There is no other way for it, unless a man will plead ignorance or incapacity; and then why is he confident? The sum therefore of all is, that the question about sincerity resolves at length into the main question in debate, and is to be decided by it. There might seem at first hearing to be something in the plea of sincerity; and indeed, taking it in the first sense, it might be certainly known to a man's self, if it could be of any service to him in the cause: but it is a point acknowledged on all hands, that a man's being thus sincerely a sinner does not make him a saint. As to sincerity in the latter sense, that would be of service to us, if it could be proved<sup>p</sup>; but to prove it, is the same as to prove that truth and reason are on our side; that we are clear in the matter, and go upon sure grounds. So then, the pleading sincerity, in the present case, is only fetching a compass, to come round about again to the place where we set out. For all turns at last upon this; who has the best reasons to support his persuasion? If they who oppose the doctrine of the Trinity teach false and pernicious doctrine, and it can be proved upon them, we are right in condemning them, and in refusing communion with them. We have no occasion to inquire into their sincerity; which, in whatever sense we take it, is an insignificant plea, and such as ought to be thrown out on both sides, serving only for amusement, diverting them from the business in hand.

It was upon these or the like considerations that I took occasion to say formerly: "We have nothing to do to inquire after your sincerity, of which God is Judge. Neither civil judicatures nor ecclesiastical courts ever proceed upon that bottom. Our business is, not to consider the sincerity of the men, but the nature, quality, and tendency of the doctrine. There have been sincere Photinians, sincere Samosatensians, sincere Sabellians, sincere Papists, sincere Jews and Mahometans.

<sup>p</sup> See Rogers's Discourse of the Invisible Church. p. 22, 23. 3rd edition. Rogers's Review, p. 109.

“ And indeed, what sects are there that have not sincere men “ amongst them?” To which I may now briefly add, that all sects have many who are sincere in the first sense of the word, and have some, probably, in the second sense also, but known to God only, who alone can judge how far their prejudices are insuperable, or their ignorance unavoidable. I was willing to repeat here what I had asserted in another place, because there is a gentleman to whom this plain doctrine has appeared not a little surprising<sup>r</sup>. And thereupon he has been pleased to ask, “ Is “ the Doctor willing to be responsible, at last, for the nature, “ quality, and tendency of all his notions?” To which I answer, willing or not willing, every man is responsible, at last, for the doctrines he teaches. And if they are false and pernicious, (unless the error were unavoidable,) they fall under the same condemnation with those idle words, of which account must be given at the day of judgment<sup>s</sup>. But, that I also may ask a question in my turn, is that gentleman willing to be responsible for his sincerity, that is to say, for his impartiality in every view, free from all biases or prejudices? Or is he sure that he has no culpable neglects, no precipitation of judgment to charge himself with? When he can be able to say, he knows he has not, I presume I may as reasonably say, I know what the nature, quality, and tendency of a doctrine is: and I conceive, this is a much surer and safer rule to judge by, than what he proposee. A well grounded assurance must be had, either of our own strict sincerity and unprejudiced reason, or else of the truth and justice of what we espouse. Now, I conceive, in the general, it is much easier to come at the latter, than at the former, nay, and that the natural and regular process is to prove the former by the latter. The gentleman asks further, “ Is it impossible for him “ to be mistaken in any of his inquiries into truth?” I know, it is very possible for frail and fallible men to be mistaken in what they say, though not in what they prove: and therefore one would take care to advance nothing as of moment to be believed, but upon clear and sure grounds, such as the reason of mankind ought to submit to. But this I shall say more to under another head. However, to return him a question, as before: Is it impossible for him to be mistaken (or rather, is it not very natural and easy for him to mistake) in judging of his sincerity? I understand it in the sense of impartiality, the only sense pertinent to the cause in hand. It is further asked; "May not some things which he has, or however shall hereafter advance, differ, in some sort, from the ideas in the divine Mind?" Here the terms, some things, shall hereafter, and in some sort, are so obscure and indefinite, that there is no returning a definitive answer, more than this; that what God has revealed concerning the Trinity is, no doubt, agreeable to the divine Mind: and that is all that we contend for, appealing to Scripture for it. However, here again, I presume, we can be at least as sure that our doctrine answers the ideas of the divine Mind, as we can be that our sincerity is such as God sees no flaws in. So the question returns; which method may we best trust to? which is the surest and safest rule to judge by? By a man's knowing himself perfectly, or by his knowing the truth of things?

<sup>q</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 388.

<sup>r</sup> Reply to Mr. P. C.'s Letter, p. 52.

<sup>s</sup> Matt. xiii. 36.

The author proceeds to tell us, that sincerity is a proper thing to be inquired after in such cases, and that civil judicatures at least do it, when any person is arraigned. But do they ever inquire whether the person arraigned might believe it lawful to steal in case of necessity, or might judge it his duty to affront the government, or to talk treason against the crown? If the plea of sincerity were to be admitted in such cases, it would never fail to be pleaded: we should then have new employment for juries, to sit upon men's hearts; and the verdict, of course, would be brought in for the criminal, unless he were weak enough to confess malice prepense, and that he acted against conscience. The law of the land, and the law of common sense too, has taken a shorter, wiser way, which is to presume that when a man has done an ill thing, he either knew that it was evil, or else ought to have known it. Ignorantia juris non excusat delictum, is, I think, the fundamental maxim they go upon. Every man is obliged to know his duty; and it is at his own peril, if he mistakes the law he is to be judged by<sup>t</sup>. What room then is

<sup>t</sup> Mr. Bayle, in few words, well illustrates this article. "There is good reason for not excusing an ignorance of right at human tribunals: for though it may possibly happen that a man is honestly and innocently ignorant of what the laws of the land ordain; yet as the judges cannot discern whether he speaks sincerely or no, they cannot take up with his "excuse, for fear of the disorders which might happen upon it; since a world of malefactors and disturbers of the public peace might make use of the same justification. Therefore, to prevent a general evil, they will make no exception to this general rule, Ignorantia juris non excusat. This may possibly be unjust and very hard upon particular persons;

there for the plea of sincerity? But the gentleman observes, that the “characters of such as are impeached are often inquired into, “and have great weight.” Yes, in order to judge whether they are guilty of the fact, and how far it was designed and wilful. But, I believe, if it should appear that the offender transgressed upon principle, and persisted in it, not sensible of any fault, but taking upon him to be wiser than the laws or the court, and to correct his judges, such sincerity so pleaded would be so far from alleviating the crime, or mitigating the sentence, that it would do just the reverse: and the court would be obliged to judge according to the nature, and quality, and tendency of the fact committed, and not by the mistaken sentiments of the person arraigned. I return therefore to what I before said, that in the question which concerns our behaviour towards the impugnors of the Christian faith, we have nothing to do to consider the sincerity of the men, but the quality of their doctrine. As to the rest, God is Judge: and he will make all reasonable and merciful allowances for unavoidable failings.

But is it not hard and severe censure, (may some say,) to condemn those sincere men who mean as honestly as we can do, and to make their guilt the ground of renouncing communion with them<sup>u</sup>? I answer: this is not a fair representation. That they are as sincere as we are in one sense, as believing what they teach, we admit; and it is nothing to the purpose: that they are sincere, as it signifies impartial, is the point to be tried; and it depends upon the issue of the main cause. In the mean while, we make not their guilt the formal cause of condemning them, but their corrupt doctrine, which indeed generally carries guilt with it, but more or less according to the circumstances and capacities of the persons. Therefore we say not how deep their guilt is; of that God is judge: but this we say, that we should ourselves be guilty in a very high degree, if we either taught such doctrines, or did not fully and plainly condemn them, refusing communion with such as openly and resolutely espouse them.

“but it is necessary to sacrifice something to the good of society.

“This is undoubtedly the reason why human tribunals admit no excuse upon an ignorance of right: but let us beware imagining that God proceeds by the same reason: as he is the Searcher of hearts, he knows most assuredly, whether such

“or such a person be under an invincible ignorance of right; and if he “be, absolves him as freely as if the “ignorance were only of fact.” Bayle, Supplem. to Philosoph. Comment. p. 589, 590. Compare Rogers’s Review &c. p. 104.

<sup>u</sup> See Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 14, 23, 39, 40, 42, 44, 47.

What we do in this case is not so properly damning others, not passing any peremptory judgment of their final estate, (to their own Master they stand or fall,) but it is conscientiously discharging a weighty trust, cautiously providing, first, for our own salvation, and next for the salvation also of as many as we have any concern with. If our adversaries be honest and conscientious, so much the better for them, and we heartily wish they may be found such before the high tribunal. We approve of what Salvian very mildly and tenderly says, in respect to this very case, so far as concerns all that conscientiously, and in the integrity of their hearts, differ from us: "They are heretics, but do not know that they are so. In short, they are heretics in our judgment, not so in their own: for they esteem themselves such good Catholics, that they even throw upon us the infamous charge of heresy. Such therefore as they are to us, we are to them. We know assuredly that they are injurious to the divine generation of the Son of God, in making him inferior to the Father: they, on the other hand, think us injurious to the Father in believing them both equal. Truth is on our side; but they presume it is on theirs. We in reality honour God; but they think their opinion does him most honour. They are indeed undutiful to God, but this they esteem a great duty of religion. They are impious, but they believe it true piety. They err therefore, but they err with an honest mind: not out of any hatred to God, but with affection to him, designing thereby to honour and shew their love to the Lord. Though they have not the right faith, yet they think they have a perfect love of God. How they shall be punished, at the day of judgment, for this their error of a false persuasion, no one can know, except the Judge<sup>x</sup>." Thus far we can go in our charity towards them: but our charitable dispositions towards their persons ought never to bribe us to think favourably of their principles, or move us to desert the proper defence of Gospel truths, or hinder us from declaring that the corrupting the faith of Christ is in its own nature a wicked thing, is detestable practice.

It will not be improper here to make mention of a noted and useful distinction of sin or wickedness, into material and formal; one conceived to go along with the matter of the transgression considered in the abstract, the other conceived to make the person formally a transgressor and a wicked man. I dare not say, that every one who openly maintains the worst part of Popery, or Judaism, or Mahometism, is formally a wicked man: I know not how far invincible ignorance, or unavoidable incapacity, or unconquerable prejudices, (owing, suppose, to education, or to a degree of enthusiasm, or other particular circumstances,) may be pleadable in his favour: but still, after all the most candid allowances that can be made, I should not scruple to censure his opinions as wicked, (materially considered,) his doctrines impious, and his attempts to propagate them vile and execrable. They are truly so in the nature of the thing, abstracted from the circumstances of the person: and to a man that has the full and free use of his faculties, and opportunities suitable, they are crimes of the first magnitude, and ought to be censured as such. The gentlemen with whom I am now debating this point will not scruple to declare as much, with respect to the doctrine of persecution, and they are very severe against St. Paul<sup>1</sup> for practising upon it, though he was, in one sense, perfectly sincere, honest, and pious<sup>2</sup> (so far as concerned his then present sentiments) in what he did. He went upon the doctrine of the Old Testament, in relation to false prophets and blasphemers, was right in his general principle, but wrong in the application. He acted not out of envy, malice, or other secular motives, like the Jews who crucified Christ: a new case happened which he had not considered so well as he might: he was so over-officious to do his presumed duty, that he stayed not to examine strictly whether it was duty or no; so eager and impatient to serve God, in his way, that he considered not whether it was really erving him, or the contrary. This appears to have been his case; and a pitiable case it was. I question whether the corrupters of the Christian faith, many of them, could claim for themselves so fair an apology. Yet St. Paul was to blame, because the thing was evil in itself, and by the use of due care he might have known it. The same I say of sincere teachers of bad doctrines: the thing is evil in itself, and, generally speaking, they may, by a right use of their faculties, know that it is so. But whether they may or may not, it concerns us not to inquire : it is enough for us that their doctrine is false and dangerous, tending to subvert the Gospel of Christ.

<sup>x</sup> Salvian. de Gubernat. Dei, p. 100.

<sup>1</sup> Vindication of Mr. Nation's Sermon, p. 35, &c. Reply to P. C.'s Letter, p. 40, &c.

<sup>2</sup> P. C.'s Letter to the Author of the Vindication, p. 38, &c. Rogers's Visible and Invisible Church, p. 24, 25.

IV. But it will be further objected, that we all along take for granted that our doctrines are true, and theirs false : and why are we so confident in this matter, unless we think ourselves infallible? The author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition is pleased to intimate, that though we will not own ourselves infallible, yet in fact we avow it<sup>a</sup>. He endeavours to prove the charge thus ; “ In the point in which you are certain, you are infallible, and wherein you pretend to be certain, you do equally pretend to infallibility : for certainty is, cui non potest subesse falsum. You must have evidence for a point in which you pretend to be certain, not only to put the matter out of doubt, but enough to assure you a mistake is impossible. I am infallibly certain two and two are four—it must be, and cannot be otherwise ; without such evidence there is no certainty : and where error is impossible, there is infallibility<sup>b</sup>. Nor can I see that any thing short of downright infallibility can justify the behaviour, (of the Trinitarians,) if that can. But to disclaim infallibility in words, and claim it in fact, is too common a practice, though no very commendable one<sup>c</sup>. It is questionable whether either side have such evidence as will justify them in thinking a mistake impossible ; without which there is no proper certainty ; and if there be not, there is room for mutual charity and forbearance<sup>d</sup>.”

I do not think it kind or fair in this instance, to bring in the word infallibility, where it has plainly nothing to do, only to throw an oblique reflection upon some persons who are far from deserving it : that is not a sober or a charitable method of debate. The sum of his argument, when the colours are taken off, is no more than this ; that if we have not demonstration, as clear as in mathematics or metaphysics, on our side of the question, we ought not to insist upon it so far as to make it a term of communion. Now, suppose we should say we have, (though we say no such thing,) yet would that be what the world has been used to call claiming infallibility, or pretending to be infallible? Would it not be very wrong to say, that a man pretends to be infallible, only because he is very certain that the propositions in Euclid are

<sup>a</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 37.

<sup>b</sup> Ibid. p. 37.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid. p. 39.

<sup>d</sup> Ibid. p. 38.

infallibly true? Such an unmanly playing with words is unbecoming in any cause, much more in this. The infallibility of science, resting upon the nature of things, and the supposed truth of our rational faculties, is quite another thing from personal infallibility supposed to be an extraordinary gift from heaven, to a pope, or a council, or to a church at large. Things so distinct ought not to have been confounded. Whatever certainty we pretend to, we rest it entirely upon the proofs we produce, for the world to judge of, and not upon any personal endowments. How foreign therefore, and beside the mark, must it appear, to speak of our pretending to be infallible! Indeed, the Papists have a hundred times told us, that we can have no proper certainty without infallibility: and if that were true, there is an end of the Reformation at once. The ground and basis upon which the Protestant name stands, and without which it would sink instantly, is, that there may be a proper certainty in matters of faith, doctrine, and discipline, without infallibility. They that endeavour to sap this true principle, undermine the foundation upon which we rest, and betray the clearest and best cause in the world, to Papists on one hand, and to sceptics on the other. I take this matter to be of exceeding great moment, and therefore shall not scruple the pains of considering it at large. I shall first represent the answers which have been given to the objection, (as urged by Papists,) in the words of our judicious Chillingworth: and I shall next consider what answer may be proper to give to the same objection, in the main, as dressed up anew by adversaries from another quarter.

1. Mr. Chillingworth writes thus: "Though we pretend not to certain means of not erring in interpreting all Scripture, particularly such places as are obscure and ambiguous, yet this, methinks, should be no impediment, but that we may have certain means of not erring in and about the sense of those places which are so plain and clear that they need no interpreters: and in such we say our faith is contained. If you ask me, how I can be sure that I know the true meaning of these places? I ask you again, can you be sure that you understand what I or any man else says?—God be thanked that we have sufficient means to be certain enough of the truth of our faith: but the privilege of not being in possibility of erring, that we challenge not, because we have as little reason as you to do so, and you have none at all. If you ask, seeing we “ may possibly err, how can we be assured we do not? I ask you “ again, seeing your eyesight may deceive you, how can you be “ sure you see the sun when you do see it<sup>e</sup>? A pretty sophism!

 “ That whosoever possibly may err, cannot be certain that he “ doth not err. A judge may possibly err in judgment, can he “ therefore never have assurance that he hath judged right? A “ traveller may possibly mistake his way, must I therefore be “ doubtful whether I am in the right way from my hall to my “ chamber? or can our London carrier have no certainly, in the “ middle of the day, when he is sober and in his wits, that he is “ in the way to London? These, you see, are right worthy con“ sequences, and yet they are as like to your own, as an egg to “ an egg, or milk to milk<sup>f</sup>.

“ Methinks, so subtle a man as you are should easily appre“ hend a wide difference between authority to do a thing, and “ infallibility in doing it. The former, the Doctor, together “ with the Article of the Church of England, attributeth to the “ Church, nay, to particular churches, and I subscribe to his “ opinion: that is, an authority of determining controversies of “ faith, according to plain and evident Scripture and universal “ tradition; and infallibility, while they proceed according to “ this rule. As if there should arise an heretic that should call “ in question Christ’s passion and resurrection, the Church had “ authority to determine this controversy, and infallible direction “ how to do it, and to excommunicate this man, if he should per“ sist in his error<sup>g</sup>.

“ The ground of your error here is, your not distinguishing “ between actual certainty and absolute infallibility. Geometri- “ cians are not infallible in their own science; yet they are very “ certain of what they see demonstrated: and carpenters are not “ infallible, yet certain of the straightness of those things which “ agree with their rule and square. So though the Church be “ not infallibly certain that in all her definitions, whereof some “ are about disputable and ambiguous matters, she shall pro“ ceed according to her rule; yet being certain of the infallibility “ of her rule, and that in this or that thing she doth manifestly “ proceed according to it; she may be certain of the truth of “ some particular decrees, and yet not certain that she shall “ never decree but what is true<sup>h</sup>.

<sup>e</sup> Chillingworth, p. 99, 100.

<sup>f</sup> Ibid. p. 104, 105.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. p. 105.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid. p. 125.

“ Though, the Church being not infallible, I cannot believe her
 “ in every thing she says, yet I can and must believe her in every “ thing she proves, either by Scripture, reason, or universal tra- “ dition, be it fundamental or not fundamental.—Though she “ may err in some things, yet she does not err in what she proves, “ though it be not fundamental<sup>i</sup>. Protestants, believing Scrip“ ture to be the word of God, may be certain enough of the “ truth and certainty of it. For what if they say the Catholic “ Church, much more themselves, may possibly err in some un-“ fundamental points, is it therefore consequent, they can be “ certain of none such? What if a wiser man than I may mistake
 “ the sense of some obscure place of Aristotle, may I not there“ fore, without any arrogance or inconsequence, conceive myself “ certain that I understand him in some plain places which “ carry their sense before them?—We pretend not at all to any “ assurance that we cannot err, but only to a sufficient certainty “ that we do not err, but rightly understand those things that “ are plain, whether fundamental or not fundamental. That “ God is, and is a rewarder of them that seek him: that &c.—
 “ These we conceive both true, because the Scripture says so,
 “ and truths fundamental, because they are necessary parts of the “ Gospel, whereof our Saviour says, Qui non crediderit, damna- “ bitur.

“ I do heartily acknowledge and believe the Articles of our “ faith to be in themselves truths as certain and infallible as the “ very common principles of geometry or metaphysics: but that “ there is required of us a knowledge of them and an adherence “ to them, as certain as that of sense or science; that such a “ certainty is required of us under pain of damnation, so that no “ man can hope to be in a state of salvation but he that finds “ in himself such a degree of faith, such a strength of adherence:
 “ this I have already demonstrated to be a great error, and of “ dangerous and pernicious consequence<sup>k</sup>.

“ Though I deny that it is required of us to be certain in the “ highest degree, infallibly certain, of the truth of the things “ which we believe, for this were to know and not believe, neither “ is it possible unless our evidence of it, be it natural or super“ natural, were of the highest degree,) yet I deny not but we “ ought to be and may be infallibly certain that we are to believe <sup>i</sup> Chillingworth, p. 133, 134.

 WATERLAND, VOL. III.

<sup>k</sup> Ibid. p. 140, 141—290.
 k k

“ the religion of Christ. For, 1. this is most certain, that we “ are in all things to do according to wisdom and reason, rather “ than against it. 2. This is as certain, that wisdom and reason “ require that we should believe those things which are by “ many degrees more credible and probable than the contrary.
 “ 3. This is as certain, that to every man who considers impar“ tially what great things may be said for the truth of Christi“ anity, and what poor things they are which may be said “ against it, either for any other religion, or for none at all, it “ cannot but appear by many degrees more credible that the “ Christian religion is true, than the contrary. And from all “ these premises this conclusion evidently follows, that it is in“ fallibly certain that we are firmly to believe the truth of the “ Christian religion.—There is an abundance of arguments “ exceedingly credible, inducing men to believe the truth of “ Christianity: I say, so credible, that though they cannot “ make us evidently see what we believe, yet they evidently con“ vince, that in true wisdom and prudence the articles of it “ deserve credit, and ought to be accepted as things revealed by “ God!”

I have laid these several passages together, drawn out of this excellent writer: by which it may appear what kind of certainty is professed by Protestants, and how much the Protestant cause depends upon that single article. The sum is, that though we have not strict mathematical demonstration for matters of belief, so as to make faith and science the same thing, yet we have such a certainty as leaves no reasonable room for doubt, such as is sufficient to build saving faith upon, and as much authority also as is necessary to support it. And thus we get clear of Popish subtilty and sophistry, shewing that there is a medium, namely, moral certainty, between scepticism on one hand, and papal infalibility on the other.

2. No sooner are we thus relieved on that hand, but presently we are attacked from another quarter, and with the same artillery as before, only a little differently managed, as it is now to serve different purposes. For here again it is alleged, that without either infallibility or demonstration we can have no proper certainty, nor any just authority to declare matters of faith, or to insist upon them as terms of communion: and the conclusion here aimed at, or what must naturally follow, is, to sit loose to every thing, unconcerned for the faith of Christ, cold and indifferent towards the great truths of the Gospel. Deists here and Papists there combine together to oppose the truth, and both extremes meet in one. But let us examine how our new adversaries manage. Their whole strength lies in one single dilemma, thus: "Either you have certainty, or you have not: if you pretend to certainty, that is claiming infallibility; if you renounce certainty, you have no authority to determine faith, "or prescribe terms of communion." We answer by distinguishing the kinds and degrees of certainty, and therefore do say, that though we claim not infallibility, yet we do claim certainty sufficient to guard against scepticism or heresy, and to maintain just authority.

<sup>1</sup> Chillingworth, p. 295. alias p. 254. Compare Stillingfleet's Rational Account, p. i. chap. vi. p. 178, &c. 187, &c. 196. chap. vii. 205, &c. Compare also Mr. Cumming, who has very

fully and solidly treated this argument. Dissertat. on Scripture Consequences, p. 61—76. Considerations, &c. p. 315—321.

I shall first examine the invidious charge of our claiming infallibility. The author of the Sober and Charitable Disquisition intimates, as before said, that we disclaim it in words, but in fact avow it. The same thing has been said by a multitude of other writers: I shall cite one only for a sample, because he has urged it as ingeniously and sarcastically as a man could well do, in a Dedication to the Pope. "Your Holiness is not perhaps aware, how near the churches of us Protestants have at length come to those privileges and perfections which you boast of as peculiar to your own.—You cannot err in any thing you determine, and we never do: that is, in other words, you are infallible, and we always in the right<sup>m</sup>." It may hereupon be observed, how this witty gentleman takes upon him to ridicule a very necessary distinction, between an assurance that we cannot err, and a sufficient certainty that we do not err: a distinction, which the judicious Chillingworth laid all imaginable stress upon, perceiving that the whole Protestant cause depended upon it. For if we cannot have sufficient certainty that in several things, relating to faith and worship, we do not err, how do we justify our separation from the Church of Rome? If we are not certain that therein we do not err, then neither are we certain that she has erred, and that there was a just cause for leaving her ; but all must resolve into humour, fancy, fickleness, and unsupported persuasion. It was this very principle of a sufficient certainty, that we do not err in what we prove, which rescued us from the tyranny of those who pretend that they cannot err in whatever they define. The difference between those two is so great, and so palpable, that one would think it must argue either very slow faculties, or a perverse temper of mind, for any person to confound them. However, to give a more distinct idea of the two cases, I shall endeavour to represent the difference to the eye in one view, in two opposite columns, corresponding to each other.

<sup>m</sup> Steel's Dedication to the Pope, p. 2.

Popish Infallibility.

1. The Church simply infallible in what she defines.
2. The Church says so, is the last resort, and decisive.
3. Submit to authority in all instances whatever : for authority here stands for proof.
4. Absolute implicit faith in man.
5. Examination superfluous and dangerous : prove nothing, swallow every thing.
6. The subject obeys the interpreter at all adventures, and submits as to an infallible verity.
7. Be a thing ever so unreasonable or plainly false, (transubstantiation for instance,) it must be received as divine, though a human decision.

Protestant Certainty.

1. The Church morally certain in what she proves.
2. Not because the Church says it, but because Scripture and reason by her mouth declare it.
3. Submit to authority in such instances only, where you see no good reason to the contrary ; for then it is reasonable so to do.
4. Absolute implicit faith in God only.
5. Examination allowed and approved : prove all things, hold fast that which is good.
6. The subject obeys his own reason in submitting to what is proved, and what the reason of mankind ought not to reject.
7. Nothing ordered to be received, but upon the foot of reason and Scripture, with great tenderness to private judgment : only taking for granted, that our faculties are true, and may, in things plainly proved, be depended upon.

From this summary view it may sufficiently appear, that there is a very wide difference between the pretended papal infallibility and Protestant certainty: and that as the one is contrived to introduce and perpetuate all imaginable errors, so the other is undoubtedly the surest way to exclude all pernicious errors, at least, and to preserve the most weighty truths.

The ground of what I call Protestant certainty is moral evidence: which, though it comes not up to infallibility, or to the evidence of demonstration, yet is certain enough for all the purposes of faith, or of a competent authority to maintain true doctrine. “Our Church,” as a judicious writer says, “nowhere makes infallible certainty of assent a necessary condition of faith, it being sufficient to make faith certain, if our rule be infallible, and that applied with moral evidence.”

Moral evidence, for the most part, governs the great affairs of the world, while rigid demonstration serves rather for the entertainment of contemplative men, than for the uses of common life. And since God has so ordered both our religious and secular affairs, as to lay us under a necessity of submitting, in most cases, to moral evidence, he has thereby bound it upon us as a duty; so that if “we have not strict demonstration for what we believe, yet “it is demonstration that our evidence is such as must command “our assent, under pain of incurring the divine displeasure.” As to the nature, and quality, and force of moral evidence in general, I refer the reader, for satisfaction, to an excellent writer, who has distinctly and fully considered it<sup>o</sup>. I shall content myself with making only a few occasional observations.

It seems to me a prejudice done to religion, that the learned and philosophical sense of the words probable and certain, (so different from the common vulgar sense of both,) has been so often made use of by Divines. When a common Christian hears it said, that it is only probable, not absolutely certain, that Christ lived or died; or that the Christian religion is true, or the like; how must it astonish him, or afflict him! In the vulgar use of the words probable and certain, it is a shocking thought; though in the scholastic sense all may be right, as there is no rigid or scientific demonstration of any matter of fact, or of any article of pure faith: and every thing short of that the schools are pleased to call probable only, not certain. If we were to hear any one, in ordinary conversation, say, that it is probable, not certain, that there is such a city as Rome, Paris, or Constantinople, would not the man be thought mad? Or if he were to say further, that it is probable only, not certain, that there was once such a prince as Alexander, or Julius Cæsar, or William the Conqueror, or Henry the Eighth, should we take him to be right in his wits? And yet it is in such a sense only that Divines mean it, when they say that the Christian religion is probably, not certainly true; understanding at the same time, that it is as certain as any ancient fact can be, fully, perfectly, indisputably certain, according to what the world generally means by certain. I should think, therefore, it were better to leave off the scholastic way, (which must needs give offence, and which few understand,) and to adapt our phrases to the common acceptation, as also to Scripture language. Look the Scripture through for the meaning of the word certain and certainly, and you will find that it stands for certainly of facts, which is proper certainty, when properly proved: and it is but sinking the idea, and confounding common hearers or readers, to discredit it with the low names of probable and probability; which, in common speech, scarce rise higher than doubtful. I chose to mention this the rather, because I find that infidels have taken advantage of those expressions to run down Christianity as not certain, but barely probable<sup>p</sup>. And how that must sound to a common English reader, let any man judge.

<sup>n</sup> Puller's Moderation of the Church of England, p. 142.

<sup>o</sup> Ditton on the Resurrection of Christ, part ii. p. 93, &c.

I would observe further, that the like mischiefs may sometimes follow from an improper use of the word believe. Were any one to say, he believes there is such a country as France, or such a person as a Pope of Rome, he would presently be asked, why? can he doubt of it? That expression of believing commonly carries in it an idea of doubtfulness, and is used to denote a diffident assent. But when we would express any fact of which we have no doubt, we say we know it, or are certain of it. So here again there appears to be a difference between the language of the literati and common speech, while the same ideas are not affixed to the same words, here and there. However, this latter case will not be apt to breed so much confusion as the former, though it may create some: which might perhaps be prevented by the addition of an adverb, when we are speaking of matters of faith, saying we assuredly believe, or undoubtedly believe, thus and thus.

<sup>p</sup> See Christianity as old as the Creation, chap. xii. p. 184.

Now to return to the author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition<sup>9</sup>. He objects to us, that we have not a proper certainty of what we believe, like as we have of what we know, as that two and two are four. It is granted, we have not. Belief is not strictly science, nor faith vision: what then? In his sense of proper certainty, there is no certainty that the sun shines when we see it, nor that fire warms when we feel it, nor that there is any such thing as the sun in the firmament, nor indeed any material world: for, I apprehend, philosophers are agreed that there is no strict demonstration of these things<sup>r</sup>. Have these things therefore no proper certainty? Yes, they have, and such as ordinarily makes stronger impressions than abstract reasonings, or ideal speculations, and are more out of the reach of all doubt to the bulk of mankind. So say I likewise of matters of faith; they have a proper certainty, such as things of that kind admit of, such as is fitted to common capacities, such as the world is governed by, such as passes for undoubted certainty in common language and common estimation, such as God has ordained for our use, and has obliged us to follow, and such as both our present interests and our eternal happiness are made to depend upon. So much for the certainty of matters of faith, considered in the general.

As to the particular point now before us, the certainty of it stands thus: we are morally and indubitably certain of the truth of the doctrine of the Trinity. And though we presume not to say, or to think, that we may not or cannot misconstrue Scripture, yet we have many and strong reasons to persuade us that in this instance we do not: and therefore it is infallibly certain, (as Mr. Chillingworth well argues with respect to Christianity in general,) that we ought firmly to believe it; because wisdom and reason require that we should believe those things which are by many degrees more credible and probable than the contrary. Thus have we sure and safe grounds to go upon<sup>s</sup>. And as we

<sup>9</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 37.

<sup>r</sup> See Clarke's Notes upon Rohault, part i. c. 2.

<sup>s</sup> I may here observe something of Mr. Bayle. In his Philosophical Commentary, (part i. p. 337, &c.) after taking notice, that the Romanists have perpetually reproached the Protestants as destitute of any well-grounded cer- tainty, and that the Protestants had answered the objection a thousand times over; he adds, that it never was fully answered, never can be, in the common way, only it may be irresistibly retorted upon Papists: and the conclusion he at length rests in is, that God requires no more than a sincere and diligent search after truth. Mr. Bayle is so far right; but he forgot to are in strict duty bound to receive it as a revealed truth, so, because it is a very important one, an article of the foundation, we are as strictly bound to preserve it, and earnestly to contend for it: and because one very proper means of preserving it, as well as of keeping ourselves pure, is to refuse communion (according to the general direction of Scripture in such cases) with those that openly impugn it, therefore a necessity is laid upon us so to act, and woe is unto us if we act otherwise. But we do not therefore say, as is unkindly insinuated, that there is not room left for mutual charity: for we verily are persuaded, yea, and assuredly know, that our so acting is charity both to the faithful and unfaithful, and towards all mankind; and that the charging it as a breach of charity is hard and uncharitable censure, is judging according to appearance only, not according to truth.

All depends upon this, that men take care, in every thing of moment, to go upon sure grounds, to know what they do. That is the very thing which chiefly distinguishes resolution from obstinacy, orthodoxy from heresy, wisdom from rashness, and righteousness from iniquity. God has given us rational faculties to discern truth from error, and right from wrong: and we ought to be well assured, in whatsoever we teach, as of moment, that we have made that use of our faculties which we ought to have done, to discern between good and evil. It is not our persuasion that can justify us; there are many fond persuasions; and we tell us how we may arrive at a well-grounded certainty of that fact, that we have made a sincere and diligent search, without prejudice or bias, without any culpable sloth and negligence in inquiring, or precipitancy in judging. There is no mathematical or metaphysical certainty as to this fact, which by him is made the main thing. Moral certainty is the utmost that any one can here pretend to, and that not so great as we can have of matters of faith; neither can our sincerity be any way so certainly proved, as by the evidence we produce for the doctrines we maintain. Therefore Mr. Bayle commits a fallacy, or is guilty of great forgetfulness, in making a well-grounded certainty of our sincerity the last resource, rather than the other; for generally speaking, it is not so sure or so firm a ground to rest on, as the reasons of things, or the merits of a cause. For considering how obscure the search is into the inmost springs of action, or persuasion, which are very involved and intricate, how careless men are apt to be in the examination, and how liable also to be imposed upon by self-flattery; I say, these things considered, it is much safer to rely upon the moral certainty appearing in things, than upon any pretended certainty we may conceive of our own sincerity. I believe, the fallacy in this case has been chiefly owing to the equivocal meaning of the word sincerity: for because in one sense, as opposed to hypocrisy, a man may easily know he is sincere when he is so; it has been too hastily concluded, that he may as easily know it in the other sense of the word, as opposed to prejudice or partiality.

are not commanded merely to obey our persuasions, (though we ought not to go against them,) but to obey the truth. It is not merely our sincerity that can support us, for of that we know nothing, in any just and proper sense, but by the right and reason of the cause; and we are not commanded to hold fast our sincere errors, but to hold fast that which is good.

But what, will some ask, do we then pretend to know that our doctrine is true? Is faith advanced into knowledge? To this I answer, that we know, not scientifically, but with moral certainty, which is knowing according to use of common speech; and though we do not strictly know what we merely believe, yet we know that we have such moral evidence for what we believe as binds us to the belief of it. In this sense, we know what we do, and we have a well-grounded assurance that what we do is right, which is our justification. And this is what we ought always to have (I speak more particularly of guides and teachers) in points of importance, and where it is not allowed to suspend. Cannot we know, for instance, that a Deist is rash in rejecting all revealed religion? Yes, we know it as certainly, as that it would be rash to deny that there is any such city as Rome or Constantinople; or that there ever were such men as Virgil, Horace, or Cicero. Cannot we know that a Jew is much in the wrong to deny that the Messiah is come? Yes, we know it as assuredly, as that a man would be in the wrong to deny that the twelve Cæsars lived some centuries ago. Cannot we know that the Popish doctrines of transubstantiation, image-worship, service in an unknown tongue, and the like, are not primitive Christianity? Yea, we know it as evidently, as that modern Rome is not ancient Rome, or that London is not Canterbury. Cannot one know that the Socinian interpretation of John i. 1. or of Hebr. i. 10. or of the texts relating to Christ's preexistence, is not the mind of Scripture? Yea, one may know it as certainly, as that a counter is not the king's coin, or that a monster is not a man. I give these instances to shew, that it is not merely persuasion or sincerity that we have to plead for our faith, but certainty and well-grounded assurance; such as is judged sufficient for wise and considerate men to go upon, and conduct themselves by, in secular affairs of greatest consequence. We have no occasion for infallibility to support us in such a claim: common reason suffices, taking in the proper helps, and making the due use of them with humility and care, with sobriety and godly fear<sup>u</sup>. Having gone through the most material objections I had met with, I may now proceed to the slighter and less considerable, but dispatching them in fewer words.

V. It has been sometimes invidiously suggested, that our zeal and constancy in contending so earnestly for what we call faith, is bearing hard upon our Christian brethren of an opposite persuasion, is afflicting and oppressing them, and, in short, is persecution and Popery. It can scarcely be conceived that any sensible men should seriously advance such odd fancies, or that they mean any thing more by them than rhetorication and flourish. Yet certain it is that such things have been offered with a serious air, and by men of no mean parts: I shall give some examples. One writes thus: "The humour of creed making and creed imposing is one of the most grievous instances of persecution, and the grand source of every other kind of it. If it be only their good opinion of us that our fellow Christians suspend upon our non-assent to their confessions of faith, they, in a very inhuman and unchristian way, persecute us. It is in itself barbarous," says Mr. Marvel, "for these faith-stretchers, whosoever they be, to put men's consciences upon the torture, to rack them to the length of their own notions<sup>x</sup>." This declamatory talk has been gravely, solidly, and satisfactorily answered by a very good writer<sup>y</sup>: and yet the objector chose rather to declaim again upon the same head, for several pages together<sup>z</sup>, than to quit his false reasonings, or acknowledge his <sup>u</sup> But here again it may be asked, may not a Jew, a Deist, a Papist, a Socinian, or an Arian, with equal confidence say that he knows he is in the right? He may so, and probably will. Yet truth and falsehood have a real distinction in nature, and depend not on fond conceits, or strength of persuasion. If any man presumes to say, he knows, when he does not know, he deceives himself, and is guilty before God; unless some unavoidable incapacity, or unconquerable prejudice, which God only is judge of, makes him innocent. And in that case it is not because he delivers his real persuasion, (for it may be impious as to the matter of it,) not because it is well-grounded, for he only thinks it is; but it is because of his infirmity, which himself neither sees nor knows, (if he did, he would correct it,) that God acquits him. How much any of us may stand in need of such merciful allowances, we cannot say: but in the mean while, all we have to look to, or to trust to, is to be as watchful and careful that we go upon sure grounds, as if no such allowances might be made us. Such wary conduct is well enough understood and practised in temporal affairs, where any thing considerable is depending: the like we are to observe in spiritual.

<sup>x</sup> Occasional Paper, vol. ii. numb. i. p. 12, &c.

<sup>y</sup> Preface to the Westminster Confession, p. 96—104.

<sup>z</sup> Defence of the Scripture as the only Standard of Faith, by the Author of the Occasional Paper, p. 35—40.

mistakes. To say the best of it, it is a very wanton way of talking in a subject of the last importance, and is making a jest of the liberties of mankind here, and of their happiness hereafter. If those gentlemen have been so inhumanly and barbarously persecuted, how is it that they have not yet assumed the title of martyrs or confessors? For persecution and martyrdom are a kind of correlates, which suppose and imply each other. And what is that inhuman torture, that barbarous persecution, which they have endured? Have they had trial of cruel mockings and scourgings, of bonds and imprisonment? Have they wandered about in sheepskins or goatskins, in dens or caves of the earth, for the sake of truth and godliness? No, but good Christians have suspended their good opinion of them; that is the grievance. And for what? Not for thinking as they please, (for thoughts are free,) but for overt acts of heresy, or perhaps blasphemy; for making public appeals to the people, in order to draw them off from listening to their better guides, to seduce them from the faith they have been baptized into, and to impose upon them such doctrines as must endanger their everlasting salvation. The kind and charitable endeavours of good men, whose province it is to prevent such fatal mischiefs in the mildest and gentlest way, (such as Christ himself has prescribed;)—these are the inhuman and unchristian persecutions which those gentlemen complain of. But to be a little more particular, they must not take it amiss to be told, in return to their odd complaint; 1. That they are guilty of a most intolerable abuse of words and names, in speaking of rack, torture, and persecution, where, even by their own account, there is not so much as a semblance of them: for it amounts, after all, only to the suspending our good opinion of them. 2. In this way of giving new and wrong names to things, they may, if they please, make the primitive churches also, and martyrs, yea, and Christ and his Apostles, persecutors. The primitive discipline, by their account, will be most of it persecution; and so, instead of ten heathen persecutions, (as they are commonly reckoned,) they may increase the number of persecutions to five hundred or more, and call them Christian persecutions, or rather unchristian ones, for that, it seems, is the name for them. 3. It is wrong in these gentlemen to furnish the Papists with fresh topics for real persecution. For since it will follow from this account, that persecution is Scripture doctrine, it may be pleaded, that Papal persecutions differ in kind only, or degree, from the other, but in the main are warranted by the New Testament itself, and by the universal practice of the Church in the best and purest ages. 4. This will likewise be furnishing infidels with new arguments against Christianity, as it is a persecuting religion: for it is certain, that the pretended persecution here complained of is such as Scripture itself prescribes, as I have before proved. 5. But to come yet closer up to those complainants, let it be considered, whether they are not themselves the real persecutors, guilty of that very crime which they charge upon the churches of God. To revile men for doing their bounden duty, to load them with reproaches for righteousness' sake, to libel and defame them for maintaining the faith of Christ in a Christian way, to seduce their flocks from them, and to demand at the same time to be caressed and honoured as fellow Christians; these are grievous impositions and oppressions, and may amount to persecution, properly so called. They that refuse to conform to order, who submit not to sound words and wholesome doctrine, who give unnecessary disturbance, and assume more than belongs to them; they are the invaders of liberty, the oppressors and persecutors of religious and righteous men.

It will be said, perhaps, that creed makers and creed imposers, as such, assume more than belongs to them. But if that be a fault, it is a fault common to all parties: for they who impugn the doctrines of the Church are themselves as much creed makers, and creed imposers, by their appeals to the people, and by their imposing their own doctrines on the public in a clamorous way, (and generally with satire and invective upon all that dislike them,) as others are who impose their creeds in a more regular and authoritative manner. Much has been said against creed making, by many who have as long creeds as others, only not the same creeds, and who are as confident in dictating, and as dogmatical in defining, and as eager to impose their own sentiments, as it is possible for men to be. The question, properly, is not, whether there shall be creeds or no; for all parties are for them, under one shape or other, and always will be: but the real matter in controversy is, who shall have the drawing of them, or who shall impose them: and when men declaim against imposing of creeds, the secret meaning of all seems to be, that they like not that such a power or privilege should be lodged in any hands but their own. However, the fault lies not in imposing creeds, (where there is a competent authority,) but in imposing false doctrine for true : and therefore the complaint is wide, while it runs only in generals, against all creed making, and against impositions at large, especially as practised in the Protestant churches. We pretend not to impose articles of faith in an arbitrary manner, or to require any implicit belief in the Church : we require no man to receive them for true, because they are ours, but because they carry their evidences along with them, and will bear examining.

But it will be said, that the Protestant churches, however, do determine beforehand, that every person upon examination ought to find these things true which they have formed into creeds or articles. They do so as to the main things at least ; and where is the harm ? It is no more than presuming that there are some things so certain, that the reason of mankind ought to submit to them, and that those things which they have defined are of that kind. To illustrate this matter further, we may put a few cases : let the propositions, suppose, of Euclid be given into any man's hand to examine, there will be no presumption in telling him beforehand that he will find them true : and if he afterwards says the contrary, it will be no breach of charity or ill manners to tell him, that either he has not duly examined them, or is not sincere in his report, or labours under an incapacity. Thus far will readily be allowed with respect to propositions of mathematical or metaphysical certainty : we may reasonably determine beforehand, in such instances, that they will be found true, upon a due examination, where capacity is not wanting. The like may be said of an account, which has been carefully cast up, and proved by the never-failing rules of art : if any man comes after, and pretends to find an error in it, one may be assured beforehand that the error is his own, and that he has been guilty of some neglect in the casting it up. Apply this reasoning to cases of moral certainty : some of them are so plain, that a man may have as well grounded an assurance there as any where. Let the question be about the truth of Christianity in general : a point so clear and so certain, that there is no uncharitableness in judging that the person who brings in a verdict against it has never fully and sincerely examined, or labours under some unconquerable infirmity. The like may be affirmed with respect to many particular doctrines contained in our CreeDs or Articles. There is such a degree of moral evidence to attest them, that the reason of mankind ought to receive them. Now the imposing such doctrines, in those whose province it properly is, is not assuming, but is discharging a weighty trust: and this is quite another thing from the Popish way of imposing what they please, forbidding men to examine, or so much as to doubt of what they define; because their Church, they say, is infallible. Our way supposes that men ought to examine, (if capable,) in order to know that the doctrine proposed is true: and we judge, with reason, that if they examine with care, and decide with impartiality, they cannot think otherwise of it. The foundations we go upon are, that reason is reason with every man; that human faculties are true; and that there is such a thing as moral certainty, and that it is ground sufficient for the governors of the Church to rest their own faith upon, and to hold out their light to others committed to their charge, and for whom they are so far responsible. Indeed, if the Church-governors should happen to administer poison, instead of wholesome food, there will then be reason for complaint: but let not the complaint run against creed making or creed imposing in the general, (which is foreign and impertinent,) but let the particulars be specified, wherein they have rigorously imposed something false, or at least doubtful; and if the charge can be made good against them, they then ought with the same zeal to throw such article out, as they keep the rest in. Upon the whole, there is neither persecution nor Popery merely in imposing creeds, &c. under pain of Church censures, or exclusion from the ministerial function: but there is good order and discipline in it, such as Christ and his Apostles have commanded, and the Church in the best and purest ages has observed, and such as is necessary to keep the unity of the faith in the bond of peace.

VI. There is another objection near akin to the former, namely, that for Church-governors to direct men what to believe, and to exclude them from the Christian Church for impugning such belief, is assuming a kind of dominion over the faith and consciences of other persons. To which I answer; men may call those powers which Christ has left with his Church by what invidious names they please, but they cannot thereby alter the nature of things. That Christ has appointed his ministers as guardians of the faith, and has empowered them to excommunicate the impugnors of it, is a very plain case: and this is all that any Protestant churches plead for. Whether it should be called assuming dominion over the faith and consciences of men, (since it is assuming no more than Christ has commanded,) let the objectors consider. The objection is worded in ambiguous terms, which carry no certain or determinate ideas: the very phrase of having dominion over one's faith, though a Scripture phrase, is of obscure meaning; and it is hard to know whether St. Paul, who has used the phrase<sup>a</sup>, disclaimed all such dominion, or only declined the use of it in some circumstances. If it means, prescribing to others arbitrarily for one's own pleasure or advantage, not pursuant to Christ's directions, (as some interpret<sup>b</sup>,) then St. Paul disclaimed it absolutely: but if it means only the exercise of the power of excommunication, such as St. Paul did exercise over Hymenæus and Alexander, (for so others interpret<sup>c</sup>,) then St. Paul only declined the use of it in some particular circumstances. Whatever the phrase means, this is certain, that the Protestant churches claim no more than a directive or instructive power over men's faith or consciences: Church censure and discipline affect only the overt acts<sup>d</sup>, the speaking, writing, teaching perverse things, not the thinking or conceiving them: for how can a man be censured for private thoughts, which no one knows but himself? But if any persons presume to teach false doctrine, and endeavour to draw disciples after them, then indeed they are accountable to the Church, as much as another kind of offenders are accountable to the State. Christianity is a social religion, and the members of it are bound to submit, in their external behaviour, to the rules of the society, under pain of forfeiting the outward privileges of it. And with what modesty, decency, or consistency, can any man claim a right of perverting his fellow Christians as he pleases, and at the same time deny others a right of doing what in them lies to preserve their people from falling into the snares laid for them?

<sup>a</sup> 2 Cor. i. 24.

<sup>b</sup> See Grotius and Hammond.

<sup>c</sup> See Whitby and Wells.

<sup>d</sup> "The laws of the Church regard only the external conduct. They do not require the inward belief of the mind in articles of faith, or the secret grace of the heart in moral duties. These things the ministers of Christ teach and exhort, but do not command. But the actions which they prescribe by their laws are such external performances as are the visible signs, the natural and proper expressions of such inward

"acts and dispositions of soul as Christ has commanded. And these laws they do not affirm to have any further obligation on the conscience, than as the performance directed by them is a proper sign and expression of such an inward disposition of the heart as Christ requires, and consequently is agreeable and subservient to his law. And when even the action is thus qualified, they do not pretend that the conscience is obliged by their law, but by Christ's." Rogers, of the Visible Church, p. 101.

It is to very little purpose for seducers to plead, that their consciences are oppressed by Church censures, or their liberty restrained: for would not the consciences of better men be more oppressed, and their liberty restrained, if they were obliged tamely to sit by and look on, while their flocks are torn from them, not permitted to make use of those spiritual powers which God has put into their hands? Either therefore let the adversaries be content to keep their thoughts to themselves, and then nobody can have dominion over their faith at all; or if they resolve to usurp upon others, and to take all advantages for spreading false doctrines, let them not be offended, if the guides of souls, whose peculiar charge it is, use their best endeavours, in a proper manner, to apply such preservatives as Scripture directs in those cases. This is not taking cognizance of the inner man, but of the outward behaviour only; and that so far as such outward behaviour affects the prosperity or safety of the whole community, and might be of dangerous consequence to the peace of the Church, the purity of the Christian faith, the honour of God and religion, and the everlasting interests of mankind. Now, can the guarding, in a Christian manner, against such fatal mischiefs, be properly or justly styled affecting dominion over others? Or is it not rather making use of a power which God has given them, to hinder others from exercising a lawless dominion over Christians, and over the Church of God? Say that the Church is fallible, what then? Are her adversaries infallible? Or are they less liable to abuse their liberty than the Church is to misemploy her authority? But enough of this.

VII. There is another objection, of more weight than the former, namely, that the censuring of heretics may often provoke them to return the like censures; and thus a kind of reciprocation of censures may be carried on to the great disturbance of the public peace, and the destruction of Christian charity. A late writer expresses the thing in a very lively manner, but somewhat overstrained, thus: "May not Arians, in their turn, think you guilty of as great sin, in opposing what they call the truth? And may not Christians, on all sides, in so great and indeed necessary difference of opinions, rant and bluster against one another for the same reason, and bring their constant accusations against those who cannot think and say as they do, for denying the faith; or against those who have the same notions with themselves for betraying it? But what then?"

“ Would not Christian churches become cockpits, or fencing “ stages <sup>e</sup> ?” In reply to what is here urged, I will not so far disguise my sentiments, as not to allow that it is a consideration of some moment : but yet there are other considerations of still greater moment, which must preponderate, and weigh down the scale. It is very certain, that ungodly men, for a cloak, will make use of the same pleas, and claim the same privileges, as righteous men do : and an erroneous conscience may honestly (if invincibly ignorant) usurp the same rights which a well-grounded faith has a clear title to. But still there is a very wide difference between true and false, between right and wrong : and it is no argument against the use of proper methods in a righteous cause, that others may abuse the same methods in a cause of a very contrary nature and quality. But I shall debate this point more distinctly, both from Scripture and reason, as it is a point of some moment.

1. Let us consider what light we can have from Scripture. It is fact, that the power of excommunication began to be misemployed, and to be turned against the Church itself, even in the times of the Apostles : for Diotrephes, loving to have the preeminence, cast some persons out of the Church<sup>f</sup>, very unwarrantably, and even in defiance of St. John himself : yet that usurpation of power, or abuse of power, did not move St. John to condemn the use of it in a proper way. So far from it, that he threatened to repay Diotrephes in his kind, to excommunicate or depose him, for his so rashly censuring other persons. “ Wherefore, if I come, I will remember his deeds which he “ doth, prating against us with malicious words <sup>g</sup>.” We may observe likewise, from St. John’s Second Epistle<sup>h</sup>, and from the charges given to the churches of Pergamus and Thyatira<sup>i</sup>, that the use of excommunication was to be retained in the Church, and was recommended from heaven by our Lord himself. And if it be said, that the Nicolaitans were an abominable sect, that alters not the case at all, so far as the present objection is concerned : for<sup>e</sup> the more wicked any sect was, the more likely to retaliate upon the Church, and to make all possible disturbance when provoked to it. Notwithstanding all which, that accidental inconvenience, of a misapplication of power, was not judged con-

<sup>e</sup> Reply to Mr. P. C.’s Letter, p. 44. Church Government, p. 380.

<sup>f</sup> 3 John 10.

<sup>h</sup> 2 John 10, 11.

<sup>g</sup> 3 John 10. See Bishop Potter on

<sup>i</sup> Revel. ii. 14, 15, 20.

siderable enough to counterbalance the great advantages and important uses of the same power rightly employed. And as we have the authority of an Apostle, who had the Spirit of God to direct him in what he wrote, and in what he did; this alone may be sufficient to determine the point in question. For whatever we may be apt to imagine, (upon a superficial or limited view of circumstances,) it is certain, that infinite wisdom cannot err, and therefore by that direction we ought to abide. St. Paul seems to have left us a general rule for all cases of this nature, in these words: "Stand fast in one spirit, with one mind, striving together for the faith of the Gospel, and in nothing terrified by your adversaries<sup>k</sup>, &c."

2. As to the reason of the thing, it is a known rule, that when there is a necessity on one hand, it is in vain to plead inconveniences on the other. God has sent mankind a charter of salvation: it is necessary, above all things, that this charter be preserved inviolable; that it should not be falsified, perverted, frustrated. There will always be some or other, set on by the grand enemy of mankind, who will be labouring to corrupt and adulterate it, either adding to it, or taking from it; and if such practices are suffered to go on without rebuke, there is an end of Christianity. Here lies the necessity of watching against all such attempts, and strenuously resisting them; which cannot be done effectually without condemning the authors, and in the last result separating from them. Hence may arise mutual contentions and bickerings: let them bear the blame who give the offence, and are aggressors in the contests. Truths of everlasting moment must be supported, whether with peace or without. The Apostles were censured as men that turned the world upside down<sup>l</sup>: the fault was in the world, and not in them. Their errand was important enough for the risking such a consequence. Our blessed Lord himself predicted what the accidental effect would be of the preaching of the Gospel; that it would "set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against the mother<sup>m</sup>," and so on; which perhaps, in ridicule, might be called making cockpits, or fencing stages: but the Gospel was worth it, and carried more than enough in it to make mankind amends. As long as religion is held in any value or esteem, and meets with opposers, it must occasion warm disputes: who would wish that it should not? What remedy is there for it, while men are men, which is not infinitely worse than the disease? A total contempt of religion might end all disputes about it, nothing else will: and even then men's quarrels would not be fewer, but more; only they would be about matters of another kind, about every thing they should value or esteem. Upon the whole, it is better, I suppose, that we should have some religion, though we often contend about it, than to have none at all, and to quarrel ten times oftener about trifles. It has been complained of, and has been thought to be a shrewd remark, that ecclesiastical history is made up of little else but religious contests and animosities of churchmen. But, pray, what is the history of mankind, but a history of wars and contentions about something or other, which they had a tender concern for? And it would be strange indeed, if a history of religion, the greatest concern of all, should not contain many contests. Who could believe that men had any religion, if during the state of the Church militant, and while there is like to be great opposition, there should be no warmth or vivacity shewn in defence of it? But this I have hinted more than once already. Now to return to our point. Though the censuring of men that corrupt the faith may provoke, may increase ill blood, &c. yet it must be done: and to decline it, when necessary, is a culpable moderation, a blamable timidity. And it is further to be considered, that though rejecting some persons from the communion of the Church may inflame the quarrel between the Church and its adversaries, yet it tends to preserve and promote the peace of its members within: therefore St. Paul prescribes this very remedy, for the securing the peace of the Church: "Mark them " which cause divisions and offences, contrary to the doctrine " which ye have learned, and avoid them <sup>n</sup>." So that though in some sense or respect, strict order and discipline may accidentally heighten differences, yet its true and natural tendency is peace; which it serves and promotes in one view, much more than it obstructs or disservices it in another. The objection therefore is grounded upon a false presumption, that peace suffers upon the whole by such conduct; which we deny: for, upon a just balancing of the account, peace is very much befriended by it <sup>o</sup>, and true and proper Christian peace could not long subsist without it.

<sup>k</sup> Philipp. i. 27, 28.

<sup>l</sup> Acts xvii. 6.

<sup>m</sup> Matt. x. 35.

<sup>n</sup> Rom. xvi. 17.

<sup>o</sup> See Rogers's Review, p. 290, 291.

However, I allow there is so much weight in the objection which I have been answering, that the consideration of it ought to make us exceeding cautious and deliberate as to the steps we take, and the heights we proceed to, in all cases of that nature : not to multiply necessaries without or beyond reason ; not to divide upon indifferent rites, customs, ceremonies, as Pope Victor is known to have done ; nor upon dubious points of discipline, as Pope Stephen did : who had indeed right on his side, as to the matter in dispute, but pushed it too rigorously ; and St. Cyprian, though mistaken, was yet the wiser, humbler, and better man. Where the main cause is both clear and weighty, yet even there many prudential cautions should be taken ; not to suspect any persons without sufficient evidence ; not to be prying and inquisitive into their retired sentiments ; (ministers only excepted, or candidates for the ministry, whose faith should be strictly inquired into <sup>P</sup> before they be allowed ;) not to proceed to rigours with any man, till all gentle measures have been first tried ; nor to break communion with any who do not openly espouse and pertinaciously abet false and pernicious doctrines. These, I apprehend, are the prudential cautions proper in such cases : and there may be more of like kind, which every man's common reason and discretion may supply. If truth and peace can be maintained together, that is the most desirable conjunction which a good man can wish for : but if human affairs will not always admit of both, then the rule is, out of two evils to choose the least, or of two advantages to prefer the greatest. Where divine truths and human customs or dictates clash, we must "obey God rather than man : " in other cases, civility and tenderness towards all men is true obedience towards God. It requires good judgment to discern, under various circumstances, the true and precise boundaries between sinful men-pleasing and Christian charity : but this is certain, we are as much (yea, and more) obliged to maintain the fundamentals of faith, as to keep up peace. And it would be but an ill way to preserve peace, (if it might be called peace,) by forfeiting our Christianity ; or to enlarge Christian communion, by receiving those who, in a strict and proper sense, are not Christians <sup>q</sup>. "Unity is not to be pursued at so dear a rate. It were a thing much to be desired, <sup>P</sup> 1 Tim. iii. 9, 10. v. 22.

p. 1540, 1541. Bingham, Antiq. b. i.

<sup>q</sup> Vid. Suicer. in voce Χριστιανός, c. iii. s. 4.

“ that there were no divisions ; yet difference of opinions touch“ ing things controverted is rather to be chosen than unanimous “ concord in damned errors : as it is better for men to go to “ heaven by divers ways, or rather by divers paths of the same “ way, than in the same path to go on peaceably to hell. Amica “ pax, magis amica veritas.”

VIII. It has been sometimes pleaded, in bar to the principles which we have before asserted, “ that no one ought to be excluded from Christian communion, whatever his faith be, provided he acknowledges sacred Writ for his rule, and is ready to admit any creeds or confessions drawn up entirely in “ Scripture terms.” To which I answer, that a man who never declares his faith otherwise than in Scripture words is very safe from censure, and can never be excluded from Christian communion for heresy. It is the maintaining doctrines contrary to Scripture, in points fundamental, which makes a heretic ; and therefore if a man never interprets it at all, but barely repeats the words, he is perfectly secure so far ; and no one can condemn him. If this then be all that the plea aims at, it is foreign and impertinent to the cause in hand.

But if the meaning of the plea be this, that though a man teaches any wild doctrines whatever, yet if he does but father those doctrines upon sacred Writ, by any feigned and forced construction, (acknowledging Scripture all the while as his rule of faith,) he ought to be received as a fellow Christian ; I say, if this be the plea, it is so manifestly absurd and ridiculous, at the first hearing, that it can scarce deserve a serious answer. For does the faith of Christ lie in words only, or in things ? or is the repeating of the bare letter of Scripture, after a man has spirited away the sense, delivering divine truths, or contradicting and defeating them ? To make the case plainer, I shall illustrate it by a resembling instance. Franciscus a Sancta Clara, a known Papist, (who published his book A. D. 1634,) contrived to make our XXXIX Articles speak his own sentiments, reconciling them with great dexterity, and most amazing subtilty, to the Council of Trent. Now, put the question, whether upon his thus ‡ Nulla vox divina ita dissoluta est et diffusa, ut verba tantum defendantur, et ratio verborum non constituantur. Tertullian. de Præscript. c. 9.

† Chillingworth, p. 218.

Nec sibi blandiantur [hæretici] si de Scripturarum capitulis videntur sibi affirmare quod dicunt, quum et diabolus de scripturis aliqua sit loquutus ; et scripturæ non in legendo consistant, sed in intelligendo. Hieronym. Dial. adv. Lucifer. p. 386.

professing his faith in Protestant terms, popishly interpreted, he could justly claim every privilege of a Church of England man? and whether we were bound to receive him as a fellow Protestant? A very little share of common sense, I presume, will be sufficient to determine the question in the negative. The like I say of any person who interprets our Christian charter to an Anti-Christian sense: he has no more right to be admitted as a fellow Christian, than the other had to be received as a fellow Protestant. For though both admit the same words or forms which we do, yet so long as they teach things directly contrary to those very words or forms rightly understood, they are chargeable with false doctrine, in our account; and their teaching such doctrine in a manner so insidious and fraudulent is so far from alleviating their guilt, that it greatly enhances it. It may be said perhaps, in the way of reply, that the famous Abbot of St. Clare knew that he perverted the true meaning and intent of our Articles, while those that pervert the sense of Scripture may believe that they justly interpret it. If that be the case, it is true that it will make a difference: but I have no occasion to consider that difference here, being foreign to the present point. For supposing the perverters of Scripture to do it ever so wickedly and fraudulently, yet they may make use of the same plea, that they are ready to profess their faith in Scripture words, and therefore ought not to be excluded from Christian communion. A Valentinian, a Montanist, a Muggletonian, or any other wild sectary, by this rule, might equally claim Christian communion, provided he does not reject Scripture itself, and turn infidel. Now a plea which thus manifestly overshoots the mark ought to be rejected as an absurd plea, like as an argument which proves too much ought to be thrown aside as worth nothing. Those who undesignedly pervert Scripture should have something better to plead than their retaining the words of Scripture: otherwise their plea reaches no further than theirs does who industriously do the same thing; for they also retain the same words. Upon the whole therefore, a man's retaining the bare letter of Scripture, while he corrupts the sense, is no sufficient reason for receiving him to Christian communion. For he is not only chargeable with denying the faith, as much as if he had rejected the text itself, but with perverting the words, and defeating the sense, while he professes an outward veneration for both. I cannot better express this whole matter than a late excellent Divine of our Church has done, in the words here following: "It is not barely repeating so many words, but the " assenting to the proposition expressed by those words, which " Christ requires.—The proposition affirmed or denied in Christ's " words is the doctrine of Christ. He therefore who will not " believe the proposition affirmed in Christ's words, ought to be " looked upon by the Church as an heathen and a publican.—Let " us take for instance these propositions; Jesus is the Christ; " he was crucified; rose again from the dead: every word and " sentence of Scripture, in which these articles are delivered, the " most heretical among the Quakers will profess their assent to; " but then they mean only this, that Christ is an internal principle " of light within them, that his crucifixion and resurrection are " nothing else but the mortification and regeneration of every " believer.—Now are these the doctrines of Christ, or are they " not? If they are not, if they are contrary to the doctrines of " Christ, then the persons understanding these Scriptures in " such a sense may justly be looked upon as heathens and publi- " cans; and, notwithstanding their readiness to profess the words " of Scripture, unfit to be admitted or continued in the Church." Thus far Dr. Rogers, whose words I take to be a just and full answer to the objection I have been examining. The reader will observe, that I have not been considering how far Scripture words may or may not be proper in Creeds, Tests, Confessions, and the like, and in what cases it may be prudent or necessary to express the Scripture sense in phrases suited to times, places, and circumstances: questions of that kind fall not within my present argument, but have been largely and thoroughly treated of by others<sup>x</sup>. All I am concerned to shew is, that if any persons are found to pervert the sense of Scripture in any notorious manner, so as thereby to undermine the essentials of faith, their pretending a high regard for the authority of sacred Writ, or for the letter of it, is not reason sufficient for receiving them as fellow Christians.

† Tantum veritati obstrepit adulter sensus, quantum et corruptor stilus. Tertull. de Præscript. c. 17.

IX. There is one objection more, which might have been brought in as an appendage to objection the second, had I sooner

<sup>u</sup> Rogers's Review, p. 399, 400.

<sup>x</sup> Preface to the Westminster Confession, p. 105—142. Stebbing's Rational Inquiry, p. 19—56. Rogers's Review, p. 395—411.

thought of it, but may conveniently enough have a distinct consideration here; namely, that the charging heresy as a crime of the first magnitude, seems to give too much countenance to the sanguinary proceedings of Papists against it. The objection runs thus: "If these charges against them are just, and their fellow creatures have any authority to chastise them for such enormities, I cannot see why the Romish Church should be blamed for roasting such accursed villains (as the Arians) among other heretics. If we think a traitor against an earthly potentate worthy of death, how much more one who vilifies the Lord of heaven and earth! Is a murderer of an earthly father obnoxious to death, and shall such a viper as this escape? If civil power have authority to punish heretics, such a villain deserves far severer penalties to be inflicted on him, than multitudes of others whose injuries to their neighbours expose them, by our statute-laws, to the gallows<sup>2</sup>." The sum of this argument, so far as it may be called an argument, amounts to thus much; that it is wrong to charge heresy in general, or Arianism in particular, with wickedness and impiety to any high degree, since it is neither felony nor treason: or if it be as bad, or worse than either, then the Papists are justified in all their sanguinary proceedings, which among Protestants is confessedly absurd. To which I answer, that the objection proceeds upon several false suppositions or suggestions: as 1. That those who plead only for spiritual reproofs or censures are pleading at the same time for civil penalties. 2. That the magnitude of crimes is to be measured by what passes in civil courts. 3. That civil courts look strictly to the demerits of the criminal, and not rather to the necessities of State. In opposition to these and the like mistakes, I observe:

1. That Scripture itself warrants and commands spiritual reproofs and censures; which is a point very foreign to that of civil penalties. St. Jude, St. Peter, St. John, St. Paul, and Christ himself, are often very sharp and poignant in their reproofs and censures, where they had no thought of exposing the offenders to civil penalties, or of justifying any sanguinary proceedings. St. Jude scruples not to call the heretics of his time ungodly men, deniers of the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ, filthy dreamers, despisers of dominion, followers of Cain, <sup>y</sup> Vindication of Mr. Nation's Sermon, p. 12. Compare Mr. P. C.'s Letter in answer, p. 23, 24.

<sup>z</sup> Reply to Mr. P. C.'s Letter, p. 21.

Balaam, and Core, raging waves of the sea, foaming out their own shame, wandering stars, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness for ever : and yet, amidst all this severe but just reproof, or satire, I presume he never would have advised the correcting them by fire and fagot. St. Peter treats the same men with the like sharpness of style in his Second Epistle : but it would be injurious to conclude from thence that he was for sanguinary measures. St. John, in his Epistles gives very hard names to heretics, calling them antichrists, &c. yet this does not prove that he was for using any violent methods with them. St. Paul describes the heretics of his time in very black characters, such as they deserved, yea, and pronounced them accursed; and yet it does not appear that he would have approved the roasting of them, had they been much greater villains than they were. Shaming them, humbling them, and bringing them to repentance, that their "souls might be saved in the day of the Lord Jesus," was the utmost hurt he intended them. Our blessed Lord himself rebuked many with great sharpness, calling them hypocrites, blind guides, children of hell, fools, whited sepulchres, serpents, vipers<sup>a</sup>, and the like : and yet it does not appear that he would have approved any violent and sanguinary proceedings with those very persons. Therefore it is wrong to furnish the Romanists with arguments for their cruelties ; as if civil penalties were just, wherever smart rebukes are proper ; or as if it were warrantable to punish according to the degree of wickedness, though the wickedness be of such a kind as falls not properly under civil cognizance.

2. There may be crimes much greater than felony or treason ; such as apostasy, (which is "crucifying the Son of God afresh, " and putting him to an open shame,") blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, and some kinds of heresy. Certainly, it may be lawful for Christian Divines to set forth those wickednesses in their proper colours, and they ought to do it : though at the same time they may desire that the offenders in such sort may rather live to repent, than suffer death, or any civil penalties. And what if felons, or traitors against the State, be punished with death ? It does not from thence follow that they are the greatest of sinners ; but reasons of government require, that crimes which more particularly affect the State should be punished by the State: the rest are left to the censures of the Church, and the righteous judgment of God.

<sup>a</sup> See Matt. xxiii.

3. And I must further observe, that civil penalties look not merely at the demerits of the criminal, but the necessities of the civil community. Civil governors do not, cannot observe any exact proportion: God only can do it in his final retributions. Theft and murder are crimes of a different magnitude; yet they are equally liable to capital penalties. As to heresies of such a kind, they may be greater sins than either in God's sight: but it is not so necessary for a State to take cognizance of them, unless they break in upon civil peace. Felonies hurt many innocent men who have no possible way to escape: none can be hurt by heresies (after proper warning given) but by their own consent. And therefore if spiritual censures, reproofs, admonitions, and other the like preservatives, be duly applied, those are ordinarily sufficient in cases of this nature: for if any, after such warnings given, will still listen to deceivers, and run in with them, they perish with their eyes open, and may take the blame to themselves. I mention this as one reason among many, why heresies, though supposed to be crimes of the first magnitude, yet ought to be treated in a milder way than crimes against the State. And I shall subjoin another reason to enforce the former, namely, that when we speak of heresies as heinous crimes, we mean as materially considered, not determining whether the men are formally so wicked as those expressions amount to: which again makes a sensible difference between this case and the other of felonies or treasons, where the offenders commonly sin directly against conscience, and cannot plead so much as a good meaning or design. However, that favourable presumption, pleadable in excuse for heresies, ought to be no bar to spiritual censures. For if the persons offend wilfully, then no censure of that kind can be thought severe: and if they offend ignorantly, such awakening admonitions may be of great use to them to recover them from their stupid lethargy. And if the effect answers, they are delivered from a doubtful state, which at most could promise them pardon only, or rest them upon uncovenanted mercy, to a state of well-grounded hope and joy, entitling them to a reward: but this I hinted before. Upon the whole, there appears no force in the objection, that heretics ought either to be punished with death, or not censured as blasphemers and grievous sinners. Extremes are always wrong, whether of mildness or severity: and there is a medium between taking violent measures with them, and treating them as fellow Christians. The sin of corrupting the faith, dividing the Church, and seducing the people, cannot easily be too much aggravated, in order to create a just abhorrence of it: and it is the more necessary, because ordinarily men are not so apprehensive of the heinousness of this sin, as they are of the iniquity of treason, or felony, or gross immoralities.

I have now finished what I intended as to the argumentative part: but it remains still to confirm the main thing by the judgment and practice of the ancients, who may be properly called in, and will be found to be of considerable weight in the controversy: if the Scripture be plain to us now, in all things necessary, the same Scripture was undoubtedly plain to them, and to them more especially: and therefore, their judgment or practice cannot but be of use to us, if it be only to render plain things still plainer, as there are degrees of plainness.

After I had finished this chapter, I had the pleasure of reading Mr. Ball's little treatise of 33 octavo pages, in answer to most of the same objections<sup>b</sup> which I have been considering. If I may be allowed to give my judgment of it, it is written with great strength and solidity, without colouring or disguises, and is extremely well suited to common capacities. One shall not easily find more good sense and close argument in so short a compass. The Sober and Charitable Disquisition, as I apprehend, was intended by way of reply to that pamphlet of Mr. Ball's. But every discerning reader, who shall compare the two performances together, will easily perceive the difference between artificial logic and natural, between laboured subtilities and plain naked truth.

CHAP. VI.

A summary View of the Judgment and Practice of the primitive Churches, in Relation to the Necessity of believing the Doctrine of the Trinity.

THE very judicious and learned Bp. Bull has represented this matter in the fullest and clearest light, in a set treatise, <sup>b</sup> An Answer to some common Objections made against those Ministers in the West, who have appeared in Defence of the Doctrine of the ever blessed Trinity and its Importance.

Written with all plainness, for the use of private Christians, by John Ball. Exon: printed by A. Brice, &c. A. D. 1727.

professedly written by way of reply to Episcopius, as I have before hinted in the entrance. To him therefore I refer such readers as will be at the pains to look thoroughly into the subject of this chapter; while I content myself with giving a summary view of the main things, interspersing here and there a few slight observations, which may be, as it were, supplemental to that great work. There are three ways of coming at the sentiments of the primitive Church, as to the necessity or importance of believing any doctrine: 1. By consulting the ancient Creeds, conceived to take in the most important articles of faith, when rightly understood. 2. By observing what doctrines were all along condemned as impious and heretical. 3. By collecting the testimonies of Fathers declaring their own sentiments, or the Church's, or both, as to what doctrines are important, or what opinions pernicious and dangerous.

I. I shall begin with Creeds. Here it is observable, that the doctrine of the Trinity, implicit or express, always made an article in the ancient Creeds: nay, several learned men have conceived, that in the earliest times it made up the whole<sup>c</sup>. Episcopius himself was of opinion that the ancient baptismal Creed was no more than this: "I believe in God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost<sup>d</sup>." He designed, by the observation, to serve his own hypothesis, viz. that the divine eternal generation of the Son was not inserted in the Creeds from the beginning. But he did not consider how much at the same time he disserved his own cause another way, by making the doctrine of the Trinity so important, as to have been the sole article, (if I may so speak,) or entire matter of the first Creeds. Nothing can be stronger for that doctrine than that the ancient Creeds should be comprised in these few words: "I believe in God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost;" since it is declaring the sacred Three to be the one God<sup>e</sup>, and recommending that faith as the prime thing, or the one thing necessary, without which no man could be a Christian. Bp. Bull very justly observes, that the short Creed now mentioned expressed the doctrine of the Trinity in a clearer, closer, and stronger manner than some of the more enlarged Creeds afterwards did. For the inserting of additional articles, time after time, carried the words Son and Holy Ghost so far off from the word God, that it might look as if that high title, which belonged indifferently to all three, was there applied to the Father only: though the compilers of those larger Creeds really designed the same common application of the name God, as before<sup>f</sup>. From hence therefore it appears, that allowing Episcopius the supposition which he goes upon, in relation to the short concise form of the first baptismal Creed, yet it is so far from favouring his cause, that it makes against him; since that form so worded carries in it a confession of the three divine Persons being the one true God of Christians: and if the Creed in the first age contained no more, then that very doctrine must have been looked upon, from the beginning, as the sum and substance of Christianity.

<sup>c</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccl. Cathol. cap. iii. s. 3. p. 308. cap. vi. s. 80. p. 331. Wall, Hist. of Inf. Baptism, part ii. cap. 9. sect. 11. p. 491.

<sup>d</sup> Antiquissimum, quodque in prima baptismi administratione jam inde ab ipsis apostolorum temporibus usitabatur, hoc erat: Credo in Deum Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum; nempe ad præscriptam ab ipso Jesu formulam. Episcop. Institut. lib. iv. c. 34. p. 340.

<sup>e</sup> Perspicuum est in hac formula, Credo in Deum, Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum, vocem Deum ἀπὸ κοινοῦ ad omnes tres, nempe Patrem, Filium et Spiritum Sanctum referri. Quod Græci adhuc clarius exprimunt; Πιστεύω εἰς τὸν Θεόν, τὸν Πατέρα, τὸν Υἱόν, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον Πνεῦμα. Ita sane hanc brevem confessionem veteres intellexerunt. Hinc Tertullianus (adv. Prax. cap. 13.) communem Christianorum de Patre, Filio, et Spiritu Sancto

As to the question about the length of the apostolical Creeds, or the number of articles they contained, learned men may offer their conjectures, and have done it<sup>g</sup>: but perhaps, after all, we have not sufficient light to determine any thing with certainty. What I at present apprehend of that matter, I shall express distinctly, in the particulars here following. 1. It appears to me not improbable, that the earliest Creeds, as they took their rise from the form of baptism, contained little or nothing beyond it. There is a short Creed of that kind still extant in Cyril<sup>h</sup>, fidem exponens, ait: et Pater Deus, et Filius Deus, et Spiritus Sanctus Deus, et Deus unusquisque. Cyprianus itidem, &c. Bull. Judic. cap. iv. sect. 3. p. 308.

<sup>f</sup> Mihi sane videtur in his paucis verbis: Credo in Deum Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum, magnam illam veritatem, nempe Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum esse cum Patre Deum, aliquatenus clarius exprimi quam in fusioribus quibusdam symbolis quæ subsecuta sunt. Nam per additamenta illa post verba, Credo in Deum Patrem, et adjectiones post mentionem Filii, non repetita voce Deum in articulis de Filio, et Spiritu Sancto, videri potest, et nonnullis visum est, Dei appellatio ad solum Patrem pertinere; plane contra mentem ac sententiam eorum qui latiora illa symbola condiderunt. Bull. ibid. p. 309.

<sup>g</sup> See Critical History of the Creed, p. 33, &c. Grabe in Annotatis ad Bull. Judic. cap. 4, 5, 6. Bingham, Eccles. Antiq. lib. x. cap. 3. sect. 7. Rogers's Review &c. p. 261—271. Berriman's Historical Account &c. p. 21, &c. Buddæi Isagoge, vol. i. p. 441, &c.

<sup>h</sup> Πιστεύω εἰς τὸν Πατέρα, καὶ εἰς τὸν Υἱὸν, καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον Πνεῦμα, καὶ εἰς ἓν βαπτίσμα μετανοίας. Catech. Mystag. i. n. 6.

comprehending but one single article, besides the article of the Trinity. And I may observe, that the shorter form of the Roman Creed, (called the Apostles'), published by Usher<sup>i</sup>, seems to carry some marks of its having been formerly shorter, by its bringing in the article of the Holy Ghost in this abrupt manner, "and in the Holy Ghost:" words which came in very aptly in the primitive form, when they immediately followed "and in the Son;" but which would appear abrupt, after several new insertions made between the two articles. Wherefore, to salve that appearing abruptness, the Church afterwards striking out and, inserted I believe in that place, making the article run, as it does at this day, "I believe in the Holy Ghost, &c." This observable circumstance relating to that Creed is a confirmation of the opinion, that the first Creeds (in some places at least) were of such a kind as Episcopus mentions. 2. It appears to me further probable, that when the Creeds ran in that short concise form, yet the interrogatories to and answers of the catechumens at baptism were fuller and more explicit. Tertullian takes notice, that the responses in baptism were then somewhat larger than the model laid down by Christ<sup>k</sup>, meaning, than the form of baptism: and he refers the enlargement of the responses to immemorial custom or tradition. Firmilian of the third century speaks of the <sup>l</sup>Symbol, or Creed of the Trinity, and of the prescribed ecclesiastical interrogation, and seems to make them distinct, supposing that the Symbol of the Trinity contained less than the other. But if the whole ran under the name of the Creed of the Trinity, even that shews what was looked upon as the principal thing in the Creed, giving denomination to the whole: and it affords a probable argument that, at first, the whole was comprised in it. 3. It is not unlikely that some of the additional articles might have been inserted into the Creeds, in the very age of the Apostles, in opposition to the heresies then breaking out. The hypothesis appears to me much more probable than that such articles should be inserted in opposition to Paganism or Judaism. It was needless to caution the new converts against Paganism or Judaism, which they had formally renounced; but it might be necessary to guard them against <sup>i</sup> Usher de Symbolis, p. 6, 9.

<sup>k</sup> Dehinc ter mergitatur, amplius aliquid respondentes quam Dominus in Evangelio determinavit. Tertull. de

Coron. c. iii. p. 102.

<sup>l</sup> Cui nec Symbolum Trinitatis, nec interrogatio legitima et ecclesiastica defuit. Cyprian. Opp. Ep. lxxv. p. 223.

false Christians, who pretended to follow the same rule of faith, and to admit the same Scriptures. This supposition much better accounts for the article of "Maker of heaven and earth," being so long omitted in the Roman Creed, (perhaps for six or seven centuries,) though it was inserted in other Creeds, where heresies gave occasion for it<sup>m</sup>. And this also best accounts for the observable variety in the additional articles to the ancient Creeds: because the several churches adopted those articles which suited their then present circumstances, according as they found the faith of Christ most endangered in this or that particular<sup>n</sup> by the heresies then and there reigning. I pretend not to propose this as certain fact, but as a probable, or the most probable opinion<sup>o</sup>. The sum of the whole matter seems to be well and justly expressed by a celebrated writer, as follows: "Not long after the Apostles' days, and even in the apostolic age itself, several heresies sprung up in the Church, subversive of the fundamentals of Christianity: to prevent the malignant effects whereof, and to hinder such heretics from an undiscernible mixing themselves with the orthodox Christians, as also to establish and strengthen the true believers in the necessary truths of the Christian religion, the Christian verities opposite to those heresies were inserted in the Creed; and, together with those other articles which had without intermission been constantly used from the time of the Apostles, were proposed to the assent and belief of all persons who came to be baptized<sup>p</sup>."

Now, to return to the doctrine of the Trinity, it is very certain that that always made either the whole or the principal part of the first Creeds: and therefore in every view, and upon all hypotheses, it must have been looked upon as a prime verity, a fundamental doctrine of Christianity. But it may be pleaded perhaps, (as indeed it has been pleaded of old time<sup>q</sup>, as well as since,) that the ancient Creeds are not explicit as to the doctrine additamenta quædam, hæreticorum, qui ecclesiam turbabant, erroribus opposita adjicerentur, donec in eam, qua hodie conspicitur, fornam exurgeret. Buddæi Isagog. vol. i. p. 443.

<sup>m</sup> See Critical History of the Apostles' Creed, p. 96—106.

<sup>n</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 190, &c. Critical History of the Athanasian Creed, vol. iii. p. 253.

<sup>o</sup> Proxime illi citra controversiam ad verum accedunt, qui symbolum hocce (Romanum) ex solenni baptismi formula, qua baptizandi, se credere profitebantur, in Deum Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum, enatum existimant; ita quidem, ut subinde

<sup>p</sup> Critical History of the Apostles' Creed, p. 38.

<sup>q</sup> See Austin de Fide et Symbolo, cap. i. p. 151. tom. vi. Bened. edit. Fulgentius in Fragment. xxxvi. p. 652. edit. Paris.

of the Trinity, in the commonly received sense. To which the answer, in short, is this: that though all the ancient Creeds are not equally explicit in that doctrine, (and good reasons may be assigned why they are not,) yet even those which are least explicit do however contain the main doctrine briefly wrapped up, provided they are but interpreted according to the real meaning and intent of the compilers, as they ought to be.

1. I say, first, that all the ancient Creeds are not equally explicit; for which good reasons may be assigned, as shall be seen presently. Some of the early Creeds are very full and explicit in the doctrine, considering the time when they were made, long before the Trinitarian controversy was come to any such height as it grew up to afterwards. The Creed of Jerusalem preserved by Cyril, (the most ancient perhaps of any now extant,) is very express for the Divinity of God the Son, in these words: "And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, true God, begotten of the Father before all ages; by whom all things were made<sup>s</sup>." Expressions which seem directly pointed at the Cerinthians, and others, who in the earliest times opposed the Divinity of Christ<sup>t</sup>.

There is Creed, or fragment of a Creed, in Irenæus, which plainly enough intimates the real and proper Divinity both of the Son and Holy Ghost. I shall cite such parts of it as are most to our purpose. "There is one God omnipotent, who made all things (out of nothing) by his Word—not by angels or by powers separate from his own mind; for the God of all needs nothing, but by his own Word and Spirit makes, orders, and governs all things, and gives being to all<sup>u</sup>." Here the reader will observe, that the Word and Spirit, the Son and the Holy Ghost, are manifestly distinguished from all creatures, from all the things made: and it is the known doctrine of Irenæus, that the Word and Spirit are the very self of the Father<sup>x</sup> in a

<sup>r</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccles. cap. vi. n. 5. p. 325. Toutée in Cyrill. Hierosol. p. 82.

<sup>s</sup> Καὶ εἰς ἐνὰ Κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ μονογενῆ, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων· δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο. Cyril. Hierosol. p. 159. Conf. 114, 137, 149.

<sup>t</sup> Vid. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. vi. n. 16. p. 330.

<sup>u</sup> Unus Deus omnipotens qui omnia

condidit per Verbum suum—non per angelos, neque per virtutes abscissas ab ejus sententia; nihil enim indiget omnium Deus: sed per Verbum et Spiritum suum omnia faciens, et disponens, et gubernans, et omnibus esse præstans. Iren. lib. i. cap. 22. p. 98. Bened. edit.

<sup>x</sup> Fecit ea per semetipsum, hoc est, per Verbum et Sapientiam suam: ad est enim ei semper Verbum et Sapientia, Filius et Spiritus, per quos, et in qui-qualified sense, reckoned to him, included in him. But let the reader, who desires fuller satisfaction, take along with him  $\gamma$  Mr. Alexander's excellent observations upon this and two or three more the like places of Irenæus, and he will find how strong an attestation they amount to, to prove that the doctrine of the Trinity, as now received, was then looked upon as the summary and groundwork of all that Christians believed. There is another Creed of Irenæus, wherein the Divinity of Christ, the doctrine of God incarnate, is expressed in strong terms. Christum Jesum Dei Filium: qui propter eminentissimam erga figmentum suum dilectionem, eam quæ esset ex virgine generationem sustinuit, ipse per se hominem adunans Deo, &c. Iren. lib. iii. c. 4.

There is a like Creed in Tertullian, fully expressing the Divinity of God the Son, and obliquely intimating the Divinity of the Holy Ghost; which however is known to be Tertullian's express doctrine elsewhere, in more places than one<sup>z</sup>. His Creed runs thus:

“ We believe in one God, but under this dispensation, which we call the economy, that the one God hath a Son, which is his Word, who proceeded from him, by whom all things were made, and without whom nothing was made. He was sent from the Father to the Virgin, and was born of her, both God and man, Son of man, and Son of God—who afterwards, according to his promise, sent from the Father the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, the Sanctifier of the faith of those who believe in the Father, and the Son, and the Holy Ghost. This is the rule which has come down to us from the beginning of the Gospel<sup>a</sup>.”

In the next century we have the famous Creed of Gregory Bishop of Neocæsarea, commonly called Thaumaturgus, on the account of the many miracles which God wrought by him. The Creed is as express and explicit as possible for the doctrine of bus, omnia libere et sponte fecit, p. 253.

Fecit ea per semetipsum, hoc est per Verbum et Sapientiam suam, p. 163.

$\gamma$  Alexander's Essay on Irenæus, p. 19. Printed for J. Clark and R. Hett, 1727.

<sup>z</sup> Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. 9, 13, 30.

<sup>a</sup> Unicum quidem Deum credimus, sub hac tamen dispensatione; quam οικονομίαν dicimus, ut unici Dei sit et Filius, Sermo ipsius, qui ex ipso processerit, per quem omnia facta sunt, et sine quo factum est nihil. Hunc missum a Patre in Virginem, et ex ea natum hominem et Deum, Filium hominis et Filium Dei, et cognominatum Jesum Christum.—Qui exinde miserit, secundum promissionem suam, a Patre Spiritum Sanctum, Paracletum, Sanctificatorem fidei eorum qui credunt in Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum. Hanc regulam ab initio Evangelii decurrisset, &c. Tertull. adv. Prax. c. ii. p. 5, 6. Welchm. edit.

the Trinity, drawn up probably for the obviating all extremes of that time, whether of Samosatensians or Sabellians. Some have questioned the genuineness of it, but without sufficient cause<sup>b</sup>. I shall here set it down at full length, as follows:

“ There is one God, Father of the living Word, the substantial Wisdom, and Power. and eternal express image: perfect parent of one perfect, Father of the only begotten Son. There is one Lord, one of one, God of God, the express character and image of the Godhead, the effective Word, the Wisdom that grasps the system of the universe, and the Power that made every creature, true Son of the true Father, invisible of invisible, incorruptible of incorruptible, immortal of immortal, and eternal of eternal. And there is one Holy Ghost, having his subsistence from God, and shining forth by the Son. [viz. to mankind,] perfect image of the perfect Son, life causal of all living, the holy fountain, essential sanctity, author of all sanctification: in whom God the Father is manifested, who is above all, and in all, and God the Son, who is through all. A perfect Trinity, undivided, unseparated in glory, eternity, and dominion. There is therefore nothing created or servile in this Trinity, nothing adventitious, that once was not, and came in after: for the Father was never without the Son, nor the Son without the Spirit, but this Trinity abides the same, unchangeable and invariable for ever<sup>c</sup>.” This is the so much celebrated Creed, of which some stories have been told more than we are bound to believe, by Gregory Nyssen: but misreports in circumstances do not invalidate the main thing. I have αἰδίου. Καὶ ἐν πνεῦμα ὄντων, ἐκ Θεοῦ τὴν ὑπαρξίν ἔχων, καὶ δι' υἱοῦ πεφηνός. [δηλαδὴ τοῖς ἀνθρώποις] εἰκὼν τοῦ υἱοῦ τελείου τελεία, ζῶν (ζώντων αἰτία, πηγή ἀγία, ἀγιότης ἀγιασμοῦ χορηγός, ἐν ᾧ φανεροῦται Θεὸς ὁ πατήρ ὁ ἐπὶ πάντων καὶ ἐν πᾶσι, καὶ Θεὸς ὁ υἱὸς ὁ διὰ πάντων. Τριάς τελεία, δόξη καὶ αἰδιότητα καὶ βασιλεία μὴ μερισμένη μηδὲ ἀπαλλοτριουμένη. οὔτε οὖν κτιστὸν τι ἢ δοῦλον ἐν τῇ τριάδι, οὔτε ἐπέισακτὸν τι, ὡς πρότερον μὲν οὐχ ὑπάρχον, ὕστερον δὲ ἐπεισελθόν. οὔτε οὖν ἐνελεπίε ποτε υἱὸς πατρὶ, οὔτε υἱὸς πνεύματος, ἀλλ' ἀτρεπτος καὶ ἀναλλοίωτος ἡ αὐτὴ τριάς αἰεί. Greg. Thaumaturgi Symbolum apud Gregor. Nyssen. in Vit. Gregor. Opp. tom. ii. p. 978, 979.

<sup>b</sup> The genuineness of the Creed is maintained by Bishop Bull, Defen. F. N. sect. ii. c. 12. p. 137. Fabricius B. Gr. vol. v. p. 249. Opp. Hippol. vol. ii. p. 224. Dr. Berriman's Historical Account, p. 138, &c. Mr. Abr. Taylor, True Script. Doctrine, p. 128, &c.

<sup>c</sup> Εἰς Θεός, πατήρ λόγου ζώντος, σοφίας ὑψιστώσεως, καὶ δυνάμεως, καὶ χαρακτήρος αἰδίου τέλειος, τελείου γεννητῶν, πατήρ υἱοῦ μονογενοῦς. εἰς κύριος, μόνος ἐκ μόνου, Θεός ἐκ Θεοῦ ὁ χαρακτήρ καὶ εἰκὼν τῆς θεότητος, λόγος ἔνεργος, σοφία τῆς τῶν ὄλων συστάσεως περιεκτικῆς, καὶ δύναμις τῆς ὅλης κτίσεως ποιητικῆς, υἱὸς ἀληθινὸς ἀληθινοῦ πατρὸς, ἀόρατος ἀοράτου, καὶ ἀφθαρτος ἀφθάρτου, καὶ ἀθάνατος ἀθανάτου, καὶ αἰδῖος

inclosed a small part of it within brackets, looking upon it as a marginal gloss, made by some ignorant sciolist, and afterwards foisted into the text. I owe the observation to Le Quien, who has confirmed it with substantial reasons<sup>d</sup>, in his edition of Damascen.

If it should now be asked, why other Creeds, elder than this, should not be equally explicit, as to the doctrine of the Trinity, or why the western formularies were not as minute and express as some of the eastern; the answer is short and easy: there was not the same occasion. Heresies were more or less prevalent at different times, and in different places; and Creeds varied accordingly. The east was more infested with them than the west: and therefore the eastern Creeds were larger and more explicit, generally, than the western. And when some churches had formed their Creeds, and made it customary for the catechumens to recite them publicly, they might not afterwards think it proper to alter the forms which the people had long been used to, without the greatest necessity. Such is Ruffinus's account of this matter<sup>e</sup>. And I may add, that there was no absolute necessity of enlarging the baptismal Creeds as often as heresies arose in the Church; because the defects of the shorter Creeds might be competently supplied another way; namely, by very particular instructions and cautions given to the candidates for baptism, in the Catechetical Lectures contrived for that purpose: of which I have treated sufficiently elsewhere<sup>f</sup>, and need not here repeat.

2. But I am further to observe, that even those shorter Creeds, such particularly as the Roman, though not so explicit in the article of the Trinity as the eastern Creeds, do yet contain the sum and substance of the doctrine in full and strong terms; provided only that they be interpreted according to the true and certain meaning of the compilers, as they ought to be. The Creeds of the Church ought most certainly to be interpreted according to the mind of the Church, and not by any after-lum reddere, et utique adjectionem unius saltem sermonis, eorum qui præcesserunt in fide non admittit auditus. In cæteris autem locis, quantum intelligi datur, propter nonnullos hæreticos, addita quædam videntur, per quæ novellæ doctrinæ sensus crederetur excludi. Ruffin. in Symbol. p. 17. edit. Ox. Conf. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. v. p. 312.

<sup>d</sup> Mich. Le Quien, in Dissertat. Damascen. tom. i. p. 2.

<sup>e</sup> In diversis ecclesiis, aliqua in his verbis inveniuntur adjecta: in ecclesia tamen urbis Romæ hoc non deprehenditur factum. Quod ego propterea esse arbitror, quod neque hæresis ulla illic sume sit exordium; et mos ibi servatur antiquus, eos qui gratiam baptismi suscepturi sunt, publice, id est, fidelium populo audienti symbo-

<sup>f</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 189, &c.

thoughts of heretics. For though the Scripture, properly, is the rule for receiving any Creed, or any doctrine, yet it is not the rule of interpretation; but words, phrases, and formularies, must be interpreted according to their received use, and the known sense of the compilers and imposers<sup>b</sup>. The very judicious author of the Critical History has expressed the same sentiments very fully and clearly, as follows: "Although nothing contained therein must be believed any further than it agrees with the holy Scriptures, yet the intended sense of the greatest part thereof is not to be fetched from thence, but from the writings of the Fathers, and from those heresies against whom it (the Creed) was designed: which expression may, at the first hearing, be perhaps esteemed by some too hasty and inconsiderate: but the nature of the thing, well reflected on, makes it evident, and beyond contradiction. And if the authority of others before me will be more valued, and better received, it will be no difficult task to produce several who have affirmed the same thing. But at present I shall content myself with the testimony of Monsieur Jurieu, a French Divine now living, who writes in express terms, that for his part, he is persuaded, that we must not seek the SENSE of the articles of the Apostles' Creed in the SCRIPTURES, but in the INTENTION of those that composed it."

From what has been said, it ought to be admitted as a clear case, or a ruled point, that the Creeds of the Church should be interpreted according to the mind of the Church; and the mind of the Church is to be learned chiefly from the writings of the Fathers. And while we proceed by this rule, it is manifest that the ancient Creeds, whether of the larger or shorter kind, do express the doctrine of the Trinity, as commonly received at this day. The Roman Creed for instance, even in its shorter form, (as it stood in and before the fourth century,) fully expresses the true and proper Divinity of Christ; indirectly, in calling the first Person Father, and directly, in calling the second queretur. Symbola Ecclesie non tenet qui aliter quam Ecclesia intelligit. Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. v. p. 322.

‡ Quid refert si quis hesternus hæreticus verba aliter explicari posse contendat? Symbola certe Ecclesie ex ipso Ecclesie sensu, non ex hæreticorum cerebello exponenda sint. Quod posterius si fieret, Deum immortalem! quam cito, ex omnibus fidei nostræ articulis, ne unus quidem nobis satis sanus atque integer relin-

<sup>b</sup> See the Case of Arian Subscription Considered, vol. ii. p. 297, 298. Remarks on Dr. Clarke's Exposition of the Catechism, p. 25. edit. 3rd.

<sup>1</sup> Critical History of the Apostles' Creed, p. 42. edit. 4th.

Person only Son. The very name of Father, applied in the Creed to the first Person, intimates the relation he bears to a Son, of the same nature with him, existing of him, and from him, and with him. This is an observation frequently occurring in the Post-Nicene writers, who derived it from the more early Fathers, as I shall make appear presently. Fulgentius argues, that the Divinity of the Son is sufficiently intimated in the Creed, by the first article's acknowledging God to be a Father; inasmuch as Father and Son must be allowed to be of the same nature, and equal in all essential perfections<sup>k</sup>. Ruffinus, before him, argues in like manner, and so interprets the first article of the Creed<sup>l</sup>. Hilary, before them both, expresses the same thought more than once, and insists upon it as of great weight<sup>m</sup>. The Greek writers are full of the same notion, asserting God to be a Father, and from that principle inferring the coequality and proper Divinity of Christ his Son. Gregory Nyssen, in his first oration against Eunomius, expresses the thing thus<sup>n</sup>: “ He says, there is one only God Almighty: if he means a Father

<sup>k</sup> Cum enim quisque se dicit credere in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, hoc ipsum quod in Deum Patrem dicit, sicut in eo veritatem naturalis divinitatis, ita veritatem naturalis quoque paternitatis, et ex hac veritatem etiam naturalis generationis ostendit.— Totum igitur in se habet illa generatio divina quicquid in se habet Dei Patris æterna substantia. Proinde sufficiebat ut diceretur de Patre solo, quicquid æqualiter intelligendum esset de Filio: Pater enim sic omnipotentem Filium genuit, sicut est ipse Pater omnipotens.—Omnia igitur quæ Deo Patri dantur in Symbolo, ipso uno Filii nomine, naturaliter tribuuntur et Filio. Fulgent. Fragment. xxxvi. p. 652.

<sup>l</sup> Patrem cum audis, Filii intellige Patrem, qui Filius supradictæ sit imago substantiæ.—Hoc ergo ipso nomine quo Deus ipse Pater appellatur, cum Patre pariter subsistere etiam Filius demonstratur.—Est ergo Deus Pater verus tanquam veritatis Pater, non extrinsecus creans, sed ex eo quod ipse est, Filium generans, &c. Ruffin. in Symbol. p. 18. ed. Ox.

<sup>m</sup> Cum Patris nomen auditur, nunquid natura Filii non continetur in nomine?—Neque enim Filius est

cui alia ac dissimilis erit a Patre substantia, Hilar. de Trin. p. 789. Ecclesiæ Fides solum verum Deum Patrem confessa, confitetur et Christum.—Per id enim Christum confessa Deum verum est, quod solum verum Deum confessa sit Patrem.—Non enim unigenito Deo naturæ demutationem naturalis nativitas intulit: nec qui ex subsistente Deo secundum divinæ generationis naturam Deus subsistit, ab eo qui solus verus Deus est, separabilis est veritate naturæ, p. 1006. Conf. 860, 938, 1163. ed. Benedict.

<sup>n</sup> Εἰς γὰρ ἔστι, φησὶ, καὶ μόνος Θεὸς παντοκράτωρ. εἰ μὲν οὖν τὸν πατέρα διὰ τῆς τοῦ παντοκράτορος προσηγορίας ἐνδείκνυται, ἡμέτερον λέγει τὸν λόγον, καὶ οὐκ ἀλλότριον· εἰ δὲ ἄλλον τινὰ παρὰ τὸν πατέρα νοεῖ παντοκράτορα, καὶ τὴν περιτομὴν εἰ δοκεῖ κηρυσσέτω, ὃ τῶν δογμάτων τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν προστάτης. τῶν γὰρ Χριστιανῶν ἡ πίστις πρὸς τὸν πατέρα βλέπει. πάντα δὲ ἔστω ὁ πατήρ· ὑψιστος, παντοκράτωρ, βασιλεὺς τῶν βασιλευόντων, κύριος τῶν κυριευόντων, καὶ πάντα ὅσα τῆς ὑψηλῆς ἔχειται σημασίας, τοῦ πατρὸς ἔστιν ἴδια· τὰ δὲ τοῦ πατρὸς τοῦ υἱοῦ ἔστι πάντα ὥστε τοῦτο ὄντος, κακεῖνα δεχόμεθα, κ. τ. λ. Gregor. Nyssen. Orat. i. p. 15.

“ under the name of Almighty, he says the same that we do, “ and nothing different ; but if he intends it of an Almighty “ who is not a Father, he may preach up circumcision if he “ pleases, along with his other Jewish tenets. The faith of “ Christians looks to a Father. The Father indeed is all ; he is “ Most High, Almighty, King of kings, and Lord of lords ; what- “ ever titles sound high or great, they belong to the Father ; “ and all things that are the Father’s belong to the Son. Allow “ but this, and we admit the other.” To the same purpose speaks Athanasius, that the professing our belief in God, as a Father, is at the same time acknowledging the Divinity of the Son<sup>o</sup>. And the like is observed by Cyril of Jerusalem, in his Exposition of the first article of the Creed<sup>p</sup>.

The authors which I have cited, and to which more might be added<sup>q</sup>, are all Post-Nicenes ; but they very well understood the true and genuine principles of their Catholic predecessors, and are so many presumptive evidences of the doctrine of the Ante-Nicene Church, when, though writing on different occasions and in distant places, they fall in so unanimously with the same way of thinking. Besides, testimonies may be cited from the Ante-Nicene writers themselves, expressing the same notion. Dionysius of Alexandria, who flourished about the middle of the third century, intimates the same thing thus : “ The Father being eter- “ nal, the Son must be eternal too, light of light.—The names by “ me mentioned are undivided and inseparable : when I named “ the Father, before I mentioned the Son, I signified the Son in “ the Father.—If any of my false accusers suspect, that, because “ I called God Creator and former of all things, I made him “ Creator of Christ, let him consider, that I before styled him “ Father, and so the Son was included in him,” &c. Here we may observe, how this early and excellent writer argues from the

<sup>o</sup> Ὁ δὲ τὸν Θεὸν πατέρα λέγων, εὐθὺς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ τὸν υἱὸν σημαίνει, καὶ οὐκ ἀγνοήσει ὅτι υἱὸς ὄντος, διὰ τοῦ υἱοῦ τὰ γινόμενα ἐκτίσθη πάντα. Athanas. de Decret. Synod. Nic. p. 236. Benedict.

<sup>p</sup> Πατέρα τὸν Θεὸν ὀνομάσαμεν, ἵνα ἅμα τῷ νοεῖν πατέρα, νοήσομεν καὶ τὸν υἱόν· υἱὸς γὰρ καὶ πατὴρ οὐδὲν ἐστὶ μεταξύ τῶν ὄντων. Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. vii. n. 3. cont. Catech. vii. n. 1.

<sup>q</sup> See others cited and referred to in the Critical History of the Apostles’ Creed, p. 77, 78.

<sup>r</sup> Ὁμοῦ οὖν αἰωνίου τοῦ πατρὸς, αἰώ-

νιος ὁ υἱὸς ἐστὶ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός ὄν.— τῶν ἰπ’ ἐμοῦ λεχθέντων ὀνομάτων ἕκαστον ἀχώριστόν ἐστι καὶ ἀδιαιρέτον τοῦ πλησίον. πατέρα εἶπον, καὶ πρὶν ἐπαγάγω τὸν υἱὸν ἐσημίνα καὶ τοῦτον ἐν τῷ πατρί.—Ἐὰν δέ τις τῶν συκοφαντῶν ἐπειδὴ τῶν ἀπάντων ποιητὴν τὸν Θεὸν καὶ δημιουργὸν εἶπον, οἰηταί με καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ λέγειν, ἀκουσάτω μου πρότερον πατέρα φήσαντος αὐτόν, ἐν φ’ καὶ ὁ υἱὸς προσγέγραπται. Dionys. Alex. apud Athanas. de Sententia Dionysii, p. 254, 257.

very name and relation of Father, that Christ could not be a creature, in like manner as the Post-Nicene writers (before cited) argue from the same title applied to the first Person in the Creed. So that if we interpret the Creed according to the strict sense which the ancients had of the term Father, that very title indirectly asserts the Divinity of Christ, since God is thereby understood to be the Father of Christ<sup>s</sup>, and not his Creator, as of angels or men.

But the same thing will be more directly proved from the title of Son, or only Son, applied to the second Person of the Trinity, in the Creed: for all the Fathers, both Ante-Nicene and Post-Nicene, constantly understood that title, as applied to Christ, to be expressive of his real and proper Divinity, of his partaking of the same nature and Godhead with the Father, whose only Son he is. Bishop Bull, in reply to Episcopus, has largely insisted upon this argument, proving that the title of μονογενής, only begotten, or only Son, in the Creed, denotes the real and eternal Divinity of Christ. He proves it, 1. from such places of Scripture where that title is applied to Christ. 2. From the strict force and propriety of the expression itself. 3. From the order and texture of the Creed. 4. From the universal and constant interpretation of the ancients<sup>t</sup>. I may refer to Bishop Bull, and others that have come after him, for proof that the title of Son of God, or only begotten Son, in Scripture, cannot reasonably be understood either of our Lord's miraculous conception by the Holy Ghost, or of his Messiahship, or of his being the first begotten from the dead, or of his receiving all power, and his being appointed heir of all things: none of these circumstances singly considered, nor all together, will be sufficient to account for the title of only Son, or only begotten; but there is a necessity of looking higher up to the preexistent and divine nature of the Word, who was in the beginning with God, and was himself very God, before the creation, and from all eternity<sup>v</sup>.

<sup>s</sup> Compare the Creed of Gregory Thaumaturgus, cited above, where the term Father is interpreted in the same high sense, and as implying the real and essential Divinity of the Son.

<sup>t</sup> In Symbolo Romano Christum dici Dei Filium unicum, sive unigenitum (τὸν μονογενῆ) respectu divinæ suæ naturæ, qua non modo ante Mariam, sed etiam ante omnia secula ex et cum Deo Patre extitit, probatu facile est: 1. Ex locis Scripturæ ubi vox μονογενῆς reperitur Christo tributa. 2. Ex

vi et proprietate ipsius vocis. 3. Ex ordine et contextu verborum in Symbolo ipso. 4. Denique ex constante ac perpetuo Catholicæ Ecclesiæ sensu atque interpretatione. Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. v. p. 313.

<sup>v</sup> See Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. v. p. 313—320. Dr. Sherlock's Scripture Proofs of our Saviour's Divinity, p. 161—183. Remarks on Dr. Clarke's Exposition of the Catechism, p. 44—48.

Angels and men have been called sons of God, in an improper and metaphorical sense; but they have never been styled only begotten, nor indeed sons in any such emphatical and distinguishing manner as Christ is. They are sons by adoption, or faint resemblance: he is truly, properly, and eminently Son of God, and therefore God, as every son of man is therefore truly man<sup>x</sup>. Novatian speaks the sense of all the Ante-Nicene Fathers in that article: I forbear to produce their testimonies here, having done it elsewhere<sup>y</sup>: there is not a more noted principle or maxim among the earliest writers of the Church than this, that Christ is truly, properly, essentially God, because he is properly Son of God. The sum then is, that the Apostles' Creed, in styling Christ only Son, or only begotten, has expressed his coeternal Divinity in such terms as were constantly and universally understood by the ancient churches to carry that idea with them. Therefore the very learned Bishop Stillingfleet had good reason to say, "that although the Apostles' Creed does not in express words declare the Divinity of the three Persons in the Unity of the divine essence; yet taking the sense of those articles as the Christian Church understood them from the Apostles' times, then we have as full and clear evidence of this doctrine, as we have that we received the Scriptures from them<sup>z</sup>." The result of what has been said under the present article is, that whether we take the longer or the shorter Creeds of the ancient churches, whether those that are most explicit or those that are least so, all of them contained the doctrine of the Trinity, either as their whole subject-matter, or as their principal part: and therefore, so far as the Creeds of the ancient Church can be of use to shew that any point of doctrine was judged important or fundamental, we have full proof that the doctrine we are speaking of was looked upon as an essential of Christianity in the best and purest ages.

It must indeed be owned, that it never was the intention of Creeds to furnish out any complete catalogue of fundamentals<sup>a</sup>, and so it would be very wrong to argue and infer negatively, that such an article was not in this or in that Creed, and therefore edit. Welchm.

<sup>x</sup> Ut enim præscripsit ipsa natura hominem credendum esse, qui ex homine sit; ita eadem natura præscribit et Deum credendum esse, qui ex Deo sit: ne si non et Deus fuerit cum ex Deo sit, jam nec homo sit licet ex homine fuerit. Novat. cap. xi. p. 31.

<sup>y</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 192.

<sup>z</sup> Stillingfleet on the Trinity, chap. ix. p. 229.

<sup>a</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 188—190. Critical History of the Athanasian Creed, vol. iii. p. 252, &c.

was not judged a fundamental by the compilers, (for by that rule, neither the article of God's being Maker of heaven and earth, nor that of life everlasting, would be fundamental, having both been omitted in the old Roman Creed,) but it may be right enough to argue and infer positively, that such an article was inserted in the Creeds, and was therefore judged to be a fundamental, or of great importance; since none could be admitted to Christian baptism, in such or such places, in the early times, without an open and explicit profession of it. So much for the head of Creeds.

II. Another way of knowing the sentiments of the ancient Church, in relation to the necessity of believing the doctrine of the Trinity, is to observe what censures were passed upon the open impugners of it. For if it was accounted heresy, pernicious and deadly heresy, to oppose that doctrine, in whole or in part, then it is plain that the doctrine was judged important, was looked upon as an essential of the Gospel faith. Among the impugners of that doctrine, in the article of Christ's Divinity, have been commonly reckoned these seven: 1. Cerinthus, 2. Ebion, 3. Theodotus, 4. Artemon, 5. Beryllus, 6. Paul of Samosata, 7. Arius. Of whom I shall treat in their order, as briefly as may be consistent with perspicuity.

A. D. 60. CERINTHUS.

Cerinthus lived in the apostolic age, was an impugner of our Lord's Divinity, and was condemned for it, probably, by St. John himself, and by the whole Church of that time and after: therefore the article of Christ's Divinity was then looked upon as a fundamental article. This is the sum of what I maintain under this head: I now come to the distinct proof of the several particulars.

1. That Cerinthus lived in the apostolic age is a fact so well attested by great variety of ancient evidences, (some of which will come up presently,) that it ought to pass for a certain and manifest truth. Yet a late learned foreigner<sup>b</sup>, having a private hypothesis to serve, has called the fact in question, as some few others before him had also done<sup>c</sup>. His reasons have been considered and answered by learned hands<sup>d</sup>; to whom I refer the

<sup>b</sup> Frederic. Adolph. Lampe, in Comment. in S. Johan. Proleg. lib. ii. cap. 3. p. 181, &c.

<sup>c</sup> Vid. Buddæus in Eccles. Apost.

p. 411.

<sup>d</sup> Taylor's True Scripture Doctrine, p. 263. Buddæus, Eccl. Apostol. p.

412—419.

reader, rather than enter into a needless dispute. Irenæus is an authority so early, and so express for Cerinthus's flourishing in St. John's time, that it is alone sufficient to remove all doubt of the fact. Indeed Epiphanius<sup>f</sup> and Philastrius<sup>g</sup> place Cerinthus so high in the apostolic age, that they suppose him to have given great disturbance to St. Peter and St. Paul, and to have occasioned the calling of the first council at Jerusalem, A. D. 49, recorded in the Acts<sup>h</sup>. But there is reason to suspect the truth of that report<sup>i</sup>, and therefore I am content to place Cerinthus some years lower, but early enough to have spread his heresies before St. John wrote his Epistles, and even before St. Paul wrote some of his.

2. Cerinthus held many errors: but the only one I am concerned to take notice of is, his denying the Divinity of Christ. That he did so is plainly asserted by the ancient author of the Appendix to Tertullian's book of Prescription<sup>k</sup>. But Irenæus, a more early and a more accurate writer, will give us the truest and most distinct account of what Cerinthus held with respect to the Divinity of our blessed Lord. The sum of this heresy in that point was, that Jesus and Christ were two Persons: Jesus a mere man, conceived in the natural way, of Joseph and Mary; and Christ a celestial spirit, which descended from above, and resided in the man Jesus, not constantly, but occasionally, from his baptism to his crucifixion<sup>l</sup>. Whatever view we take this doctrine of Cerinthus in, it is denying the proper Divinity of our blessed Lord. The man Jesus, upon his principles, could not be divine at all, having no constant or personal union with what descended from above: and as to that spiritual substance, called Christ, which was supposed, some time, to reside in him, even that was not properly divine, according to

<sup>e</sup> Irenæus, lib. iii. cap. 3. 11.

<sup>f</sup> Epiphanius. Hæres. xxviii. n. 2. p. 111.

<sup>g</sup> Philastrus. Hæres. xxxvi. p. 80. edit. Fabric.

<sup>h</sup> Acts xv.

<sup>i</sup> Vid. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 113, 106.

<sup>k</sup> Cerinthus—Christum ex semine Joseph natum proponit, hominem illum tantummodo sine Divinitate contendens. Tertull. de Præscript. cap. lxviii. p. 221. Rigalt.

<sup>l</sup> Cerinthus autem quidam in Asia—Jesum subjecit, non ex virgine natum (impossibile enim hoc ei visum

est) fuisse autem eum Joseph et Mariæ filium, similiter ut reliqui omnes homines, et plus potuisse justitia et prudentia et sapientia ab hominibus: et post baptismum descendisse in eum, ab ea principalitate quæ est super omnia, Christum figura columbæ, et tunc annuntiasse incognitum Patrem, et virtutes perfecisse: in fine autem revolasse iterum Christum de Jesu, et Jesum passum esse et resurrexisse, Christum autem impassibilem perseverasse, existentem spiritalem. Iren. lib. i. cap. 26. p. 105. Bened. Conf. Epiphanius. Hæres. xxviii. p. 110.

Cerinthus. The most that he said of it was, that it was spiritual, and impassible because spiritual; he does not say because divine. He separates him from the principality that is over all, that is to say, from God supreme, and therefore could not look upon him as properly divine. I may further observe, that his doctrine of the Logos, or Word, was, that he was Son, not of God supreme, but of the only begotten<sup>m</sup>, one remove still further off from God most high. And since he thus distinguished him from the only begotten, who was alone supposed to know the Father immediately, it is plain he could not look upon the Word as strictly divine. Add to this, that Epiphanius, speaking of some of the Ebionites, (who were near allied to the Cerinthians, and borrowed much of their doctrine from them,) says, that they supposed their Christ to have descended from heaven, being a spirit, and first created of all, higher than the angels, and bearing rule over all; which afterwards assumed a body<sup>n</sup>. This description of Christ from above seems to answer pretty nearly to Cerinthus's notion of a spiritual substance, called Christ, so descending and residing in Jesus; and is a confirmation of what I am pleading for, viz. that Cerinthus did not look upon Christ as divine, (in any capacity,) but as a creature only. So then, whether we consider Cerinthus as making Jesus a mere man, or as supposing the Christ (sometimes residing in Jesus) to be an inferior Aeon, produced in time, and the offspring of silence<sup>o</sup>, or, in short, a creature; either way he plainly impugned the true and proper Divinity of Jesus Christ.

3. The next thing to be considered is, what kind of reception such his doctrine met with in the Church of Christ. We have good reason to believe that it was condemned as antichristian doctrine, by the Bishops of Asia, and by St. John himself. Indeed our proofs of this matter are of the conjectural kind: but they are not without their weight, if they amount to rational presumptions or strong probabilities. If it can be probably argued from external evidence, that St. John wrote his Gospel, γῆσθαι, τὸν ἐκείσε δὲ αἰῶνα κεκληρῶσθαι. Epiphanius. Hæres. xxx. cap. 3. p. 127. Conf. Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. lib. v. cap. 12. sect. 7. p. 146. edit. ult.

<sup>m</sup> Et initium quidem esse monogenem, Logon autem verum Filium unigeniti. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 11. p. 188.

<sup>n</sup> Ἄλλοι δὲ ἐν αὐτοῖς λέγουσιν ἄνωθεν μὲν ὄντα, πρὸ πάντων δὲ κτισθέντα, πνεῦμα ὄντα, καὶ ὑπὲρ ἀγγέλους ὄντα, πάντων τε κυριευόντα, καὶ Χριστὸν λέ-

<sup>o</sup> See Bishop Bull. Def. F. N. sect. iii. cap. 1. p. 160, et Greg. Nazianz. Orat. xxiii. p. 414.

or Epistles, in direct opposition to the tenets of Cerinthus, and if the internal characters of his writings themselves confirm the report; then both these circumstances concurring in the same thing will together amount to as fair a proof of what we pretend, as matters of this nature will generally admit of.

That St. John wrote his Gospel with a view to confute Cerinthus, among other false teachers, is attested first by Irenæus<sup>p</sup>, who was a disciple of Polycarp, and who flourished within less than a century of St. John's time. He is very particular in the account, observing what special errors of the same Cerinthus and others the Apostle had an eye to in the penning of his Gospel.

Our next author to Irenæus is Victorinus Petavionensis, who flourished about A. D. 290. He reports that the Bishops of Asia, being alarmed at the pernicious doctrines then disseminated by Valentinus, Cerinthus, and Ebion, came in a body to St. John, importuning him to bear his testimony against them<sup>q</sup>. The author, probably, mistakes in bringing in Valentinus so early: but that will not invalidate his report as to the other two, or as to the main thing. Some doubts have been raised about the genuineness of that treatise ascribed to Victorinus: but Dr. Grabe seems to have well taken off the only material exception to it<sup>r</sup>: to him therefore I refer the reader.

Our next author is Jerome, who twice tells the same story, with some particular circumstances, not so plainly intimated

<sup>p</sup> Hanc fidem annuncians Joannes Domini discipulus, volens per Evangelii annunciationem auferre eum qui a Cerintho insematus erat hominibus errorem, et multo prius ab his qui dicuntur Nicolaitæ, qui sunt vulsio ejus, quæ falso cognominatur scientia, ut confunderet eos, et suaderet, quoniam unus Deus qui omnia fecit per Verbum suum; et non, quemadmodum illi dicunt, alterum quidem fabricatorem, alium autem Patrem Domini; et alium quidem fabricatoris Filium, alterum vero de superioribus Christum, quem et impassibilem perseverasse, descendente in Jesum Filium fabricatoris, et iterum revolasse in suum pleroma; et initium quidem esse Monogenem, Logon autem verum Filium unigeniti; et eam conditionem, quæ est secun-

dum nos, non a primo Deo factam, sed a virtute aliqua valde deorsum subjecta, et abscissa ab eorum communicatione, quæ sunt invisibilia et innominabilia: omnia igitur talia circumscribere volens discipulus Domini, et regulam veritatis constituere in Ecclesia, — sic inchoavit in ea, quæ est secundum Evangelium, doctrina: In principio erat Verbum, &c. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 11. p. 188.

<sup>q</sup> Cum essent Valentinus, et Cerinthus, et Ebion, et cæteri scholæ Sathanæ diffusi per orbem, convenerunt ad illum de finitimis provinciis omnes, et compulerunt ut ipse testimonium scriberet. Victorin. in Apocalyps. Bibl. PP. tom. i. p. 576. alias tom. iii. p. 418.

<sup>r</sup> Grabe, Spicileg. vol. ii. p. 45.

elsewhere; once in his prologue to his Commentaries on St. Matthew<sup>s</sup>, and again in his book of Ecclesiastical Writers<sup>t</sup>. He does not say, in particular, from whence he had his accounts: but he was a learned man, conversant in books, and he intimates that he had his intelligence from ecclesiastical memoirs.

Epiphanius of the same time testifies more than once, that St. John wrote against Cerinthus and Ebion, who had taught that Christ was a mere man<sup>u</sup>. It is some confirmation of this, what Irenæus relates of St. John's meeting with Cerinthus at the bath, (as I have before noted,) and running from him with disdain. It shews, at least, that St. John and he were contemporaries, and that the Apostle well understood his principles, and detested them.

The main of the account may receive some further confirmation from what Julian, the apostate Emperor, was pleased to observe, (thirty years or more before St. Jerome,) that John perceiving how that the persuasion of Christ's being God prevailed mightily among the Christians dispersed through many cities of Greece and Italy, did then take upon him to assert the same doctrine in his Gospel, with a view to humour them, and to get himself reputation<sup>r</sup>. Here then we have a plain confession from a vehement adversary, which confession of his (ridicule and banter hæreticos, et maxime tunc Ebionitarum dogma consurgens; qui asserunt Christum ante Mariam non fuisse: unde et compulsi est divinam ejus nativitatem edicere. Hieron. de Viris illustrib. c. ix. p. 54, 55. Fabric.

<sup>s</sup> Johannes Apostolus et Evangelista—quum esset in Asia, et jam tunc hæreticorum semina pullarent Cerinthi, Ebionis, et cæterorum qui negant Christum in carne venisse (quos et ipse in epistola sua antichristus vocat, et Apostolus Paulus frequenter percudit) coactus est ab omnibus pene tunc Asiæ Episcopis, et multarum Ecclesiarum legationibus, de divinitate Salvatoris altius scribere, et ad ipsum, ut ita dicam, Dei Verbum, non tam audaci, quam felici temeritate prorumpere. Et ecclesiastica narrat historia, quum a fratribus cogere- tur ut scriberet, ita facturum se respondisse, si in dicto jejuniu in commune omnes Deum precarentur: quo expleto, revelatione saturatus, in illud proœmium cœlo veniens eructavit: In principio erat Verbum, &c. Hieronym. Prolog. in Matt. p. 3. opp. tom. iv. edit. Bened.

<sup>t</sup> Joannes, novissimus omnium scripsit Evangelium, rogatus ab Asiæ Episcopis, adversus Cerinthum aliosque

<sup>u</sup> "Ευθα γὰρ τὸν Χριστὸν ἐκ παρατριβῆς ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐκήρυττεν ὁ Ἐβίων καὶ ὁ Κήρινθος, καὶ οἱ ἀμφ' αὐτοὺς, φημι δὲ ἐν τῇ Ἀσίᾳ, ἐκεῖ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον ἀνέτειλε τῷ κόσμῳ ταύτην τὴν ἁγίαν βοτάνην, εἶπουν θάμνον τὴν ἀποδιώξασαν τὸν ὄφιν, καὶ λύσασαν τὴν τοῦ Διαβόλου τυραννίδα· ἐκεῖ γὰρ ὁ ἅγιος Ἰωάννης. κ. τ. λ. Eriphan. Hæres. li. 2. p. 423. Conf. p. 424, 433, 434. Hæc. lix. p. 747.

<sup>r</sup> "Ο χρηστός Ἰωάννης, αἰσθόμενος ἤδη, πολὺ πλῆθος ἑαλωκὸς ἐν πολλαῖς τῶν Ἑλληνίδων καὶ Ἰταλιωτίδων πόλεων ὑπὸ ταύτης τῆς νόσου· ἀκούων δὲ, οἶμαι, καὶ τὰ μνήματα Πέτρου καὶ Παύλου, λάθρα μὲν, ἀκούων δὲ ὅμως αὐτὰ θεραπευόμενα, πρώτως ἐτύλησεν εἰπεῖν [τὸν Ἰησοῦν Θεόν]. Julian. apud Cyril. lib. x. p. 327. edit. Lips.

apart) amounts to this; that the generality of Christians, as early as the apostolic age, were exceedingly zealous for the doctrine of Christ's Divinity, and that St. John himself commended them for it, encouraged them in it, and wrote his Gospel to confirm it. Julian, very probably, had learned it from incontestable monuments of antiquity; and since he could not disown the fact, he endeavoured, in his ludicrous way, to turn the whole into ridicule. He says nothing indeed of Cerinthus or Ebion, as he had no occasion: but yet this story of his, as he has told it, falls in with the other accounts in the main thing; for which reason I have mentioned it. Such is the external evidence we have to prove, that St. John, at the request of the bishops and churches of that time, wrote his Gospel to establish the faith of Christians in our Lord's Divinity, against Cerinthus and Ebion, or other false teachers who opposed it  $\gamma$ .

The truth of the fact will be much confirmed from the internal characters of St. John's writings: and this will fully appear by comparing his expressions with Cerinthus's tenets, observing, all the way, how aptly they answer in that respect, directly confronting and overturning the principles of that heresiarch and his followers.

IN THE BEGINNING WAS THE WORD. That is to say, at the creation of all things ( $\epsilon\nu$  ἀρχῇ, as in Genesis) the Word existed  $z$ : therefore he was before any creature; not only before Joseph and Mary, but even before any such created Æon as Cerinthus had talked of, whether called the Word or Christ.

AND THE WORD WAS WITH GOD. Not a separate Æon, inferior to God, and distant from God, (like to what Cerinthus supposed of the Demiurgus, the Maker or Framer of the world  $a$ ,) not estranged from God, but united to him, and abiding with him  $b$ , while personally distinct from him.

$\gamma$  The very learned Vitringa has objected to this account, as to some circumstances. Observ. Sacr. lib. v. c. 10. sect. 7, 8. But he is well answered by Buddæus, Eccl. Apostol. p. 419, &c.

$z$  Δύναται μὲν τοιγε τὸ τῆς ἀρχῆς ὄνομα λαμβάνεσθαι καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου ἀρχῆς, μανθανόντων ἡμῶν διὰ τῶν λεγομένων, ὅτι πρεσβύτερος ὁ Λόγος τῶν ἀπ' ἀρχῆς γενομένων ἦν. Origen. Comment. in Joan. p. 50. Conf. Buddæus, Eccl. Apostolica, p. 430, 438. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. ii. sect. 4. p. 294.

$a$  Irenæus, lib. i. c. 26. p. 105. lib. iii. c. 11. p. 188. Pseudo-Tertullian. de Præscript. Hæret. Append. p. 221. Epiphan. Hæres. xxviii. n. 1. p. 110.

$b$  Καὶ ὁ Λόγος ἦν πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. οὐ γὰρ ἐγένετο πρὸς τὸν Θεόν. καὶ ταυτὸν ῥῆμα, τὸ ἦν, τοῦ Λόγου καταγορεύεται, ὅτι ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν, καὶ ὅτι πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν ἦν, οὗτε τῆς ἀρχῆς χωρίζομενος, οὗτε τοῦ πατρὸς ἀπολειπόμενος. Origen. in Joan. p. 44.

AND THE WORD WAS GOD. Not a mere man, as Cerinthus asserted of Jesus, nor a creature, as Cerinthus imagined of Christ, or of the Word, but very God <sup>c</sup>.

THE SAME WAS IN THE BEGINNING WITH GOD. This is resuming what had been said before, after a kind of break, to connect it the more closely with the account of the creation, (which the Apostle was just going to mention,) and to inculcate the more strongly, against Cerinthus, that he by whom all things were made was no distant, inferior Æon, estranged from God, and unacquainted with him, but one that had been always with the supreme Father.

ALL THINGS WERE MADE BY HIM. By the Word. Not by an inferior Demiurgus, not by any separate powers, not by angels, (as the Cerinthians taught <sup>d</sup>,) not by any creature-creator, but by the Word himself, very God, and one with God <sup>e</sup>.

AND WITHOUT HIM WAS NOT ANY THING MADE THAT WAS MADE. Not the lower world only, but the upper world also; not the material and visible world only, but the world of invisibles, the celestial spirits, angels and archangels, they also were made by the same Word; for there was nothing made without him <sup>f</sup>. “By him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him, and for him <sup>g</sup>.” So writes St. Paul, the best inter-verus summusque Deus sit, mundum huncce et omnia quæ in eo sunt, condita esse, verbis istis docet. Buddæi Eccles. Apostol. p. 438. Conf. Vitring. Observ. Sacr. lib. v. c. 13. s. 4. p. 155.

<sup>c</sup> Addit, et Deus erat Verbum; illud, non minus quam ipsum Patrem, verum summumque Deum esse significans. Atque istud quidem Cerinthi commentis e diametro est oppositum, quippe qui per τὸν Λόγον, sive Christum, equidem substantiam quandam Spiritalem eamque humana natura præstantiorem, neutiquam autem ἰσόστατον quandam divinam quæ et ipsa Deus esset, intelligebat. Buddæi Eccles. Apostolica, p. 438.

<sup>d</sup> Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. c. 3. lib. v. c. 9. Augustin. de Hæres. c. viii. Epiphani. Hæres. 28. 1. Philastr. Hæres. 36, p. 77. Pseudo-Tertullian. Præscript. c. 68. Damascen. Hæres. 28.

<sup>e</sup> Omnia per illud (Verbum) facta sunt. Commentis Cerinthianis est oppositum: non enim a fabricatore quodam mundi, a Deo primo diverso, sed a Λόγῳ ἰσοστατικῷ, qui et ipse

<sup>f</sup> In eodem commate, contra eosdem hæreticos addit, et absque eo factum est nihil. Quæ verba, qui intentionem Apostoli non attenderit, nihil aliud quam inanem ταυτολογίαν continere suspicetur. Sed nimirum hæretici isti (ut recte Grotius) alium volebant opificem eorum quæ cernimus, sive mundi hujus aspectabilis; alios rerum invisibilium, et quæ super hunc mundum sunt, in suo quemque pleromate: nihil igitur eorum quæ facta sunt, ex operibus τοῦ Λόγου excipit Joannes. Bull. Judic. Eccles. c. ii. p. 294.

<sup>g</sup> Coloss. i. 19. See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 56—59.

preter of what we have in St. John, as writing by the same Spirit, and with the same views, and probably against the very same men. Indeed, there is not in the whole New Testament any thing of a more sublime and exalted strain, concerning the personal dignity of our blessed Lord, than what we find in the first chapter to the Colossians, from the fifteenth to the nineteenth verse inclusive; and in the second, from verse the second to the tenth. Those passages come the nearest of any to St. John's divine proeme, and are only to be matched with it. It would be too great a digression here, to shew how those so emphatical expressions of St. Paul are all particularly fitted to confront the tenets of Cerinthus, as if chosen for that very purpose, and directly pointed at them: but the learned reader, who is disposed to examine into the fact, may consult a very judicious foreigner, who has drawn that matter out at length, expounding what St. Paul has said in those two chapters, in a very clear and excellent manner, by the opposition which it carries in it all the way to the Cerinthian heresy<sup>h</sup>. I return to St. John.

IN HIM WAS LIFE, AND THE LIFE WAS THE LIGHT OF MEN. The same Word was life, the Λόγος and ζωή, both one<sup>i</sup>. There was no occasion therefore for subtly distinguishing the Word and life into two Æons, as some did.

AND THE LIGHT SHINETH IN DARKNESS, AND THE DARKNESS COMETH NOT UPON IT. So I render the verse, conformable to the rendering of the same Greek verb, καταλαμβάνω, by our translators, in another place of this same Gospel<sup>k</sup>. The Apostle, as I conceive, in this fifth verse of his first chapter, alludes to the prevailing error of the Gnostics, and of all that sort of men<sup>l</sup>; who had adopted the ancient Magian notion of a good God and an evil God, the first called Light, and the other Darkness: which two they supposed to be under perpetual struggles, and obstructed by each other. In opposition, probably, to those Magian

<sup>h</sup> Buddæus, Eccles. Apostolica, p. 468—487.

<sup>i</sup> Hunc ipsum Λόγον esse vitam hominis; otiosam innuens illorum subtilitatem, qui in systemate divinarum emanationum, ζωήν vitam, a Λόγω distinguebant, eidemque subordinabant. Vitringa in Prolog. Evangel. Johan. Observ. Sacr. lib. v. c. 13. p. 180.

<sup>k</sup> John xii. 35. Vid. Bos. Exercitat. in Johan. p. 54, 55.

<sup>l</sup> Vid. Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. lib. v. c. 13. p. 136. Epiphanius, speaking of the Gnosticism of those times, derives it in part from the perplexity which those men were under in the question about the origin of evil. Epiphan. Heres. xxiv. 6.

principles, St. John here asserts, that the Word, the true light, was much superior to any such pretended rival power. In him was no darkness at all<sup>m</sup>: no such opposite power could come upon him, to obstruct his purposes, or defeat his good and great designs.

HE WAS IN THE WORLD, AND THE WORLD HAD BEEN MADE BY HIM, BUT THE WORLD KNEW HIM NOT. So I translate, for greater accuracy and perspicuity. HE CAME UNTO HIS OWN, AND HIS OWN RECEIVED HIM NOT. These two verses manifestly confront several of the Gnostic principles, viz. that the world was made by an inferior and evil God, an angel called Demiurgus; and that Christ came into another person's work, or province, not into his own, when he manifested himself to the world<sup>n</sup>; and that he did not so manifest himself before his incarnation. Those several errors seem to be directly pointed at, and confuted by what the Evangelist has taught in those two verses<sup>o</sup>. But of the true interpretation of those two verses, I have treated more largely elsewhere<sup>p</sup>.

AND THE WORD WAS MADE FLESH, became personally united with the man Jesus; AND DWELT AMONG US, resided constantly in the human nature so assumed. Very emphatical and pointed expressions, searching to the root of every heresy almost of that time, so far as concerned the person of Christ: for none of them would admit the Word made flesh, or God made man<sup>q</sup>. Such sentiments agreed not with their vain philosophy; they deemed the thing to be incredible. The Cerinthians admitted that a celestial spirit descended occasionally upon Jesus; but they

<sup>m</sup> "God is light, and in him is no darkness at all," 1 John i. 5.

<sup>n</sup> Scilicet Cerinthi et aliorum omnium hæreticorum, qui mundi hujus conditorem a summo Deo separabant, hæc fuit notissima sententia, Christum servatorem nostrum a summa omnium principalitate in hunc mundum venisse tanquam in alienum opus; idque ut homines a domino et servitute conditoris universi in nescio quam libertatem (licentiam rectius dixeris) vindicaret. Bull. Judic. Eccles. cap. ii. sect. 4. p. 294. Conf. Iren. lib. iii. c. 11. et lib. v. c. 18.

<sup>o</sup> Docet itaque semper illum in mundo fuisse, et a primo rerum ortu, et generis humani instauratione, se in Ecclesia, quam in mundo habuit, manifestasse, et ut lucem veram suos illuminasse; etiamsi a maxima mundi parte, et ab ipsis Judæis carnalibus agnitus non sit: explodens erroneam illorum hypothesis in qui Filium Dei ante suam ἐνανθρώπησιν se in mundo non manifestasse, neque illi cognitum fuisse, asserebant. Vitringa, Observ. Sacr. vol. iii. p. 180.

<sup>p</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 51, 52, 53.

<sup>q</sup> Secundum autem nullam sententiam hæreticorum, Verbum Dei caro factum est. Iren. lib. iii. c. 11. p. 189. Conf. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. ii. sect. 4. p. 194.

<sup>r</sup> Incredibile præsumperant Deum carnem. Tertull. contr. Marcion. lib. iii. c. 8. p. 401. Conf. Just. Mart. Dial. p. 140, 204. edit. Jebb.

neither allowed that spirit to be personally united with Jesus, nor to be properly divine, as St. John teaches: so that in two respects those words of the Apostle confute their principles<sup>s</sup>.

AND WE BEHELD HIS GLORY, THE GLORY AS OF THE ONLY BEGOTTEN OF THE FATHER, &c. Words diametrically opposite to Cerinthus's hypothesis<sup>t</sup>, which made the Logos not the only begotten of the Father, but a remove further off, viz. the Son of the only begotten, as before observed.

AND OF HIS FULNESS HAVE ALL WE RECEIVED, AND GRACE FOR GRACE. The expression, of his fulness, [ἐκ τοῦ πληρώματος αὐτοῦ,] is very observable. The Gnostics in general, and the Cerinthians in particular, were wont to talk much of the πλήρωμα, or fulness; by which they meant a fictitious plenitude of the Deity, in which the whole race of Æons was supposed to subsist, and into which spiritual men (such as they esteemed themselves) should hereafter be received. It was the doctrine of the Valentinians, (and probably of the elder Gnostics also,) that they were themselves of the spiritual seed, had constant grace, and could not fail of being admitted into the plenitude above<sup>u</sup>; while others were in their esteem carnal, had grace but sparingly, or occasionally, and that not to bring them so high as the plenitude, but to an intermediate station only. But St. John here asserts<sup>r</sup>, that all Christians equally and indifferently, all believers at large, have received of the plenitude, or fulness of the divine Logos; and that not sparingly, but in the largest measure, grace upon grace, accumulated grace<sup>v</sup>: or rather, grace following in constant succession, grace for grace; that is, new succours coming on as quick as the former should wear off or cease, or new supplies

<sup>s</sup> Dum dicit Verbum caro factum. et habitavit inter nos; significat ipsum istum Λόγον, qui Filius Dei, simulque verus ac summus Deus, erat, quemque tam multis descriperat verbis, carnem factum, hoc est, humanam naturam, non ad certum tempus, sed perpetuo, indissolubili, et inseparabili nexu adsumsisse. Budd. Eccl. Apost. p. 440.

<sup>t</sup> Indicat eundem istum Λόγον, qui caro factus erat, etiam esse unigenitum Patris: adeoque discrimen illud quod Cerinthians inter μονογενῆ sive unigenitum, et Λόγον sive Verbum, constituebant, explodit. Buddæus, ibid. p. 440.

<sup>u</sup> Iren. lib. i. c. 6. p. 31.

<sup>x</sup> Docte denique ex hujus unigeniti

et primogeniti Dei Filii πληρώματι (qua notione Gnostici uti consueverunt) omnes accipere gratiam pro gratia, omnes omnis generis et ordinis in Christum credentes, ejusdem in hac vita participes esse gratiæ, et ad ejusdem gloriæ spem vocatos esse: neutiquam vero ita se rem habere ut Gnostici jactitabant, solos suæ sectæ homines, et suæ imbutos philosophiæ mysteriis, ad summam illam felicitatem primi pleromatis divinitatis adspirare posse, reliquorum credentium animabus inferioris et medii generis beatitudinis statum destinatum esse. Vitringa, Obs. Sacr. lib. v. c. 13. p. 155, 156.

<sup>v</sup> See Bull. Harmon. Apostol. Dissert. ii. c. 11. p. 481.

for the old ones past and gone<sup>z</sup>, without failure or intermission. Our present rendering, grace for grace, is literal, and just; provided only we understand it thus, that whenever one grace ceases or expires, another comes in its place, and is given us for the former, or in lieu of the former.

I have now run through the proeme of St. John's Gospel, endeavouring all the way to shew how aptly the expressions suit with the supposition which I here go upon, that it was penned with a particular view to the heresies of Cerinthus and Ebion; to say nothing of Simon Magus, or the Gnostics of those times: for though I have chiefly, or in a manner solely, made Cerinthus's heresy the subject of this article, yet I would be understood to include any other heretics of the same time, or before him, so far as they fell in with the same common errors.

Let us now pass on to St. John's First Epistle, in order to consider whether that likewise may not be naturally interpreted the same way; so that one and the same key may serve for both.

Irenæus seems to say, that St. John pointed his Epistle<sup>a</sup> against the same. Tertullian also intimates, that St. John directed some parts of his Epistle against the Ebionites<sup>b</sup>. And St. Jerome insinuates, that he pointed his censure both against Cerinthus and Ebion, marking them out as antichrists in his Epistle<sup>c</sup>. If we come to examine the Epistle itself, we shall easily perceive, that a great part of it was levelled, not so much against Jews or Pagans, as against false Christians, against the heretics of that time, Simonians, perhaps, or Cerinthians, or Ebionites, or Nicolaitans, or all of them, according as his expressions here or there are particularly pointed. The two principal errors which he there censures were, the denial of Christ's being come in the flesh<sup>d</sup>, and the disowning that Jesus was Christ<sup>e</sup>. The Docetæ, (as they were afterwards called,) the

<sup>z</sup> Vid. Gataker. Adversar. Sacr. c. xxvii. Anonymi Fortuita Sacra, p. 80, 81, &c. Suicer. Thesaur. in χρίστ, p. 1497.

<sup>a</sup> Igitur et omnes extra dispositionem sunt, qui, sub obtentu agnitionis, alterum quidem Jesus intelligunt, alterum autem Christum, et alterum unigenitum, &c.—Quos Joannes in prædicta Epistola fugere eos præcepit, &c. ibid. p. 207.

<sup>b</sup> At in Epistola eos maxime antichristos vocat, qui Christum negarent in carne venisse, et qui non putarent Jesus esse Filium Dei. Illud Marcion, hoc Ebion vindicavit. Tertull. Præscript. c. 33. p. 214.

<sup>c</sup> See the whole passage cited above, p. 541.

<sup>d</sup> 1 John iv. 3. compare 2 John 7.

<sup>e</sup> 1 John ii. 22.

followers of Simon Magus, denied Christ's real humanity, making him a mere phantom, shadow or apparition, a walking ghost, as I observed above<sup>f</sup>. And the Cerinthians, making a distinction between Jesus and Christ, did not allow that both were one person. Against those chiefly St. John wrote his Epistle. He speaks of antichrists newly risen up<sup>g</sup>; which could not be intended of Jews or Pagans, who had opposed the Gospel all along: and he speaks of men that had been of the Church, but had apostatized from it; "they went out from us, but "they were not of us<sup>h</sup>." Let us now proceed to the explication of those passages in St. John's Epistle which relate to our purpose.

The Apostle observes, that THE WORD OF LIFE (or the Word in whom was life, John i. 4.) WAS FROM THE BEGINNING<sup>i</sup>; conformable to what he says in the entrance to his Gospel, and in opposition both to Cerinthus and Ebion, who made Jesus a mere man, and who either denied any preexisting substantial Logos, or, at most, supposed him to stand foremost in the rank of creatures. The Apostle further styles the same Logos ETERNAL LIFE<sup>k</sup>, to intimate his eternal existence, in opposition to the same heretics. He adds, WHICH WAS WITH THE FATHER, parallel to what he says in his Gospel, was with God, and which has been explained above<sup>l</sup>.

In the second chapter of the same Epistle, the Apostle describes the antichristian heretics of that time as DENYING THAT JESUS IS CHRIST; which amounted to the same with DENYING THE FATHER AND THE SON<sup>m</sup>; because WHOSOEVER DENIETH THE SON, THE SAME HATH NOT THE FATHER<sup>n</sup>. Cerinthus denied that Jesus was Christ, dividing Christ from Jesus, as before explained: and he of consequence denied the Son, because he allowed not that Jesus was personally united with the Word, the eternal Son of God, nor that that Logos which he speaks of was the only begot-

<sup>f</sup> See above, p. 401, 482.

<sup>g</sup> 1 John ii. 18. 22. iv. 3. 2 John 7.

<sup>h</sup> 1 John ii. 19.

<sup>i</sup> 1 John i. 1.

<sup>k</sup> 1 John i. 2. compare 1 John v.

20.

<sup>l</sup> See above, p. 542. Conf. Tertull. contr. Prax. c. xv. Bull. Judic. Eccles. c. ii. sect. 5. p. 295.

<sup>m</sup> 1 John ii. 22.

<sup>n</sup> 1 John ii. 23. Apostoli verba—
commune Cerinthi et Ebionis dogma manifeste perstringunt, nam illi ambo Jesum esse verum Dei Filium ante Mariam, adeoque ante res omnes creatas ex Deo Patre natum omnino negabant, ac proinde, Apostolo judice, neque Deum Patrem re vera confessi sunt: siquidem a revelato Evangelio, nemo potest Deum Patrem rite colere aut credere, nisi qui Deum Filium simul amplectatur. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. ii. sect. 5. p. 296.

ten of the Father, being Son only of the only begotten, according to his scheme: so that he totally disowned the divine Sonship both of Jesus and Christ, and by such denial denied both the Father and Son°.

The Apostle goes on to say, WHOSOEVER SHALL CONFESS THAT JESUS IS THE SON OF GOD, GOD DWELLETH IN HIM, AND HE IN GOD<sup>p</sup>. Where again he manifestly strikes at the Cerinthian and Ebionite principles, which allowed not Jesus to be the Son of God, in any true and proper sense, such as St. John lays down in several places of his writings, but particularly in the entrance to his Gospel<sup>q</sup>, as explained above.

In the chapter next following, the Apostle repeats the same thing as before, or uses words to the same effect: WHOSOEVER BELIEVETH THAT JESUS IS THE CHRIST IS BORN OF GOD<sup>r</sup>: and soon after adds, WHO IS HE THAT OVERCOMETH THE WORLD, BUT HE THAT BELIEVETH THAT JESUS IS THE SON OF GOD<sup>s</sup>? Here lay the main stress, to believe that Jesus, who was truly and really man, was as truly and really the eternal Son of God<sup>t</sup>. The Apostle, in the next verse, seems to point at the Docetæ, as he had before done in the same Epistle<sup>u</sup>, being equally concerned to maintain that Christ had real flesh, as that he had real Divinity; that so the faith of the Gospel might stand upon this firm foundation, that the eternal Son of God became Son of man for the salvation of mankind. Hereupon therefore the Apostle, in defence of Christ's real humanity, says, THIS IS HE THAT CAME BY WATER AND BLOOD<sup>x</sup>.

° Dum enim Cerinthiani negabant Jesum esse Christum, per veram scilicet perpetuamque unionem; Christum insuper Filium Dei verum et unigenitum inficiebantur; perinde hoc erat ac si et Patrem et Filium negassent, cum, ut recte Joannes dicit, Qui Filium negat, nec Patrem habeat.—Eo ipso enim, dum negabant Jesum esse Christum, nec ipsum quoque Christum pro Dei Filio agnoscebant, non poterant non multo magis negare, Jesum esse Filium Dei. Buddæi Eccles. Apostol. p. 445.

<sup>p</sup> 1 John iv. 15. compare iii. 23.

<sup>q</sup> Non est dubitandum quin Apostolus his verbis confessionem exigit illius Filii Dei quem ipse ex parte supra in hac Epistola prædicaverat, et plenius in Evangelio suo declarat:

nampe Filii Dei, qui sit Dei Patris Λόγος, qui in principio erat, et apud Deum erat, et Deus ipse erat, per quem omnia facta sunt, &c.—Hujusmodi vero Dei Filium Jesum nostrum esse, non confessus est Cerinthus, neque post ipsum Ebion. Bull. Judic. c. ii. sect. 9. p. 297.

<sup>r</sup> 1 John v. 1.

<sup>s</sup> 1 John v. 5.

<sup>t</sup> Quia præ aliis maxime tunc cresceret Cerinthi hæresis, ideo Apostolus fidem illam qua creditur Jesum esse Dei Filium, passim in hac Epistola commendat, urget, inculcat. Bull. ibid. p. 297.

<sup>u</sup> 1 John iv. 2, 3. compare 2 John 7. and see Bull. Judic. p. 296. Buddæi Eccl. Apostol. p. 550, &c.

<sup>x</sup> 1 John v. 6.

What he elsewhere expresses by his coming in the flesh, here he expresses more emphatically, by his coming in or by water and blood; alluding to what Christ shed at his passion, as a proof that he had then a real body, and was really man, not a spectre, phantom, or apparition, as some heretics pretended. It is to be noted, that the ancient visionaries, (who were the Simonians, Menandrians, Saturnilians, and Basilidians,) being ashamed perhaps to confess Christ crucified<sup>z</sup>, contrived any wild supposition imaginable to evade it. Basilides pretended that Christ himself did not suffer, but that Simon of Cyrene was crucified in his room<sup>a</sup>. The elder Docetæ had not so happy a talent at inventing, but were content to say, that Christ had no real body, and suffered in appearance only, imposing upon the eyes of the spectators. In opposition probably to that kind of men, (of which there might be many in the apostolic age,) the Apostle here emphatically observes, that Christ came by water and blood: for his shedding both water and blood out of his side, at his passion, was a demonstration that there was a real body then hanging upon the cross, not a phantom, or a spiritual substance. Which very argument is well urged by Irenæus<sup>b</sup> and Novatian<sup>c</sup>, in proof of the same thing, against the Docetæ. As St. John is the only Evangelist who has related that circumstance of the passion<sup>d</sup>, so it is observable how particular a stress he lays upon it; immediately subjoining, in confirmation of it, AND HE THAT SAW IT (meaning himself perhaps, or else the soldier that pierced our Lord<sup>e</sup>) bare record, AND HIS RECORD IS TRUE, &c. And he confirms it further from two prophecies out of the Old Testament. Wherefore it is the more probable that, in his Epistle before, he alluded to that circumstance, and in proof of <sup>y</sup> 1 John i. 1, 2. iv. 2, 3. 2 John 7. compare 1 Tim. iii. 16. 1 Pet. iii. 18. iv. 1.

<sup>z</sup> Hence it is that Polycarp joins both together in the same reproof: πᾶς γὰρ, ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ἐν σαρκὶ ἐληλυθέναι, ἀντίχριστός ἐστι· καὶ ὃς ἂν μὴ ὁμολογῇ τὸ μαρτύριον τοῦ σταυροῦ, ἐκ τοῦ Διαβόλου ἐστί. Polycarp. Epist. c. 7.

<sup>a</sup> Irenæus lib. i. c. 24. alias 22. p. 101. Epiphani. xxiv. 3. Philastr. c. xxxii. p. 68. Augustin. de Hæres. n. iv. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. i. c. 4.

<sup>b</sup> Quomodo autem, cum caro non esset, sed pareret (i. e. appareret) quasi homo, crucifixus est, et a latere ejus puncto sanguis exiit et aqua? Iren. lib. iv. c. 33. (alias 57.) p. 271.

<sup>c</sup> Sanguis idcirco de manibus ac pedibus, atque ipso latere demanavit, ut nostri consors corporis probaretur, dum occasus nostri legibus moritur. Novat. c. x. p. 31. edit. Welchm.

<sup>d</sup> John xix. 34.

<sup>e</sup> See Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. i. p. 39.

Christ's humanity. But St. John strengthens the argument further, by superadding the consideration of the testimony of the Spirit. AND THERE IS THE SPIRIT ALSO BEARING WITNESS BECAUSE THE SPIRIT IS TRUTH<sup>f</sup> itself, is essential truth. The Spirit residing in the Church, and working in believers by supernatural graces, bears testimony to the doctrine taught by the Apostles, and believed by the Church; particularly to the doctrine here spoken of, viz. that Christ the Son of God became Son of man for the salvation of mankind.

The Apostle, having said that the Spirit is truth, or essential truth, (which was giving him a title common to God the Father, and to Christ,) in order to obviate any misapprehension or offence, accounts for what he had said, and reconciles it, by declaring presently, that the Father, and the Word, and the Spirit are all one, are equally truth itself: FOR THERE ARE THREE THAT BEAR RECORD IN HEAVEN, THE FATHER, THE WORD, AND THE HOLY SPIRIT; AND THESE THREE ARE ONES. Therefore it was as right to say that the Spirit is truth, as it might be to say it either of Father or Son, since they are all one. That point being cleared, the Apostle then returns<sup>h</sup> to speak of the Spirit, the water, and the blood, as testifying the same thing to mankind which is testified above to the angels in heaven. And the Spirit is now particularly mentioned as bearing witness in earth, (rather than the Father or the Son,) because, since the time of Christ's ascension, the Church has been under the special economy of the Holy Spirit, who was to guide the Apostles, and the churches after them, into all truth<sup>i</sup>.

I know it has been objected, that this way of reckoning the Spirit twice is reducing the six witnesses to five. Now, indeed, if the text had called them six witnesses, there would have been some force in the objection: but as it is mere fancy and presumption to make them six, we may take the liberty to think, that the fifth twice told will fully answer all that the text mentions.

The Apostle having said thus much of the testimony of the Spirit, who is one with the Father, comes next to make the proper application of it, enforcing it still further, by directly calling it the testimony of God: IF WE RECEIVE THE WITNESS OF MEN, THE WITNESS OF GOD IS GREATER; FOR THIS IS THE WITNESS OF

<sup>f</sup> I John v. 6.

<sup>g</sup> I John v. 7.

<sup>h</sup> I John v. 8.

<sup>i</sup> I John xvi. 13.

GOD, WHICH HE HATH TESTIFIED OF HIS SON<sup>k</sup>—THAT GOD HATH GIVEN TO US ETERNAL LIFE, AND THIS LIFE IS IN HIS SON<sup>l</sup>. This is the burden of the whole Epistle, the sum and substance of what the Apostle aims at quite through<sup>m</sup>, that God had been pleased to reconcile the world unto himself by the mediation of his own divine Son made man. This was what the water and the blood testified in part, and what the Spirit of God, one with God, more abundantly testifies in the whole<sup>n</sup>.

I was willing thus occasionally to explain that celebrated passage, concerning the three Witnesses, which has been the subject of long and warm debates, both as to the genuineness of the text, and the connection of it with the rest, upon which hangs the true interpretation. The exposition which I have given appears to me just and natural, supposing the text to be genuine: and I conceive that the genuineness thereof has been sufficiently maintained by a great many able hands<sup>o</sup>; and particularly by a late learned and accurate writer<sup>p</sup>, to whose useful labours I refer the reader for satisfaction; and now I return.

The Apostle, in the close, remarkably sums up all in these strong and chosen words: WE KNOW THAT THE SON OF GOD IS COME, AND HATH GIVEN US AN UNDERSTANDING, THAT WE MAY KNOW HIM THAT IS TRUE, AND WE ARE IN HIM THAT IS TRUE, EVEN IN HIS SON JESUS CHRIST. THIS IS THE TRUE GOD, AND ETERNAL LIFE<sup>q</sup>. I need not here stand to prove, that the title of true God, in this text, is to be understood of Christ, because I have done it elsewhere<sup>r</sup>: but I would observe further, how aptly every word is chosen to obviate the erroneous tenets of Cerinthus, and of other the like false teachers of those times. The Son of God: not the

<sup>k</sup> I John v. 9. <sup>l</sup> I John v. 11.

<sup>m</sup> Hæc est summa: omnem doctorem qui confessus fuerit unum Jesum Christum, verum Dei Filium, propter hominum salutem vere hominem factum, ex Deo esse (nimirum ea parte, qua id confitetur et docet, ut recte Estius) contra pro Pseudo-Propheta atque antichristo habendum esse, quisquis hoc confessus non fuerit. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. ii. s. 9. p. 297.

<sup>n</sup> Immo quæ deinceps, ver. 6, 7, 8. de tribus Testibus, in cœlo pariter ac in terra, docet, huc præcipue comparata esse videntur, ut ostendat Jesum esse Filium Dei, quod Cerinthiani, ut diximus, negabant. Hinc concludit:

Si hominum testimonium admittimus, Dei testimonium majus est. Quodnam est hoc Dei testimonium? Respondet: Atque hoc est, quod Deus de Filio suo testimonium dixit. Buddæus, Eccl. Apostol. p. 446.

<sup>o</sup> See most of them numbered up in Taylor's True Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, p. 32.

<sup>p</sup> Mr. Twells, Critical Examination of the New Text and Version of the New Testament, part ii. p. 123—154.

<sup>q</sup> I John v. 20.

<sup>r</sup> Sermons, vol. ii. p. 130, &c. Compare Taylor's True Scripture Doctrine, p. 282, &c. Dr. Bishop's Eight Sermons, p. 56, &c.

Son of Joseph and Mary, nor the Son of the only begotten, but the immediate Son of God; related to God as a son to a father, not as a creature to his Lord and Maker. He is come, come in the flesh, and not merely to reside for a time, or occasionally, and to fly off again, but to abide and dwell with man, clothed with humanity. We are in him that is true, in the true Father, by his Son Jesus Christ: who is the true God; not an inferior power or angel, (such as Cerinthus supposed the Demiurgus to be,) not a created Aeon, the offspring of the Monogenes, or of Silence, as Cerinthus fondly imagined the Logos to be; but true God, one with the Father. And eternal life, the same that had been with the Father from the beginning, before any thing was created, consequently from all eternity.

I have now gone through both the Epistle and Gospel of St. John, pointing out the most observable passages in both, which concerned the present question. The sum of what I have advanced under this article is, that St. John most apparently levelled a great part of his First Epistle against the Cerinthian doctrines; and that it may be strongly argued, from evidences external and internal, that he wrote the proeme to his Gospel with the same or the like views. It appears further, that in his Epistle particularly he has asserted the necessity of believing our Lord's divine Sonship, his proper Divinity, under pain of being excluded heaven and happiness: "Whosoever denieth the Son, "the same hath not the Father." Whosoever denies Christ to be Son of God, (in St. John's sense of Son, a Son that was always with God, and is God), is a liar and antichrist, denying both the Father and the Son<sup>s</sup>. The conclusion therefore from all is, that the denying our blessed Lord's real Divinity is heresy and antichristianism, much to be abhorred by every disciple of Christ, according to the infallible decision of an inspired Apostle<sup>t</sup>. Many were the evasions and subterfuges of self-opinionated men, who thought it a thing incredible that the divine Word lis habiti fuerint. Præterea, hinc quoque clare elucet, doctrinam de Filii Dei ἐνσαρκώσει, sive de Christo θεανθρώπῳ, vero Deo et vero homine, ut a nascente Evangelio varie a variis hæreticis impugnata fuit, ita ab Ecclesiæ veris Pastoribus, modis omnibus omnique studio, tanquam fidei Christianæ Caput et Fundamentum ipsum, religiosissime semper conservatam et custoditam fuisse. Bull. Judic. Eccl. p. 298.

<sup>s</sup> 1 John ii. 22, 23.

<sup>t</sup> Hæc autem ideo fusius prosecutus sum, quod hinc non modo ex antiquissimorum Patrum monumentis, sed etiam ex scriptis Apostolicis, omnibus liqueat, fuisse in ipso Apostolorum ævo, qui Christi Domini nostri Divinitatem negarunt, quique eo nomine pro hæreticis, adeoque pro antichristis (tantum aberat ut fratres et vera Ecclesiæ membra censerentur) ab Aposto-

should put on flesh, or God become man, and who chose rather to pass censure upon the wisdom of Heaven, than suspect their own: but sober and modest men resigned up their faith to divine revelation, as was their bounden duty to do; and among the foremost of those was our blessed Apostle. So now, besides the reason of things, taking in what the Scriptures have declared of the truth of our doctrine, and besides the true and natural import of the form of baptism, (urged above,) we have moreover the determination of St. John himself, for the importance of the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity, and of consequence, for the doctrine of a coequal and coeternal Trinity.

But supposing it might be reasonably doubted (though I see not how it can) whether we have rightly interpreted St. John as to the main thing, or whether Cerinthus and others of like principles were directly struck at by him; yet still we may be able to maintain our point another way, by shewing at least that the ancient churches, next succeeding the Apostles, and the churches after, did condemn Cerinthus and Ebion, and all others who denied our Lord's real and proper Divinity. And I may here observe, before I go further, that if what I have offered about St. John's condemning the doctrine of Cerinthus be just, it may be considered as looking forwards, and condemning the principles of the Ebionites also, whom I am next to mention: and so, on the other hand, what I shall have to say of the Ebionites, and their being condemned by the Church, may be understood to look backwards, equally affecting the Cerinthians so far as they agreed in the same common sentiments. Indeed, Bishop Bull had considered both together, and in a scriptural view, as I have hitherto considered Cerinthus singly: but I apprehended that if one were taken in a scriptural, and the other in an ecclesiastical view, the two parts would reflect light and strength one upon another, and the whole would be both more distinct and more complete. I proceed then to consider the Ebionites, as censured by the Church, in the second and third centuries, for denying our Lord's Divinity; though, if what I have before advanced be true, they were fully condemned before for the same, even within the apostolic age, as well as the Cerinthians.

A. D. 72. EBION.

From Cerinthus the master I pass on to Ebion, his disciple and successor<sup>u</sup>; so called, I suppose, because of his being Cerinthus's admirer and follower in some things. They seem to have been contemporaries, both of the apostolic age, though Ebion, perhaps, the younger or later of the two. I follow Epiphanius chiefly in placing Ebion as I do<sup>x</sup>, a little after the time of the destruction of Jerusalem. But if he flourished ten or twenty years later, or began to spread his heresy but a little before St. John wrote his Gospel, (that is, before A. D. 97,) as Jerome seems to have thought, that will make no difference with respect to the main thing which I am upon.

Neither is it very material, whether there ever was such a person as Ebion, founder of the sect, or whether the Ebionites took their name from their mean condition, or from their poor and abject notions, rather than from any leader called Ebion. But as the ancients in general do assert there was such a many, though some few of them may seem to contradict it, I cannot but esteem their testimonies as much more weighty than the conjectures of some learned moderns<sup>z</sup>, though specious, to the contrary: besides that other as learned and judicious moderns<sup>a</sup> have well defended the ancient persuasion, and have sufficiently replied to the common exceptions made to it. Wherefore, there remains very little room for doubt or scruple as to the truth of the fact, that there was formerly such a person as Ebion, founder of the sect of the Ebionites.

The Ebionites, as all allow, denied any proper Divinity of Christ. Some of them indeed admitted that he was born of a

<sup>u</sup> Hujus successor Hebion fuit, Cerintho non in omni parte consentiens. Pseudo-Tertullian. Præscript. cap. xlviii. p. 221.

Hebion discipulus Cerinthi, in multis ei similiter errans, &c. Philastr. Hæres. xxxvii. p. 81.

Cerinthum, et hujus successorem Ebionem. Hieronym. Dial. contr. Lucifer. p. 304.

<sup>x</sup> Epiphanius. Hæres. xxx. 2.

<sup>y</sup> Tertullian. Præscript. cap. x. xxxiii. de Carn. Christi, c. xiv. xviii. Virg. Veland. c. vi. Victorinus Petavion. in Apocalyps. Alexand. Alexandr. Epist. Synod. apud Theodorit. E. H. lib. i. cap. 4. p. 15. Hilarius, p. 779, 789, 799, 916, 919. edit. Bened. Ruffin. in Symbol. p. 27. Theodorit.

Hæret. Fabul. p. 188, 218. Epiphanius. Hæres. xxx. 2. et passim. Philastr. Hæres. xxxvii. p. 81. Hieron. contr. Lucifer. p. 304. et in Isai. i. 3. p. 10. adv. Helvid. p. 141. et alibi. Augustin. Epist. ad Hieronym. lxxii. p. 195. ed. Bened.

<sup>z</sup> See the most of them numbered up in Ittigius de Hæres. primi Secul. p. 303. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 492.

<sup>a</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccles. cap. ii. sect. 17. p. 303. Fabricius in not. ad Philastr. p. 81, &c. Mosheim. Observ. Sacr. lib. i. c. 5. Et in Vindici. cont. Toland. c. 7. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 491, &c. Berriman, Serm. p. 48.

virgin<sup>b</sup>; but most of them, the elder Ebionites especially, denied even that<sup>c</sup>, and none of them confessed his true Godhead. I shall not here stand to enumerate or clear their sentiments, because they are well known; besides that they will appear distinctly in the sequel, as I run through the Ante-Nicene writers in order, who have condemned the Ebionites by name, or at least have condemned their principles, as amounting to heresy.

A. D. 107. I shall begin with Ignatius, an eminent personage, a disciple of St. John, and by him ordained Bishop of Antioch, and who afterwards died a martyr, either in 116 or 107. Accounts differ as to the time: I choose, with the learned Mosheim<sup>d</sup>, to take the earlier date, according to the Acts of his martyrdom, being as probable as the other. Ignatius does not mention the Ebionites by name; but he plainly enough condemns their principles, in more places than one.

In his Epistle to the Ephesians, he commends their unity of faith and doctrine, inasmuch as they walked according to truth, and no heresy dwelt with them<sup>e</sup>. Then he proceeds to speak of heretics, as follows: "Some are wont to bear about them the name [of Christ] in wicked craftiness, while they commit things unworthy of God: whom it behoves you to avoid as you would wild beasts. For they are a kind of fell dogs that will bite you unawares: you should be upon your guard against them, as they are next to incurable. There is one Physician fleshly and spiritual, made and not made, God incarnate, in mortality true life, both of Mary and of God, first passible, and then impassible, [Jesus Christ our Lord,] let no one therefore deceive you; as hitherto you are not deceived, but are wholly of God<sup>f</sup>."

These words of Ignatius, in their general view, strike at all

<sup>b</sup> Vid. Origen. contr. Cels. lib. v. p. 272. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. c. 1. p. 219.

<sup>c</sup> Vid. Irenæus, lib. iii. c. 21. p. 215. lib. v. c. 1. p. 292. Tertullian. de Carn. Christi, c. xiv. p. 319. Eusebius, Eccl. H. lib. iii. c. 27. Epiphan. Hæret. xxx. p. 125. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. c. 1. p. 218. Philastr. Hæres. xxxvii. p. 82.

<sup>d</sup> Mosheim. Vindicie Antiquæ contra Toland. c. viii. p. 230.

<sup>e</sup> Ignat. Epist. ad Ephes. c. 6.

<sup>f</sup> Εἰώθασι γὰρ τινες δόλω πονηρῶ τὸ

ὄνομα περιφέρειν, ἀλλὰ τινα πράσσοντες ἀνάξια Θεοῦ. οὓς δεῖ ἡμᾶς ὡς θηρία ἐκκλίνειν· εἰσὶν γὰρ κίνες λυσσῶντες, λαθροδηκταί· οὓς δεῖ ἡμᾶς φυλάσσεσθαι ὄντας δυσθεραπεύτους. εἰς ἰατρός ἐστιν, σαρκικός τε καὶ πνευματικός, γενητός καὶ ἀγένητος, ἐν σαρκὶ γενόμενος Θεός, ἐν θανάτῳ ζωὴ ἀληθινή, καὶ ἐκ Μαρίας καὶ ἐκ Θεοῦ, πρῶτον παθητός καὶ τότε ἀπαθής.—μη οὖν τις ἡμᾶς ἐξαπατάτω, ὡσπερ οὐδὲ ἐξαπατάσθε, ὅλοι ὄντες Θεοῦ. Ignat. ad Ephes. 7, 8.

the heresies of that time, which any way tended to undermine the doctrine of God incarnate, whether by impugning Christ's humanity or Divinity: and as the Ebionites and Cerinthians were among those that impugned our Lord's Divinity, the censure here given must of course affect them. Some of the expressions seem to be particularly pointed at them. Made and not made: the words not made directly confront both those heresies<sup>5</sup>. So also the words God incarnate, God coming in the flesh. Then again, of Mary and of God: those heretics would have said, of Mary and of Joseph; none of them would then have said, of God. Let the reader observe, that Ignatius here plainly excludes all such heretics from salvation, since they had rejected the only Physician that could heal them, Christ God-man, by denying the union of God and man in him<sup>h</sup>. The principles which this truly primitive and apostolical writer goes upon are, 1. That the salutary doctrine of redemption is, that the reconciliation of God and man is wrought by a Mediator who is both God and man. 2. That denying and opposing that doctrine is, in effect, renouncing all claim to the benefit of it, since it is reasonable to think, that when God reveals his good and gracious designs towards mankind, they who will not give credit to them shall have no part in them. St. John himself seems to go upon the same general principle, where he says, "Whosoever denieth the Son, the same hath not the Father<sup>i</sup>." He that throws up the belief of the privileges granted, does interpretatively throw up the privileges themselves: this is a maxim which appears to run through the writings of all the Fathers, where they are treating of heresies; and we shall find more of it as we pass along.

In the same Epistle, the same heavenly man, after expressing his detestation of heresies in very strong words, which I have quoted above<sup>k</sup>, proceeds to set down the faith of the Church with respect to the Incarnation of the Son of God, in these remarkable lines: "For Jesus Christ, our God, was conceived of que plane deplorata est ipsorum salus, nisi scilicet ab hæresi sua tandem ferio respiscant, ac Deum Filium pro sua salute incarnatum atque hominem factum amplectantur, atque omni obsequio venerentur. Bull. Judic. Eccles. p. 286.

<sup>5</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 572. Bull. Def. F. N. sect. ii. c. 2. p. 39. Judic. Eccl. cap. i. n. 1. p. 286.

<sup>h</sup> Nulla est hominibus salus, nisi per unicum animarum medicum, Christum Deum et hominem, Deum inter hominesque Mediatorem. At isti hujusmodi medicum et Mediatorem nullum agnoscunt, nullum volunt: ita-

<sup>i</sup> 1 John ii. 23.

<sup>k</sup> See above, p. 556.

“ Mary, according to the divine dispensation, being of the seed “ of David, and of the Holy Spirit <sup>l</sup>.” Against the impugners of this doctrine, the good man, in the same place, threatens hell and damnation <sup>m</sup>: so little was he acquainted with that neutrality and indifference which has since too much prevailed. Yet he was a person of admirable lenity in his temper, and of a most exalted charity; which he proved by that very instance, since nothing could have extorted those expressions from him but a most ardent zeal for the salvation of souls <sup>n</sup>.

A. D. 155. Justin, the philosopher, afterwards martyr, is our next considerable writer. His real and great concern for the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity appears all the way through his famous Dialogue with Trypho the Jew; being the relation of a conference he had held at Ephesus with that most celebrated Rabbi <sup>o</sup>. He makes no express mention of the Ebionites, and so does not condemn them by name; but he does it more than once, by necessary inference and implication. I forbear to cite the places, choosing rather, for brevity sake, to refer the reader to Bishop Bull, who has produced them at length, and descanted properly upon them <sup>p</sup>.

But there is one passage in Justin which requires a more particular consideration, because the Socinians and Remonstrants have frequently boasted of it, and do so to this day, as proving, in their opinion, that those who disowned Christ's proper Divinity, or even preexistence, were tolerated in the primitive Church, were received as brethren and fellow Christians. This pretence has been largely and solidly confuted by Bishop Bull; and as there is scarce room for adding any thing, (the question being moliti sunt, duo fuere, Ignatii ætate, hæreticorum genera, sibi invicem non minus quam veritati repugnantium. Alii divinam quandam servatori nostro naturam attribuentes, humanam prorsus ipsi detraxerunt—qua in hæresi fuere Simoniani, Menandriani, Saturniniani, alique, quos propterea omnes Δοκητὰς et Φαντασιαστὰς posterior ætas appellavit: alii contra, humanam tantum in Domino Jesu naturam agnoscebant, ut Cerinthiani, et Ebionæi. Ultra hæresis perniciosior fuerit, haud facile dictu. Bull. Judic. c. i. p. 287.

<sup>l</sup> Ὁ γὰρ Θεὸς ἡμῶν, Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς, ἐκνοφορήθη ὑπὸ Μαρίας, κατ' οἰκονομίαν Θεοῦ, ἐκ σπέρματος μὲν Δαβίδ, πνεύματος δὲ ἁγίου. Ignat. ad Ephes. c. 18.

<sup>m</sup> Ὁ τοιοῦτος, ῥηπαρὸς γεγόμενος, εἰς τὸ πῦρ τὸ ἄσβεστον χωρήσει, ὁμοίως καὶ ἀκούων αὐτοῦ. cap. 16.

<sup>n</sup> In seductores, et seductos istos intonat, et ignem ipsis inextinguibilem minatur vir aliqui mitissimus, quod primam religionis Christianæ veritatem, cujus præcipue στόλος καὶ ἐδραίωμα esse debet, monente Apostolo, omnis vera Christi Ecclesia—nempe magnum illud pietatis mysterium, Deum in carne manifestatum fuisse convellere niterentur. Qui istam impietatem

<sup>o</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. iv. c. 18.

<sup>p</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccles. cap. vii. s. 11, 12. p. 349, &c.

in a manner exhausted,) so neither is there much need of any reinforcement. But it may be of some use to recapitulate what that learned Prelate has said, as also to take some brief notice of what the adversaries have since attempted, in order to depreciate and disparage it, instead of making any just reply to it. I shall first cite the whole passage of Justin, and then give a summary account of Bishop Bull's reasonings upon it, that the reader may then judge for himself as to the force of them. Trypho the Jew, in the Dialogue, having a little before told Justin, that his doctrine concerning Christ (that he was God before the world, and afterwards became man, and of a virgin) appeared to him a very great paradox, and contrary to common sense, Justin replies as follows <sup>q</sup>: " I am very sensible that this account will look like a paradox, and more especially to those of your nation, who are in no disposition either to apprehend or follow the things of God, but the dictates only of your own Rabbins, as God himself proclaims <sup>r</sup>. Nevertheless (said I to Trypho) my argument does not fall, as to his being the Messiah of God, though I should not be able to prove that the Son of the Maker of the universe preexisted, being God, and was born a man of the Virgin: but after it has been once fully proved that he is the Messiah of God, (whatever else he be,) though I should not further demonstrate his preexistence, and his descending to become man of like passions with us, taking flesh upon him according to the Father's good pleasure, all that you can justly say is, that I am so far in an error; but you should not hereupon deny that he is the Christ, appearing as a man born of human parents, and approving himself as the

q Οὐδ' ὅτι παράδοξος ὁ λόγος δοκεῖ εἶναι, καὶ μάλιστα τοῖς ἀπὸ τοῦ γένους ὑμῶν, οἵτινες τὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ οὔτε νοῆσαι οὔτε ποιῆσαι ποτὲ βεβούλησθε, ἀλλὰ τὰ τῶν διδασκάλων ὑμῶν, ὡς αὐτὸς ὁ Θεὸς βοᾷ. ἤδη μὲντοι, ὦ Τρύφων, εἶπον, οὐκ ἀπόλλυται τὸ τοιοῦτον [τοῦτον] εἶναι Χριστὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἐὰν ἀποδείξαι μὴ δύναμαι ὅτι καὶ προὔπηρχεν υἱὸς τοῦ ποιητοῦ τῶν ὄλων, Θεὸς ὢν, καὶ γεγέννηται ἄνθρωπος διὰ τῆς παρθένου. ἀλλὰ ἐκ παντὸς ἀποδεικνυμένου ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς ὁ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὅστις οὗτος ἔσται· ἐὰν δὲ μὴ ἀποδεικνύω ὅτι προὔπηρχε, καὶ γεννηθῆναι ἄνθρωπος ὁμοιοπαθῆς ἡμῖν, σάρκα ἔχων, κατὰ τὴν τοῦ πατρὸς βουλήν ὑπέμεινεν, ἐν τούτῳ πεπλανῆσθαι με μόνον λέγειν δίκαιον, ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀρνεῖσθαι ὅτι οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Χριστὸς, ἐὰν φαίνεται ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἐξ ἀνθρώπων γεννηθείς, καὶ ἐκλογῇ γενόμενος εἰς τὸν Χριστὸν εἶναι ἀποδεικνύεται. καὶ γὰρ εἰσὶ τινες, ὦ φίλοι, ἔλεγον, ἀπὸ τοῦ ἡμετέρου [ἡμετέρου] γένους ὁμολογοῦντες αὐτὸν Χριστὸν εἶναι, ἄνθρωπον δὲ ἐξ ἀνθρώπων γενόμενον ἀποφαινομένοι· οἷς οὐ συντίθεμαι, οὐδ' ἂν πλείστοι ταῦτά μοι δοξάσαντες εἶποιεν, ἐπειδὴ οὐκ ἀνθρωπείως διδάγμασι κεκελεύσμεθα ὑπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ Χριστοῦ πείθεσθαι, ἀλλὰ τοῖς διὰ τῶν μακαρίων προφητῶν κηρυχθεῖσι, καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ διδαχθεῖσι. Just. Dial. p. 140. Jebb. 234. Thirlby.

<sup>r</sup> Isa. xxix. 13.

“ chosen Messiah. For, said I, my good friends, some there “ are of our profession (of your nation<sup>s</sup>) who, acknowledging him “ to be the Messiah, yet conceive of him as of a man born of hu“ man parents : whom however I assent not to, no, not though “ there were ever so many concurring to tell me so † ; since we “ are commanded by Christ himself not to submit to the doc“ trines of men, but to what the holy Prophets have delivered,
 “ and himself hath taught us.”

This is the famous passage, from whence (as I have said) the Socinians and Remonstrants have endeavoured to draw an argument for neutrality or indifference concerning the article of Christ's Divinity; imagining that the impugners of that doctrine were received by Justin and the Church in his time as brethren and fellow Christians. But there is nothing in this paragraph of Justin to support such fancies. Let it be observed in the first place, that the persons whom Justin here speaks of, as believing in Jesus as the Messiah, but denying his birth of a virgin, and his preexistence, were most certainly the Ebionites of his time. Their hypothesis, and theirs only, exactly answers the description here given ; as Bishop Bull has demonstrated at large<sup>u</sup>. This premised, we may now proceed to lay down the arguments urged by Bishop Bull against the construction offered by the Remonstrants, and next subjoin a summary of the solutions he has given in answer to their objections.

1. As the passage itself in Justin is very far from declaring in express terms, or by any certain consequence, what some collect from it, so it is very unlikely that Justin should be singular in his sentiments on that head, directly thwarting the sentiments of Ignatius before him, of Irenæus and Tertullian of the same century with him, and, in short, of all the ancients besides <sup>s</sup> Ἀπὸ τοῦ ὑπερίπου γένους is undoubtedly the true reading; warranted by the propriety of the expression, and Justin's usual phraseology, and the whole turn and texture of the sentence. See Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. vii. sect. 6. p. 346. Thirlby in locum.

Nevertheless, one might perhaps, in prudence, wave this just criticism, since nothing depends upon it, as to the main cause, (except it be to make Justin write sense so far,) but the insisting upon it gives the adversaries a handle for dropping the material things, and making some show of an opposition upon this bye point, as if all depended upon it.

<sup>t</sup> I prefer the rendering here given before the common one, taking the hint from the ingenious Mr. Thirlby in his notes upon the passage. The common rendering is; neither would it be admitted by the generality [of Christians,] who are in my sentiments: the sense is flat.

<sup>u</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccles. cap. vii. sect. 8. p. 347.

him, who have constantly condemned those Ebionite principles as pernicious and heretical<sup>x</sup>.

2. The argument drawn from this passage by our adversaries, if it proves any thing at all, proves too much; which is a certain sign that it is faulty: for it proves that even those who denied our Lord's birth of a virgin (a truth attested to by the Prophets and Evangelists, and most religiously held by the ancient Church) were received as fellow Christians; which is highly absurd<sup>y</sup>.

3. It is very observable, that the Ebionites rejected three of the Gospels, receiving only St. Matthew's, (or what they called so,) and that curtailed. They rejected likewise all St. Paul's writings, reproaching him as an apostate<sup>z</sup>. How unlikely is it that Justin should own such reprobates as those were for fellow Christians! Episcopus was himself sensible of this difficulty, and could not but acknowledge it plainly absurd, that Justin, and the Church of his time, should hold any communion with such an ungodly race of men as the Ebionites were<sup>a</sup>. What salvo therefore had he for it? None, but the denying that Justin was there speaking of the Ebionites; though it is a plain case that he was: therefore Episcopus was here caught in his own snare, as Bishop Bull justly observes, retorting his own concessions upon him with irresistible force<sup>b</sup>.

4. Add to this, that the Liturgies then used in the Church were so full and express for the Divinity of Christ, that there is no likelihood that the Ebionites should join in them; neither could they do it without solemn mockery. See this argument drawn out at large in Bishop Bull<sup>c</sup>.

5. If the Church would have communicated with the Ebionites,

<sup>x</sup> See Bull. Judic. cap. vii. sect. 5. p. 345.

<sup>y</sup> Qui enim hic a Justino notantur dogmatistæ, Servatorem nostrum, non modo hominem tantum, sed hominem ex hominibus genitum, hoc est, ex viri et fœminæ concubitu, communi hominum more, natum esse affirmarunt. Hinc igitur, si recte ex hoc loco Remonstrantes argumentantur, sequetur, Justinum ecclesiamque Justinii tempore, cum iis qui susque deque habita sacrorum Evangelistarum autoritate, spreteque Apostolicæ et Catholicæ Ecclesiæ constanti concordique traditione Christum hominem ex Maria Virgine natum esse negare ausi sunt, communione coluisse: quod quisquis serio sibi persuaserit, ad Anticyras plane relegandus est. Bull. ibid. sect. iii. p. 343.

<sup>z</sup> Ebionæi—solo eo quod est secundum Matthæum Evangelio utuntur, et Apostolum Paulum recusant, apostatam eum legis dicentes. Iren. lib. i. c. 26. Conf. Epiphani. Hær. xxx. 13. Euseb. E. H. lib. iii. c. 27. Origen. contra Cels. lib. v. p. 274. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 1.

<sup>a</sup> Vid. Respons. ad Specim. Column. p. 206.

<sup>b</sup> Vid. Bull. Append. ad cap. vii. sect. 9. p. 357.

<sup>c</sup> Bull. ibid. p. 353.

the Ebionites would not with them ; and therefore Justin could never have intended to call them brethren. See this also explained at large in Bishop Bull<sup>d</sup>. These are the reasons which that incomparable Prelate has urged against the Socinian or Episcopian construction of the passage in Justin. But as it is not always sufficient to demonstrate a truth, and leave it to shift for itself, without reconciling it, and clearing it from objections ; we may next go on to specify the solutions given to the difficulties pleaded on the other side.

1. It is pleaded, that, according to Justin, a person might reasonably be supposed the Messiah, though no more than a man. But to this it is answered, that Justin no where asserts that such a thing could be supposed consistently with Scripture or good sense. No ; his constant doctrine is, and which he every where labours and contends for, that the Messiah is and must be God<sup>e</sup>. But since the Jews, with whom he was disputing, had taken up low notions of their expected Messiah, Justin urged it against Trypho, as an argument to him, and such as upon his principles he could not gainsay, that he might receive Jesus (as his Ebionite countrymen had done) for the Messiah, though he disowned his Godhead. So there was no necessity for his continuing in Judaism, though he would not admit the Divinity of Jesus.

2. It is pleaded, that those impugnors of Christ's Divinity are styled men of our profession, that is, Christians ; and therefore he admitted them as fellow Christians. To say nothing here of the truer reading, (men of your nation,) there is no consequence in the argument. The Ebionites were Christians in a large sense, men of Christian profession, nominal Christians ; as Justin allowed the worst of heretics to be<sup>f</sup> : and this is all he could mean by allowing the Ebionites to be Christians.

3. It is pleaded, that Justin signified his dissent from them very faintly and coldly, (whom I assent not to,) expressing no detestation or abhorrence of the men, or of their principles. To which it may be answered, 1. That he expresses himself as strongly here as he does in another cause of great moment,

<sup>d</sup> Bull. ibid. p. 349. Conf. p. 346.

<sup>e</sup> See this explained at large in Bull. c. vii. p. 344, 345.

<sup>f</sup> Vid. Dialog. p. 100, 244, 245.

Jebb. alias 208, 311, 312. Apolog. i. p. 43. edit. Thirlby.

<sup>g</sup> Vid. Bull. Judic. cap. vii. sect. 6. p. 346.

against those who denied that the world was created<sup>h</sup>. 2. As Justin here expressed no abhorrence, so neither did he express any approbation of them; as his way was when he dissented from <sup>i</sup>persons of the Church, with whom he held communion: so we may fairly set one negative argument against another. 3. There might be special reasons why, in that particular case, he did not launch out into satire and invective against the Ebionites. He was endeavouring to persuade Trypho to come so far at least as the Ebionites had done, rather than continue an hardened and desperate Jew: it would have been highly improper, in the conducting an argument of that kind<sup>k</sup>, to have fallen severely upon the Ebionites, whose tenets he was making so good use of<sup>l</sup>. 4. Yet even in that very passage he gave oblique intimations of his heartily disapproving the Ebionite principles. He rebukes Trypho and his associates with some tartness, as shutting their eyes against the truth, and being slow to perceive the things of God, for their not admitting the Divinity of Jesus Christ, so fully proved from the Old Testament: what then could he think of the Ebionites, who had both Old Testament and New before them, and yet rejected their Lord's Divinity<sup>m</sup>? Then again, in the close of the same passage, Justin plainly enough intimates, that those who denied Christ's Divinity or birth of a virgin rejected the doctrine of the Church, and of the Prophets, and of Christ himself, to follow human inventions, or doctrines of men<sup>n</sup>. So if Justin did not condemn the Ebionites with hard words, he did it with hard arguments, which were altogether as forcible, and served his purpose better. Upon the whole therefore, nothing can be inferred from this passage of Justin, to countenance the receiving of the Ebionites, or their successors, to Christian communion: the contrary is evident as the light. And indeed it would be hard to say for what purpose Justin wrote that very Dialogue, (the main substance whereof is taken up in proving the Divinity of Christ,) if after all he thought it

<sup>h</sup> Ἡ καὶ τὸν κόσμον σὺ ἀγένητον λέγεις; εἰσὶν οἱ λέγοντες, οὐ μέντοι γε αὐτοῖς συγκατατίθεμαι ἐγώ. Just. Dial. p. 20. alias 148.

<sup>i</sup> Vid. Justin. Dial. p. 243. alias 311.

<sup>k</sup> See Thirlby upon the passage, p. 243.

<sup>l</sup> See a like argument urged by Novatian from the doctrine of the Docetæ; which he heartily detested, but yet contented himself, in that instance, while making use of it, with saying, Quod tamen nos non probamus, (c. 23.) which was sufficient: more would have been there and then improper.

<sup>m</sup> Compare Bull, cnp. vii. sect. 4. p. 344.

<sup>n</sup> Ibid. p. 347.

an article of slight moment, and such as was not of weight sufficient to be made a term of Christian communion. But enough of this.

Bishop Bull's answer to Episcopus has met with the esteem of the learned world<sup>o</sup>, and nothing like a just reply has been attempted since: only Le Clerc, above twenty years after, writing an Ecclesiastical History<sup>p</sup>, was pleased, in passing, to make some brief strictures upon it, and to bring up again some of the former pretences, which had long been exploded. He deals more in hints and insinuations than in arguments, or direct assertions, like one who had an inclination to put some fallacy upon his readers, but at the same time to provide for a retreat. He hints, † that the persons whom Justin there speaks of might be Nazaræans. He was very sensible where the difficulty pressed, if they were supposed to be Ebionites; as Bishop Bull had fully proved them to have been. But whether they are to be called Ebionites or Nazaræans, they were undoubtedly men that denied Christ's Divinity and his birth of a virgin, (as before shewn,) and were therefore heretics in ecclesiastical account. As to Nazaræans, about whom so much has been boasted of later, it will be soon enough to consider how far Justin had a view to them, when it can be proved, that their principles, with respect to Christ, were the same with those which Justin there condemns: a hard thing to make out<sup>a</sup>.

Le Clerc would appear to doubt whether the persons pointed to in Justin really denied Christ's divine nature or no. It is as plain as possible that they did. But however, if they did not, then there is an end of all the Remonstrant pretences at once: and there is not so much as colour left for saying, that Justin held communion with the impugnors of Christ's Divinity.

He goes on to observe how mildly and softly Justin treated them<sup>t</sup>, above common heretics, whom he allowed not to be

<sup>o</sup> See Nelson's Life of Bull, p. 383, &c.

<sup>p</sup> Published A. D. 1716.

<sup>q</sup> Non constare an ii, seu Nazaræi, seu quicumque alii fuerint, negarent, Præter hominem ex hominibus natum, quidquam in Jesu fuisse; hoc est, divinam ejus naturam rejicerent, neque enim perspicue hic loquitur Justinus. Cleric. Eccles. Histor. p. 635.

<sup>r</sup> By Zuicker, Sandius, Toland, Artemonius, and others.

<sup>s</sup> Vid. Mosheim, Vindic. Antiq. Discipl. advers. Toland. cap. 5, 6. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 545—550. Mosheim, Histor. Eccles. Sæc. i. part. 2. sect. i. c. 4. p. 99. Conf. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 547. Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. ii. sect. 13—16. Primit. Trad. cap. i. sect. 6—10. Huetius in not. ad Origen. Comment. p. 74. Le Quier, Dissert. Damascen. vii. p. 94, &c.

<sup>t</sup> Eum minime in eos invectum, ut

Christians. This is the old Episcopian plea<sup>u</sup>, which had been abundantly answered by Bishop Bull, as Le Clerc well knew; though he took no notice. Neither does it appear that Justin believed the Ebionites (of whom he speaks) to have been Christians in any other sense than as other heretics were, that is, nominal Christians, as I have observed above.

He proceeds to say, that it cannot be determined, for want of ancient evidences, how far those Nazaráens (for so he chooses to call them) were tolerated<sup>x</sup>. Directly false, or sophistical. Indeed, as to Nazaráens, since it is disputable who or what they were, or how far orthodox<sup>y</sup>, (accounts being different, and sometimes repugnant,) it may be disputable how they were received by other Christians: but as to such persons as Justin speaks of, (whatever name we assign them,) men that denied Christ's Divinity and miraculous conception, it is a very clear case, and fully attested by many and undoubted evidences, that they never were received by the Church of Christ, but constantly rejected as antichrists and heretics. And this is all that we need contend for: the rest is only playing with words and names, and is mere amusement, wide of the point in hand.

He goes on to infer, that since Justin was so moderate in that case, there is no reason now for condemning the Socinians or others that impugn Christ's Divinity: that is plainly his drift and meaning, only a little covertly expressed<sup>z</sup>. So, though he had neither answered nor considered the reasons offered by Bishop Bull against any such inference from Justin's words, nor in Basilidianos, Saturnilianos, Valentinianos, et Marcionitas, quos Christianos fuisse negat. Ibid. p. 635.

<sup>u</sup> Respons. ad Specim. Calumn. p. 296.

<sup>x</sup> Sed quatenus eos ferrent alii Christiani, aut qui ipsi se erga alios gererent, ob veterum monumentorum penuriam, nobis non constat. p. 636.

<sup>y</sup> Though I say disputable, because very learned men have been much divided about the Nazaráens, yet I make no question myself, but the Nazaráens were the remains of the first Christians of Jerusalem, were entirely orthodox in the article of Christ's Divinity, and directly opposite to the Ebionites. So far, at least, Bishop Bull and Le Quien have, in my judgment, clearly and satisfactorily proved.

So that to obtrude the Nazaráens upon us here, instead of Ebionites, is only raising a mist, to confound weak readers.

<sup>z</sup> Interim cum Justinus de ejusmodi hominibus, non exiguo errore laborantibus, tanta verborum moderatione loquatur, invidia non est iis facienda, qui Jesum non tantum Messiam, sed etiam a Spiritu Sancto, præter naturæ ordinem, conceptum credentes, totumque Novum Testamentum admittentes, et ad ejus normam mores componentes, æternis suppliciis addicere non audent; eo tantum quod in arduo capite, de divina Christi natura, a ceteris dissentiant, quia eam in Novi Testamenti libris doceri non putant. Clerici Eccles. Hist. p. 636.

the solutions given to the objections before made, nor indeed had advanced any thing beyond mere surmises and shuffles; yet he draws the same conclusion which the Remonstrants had before done, as if he had proved his point to satisfaction.

But lest he should seem entirely to have passed over Bishop Bull's performance, he singles out a bye-point<sup>a</sup> (not material in respect of the main thing) to contest with him. It is the emendation of a word which Bishop Bull had offered, and justified, like a judicious writer and a true critic, to make his author speak sense, rather than to support the main cause, which did not need it: I say, Le Clerc singles out that to dispute upon, and that is all. And even there he is entirely wrong, as has been abundantly shewn by a learned hand<sup>b</sup>; for which reason I shall say no more of it. But allowing those gentlemen their absurd reading, the cause stands just where it did; and they are as far off as ever from being able to prove from that passage in Justin Martyr, that the Socinians should be received as fellow Christians.

I had almost forgot to take notice of two insinuations dropped by Le Clerc in their favour, viz. that they receive the whole Canon, (which the Ebionites did not,) and they lead good moral lives. As to the first, it is only maintaining their heresy with greater art and more exquisite subtily, and in a way which may do the more mischief, because the poison is concealed: the ancient heretics were plainer men. Besides, any one who has seen the Five Letters of Inspiration, and knows also what freedom that author has taken with the sacred writers, in his comments and elsewhere, will conceive no high opinion of his veneration for the Scriptures: it is keeping them indeed, for the saving of appearances, but in order to expose them the more insidiously.

As to a good moral life, that is, a partial obedience, it avails nothing, while maintaining of heresies is itself immoral practice, both against God and man: besides that the natural consequence of Socinianism is Deism; which leads to all immorality. And this distant, and almost insensible way of introducing Deism is the most dangerous of any: for thousands perhaps may be thus led by slow and almost imperceptible degrees into it, who could not have been brought to it by the shorter, coarser methods. But I pass on.

<sup>a</sup> Clerici Eccles. Histor. p. 636.    <sup>b</sup> Thirlby, in Notis ad Just. Mart. p. 234.

There is another gentleman, who, after Le Clerc, has appeared on the same side. He calls himself Artemonius in his last piece<sup>c</sup>, as in another, long before, Lucas Mellierus, and is known to be Samuel Crellius, descended from the famous John Crellius. He hath here acted a more ungenerous part than Le Clerc himself had done. He pretends, first, that Le Clerc (who had scarce touched the main things, as I have shewn) had confuted Bishop Bull; and next insinuates, that the Bishop had laid violent hands upon the text of Justin, only to serve his hypothesis: which is untrue in both its parts. For the Bishop's correction is undoubtedly right: or if it were not, yet nothing depends upon it, the main cause being perfectly secure without it. In the last place, he takes notice of Mr. Thirlby's Reply to Le Clerc, and contents himself with a kind of faint promise to make some rejoinder<sup>d</sup>. I shall only remark, that when a person so well disposed for any impracticable undertaking (as appears by his strange attempt<sup>e</sup> upon John i. 1.) declines venturing, and promises only, and that faintly too, where he has a strong inclination, it is a certain sign that he apprehends more difficulty than ordinary; and that while he verbally triumphed over Bishop Bull, he was wiser than to engage in close dispute.

The reader, I hope, will pardon me for dwelling so long upon this passage in Justin. I thought it worth the considering with some care: and I have endeavoured to be as short as the nature of the question would permit me to be. I am sensible, after all, that I have not taken compass enough to do full justice to it; and therefore I entreat the reader, who would have entire satisfaction about it, to consult Bishop Bull himself, in whom he will find it.

<sup>c</sup> Initium Evangelii S. Joannis restitutum per L. M. Artemonium, A. D. 1726.

<sup>d</sup> Post Apostolorum tempora, pro Christianis in Ecclesia tolerandis [Ebionæi] habebantur; ut ex illo celebri apud Justinum Martyrem, in Dial. cum Tryphone, loco p. 267. est manifestum. Quem Georg. Bullus magno conatu frustra convellere nititur, et violentam ei infert manum, vocem ἡμετέριον, quia suæ hypothesi est contraria, in ὑμετέριον mutans, confutatus etiam a celeberr. Clerico Hist. Eccl. ad Ann. cxi. Cui quidem vir clariss. Styanus Thirlby pro Bullo respondit: Verum sint quæ Thirlbyo reponi, et præterea plura in hanc rem afferri possent: quod fortasse aliquando fiet, &c. Artemonius, p. 516.

<sup>e</sup> It is an attempt to make an emendation (Θεοῦ ἦν ὁ Λόγος, instead of Θεός ἦν ὁ Λόγος) against all the manuscripts of the New Testament, against all the versions, against all the quotations from antiquity, in a very critical passage, (where, if any where, some remains of such a reading would have been preserved among Ebionites, Samosatensians, Arians, or others, had it ever been known,) by mere dint of wit, and force of fancy, without any foundation of reason or authority.

A. D. 176. About this time<sup>f</sup>, very probably, the famous Irenæus wrote his treatise against heresies: and he is the first that condemns the Ebionites by name; and that not merely for being immoral men, nor merely for rejecting a great part of the sacred Canon, neither yet for denying Christ's birth of a virgin, but for impugning Christ's Divinity. He excludes them from Church-Communion, and from a state of grace and salvation, chiefly, or solely, upon that score. He writes thus: "The spiritual man will pass judgment also upon the Ebionites. How can they be saved, unless it was God (ὁ Θεός) that wrought their salvation on earth? or how shall man come to God, if God had not come to man?" Irenæus here lays the charge upon the fundamental error of the Ebionites, their rejecting Christ's Divinity; an error which they had imbibed from their countrymen the Jews, and brought with them into Christianity. And this was the principal ground and reason of their rejecting some of the Gospels, particularly St. John's: for they had not yet learned the art of reconciling the doctrine of the New Testament with their principles. Irenæus excludes the men from salvation for their disbelief, abstracting from the consideration of invincible ignorance or sincerity; which would be impertinently brought in with respect to this or that particular case, since it is common to all, and makes no difference as to the abstract nature of things, or our judgment thereupon: for we are to judge by what we know, leaving things secret to God. The Ebionites are here censured as rejecting salvation, because they rejected the belief of the divine methods appointed for it; agreeable to a maxim before laid down by Ignatius, and before him by St. John, as I have observed above<sup>h</sup>.

Before I proceed further with Irenæus, I would here take notice by the way, how considerable a person he was. He is said to have been near the Apostles' times<sup>i</sup>; for indeed he was born in or near that age<sup>k</sup>, and was advanced in<sup>l</sup> years when he

<sup>f</sup> Vid. Oudin. de Scriptor. Eccles. vol. i. p. 207. Dodwell. Dissert. iv. 360. Fabric. Bibl. Gr. lib. v. c. 1. p. 66.

<sup>g</sup> Ἀνακρινεῖ δὲ καὶ τοὺς Ἑβιωνοὺς πῶς δύνανται σωθῆναι, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἦν ὁ τὴν σωτηρίαν αὐτῶν ἐπὶ γῆς ἐργασάμενος: ἢ πῶς ἄνθρωπος χωρήσει εἰς Θεόν, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἐχωρήθῃ εἰς ἄνθρωπον; Iren. lib. iv. c. 33, alias 53.

<sup>h</sup> See above, p. 557.

<sup>i</sup> Ὁ ἐγγὺς τῶν Ἀποστόλων γενόμενος. Basil. de Sp. S. c. 29. Ὁ τῶν Ἀποστόλων διάδοχος. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 2. Epiphân. Hæret. H. xxiv. 8. Vir Apostolicorum temporum. Hieron. Epist. liii. ad Theodorum, p. 581.

<sup>k</sup> See Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. Diss. iii. p. 229.

<sup>l</sup> Dodwell. Dissert. iv. p. 291. Oudin. vol. i. p. 207.

wrote his book against heresies. The charismata, the miraculous gifts, were common in his days, and he himself a witness of them in many instances. The gifts of healing (as restoring sight to the blind, and hearing to the deaf, and limbs to the cripple, yea, and life to the dead) continued in the Church to his time; besides the gift of tongues, and of prophecy, and of casting out devils, and the like<sup>m</sup>. He speaks twice of raising the dead, and in one place very emphatically thus: "And now, as I before said, the dead have risen, and have continued with us many years<sup>n</sup>:" those very gifts are what Irenæus more than once appeals to, as proofs of the true faith resting in the Church, in opposition to heretics who had not the extraordinary graces, but were detected in their imposture whenever they pretended to them<sup>o</sup>. He lays it down as a rule and a maxim, that truth then went along with the Church, because the Spirit of truth rested upon it<sup>p</sup>; which is the argument St. Paul himself uses to the like purpose<sup>q</sup>: and it was a very good one at that time, and as circumstances then stood<sup>r</sup>. But I return.

Irenæus, in another place, smartly reproves the Ebionites for denying Christ's Divinity, and his birth of a virgin<sup>s</sup>. "God therefore became man, and the Lord himself saved us, giving the sign of the Virgin: and not as some now say, who presume to interpret the Scripture, Behold a young woman shall be with child, and shall bear a son; as Theodotion the Ephesian, and Aquila of Pontus, both of them Jewish proselytes, interpret. Whom the Ebionites following, pretend he was begotten of

<sup>m</sup> Vid. Iren. lib. ii. c. 31. p. 164. alias c. 56. p. 188. lib. iii. c. 32, alias 57. lib. v. c. 6.

<sup>n</sup> Ἡδὴ δὲ, καθὼς ἔφαμεν, καὶ νεκροὶ ἠγέρθησαν, καὶ παρέμειναν σὺν ἡμῖν ἱκανοῖς ἔτεσι. lib. ii. cap. 32. p. 166. Conf. Dodwell. Dissert. ii. p. 165, &c.

<sup>o</sup> Iren. lib. ii. cap. 31, 32.

<sup>p</sup> Ubi enim Ecclesia, ibi et Spiritus Dei, et ubi Spiritus Dei illic Ecclesia, et omnis gratia: Spiritus autem veritatis. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 24, alias 40.

<sup>q</sup> Gal. iii. 2.

<sup>r</sup> Nihil ergo prorsus video quod in hoc Irenæi nostri testimonio desiderare possint adversarii. Ut enim Ecclesiis omnibus sic solis datas fuisse gratias testatur Irenæus, nullis nimirum hæreticorum aliorumve quorumcunque infidelium conventiculis. Inde sequitur, ut falsam fuisse hæreticorum

fidem, sic contra Ecclesiæ orthodoxam, divino constitisse testimonio. Quæ utinam cogitarent Sociniani, aliique hodierni omnes a primævorum Christianorum doctrina in fide novatores. Dodwell. Diss. ii. p. 168.

<sup>s</sup> Ὁ Θεὸς οὖν ἄνθρωπος ἐγένετο. καὶ αὐτὸς Κύριος ἔσωσεν ἡμᾶς, δοὺς τὸ τῆς παρθένου σημεῖον. ἀλλ' οὐχ ὡς ἔνιοι φασὶ τῶν νῦν μεθερμηνεῖν τολμῶντων τὴν γραφὴν ἰδοὺ ἡ νεάνις ἐν γαστρὶ ἔξει, καὶ τέξεται υἱόν, ὡς Θεοδοτίων ἠρμήνευσεν ὁ Ἐφέσιος, καὶ Ἀκύλας ὁ Ποντικός, ἀμφότεροι Ἰουδαῖοι προσήλυτοι. οἷς κατακολουθήσαντες οἱ Ἐβιωναῖοι, ἐκ τοῦ Ἰωσήφ αὐτὸν γεγενῆσθαι φάσκουσι, tantam dispositionem Dei dissolventes, quantum ad ipsos est, frustrantes prophetarum testimonium quod operatus est Deus. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 21, alias 24.

“ Joseph, thereby dissolving, so far as in them lies, that so important dispensation of God, and frustrating the prediction of the Prophets which God has brought about.” Here it is observable how strong the expression is, God (ὁ Θεός) became man, and the Lord himself saved us. So far in opposition to the Ebionites, with respect to their denial of Christ’s Divinity: the rest relates to their denial of his miraculous conception. Could any one judge from his smart reproof of them in the close, that those men were received as Christian brethren in that age? Absurd and incredible.

I would only take notice further, that some over censorious critics have suspected that Irenæus was here out in his chronology, and inconsistent with himself, in making the Ebionites to be followers of Aquila and Theodotion. But Irenæus is to be understood of the Ebionites of his own time only<sup>t</sup>. The sect had subsisted long before, but now received fresh countenance and encouragement from the versions of Aquila and Theodotion, which they greedily closed in with, as favouring their heresy.

There is a third passage in Irenæus, where he again falls upon the Ebionites, for their opposing Christ’s Divinity, and birth of a virgin<sup>u</sup>. “ Vain also are the Ebionites, in not receiving the union of God and man, by faith, into their souls, but persisting still in the old leaven of [common] generation: for they will not understand, that the Holy Spirit came upon Mary, and the power of the Highest overshadowed her, and therefore that which was born of her is holy, and is the Son of the Highest, of God the Father of all, who wrought his incarnation, and manifested a new generation; that as by the first generation

<sup>t</sup> Vid. Mosheim. Vindic. Antiq. cap. vii. p. 179, 180.

<sup>u</sup> Vani autem et Ebionæi, unionem Dei et hominis, per fidem non recipientes in suam animam, sed in veteri generationis perseverantes fermento; neque intelligere volentes, quoniam Spiritus Sanctus advenit in Mariam, et virtus Altissimi obumbravit eam: quapropter et quod generatum est, Sanctum est, et Filius Altissimi, Dei Patris omnium, qui operatus est incarnationem ejus, et novam ostendit generationem; uti quemadmodum per priorem generationem mortem hereditavimus, sic per generationem hanc hereditaremus vitam. Reprobant itaque hi commixtionem vini celestis, et solam aquam sæcularem volunt esse, non recipientes Deum ad commixtionem suam; perseverantes autem in eo qui victus est, Adam, et projectus est de Paradiso: non contemplantes, quoniam quemadmodum ab initio plasmationis nostræ in Adam, ea quæ fuit a Deo adspiratio vitæ, unita plasmati, animavit hominem, et animal rationale ostendit; sic in fine, Verbum Patris et Spiritus Dei adunitus antiquæ substantiæ plasmationis Adæ, viventem et perfectum effecit hominem, capientem perfectum Patrem: ut quemadmodum in animali omnes mortui sumus, sic in spiritali omnes vivificemur. Iren. lib. v. cap. 1. p. 239, alias p. 394.

“ we had inherited death, so by this other generation we might inherit life. They then reject the mixture of heavenly wine, content to be no more than earthly water, not taking God into their mixture, but abiding only in Adam, who was vanquished and expelled Paradise. They consider not, that, as at the beginning of our formation in Adam, the breath of life from God, united with the frame, enlivened the man, and rendered him a rational creature; so at the end, the Word of the Father and Spirit of God, united with the old substance of Adam's formation, has made a living and perfect man comprehending the perfect Father; that as in the natural man we are all dead, so in the spiritual man we may all be made alive.”

Here we are to observe, that Irenæus judged the Ebionites to be in a dangerous or desperate state, on the account of their not admitting the union of God and man in the Person of Christ, on account of their not taking the divine nature in, to supply the imperfections of the human, the Word of the Father, the Spirit of God, to enliven and exalt the human nature, the old Adam. I may remark by the way, that Irenæus here seems to understand Spirit of God, and Holy Spirit before, of the second Person, of the Logos himself coming down upon the Virgin. So the earliest Fathers commonly do*, interpreting Luke i. 35. to that sense: which I the rather note, because so their asserting Christ's birth of a virgin, and his preexisting as Spirit of God, * Hoc ergo corpus, in quod inductus est Spiritus Sanctus, &c. Herm. lib. iii. Simil. v. cap. 6.

*Ὦν μὲν τὸ πρῶτον πνεῦμα, ἐγένετο σὰρξ. Clem. Ep. ii. cap. 9.

Τὸ πνεῦμα οὖν, καὶ τὴν δύναμιν τὴν παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ, οὐδὲν ἄλλο νοῆσαι θέμις, ἢ τὸν Λόγον. Just. Mart. Apol. i. p. 54, alias 75.

Προελθὼν δὲ ὁ Λόγος, δημιουργίας αἴτιος, ἔπειτα καὶ ἑαυτὸν γενῶν, ὅταν ὁ Λόγος σὰρξ γένηται. Clem. Alex. Strom. lib. v. p. 654.

Qua autem Spiritus Dei et virtus Altissimi, non potest infra angelos haberi. Tertull. de Carn. Christi, cap. xiv.

Ecce, inquit, ab angelo prædicatum est, propterea quod nascetur Sanctum, vocabitur Filius Dei: caro itaque nata est, caro utique erit Filius Dei. Immo, de Spiritu Dei dictum est. Certe enim de Spiritu Sancto Virgo concepit; et quod concepit, id peperit:

id ergo nasci habebat quod erat conceptum et pariendum; id est Spiritus, cujus et vocabitur nomen Emmanuel, quod est interpretatum nobiscum Deus. Caro autem Deus non est, ut de illa dictum sit quod nascetur Sanctum, vocabitur Filius Dei, sed ille qui in ea natus est, Deus— Quis Deus in eo natus? Sermo et Spiritus. Tertull. contr. Prax. cap. xxvii.

Verbum Dei incarnatum per Spiritus illum de quo angelus refert, Spiritus veniet in te, &c.—ut principalitas nominis istius, Filius Dei, in Spiritu sit Domini qui descendit et venit. Novat. cap. xx.

Hic in Virgine labitur, carne Spiritus Sanctus induitur. Cyprian. de Idolor. Vanit. sic cod. German. et 4. MSS. Pamel.

Descendens itaque de cælo Sanctus ille Spiritus, sanctam Virginem, cujus utero se insinuaret, elegit. Lactant. lib. iv. cap. 12.

and God, amounted to the same thing. For the reason given by St. Luke, (or rather by the angel in St. Luke,) why Mary should conceive, though she knew not a man, is, that the Holy Spirit should come upon her, that the power of the Highest [δύναμις ἰψίστου] should overshadow her: so that, after this, to deny the birth of a virgin amounted, in construction, to the same with denying any such coming of an Holy Spirit upon Mary, any divine preexistence of Christ. And hence, I conceive, it is, that we so often find in the ancient Fathers those two doctrines so linked together, or so intermingled with each other, that they appear, in a manner, but as the same thing twice told, or the same doctrine diversely expressed. The Ebionites denied the descent of the Logos upon Mary: they rejected the divine part in Christ, admitting only the human. This is what Irenæus calls rejecting the heavenly wine, (alluding to their celebrating the Eucharist in water only, without wine;) not receiving God into their mixture, but contenting themselves with the earthly Adam, who was cast out of Paradise; intimating that the Ebionites should as certainly be excluded heaven. The thought which Irenæus goes upon may be illustrated from a passage in Hippolytus, which, speaking of Christ, runs thus: "As it was prophesied beforehand, so he manifested himself of the Virgin and Holy Spirit; made a new man, (a second Adam,) having an heavenly nature of the Father, as he is the Logos, and having an earthly one, as of the old Adam, incarnate of a virgin. He came into the world, and manifested himself as God." But to return to Irenæus, it is very plain that he looked upon the reconciliation of God and man as depending entirely upon the Mediator's being both in one<sup>a</sup>: and in how strict a sense he understood Christ to be God is well known to as many as know any thing of Irenæus. But if the English reader desires further satisfaction on that head, he may have it abundantly from Mr. Alexander's Essay on Irenæus<sup>b</sup>, a very judicious and faithful performance, a finished piece in its kind. I heartily wish that that learned gentleman had leisure, σαρκούμενος. οὗτος προελθὼν εἰς κόσμον Θεὸς ἐφανερώθη. κ. τ. λ. Hippolyt. contr. Noët. cap. xvii. p. 18, 19. Conf. Tertull. de Carn. Christi, cap. xvii.

<sup>y</sup> Eriphan. Hær. xxx. 16.

<sup>z</sup> Καθ' ἃν οὖν τρόπον ἐκρήχθη, κατὰ τοῦτον καὶ παρὼν ἐφάνησεν ἑαυτὸν ἐκ παρθένου καὶ ἁγίου πνεύματος, καινὸς ἄνθρωπος γενόμενος· τὸ μὲν οὐράνιον ἔχων τὸ πατρῶον ὡς Λόγος, τὸ δὲ ἐπίγειον, ὡς ἐκ παλαιοῦ Ἀδάμ διὰ παρθένου

<sup>a</sup> Vid. Iren. lib. iii. cap. 18, alias 20.

<sup>b</sup> Printed for John Clarke and Richard Hett, A. D. 1727.

as he has abilities, to draw out more of the Fathers in the same way.

A. D. 206. Tertullian reckons the Ebionites among the anti-christs, for denying Jesus to be Son of God<sup>e</sup>, that is, for impugning the Divinity of Christ: for that Tertullian understood the phrase of Son of God, as applied to Christ, to mean the same as God of God<sup>d</sup>, is plain from all his writings. And what he must think of the dangerous state the Ebionites were in, by their heresy in that article, may appear sufficiently from a maxim he lays down, that none have life who believe not in the Son, and none believe in the Son, who admit not that he is a Son<sup>c</sup> in such a sense as he had mentioned.

He again censures the Ebionites, as making Christ a mere man, and denying that he is the Son of God<sup>f</sup>. Where it is observable, he passes over in silence their denying his birth of a virgin, or condemns both their positions in one, as resolving into the same error. However, the stress of his censure lies upon their impugning Christ's divine Sonship, that is, his real and proper Divinity: for such was Tertullian's sense of Son of God, as I before intimated.

In another place, he speaks of the Ebionites as denying Christ's birth of a virgin, but makes that amount to denying his being Son of God<sup>g</sup>, in his high sense of that phrase. And the reason why the denial of the one implied the denial of the other (in his way of arguing, common to other Fathers) seems

<sup>c</sup> At in Epistola eos maxime anti-christos vocat qui Christum negarent in carne venisse, et qui non putarent Jesum esse Filium Dei: illud Marcion, hoc Hebion vindicavit. Tertull. Præscript. cod. xxxiii.

<sup>d</sup> Hunc ex Deo prolatum dicimus, et prolatione generatum, et idcirco Filium Dei et Deum dictum, ex unitate substantiæ. — Ita de Spiritu Spiritus, et de Deo Deus, ut lumen de lumine accensum. — Quod de Deo profectum est, Deus est, et Dei Filius, et unus ambo. Ita de Spiritu Spiritus, et de Deo Deus, &c. Tertull. Apol. cap. xxi.

<sup>e</sup> Qui Filium non habet, nec vitam habet: non habet autem Filium, qui eum alium quam Filium credit. Cont. Præx. cap. xxx.

<sup>f</sup> Qua autem Spiritus Dei, et virtus

Altiss<sup>mi</sup>, non potest infra angelos haberi, Deus scilicet et Dei Filius. Quanto ergo dum hominem gestat minor angelis factus est tanto non, dum angelum gestat. Poterit hæc opinio Hebioni convenire, qui nudum hominem et tantum ex semine David, id est non et Dei Filium constituit Jesum. Tertullian. de Carn. Christi, cap. xiv.

<sup>g</sup> Non competebat ex semine humano Dei Filium nasci, ne si totus esset Filius hominis, non esset et Dei Filius, nihilque haberet amplius Solomone, et amplius Jona, et de Hebionis opinione credendus erat. Ergo jam Dei Filius ex Patris Dei semine, id est Spiritu; vacabat enim vir semen apud habentem Dei semen. Tertull. de Carn. Christi, cap. xviii.

to have been this; that it would have been utterly unworthy<sup>h</sup> of the Son of God to have taken man upon him, except it were by a virgin: therefore the denial of the mother's virginity amounted to a denial of God's being born of her; it was making it absurd. From whence we see a further reason of what I before hinted, that the two false positions of the Ebionites were considered as near allied, and were condemned in one, as hanging both together, and perhaps one invented for the sake of the other<sup>i</sup>. The denying the miraculous conception was, by inference and implication, denying Christ's Divinity, as the affirming of the one was conceived to amount to affirming the other. But the later Ebionites, (as we shall see,) having a mind to reform their scheme, contrived at length to admit the miraculous conception, and still rejected our Lord's Divinity: which was retaining the main substance of their heresy, but under a better appearance than before. We shall observe presently what the Church of Christ thought of them after that new reform.

A. D. 249. Origen is the first that takes notice of the Ebionites as divided into two sorts<sup>k</sup>, one denying, as before, Christ's birth of a virgin, the other admitting it. But still he reckons both among the pretended Christians<sup>l</sup>, and introduces them among other heretics<sup>m</sup>. But whether or no he charged them with heresy on account of their denying our Lord's Divinity, would not certainly appear, if he had not expressed himself more fully in some other of his writings. In his Comment upon St. Matthew he takes the like notice of the two sorts of Ebionites, charging both as rejecting Christ's Divinity<sup>n</sup>, and as poor in faith<sup>o</sup> towards Christ Jesus; alluding to their name, which signifies the same as poor. But Pamphilus, in his Apology for Origen, proof Cerinthus's denying the miraculous conception, Observat. Sacr. lib. v. cap. 12. sect. 6. p. 145, 146. edit. ult.

<sup>h</sup> Ante omnia autem commendanda erit ratio quæ præfuit, ut Dei Filius de Virgine nasceretur. Nove nasci debebat novæ nativitatibus dedicator.— Conceptit igitur Virgo et peperit Emmanuel, nobiscum Deum. Hæc est nativitas nova dum homo nascitur in Deo, in quo homine Deus natus est; carne antiqui seminis suscepta sine semine antiquo, ut illam novo semine, id est spiritaliter [fort. spiritali] reformaret, exclusis antiquitatis sordibus, expiatam. Tertull. de Carn. Christi, cap. xvii.

<sup>l</sup> See what the learned Vitringer says

<sup>k</sup> Οὗτοι δὲ εἰσὶν οἱ διττοὶ Ἐβιοναῖοι, ἅτοι ἐκ παρθένου ὁμολογοῦντες ὁμοίως ἡμῖν τὸν Ἰησοῦν, ἢ οὐχ οὕτω γεγέννησθαι, ἀλλ' ὡς τοὺς λοιποὺς ἀνθρώπους. Orig. contr. Cels. p. 272. Conf. Comment. in Matth. p. 427.

<sup>l</sup> Orig. ibid. p. 272.

<sup>m</sup> Ibid. 271, 272, 274.

<sup>n</sup> Οὐ μὴν καὶ μετὰ τῆς περὶ αὐτοῦ θεολογίας. Comm. in Matth. p. 427.

<sup>o</sup> Τῷ Ἐβιοναίῳ πτωχέοντι περὶ τῆς εἰς Ἰησοῦν πίστεως. Ibid. 428.

duces some passages of his, out of his Comments on the Epistle to Titus, where he condemns the Ebionites more expressly as heretics, for their denying Christ's Divinity<sup>p</sup>. As to any doubt which may be made about Pamphilus's Apology, (appearing only in Ruffinus's version,) and the credit due to it, I refer the reader to Bishop Bull, who has largely discussed that question, and has sufficiently maintained the authority of that version<sup>q</sup>. As to Origen's own orthodoxy in the article of Christ's Divinity, it has been abundantly vindicated, and cleared from all reasonable exception<sup>r</sup>.

A. D. 290. I shall add but one writer more, Victorinus Petavionensis, before referred to as saying, that St. John wrote his Gospel against Ebion, among others who were of the school of Satan<sup>s</sup>. It is very plain, by his manner of expression, that he looked upon Ebion as a very ill man and an heretic, being of Satan's school, and condemned by the Apostle himself. And considering how particular St. John is in setting forth the Divinity of Christ, we cannot doubt but Victorinus's censure of Ebion respects that article.

I might add many testimonies of Post-Nicene Fathers, to confirm what I have been proving, namely, that the Ebionites were constantly looked upon as heretics for denying our Lord's Divinity. But I choose to go no lower than the Ante-Nicene writers, because they are sufficient, and they are the less to be excepted to; and I am willing also to consult the ease of my readers, as well as to spare myself needless trouble. I am aware of a passage in St. Jerome, which seems to say, that the Ebionites and Cerinthians were condemned as heretics upon another account, not relating to our Lord's Divinity<sup>t</sup>: and I observe, viarum Dei, antequam aliquid fieret ante sæcula fundatam, atque ante omnes colles generatam, sed hominem solum eum credentes. Pamphil. Apolog. p. 226. edit. Bened. Conf. Comment. in Joann. p. 397.

<sup>p</sup> Quid vero sit hæreticus homo, pro viribus nostris, secundum quod sentire possumus, describamus. Omnis qui se Christo credere profitetur et tamen alium Deum Legis et Prophetarum, alium Evangeliorum Deum dicit, &c.—hujusmodi homines hæreticos designamus—unum idemque credendum est de eo qui de Domino nostro Jesu Christo falsi aliquid senserit: sive secundum eos qui dicunt eum ex Joseph et Maria natum, sicut sunt Hebionitæ et Valentiniani; sive secundum eos qui primogenitum eum negant et totius creaturæ Deum, et Verbum, et Sapientiam quæ est initium

<sup>q</sup> Bull. Def. F. N. sect. ii. cap. 9. p. 114, &c.

<sup>r</sup> Bishop Bull, sect. ii. cap. 9. Compare my Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. xii. p. 638, &c.

<sup>s</sup> See above, p. 540.

<sup>t</sup> Si hoc verum est, in Cerinthi et Ebionis hæresim delabimur, qui credentes in Christo propter hoc solum a patribus anathematizati sunt, quod that the learned Le Clerc has endeavoured to make use of it<sup>u</sup> for the supporting a favourite hypothesis, which he appears too fond of. But it is very certain, that Jerome's words in that place, if interpreted with utmost rigour, are a perfect contradiction to all antiquity, and to what himself has asserted in other places of his works<sup>x</sup>. Some therefore have greatly blamed St. Jerome<sup>y</sup> for prevaricating in the contradictory account he here gives; while others, more kindly, and, I think, more justly, have endeavoured to bring him off by a candid construction<sup>z</sup>. Whichever way we take, there is nothing concerned in it, except it be St. Jerome's character: for as to the cause we are upon, it is too firmly established by the ecclesiastical writers in general, and even Jerome in particular, (as I before hinted,) to be at all weakened by this single passage to the contrary, if it were contrary.

Having shewn above, as I humbly conceive, that the Cerinthians (with whom I would be understood to include the Ebionites) were condemned by St. John himself for impugning our Lord's Divinity, and having proved further, that the Ebionites (with whom I would be understood to include the Cerinthians) were condemned all along in the Church for the first three centuries; the conclusion I now draw is, that both Cerinthians and Ebionites stand condemned from the days of the Apostles, and downwards, for the opposition they made to that important doctrine. After this, it will be less needful to prove that others also were condemned in like manner for the like opposition to the same doctrine. But since the doing it may tend in some measure to confirm what has been said, I shall go on to mention other impugnors of our Lord's Divinity within the three first centuries, and a little further: only, I shall endeavour to be as brief as possible in the account, not to weary the reader.

legis ceremonias Christi Evangelio miscuerunt, et sic nova confessi sunt, ut vetera non amitterent. Quid dicam de Ebionitis qui Christianos esse se simulant? Usque hodie per totas orientis synagogas inter Judæos hæresis est quæ dicitur Minæorum, et a Pharisæis nunc usque damnatur; quos vulgo Nazaræos nuncupant, qui credunt in Christum Filium Dei, natum de Virgine Maria, et eum dicunt esse qui sub Pontio Pilato passus est et resurrexit, in quem et nos credimus. Sed dum volunt et Judæi esse et Christiani, nec Judæi sunt nec Christiani. Hieronym. ad August. Ep. lxxiv. Opp. tom. iv. 623. Bened.

<sup>u</sup> Clerici Eccles. Histor. p. 477.

<sup>x</sup> See two passages, quoted above, p. 540, 541: and compare Hieronym. contr. Helvid. tom. iv. p. 140.

<sup>y</sup> Mosheim. Vindic. Antiq. contr. Toland. p. 164.

<sup>z</sup> Bull. Judic. Eccl. cap. ii. sect. 13. p. 300. Remarks on Christianity as Old &c. with respect to Ecclesiastical Antiquity: first part continued, p. 78, 79.

A. D. 195. THEODOTUS.

Theodotus, a citizen of Byzantium, by trade a currier, but a man of parts, and competently furnished with secular learning, having denied his Saviour in time of persecution, and being afterwards upbraided for it, as one that had denied his God; to extenuate the offence, he pretended that he had not denied God, but man<sup>a</sup>, for that Christ was no more. A miserable salvo for a guilty practice; which, instead of lessening his crime, enhanced it yet more, and was so far from removing the just obloquy he before lay under, that it served only to edge and enforce it. However, he hereupon became the reviver of an old heresy, or the ringleader of a new one, (new in dress and circumstances,) and soon after called by the new name of the God-denying apostasy<sup>b</sup>. The first account we have of this matter is from a nameless author in Eusebius, reasonably supposed, upon comparing other testimonies<sup>c</sup>, to have been Caius, the Roman Presbyter, who flourished about A. D. 214. Learned men have inquired how Caius could say that Theodotus was founder of the heresy<sup>d</sup>, and the first that made Christ a mere man, when it is certain and manifest, that both Cerinthians and Ebionites had done it before him. Some say plainly that Caius was guilty of a blunder<sup>e</sup>: which indeed is cutting the dispute short, and may be a good way, if there be not a better. Others say that Theodotus was really the first that made Jesus a mere man, for that the Cerinthians and Ebionites, before, admitted of a superior nature, a spirit assistant from above, residing at times in Jesus, which made him more than a common man<sup>f</sup>. But it will be difficult to prove, either that Ebion was in the same scheme with Cerinthus, as to the doctrine of Æons, and as to the dividing of Jesus from Christ, or that he was not exactly in the same principles which Theodotus espoused, as to making Christ a mere man. Eusebius's account of the Ebionites, and their tenets<sup>g</sup>, <sup>a</sup> Epiphani. Hær. liv. i. Augustin. Hær. 33. Philastr. Hær. cap. 1. Damascen. Hær. 54. Synodic. Pappi. cap. iii. Pseudo-Tertullian. Præscript. cap. liii. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 5.

<sup>b</sup> Ἀρρησίθεος ἀποστασία. Euseb. H. E. lib. v. cap. 28.

<sup>c</sup> Vid. Pearson, Vindic. Ignat. part. ii. p. 23. Opp. Posth. p. 147, &c. Cave, Histor. Literar. vol. i. p. 65.

<sup>d</sup> Τὸν ἀρχηγὸν καὶ πατέρα ταύτης τῆς Ἀρρησίθεου ἀποστασίας—πρῶτον εἰπόντα ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον τὸν Χριστόν.—τὸν τῆς αἰρέσεως ταύτης εὐρετήν. Euseb. ibid.

<sup>e</sup> Ittigius de Hæresiarchis, sect. ii. cap. 15. p. 261.

<sup>f</sup> Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. lib. v. cap. 10. p. 128. edit. ult.

<sup>g</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. iii. cap. 27.

seems to represent their scheme as being exactly the same in that respect; and Theodorit is very express for its being so<sup>h</sup>: only Theodotus's was a little more refined than that of the ancienter Ebionites, because he allowed the miraculous conception or birth of a virgin, which they denied. However, both they and he supposed Christ a mere man: and therefore he was not the first that taught it. Some therefore think that Theodotus is said to be first, because he was the first among the Gentile Christians<sup>i</sup>; for Cerinthus and Ebion were of Jewish extract: which account appears fair and plausible. But I conceive, after all, that Caius was not considering in that place, who in the Church had first taught that Christ was a mere man, but who had been the founder of such a particular sect, called Theodotians, or Artemonians, and who had first taught them to deny Christ, under the pretence of his being a mere man. Theodotus, plainly, was their founder and leader: he was at the head of that revolt, the first man that undertook to conduct it, and to support it upon that principle. The other accounts of Theodotus lead to this sense, and in the main say the same thing that Caius does. Epiphanius takes notice, that all the other Christians who were apprehended and brought to the question along with Theodotus, honestly confessed Christ, and suffered<sup>k</sup>: he was the only man of the company that presumed to deny him, afterwards inventing an odd salvo for it, being more of an artist in his way<sup>l</sup>, than others were. No one else, at that time, and upon that occasion, durst venture to deny his God: he was the first that then broke the ice, and led the way<sup>m</sup>, instructing others to say after him, that it was not denying God, but man. I know not whether, in one particular, he may not be thought to have exceeded the irreverence and impiety of Ebion, namely, in his calling Christ a mere man, considered even in his state of

<sup>h</sup> Ὁ δὲ Κήρυθος τὸν μὲν Ἰησοῦν ἐξ Ἰωσήφ καὶ Μαρίας ἔφησε, γεννηθῆναι κατὰ κοινὸν τῶν ἀνθρώπων νόμον, ἄνωθεν δὲ τὸν Χριστὸν κατεληλυθῶτα ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰησοῦν. Ἐβιοναῖοι δὲ καὶ Θεοδοττιανοὶ, καὶ Ἀρτεμονιανοὶ, καὶ Φωτινιανοὶ ψιλὸν ἀνθρώπου εἰρήκασεν ἐκ τῆς παρθένου τὸν Χριστὸν γεγεννησθαι. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. v. cap. 11. p. 278.

<sup>i</sup> Bull. Judic. cap. iii. sect. i. p. 304.

<sup>k</sup> Epiphanius. Hæret. liv. p. 1.

<sup>l</sup> Οὗτος ἐν παιδείᾳ Ἑλληνικῇ ἄκρος γενόμενος, ἀμα δὲ ἄλλοις τῶν ἐν ἡμέραις

τοῦ τότε διωγμοῦ μόνος ἐκπεσὼν, μαρτυρησάντων ἐκείνων διὰ Θεοῦ. Damasceus. Heres. 54.

<sup>m</sup> Theodotus quidam, Byzantinus genere, denegator Christi Dei nostri in persecutione extitit Salvatoris; qui cepit dicere, docens ita: communis homo erat, ut omnes homines, Christus. Philastr. Hæret. 50.

Doctrinam introduxit, qua Christum hominem tantummodo diceret, Deum autem illum negaret. Pseudo-Tertulian. cap. liii.

exaltation, when he abjured him. Ebion would have called him God, so considered, as having been then deified, according to his way of thinking<sup>n</sup>. But Caius probably had no view to any such nicety of distinction, but intended only to say, that Theodotus was the founder of a new sect, called afterwards by his name, and teacher also of a new doctrine; new as to the circumstances and application, though, as to the main substance of it, borrowed from the Ebionites before him, or more particularly from the Alogi, a branch of the Ebionites<sup>o</sup>.

Having seen that Theodotus was an impugner of our Lord's Divinity, we are next to observe, that he was condemned immediately by the Church for it. He was excommunicated by Victor then Bishop of Rome, as an heresiarch: so the same Caius relates<sup>p</sup>. A sentence approved by the churches of Christ: otherwise Victor himself would have been condemned for it, as he was greatly blamed for misapplying the ecclesiastical censure in a case of another nature, relating to the time for keeping Easter. The churches and bishops of those times were exceeding watchful and jealous of any abuses of power in particular churches or men. They were as checks one upon another, that nothing of moment should be done by any, which had not the consent of the rest. This conduct obliged every one to observe the strictest caution in any affair of general concern, and it tended to keep up the exactest harmony and unanimity in the several churches. But I return.

Hippolytus of the third century takes notice, in passing, of this Theodotus, as a person that falsified the truth, and perverted Scripture, in order to countenance his erroneous doctrine about Christ's being a mere man<sup>q</sup>. He compares the heretic Noëtus with Theodotus, to make Noëtus the more odious for following such a leader in his manner of writing: so that it is plain enough what Hippolytus thought of Theodotus.

<sup>n</sup> See Hilary de Trin. lib. ii. n. 4. p. 789. Eriphan. Hæret. xxx. n. 18. p. 142.

<sup>o</sup> Θεοδότος τις, ἀπόσπασμα ὑπάρχων ἐκ τῆς προειρημένης Ἀλόγου αἰρέσεως. Eriphan. Hæret. liv.

<sup>p</sup> Βίκτηρ τὸν σκυτία Θεόδοτον, τὸν ἀρχηγὸν καὶ πατέρα ταύτης τῆς ἀρνησιθεοῦ ἀποστασίας ἀπεκήρυξε τῆς κοινωρίας—ἀπέβαλε Θεόδοτον τὸν τῆς αἰρέσεως ταύτης εὐρετήν. Euseb. lib. v.

cap. 28. Conf. Theodor. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 5.

<sup>q</sup> Καὶ ταῦτα βούλονται οὕτω διηγέσθαι καὶ αὐτοὺς μονόκωλα χρώμενοι, ὃν τρόπον Θεόδοτος ἄνθρωπον συνιστᾶν ψιλὸν βουλόμενος. ἀλλ' οὔτε ἐκείνοί τε νενοήκασιν ἀληθές, οὔθ' οὗτοι, καθὼς αὐταὶ αἱ γραφαὶ ἐλέγχουσιν αὐτῶν τὴν ἡμαθίαν, μαρτυροῦσαι τῇ ἀληθείᾳ. Hippol. contr. Noët. cap. iii. p. 7. Conf. Eriphan. Hæret. lvii. 2.

The same Theodotus is numbered also in the list of heretics <sup>r</sup> by the writer of the Appendix to Tertullian's book of Prescription. That Appendix is supposed by some <sup>s</sup> to be little else but an extract from our Hippolytus's Treatise against Heresies. However that be, the piece is ancient, and of good value <sup>t</sup>. Theodotus is there charged as a blasphemer against Christ, for denying him to be God, though he allowed his birth of a virgin. It was the God-denying heresy: and therein lay its essential malignity. Had he said that Christ was an angel, or an archangel, or the highest of all creatures, it would have been treating our Lord with something more of respect; but still it would have come infinitely short of his real dignity, and of the faith of the Church concerning him, from the beginning. This I observe, lest any favourer of Arianism should falsely surmise, that the censures passed upon Theodotus and such other impugnors of Christ's Divinity, do not affect those who make Christ a glorious creature, but those only who suppose him a mere man: whereas, in truth, Theodotus and the rest were condemned for the impugning Christ's proper and essential Divinity; a fault common to them and the Arians, so that both are concluded under the same censure.

I may further add, that the conduct of the Church, with respect to the Praxeans, Noëtians, and Sabellians, is a demonstration of the truth of what I say. Those men charged the Church as teaching three Gods <sup>u</sup>. Then would have been the time, and must have been, for the Church to declare, (had they ever meant it,) that the Father only is God, and the Son and Holy Ghost creatures. But they studiously and conscientiously avoided it, as one sees in Hippolytus and Tertullian, and others. And if any man uncautiously, in debate, happened but to let fall any expressions which seemed to lean that way, (as appeared in the famous case of Dionysius of Alexandria,) the Church of that time would not bear it, but rejected every thing of that kind with abhorrence. They distinguished themselves off from Sabel- alia præ cæteris, nisi sola justitiæ auctoritate. Pseudo-Tertullian. cap. liii.

<sup>r</sup> Accedit his Theodotus Byzantius, qui postea quam pro Christi nomine comprehensus negavit, in Christum blasphemare non destitit, doctrinam enim introduxit qua Christum hominem tantummodo diceret, Deum autem illum negaret: ex Spiritu quidem Sancto, natum ex Virgine, sed hominem solitarium atque nudum, nulla

<sup>s</sup> Allix, Fathers vindicated touching the Trinity, p. 99.

<sup>t</sup> Vid. Dodwell. Dissert. de Success. Pontif. p. 216.

<sup>u</sup> Tertullian. contr. Prax. cap. iii. Epiphan. Hær. lvii. 62.

lianism, but so as to avoid the other extreme, afterwards called Arianism: a plain sign and proof* that the proper Divinity of Christ was what they aimed to support. I may observe also by the way, that the Sabellian objection all along supposed and implied, that the Godhead of the Holy Ghost, as well as of the Son, was the then received doctrine. But I return.

There was another Theodotus, surnamed Trapezita, (the Banker,) who was a disciple of the former, and who endeavoured to refine upon his scheme, by the addition of some odd conceits concerning Melchizedec. I shall only observe further, that as from the elder Theodotus some were named Theodotians, so from the junior Theodotus others were called Melchizedecians $\gamma$ .

A. D. 205. ARTEMON.

Artemon, otherwise called Artemas, was a disciple of Theodotus, a reviver or promoter of the same heresy. He appears to have been a very warm man, and of vast assurance; or his followers, at least, were such. For they confidently gave it out, that their doctrine was as old as the Apostles<sup>z</sup>, and that the doctrine of Christ's Divinity began with Pope Zephyrin, that is, about A. D. 198. Such ignorance, if it was mere ignorance, was pitiable: but there is too much reason to suspect that they knew better. The nameless author in Eusebius (supposed to be Caius) well urges<sup>a</sup>, that besides the holy Scriptures, older than all, there were the works of Justin and Miltiades, of Tatian and Clemens, of Irenæus and Melito, and a great many more, defenders of Christ's Divinity, directly confronting their wild report, and plainly proving to the world, that it was mere fiction and romance, too improbable to be offered even to the lowest of the populace. And as to their pleading that Pope Victor, the immediate predecessor of Zephyrin, was on their side of the question, he confutes them at once, by observing, that Victor was the very person who had excommunicated Theodotus, their founder and leader, for that very doctrine which they espoused<sup>b</sup>. All I have further to observe of these confident men, is, that they were censured by the Church of their time, and not admitted * See this argument excellently drawn out by Mr. Thirlby, Def. of the Answ. p. 36, &c.

$\gamma$  Vid. Euseb. lib. v. cap. 28. Le Quien, Not. ad Damascen. Hæret. lxiv. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 6.

<sup>z</sup> Euseb. lib. v. cap. 28. Theodorit.

Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. cap. 4.

<sup>a</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. v. cap. 28.

<sup>b</sup> Ἦσαν δὲ οὗτοι ἄμφω Θεοδότου τοῦ σκυτέως μαθηταί, τοῦ πρώτου ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ φρονήσει, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀφροσύνη, ἀφορισθέντος τῆς κοινωρίας ὑπὸ Βίκτορος, ὡς ἔφη, τοῦ τότε ἐπισκόπου.

to communion among faithful Christians. That may reasonably be inferred from what Caius says, as before mentioned. But it appears further from what passed some years after, in the case of Paul of Samosata, when the Antiochian Fathers censured him for heresy, and sent him to seek communion, if he pleased, with the Artemonians<sup>c</sup>, whose sentiments he had taken into, and whose execrable heresy (so they call it<sup>d</sup>) he had revived. To which agrees what Athanasius says, speaking of the Arian heresy: This heresy, says he, was looked upon as detestable, before the Council of Nice, when Artemas advanced it<sup>e</sup>.

A. D. 242. BERYLLUS.

Beryllus, Bishop of Bostra in Arabia, has been reputed one of those that once denied the Divinity of Christ; and therefore Bishop Bull takes him in among the rest<sup>f</sup>. But yet strictly speaking, the charge against him was not that he denied the Divinity of Christ, but his proper Divinity: by which I understand his personal Divinity, or divine personality. For Beryllus's notion was, that the man Christ Jesus was the whole person, a mere human person, which had indeed a divine Person residing in him, viz. the person of the Father. So Beryllus's doctrine was a kind of Sabellianism; which however, in strictness, amounts to a denial of Christ's Divinity. For while it allows him no distinct divine personality, all that remains is, the man Christ with the Father indwelling; which at length resolves into the same doctrine, in the main, with what Cerinthus, Ebion, Theodotus, and Artemon taught as to the proper person of Jesus. It is denying his divine Sonship, and divine personality, which, in effect, is denying his proper Divinity. I the rather note this, because from hence it may appear, that the Church's condemning Praxeas, Noëtus, and Sabellius, as guilty of heresy, proceeded from the same pious zeal for the Divinity of Christ, as their condemnation of Cerinthus, Ebion, &c. before: for both were intended to preserve that important article, and to secure the baptismal faith in a real and divine Trinity. Tertullian was sharp enough to see, that the Praxean doctrine, under colour of βδελυκτὴ, ὅτε ταύτην Ἀρτεμᾶς κατεβάλλετο. Athanas. de Synod. p. 733. edit. Bened.

<sup>c</sup> Τῷ δὲ Ἀρτεμᾷ οὗτος ἐπιστελλέτω· καὶ οἱ τὰ Ἀρτεμᾷ φρονούντες, τούτω κοινωνεῖτωσαν. Euseb. H. E. lib. vii. c. 30.

<sup>d</sup> Τῇ μαρᾷ αἰρέσει τῇ Ἀρτεμᾷ. Euseb. ibid.

<sup>e</sup> Πρὸ τῆς Νικαίας, ἡ αἵρεσις ἦν

<sup>f</sup> Bull. Judic. c. ii. p. 305.

<sup>g</sup> Μηδὲ μὲν θεότητα ἰδίαν ἔχειν. Euseb. E. H. lib. vi. c. 33.

magnifying Christ, by advancing him into the same personality with the Father, in reality left no distinct Son at all, more than the man Jesus, and so fell in with Valentinus's notion, (he might have said, Cerinthus's also,) which separated Jesus from Christ, dividing them into two persons<sup>h</sup>. All the difference is, that Cerinthus or Valentinus supposed the Christ from above to be some Æon, or inferior power, residing occasionally with the man Jesus; while the Praxeans substituted God the Father instead of that supposed Æon, making him the Christ from above, conceived to inhabit at times the same man Jesus. Which as it comes very near the old Ebionite notion, so is it exactly the same with what several of the foreign Socinians, and most of our English ones, have maintained in late times. Indeed, the Praxeans were charged as Patripassians, which is a charge that does not affect the modern Socinians: but I apprehend, from the passage of Tertullian just cited, that the Praxeans, to get off from Patripassianism, learned at length to divide the Persons of Father and Son, and then the Father could be considered only as inhabiting Jesus, a mere man, and a distinct person from him. Sabellianism, and Photinianism, and Socinianism, do in reality come at length into one; all resolving into Judaism: for the fundamental error of them all is, the denying the divine Sonship and personal Divinity of Christ; rejecting the eternal substantial Logos, who was with the Father before the world was, and is God from everlasting to everlasting. I say then, that the zeal shewn by the ancient Church against the Sabellians of all denominations, (as well as their zeal against the more direct impugners of Christ's Divinity;) is a very strong argument of their judging the doctrine of a coeternal Trinity to be an essential of the Gospel. They intended much the same thing by animadverting upon those or these; for they saw plainly, that the Divinity of Christ, considered as a real Person, was as much undermined by Sabellianism, as it was attacked by the other. Many and various have been the ways of evading and eluding these two contendunt Patrem et Filium, jam incipiunt dividere illos potius quam unare. Si enim alius est Jesus, alius Christus, alius erit Filius, alius Pater; quia Filius Jesus, et Pater Christus. Talem monarchiam apud Valentinum fortasse didicerunt, duos facere Jesus et Christum. Tertull. adv. Prax. c. 27.

<sup>h</sup> Undique enim obducti distinctione Patris et Filii—aliter eam ad suam nihilominus sententiam interpretari conantur: ut æque in una Persona utrumque distinguant Patrem et Filium; dicentes Filium carnem esse, id est hominem, id est Jesus; Patrem autem Spiritum, id est Deum, id est Christum. Et qui unum eundemque

prime verities, viz. that three real Persons are one God, and that God and man is one Christ: but watchful and honest Christians still kept their eyes fixed upon those sacred truths, and would never admit any doctrine as true, which was contrary to them, or as sufficient, that was short of them. If any one denied Christ's humanity, (as the Docetæ, or Phantasiastæ,) that was manifestly false doctrine, to be rejected at once: but if another admitted his humanity, and stopped there, that was short and insufficient. If it was added, (as by Cerinthus,) that a celestial substance or spirit rested sometimes upon Jesus, that was true, but still short of the whole truth in more respects than one. If it were said, constantly residing, that was better, but still very insufficient. If to that were added, personally united, that came nearer up to the full truth, but still was evasive and short. Say, divine substance personally united with the human: that comes nearer to the point than any of the former; but still there is room for evasion, because it might mean the Father; and then it amounts to Sabellianism only, and Patripassianism. Add, therefore, that such divine substance is personally distinct from the Father and the Holy Spirit, and then it is confessing three real and divine Persons in one Godhead, which is the whole truth. The several kinds of heresies which have affected this Scripture truth, are but the various wanderings of human imagination. Truth is simple and uniform, while error is almost infinite. But I return to Beryllus.

The error which Beryllus unhappily split upon, was the denying a real distinction of divine Persons, as I before observed; which in direct consequence made Christ Jesus a mere man, in whom the Father dwelt. The bishops of the neighbouring sees were alarmed at the doctrine, and met in Synod to condemn the heresy, and the teacher of it. But the great Origen being called in to debate and clear the point in question, Beryllus was made sensible of his error, and being a person of a pious and an humble mind, he honestly retracted it<sup>i</sup>: and it is further to be observed, that he loved his instructor Origen ever after, and was sincerely thankful to him<sup>k</sup> for affording him so much new light (new to him) in a question of the greatest importance. A rare example of godly sincerity, and true Christian humility. His mistake had shewn some weakness of judgment; but his recovery manifested great strength of mind, and a good command over himself and his own passions.

<sup>i</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. vi. c. 33. edit. Fabric.

<sup>k</sup> Hieronym. Eccles. Script. lxx. p. 138.

A. D. 265. PAUL of Samosata.

Paul of Samosata, Bishop of Antioch, was of a temper and character very different from what we have mentioned in the last article: he gave the churches fresh occasion for exerting their pious zeal in behalf of our Lord's Divinity. He was impeached for heresy in a council of Antioch, A. D. 265, and distinguished himself off at that time, and escaped without censure; but in another council, A. D. 270, he was again accused, and convicted, and thereupon deposed. He is charged by the council which condemned him, with reviving the heresy of Artemon, with denying his Lord and God, with disowning any Son of God from heaven, preaching up a detestable heresy, a dammable doctrine, and the like<sup>1</sup>. The sum of his heresy, upon comparing the best accounts, appears to be this: that there is but one real Person in the Godhead, viz. the Father<sup>m</sup>; that the Logos is a mere attribute, quality, power, or operation, nothing real and substantial<sup>p</sup>; and that Christ, as it follows of consequence, is a mere man<sup>o</sup>. His scheme appears to have been, in substance, little different from the Sabellian<sup>p</sup>: but the stress of the charge against him rested upon this, that he had denied his Lord's Divinity; and therefore his heresy was called, like Theodotus's and Artemon's before, the God-denying wickedness<sup>q</sup>.

A. D. 317. ARIUS.

I cannot well conclude this view of Antiquity, with respect to the heresies against Christ's Divinity, without throwing in a word or two about the famous Arius, and his condemnation for proclaiming God the Son a creature, therein denying his Lord's real and proper Divinity, as much as any before him. Alexander, then Bishop of Alexandria, in his Epistle to the other Alexander of Byzantium or Constantinople, (about A. D. 321,) charges the Arians with denying their Saviour's Divinity<sup>r</sup>, and with

<sup>1</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. vii. c. 30.

<sup>m</sup> Vid. Athanas. contr. Apollinar. p. 942. Epiphani. Hær. lxxv. i. 3.

<sup>n</sup> Epiphani. Hær. lxxv. i. Philastr. lxxiv. p. 126.

<sup>o</sup> Euseb. E. H. lib. vii. c. 27. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. p. 223. Augustin. Hær. 44. Damascen. Hæres. lxxv.

<sup>p</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. Query xxiii. p. 479. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 718. Dr. Berriman's Historical Account, p. 144, &c.

<sup>q</sup> Ἀρρησιθεός κακία. Euseb. lib. vii. c. 29.

<sup>r</sup> Theodorit. Eccles. Hist. cap. iv. p. 9. edit. Vales.

reviving the heresy of Ebion, Artemon, and Paul of Samosata<sup>s</sup>. Not that the Arian scheme was exactly the same with any of those three, (for there are degrees of variation from truth, and many wrong ways to one right,) but it fell in with them all in the main thing, and in which the principal malignity of their heresies consisted, namely, in the rejecting the true Godhead of Christ. I shall say nothing of the synodical censures passed upon Arius and his adherents, at the first opening of the heresy. In the year 325 he was condemned, in more solemn form, by the famous Council of Nice, by three hundred and eighteen bishops called from all parts of the Christian world, seventeen only of the number scrupling it for a time, and at last two only or three dissenting. They condemned his sentiments, as amounting to impiety, madness, blasphemy, such as they almost trembled to heart<sup>t</sup>; which appears by the Council's letter after his condemnation. Their sentence in that cause carried the greater weight in it, as the Council was general, called together out of Europe, Asia, and Africa, from all parts of the empire<sup>u</sup>; as it was upon the matter free, and under no secular awe or influences; and lastly, as it was made up of the wisest, worthiest, and every way excellent prelates<sup>x</sup> which the Christian world could then furnish. The determination of so venerable a council gave a considerable check to Arianism, and always carried great force with it; though it did not so quash the controversy as finally to put an end to it, any more than the Council of the Apostles at Jerusalem<sup>y</sup> (A. D. 49.) put an end to the dispute about the necessity of imposing circumcision<sup>z</sup>. But as that first council had its use in the Church, and very great use, notwithstanding the repeated oppositions made to it, so had this other also, and has to this day. Divine wisdom has appointed no certain effective remedies for the perverseness of man, but has provided sufficient means for the instruction and direction of the humble and modest, and well designing.

Some persons have suggested, that the Council of Ariminum (held in 359,) consisting of four hundred bishops or more<sup>a</sup>, may

<sup>s</sup> Theodorit. ibid. p. 14.

<sup>t</sup> Ἄπαντα ἀναθεμάτισεν ἡ ἀγία σύνοδος, οὐδὲ ὄσον ἀκοῦσαι τῆς ἀσεβοῦς δόξης, ἢ ἀπονοίας, καὶ τῶν βλασφημῶν ῥημάτων ἀνασχομένη. Apud Socr. lib. i. c. 9.

<sup>u</sup> Euseb. de Vit. Constantin. lib. iii. c. 7.

<sup>x</sup> Ibid. lib. iii. c. 9.

<sup>y</sup> Acts xv.

<sup>z</sup> See Buddæus, Eccl. Apost. p. 114, 294, &c.

<sup>a</sup> Athanas. de Synod. 720, 740. Sulpic. Sever. p. 267. Socr. E. H. lib. iv. c. 17.

properly be mentioned on the other side, as a counterbalance to the Council of Nice: but there is no comparison betwixt them, when the circumstances are duly considered. For, 1. the Council of Rimini, or Ariminum, was not general, being of the west only. 2. It was not free, being greatly menaced, distressed, and overawed by the Emperor Constantius<sup>b</sup>. 3. Out of the number of four hundred, there were but eighty Arians<sup>c</sup>, at the utmost: the other three hundred and twenty, or more, were really orthodox men, induced by artifices to subscribe a creed which they understood in a good sense<sup>d</sup>, but which, being worded in general terms, was capable of being perverted to a bad one. The deep dissimulation, at that time used by the Arian managers, procured them the advantage only of a short-lived triumph. For no sooner did the orthodox side perceive how they had been imposed upon, and what use was to be made of it, but they declared to the world their own good meaning, and the perfidiousness of the opposite party. But of this I have treated more largely elsewhere<sup>e</sup>. It was of that time that St. Jerome speaks, when he pleasantly says, that the “whole Christian world “groaned,” (viz. under the slander thrown upon them by their adversaries,) “and wondered to see itself become all over “Arianf:” that is to say, they wondered at the assurance of the Arians, in so imposing upon the Catholics, and in representing them to be the very reverse of what they were<sup>g</sup>. The learned Mr. Bingham understood these matters well, and has expressed them justly and fully in these few lines<sup>h</sup>. “The “Arians put an equivocal and poisonous sense upon them, (the words of the Council,) giving out, after the Council was ended, “that they had not only abolished the word consubstantial, but “with it condemned the Nicene faith also: which was strange

<sup>b</sup> Athanas. ad Afros, 892, 893. Socrat. E. H. lib. ii. c. 37. Sozom. lib. iv. c. 19. Hilar. Pictav. 1242. ed. Bened.

<sup>c</sup> Ariani non amplius quam octoginta: reliqui nostrarum partium erant. Sulpic. Sever. lib. ii. c. 56.

<sup>d</sup> Sonabant verba pietatem, et inter tanta mella præconii, nemo venenum insertum putabat. Hieron. contr. Lucifer.

<sup>e</sup> See my Defence, vol. i. Query xxix. p. 547, 548. Answer to Whitby, vol. ii. p. 212. Compare Berriman's Histor. Account, p. 228, &c.

<sup>f</sup> Ingenuit totus orbis, et Arrianum se esse miratus est. Hieronym. contr. Lucifer. p. 300.

<sup>g</sup> Concurrerant Episcopi, qui Ariminensibus dolis irretiti, sine conscientia hæretici ferebantur, contestantes corpus Domini, et quicquid in Ecclesia sanctum est, se nihil mali in sua fide suspicatos. Hieron. ibid. 301.

<sup>h</sup> Bingham's Antiquities, b. vi. ch. 3. s. 10. Compare Dr. Berriman, Hist. Acc. p. 228, &c.

“surprising news to the bishops that had been at Ariminum. “Then says St. Jerome, Ingemuit totus orbis, et Arianum se esse miratus est: The whole world groaned, and was amazed to think she should be reputed Arian. That is, the Catholic bishops of the whole world (for there were three hundred<sup>i</sup> of them present at the Council) were amazed to find themselves so abused, and represented as Arian, when they never intended “in the least to confirm the Arian doctrine.” But as to the extent of the Nicene faith, both at that time and after, I have spoken more particularly of it in another place<sup>k</sup>, and need not here repeat. Only the reader may permit me to sum up the whole in the same words, or nearly as before. “There never “was a council on the Arian side so free, so large, so in every “respect unexceptionable, as the Council of Nice was: but whatever opposition was made to it, was carried on with such “wiles and subtleties and refined artifices, (to say nothing of “cruelities.) as every honest man would be ashamed of: and notwithstanding all that the Arians could do, they were not able “long to maintain their ground; but the men who sustained “the shock, and kept up the credit of the Nicene faith, were not “only the most numerous, but appear to have been as wise, and “as judicious, and as pious men as ever the Church was adorned “with since the times of the Apostles<sup>l</sup>.”

From what hath been said under the present article, it is manifest, that the impugnors of our Lord's Divinity have been all along condemned as guilty of heresy for the first three centuries and more; so that as far as the constant judgment and practice of the Church in their decrees and censures, during that time, can be conceived to bear weight, the doctrine of our Lord's true and proper Divinity, and of consequence, the doctrine of a real <sup>i</sup> He might have said, three hundred and twenty. But I believe Jerome meant more than that three hundred and twenty by the totus orbis: he meant all the orthodox; for all of them suffered in the slander raised against their brethren, most of them as orthodox as themselves: so it affected them all, and all were amazed at the injurious aspersion. This place therefore of Jerome, rightly understood, is so far from saying, that the whole world was then Arian, that it is saying the contrary; namely, that the whole world was Anti-arian: for by totus orbis he manifestly there means the orthodox, who had been slandered as Arian, and were really Anti-arian. They were the whole world in his account, the Arians being but few in comparison.

<sup>k</sup> Defence, vol. i. Query xxix. p. 547—550.

<sup>l</sup> See this Council defended more at large by Dr. Berriman, in his Remarks on Mr. Chandler, p. 19—42. and in his Review of the Remarks, p. 28—41.

and coeternal Trinity, must be looked upon as a fundamental of the Christian faith.

III. Besides what has been pleaded upon the first topic relating to creeds, and upon the second relating to heretics; there is yet a third head to go upon, namely, the sentiments of Ante-Nicene Fathers, such as they have occasionally delivered in their writings, distinct from what they have reported either of creeds or heresies. And these are what I am next going to produce, according to order of time, to shew what they thought of the necessity or importance of faith in the ever blessed Trinity. Perhaps I may have anticipated some things under the last head, which might properly have come in here; or I may chance to take some things in here, which might properly have come in there: but it is of no great moment which head they are brought under, so long as both centre in the same conclusion, and the two parts may be considered as supplemental to each other.

107. IGNATIUS.

I begin with Ignatius, who writes thus: "Be not led aside by strange doctrines, nor by antiquated tales, which are unprofitable: for if we yet live according to Judaism, it is as much as declaring that we have not accepted grace<sup>m</sup>; for the most holy Prophets lived according to Christ Jesus. And for that cause were they persecuted, being inspired by his grace, that the unbelievers might be convinced that there is one God who hath manifested himself by Jesus Christ his Son, who is his eternal Word, not proceeding from silence<sup>n</sup>, who in all things pleased him that sent him." The Judaizing heretics (whether Cerinthians, or Ebionites, or Gnostics at large) are the persons here pointed at without dispute<sup>o</sup>: and the Judaism here principally charged was, their denial of Christ's real and eternal Divinity. The Jews would not own a proper Son of God<sup>p</sup>, an eternal subsisting Logos, but pertinaciously disputed

<sup>m</sup> Εἰ γὰρ μέχρι νῦν κατὰ [νόμον] Ἰουδαϊσμὸν ζῶμεν, ὁμολογοῦμεν χάριν μὴ εἰληφέναι. Ignat. ad Magnes. s. 8.

<sup>n</sup> Τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ ὃς ἐστὶν αὐτοῦ Λόγος αἰδῖος, οὐκ ἀπὸ σιγῆς προελθὼν. Ibid.

<sup>o</sup> Hæc est secunda hujus Epistolæ pars, quæ eos maxime præmunit contra hereticos, eos præcipue qui Judaismum introducere conabantur; contra quos clare et expresse disputat. Erant autem ii ea tempestate, qui divinam Christi naturam negabant, ut Ebionitæ, Cerinthiani, Nazaræi, et Helxaitæ. Pearson not. in loc. p. 43. Conf. Vindic. p. 55.

<sup>p</sup> Ἰουδαῖος δὲ οὐκ ἂν ὁμολογήσαι, ὅτι προφήτης τις εἶπεν ἤξειν Θεοῦ υἱόν. Origen. contr. cels. lib. i. p. 38.

Οὐ πάντι Ἰουδαῖοι λέγουσι Θεὸν that point with the Christians; as may appear sufficiently, besides other evidences, from Justin's celebrated Dialogue with Trypho. So here we may observe, how emphatically Ignatius expresses the Christian faith in opposition to those Judaizers, by asserting Christ to be God's Son, and his eternal Word, not proceeding from silence, as those Judaizers taught. I forbear to enter into the dispute about σὴν, which has been already exhausted by Bishop Pearson, Bishop Bull, and other learned men. What I am most concerned to observe is, that Judaism was the common and just reproach thrown upon all the impugners or underminers of Christ's Divinity: for that was part of the distinguishing character of the Christian faith, as opposed to the Jewish, in those days<sup>q</sup>. As to Cerinthus and Ebion, the early impugners of Christ's Divinity, it is well known that they were Judaizers, and brought their heresy along with them, transplanting it from the Synagogue to the Church. Those that followed them in their heresy were judged so far to desert the Christian cause, and to side with the Jews. Tertullian, though directly pointing to Praxeas, yet makes the charge general against all that deny a real and divine Trinity<sup>r</sup>. Novatian passes the like censure upon as many as denied Christ's Divinity<sup>s</sup>. Theodotus, though a Gentile Christian, is charged with Jewish blindness upon the same score<sup>t</sup>. Paul of Samosata is observed to have given up Christ's Divinity in complaisance to Jews<sup>u</sup>. And the Arians afterwards, on the same account, are frequently censured by orthodox Christians, as revivers of Judaism<sup>x</sup>.

I now return to Ignatius, who, after charging those impugners of Christ's Divinity with Judaism, intimates their thereby forὄντα τὸν Χριστὸν καταβήσεσθαι ἢ Θεοῦ υἱόν. Ibid. lib. iv. p. 162.

Ἐγὼ δὲ καὶ πολλοῖς Ἰουδαίοις καὶ σοφοῖς γε ἐπαγγελλομένοις εἶναι συμβαλῶν, οὐδενὸς ἀκήκοα ἐπαινοῦτος τὸ, Λόγον εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὡς ὁ Κέλσος εἶρηκε. Ibid. c. 2. p. 79.

<sup>q</sup> I say, in those days. For that the ancients Jews were generally in like sentiments, is not probable, but the contrary. Of which see Allix's Judgment of the Jewish Church; and Considerations on Mr. Whiston's Historical Preface, p. 75, &c. and Primitive Christianity vindicated, p. 17, &c. and Stillingfleet on the Trinity, c. ix. p. 203, &c.

<sup>r</sup> Judaicae fidei est res, sic unum

Deum credere, ut Filium adnumerare ei nolis, et post Filium Spiritum—Pater et Filius et Spiritus unum Deum sistunt. Tertull. adv. Prax. c. 31.

<sup>s</sup> Ignari et imperiti Judæi hæredes sibi hæreticos istos reddiderunt. Novat. c. 15. ed. Welchm. alias c. 23.

<sup>t</sup> Cæcitatibus Judaicæ consors. Philastr. Hær. 1. Conf. Epiphani. Hær. liv. lv.

<sup>u</sup> Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. ii. c. 8. Athanas. vol. i. p. 386. Epiphani. Hær. lxxv. 2, 7. Philastr. Hær. lxxv.

<sup>x</sup> Athanas. de Decret. Synod. N. p. 209, 233. Orat. ii. 484. Basil. Homil. xxiv. tom. ii. p. 189. edit. Bened. Greg. Nyssen. contr. Eunom. Orat. i. p. 15.

feiting the grace of the Gospel. Then he proceeds to lay down the true Christian doctrine of a Son of God, an eternal Word, not produced in time, or from silence. And since he asserts that the denial of that doctrine is Judaizing, and is renouncing the grace of the Gospel, it amounts to declaring that the article of Christ's Divinity is an essential of Christianity.

A. D. 155. JUSTIN MARTYR.

Justin Martyr, in a Fragment produced by Dr. Grabe, lays a very particular stress upon the article of Christ's Divinity, as the reconciliation of God and man is nearly concerned in it. The passage runs thus: "When man's nature had contracted corruption, it was necessary that he who would save it, should do away the principle of corruption. But this could not be done without uniting life by nature [or essential life] with the nature so corrupted, to do away the corruption and to immortalize the corrupt nature ever after. Wherefore it was meet that the Word should become incarnate to deliver us from the death of natural corruption<sup>z</sup>."

Here Justin asserts, that it was necessary for essential life (or life by nature) to be united with human nature, in order to save it: which is the same as to say, that it was necessary for God to become incarnate, in order to save lost man. So important did he take that article to be, conceiving that the redemption of mankind depended upon it. The phrase of life by nature, undoubtedly imports necessary existence and proper Divinity, as I have observed and proved upon another occasion<sup>a</sup>, and need not here do again. Bishop Bull brings some other passages from Justin of like import with this: but for brevity sake I choose to pass them over, and am content only to refer<sup>b</sup>.

<sup>y</sup> Simplicissima et optima sententia videtur, quod Ignatius, contra omnes veteres hæreticos Filii æternitatem negantes, asseruerit Christum non esse instar humani Verbi quod post silentium prodit, sed Verbum Patri coæternum. Ittigius, Histor. Eccl. Sæc. ii. p. 118.

<sup>z</sup> Φύσει δὲ τῆς φθορᾶς προσγενομένου, ἀναγκαῖον ἦν ὅτι σώσαι βουλόμενος ἢ τὴν φθοροποιὸν οὐσίαν ἀφανίσας· τοῦτο δὲ οὐκ ἦν ἑτέρως γενέσθαι, εἰ μήπερ ἢ κατὰ φύσιν ζωὴ προσεπλάκη

τῷ τὴν φθορὰν δεξαμένη, ἀφανίζουσα μὲν τὴν φθορὰν, ἀθανατὸν δὲ τοῦ λοιποῦ τὸ δεξάμενον διατηροῦσα. διὰ τοῦτο τὸν Λόγον ἐδέησεν ἐν σώματι γενέσθαι, ἵνα τοῦ θανάτου τῆς κατὰ φύσιν ἡμᾶς φθορᾶς ἐλευθερώσῃ. Grabe, Spicileg. vol. ii. p. 172. Et in notis ad Bull. Judic. c. vii. s. 5. p. 344.

<sup>a</sup> Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 579. Compare Third Defence, p. 81. of this volume.

<sup>b</sup> Bull. Judic. c. vii. s. 5. p. 344. 345.

A. D. 176. IRENÆUS.

Irenæus has said much the same thing with Justin, in fuller and stronger words. After observing that the Son of God and Word of the Father became man, that he might give salvation to his own creature, or workmanship<sup>c</sup>, he proceeds as follows: "Therefore, as I said before, he united man to God: for if it were not man that should overcome the adversary of man, the enemy would not have been rightly vanquished; and again, if it were not God to give the salvation, we could not be firmly possessed of it: besides, if man had not been united to God, he could never have been partaker of incorruption. So it was meet that a Mediator between God and man should bring both together into amity and concord by his own proximity to both; that so he might present man to God, and notify God to men<sup>d</sup>." What we have here to observe is, that if Irenæus believed it necessary for God to become man, in order to work man's salvation, he must of consequence judge the article of Christ's Divinity (in his high sense of Divinity) an essential of Christian faith, necessary to be believed by all to whom it should be revealed, under pain of forfeiting the benefit of it. Irenæus's constant way of reasoning in other places shews that he always carried that conclusion in his mind: and indeed he goes but one page further on, before he formally draws it, in these strong and emphatical words<sup>e</sup>: "They who make [Jesus] a mere man begotten of Joseph, remaining under the bondage of the first disobedience, are in a dead state, inasmuch as they are not yet conjoined συναγαγεῖν, καὶ Θεῷ μὲν παραστήσαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον, ἀνθρώποις δὲ γνωρίσαι τὸν Θεόν. Irenæus, ibid.

<sup>c</sup> Bonus vere Filius Dei et patiens, Verbum Dei Patris, Filius hominis factus.—Salutem donavit plasmati suo, destruens peccatum: est enim piissimus et misericors Dominus, et amans humanum genus. Iren. lib. iii. c. 18, alias 20.

<sup>d</sup> Ἦνωσεν οὖν, καθὼς προέφαμεν, τὸν ἄνθρωπον τῷ Θεῷ. εἰ γὰρ μὴ ἄνθρωπος ἐνίκησεν τὸν ἀντίπαλον τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, οὐκ ἂν δικαίως ἐνίκηθη ὁ ἐχθρὸς· πάλιν τε, εἰ μὴ ὁ Θεὸς ἔδωρησατο τὴν σωτηρίαν, οὐκ ἂν βεβαίως ἔσχομεν αὐτήν. καὶ εἰ μὴ συνηνώθη ὁ ἄνθρωπος τῷ Θεῷ, οὐκ ἂν ἠδυνήθη μετασχεῖν ἀφθαρσίας· ἔδει γὰρ τὸν μεσίτην Θεοῦ τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων, διὰ τῆς ἰδίας πρὸς ἑκατέρους, οἰκειότητος, εἰς φιλίαν καὶ ὁμόνοιαν τοὺς ἀμφοτέρους

<sup>e</sup> Qui nude tantum hominem eum dicunt ex Joseph generatum, perseverantes in servitute pristinae inobedientiae, moriuntur; nondum commixti Verbo Dei Patris, neque per Filium recipientes libertatem, quemadmodum ipse ait: Si Filius vos manumiserit, vere liberi eritis. Ignorantes autem eum qui ex Virgine est Emmanuel, privantur munere ejus, quod est vita æterna: non recipientes autem Verbum incorruptionis, perseverant in carne mortali; et sunt debitores mortis, antidotum vitæ non accipientes. Iren. lib. iii. c. 19, alias c. 21.

“ with the Word of God the Father, nor have received freedom “ by the Son : according to what himself says : If the Son shall “ make you free, you shall be free indeed†. While they acknow- “ ledge not him who of the Virgin is Emmanuel, [God with us,] “ they forfeit the benefit of it, which is life eternal. While they “ admit not the Word of incorruption, they continue in mortal “ flesh, and are bound over to death, for want of receiving the “ antidote of life.” This excellent writer has a great deal more to the same purpose in the same chapter : but what I have cited may suffice for a summary view of his sentiments on this head. It is observable, that, according to him, the not receiving the Emmanuel, as Emmanuel, that is, as God incarnate, is in effect throwing up the privileges of it, (viz. life eternal,) and is remaining under the dominion of death and hell. Nothing can be stronger for the importance of the article of Christ’s Divinity ; especially if this passage be compared with the author’s high and just sense of the name Emmanuel, importing that Christ is substantially, or essentially, God in one nature, as he is man in another‡. I know not whether I again need to take notice (having twice before done it<sup>b</sup>) how Irenæus here mixes the two questions about the birth of a virgin, and about the Lord’s Divinity, as amounting to one, upon the foot of the then present controversies. For the point then in question was, whether Christ was conceived in the common way of human generation, or whether the divine Logos coming upon the Virgin superseded and excluded human means ? The question being so stated, the asserting a divine Logos in Christ was of course asserting the birth of a virgin ; as the denying the birth of a virgin was of course denying any personal union of the Logos with man. Thus the two questions at that time resolved, in a manner, into one : which is the reason, as I hinted before, of their being intermingled together.

A. D. 177. ATHENAGORAS.

Athenagoras, in his Apology for the Christian Religion, written † John viii. 36.

‡ Diligenter igitur significavit Spiritus Sanctus per ea quæ dicta sunt, generationem ejus quæ est ex Virgine, et substantiam quoniam Deus (Emmanuel enim nomen hoc significat) et manifestat quoniam homo, in eo quod dicit, &c. Iren. lib. iii. c. 21, alias 26.

Οἰτὸν ἐκτῆς παρθένου Ἐμμανουὴλ κηρύττοντες, τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Λόγου τοῦ Θεοῦ πρὸς τὸ πλάσμα αὐτοῦ ἐδήλου· quoniam Verbum caro erit, et Filius Dei Filius hominis—et hoc factus quod et nos, Deus fortis est, et inenarrabile habet genus. Iren. lib. iv. c. 33, alias 66.

<sup>b</sup> See above, p. 572, 573.

at this time<sup>l</sup>, has more passages than one<sup>k</sup> which plainly prove his belief of the truth of the doctrine of the Trinity: but as to the necessity, or the importance of such faith, he had the less occasion to speak particularly, or to press it with any earnestness, since his immediate concern was not with heretics, or with Jews, but with Pagans only. Nevertheless, he occasionally drops some expressions which intimate his high veneration for that sublime and tremendous doctrine, and shew how much it concerned Christians to make it the subject of their most serious thoughts and most devout meditations. Speaking of Christians, he describes them<sup>l</sup> “as men that made small account of the present life, but were intent only upon contemplating God<sup>m</sup>, and “knowing his Word who is from him; what union the Son has “with the Father, what communion the Father has with the Son; “what the Spirit is, and what the union and distinction are of “such so united, the Spirit, the Son, and the Father.” From hence we may infer how important a doctrine that of the Trinity, as understood by Athenagoras, (the same as we understand at this day,) was conceived to be, that the then Christians made it one principal concern of their lives to contemplate and adore the three divine Persons. I say, adore: for though that is not expressed in this passage, it is undoubtedly implied, and is the express doctrine of the author in other places<sup>n</sup>. Thus much we may undoubtedly collect from the present passage, that mysteries of faith were not then thought barren speculations, or matters of slight concernment. The reflection of a learned foreigner hereupon is very just and proper, and I shall give it the reader in the margin<sup>o</sup>, as an useful comment upon this paragraph of Athenagoras. I proceed to other ecclesiastical writers in their order.

<sup>l</sup> See Mosheim, Observ. Sacr. c. iv.

<sup>k</sup> Vid. Bull. Defens. F. N. sect. ii. c. 4. p. 67, alias 71. Dr. Bishop's Sermons, p. 186, &c. Nourrii Appar. ad Bibl. Max. vol. i. p. 487, &c. My Sermons, vol. ii. p. 178. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 439—443, 580, &c.

<sup>l</sup> Ἀνθρώποι δὲ, τὸν μὲν ἐν ταῦθα εὐλογουκαὶ μικροῦ τινοῦ ἀξιολογισμένοι, ὑπὸ μόνου δὲ παραπεμπόμενοι τοῦτου, ὃν ἰσως [forte νοήσασθαι] Θεὸν καὶ τὸν πατρὸς πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν κοινωνία, τί τὸ πνεῦμα, τίς ἡ τῶν τσοσούτων ἐνωσις καὶ διαίρεσις ἐνουμένων, τοῦ πνεύματος, τοῦ παιδὸς, τοῦ πατρὸς. Athenag. Legal.

lib. xi. p. 46. edit. Oxon.

<sup>m</sup> Νοήσασθαι, for ὃν ἰσως, is an emendation of a learned foreigner, Godfr. Olcarius, in his Dissertat. Theolog. de Spiritu Sanct. cum Patre et Filio Adoratione, contr. Gul. Whiston, A. D. 1711. p. 2. The emendation has been taken notice of before by Dr. Bishop, Sermons, p. 188.

<sup>n</sup> Athenag. c. x. p. 40. xxvi. p. 122.

<sup>o</sup> Quamquam in primis Christianismi temporibus id cum primis gloriæ sibi duxerint fidei nostræ sanctissimæ professores, quod non mediatione verborum, sed demonstrationem et institutionem operum Christianam rem absolvi profiterentur; non tamen

A. D. 209. TERTULLIAN.

Tertullian has some very remarkable expressions relating to the faith of the Church in Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, one God, as being the sum and substance of the Gospel, the very life and spirit of the Christian religion. I have cited part of the passage before, but shall now give it entire. "It is mere Judaism, to "believe one God in such a sense as not to reckon the Son to "him, and after the Son, the Spirit: for wherein is the great "difference between them and us, except it be in this article? "What is it that the Gospel has done, what is the substance of "the New Testament, extending the Law and the Prophets as "far as John, if from thence forwards Father, Son, and Holy "Ghost, three Persons, are not believed to make one God?" I have taken a little liberty in translating, just enough to keep the English up, and not to alter the sense. Three Persons is barely a literal rendering of tres, in that place, which cannot be otherwise so well expressed in English: besides, the word Persona, for the same thing, is common in Tertullian<sup>9</sup>. As to what concerns the importance of the doctrine of the Trinity, it is impossible to invent any thing fuller or stronger, in so few words, than this passage. I am sensible it will be pleaded in bar to his evidence, that he was a Montanist. The fact is true, but there is no argument at all in it, as has been often shewn by learned men; but more particularly by the learned and judicious Mr. Welchman<sup>r</sup>, in his late very correct edition of the treatise against Praxeas. Tertullian was no Montanist in 198: but it has been sufficiently proved, both by Mr. Welchman and Mosheim, that ista praxis sacra ita fuit a theoria doctrinæ Christianæ separata, ut non mysteria etiam fidei, a quorum recta cognitione divini Numinis cultus, tum vite de reliquo recte instituendæ ratio penderent, non temere quidem, sed neque tamen perfunctorie scrutarentur—Etenim qui in primis Christianismi initiis, inque ipso adeo φωτισμῷ suo, accepissent fidem in Patrem, Filium, et Spiritum Sanctum, eaque nomina perpetuo in ore haberent, eos sane oportebat eo contendere, ut crescerent in omni plenitudine scientiæ de mysterio tam augusto tamque venerando. Godfr. Olear. in Dissertat. p. 1, 2.

<sup>p</sup> Caterum Judaicæ fidei est res,

sic unum Deum credere ut Filium adnumerare ei nolis, et post Filium, Spiritum. Quid enim inter nos et illos, nisi differentia ista? Quod opus Evangelii? Quæ est substantia Novi Testamenti statuens Legem et Prophetas usque ad Johannem, si non exinde Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus, tres crediti, unum Deum sistunt? Tertull. adv. Prax. c. xxxi. p. 102. edit. Welchm.

<sup>9</sup> Tertull. contr. Prax. c. xi. p. 32, 34. xii. 35, 37.

<sup>r</sup> Welchman, Præfat. ad Tertull. contr. Prax. p. 5—13. Conf. Mosheim, Disquis. Chronologico-Crit. de vera ætate Apologetici a Tertulliano conscripti.

his Apology (which contains the same doctrine) was as early as that year.

A. D. 256. CYPRIAN.

St. Cyprian has a remarkable passage which speaks full and close to our purpose. Arguing for the invalidity of heretical baptisms, he asks, how any person baptized by heretics, and thereby partaking in their heresy, (so he must mean,) can be presumed to obtain remission of sins, and to become the temple of God? “ If he be thereby made the temple of God, I would “ ask, of what God [or divine Person] it is? Is it of [God] the “ Creator? he could not be so, if he believed not in him. Is it “ of Christ? neither can he be his temple, while he denies “ Christ to be God. Is it then of the Holy Ghost? But since “ the three are one, how can the Holy Ghost have friendship “ with him that is at enmity with either Father or Son?” Here it is observable, 1. That St. Cyprian gives the name or title of God to each of the divine Persons. 2. That to deny Christ to be God is interpretatively excluding one’s self from Christ, and declaring enmity towards all the three, who are one. 3. That therefore the acknowledging Christ to be God is necessary to salvation, and the impugning that doctrine is destructive of it: consequently, one is a fundamental article of faith, and the other a fundamental error. So far is plain. And now, if there remains any room for dispute, it can only be about the true and full meaning of the word God in this place. But Cyprian’s declaring that salvation depends upon the article, is a strong presumption that he understood the word in its just and proper sense: his applying it indifferently to all the three Persons, without any mark of distinction, is a further presumption of the same thing: his saying that the three are one, [unum,] one substance, one thing, makes it still plainer: and lastly, his applying the title of God to the Son, in the strictest and highest sense, in other parts of his works, sets it beyond dispute<sup>t</sup>. I may observe, by the aut Patris, aut Filii inimicus est? Cyprian. Ep. 73. ad Jubasan. p. 203. edit. Oxon.

<sup>s</sup> Si peccatorum remissionem consecutus est et sanctificatus est, et templum Dei factus est, quæro, cujus Dei? Si Creatoris, non potuit qui in eum non credit: si Christi, nec hujus fieri potest templum, qui negat Deum Christum: si Spiritus Sancti, cum tres unum sint, quomodo Spiritus Sanctus placatus esse ei potest, qui

<sup>t</sup> The passages are collected in Bishop Bull, Def. F. N. sect. ii. c. 10. p. 119, &c. and in my First Defence, vol. i. Qu. ii. p. 291, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. ii. p. 490.

way, of Cyprian, as I have before hinted of other Fathers, that he went upon this maxim, that whosoever shall disbelieve the doctrines of salvation revealed to mankind shall have no part in the salvation so tendered to them, ordinarily at least.

A. D. 257. NOVATIAN.

Novatian expresses the same thought in very clear and strong terms. "If God the Father saves none but through God, " then no one can be saved by God the Father, who does not " confess that Christ is God; in whom, and by whom, the Father " promises to give salvation: wherefore, very justly, whosoever " acknowledges him to be God, is in the way to be saved by " Christ, who is God; and whosoever doth not acknowledge " him to be God forfeits salvation, because he cannot otherwise " have it but in Christ as God." Words too plain to need any comment. Only I may observe that Novatian, as well as Cyprian, understood the word God, as applied to Christ, to import proper and substantial Divinity; as I have abundantly proved elsewhere*. Besides which, it is certain that the Novatians, his followers, were always orthodox in the article of Christ's Divinity, as also in the doctrine of the whole Trinity†.

A. D. 259. DIONYSIUS of Rome.

Dionysius, Bishop of Rome, in a valuable Fragment, preserved by Athanasius, styles the doctrine of the Trinity, "the most " venerable doctrine of the Church of God‡;" understanding the doctrine as we do at this day: it was not then looked upon as a speculative opinion, or as a matter of slight importance. But this is not all I have to observe from the same excellent writer: he goes on to speak of some who had the presumption to call the Son of God a creature, led to it by their indiscreet opposition to Sabellianism, as it was natural enough for weak * Si non salvat nisi in Deo Pater Deus, salvari non poterit a Deo Patre quisquam nisi confessus fuerit Christum Deum, in quo, et per quem se promittit Pater salutem daturum: ut merito, quisquis illum agnoscit esse Deum, salutem inveniat in Deo Christo; quisquis non recognoscit esse Deum, salutem perdiderit, quoniam alibi nisi in Christo Deo eam invenire non poterit. Novat. c. xiii. p. 36.

‡ First Defence, vol. i. p. 282, &c.

354, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 427, &c. 476, &c. 492, 743, 746. Conf. Bull. Def. F. N. sect. ii. c. 10. p. 121, 122.

† The testimonies may be seen collected in a late pamphlet, entitled, An Answer to Dr. Clarke and Mr. Whiston, &c. by H. E. in the preface, p. 2, 3.

‡ Τὸ σεμνότερον κήρυγμα τῆς ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ. Apud Athanas. vol. i. p. 231.

men to run from one extreme to another. He rejects the notion with the utmost abhorrence, as every wise and good man would : and after censuring Marcion's Tritheistic doctrine as diabolical, he proceeds to speak of the other, as follows : " Nor are they " less to blame who think the Son creature, and who suppose " the Lord to have come into being, as if he were one of the " things that were really made : the sacred oracles assign him a " generation, suitable and proper, not a formation and creation. " Wherefore it must be blasphemy of no ordinary size, but of " the first magnitude, to say that the Lord was a kind of " handy-work. For if he began to be, he once was not : but " he existed eternally, if so be that he is in the Father, as himself " testifies, and if Christ be the Word, and Wisdom, and Power<sup>a</sup>." There is more to the same purpose in what follows : what I have cited may suffice to shew, that the doctrine of our Lord's coeternal Divinity was then looked upon as an article of the highest importance, and that to deny it was to blaspheme in a most grievous manner, according to the sentiments of the Church at that time. For Dionysius speaks not his own sense only, but the sense of the Roman Synod, and of good Christians in general ; as he himself intimates by his saying to those whom he addresses himself to, that he had no need to dwell upon that matter before persons so enlightened by the Spirit of God, and so well apprised, as they were, of the great absurdity of making the Son a creature<sup>b</sup>.

A. D. 259. DIONYSIUS of Alexandria.

The case of Dionysius of Alexandria is a famous case. He had written some things against the Sabellians, wherein expressing himself unwarily, he was suspected by some to lean too far towards the opposite extreme, as if he had not just notions of the Divinity of Christ. A jealousy being raised, the matter was thought considerable enough to be brought before the other Dionysius, Bishop of Rome : which probably occasioned his οὐκ ἦν· αἰεὶ δὲ ἦν, εἴ γε ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἔστιν, ὡς αὐτός φησι, καὶ εἰ λόγος, καὶ σοφία καὶ δύναμις ὁ Χριστός. Arud Athanas. vol. i. p. 231, 232.

<sup>a</sup> Οὐ μείον δ' ἂν τις καταμέμφοιτο καὶ τοὺς ποιήματα τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι δοξάζοντας, καὶ γεγονέναι τὸν Κύριον, ὡς περ ἔν τι ὄντως γενομένων νομίζοντας, τῶν θείων λογίων γέννησιν αὐτῷ τὴν ἀρμόττουσαν καὶ πρέπουσαν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πλάσσειν τινα καὶ ποιήσιν προσμαρτυροῦντων. Βλάσφημον οὖν οὐ τὸ τυχόν, μέγιστον μὲν οὖν, χειροποίητον τρόπον τινα λέγειν τὸν Κύριον. εἰ γὰρ γέγονεν υἱός, ἦν ὅτε

<sup>b</sup> Καὶ τί ἂν ἐπὶ πλέον περὶ τούτων πρὸς ὑμᾶς διαλεγοίμην, πρὸς ἄνδρας πνευματοφόρους, καὶ σαφῶς ἐπισταμένους τὰς ἀτοπίας τὰς ἐκ τοῦ ποιήματα λέγειν τὸν υἱὸν ἀνακλυτούσας ; Ibid. p. 232.

writing what I have just now cited from him <sup>c</sup>. The Bishop of Rome took cognizance of the cause, and the Bishop of Alexandria, though not inferior to him, nor under his jurisdiction, submitted so far as to put in his answer or apology: which alone shews that it was looked upon by all parties as a cause of great moment; for in smaller matters, bishops were not obliged to give account to their colleagues. St. Cyprian well expresses both the cases, viz. where and when independent bishops were accountable to other bishops <sup>d</sup>, and where they were not <sup>e</sup>. The sum is, that in the ritual part of religion such bishops were independent and unaccountable; but in the substantial part, in matters of necessary faith, they were liable to be censured by their brethren. Seeing therefore that Dionysius of Alexandria was accused in a cause of heresy, the Bishop of Rome could not decline hearing it, nor the other refuse to submit to have it heard and judged. The whole process of that affair shews that the Divinity of Christ (about which the question was) was looked upon by all parties as a cause of the utmost concernment to religion. The whole Christian world, in a manner, was in an alarm about it: complaint was brought from Egypt as far as to Italy: the Bishop of Rome, with his clergy in Synod, were in the greatest concern upon it, and sent their judgment of the matter in question to the Bishop of Alexandria, requiring him to give an account of his faith: and that aged venerable Primate did so soon after, declaring in the face of the world, that he never intended the least injury to the Divinity of Christ, or to his consubstantiality, but himself believed it as sincerely and fully as any man else could. This affair is recorded by Athanasius <sup>f</sup>, from whom I have collected what I have said: and it is

<sup>c</sup> See Athanas. de Sententia Dionysii Alex. p. 252. de Synod. 757.

<sup>d</sup> Copiosum corpus est sacerdotum, concordie mutue glutino atque unitatis vinculo copulatum, ut si quis ex collegio nostro haeresin facere, et gregem Christi lacerare et vastare tentaverit, subveniant caeteri, et quasi pastores utiles et misericordes, oves dominicas in gregem colligant. Cyprian. ad Steph. Ep. lxxviii. p. 178.

<sup>e</sup> Superest ut de hac ipsa re, singuli quid sentiamus, proferamus; neminem judicantes, aut a jure communionis aliquem, si diversum senserit, amoventes. Neque enim quisquam nostrum episcopum se episcoporum constituit, aut tyrannico terrore ad obsequendi necessitatem collegas suos adigit: quando habeat omnis episcopus pro licentia libertatis et potestatis suae arbitrium proprium; tamque judicari ab alio non potest, quam nec ipse potest judicare: sed expectemus universi judicium Domini nostri Jesu Christi, qui unus et solus habet potestatem et praepnendi nos in Ecclesiae suae gubernatione, et de actu nostro judicandi. Concil. Carthagin. apud Cypr. p. 229, 230.

<sup>f</sup> Athanas. de Sententia Dionys. p. 252. de Synod. 757, 758.

a standing monument of the high regard paid to the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity <sup>ε</sup>, as a most important and fundamental article of Christianity in those days, sixty years and more before the Council of Nice.

A. D. 319. ALEXANDER of Alexandria.

I shall close this account with the sentiments of Alexander and his clergy, among which were near a hundred more bishops of the province, upon the present question, at the first breaking out of the Arian heresy. In their synodical letter, after sentence of excommunication passed upon Arius and his adherents, they represent the Arians, or Eusebians, as fallen into an apostasy, and as forerunners of antichrist <sup>h</sup>: they compare them with Hymenæus and Philetus, and the traitor Judas; and they stigmatize them as enemies to God, and subverters of souls. Such was their sense of the high importance of the doctrine of Christ's Divinity, which Arius had impugned. About two years after, the same Alexander, in his circular letter to the other Alexander of Byzantium, after declaring his faith in Christ, as truly and essentially God, of that and other articles of his Creed, he says: "These we teach, and these we declare: "these are the Apostolical doctrines of the Church, for which "we should be content to die, making small account of them "who would compel us to deny them: for though they should "even torture us to comply, yet would we not cast off our hope "in those [doctrines:] for the opposing of which Arius and "Achillas, with their accomplices, being enemies to the truth, "are ejected out of the Church, as deserters of our holy faith, "[godly doctrine;) pursuant to St. Paul's rule: If any one "preach any other Gospel unto you than what you have received, "let him be accursed, though he should pretend to be an angel "from heaven <sup>i</sup>." Such were the sentiments of this good and great man, relating to the importance of the doctrine he taught;

<sup>ε</sup> See the whole thing more particularly drawn out, and vindicated from exceptions, in Bull. Def. F. N. sect. ii. c. 11. Thirlby's Answers to Whiston's Suspicions, p. 31, &c. Beriman, Hist. Account, p. 127, &c.

<sup>h</sup> "Ἄνδρες παράνομοι καὶ χριστομάχοι διδάσκοντες ἀποστασίαν, ἣν εἰκότως ἂν τις πρόδρομον τοῦ ἀντιχρίστου ὑπονοήσειεν καὶ καλέσειεν. Ap. Atha-

nas. p. 397. et ap. Socrat. lib. i. c. 6.

<sup>i</sup> Ταῦτα διδάσκουμεν, ταῦτα κηρύττομεν ταῦτα τῆς ἐκκλησίας τὰ Ἀποστολικὰ δόγματα, ὑπὲρ ὧν καὶ ἀποθνήσκουμεν, τῶν ἐξόμνησαι αὐτὰ βιαζομένων ἦττον πεφροντικότες, εἰ καὶ διὰ βασάνων ἀναγκάζουσι, τὴν ἐν αὐτοῖς ἐλπίδα μὴ ἀποστρεφόμενοι. ὧν ἐναντίοι κ. τ. λ. Apud Theodorit. E. H. lib. i. c. 4.

the same which was afterward confirmed by the general Council of Nice, summoned from out of all Christendom to decide so momentous a question.

The sum of what I have advanced in this chapter is, that by three several topics it is proved to be certain fact, that the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity, and so of the whole Trinity, was looked upon by the ancient churches of Christ as one of the prime verities, one of the essentials of Christianity. This, I say, is proved from Creeds, and from censures upon heresies, (public acts of the Church,) and from particular testimonies of Fathers, declaring their own private sentiments of the weight and importance of the doctrines we have been considering. Now I proceed to inquire of what use and value this view of the ancients may be to us.

CHAP. VII.

Shewing the Use and Value of Ecclesiastical Antiquity with Respect to Controversies of Faith.

I INTEND not here to consider the use of the Fathers in its largest extent, but only so far as concerns articles of faith. I shall endeavour to set this matter in as clear a light as I can, for the impartial and discerning reader to judge of, avoiding all extremes. A certain writer, whom I should not perhaps have taken the least notice of, had it not thus fallen in my way, has been pleased to tell the world, that "Dr. Waterland and some " others, who have appeared on the same side of the question, " have only considered the Scripture in that light which a sober " Turk or an Indian might discover in it. But Scripture has a " much greater force in the hands of St. Athanasius and of " St. Basil, (who viewed it in its true, that is, in its original and " traditionary sense, and under the lights of faith,) than it has in " Dr. Waterland's; who ascends no higher than the bare letter, " and that sense of which all men, who are sincere, may equally " judge, whether they believe it or not. But when St. Athana- " sius and St. Basil argue from Scripture, they have a regard to " faith, and those ideas which Catholics have always had con- " cerning the Son and the Holy Spirit<sup>k</sup>." The report which

<sup>k</sup> An Answer to Dr. Clarke and Mr. Whiston, concerning the Divinity of the Son and Holy Spirit, with a summary Account of the chief Writers of the three first Ages. By H. E. Printed by Roberts, 1729. See pref. p. 4. 5.

this gentleman has here made may be true in part: and, so far, what he intended as an article of blame may appear much otherwise to more equal judges. I doubt not to say, that the Scripture is plain enough in this cause for any honest Turk or Indian to judge of, who is but able to discern the difference between wresting a text, and giving it an easy and natural interpretation. Nor do I see why a man may not be as certain of the construction of Scripture in this article, from the words themselves, comparing Scriptures with Scriptures, as he may be of the sense of Homer or Aristotle, of Cicero or Cæsar, in plain and clear passages. Nevertheless, if, over and above this, any further light or strength may arise from comparing Scripture and antiquity together, it is an additional advantage to our cause, such as we are thankful for, and constantly make us of. All kinds of evidences are useful; and there is so much weakness generally in mankind, that we have no reason to throw aside any assistances given us for relief or remedy. Antiquity therefore, super-added to Scripture, is what we sincerely value, and pay a great regard to; perhaps much greater than that gentleman himself really does; for, if I be not very much mistaken in the drift and tendency of his censure, it is such as plainly discovers (notwithstanding his artful disguises) a much more affectionate concern for a modern corrupt Church, than for the pure and ancient faith. St. Athanasius and St. Basil pleaded the same cause, and exactly in the same way, as we of the Church of England do. They appealed to Scripture first, speaking for itself, and proving its own sense to the common reason of mankind, according to the just rules of grammar and criticism: after that, they referred also to the well known faith of all the ancient churches, as super-abundantly confirming the same rational and natural construction. Athanasius and Basil were wise and honest men, and would never have admitted what this writer meanly insinuates<sup>1</sup>, (while he pretends to be an advocate on the same side,) that Arianism would not be heresy upon the foot of Scripture, singly considered. Such unworthy suggestions are as contrary to the general sense of antiquity as they are to truth and godliness, and tend only to betray the best of causes, for the sake of serving and supporting one of the worst. Athanasius's sentiments may appear from one single passage, which is all I need refer to at length in proof of a thing so well known. He observes, that the Arians, finding nothing in Scripture to countenance their heresy, were forced to have recourse to confident presumptions and collusive sophistry; and when they had done with those, their next attempt was, to abuse the Fathers also<sup>m</sup>, who favoured them as little as the Scripture did. Athanasius appealed to Scripture in the first place, and laid the main stress there: which indeed is his constant way in his dispute with the Arians. No man speaks more highly of the perfection and sufficiency of Scripture than he does: namely, that it affords the fullest and strongest evidences for establishing the faith against the Arians<sup>n</sup>; and that it is in itself sufficient for every thing<sup>o</sup>. The like might be shewn of Basil, were it needful. Therefore let not that gentleman hope to find shelter for his insidious conduct under those great and venerable names.

<sup>1</sup> An Answer to Dr. Clarke and Mr. Whiston, &c. pref. p. 6, 7.

He proceeds to observe, that “Catholics (Roman Catholics I suppose he means) are so accustomed to join faith and reading the holy Scripture together, that they account this to be the natural signification of the words.” Which is artfully insinuating, that the sense which Trinitarians affix to Scripture is not natural, but made to appear so, through the prejudice of education, or through the lights of an infallible chair. And so he pleads, under cover, for imposing a sense upon Scripture, instead of taking one from the natural force of the words. This never was the advice of the ancients<sup>q</sup>, neither ought it to be the practice of moderns. We insist upon it, that our interpretation of Scripture is just and natural, and that one great use of antiquity is, to guard that natural construction against unnatural distortions. To do violence to Scripture, in order to bring it to speak what we have a mind to, or what we have preconceived, is making Scripture insignificant, and setting up a new rule of faith: and indeed this gentleman afterwards gives very broad intimations that Scripture is not the whole rule of faith<sup>r</sup>. So now the secret

<sup>m</sup> Τῶν δ' Ἀρειομανιτῶν τὴν ἀλογίαν καὶ νῦν ἐπέγνων. οὐδὲν γὰρ οὐτ' εὐλογον, οὔτε πρὸς ἀπόδειξιν ἐκ τῆς θείας γραφῆς ῥητὸν ἐχούσης τῆς αἰρέσεως αὐτῶν, ἀεὶ μὲν προφάσεις ἀναισχύντους ἐπορίζοντο καὶ σοφίσματα πιθανά· νῦν δὲ καὶ διαβάλλειν τοὺς πατέρας τετολμήκασι. Athanas. de Sent. Dionys. p. 243.

<sup>n</sup> Vid. Athanas. p. 274, 720, 237. edit. Bened.

<sup>o</sup> Athanas. p. 1.

<sup>p</sup> Answer to Dr. Clarke, &c. p. 7.

<sup>q</sup> Optimus enim lector est, qui dictorum intelligentiam expectet ex dictis potius quam imponat, et retulerit magis quam attulerit; neque cogat id videri dictis contineri, quod ante lectionem præsumserit intelligendum. Hilar. de Trin. lib. i. col. 777.

<sup>r</sup> Answer to Dr. Clarke, pref. p. 17. book 22, 23.

is out: and I suppose, by this time, it is manifest what cause he is serving; and that he has something else more at heart than the doctrine of the Trinity. However, to do him justice, though he has made too many concessions, and has not sufficiently considered his subject<sup>s</sup>, he has yet given us a neat methodical summary of the doctrine of the ancients upon that head. Only it would grieve a man to observe, how disadvantageous circumstances he chooses to place those venerable saints in, as overruling the natural sense of words, and making that heresy which Scripture has not made so, having no authority for doing it but what they are forced to borrow from a particular Church<sup>t</sup>, which gives the same to every article of the Trent Creed. But leaving this gentleman to take his own way, let us now proceed to the business in hand.

There is no occasion for magnifying antiquity at the expense of Scripture; neither is that the way to do real honour to either, but to expose both; as it is sacrificing their reputation to serve the ends of novelty and error. Antiquity ought to attend as an handmaid to Scripture, to wait upon her as her mistress, and to observe her; to keep off intruders from making too bold with her, and to discourage strangers from misrepresenting her. Antiquity, in this ministerial view, is of very great use; which I shall endeavour to shew as distinctly as may be.

But first let me premise a few things, in order to give the reader a clearer idea of the true state of the whole case. It is to be considered, that Scripture consists of words, and that words are but signs, and that common usage and acceptance is what must settle their meaning. And when any thing comes

<sup>s</sup> This appears from his lame and confused account of the word person, p. 5—11, 38.

<sup>t</sup> The very pious Mr. Nelson, in a Letter to a Popish Priest, has some reflections worth the inserting in this place.

“ I am not ignorant that two of your great champions, Cardinal Perron and Petavius, to raise the authority of general councils, and to make the rule of their faith appear more plausible, have aspersed not only the holy Scriptures, as uncapable, by reason of their obscurity, to prove the great and necessary point of our Saviour’s Divinity, but have impeached also the Fathers of “ the first three centuries as tardy in the same point.—Blessed God!

“ that men should be so fond of human inventions, as to sacrifice to them those pillars of our faith which are alone proper and able to support it;
“ I mean Scripture and primitive antiquity. But to do justice to the memory of so learned a man as Petavius, the Bishop of Meaux told me, discoursing with him once on this subject, that in the last edition he made of his works he retracted this opinion: which I am willing to believe upon the authority of that great man, &c.” Dr. Hickes’s Letters, &c. p. 334. Compare Chillingworth, pref. sect. 16, 17, 18.

down to us in a dead language, as Scripture now does, the customary use of words in that language, at the time when they were spoken or written, must be the rule and measure of interpretation<sup>u</sup>; only, taking in with it the drift and intention of the speaker, or writer, so far as it may be certainly known, or probably presumed from evidences or circumstances.

It is next to be considered, that there is something of equivocalness and ambiguity, for the most part, in words or phrases, though ever so well and wisely chosen; and that many through ignorance, or inattention, or prepossession, may mistake or pervert their true meaning. Subtle wits may at any time take advantage of this natural imperfection of all languages, and may wrest the plainest expressions from their true and certain meaning to a false and foreign one. The nature of language, I say, is such that it may be done, and the depravity or weakness of mankind is such that it often will be done: and then disputes will arise about the jarring and dissonant interpretations, all perhaps appearing severally possible, and all plausibly recommended, though amongst them all there is but one which is truly reasonable.

It may further be considered, that all languages abound with metaphors, tropes, figures, or schemes of speech; and it is allowable to interpret figuratively, allegorically, emblematically, as often as there is a necessity for it, or good reason to apprehend that the thing was written in the way of figure, allegory, or emblem. This allowable liberty may easily be extended too far, through want of judgment, or want of care, or want of honesty and sincerity. Indeed most of the abuses with regard to interpreting of Scripture, when traced up to their fountain head, will appear to have been owing to this, that some will fancy the plain and obvious sense unreasonable or absurd, when it really is not; and will thereupon obtrude their own surmises, conjectures, prejudices upon the word of God. For having taken their own conceits for certain truths, and having determined beforehand that the letter of Scripture shall give way to them, they will of course rack and torture Scripture, as far as wit, learning, or invention can assist them, in order to contrive some construction or other, which may but seem to favour their preconceived opinions; unless they choose rather to reject or adulterate the texts which make against them, or to devise new Scriptures to serve the purpose.

<sup>u</sup> See Rogers's Review, p. 41—51.

Add to this, that the art of torturing plain words has been advanced to great perfection in these latter ages, since the revival of learning and sciences; and especially since the Socinians* and Romanists have taken almost incredible pains to make themselves complete masters in that way. There is nothing now almost, but what some or other will attempt (if there be occasion) to drag over into the service of any cause, and to wrest to what sense they please, though ever so contrary to the words themselves, or to the known intention of the authors or compilers. The ancient misbelievers most of them were young practitioners in comparison: for they commonly rejected or adulterated the Scriptures which they did not like, not understanding, or however not trusting to qualifying interpretations, which might steal away the sense, without injuring the letter.

Lastly, it should be considered, that God has provided no other general remedies against these and the like abuses, or against men's being imposed upon by them, than what he has provided against any other wiles of Satan, or any other temptations; namely, prayer and watchfulness, care and endeavour, and the use of proper means. We are no more secure against heresy than we are against any other sins: but there are as strong temptations to it, (founded in natural pride, vanity, curiosity, emulation, ambition, or sometimes credulity, supineness, secular

* The Socinian management is thus elegantly described by Abr. Calovius.

Dici non potest quam nefario ausu, quam profana impietate, quam horrendo sacrilegio versentur illi Scripturarum corruptores in sacris literis, ut suæ aut favere videantur, aut saltem non adversari sententiæ: modo enim scripta θεόπνευστα, partim Novi partim et imprimis Veteris Testamenti, de sublimi auctoritatis divinæ fastigio deturbant; modo sententias et periodos quasdam Scripturæ sacre in dubium revocant; modo distinctiones parenthesium et cola intervertunt, ac trajectionum novo εὐρήματι Spiritus S. sensum invertunt; modo per apostrophas, vel exclamationes mentem Scripturæ corrumpunt; modo per constructiones recens excogitatas, modo per vocum significationes inusitatas, nullisque lexicographis cognitatis; modo per ἀνάλυσιν violentam, modo per ἐξηγήσιν prorsus insolentem, interdum et κατὰ διάμετρον oppositam et contrariam, sacras literas detorquent: quadrata rotundis, supera inferis, cælum terris miscent, horrendaque σπερ-βλόστητι, oracula sanctissima pervertunt, detestanda μεταμορφώσει transformant: quicquid denique apertum et clarum in sacris literis, id veluti sepiæ rationis suæ obscurant atramento. Ipsam autem Scripturam perplexitatis, ἀπιστορησίας, ἀπαιδευσίας, ἀνακολουθίας, ambiguitatis, obscuritatis, incertitudinis, erroris, falsitatis, impie postulant et accusant; scilicet juxta illud Hieronymi verberium, hæretici convicti de perfidia, conferunt se ad maledicta. Vid. Wucherer. Vindic. adv. Whiston. p. 21. A. D. 1732.

† The heretics, so charged, are Cerinthus, Ebion, Saturninus, Carpocrates, Cerdon, Marcion, Lucian, Appelles, Tatian, Ptolomæus, Theodotus, Artemon, Manichæus; the Ophitæ, Cainites, Sethoites, Alogi, Pepuzians, Severians, and perhaps some others.

interest, or revenge,) as there are to other vices of a coarser kind.

These things considered, it will be highly expedient to take in all the helps we can procure, for the ascertaining the true and full meaning of sacred Writ, and for preserving, so far as in us lies, the doctrines of Christ. No proper means are to be neglected or set aside, lest we fall into error for want of the use of such means, or be found guilty of despising the gifts of God. Now we may come to the main question, whether antiquity may not be justly reputed one of the proper means, or how far it is so? In which inquiry I shall proceed by several steps or degrees, for the clearer and more distinct conception of what belongs to it, under its several views.

I. The ancients who lived nearest to the apostolical times are of some use to us, considered merely as contemporary writers, for their diction or phraseology. Any other coetaneous writers, Jewish or Pagan, are of use in that view: but home writers, Christian authors, will be so more especially, as conversant in the same subjects, and breathing the same spirit with the sacred writers themselves<sup>z</sup>. This, however, is the least, and the lowest use of the ancient Fathers; besides that we have but few, and those very short tracts, which bear so early a date.

II. A further use of the ancient Fathers is seen, in their letting us into the knowledge of antiquated rites and customs, upon which some Scripture allusions may be formed, and upon the knowledge of which the true interpretation of some Scripture phrases or idioms may in some measure depend<sup>a</sup>. But this general use is such as may also be answered, in a lower degree, by any as early writings, Jewish or Pagan; as likewise by Lexicons, or books of antiquities.

III. The ancient Fathers are further useful, as giving us insight into the history of the age in which the sacred books (of the New Testament, I mean) were written. For there is nothing which is apt to give so much light to any writing, as the well understanding and considering the historical occasion of it: a much surer and safer rule to go by, generally speaking, than mere criticising upon words; as is manifest in the case of charters, statutes, records, and other ancient monuments.

<sup>z</sup> Vid. Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. in præfat. sect. 15. et Dissert. 1.

<sup>a</sup> Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. i. c. 44.

IV. I come, fourthly, to mention some more peculiar and eminent views, in which the ancientest Fathers may be exceeding useful, for fixing the sense of Scripture in controverted texts. Those that lived in or near the apostolical times might retain in memory what the Apostles themselves, or their immediate successors, thought and said upon such and such points. And though there is no trusting, in such case, to oral tradition distinct from Scripture, nor to written, disagreeing with Scripture; yet written accounts, consonant to Scripture, are of use to confirm and strengthen Scripture, and to ascertain its true meaning. Ignatius, for instance, had been intimately conversant with the Apostles<sup>b</sup>, and was a disciple of St. John<sup>c</sup>: and therefore he may reasonably be presumed to have justly represented the mind of the Apostles in the doctrine he has left behind him, extant at this day. This the learned Mosheim has admitted, and even contended for<sup>d</sup>, though otherwise no zealous admirer of the ancient Fathers.

The like may be said of Polycarp, who had been taught immediately by the Apostles, and had conversed with many who had seen our Lord<sup>e</sup>. He was also particularly acquainted with St. John<sup>f</sup>, was one of his disciples, and ordained Bishop of Smyrna by his hands<sup>g</sup>. His doctrine, so far as it reaches, and may be certainly depended upon as his, (whether we have it at first or at second hand,) will be of great use for confirming the sense of Scripture, being a secondary attestation of the same doctrine: which Mosheim, before mentioned, does also allow and plead for<sup>h</sup>. Our most reverend metropolitan, speaking of the authority of the very early Fathers, sums it up in these several particulars. “1. That they were contemporary with the Apostles, and instructed by them. 2. That they were men of “an eminent character in the Church, and therefore such as

<sup>b</sup> Chrysostom. Hom. in Ignat. tom. i. p. 499. Socrat. Eccl. H. I. vi. c. 8.

<sup>c</sup> Act. Ignat. p. 9. edit. Grab. in Spicileg.

<sup>d</sup> Si doctrinam quam hic publice proposuit, intelligimus, id simul quod Petrus, Joannes, cæterique Servatoris amici senserint et Antiochenis traderint, exploratum habemus. Mosheim. Vindic. contr. Toland. sect. i. cap. 8. Compare Abp. Wake, c. x. p. III, 114. 2nd edit.

<sup>e</sup> Iren. lib. iii. c. 3. Euseb. E. H.

lib. iv. c. 14.

<sup>f</sup> Iren. Ep. ad Florin. inter Fragment. p. 340. Euseb. E. H. v. 20.

<sup>g</sup> Hieronym. Catal. Scriptor. Eccl. 17. Tertullian. Præscript. c. 32.

<sup>h</sup> Indubitatae itaque fidei testem rursus habemus, non modo doctrinae, quam ipse cœtui suo tradidit, sed et ejus quam optimus magister discedens suis reliquit. Mosheim. ibid. p. 237. Abp. Wake's Apostolical Fathers, c. x. p. III.

“ could not be ignorant of what was taught in it. 3. They were “ careful to preserve the doctrine of Christ in its purity, and to “ oppose such as went about to corrupt it. 4. They were men “ not only of a perfect piety, but of great courage and constancy, “ and therefore such as cannot be suspected to have had any de“ sign to prevaricate in this matter. 5. They were endued with “ a large portion of the Holy Spirit, and, as such, could hardly “ err in what they delivered as the Gospel of Christ. 6. Their “ writings were approved by the Church in those days, which “ could not be mistaken in its approbation of them<sup>i</sup>.”

Mr. Bayle allows that, “ in the days of the Apostles, or their “ first disciples, it had been easy to discover those who gave the “ Scriptures a wrong interpretation, because the infallibility of “ the Apostles, (who might have been consulted by word or by “ letter,) and the fresh remembrance of the verbal instructions “ they had given their disciples and pastors, whom themselves had “ consecrated, was a ready means for clearing any doubt or dis“ puted point<sup>k</sup>.” It appears then to be on all hands agreed, that those most early Fathers are competent witnesses of the doctrine of the Church in their days; nay, and of the doctrine also of Christ and his Apostles, to whom they immediately succeeded: and therefore their general sense is of signal use (so far as it reaches) to ascertain the interpretation of Scripture, and more especially as being consonant to the easy and natural import of the words themselves.

The like may be said in proportion, and in a lower degree, of the writings of Justin Martyr, Athenagoras, Irenæus, and Clemens Alexandrinus<sup>l</sup>; eminent personages, who flourished within fifty or sixty, or at most ninety years of the apostolical age. Their nearness to the time, their known fidelity, and their admirable endowments, ordinary and extraordinary, add great weight to their testimony or doctrine, and make it a probable rule of interpretation in the prime things: but there is another consideration, to follow in its place, which will give it still greater strength of probability than what I have here suggested. As <sup>l</sup> Abp. Wake's Apostolical Fathers, cap. x. p. 110.

<sup>k</sup> Bayle's Supplement to Philosophical Commentary, p. 692.

<sup>1</sup> Clemens of Alexandria, the latest of the four, yet testifies of himself, that he had received his doctrine from several disciples of the very chief Apostles, who had truly preserved the tradition of the blessed doctrine as coming directly from the holy Apostles, Peter, James, and Paul. Strom. lib. i. p. 322. Conf. Grabe, Instances of Omissions and Defects, &c. p. 9.

to later Fathers, the argument, in this view, loses its force more and more, the lower we descend. Yet it deserves our notice, that the Fathers of the third and fourth centuries had the advantage of many written accounts of the doctrine of the former ages, which have since been lost; and therefore their testimonies also are of considerable weight, and are a mark of direction to us, not to be slighted in the main things. Neither indeed is this saying any thing very highly of them, but may be thought rather to be setting them too low, and sinking them beneath their real value: for the testimonies of Jews, heretics, or Pagans, so far as we can depend upon them, must be allowed to carry in them the same use, where they testify any thing of the general doctrine or practice of the Christian Church in their times. Pliny, Lucian, Celsus, and Julian (to name no more) are all useful to us in this view, as they give some light into the doctrine of the first and purest ages. They confirm the fact, that such doctrines were then generally taught, and they corroborate other evidences. Socinus seems to have allowed more to one testimony of Lucian, than to many Christian evidences<sup>m</sup>. No doubt, but it was some advantage to it in his esteem, that it came from a Pagan: though still it had not weight enough to conquer his prejudices; for he never wanted evasions. But I pass on to what I intend further. All kinds of evidences are of use, which can bring us any light as to what the doctrine of the Church was in the best and purest ages: and when we are once advanced so far as to come to any certainty about that fact, than we have ground whereon to stand, and can build our argument upon it.

V. The next consideration therefore is this, that a very particular regard is due to the public acts of the ancient Church, appearing in creeds made use of in baptism, and in the censures passed upon heretics: and the observable harmony and unanimity of the several churches<sup>n</sup>, in such acts, is a circumstance in toto mundo manifestatam in omni Ecclesia adest respicere omnibus qui vera volunt videre: et habemus annumerare eos, qui ab Apostolis instituti sunt episcopi in Ecclesiis, et successores eorum usque ad nos, qui nihil tale docuerunt, neque cognoverunt quale ab his deliratur. Iren. lib. iii. c. 3.

<sup>m</sup> Nec vero nobis quidquam hactenus legere contigit, quod trini istius Dei, a Christianis jam tum recepti et culti, fidem facere videatur magis, quam quæ ex dialogo, qui Philopatris inscribitur, et inter Luciani opera numeratur, ad id probandum affert Genebrardus, lib. i. et ii. de Trinitate. Socin. adv. Eutrop. c. xv. p. 698. Opp.

<sup>n</sup> Traditionem itaque Apostolorum

Itaque tot ac tantæ Ecclesiæ una which adds irresistible force to them. It is not at all likely, that any whole church of those early times should vary from apostolical doctrine in things of moment: but it is, morally speaking, absurd to imagine, that all the churches should combine in the same error, and conspire together to corrupt the doctrine of Christ<sup>o</sup>. This is the argument which Irenæus and Tertullian insist much upon, and triumph in, over the heretics of their times: and it is obliquely glanced upon by Hegeſippus and Clemens Alexandrinus of the same second century, and by Origen also of the third. The argument was undoubtedly true and just, as it then stood, while there were no breaks in the succession of doctrine, but a perfect unanimity of the churches all along, in the prime articles: though, afterwards, the force of this argument came to be obscured, and almost lost, by taking in things foreign to it, and blending it with what happened in later times. The force of it could last no longer than such unanimity lasted. I say, while the churches were all unanimous in the main things, (as they were in Irenæus's time, and Tertullian's, and for more than a century after,) that very unanimity was a presumptive argument that their faith was right, derived down to them from the Apostles themselves. For it was highly unreasonable to suppose, that those several churches, very distant from each other in place, and of different languages, and under no common visible head, should all unite in the same errors, and deviate uniformly from their rule at once. But that they should all agree in the same common faith, might easily be accounted for, as arising from the same common cause, which could be no other but the common delivery of the same uniform faith and doctrine to all the churches by the Apostles themselves<sup>p</sup>. Such unanimity could never come by chance, but must be derived from one common source: and therefore the harmony of their doctrine was in itself a pregnant argument of the truth of it<sup>q</sup>. As to the fact, illa ab Apostolis prima, ex qua omnes. Sic omnes primæ, et apostolicæ, dum una omnes probant unitatem; dum est illis communicatio pacis, et appellatio fraternitatis, et contesseratio hospitalitatis: quæ jura non alia ratio regit, quam ejusdem sacramenti una traditio. Tertull. Præscript. c. 20.

<sup>o</sup> Ecquid verisimile est, ut tot ac tantæ in unam fidem erraverint? Nulus inter multos eventus unus est. Exitus variasse debuerat error doctrinæ ecclesiarum. Ceterum, quod apud multos unum invenitur, non est erratum, sed traditum. Tertull. ibid. c. 28.

<sup>p</sup> See this argument very well explained and enforced by Dr. Sherlock, in his Present State of the Socinian Controversy, cap. ii. sect. 2. p. 60, &c.

<sup>q</sup> Vero simile fit complures Ecclesias originis apostolicæ, regionibus linguaque dissitas, eam doctrinæ concordiam ab uno fonte hausisse, utpote quæ a casu non introducta videtur. Sam. Basnag. Annal. tom. i. p. 742.

that the churches were thus unanimous in all the prime things, in those days, Irenæus, who was a very knowing person, and who had come far east to settle in the west, bears ample testimony to it<sup>r</sup>. Tertullian, in the two passages last cited from him, testifies the same thing, as to the unanimity of the churches of those times in the fundamentals of Christian doctrine. Hege- sippus, contemporary with Irenæus, gives much the same account of the succession of true doctrine, down to his own time, in the several churches<sup>s</sup>. Clemens of Alexandria means the same thing, where he recommends the faith of the universal Church as one, and as more ancient than heresies<sup>t</sup>. And Origen of the third century testifies the same of the Church in his time, and argues in the same manner from it<sup>u</sup>. Irenæus and Tertullian were both of them so strongly persuaded of the certainty, first, of the fact, and next of the inference from it, that they scrupled not to urge it as a very full and convincing proof of the apostolical faith, singly considered<sup>x</sup>, and abstracting from Scripture proof. An argument which there is no need to be jealous of, if it be but rightly understood, and limited to such circumstances as it was grounded upon. For the meaning was not, that apostolical churches could never err, nor that tradition would be always a safe rule to go by : but such tradition as that was, which might easily be traced up to the Apostles, by the help of writings then extant, (as easily as we may now trace up the doctrine of our Church to the reign of Charles, or of James the First,) such a tradition might be depended upon. Besides that the unanimity of the churches all the world over (which could not be rationally ac-

<sup>r</sup> Iren. lib. i. c. 10, alias 3. lib. iii. c. 3, 4.

<sup>s</sup> Ἐν ἐκάστη δὲ διαδοχῇ καὶ ἐν ἐκάστη πόλει οὕτως ἔχει, ὡς ὁ νόμος κηρύττει, καὶ οἱ προφῆται, καὶ ὁ Κύριος. Hege- sipp. ap. Euseb. lib. iv. c. 22.

<sup>t</sup> Clem. Alex. Strom. vii. p. 898, 899. Conf. Strom. i. p. 322.

<sup>u</sup> Cum multi sint qui se putant scire quæ Christi sunt, et nonnulli eorum diversa prioribus sentiant, ser- vetur vero ecclesiastica prædicatio per successionis ordinem ab Apostolis tra- dita, et usque ad præsens in Ecclesiis permanens : illa sola credenda est veritas quæ in nullo ab ecclesiastica tra- ditione discordat. Origen. in Apolog. Pamp. inter Opp. Hieron. tom. v. p. 223.

<sup>x</sup> Tantæ igitur ostensiones cum

sint, non oportet adhuc quærere apud alios veritatem, quam facile est ab Ecclesia sumere, &c.—Quid enim, et si de aliqua modica quæstione disceptatio esset, nonne oporteret in anti- quissimas recurrere Ecclesias, in qui- bus Apostoli conversati sunt, et ab eis de præsentii quæstione sumere quod certum et re liquidum est? Quid autem si neque Apostoli quidem Scripturas reliquissent nobis, nonne oportebat ordinem sequi traditionis quam tradi- derunt iis quibus committebant Eccle- sias? Cui ordinationi assentiunt mul- tæ gentes barbarorum eorum qui in Christum credunt, sine charta et atramento scriptam habentes per Spiritum in cordibus suis salutem, et veterem traditionem diligenter custodientes, &c. Iren. l. iii. cap. 4.

counted for on any other supposition but that they had been so taught (from the beginning) confirmed the same thing. The argument in this light, and in those circumstances, was a very good one. But when those circumstances came to be altered, and there had been several breaks in the succession of doctrine, and that too even in the apostolical churches, then there could be no arguing in the same precise way as before: only thus far they might argue, in after times, (upon a supposition that their faith could be proved to be the same as in the former ages,) that since their doctrine was still that very doctrine which the churches held while they were unanimous and had admitted no breaks, therefore it is such as was from the beginning in the Church of Christ. In this manner we can reason even at this day, and can thereby make Irenæus's or Tertullian's argument our own†; provided we have first proved that the faith we contend for is the very same that obtained in the churches of that age.

But before I leave this head, I would observe something more particularly of Tertullian's manner of expressing himself in this case: he did not only conceive that an argument might be drawn from tradition alone, abstracting from Scripture, but he preferred that way of arguing, in disputes with heretics, as a shorter, easier, nay, and surer method of confuting them, than engaging with them upon the foot of Scripture<sup>2</sup>. This may appear to us now an odd way of talking: but if it be taken as he meant it, and with a view only to the then present circumstances, pari, altercatione incertior discedet, nesciens quam hæresin judicet: hæc utique et ipsi habent in nos retorquere. Necessè est enim et illos dicere, a nobis potius adulteria Scripturarum, et expositionum mendacia inferri, qui proinde sibi defendant veritatem. Ergo non ad Scripturas provocandum, nec in his constituendum certamen, in quibus aut nulla, aut incerta victoria est, aut par incertæ.—Ordo rerum desiderabat illud prius proponi, quod nunc solum disputandum est, quibus competat fides ipsa, cujus sunt Scripturæ; a quo, et per quos, et quando, et quibus sit tradita disciplina qua fiunt Christiani. Ubi enim apparuerit esse veritatem et disciplinæ et fidei Christianæ, illic erit veritas Scripturarum, et expositionum, et omnium traditionum Christianarum. Tertull. Præscript. c. 17, 18.

† Ad hanc itaque formam probabuntur ab illis Ecclesiis quæ, licet nullum ex Apostolis, vel apostolicis, auctorem suum proferant, ut multo posteriores, quæ denique quotidie instituuntur, tamen in eadem fide conspirantes, non minus apostolicæ deputantur pro consanguinitate doctrinæ. Tertull. Præscript. c. 32.

<sup>2</sup> Quid promovebis exercitatissime Scripturarum, cum si quid defenderis, negatur; ex diverso, si quid negaveris defendatur: et tu quidem nihil perdes, nisi vocem in contentione; nihil consequeris nisi bilem de blasphematione. Ille vero, si quis est, cujus causa in congressum descendis Scripturarum, ut eum dubitantem confirmes, ad veritatem, an magis ad hæreses devertet? Hoc ipso motus, quod te videat nihil promovisse, æquo gradu negandi et defendendi adversa parte, statu certe

I believe, it will be found to turn out right. He could not mean that the tradition of the sense of Scripture was more certain than the tradition of the words or books of Scripture: neither could he design to intimate that Scripture texts did not themselves afford as certain, or more certain proofs of a doctrine than tradition could do, among persons qualified to judge in a critical way: neither could he imagine, that Scripture should not be made use of, or should not be looked upon as the principal thing, in written debates against heretics; for no man makes more or better use of Scripture in that way than himself does. All he seems to have meant was, that in verbal conferences with heretics, in the presence of weak and infirm Christians, the wisest way would be, not to engage the adversaries on the foot of Scripture, (to bring on a debate about the Canon of Scripture, and the strict meaning of words or phrases, and so to discuss the whole in a logical and critical way, tiresome to ordinary Christians, and commonly fruitless<sup>a</sup>) but to put the issue of the cause upon a few plain and short questions, such as common Christians could better judge of. It was easy to discern, what party of men had been successors to the Apostles, and had in constant succession made up the body of the Church, preserving the same faith with great unanimity. This argument from tradition was an argument drawn from sensible fact, and was much more affecting, obvious, and popular, than dry altercations about the authenticity of the books of Scripture, or the precise meaning of words; and it was certain enough, at that time, to be depended upon: and therefore Tertullian recommended that method of debate, in such verbal conferences, rather than any other. Wherein to me he seems to have judged very well upon the prudential case, and like a wise and a sagacious man<sup>b</sup>. Nevertheless, as often as he employed his pen in controversy with heretics, and drew up polemical tracts, though he would not omit to mention the additional advantage he had<sup>c</sup> in point of prescription rarum, ne is admittatur ad eam cui nullo modo competit. Ibid. cap. 15. Conf. cap. 37.

<sup>a</sup> Scripturas obtendunt, et hac sua audacia statim quosdam movent: in ipso vero congressu firmos quidem fatigant, infirmos capiunt, medios cum scrupulo dimittunt. Hunc igitur potissimum gradum obstruimus, non admittendos eos ad ullam de Scripturis disputationem. Si hæc sint illæ vires eorum uti eas habere possint, dispici debet cui competat possessio Scriptu-

<sup>b</sup> See Stillingfleet's Answer to several Treatises, Works, vol. v. p. 79, 80. Dodwell. Dissertat. in Iren. iii. sect. 30. p. 282, 283.

<sup>c</sup> Vid. Tertullian. contr. Marc. lib. i. cap. 1. 20. lib. iii. cap. 1. contr. Prax. cap. ii.

or tradition, yet he chose to pass it off in short hints, and not to dwell upon it, but rather to rest the issue of the main cause upon Scripture and reason.

A learned foreign divine has indeed blamed Tertullian for his conduct in this affair, as derogating from the authority of Scripture, by laying such stress upon tradition: which appears not to be a just censure; but that learned writer runs into the other extreme, while he avers, that it is by Scripture only that the verity or antiquity of a doctrine may be proved<sup>d</sup>. There are two ways of proving the antiquity, and consequently the verity of a doctrine; namely, Scripture and Church history: and these two differ only in the manner of proof, or in the degree of moral certainty. Can we prove, for instance, what were the tenets of the ancient heretics, by the help of Church history and records; and cannot we as well prove what were the tenets of ancient Christians in the same way? It is true, we might more certainly prove what those heretics held, from their own books, if we had them; and so we may more certainly prove what was the faith of the first Christians, from Scripture, than from any Church records: but still the same thing is proved both ways, and by two kinds of evidences, differing only, as I said, in degree of probability, or moral certainty. And therefore the learned Mosheim, as I before took notice<sup>e</sup>, scruples not to assert in broad terms, that the antiquity of the Christian faith is proved from the writings of Ignatius and Polycarp<sup>f</sup>: and he allows the same thing with respect to Clemens Romanus, and Hegesippus<sup>g</sup>, and Caius<sup>h</sup>, and Irenæus<sup>i</sup>, and, by parity of reason, to all other Church-writers whose accounts may be depended upon<sup>k</sup>. The admitting such a secondary proof, in this case, is not derogating from Scripture authority, but is confirming and strengthening it in more views than one: as it is accepting the same kind of proof here, which

<sup>d</sup> Huc illa referenda sunt effata, quibus Scripturæ sacræ derogare auctoritati videtur, cum tamen ea sola sit, ex qua et veritas et antiquitas dogmatis cujusdam probari queat. Buddæi Isagog. vol. i. p. 997.

<sup>e</sup> See above, p. 608.

<sup>f</sup> Mosheim, Vindic. adv. Toland. cap. viii. p. 221, 222, 223.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. p. 218.

<sup>h</sup> Ibid. p. 224.

<sup>i</sup> Ibid. p. 238.

<sup>k</sup> It is observable of Polycarp, in particular, that he convinced and converted great numbers to the true faith, by the strength of tradition, being a sensible argument, and more affecting at that time, than any dispute from the bare letter of Scripture could be. [See Irenæus, lib. iii. cap. 3. p. 177.] It was under Anicetus, about the year 145. See Pearson, Opp. Posth. cap. xiv. &c. Dodwell, cap. xiii.

we accept, in another case, with respect to the Canon of Scripture; and as it is corroborating the Scripture account of the Christian faith with collateral evidences, both to illustrate and enforce it. Not that one would, at this time of day, presume to rest an article of faith upon Church records alone, or upon any thing besides Scripture: but while the superior proof from sacred Writ is the ground of our faith<sup>1</sup>, the subordinate proof from antiquity may be a good mark of direction for the interpretation of Scripture in the prime doctrines<sup>m</sup>. If we can prove from ancient records what that faith was which obtained so universally in the second century, and later, we can then argue from it in like manner as Irenæus, Hegesippus, Tertullian, yea and Clemens also, and Origen did, and can make the like use of it against those that pervert Scripture. Only, indeed, there will be this difference, that the argument, as now urged, is become one of the learned kind, and therefore not so well adapted to common capacities as it formerly was: and it is somewhat weaker to us, in another respect, as we have not so many evidences now extant, as those writers then had, whereby to prove such constant succession of doctrine so long, and such unanimity of the churches in professing it. But notwithstanding, we have evidences sufficient to persuade rational men; and the argument is still a good one<sup>n</sup>, though with some abatements.

<sup>1</sup> Scripture is the ground of our faith, considered as the infallible word of God: but then that it is really the word of God, and that such is the sense of this or that text, ordinarily stands only upon moral proof; so that our faith at length resolves into moral evidence, as it is a known rule, that the conclusion follows the weaker of the premises, and can be no stronger than that is. But then again, it is to be considered, that the strength of moral evidence, in the general, resolves at last into divine veracity and faithfulness; since God has so made us as to lay us under an inevitable necessity of submitting commonly to such evidence, and he cannot be supposed (without manifest absurdity or blasphemy) to have thus exposed the wisest, and most pious, and most considerate men to fatal and endless delusions. So then, in the last result, faith again resolves into, or rests upon, the truth and goodness of God.

<sup>m</sup> Quoties de scriptis sensu quaeritur, magnam vim habere solet, tum usus sequens, tum prudentum auctoritas: quod etiam in divinis Scriptis sequendum est. Neque enim probabile est, Ecclesias quæ ab Apostolis constitutæ sunt, aut subito, aut omnes defecisse ab iis quæ Apostoli breviter præscripta, ore liberalius explicaverant. Grotius de Jur. B. et P. lib. i. cap. 2. sect. 9. p. 60.

<sup>n</sup> " This is an unanswerable argument, as long as we can suppose the tradition of the Catholic faith, and the communion of the Church was preserved entire: which it visibly was, at least till the first Nicene Council. And had we no other ways to know it, we might learn the faith of the Catholic Church, by its opposition to those heresies which it condemned." Sherlock's Present State of Socin. Controv. p. 64.

VI. There is one consideration more, tending still to strengthen the former, and which must by no means be omitted : namely, that the charismata, the extraordinary gifts, were then frequent, visibly rested in and upon the Church, and there only. I have occasionally hinted something of this matter before<sup>o</sup>, so far as concerned Irenæus, and shall now throw in some additional evidences to make good the same thing. Justin Martyr is a witness of the frequency of the miraculous operations in his time: and he makes use of it, in his dispute with Trypho<sup>p</sup>, as an unanswerable argument in behalf of Christianity against the Jews; which St. Paul himself had done before him<sup>q</sup>. Irenæus, as observed above, made the like use of it against heretics: and so does Tertullian, though in remote hints, and somewhat more obscurely<sup>r</sup>. Those extraordinary gifts continued in a good measure, though decreasing gradually, for the three first centuries at least<sup>s</sup>. So then, besides oral tradition for the faith of the ancient churches, which was least to be depended upon, or lasted but a little time; besides written accounts, which might more securely be confided in; besides the unanimity of doctrine in all the churches, which was itself an argument that it had been from the beginning; I say, besides all these, the testimony of the Spirit visibly residing in the Church, and discovering itself in supernatural operations, that was a further evidence of the truth of the doctrine then generally held. For it is by no means probable, that those primitive churches, so highly favoured from above, so plentifully enlightened and comforted by the Holy Spirit of God, should be permitted to fall into any dangerous errors, or should not preserve, at least in points of importance, the true and ancient faith derived from Christ and his Apostles. But that this argument may appear to greater advantage, I shall take leave to borrow the excellent words of an abler hand<sup>t</sup>, which has set it forth in a very true and strong light.

“ It is, I think, impossible, in a moral sense, that those good “ men should successively concur to impose upon the Church a

<sup>o</sup> See above, p. 569.

<sup>p</sup> Justin. Martyr. Dial. p. 308, 315.
edit. Par. alias 315, 329.

<sup>q</sup> Gal. iii. 2.

<sup>r</sup> Tertullian. Præscript. cap. xxviii. xxix.

<sup>s</sup> Vid. Spencer in Notis ad Origen.
contr. Cels. p. 5, &c. Dodwell. Dis-sert. in Irenæum, ii. Dissert. Cyprianic. iv. Remarks on Christianity,

&c. part i. continued, p. 51, &c.

<sup>t</sup> Dr. Knight's preface to his Eight Sermons, p. 4, 5, 6. Compare Dr.
Berriman's Historical Account, p.
2, 3, &c.

“ false interpretation of notorious passages of the sacred writings,
 “ for the following reasons :

“ 1. That the Spirit of God was given to the Church, to guide “ and instruct it in necessary truth.

“ 2. That, according to the records of those early ages, the “ extraordinary gifts of the Spirit of God, continued in the “ Church, were undoubted evidences of his presence with it.

“ 3. That it cannot be supposed, while the Spirit of God was “ present with the Church in so remarkable a manner, and the “ Church itself so little removed from the times of the Apostles, “ that the letter of Scripture, especially in matters of greatest “ concern, should be generally understood in another sense than “ what was agreeable to the Spirit of God, and to that which “ the Apostles had taught and delivered.

“ 4. That the Doctors of the Church, through the difficulty of “ the times, and the dangers they were exposed to on account of “ religion, were more concerned to prepare for the blessings of “ another world, by recommending truth to the consciences of “ men, than to provide for the flesh, and the enjoyments of the “ present, by dividing the Church, and seducing the simple with “ pernicious doctrines.

“ 5. That their writings suppose, or expressly affirm, that “ Scripture was received in an uniform sense, in the churches “ of Christ.

“ 6. The consequence of which is, that whensoever it appears, “ that the doctrines of the Church successively agree, from the very “ beginning, in an uniform<sup>u</sup> interpretation of certain passages of “ the sacred writings, relating to the chief and fundamental arti“ cles of revealed truths ; such interpretation ought to be received
 “ as the mind of the Spirit in the aforesaid passages : and con“ clusions drawn from such expositions are not founded on the “ doctrines of men, but the mind of the Spirit contained and con“ veyed in the letter of Scripture.”

This reasoning I apprehend to be just and solid, and to carry much greater weight with it, than any the most ingenious conceits and surprising subtilties of the Polonian brethren, whereby they have laboured to give something of a gloss or colour to their novel constructions of the sacred oracles. But to be a little more distinct and particular, I proceed to build upon the foundations here laid, for the more fully demonstrating the use of antiquity.

<sup>u</sup> Iren. lib. iv. cap. 35, alias 69.

VII. The least that we can infer from what hath been already said is, that the sense of the ancients once known is an useful check upon any new interpretations of Scripture affecting the main doctrines. It has a negative voice, if I may so call it, in such a case: and it is reason sufficient for throwing off any such novel expositions, that they cross upon the undoubted faith of all the ancient churches, or contain some doctrine, as of moment to be received, which the ancients universally rejected, or never admitted<sup>x</sup>. This negative way of arguing is, I think, generally allowed, and can hardly bear any controversy. Bishop Stillingfleet observes to this purpose, "that it is sufficient prescription " against any thing which can be alleged out of Scripture, " that if it appear contrary to the sense of the Catholic Church " from the beginning, it ought not to be looked upon as the true " meaning of Scripture. All this security is built upon this " strong presumption, that nothing contrary to the necessary " articles of faith should be held by the Catholic Church, whose " very being depends upon the belief of those articles which are " necessary to salvation<sup>y</sup>."

The famous Daillé, whom no man can suspect of partiality towards the ancients, acknowledges as much as I have here mentioned, where he says, " What probability is there that those " holy Doctors of former ages, from whose hands Christianity " hath been derived down unto us, should be ignorant of any of " those things, which had been revealed and recommended by " our Saviour as important and necessary to salvation?—That " they should all of them have been ignorant of any article that " is necessarily requisite to salvation, is altogether impossible: " for, after this account, they should all have been deprived of " salvation, which, I suppose, every honest mind would tremble " at the thought of<sup>z</sup>."

<sup>x</sup> Sicut in legibus humanis valet quidem ad sensum indagandum, verborum ac locutionum cognitio, antecedentium et consequentium series, consideratio ejus quæ quoque libro tractatur materiæ, sed hæc omnia ita sunt dirigenda, ne impingant in id quod ab initio publicatæ legis de re quaque receptum et judicii approbatum fuit; ita in legibus divinis quidem, sed

humano more per verba, et verborum signa literas, expressis, eadem interpretationi circumdanda sunt repagula. Grotius, Rivet. Apologet. Discuss. p. 685. Conf. 724.

<sup>y</sup> Stillingfleet's Rational Account, cap. ii. p. 59.

<sup>z</sup> Daillé, Use of the Fathers, cap. vi. p. 188. Engl. edit.

Dr. Whitby, who was not prejudiced on the side of the Fathers, seems to carry the point rather further, in these words :

“ In such doctrines as were rejected by the universal Church as heresies, Austin saith truly, that it was sufficient cause to reject them, because the Church held the contrary, they being such as did oppose her rule of faith, or symbol, universally received ; and that it was sufficient to persuade any man, he ought not to embrace any of the doctrines of heretics, as articles of faith, because the Church, who could not be deficient in any point of necessary faith, did not receive them. This way of arguing negatively, we therefore, with St. Austin, do allow : the universal Church knows no such doctrine ; ergo, it is no article I am obliged to receive as any part of Christian faith<sup>a</sup>.” Thus far he at that time : and in another treatise which he published in Latin, twenty-five years after, when it is certain he had no very friendly disposition towards the Fathers, yet still he thought himself obliged to admit such a negative argument<sup>b</sup> as he had before admitted. A negative argument therefore being allowed, (as indeed there is plain reason for it,) it must be allowed also, that the Fathers are of use to us, so far as such an argument can be of use : and that the ancients may be of great use in the Church, in this view, is very apparent, being that they serve as an outwork (which Daille takes notice of) for the repelling the presumption of those who would forge a new faith<sup>c</sup>.

For example, they are of use, in this view, against the Romanists, with respect to the novel and supernumerary articles of the Trent Creed, or Creed of Pope Pius IV. imposed upon the consciences of men as necessary to salvation.

The ancients are likewise of use to us, under the same view, against the Socinians, who innovate in doctrines of the highest importance, teaching things contrary to the faith of all the primitive churches ; things wherein Christian worship, as well as faith and hope, are very nearly and deeply concerned. It is sufficient in his omnibus certissimum est ; hoc vel illud inter fidei morumve dogmata necessaria prius locum non obtinuit, ergo nec hac ætate creditu, factuque necessarium dici possit ; quoniam Ecclesia in necessariis nunquam deficit. Whitby, Dissertat. de Scriptur. Interpretatione, Pref. p. 94.

<sup>a</sup> Whitby's Treatise of Tradition, A. D. 1689, part ii. cap. 12. p. 131.

<sup>b</sup> Distinguendum est inter traditiones de rebus creditu factuque necessariis, et non necessariis. Traditionibus ad fidem moresque necessariis fides adhibenda est, utpote sine quibus nec fides nec vita Christiana esse potest : adeo ut argumentum negativum

<sup>c</sup> Daille, Use of the Fathers, p. 190.

reason for rejecting such novelties, and the interpretations which they are founded upon, that the Christian world, in the best and purest times, either knew nothing of them, or rejected them.

The like may be said with respect to the Arian doctrines, if any man should presume to obtrude them upon us as articles of faith. It is a sufficient reason for not receiving either them, or the interpretations brought to support them, that the ancients, in the best and purest times, either knew nothing of them, or, if they did, condemned them<sup>d</sup>. It has indeed been pretended, that the ancients, in general, supposed God the Father to be naturally Governor over the Son and Holy Ghost: but no proof has ever been made of it, nor ever can be. On the contrary, it will appear upon a careful inquiry, as I have particularly observed in another place<sup>e</sup>, that the ancients never did, never consistently could intend any such thing; but that Arius and his confederates innovated in maintaining that doctrine, and were condemned for it immediately, upon their first introducing it. But it is needless to urge here (had not the course of my argument led to it) that Arianism was no matter of necessary faith, in the esteem of the ancients, having proved in these papers that the contrary to it was. Only, I was here to observe the use which might be made of the negative argument, supposing we could go no further, or had nothing more to plead from antiquity.

VIII. I would next advance a step further than the mere negative argument can directly carry us: for, I conceive, that a just inference may be drawn from that concession, which will extend our views somewhat beyond what I have just now mentioned. If the ancients could not be universally ignorant of any necessary doctrine, since it is morally absurd that they should be deficient in necessaries; by parity of reason it must be allowed,

<sup>d</sup> " In the doctrine of the Deity of Christ, or of the Trinity, though the subtlety of such modern heretics as oppose either of those, may so far prevail on persons, either not of sufficient judgment, or not sufficiently versed in the Scriptures, as at present to make them acknowledge the places are not so clear as they imagined them to be; yet their being always otherwise interpreted by the Catholic Church, or the Christian societies of all ages, lays this potent prejudice against all such attempts, as not to believe such interpretations true, till they give a just account why, if the belief of these doctrines were not necessary, the Christians of all ages since the Apostles' times, did so unanimously agree to them, that when any began first to oppose them, they were declared and condemned for heretics for their pains." Stillingsfleet, Rational Account, cap. ii. p. 58.

<sup>e</sup> Third Defence, or Further Vindication, chap. 5. p. 80, &c. of this volume.

that they could not generally fall into fundamental errors, because that also would be failing in necessaries, inasmuch as nothing can be more necessary in our religious concerns than to stand clear of all pernicious or dangerous mistakes. From whence it follows, that whatever the ancient churches universally admitted as a necessary article of faith, must, at the lowest, be safe doctrine<sup>f</sup>. And because it is hard to conceive how such a doctrine as we are now upon could be safe, if it were not true, we may reasonably infer that it is true, as well as safe. Thus far I have been pursuing the consequences which appear to follow from the concession made by Daillé and others.

But I apprehend withal, that the same conclusion will more directly and closely follow from the principles before laid down; namely, that morally speaking, it is absurd to suppose that the primitive churches should so universally maintain one and the same doctrine, if they had not received it from the beginning; especially considering the important nature of the doctrine, and how near they lived to the apostolical age, and how remarkably they were blessed, all the time, with plentiful effusions of God's Holy Spirit. These considerations taken together do afford, as I conceive, a positive argument to prove that what the ancients so held as true and important, (Scripture also, in its easy and most natural sense, countenancing the same,) ought to be received by us as Scripture doctrine<sup>g</sup>, and valued accordingly. Any other pretended sense of Scripture, as implying a kind of moral absurdity, ought to be rejected; unless it can be proved to carry with it such a degree of moral certainty as is more than sufficient to countervail such prescription or prejudice against it.

<sup>f</sup> Hic vero ex concessis Dallæanis recte concluditur, et nullum articulum necessarium eos ignorasse; et e fortiore, nulla execrabili hæresi implicitos, nobis errandi duces extitisse.—Minime est probabile (judice ipso Dallæo) vel unicum fidei membrum eos latuisse, et multo incredibilius, prolapsos fuisse in errorem perniciosum, seu hæresim sanæ fidei contrariam. Scribenar. contr. Dal. p. 222, 223.

<sup>g</sup> Cum majorem omnibus quam singulis Christianis, et universæ quam particularibus quibuscunque Ecclesiis fidem habendam esse nemo dubitet; cum plurima etiam sint in quæ universalis Ecclesia per multa post

Apostolos secula consensit; cum hæc denique universalis Ecclesiæ consensio certissima sit, in iis quibus habeatur capitibus, sacræ Scripturæ interpretatio; hinc clarissime constat, quali quantoque usui sint antiqui patres, aliique omnium Ecclesiæ seculorum Scriptores, quamque necessario ab iis consulendi sint, quibus Ecclesiasticas agitantes controversias vel sua salus, vel pax Ecclesiæ cordi est.—Quicquid de aliis dicendum est, ea saltem in quæ omnes ubique Ecclesiæ consenserunt, non possunt non certissima esse, et necessario ab omnibus etiamnum retinenda. Berereg. Cod. Can. vindicat. in Proëm. sect. iii.

But now as to the Arian or Socinian interpretations, in this case, they carry no moral certainty at all, to counterpoise the moral absurdity which stands against them: therefore the judgment of the universal Church (were there nothing else) ought to overrule their interpretations. For it was morally impossible that the primitive churches should err, in doctrines of that high importance, so soon, or so universally<sup>h</sup>: but it is not morally impossible, nor at all unlikely, that those later gentlemen should mistake in commenting upon sacred Writ.

The sum then of the whole case, in few words, is this: 1. We assert, that the received doctrine of the Trinity is proved directly to be true, and consequentially to be important, from Scripture itself, according to the known rules of grammar and criticism: and such proof cannot be evaded, or eluded, without doing the greatest violence imaginable to the texts. 2. In the next place, we maintain that the ancient churches taught the same doctrine as an essential, and condemned the contrary opinions as pernicious and dangerous: which consideration makes it now doubly absurd to interpret Scripture in contradiction to that doctrine<sup>i</sup>. 3. The result of the two foregoing considerations is, that since we have thus proved the truth of our doctrine, and the importance of it, both ways, (directly from Scripture, and indirectly from the ancients,) I say, the result is, that this is the faith which we ought to contend for: we are morally certain every way, that it is true, and if true, important of course. And since we have such moral certainty as things of this nature can be conceived to admit of, and such as God has obliged us to submit to and follow in other like cases, it is therefore infallibly certain (that I may once more

<sup>h</sup> Constat proinde omnem doctrinam quæ cum illis Ecclesiis apostolicis, matricibus et originalibus fidei conspiret, veritati deputandam, sine dubio tenentem quod Ecclesiæ ab Apostolis, Apostoli a Christo, Christus a Deo accepit. Tertull. Præscript. cap. 21.

<sup>i</sup> "The unanimous consent of so many distinct visible churches, as exhibited in their several Confessions, Catechisms, or Testimonies of their own or forefathers' faith unto the Council of Nice, was an argument of the same force and efficacy against Arius and his partakers, as the general consent and practice of all nations, in worshipping a divine power in all ages, is against Atheists. Nothing but the ingrafted notion of a Deity could have induced so many several nations, so much different in natural dispositions, in civil discipline and education, to affect or practise the duty of adoration: and nothing but the ingrafted word (as St. James calls the Gospel) delivered by Christ and his Apostles in the holy Scriptures, could have hept so many several churches as communicated their Confessions unto that Council, in the unity of the same faith." Bishop Patrick, Discourse about Tradition, p. 21. printed A.D. 1683.

copy after the great Chillingworth) that, in true wisdom and prudence, we ought to accept this doctrine as revealed by God, and to maintain it with a conscientious care and zeal; and consequently to decline communion with all such as openly impugn it.

Here I thought to have concluded this chapter, having offered what appeared sufficient for supporting or illustrating the use and value of ecclesiastical antiquity: but I considered, that some perhaps might think it an omission, if I should take no notice of sundry objections, which have been frequently urged against the use of antiquity, particularly in controversies of faith. Now, though I apprehend that a clear and just stating of the case (which is what I have been labouring) is the best way of removing objections, as it is leaving them no foundation to stand upon, or none considerable; yet rather than be thought wanting in any respect to a very important subject, I shall endeavour to return particular answers to the most noted objections which have fallen within my observation. The doing it may help to illustrate the subject; as it is considering it under various views, turned and tried every way: and sometimes just answers to objections have the force almost of new proofs, for confirming the positions before asserted. I incline the more to it, because great pains have been taken by many to depreciate the value of antiquity, and to throw contempt upon the primitive Fathers: which is a very unjustifiable practice, and is wounding Christianity itself through their sides; though some that have done it might be far from intending it. But I proceed to particulars.

I. It has been sometimes pleaded, that the Scriptures are in themselves a perfect rule of faith: what need therefore can there be of Fathers, with respect to the fundamental articles<sup>k</sup>? To which we answer, that we produce not Fathers to superadd new doctrines to Scripture, but only to secure the old; not to complete the rule, but more strongly to assert and maintain both its true sense and whole sense. The more perfect the rule is, the more care and circumspection it demands, that we may preserve it entire, both as to words and meaning. For if either of them happens to be stolen away, or wrested from us, Scripture so maimed or castrated is no longer that perfect rule which Christ has ordained. It is much to be suspected, that many pretend a zeal for Scripture, who mean nothing by it, but to have its fences taken down, that they may deal the more freely or rudely with it. They would exclude the ancients, to make room for themselves, and throw a kind of slight upon the received interpretations, only to advance their own. Such commonly has been the way, and therefore there is the less regard to be paid to magnificent words. They complain sometimes, that interpreting Scripture by the ancients is debasing its majesty, and throwing Christ out of his throne<sup>1</sup>. But we think that Christ never sits more secure or easy in his throne than when he has his most faithful guards about him; and that none are so likely to strike at his authority, or to aim at dethroning him, as they that would displace his old servants, only to make way for new ones; who may either obtrude themselves without call, or may be unfurnished for the employ, or not well affected to his person and government. But to speak out of figure, and to come closer to the business, the perfection of Scripture is a point allowed, and is no part of the question between us: the main question is, how we may be most secure of reaping the full benefits of that perfection, whether with the light of antiquity before us, or without it? We know how Faustus Socinus, under colour of extolling the perfection of Scripture, studied nothing so much as to blazon the perfection of his own parts and abilities, deserting the ancients, and trusting only to himself and his uncle Lælius<sup>m</sup>. He presumed to set up his own fond conceits as the measure of all truth: which, in effect, was advancing a new rule of faith, and forcing Scripture to a compliance with it; preferring the rovings of his own imagination before the wisdom of Heaven. It might be shewn, on the other hand, that those who have least indulged their own fancies, but have adhered strictly to antiquity in the prime things, have done most honour to the perfection of Scripture, and have kept the rule of faith entire: this therefore is the way, rather than the other.

<sup>k</sup> Whitby, Dissertat. de Scriptur. Interpret. in præfat. p. 8, 9.

I may add, that when we say that Scripture is perfect, we

<sup>1</sup> Whitby, ibid. p. 9.

<sup>m</sup> Neminem enim ego in iis rebus de quibus in responsione illa mea disseritur, ex iis qui hodie vivunt, ulla ex parte magistrum agnosco; sed Deum tantummodo præceptorem habui sacrasque literas. Quinetiam in universa ipsa divinarum rerum scientia, quæcunque tandem illa in me sit, præter unum Lælium, patrum meum, qui jam diu mortuus est, vel potius præter quædam paucula ab ipso conscripta, et multa annotata, nullum prorsus magistrum me habere contigit. Socin. Ep. ad Squarcialupum. App. tom. i. p. 362.

mean generally, as to the matter of it, which is full and complete to be a rule of life and manners, without taking in any additional rule to join with it. But if we speak of Scripture being perfect in regard to words or style, we can mean only that it is as perfect as words can be, and words (to us now) of a dead language. Whatever imperfection necessarily goes along with all languages must of course go along with Scripture language; which, though dictated from heaven, or conducted by the Spirit of God, is yet adapted to the manner of men, and must take its construction from the common rules of interpretation agreed upon among men. Now if the Fathers, as living nearer the fountain, had some opportunities which we want, and might know some things much better than we at this distance can pretend to do, why should we neglect or despise any light or help which they can give for our direction, in settling the sense of Scripture? In human laws, as I have hinted above, it has been always thought a good rule of interpretation (not excluding any other good rule) to observe, upon what occasion the laws were made, what was their general scope or view, and how they were understood at their first framing, or immediately after, and to recollect how the practices ran: hence it is that reports, and precedents, and adjudged cases are so highly useful in interpreting human laws. The case is not much different in divine laws, being that they also are written in human language, and their sense is to be investigated and cleared up by the like human means. If the Fathers were fallible, so also are we: and if they, with all their advantages, might misconstrue Scripture, so may we much more. Therefore there is no prudence in throwing off their assistance as useless or superfluous. Even fallible men may be useful instructors to others as fallible: and in a multitude of counsellors, especially such counsellors, there is safety<sup>n</sup>.

II. But it is further pleaded, that Scripture is plain in all necessaries, and therefore needs no illustration from the ancients<sup>o</sup>. We allow, that Scripture is plain in necessaries; yea, it is what we urge and contend for: and there is nothing which offends us more than that many persons will endeavour notwithstanding, by violent contortions, far-fetched subtleties, and studied evasions, to elude and frustrate these plain things. Such conduct on the adverse side makes it the more necessary to have recourse to antiquity, for the greater security against all such attempts. For while Scripture is plain, antiquity is plain also, and two plain things are better than one. God himself hath taught us, by adding his oath to his promise, not to think any confirmation superfluous which he is pleased to afford us. His word alone might be safely depended upon, being certain and infallible: but two immutable things afford the stronger consolation?; and God considers the infirmities of mankind. In like manner, though Scripture be very plain to reasonable men, so far as concerns necessaries, yet by taking in antiquity to it, the evidence, upon the whole, becomes both plainer<sup>9</sup> and stronger. There is so much weakness commonly in human nature, and so much reluctance shewn to the reception of divine truths, that we have need of all the plain things we can any where procure: and had we twenty more as plain as these, we could make use of them all, and indeed should be obliged to do so, lest otherwise we should be found guilty of despising the blessings of Heaven. It is certain that there is something very particular in the concerns of religion, that plain things there have not the same force or weight as they have any where else. It is the only subject in the world wherein a man may dispute the most certain facts, and most indubitable proofs, and yet be allowed to be in his senses: for if any one, in the

<sup>n</sup> Prov. xi. 14.

<sup>o</sup> Whitby, Dissertat. in præf. p. 10, 19.

<sup>p</sup> Hebr. vi. 17, 18.

<sup>9</sup> N. B. It should be observed that the word plain is an equivocal word, and of indeterminate meaning, till it be carefully distinguished. It is a relative, and means plain to some or other. To God all things are plain: to angels more things than to man. Doctrines plain to some men are not so to others, on account of ignorance, inattention, prejudice, or any infirmity, natural or contracted. Things also may be plain by the help of means, which are not so without the use of such means. Moreover, there are degrees of plainness, for it consists not in a point, but admits of a latitude. Besides, the plainest things in the world, taken in a right point of view, may cease to be plain, when put into a wrong one: when industriously obscured, embroiled, and entangled, by snares and fallacies, by involving many things in one, (which should be kept separate,) or by expressing them in ambiguous equivocal terms, or by perplexing them with captious and sophistical questions. There are degrees also of attention, upon which the degrees of plainness do very much depend: and attention depends upon the will, and the will is variously influenced by motives, external or internal.

But though plainness be really a relative, and often varies according to the person, and his degree of attention, capacity, inclination, &c. yet we have formed some kind of idea of an absolute plainness, abstracted from particular persons; and we mean by it, as to the point now in hand, such a plainness in the thing itself, or in the words expressing it, as any one of tolerable capacity, with a reasonable attention, and by the use of the ordinary helps, or means, may competently understand: in this sense, or by this standard, fundamentals are commonly said to be plain.

common affairs of life, were to make it a rule to believe nothing but what he sees, or were to reject the faith of all history, he would undoubtedly be despised or pitied by everybody, as not well in his wits. Seeing then that the case of religion is so widely different from all others, and that the plainest evidences there often lose their effect, we can never be too solicitous in accumulating evidence upon evidence, and testimony upon testimony, to do the most we can towards relieving the weakness or conquering the reluctance of men slow to believe. And when we have done the best we can, and have pursued every reasonable method we can think of, we are yet to look upon it as sufficient, only because we can do no more. Wherefore, no plainness of Scripture can ever be justly thought to supersede the use of antiquity; unless it could be supposed that no additional light nor strength can be borrowed from it: which is too extravagant a supposition to need any confutation; besides that I have already obviated every suggestion of that kind in the former part of this chapter.

If it be said, that common Christians, at least, can reap no benefit from antiquity, nor make any use of it; that will not be reason sufficient for throwing it aside, so long as the learned may. But even common Christians do enjoy the benefit of it, if not at first hand, yet at the second, third, or fourth; and that suffices here, as well as in other cases of as weighty concernment. How do they know, for instance, that Scripture is the word of God? They know it immediately or proximately from their proper guides, or other instructors; who in the last resort learn it from the ancients. So then ordinary Christians may thus remotely have the use of antiquity (not to mention other nearer ways<sup>r</sup>) with respect to the sense of Scripture, as well as with regard to its authenticity: and their faith may be both strengthened and brightened by this additional reinforcement. "The people are " to understand the grounds of their faith, and to judge, by the " best helps they can, what doctrine is agreeable to Scripture: " but among those helps we take in, not barely the assistance of " their own guide, but the evidence he brings as to the sense of " the teaching Church in the best and purest ages<sup>s</sup>." But to return.

<sup>r</sup> See this matter considered more at large in Bishop Hare's Scripture Vindicated, p. 111, &c.

<sup>s</sup> Stillingfleet's Answer to J. S.'s Catholic Letters, p. 58.

We admit, as I before said, that Scripture is very plain in necessaries: as, for instance, nothing can be plainer from Scripture than that Christ is God, and over all God blessed for ever, true God, great God, Jehovah, and the like; and that divine attributes are ascribed to him, and divine worship also, to make every thing clear, and to cut off all reasonable handle for dispute. But notwithstanding that all these things are so plain, yet considering that we are not the first men that ever looked into Scripture, but that others, who had as good eyes as we, and as upright hearts, and a competent measure of common sense, (besides some peculiar advantages beyond what we can pretend to,) have perused the same Scripture before us; I say, considering these things, it would be something of a mortification to us, or would appear somewhat strange, if such persons should not have found the same doctrines then which we have the pleasure to find now. For whatever is really plain to moderns, and necessary, must, one would think, by parity of reason, or for a stronger reason, have been plain to the ancients also, and necessary to them as well as to us. Accordingly, upon examining, we find that the same doctrine was plain to them, even so far as to be looked upon as an essential: a consideration which adds the more strength to what we had before proved from Scripture, as the want of such concurring suffrage would have been a perplexing difficulty; I mean, while we have such ancient monuments to look into, and to compare. Indeed, if they were all lost, burnt, or otherwise extinguished, our Scripture proof (supposing Scripture itself to want no proof) would stand firm without them: but when we have the ancients to compare with Scripture, and know that, in the very nature of the thing, they ought to tally with each other; the ancients now, of consequence, must be either a very strong confirmation as to any doctrines held for articles of faith, or as strong an objection. They are considerable disadvantages where they run counter, and as considerable advantages where they favour.

III. It is sometimes pleaded, that Scripture is its own best interpreter, by comparing texts with texts, and therefore there is no need of Fathers in the case; for in the best we have all<sup>t</sup>.

In reply to which, we are very ready to allow, that comparing Scripture with Scripture is a very good method of interpretation, yea, and the best and most satisfactory of any, to every rational mind: but still we do not see reason why it should be thought to supersede any other that is good. For, after we have thereby obtained all the home light we can get, where will be the harm of admitting still further light, if we can procure it, from abroad? The more we have of both kinds, the better: every additional increase or improvement, though it were but small in comparison, yet has its use, either for confirming the weak and wavering, or for comforting them who are strong in faith, or for confuting and confounding novelists; but most of all for reclaiming those who are over apt to be led by authority and great names, perhaps of mere moderns. For certainly, if authority, or great names, or even numbers, are of any weight; ancients are preferable to moderns, considered as such, Fathers and Councils to private dogmatizers, and the Christian world to a few gainsayers. Such being the manifest and constant use of the argument drawn from antiquity, superadded to Scripture, there is great reason for taking it in after Scripture, that we may have the benefit of both.

<sup>t</sup> Whithy, Dissertat. præf. p. 12.

The excellent Buddeus, otherwise a very judicious writer, appears not so clear, or not so accurate in his account of this matter, as might be wished. He gives his judgment, "that neither natural reason nor tradition should be the rule of interpreting, but Scripture itself, and the analogy of faith." Had he said, neither one nor other, but all together, I think he had said right: but as he has taken in only two of the things, excluding the rest, as it seems, from bearing a part in the interpretation of Scripture, he appears to me to have judged wrong upon the case, or at least to have fallen short of his wonted accuracy. For certainly he ought to have allowed something to natural reason, and something also to antiquity, though not every thing. There is a great deal of difference between admitting either of them to govern absolutely, and throwing them quite out: and there is a just medium between giving each of them a negative, and making either of them sole umpire. There are many considerations to be taken in, for the proceeding rightly in the tendimus: quam quidem viam et rectissimam et tutissimam esse, res ipsa ostendit, et facile perspiciat qui cuncta rite secum ponderaverit. Buddæi Isagog. vol. ii. p. 1795. Conf. ejusdem Præfat. ad Salom. Glassii Opera, edit. Lips. A. D. 1725.

<sup>u</sup> A Socinianis, non minus quam Romanensibus discedimus, dum nec rationem, nec traditiones, (aut Ecclesiæ auctoritatem,) pro regula et norma interpretandi scripturam agnoscimus, sed Scripturam ex Scriptura secundum analogiam fidei explicandam con-

interpretation of Scripture; and all of them respectively must have their share, as they have their weight. To exemplify what I mean; true interpretation of Scripture cannot, in any case whatever, run counter to any plain certain principle of natural reason, (inasmuch as truth can never be contrary to truth.) nor, in any case whatever, to Scripture itself rightly interpreted; nor, in any case whatever, to the analogy of faith, before proved, (which amounts nearly to the same with the preceding;) nor, without the utmost necessity, to the natural, usual, unforced sense of the words; nor, so far as concerns fundamentals, to the universal judgment of the first and purest ages of the Church. These, as I conceive, are the butts and boundaries within which every true interpretation is confined: and whenever any pretended interpretation is found to break through them, or through any of them, there needs no more to pronounce it false. To express the same thing affirmatively which before I have negatively, when any interpretation of Scripture has all those five characters, viz. natural reason, parallel places of Scripture, analogy of faith, propriety of language, and countenance of antiquity,) to vouch directly for it, then it is as strongly supported as it is possible for an interpretation to be. If it has only some of those positive characters, or one only, the rest not interfering, it may be a good interpretation; but the more it has, so much the surer<sup>x</sup>. For example: the doctrine I am here defending has

<sup>x</sup> Dr. Rogers, in one of his Sermons, (Posth. Sermon. iv. p. 95, &c.) explains this whole matter somewhat differently, but agreeing in the main with what I have here offered. His thoughts upon the point are comprised in the particulars here following, which I shall produce in his own words, as nearly as an abridgment will permit:

“ 1. Many places of sacred Writ are so plain, that no man, who reads or hears them, in a language he is acquainted with, can doubt of their meaning.

“ 2. The sense of other places we collect from rational deductions, comparing one Scripture with another.

“ 3. Other places there are which require the knowledge of history, of ancient facts and customs, of early tradition, and primitive acceptance,

“ to determine their sense.

“ 4. The inspiration of the Scriptures supposed, we cannot, consistently with such supposition, either from the construction of the words, or from deductions of reason, or from authority, admit any proposition, as the intended sense of Scripture, which contradicts any manifest truth.

“ 5. Neither can we admit contradictory expositions of the same or different places of Scripture.

“ In the two last cases, we conclude negatively with the clearest assurance: but when we go on to ascertain the meaning positively, the sense of Scripture which we receive in the first way, by an immediate view, appears to us with greatest evidence: and the sense we collect in the second way, by rational deductions, is more evident than what four of the said characters positively for it, (viz. tenour of Scripture, analogy of faith, propriety of language, and antiquity;) and the fifth, which is natural reason, is not against it: therefore it is a very just and reasonable interpretation. So many plain legible characters of truth ought, in all equity, to overrule any seeming or conjectural repugnancies as to the nature of the thing confessedly mysterious, so long as there is no plain contrariety to any known truth.

Hitherto I have been answering those objections which aim at setting the Fathers aside as needless, being superseded (as is thought) by the perfection, or plainness, or fulness of sacred Writ. The remaining objections which I am to take notice of are of another kind, striking more directly at the reputation of the Fathers, in order to insinuate that they are by no means qualified to serve the purposes they are brought for, being more likely to perplex than to instruct a reader, more apt to mislead and draw us aside than to set us right.

IV. The obscurity of the Fathers makes up one half of the learned Daille's Treatise upon that subject. I need not be very particular in examining into that plea here, because it will come up again, in part, under another article lower down, where I shall consider it more distinctly. For the present it may suffice to observe: 1. That Mr. Daille, in some instances, rhetoricates upon the subject, and has frequently overstrained. 2. Many things have been cleared up since he wrote that piece, (since the year 1631;) some by himself, more by others after him: so that what might appear to be of some force then can have little or none now. 3. Particular answers have been returned to the several articles on the head of obscurity, by those who have professedly undertaken it, besides what has been done occasionally

"we receive in the third way, from "the affirmations of authority."

So this excellent writer resolves the positive characters of true and just interpretation into immediate view, rational deductions, and authority, all having their proper weight of evidence respectively, but in different degrees. The two negative characters are checks upon all the positive ones, to ascertain their application, and to prevent the pushing any of them too far. This account, in substance, differs so little from what I have offered, that it appears to contain much the same thoughts placed in another light, or differently ranged. It may be of use to a reader to take the same thing in two views, and so to form his own judgment, as he sees best, out of both: and therefore I have here presented him with both.

Y Scrivener. adv. Dallæum, par. i. per tot. Reeves's Preface to the Apologists, p. 37, &c. Natalis Alexander, Hist. Eccl. Sæc. ii. diss. xvi. c. 22. p. 537, &c. Beveridge's Cod. Can. Vindicat. Procem. sect. viii.

in new editions of Fathers, or in bibliothèques, or in critical dissertations. 4. Whatever truth there may be in the objection, as to sundry controverted points of inferior moment, yet it affects not the cause now before us: for Daillé himself allows that the Fathers are generally clear enough in points fundamental, whereof this is one, in his judgment at least. He writes thus: "You shall there meet with very strong and solid proofs of those fundamental principles of our religion, touching which we are all agreed; and also many excellent things laid open, tending to the right understanding of these mysteries, and also of the Scriptures wherein they are contained. In this particular their authority may be of good use to you, and may serve as a probable argument of the truth." So then, whatever obscurity may otherwise be found in the Fathers, (like as in Scripture itself,) the cause which we have now in hand appears to be but little concerned in it, according to the judgment of that learned man, who made the most of the objection, as to other matters. For though he sometimes points out some obscure passages, as he conceived them to be, relating to things fundamental, yet, upon the whole, he apprehended that those doctrines might be plainly enough traced up to the very days of the Apostles, and that the Fathers might be exceeding useful to us in that view, and for that purpose.

V. It has been frequently objected, that many of the Fathers have erred, and sometimes grossly: and large collections of their real or supposed mistakes have been drawn out, and presented to public view<sup>a</sup>. Now, indeed, if any man should presume to say that the Fathers were inspired, or infallible in what they wrote, such a collection of errors might be of use for the confuting the false presumption: but how it affects their credit or character as witnesses of the Church's prime doctrines in their times, appears not. It is not uncommon for those very Fathers, where they give a wrong and false opinion, to make a true discovery of the Church's sentiments, in that very instance, contrary to their own. Therefore a reader should know how to distinguish

<sup>a</sup> Daillé of the Right Use of the Fathers, part ii. p. 184.

Si in vivis jam esset [Dallæus] quam ægre ferret vir pietissimus, si aliqui reperirentur qui argumentis, quibus ipse causam Pontificiam adco feliciter debellavit, ad labefactandam et subvertendam Nicænam fidem abuterentur. Cave, Ep. Apologet. p. 19.

<sup>a</sup> Daillé, part ii. c. 4. p. 60, &c. Whithy, Dissertat. in Præfat. sect. iv. p. 15, &c.

between delivering an opinion, and reporting a fact; as also between appealing to the Fathers as unerring judges, and appealing to them as faithful witnesses.

But to speak more directly to the charge of errors, it may be justly pleaded in abatement, that upon a careful review, many of them have been found to be purely imaginary, mere mistakes or misrepresentations of the too precipitate correctors: and of those that are real, most will be seen in things only of a problematical kind, and of a slight nature<sup>b</sup>. Or if they be of a more grievous sort, they were the mistakes of some few, and were either not universal<sup>c</sup>, or not ancient, and never insisted upon as articles of faith and terms of communion. So that, whatever errors are discovered in any Father or Fathers, they do not invalidate the argument drawn from the universal agreement of the ancient churches in the prime things. However, there have not been wanting, upon occasion, learned hands<sup>d</sup> to draw up apologies for the Fathers, either in separate discourses, or in prefaces to new editions, or by way of note, or the like; by which means most of those unworthy aspersions have been happily removed, and the black catalogues much reduced. A learned foreigner<sup>e</sup>, not long ago, being justly sensible of the mischievous tendency of that unnatural practice of some Christians, in throwing contempt upon the brightest ornaments of the Christian Church, took the pains to consider the particular articles of doctrine upon which the Fathers have been wrongfully suspected or charged, and to do them justice against their indiscreet or over censorious accusers.

Since that time, I do not know a warmer or keener adversary that the Fathers have had than Mons. Barbeyrac, Professor of Civil Law at Groningen, and known to the learned world by his

<sup>b</sup> Monebo tantum, in patrum scriptis dogmata philosophica a fidei articulis probe esse distinguenda. In his, sacris literis et Catholicæ traditioni strictius se alligant, et in rei summa omnes conveniunt: in illis, majori utuntur libertate, et opiniones sæpius adhibent quæ in philosophorum scholis ventilari solebant; quin et in explicandis fidei mysteriis quandoque voces e schola philosophica petitas admovent, sed ad Christianum sensum accommodatas. Cave, Epist. Apologet. p. 48.

<sup>c</sup> See Grotius de Jur. B. et P. lib. i. c. 2. s. 9. p. 60.

<sup>d</sup> Thorndicius de Rat. et Jur. Fin. Controv. c. 25. Scrivener. adv. Dall. par. ii. c. iv. p. 185. Cavii Epistola Apologetica. Reeves's Preface, p. 67, &c. Remarks on Christianity as old &c. with regard to Primitive Antiquity, part i. continued, printed for Crownfield, 1733.

<sup>e</sup> Zornius Hamburgensis. Vindicie Patrum per omnes fidei Christianæ articulos, oppositæ Joanni Dallæo: una cum selectis observationibus contra recentiores Patrum censores, Anglos, Belgas, Gallos. Inter Opuscul. Sac. tom. i. A. D. 1709. Giessæ Hassorum. p. 659. edit. Nup. A. D. 1731.

French translations of Puffendorf and Grotius, and his learned notes upon both. He attacks the Fathers principally upon the head of morality, (as his subject led him to do,) and seems to exert his utmost endeavours to sink their reputation for sense and conduct, and even for conscience too, in some measure, in order to strike them out of all credit or authority<sup>f</sup>. His work has twice appeared in English, (as well as in French,) and may therefore deserve some notice in this place, as much as I may have room for, not to make too long an excursion.

That satire upon the Fathers (for it deserves no better name) had not long been abroad, before Mr. Ceillier, a learned Roman Catholic, drew up a formal answer to it, of which I have seen little more than the titles, and a few extracts. Afterwards, the learned Buddeus animadverted pretty largely upon him, detecting some of his mistakes, but with great tenderness; moderating, as it were, between Mr. Ceillier and him, in respect of several particulars. <sup>h</sup> Buddeus was himself not the most zealous admirer of the Fathers; and therefore what he says in their favour may be justly thought not to exceed in any respect, but to fall within compass. Some officious gentleman amongst us, having met with Mons. Barbeyrac's French treatise, published it separately in our language, prefixing a kind of boyish title<sup>i</sup> to it, and recommending it with some airs of insult, such as are frequently incident to little minds. Not long after, an ingenious gentleman printed a reply<sup>j</sup>, to rebuke the translator for his rudeness, and at the same time to defend the Fathers against the injurious accusations of the author himself: which he has effectually performed, with good learning and solid judgment.

Now, seeing that so much has been done already, I may content myself with a few strictures, or brief reflections. In justice to the Fathers, and to primitive Christianity struck at through their sides, it ought to be told, that the learned civilian has not dealt fairly with the public in that article. He has not been careful about the facts upon which he grounds his censure, but

<sup>f</sup> Prefatory Discourse to his French Version of Puffendorf; since rendered into English, and prefixed to the English edition of 1729, sect. ix. x. p. 18, &c.

<sup>g</sup> Apologie de la Morale des Pères de l'Église contre les injustes Accusations du Sieur Jean Barbeyrac.

Paris, 1718.

<sup>h</sup> Buddæus, Isagog. vol. i. p. 620—642.

<sup>i</sup> The Spirit of Ecclesiastics of all Sects and Ages, &c. 1723.

<sup>j</sup> The Spirit of Infidelity detected. By a Believer. 1723.

has often taken them upon trust from others, transcribing their oversights, or partial accounts. Indeed he makes a kind of apology for his taking so much at second hand: for he says, he “designedly pitched upon examples which had been already remarked and produced by others, and are extant in books most common and easy to be had<sup>k</sup>.” But then he should have inquired whether those examples had not been already replied to, and competently cleared up, and whether, at least, they were not capable of it. And he should have considered further, whether the authors whom he copies from were all persons to be entirely relied upon in what they say, as men of known learning, judgment, candour, and modesty; not prejudiced against the Fathers, nor otherwise apt to be censorious, and over severe in discovering imaginary faults, or exposing real ones. Before one determines any thing as to the character of the Fathers from second-hand reports, it would be proper to inquire whether their accusers were themselves men of clear and unexceptionable characters. It is no excuse to a person of learning and abilities, that he suffered himself to be imposed upon by others, in a matter which required care and faithfulness.

Besides his too often deceiving himself or others with false facts, even those that are true, in part, or in the main, are yet seldom placed in a true light. Every real or seeming fault of the ancients is rhetorically aggravated, the hardest construction commonly put upon it, and no favourable allowances are brought in to qualify: but after saying the unkindest things which he had any colour for, and a great deal of art used to contrive such colour, he forgets to afford them their due praises in any thing, to counterbalance the obloquy. So that, were a reader to form his idea of the Fathers only by what he finds in that representation, he would go near to make it the very reverse of their true and just character. I cannot here take upon me to criticise the whole work; that has been done already by abler hands: but I shall mention a few particulars, to give the readers a taste of his way and manner, whereby they may competently judge of the rest.

The author falls first upon Athenagoras, and charges him with “seeming to establish the worship of angels<sup>l</sup>.” But this is a false report. Athenagoras neither says it, nor seems to say it. Indeed Dupin, whether to favour the Romish cause, or whether by mere forgetfulness or oversight, had said the same thing : but Mons. Barbeyrac understands the nature of evidence too well to apprehend that the retailing a misreport can amount to a proof. He has another complaint against the same Athenagoras for disallowing second marriages. The fact is true in some sense or other ; but what second marriages, is the question. Might not Athenagoras mean, marrying again after wrongful divorce ? A very learned man<sup>m</sup> has pleaded much, and well, for that construction : and it is favoured by Athenagoras's<sup>n</sup> grounding his doctrine upon our Lord's own words<sup>o</sup> relating to such second marriages.

<sup>k</sup> Prefatory Discourse, sect. x. p. 33.

<sup>l</sup> Ibid. sect. ix. p. 18.

And though he speaks against the marriage as not good after the death of the wife, yet he may be understood only of such wife wrongfully divorced before. For he thought that the adultery before incurred, by marrying in her lifetime, did not cease by her death. The marriage contracted in adultery, like an error in the first concoction, could never be fully corrected, but would still retain its primitive impurity, as having been null, and wrong from the first. If his words may admit that sense, it is sufficient : for an accuser is bound to make good his allegation, and the old rule is, in dubiis benigniora semper præferenda. I may add, that Athenagoras has been always reputed a man of the Church : and yet it is certain that the doctrine here charged upon him was condemned by the Church in the Montanists and Novatians. Which is a further presumption in his favour, and seems to justify the mild and candid construction of the words in question.

The next man Mr. B. falls upon is Clemens of Alexandria, whom he uses more unkindly than he had before used Athenagoras. He charges him with three special faults<sup>p</sup>. 1. With teaching stoical paradoxes for Christian doctrine. 2. With maintaining that "Christ and his Apostles had not any passions at all." 3. With "justifying the idolatry of the Pagans." The first article appears captious and frivolous. For what if Clemens, whether the better to reconcile the Stoics to Christianity, or whether to turn their own artillery upon them, made use of their language and phrasology to recommend true and sound

<sup>m</sup> Suicer. Thesaur. in voce δὶγαμος, p. 895.

<sup>n</sup> Athenag. Legat. p. 130.

<sup>o</sup> Mark x. 11. Matt. xix. 9. Luke xvi. 18.

<sup>p</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 19.

Christian principles by<sup>q</sup>; where was the harm? Or what was there in it which might not well become so wise and so good a man? Let Mr. B. put himself in Clemens's place, and then consider, whether he could do any thing better or more commendable in those circumstances.

The second article is founded in nothing but misconception, and was cleared up long ago by the learned Dr. Cave<sup>r</sup>, and by others<sup>s</sup> after him: not to mention what the Benedictines have said more largely in defence of Hilary against the same accusation<sup>t</sup>.

The third article is entirely without grounds; a conclusion drawn without premises to support it<sup>u</sup>, a false inference charged upon very innocent words, in contradiction to the whole tenour of Clemens's writings. Is this dealing fairly with the ancients or with the public?

Besides these particular charges upon Clemens, he has some others, more general, which are either injurious or frivolous. He blames him for want of method and coherence, for being full of declamation and mystical allusion, and the like<sup>x</sup>. Which kind of discourse is itself declamatory and detracting, not becoming a person of candour or gravity, who would make allowances for circumstances and times, and weigh things in an equal balance. Why must every author walk in trammels, and be confined to rules of art? Immethodical collections are useful in their kind, and ought to have their proper commendation. But it is further said, as from Le Clerc, that "Clemens's Pedagogue abounds with maxims excessively rigid, and far remote from any thing now in practice." We might except to Le Clerc, as to a person of uncommon delicacy, known to lean generally to the severer side, and none of the best natured or most happy in his censures<sup>y</sup>, but prejudiced, by his principles, against the primitive Fathers; jealous of a reputation which, he saw, stood in his way, and much afraid of their superiority. Perhaps, after all, he

<sup>q</sup> See Spirit of Infidelity detected, p. 31.

<sup>r</sup> Cave, Epist. Apolog. p. 50, &c.

<sup>s</sup> Natal. Alexand. E. H. sect. ii. dissert. 8. p. 395. Nourii Appar. ad Biblioth. Max. vol. i. p. 968.

<sup>t</sup> Præfat. General. sect. iii. p. 30, &c.

<sup>u</sup> Vid. Buddæi Isagog. pag. 623. Spirit of Infidelity detected, p. 33.

<sup>x</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 19.

<sup>y</sup> Vid. Perizonius in Ægypt. Origin. Præfat. p. 8. Curtius Vindicat. p. 10—23, 185—191. Jenkins. Def. Augustin. adv. Pherreponum. Præf. p. 9. Reflections on Learning, p. 235, &c. Continuation of the Answer of the Hist. of Oracles, Pref. p. 47, &c. Cave, Epist. Apologet. p. 9, 10, 11, 12. Cum multis aliis.

mistakes Clemens's meaning : or if he does not, his censure may be more an argument of the present degeneracy, than of Clemens's excessive rigour or austerity. I shall only add, that before we blame the ancients for too strict a morality, (an error, if it be one, on the right hand,) we ought to be well apprised of the circumstances of those times : for diversity of circumstances requires a diversity in the application of the same general rules, and prescribes as different a conduct.

I shall not go on to the other Fathers whom this worthy gentleman has animadverted upon : I have given enough for a sample in the two first. But I shall proceed to observe something with respect to his general manner of carrying on the impeachment. After he has done with the particulars charged upon the Fathers man by man, he pretends to have demonstrated clearly, that the most celebrated doctors of the six first centuries were but bad masters, and very poor guides in matters of morality. Here we see what it was that he aimed at ; though he has demonstrated nothing but a strong inclination to detract from true and great worth. There is an artificial confusedness in his throwing six centuries together : three or a little more will be enough for us to insist upon, so far as our argument from antiquity is concerned. Everybody knows that corruptions came in gradually, more and more every day, after the world, as it were, crept into the Church<sup>2</sup> : we make a distinction between the elder and the later times. It will not be easy to persuade us, that in those best and purest ages, when Christian practice was in the height of perfection, that the theory of it was so very lame and defective as he is pleased to intimate ; or that the guides and masters were so exceeding low or bad, when the scholars or disciples were, for the most part, eminently good. If any one doubts of the fact, he may satisfy himself by looking into the accounts given both by Christians and Pagans<sup>3</sup> ; such as make it evident that the morals of that time were the admiration and envy of the heathen world

<sup>2</sup> Scribere disposui ab adventu Salvatoris usque ad nostram ætatem, id est ab Apostolis usque ad nostram temporis facem, quomodo et per quos Christi Ecclesia nata sit, et adulta, persecutionibus creverit, et martyriis coronata sit : et postquam ad Christianos principes venerit potentia quidem et divitiis major, sed virtutibus

minor facta sit. Hieronym. Vit. Malch. Opp. vol. iv. p. 91.

<sup>3</sup> The testimonies are collected into one view by Cave, in his Primitive Christianity ; Bingham, in his Christian Antiquities, b. vi. c. 1. Fabricius, Salutaris Lux Evangelii, c. x. p. 194, &c. Baltus's Answer to Fontenelle's Hist. of Oracles, vol. ii. p. 97.

then, as they are an excellent pattern<sup>b</sup> for the Christian world since. The author may conceive as highly as he pleases of modern morality, but impartial judges will think it no commendation of it to have it set at variance with primitive Christianity: to differ from that standard, in any thing material, is to come short of it, supposing circumstances to be the same. Neither is want of artificial method any more an objection against the ancients than against Scripture itself, the best ethics of any.

But to proceed with our author, he runs off for a while into declamatory invective against those who are "jealous of the honour of the Fathers:" he "pities them with all his heart," thinking it "inhuman to insult them<sup>c</sup>;" but doing it all the time. Then he gravely tells his reader a formal untruth, that they tacitly suppose the Fathers to have been infallible<sup>d</sup>; as if he had intended only to guard against a false notion of the infallibility of the Fathers<sup>e</sup>. But there is a very wide distance between supposing them infallible, and representing them as bad masters, very poor guides, &c. This learned gentleman, I presume, does not pretend to be infallible; and yet he might think himself ill used if represented as a bad master, or a very poor guide: there is a medium between the extremes.

He brings up again, soon after, the charge of gross errors, most profound ignorance of what they ought to have known; adding, that most of them, more or less, were led by passion, and that their conduct frequently was neither regular nor justifiable<sup>f</sup>. Well then, surely this is something more than barely saying they were fallible men; and one may presume to contradict such a misreport of them, without maintaining that they were infallible. How will this learned gentleman be able to prove that the character he has here given is their true general character, such as will suit the three first centuries? Church history is flatly con-

<sup>b</sup> Dr. Wotton, in a treatise where he intended to extol the moderns, and to adjudge them the preference as often as he could, yet took care to give this testimony to ancient Christianity:

"It is certain, that many of the ablest of the ancient Fathers were excellent casuists; as indeed every man who has a right judgment, an honest mind, and a thorough acquaintance with the design of our blessed Saviour revealed in the Gospel, must of necessity be. And

"if at this distance many of their decisions seem over severe, there is as great at least (if not greater) reason to suspect, that the complaints now-a-days raised against them may arise from our degeneracy, as from their unwarrantable strictness." Wotton's Reflections on Ancient and Modern Learning, p. 369.

<sup>c</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 25.

<sup>d</sup> Ibid.

<sup>e</sup> Ibid. p. 26.

<sup>f</sup> Ibid. p. 26.

trary, and the Christian world hitherto has been used to honour them with the title of the best and purest ages. He refers us twice to some tart reflections of Gregory Nazianzen upon some of the clergy in his time, about A. D. 381. Perhaps Nazianzen himself might be led by resentment to aggravate in some measure; for he was a man of spirit, had some warmth, and might drop too severe a censure, under a sense of the ill usage he had met with. But supposing his censure to be strictly just, what argument is there in it? The clergy about 381. were guilty of many and great faults, therefore the whole order were as guilty all along, for two hundred and eighty years together; reckoning from the apostolic age. I see not by what rules of reasoning such consequence can be drawn<sup>h</sup>. Everybody knows how miserably the Church had been rent asunder by parties and factions from the time that Arianism broke out; that is, for sixty years backwards, or thereabout: by means whereof men's passions were inflamed, and their tempers soured. But how does this affect the elder times, when all the bishops of the Christian Church were in the main unanimous, and held amicably together against Jews, Pagans, and heretics? Allow that heats and animosities prevailed much among Churchmen towards the end of the fourth century, and that the state of the Church at that time was become very corrupt, according to the accounts given by Nazianzen: but then allow also, that such corruptions were of recent date, and that the like had not been seen in elder times, before the rise of Arius, as Nazianzen himself testifies<sup>i</sup>. And he had a vast esteem of one council, at least, the Council of Nice, older than what he speaks of. So then, if Nazianzen is a competent evidence to found the objection upon, let him be so also on our side, to supply us with a proper answer, as far as our cause can be concerned in the question.

The author proceeds to contest the right which the Fathers have been thought to have to the very modest title of propagators of the Christian religion: he thinks it should be given to the Apostles only<sup>k</sup>. But certainly the Fathers succeeded to the lamve synodum inique se gessisse, et nullam veritatis, nullam innocentie rationem habuisse: an mox omnes sunt damnandæ rejiciendæ, exterminandæ? Cave, Epist. Apologet. p. 25.

<sup>g</sup> Ibid. p. 18, 34.

<sup>h</sup> Exemplum profert [Clericus] Concilii C. P. I. quo Gregorius Nazianzenus factiosis quorundam artibus vexatus, sede sua cessit potius quam expulsus est; unde fervidioris ingenii vir πολυθρύλλητον illud de synodis iudicium protulit. Sed fac hanc il-

<sup>i</sup> Nazianz. Orat. xxi. p. 380.

<sup>k</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 26, 27.

Apostles in the great work of propagating Christianity, and therefore were as properly (though not altogether so eminently) propagators of it as the Apostles themselves. Yea, they also were eminently such during the time that miracles lasted, that is to say, for three centuries at least. But he is pleased to ask a little lower in the same page, "Why must the Fathers of the three or six first centuries have been men of true piety and knowledge, rather than those of the tenth or eleventh?" But why does he insert, or six, except it be to blend and confound what should be kept distinct, and to put a fallacy upon the reader? Let the question be asked about the three first centuries, and we can assign many and good reasons why they must have been, in the general, better men than those of the tenth or eleventh: or if the reasons should not satisfy, we appeal to testimony, to certain fact, which supersedes all reasons. As to the fourth, fifth, and sixth centuries, they might decline in proportion, and did so, though there were some excellent men in all: which however I have no need to consider.

A little after, he falls again to softening, and now he asks, "Must the Fathers have been liable to no failings, no passions, no errors, no ignorance at all?" But was that the question? Why all this shifting and shuffling, if a man were not conscious of a bad cause, and of his acting an unhandsome part? The Fathers of the three first centuries, (that golden age of Christianity, tried and purified in the fire of persecution,) though not exempt from failings, nor infallible, were yet men of a higher character than those of the tenth or eleventh; and were not bad masters, nor very poor guides, but the contrary: that is what we say, and what we abide by. He goes on to tell us, that he does "not pretend to say," that they were all "a pack of profligate wretches<sup>l</sup>." No; God forbid. I know not whether Celsus, Porphyry, or Julian would have said such a thing, in the greatest extremity of their rage: they had some regard to truth, and to public report, and to their own characters<sup>m</sup>. But though he does not say that, what will he at length say? "There

<sup>k</sup> Prefatory Disc. p. 28.

<sup>l</sup> Id. ibid.

<sup>m</sup> "The heathens themselves, even such as were the greatest enemies to the Christian religion, could not forbear often to do justice to their great knowledge and eminent sanc"tity." So says F. Baltus in answer to Fontenelle. Continuation, &c. p. 97. And he instances in Porphyry, and the heathen philosophers of his time; he mentions Libanius also, and Longinianus, and Maximus Madaurensis.

“ were some among them who were, in some measure, men of “ piety and knowledge<sup>n</sup>.” How hard to extort the slightest compliment upon those great and good men! Though he can be lavish enough elsewhere towards Confucius, a Pagan<sup>o</sup>, and towards Hobbes<sup>p</sup>, a reputed Atheist. He proceeds again to pass a decretory sentence upon the Fathers, in the same detracting way; that “ their virtues were, for the generality, far from “ being any way considerable, and their knowledge commonly false “ and confused<sup>q</sup> :” and he appears to be much offended with those who would bring him back to the primitive food of husks and acorns<sup>r</sup>. Yet the illustrious Grotius was plentifully fed with those husks, or else he had never been Grotius. And he had a very great esteem and value for them: which, as it appears in all his works, so more particularly in that admirable treatise of his, his System of Morality. He understood the valuable use of them to that very science, has intimated it over and over in express words<sup>s</sup>, and exemplified it quite through that excellent performance. I am aware that Mons. Barbeyrac, in his edition of Grotius, and in his French version, has notes of correction upon those passages of his author, and condemns even his master Grotius now, as well as the Fathers before. But Grotius was a wise man, and knew what he said; besides that the thing speaks itself. I may add, that this gentleman himself, who has profited so much by Grotius and Puffendorf, (who profited by the Fathers,) has been in some measure obliged to the Fathers, though it were only at second or third hand. But the first hand is undoubtedly the best<sup>t</sup>: and if any man would expect ever to come up to Grotius, it must be, not merely by reading Grotius, but by reading as he read, and doing as he did<sup>u</sup>.

<sup>n</sup> Ibid. p. 28.

<sup>o</sup> Pref. Disc. sect. xv. p. 44.

<sup>p</sup> Ibid. sect. xxix. p. 80.

<sup>q</sup> Pref. Disc. p. 33.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 35.

<sup>s</sup> Grotius de Jur. B. et P. Proleg. n. li. p. 32, 33. ed. 1720. Conf. lib. i. c. 2. s. 9. p. 60.

<sup>t</sup> “ Constant reading of the most “ perfect modern books, which does “ not go jointly on with the ancients “ in their turns, will, by bringing the “ ancients into disuse, cause the learning “ of the men of the next generation to sink; by reason that they,

“ not drawing from those springs from “ whence those excellent moderns “ drew, whom they only propose to “ follow, nor taking those measures “ which these men took, must for “ want of that foundation which their “ modern guides first carefully laid, “ fail in no long compass of time.” Wotton's Reflections, &c. pref. p. 3.

<sup>u</sup> The learned Buddeus, a judicious and moderate man, and not prejudiced on the side of the Fathers, does justice to them and to Grotius, both at once, in these remarkable words: “ Sapienter igitur antiquis-

The conclusion which the author makes is suitable to the rest, and runs thus: "Notwithstanding that great inaccuracy of the Fathers, which has often caused them to commit considerable errors; notwithstanding that fancy they had for vain subtleties, which made them neglect things of greater importance; notwithstanding all this, I say, the fundamental doctrines of religion and morality have still been preserved amongst Christians, even in the most dismal ages of darkness and vice<sup>x</sup>." Now, though here he is pleased to attribute no more (in respect of fundamentals) to the best and purest times, than to the "most dismal ages of darkness and vice," (as before he had been pleased to compare the tenth and eleventh with the three first.) yet one might have expected to find that he had agreed however with those first ages in all those fundamentals, and had acknowledged his obligations to them for their care and zeal in handing them down to us. But he refers us, for explication of fundamentals, to a famous treatise of Le Clerc's, at the end of Grotius de Veritate Religionis Christianæ, A. D. 1709. A treatise so indefinite and loose, that one scarce knows what it aims at; except it be, that nothing should pass for a fundamental which has been ever disputed by men calling themselves Christians, and professing Scripture, however interpreted, to be their rule<sup>y</sup>. Which is judging of important truths, not by the Word of God, soberly understood, nor by Catholic tradition, nor by the reason of things, but by the floating humours and fancies of men; as if all Christian doctrines were to be expunged out of the list of necessaries, which have had the misfortune to be disputed amongst us, and a short creed were to be made out of the remainder. But what if others, with Baron Herbert of Cherbury, or with the author of the Fundamental Constitutions of Carolina, building upon the "simis etiam Ecclesiæ doctoribus, de "juris naturalis capitibus, haud per- "functoriesermo instituitur. Basilium

"Magnum, Gregorium Nazianzenum,
"ipsumque Chrysostomum, non tan-
"tum Græcæ, sed universæ quacun-
"que patet Ecclesiæ summum decus
"evolvat, legat, scrutetur, cui dubium
"forte ambiguumque id quod asse-
"ritur, videtur. Hos ingenio acri,
"judicio singulari, juris hujus quæ"stiones, quoties eas attingerent (atti-"gerunt autem sæpius) expedivisse
"constat: ut ipse Hugo Grotius, re-

"staurator hujus philosophiæ felicis"simus, tum demum et pondus et "robur, et lucem insignem, se asser-
"tis suis conciliare posse, si præsulum
"horum auctoritate sententiam suam
"muniret, fuerit opinatus." Budd.
Histor. Juris. Naturalis, p. 16.

<sup>x</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 34.

<sup>y</sup> See that treatise of Le Clerc's briefly examined by Buddeus, in his Miscellanea Sacra, par. i. p. 320. Compare Turretin. de Articulis. Fundament. p. 13.

same principles of latitude, and willing to compound all differences, should advise us to admit nothing for a fundamental, but what all mankind have hitherto agreed in, and for the future shall agree in, Atheists only excepted; where will then at length these presumptuous schemes end? or when will weak men leave off dictating to an all-knowing God, preferring their own fond devices to the wisdom of Heaven?

To be short, that treatise of Le Clerc's, while wholly intent upon discharging unnecessaries, (as he supposed them,) takes no due care for preserving the vitals of Christianity; but is much such another cure for our religious ferments, as bleeding a man to death would be for a fever. I presume, one principal view was, to throw out the doctrine of the Trinity; (though it might lead a great deal further;) and it was that consideration chiefly which induced him, and many others, to vilify the ancient Fathers of the Christian Church<sup>z</sup>. But I proceed.

Mr. B., besides his ill-will towards the Fathers, appears to discover something of an unfriendly disposition towards ecclesiastics at large, in more instances than one. But he is particularly offended with the public sermons, as seeming to him not very instructive on the head of morality<sup>a</sup>. His translator here, sensible of the indecency of the reflection, endeavours to excuse and soften it by a note; suggesting that he might intend it only against sermons and books in French, not against the compositions of the English or Dutch. It was kindly offered: but I find not that the author himself has any where made the exception, or insinuated that he intended any. However, admitting that he had a view to the French only, yet the reflection can hardly be acquitted of some degree of immodesty: for surely the French Protestant Divines have deserved a better treatment. He quotes Placette and Ostervald to give some colour to his invectives: but neither of them will bear him out in any such general aspersions bus flecti queant, ut in unitariorum causam testimonium dicant. Hinc illæ lachrymæ! Hæc fundi calamitas. Adeo ut de antiquitate ecclesiastica dici potest quod de ratione alicubi habet Malmbsburiensis philosophus: ubicunque ratio homini repugnat, hominem ipsi rationi repugnaturum. Cave, Epist. Apologet. p. 17. Conf. p. 23.

<sup>z</sup> Serio hæc mecum pensitanti, vix ulla commodior occurrit ratio, quam quod sancti patres Catholicæ fidei, Nicænorumque dogmatum testes sint inconcussi, vindices acerrimi: qui fidem ab Apostolis traditam, a majoribus acceptam, ad nos usque propagarunt, acceptam, vita, voce, etiam et sanguine suo confirmarunt, invictis argumentis contra omnia hæreticorum molimina sartam tectam conservarunt; quique nullis sophismati-

<sup>a</sup> Prefatory Disc. sect. xi. p. 35.

upon their whole body. And what if Divines ordinarily (as Civilians also) fall short of Grotius and Puffendorf; or what if they do not follow the same laboured method, (any more than the Sermon on the Mount did,) yet their discourses may be very instructive, and the more so for their artless simplicity, being better adapted to the capacities of common hearers. There are many instructive ways of inculcating moral precepts; and it is by no means serving morality, to disparage all others for the sake of one which a man chooses to be fond of, perhaps as thinking it his own. It is natural enough for any person to applaud his own taste, and to prefer his own way: but still it must be acknowledged that there is more of human infirmity than there is of equity or justice in it. Ancients ought to have their due praises as well as moderns; and Divines as well as Civilians: and it is not fair dealing to monopolize esteem, or to affect to draw all into one channel, where a man has placed himself to receive it, disregarding his neighbours.

It is very true, what this gentleman says, that it "was not any of the ecclesiastics, or professors of Divinity<sup>b</sup>," who drew up that vast system of morality which Grotius is so justly famed for. It was a work proper for so large a genius, and so accomplished a Civilian and Statesman. Ecclesiastics, I am confident, are so far from envying him the great honour which he thereby acquired, without seeking it, that they would be heartily glad if every other writer of his profession were like him, and equal to him, in learning, candour, capacity, gravity, sincerity. This gentleman does not make a just report, when he says, that "the ecclesiastics, instead of returning thanks to Grotius for his excellent work, every where declared against him, and that many even Protestant Divines laboured to cry it down<sup>c</sup>." He should have been content to say, that the Romanists condemned it<sup>d</sup>, while the Protestants in general, Divines and others, justly esteemed it, and the reformed Universities paid suitable regards to it<sup>e</sup>. It was not a Divine, but a Civilian<sup>f</sup>, who first appeared

<sup>b</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 36.

<sup>c</sup> Ibid.

<sup>d</sup> Nec quisquam quam diu vixit Grotius, contra eos (Grotii libros) quicquam movere ausus est, nisi quod tertio ab eo tempore quo prodierunt anno 1627. die quarto Februarii, ab Inquisitionis quod Romæ est officio, nota hæreseos inureretur. Buddæi

Histor. Jur. Naturalis, p. 31, 32. Conf. Bayle, Dict. in Grotius, note o.

<sup>e</sup> Crescere tum in dies existimatio de utilitatibus librorum Grotii; ut in academiis viri docti eosdem prælegere et interpretari consultum ducerent. Buddæus, ibid. p. 39. Conf. Bayle in note o.

<sup>f</sup> Johannes a Felden, A. D. 1653.

against it : and why may I not add, that Divines at this day, probably, have a greater esteem of the work, and a truer value for it, than the last Civilian who translated it, and who has animadverted sometimes too freely upon it. Who is it that has told the world that the incomparable Grotius was “not throughly acquainted with the art of thinking justly?” Is it not this very gentleman detracting from Grotius, to compliment the author of the Parrhasiana, who had said the same thing before<sup>h</sup>. It was Grotius’s misfortune, it seems, to fall half a century short in the art of just thinking. But what pains will not some men take to draw reputation to their own apartments: first, disparaging ancients in comparison of moderns, to bring it so much nearer towards themselves; next, excluding Divines at large, to fix it among critics or civilians; then, highly extolling two or three very eminent personages, to beat off rivals, and, as it were, to devolve all repute upon them for a season; lastly, giving broad intimations that there are yet greater men than those, as to true reasoning, (a prime excellency,) and the perfection of just thinking: and who should these at length be, but the same that sit as judges upon them, as upon all the rest? Various are the windings and turnings of self-love, and its illusions many: but I forbear. These reflections, if not capable of the strictest proof, yet have most undoubtedly greater appearances of truth<sup>i</sup> than most of those unworthy aspersions cast upon the primitive Fathers.

After all, we take not upon us to acquit the Fathers of all kinds of mistakes, or of human frailties; for we very well know that they were men, though excellent men. All we desire is, that no errors may be imputed more than belong to them, nor that those which they really gave into be aggravated beyond reason; nor that that wherein any of them singly offended be collectively thrown upon them all. In short, we desire no favours in their behalf, but truth, justice, equity, candour, and humanity, which are due to all men, living or dead; and much more to persons of such exemplary virtues, and so exalted a character in agunt ut soli habeantur laude digni: vel certe ad suum judicium, quasi ab erroribus humanis immune, omnia aliena volunt conformata; quod arrogantia est haud vulgaris. Perizonius, Q. Curt. Vindicat. p. 192.

<sup>g</sup> Prefatory Discourse, p. 79.

<sup>h</sup> Le Clerc’s Parrhasiana, p. 247, 248. Engl. edit.

<sup>i</sup> Qui ita omnia reprehendunt, et inopetrate existimationis auctores tam lubenter explodunt, plerumque id

the churches of Christ<sup>k</sup>. I shall only add, that had the Fathers, several of them, really fallen into as many errors of doctrine as some would make us believe they did, yet our two main positions would stand firm as before: viz. 1. That from the writings of the Fathers, taken with other collateral evidences, we may competently learn, as to matter of fact<sup>l</sup>, what was the general sense of the three first centuries in the important articles of faith<sup>m</sup>. 2. That the historical knowledge of the fact so testified may be of very great use to us for the interpreting of Scripture, so far as concerns those articles, and for guarding the word of God against any novel and dangerous misconstructions.

VI. It has been sometimes objected, that the Fathers were but very indifferent critics upon Scripture, and that they frequently misinterpreted particular texts. A learned writer has been at the pains to draw up a moderate octavo, full of supposed examples of that kind, beginning with Genesis, and descending regularly through the Scripture, almost as far as the Revelations<sup>n</sup>. He had a wide field to range in, four or five whole centuries, and more. And if any thing amiss, by way of comment, happened to drop from any Father in all that time, perhaps in some very hasty composition, some extempore homily, or the like, that must be brought in to swell the account: and whatsoever any one singly has offended in a single place, (somewhere else perhaps making us amends for it,) he is to bear the odium of it; and not only he, but all his predecessors and successors for so many centuries, all that pass under the name of Fathers: for the design is to shew that the Fathers in general were very weak

<sup>k</sup> Recte igitur nostri docent, æquitate legem postulare, ut quos propter multa præclare dicta non æquamus Scripturæ, eosdem propter nævos et errores nonnullos protinus non rejiciamus. Circumtulerunt et ipsi carnem et sanguinem; fassi sunt, se humane infirmitati obnoxios: perhumane igitur tractandi sunt, non proterve sugilandii. Rivet. Tractat. de Patr. Autoritat. cap. x. p. 65.

<sup>l</sup> A proper distinction should be made (as I before hinted) between the reasonings of the Fathers, and their testimonies as to fact. Of which see Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. i. sect. xliii. p. 77. &c. Bishop Smalbroke's Vindication. of Miracles, &c. vol. i. p. 123.

<sup>m</sup> Nihil dubii esse possit, quin per duo saltem aut tria ab Apostolis secula, Ecclesia in primitivo suo vigore, atque, ut ita loquar, virginitate permanserit: eodem nimirum statu quo ab ipsis Apostolis relicta fuit; nisi quod novæ subinde hæreses istis etiam diebus erumperent, quibus Ecclesia exercitata fuit, minime corrupta: haud magis scilicet quam Ecclesia Apostolica ab istis hæresibus depravata fuit quæ Apostolis adhuc superstitibus emergebant; vix citius enim exortæ sunt quam ab Ecclesia rejectæ. Bevereg. Cod. Can. Vindic. in Proæm. s. vii.

<sup>n</sup> Whitby, Dissert. de Script. Interpret.

men. It would be tedious to enter into a detail of the texts said to be misinterpreted. Therefore I shall only observe, as follows, upon the examination I have made. 1. That some of the interpretations found fault with are true and just interpretations, blamed without reason, and brought in for show, or to make bulk. 2. Several others are doubtful, and may claim candid allowances. 3. Some are misreported, or represented otherwise than the good Fathers intended. 4. Most of the blamable ones are of the allegorical kind; and they very often are not so properly interpretations, (for the Fathers generally admitted a literal interpretation besides of the same texts,) as a kind of moral or spiritual uses or improvements raised upon the texts, for the practical edification of the people. The design seems to have been much the same (only employed upon a nobler subject) with what several pious persons have attempted, in endeavouring to turn every common incident of life, every thing they hear, read, or see, to some spiritual improvement, by apposite reflections or meditations. The reader may find a specimen of such spiritual exercises as I speak of in the very pious and ingenious Mr. Boyle, in his treatise entitled, Occasional Reflections upon several Subjects. Such a kind of exercise I take many of those allegorical comments (those especially of the tropological kind) to have been. They were well meant, and had their use, though often carried too far; but, in strictness, they were not interpretations of Scripture, but rather pious meditations upon Scripture. I am sensible that some of them were intended as interpretations: but in the general, and for the most part, I conceive, they were rather what I have said. 5. But supposing that the Fathers sometimes, or often, mistook in their interpretations of Scripture, (in such texts more especially upon which no fundamental doctrine of the Church depended, nor perhaps was concerned in,) what can be supposed to follow from such a concession? Nothing, so far as I can yet apprehend, that will at all affect our present question. It may be allowed, and cannot indeed justly be denied, that modern Critics and Divines of the first rank, having the light of the Fathers before them, and greater skill in the languages, and many additional helps which the Fathers wanted, are better textuaries, upon the whole<sup>o</sup>, than the ablest of the eorundem temporum scriptoribus: sed nec potiorem illis antiquis in universum, quam junioribus nostris. Quin

<sup>o</sup> Eruditionem patribus, aut sagacitatem in sequelis colligendis, potiorē nullam asserimus quam cœvis aliis

ancients were, or than all the Fathers together, because they contain them, in a manner, or the best things in them, with additional improvements. But admitting all this, it concludes nothing against the use or value of the ancients, but supposes it all the time. Besides, the stress is not laid upon any critical acumen of the Fathers in interpreting every particular text, but upon their faithfulness in relating what was the doctrine of the Church as to the prime things, in their times, or before, and upon their interpretation of some remarkable and leading texts (such for instance as John i. 1.) upon which chiefly the fundamental doctrines were conceived to rest. From whence it is manifest, that the learned collector of erroneous comments (supposing his representations just, which they often are not) has shot wide of the mark: and indeed he was sensible of it<sup>p</sup>; however, notwithstanding, he thought fit to publish his collection. He acknowledges our meaning to be no more than this; that Scripture be interpreted by the general doctrine of the ancient Church in the prime things<sup>q</sup>. But then he runs on to call it imposing a sense upon Scripture, instead of taking one from it: making the Fathers speak for Christ, instead of permitting Christ to speak for himself, and the like. Now indeed, if every man bonas literas studiosius excultas a nuperis nostris Ecclesiæ Reformato-ribus libenter agnoscimus: nec in philosophia modo, sed in antiquitate, in ipsis etiam linguis illorum temporum vernaculis: sed et pressiorem nostris et solidiorem argumentandi methodum agnoscimus quam sit alia illa laxior, et sophistica, et declamatoria, quæ non apud patres duntaxat, sed et alios eorundem temporum scriptores erat receptissima. Itaque, exceptis illis quæ ad fidem pertinent, aut quæ ad priorum temporum historiam; in aliis facile ferimus dissentientes, judicantesque de eorum ratiociniis juniores. Sed vero in cœvis scriptoribus intelligunt cœvi etiam idiotæ, quæ lateant remotiorum seculorum etiam eruditissimos. Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. in præfat. sect. 15.

<sup>p</sup> Nec hoc in animum induxisse hos patrum antistes existimo (quod eorum verba præ se ferunt) nempe sacras Scripturas interpretandas esse juxta sensum quem patres de iis speci-

atim, verbisque conceptis exhibuerunt, quemque nos in hoc opere protulimus; sed tantum eas interpretandas esse juxta doctrinam quam existimant apud primævos patres obtinuisse. Quod quidem non est sensum Scripturæ ex verbis Scripturæ accipere, sed sensum patrum Scripturis adferre, &c. Whitby, Dissert. præf. p. 19.

<sup>q</sup> This matter is very clearly and accurately expressed by Mr. Thorndike.

Est enim magnopere advertendum, cum definiendam ex traditione Ecclesiæ Scripturæ sententiam dico, non hoc me velle quasi teneri possit sensus Scripturæ traditione (quis enim putet Scripturarum scientiam, omni literarum genere constantem, traditione teneri posse?) sed quod recusandum sit, tanquam a vero Scripturæ sensu alienum, quicquid in traditionem incurrit: quod est dicere, intra fines traditionis continendam esse interpretationem Scripturæ. Thorndike de Ration. Fin. Contr. p. 147. Compare Sherlock, Socin. Contr. p. 78.

that should undertake to interpret Scripture out of his own head were infallibly certain to make Christ speak for himself, and were in no manner of danger of imposing a sense upon him, there would be some weight in such reasoning: but did Socinus, did Arius, did Sabellius, did Valentinus, or an hundred more, succeed so well in that way, that that should be recommended as the only safe way of delivering the mind of Christ? It is granted on all hands, that Scripture should speak its own sense, and that no foreign sense ought to be imposed upon it: but then one of the best rules we can think of to secure to it its own sense, and to exclude all foreign senses, is to keep to the old sense (while the words will bear it, much more if they require it) which obtained from the beginning, among the churches favoured in a very particular manner by the illustrious presence of the Spirit of God<sup>r</sup>.

VII. It has been sometimes objected, that there have been Fathers against Fathers, Councils against Councils, and warm contests amongst the ancient Doctors themselves; particularly about the time for observing Easter, and about heretical baptisms. All which we allow, but further plead, that the more they differed in rituals, or matters of discipline, (things of slighter concern,) the more regard is to be paid to them in the greater matters wherein they all agreed. For if they would not suffer any innovation, or the appearance of any, even in the smaller matters, but were exceeding jealous of every thing that looked new, and were prepared to oppose any person or persons, how considerable soever in station, age, or dignity, rather than admit a novelty; how can we imagine that they should all so unanimously agree in the doctrine of our Lord's Divinity, if it were not old doctrine, the faith which was once delivered unto the saints? Their differences in inferior matters serve to strengthen

<sup>r</sup> The very judicious and learned Ger. Vossius speaks excellently well on this head.

Ante omnia quidem scrutandum, quid Deus dicat in verbo suo: sed ne perperam illud interpretemur, quando omnes ad errorem sumus proclives, attendere etiam debemus, non modo quid unus et alter, sed omnino quid constanter docuerit Ecclesia Dei. Quantopere enim repugnat perspicuitati Scripturæ, si ita exaratae credantur, ut ab Apostolorum excessu, ne in præcipuis quidem fidei capitibus, ipsi eas Ecclesiarum doctissimi ceperint antistites! Quantum item adversetur bonitati Dei et amori erga nos, si per tot secula, ad Scripturarum intelligentiam defuisse statuamus Spiritum Dei, viris licet pietate et sanctimonia præcellentibus, ecclesiæque semper commendatissimis, atque eo melioribus quo apostolicis propiores erant temporibus. Voss. in Epist. ad Forbes. præfix. Histor. Instruct. A. D. 1645.

the plea drawn from their unanimity in this, and so are an argument on our side, rather than any objection against us<sup>8</sup>.

VIII. It has been objected†, that our sixth Article condemns the method of interpreting Scripture by antiquity, or, at least, supersedes it; because it says, HOLY SCRIPTURE CONTAINETH ALL THINGS NECESSARY TO SALVATION; SO THAT WHATSOEVER IS NOT READ THEREIN, NOR MAY BE PROVED THEREBY, IS NOT TO BE REQUIRED OF ANY MAN, THAT IT SHOULD BE BELIEVED AS AN ARTICLE OF FAITH, OR NECESSARY TO SALVATION. The Article says nothing but what is perfectly right, and perfectly consistent with all we have been pleading for. We allow no doctrine as necessary, which stands only on Fathers, or on tradition, oral or written: we admit none for such, but what is contained in Scripture, and proved by Scripture, rightly interpreted. And we know of no way more safe in necessaries, to preserve the right interpretation, than to take the ancients along with us<sup>u</sup>. We think it a good method to secure our rule of faith against impostures of all kinds; whether of enthusiasm, or false criticism, or conceited reason, or oral tradition, or the assuming dictates of an infallible chair. If we thus preserve the true sense of Scripture, and upon that sense build our faith, we then build upon Scripture only; for the sense of Scripture is Scripture<sup>v</sup>. Suppose a man were to prove his legal <sup>8</sup> Daillé himself argues in like manner as we here do.

“As for those differences in opinion which are sometimes found amongst them, touching some certain points of religion, some whereof we have formerly set down; these things are so far from taking off any thing from the weight of their testimonies, as that, on the contrary, they add rather very much to the same. For this must acquit their consenting of all suspicion that some persons might have, that it proceeded from some combination, or some correspondence and mutual intelligence.” Daillé, Use of the Fathers, part ii. c. 6. p. 186. Conf. Bevereg. Cod. Can. Vindicat. in Proœm. s. 5.

† Whitby, Dissert. p. 4.

<sup>u</sup> So the great Casaubon, speaking both for himself and for the Church of England; and at the same time for Melancthon, and Calvin also.

Opto cum Melancthone et Ecclesia

Anglicana, per canalem antiquitatis deduci ad nos dogmata fidei, e fonte sacræ Scripturæ derivata. Alioquin quis futurus est novandi finis?—Etsi omnis mea voluptas est et sola, versari in lectione sacræ Scripturæ, nullam tamen inde me hausisse propriam sententiam, nullam habere, neque unquam, ὄν Θεῶ ἐπιείν, esse habiturum. Magni Calvini hæc olim fuit mens, cum scriberet præfationem suam in Commentarium Epistolæ ad Romanos; non debere nos ἐν τοῖς κριωτάτοις, a consensu Ecclesiæ recedere. A. D. 1611. Casaub. Epist. 744. Dan. Heinsio, p. 434. edit. 3. Roterodami.

<sup>v</sup> “We reverently receive the unanimous tradition or doctrine of the Church in all ages, which determines the meaning of the holy Scripture, and makes it more clear and unquestionable in any point of faith, wherein we can find it hath declared its sense. For we look upon this title to an estate ; he appeals to the laws : the true sense and meaning of the laws must be proved by the best rules of interpretation ; but, after all, it is the law that gives the title, and that only. In like manner, after using all proper means to come at the sense of Scripture, (which is Scripture,) it is that, and that only, which we ground our faith upon, and prove our faith by. We allege not Fathers as grounds, or principles, or foundations of our faith, but as witnesses, and as interpreters, and faithful conveyers.

That the Church of England has a very particular regard to antiquity, may sufficiently appear from a Canon set forth in the same year when our Articles were first perfected and authorized by act of parliament, namely, in the year 1571. By that Canon it is provided, "that preachers shall not presume to deliver any thing from the pulpit, as of moment, to be religiously observed and believed by the people, but that which is agreeable to the doctrine of the Old or New Testament, and collected out of the same doctrine by the Catholic Fathers and the Bishops of the ancient Church." A wise regulation, formed with exquisite judgment, and worded with the exactest caution. The Canon does not order that they shall teach whatever had been taught by Fathers ; no, that would have been setting up a new rule of faith : neither does it say that they shall teach whatsoever the Fathers had collected from Scripture ; no, that would have been making them infallible interpreters, or infallible reasoners : the doctrine must be found first in Scripture ; only, to be the more secure that we have found it there, the Fathers are to be called in, to be, as it were, constant checks upon the presumption or wantonness of private interpretation. But then again, as to private interpretation, there is liberty enough allowed to it. Preachers are not forbidden to interpret this or that text, or hundreds of texts, differently from what the Fathers have done ; provided still they keep within the analogy of faith, and presume "tradition as nothing else but the Scripture unfolded: not a new thing which is not in the Scripture, but the Scripture explained and made "more evident." Dr. (afterward Bishop) Patrick's Discourse about Tradition, p. 18. Printed A. D. 1683.

* Imprimis vero videbunt [Conci-onatores] ne quid unquam doceant pro concione, quod a populo religiose teneri et credi velint, nisi quod consentaneum sit doctrinæ Veteris aut Novi Testamenti, quodque ex illa ipsa doctrina Catholici patres et veteres episcopi collegerint. Sparrow Collect. p. 238.

not to raise any new doctrine: neither are they altogether restrained from teaching any thing new, provided it be offered as opinion only, or an inferior truth, and not pressed as necessary upon the people. For it was thought, that there could be no necessary article of faith or doctrine now drawn from Scripture, but what the ancients had drawn out before from the same Scripture: to say otherwise would imply that the ancients had failed universally in necessaries, which is morally absurd.

From this account it may appear, that the Church of England is exactly in the same sentiments which I have been pleading for. And indeed, if there be any church now in the world which truly reverences antiquity, and pays a proper regard to it, it is this Church. The Romanists talk of antiquity, while we observe and follow it. For, with them, both Scripture and Fathers are, as to the sense, under the correction and control of the present Church<sup>z</sup>: with us, the present Church says nothing, but under the direction of Scripture and antiquity taken together, one as the rule, and the other as the pattern or interpreter. Among them, the present Church speaks by Scripture and Fathers: with us, Scripture and Fathers speak by the Church. I have before thrown in some testimonies of the high regard which our Church pays to antiquity: and if the reader desires more of <sup>y</sup> Ecclesia Anglicana hoc se universo orbi caractere dignoscendum, hoc æquæ posteritati æstimandum proponit, quod in controversiis fidei aut praxeos decernendis, illud firmum ratumque semper habuerit (et huic basi reformationem Britannicam niti voluerit) ut Scripturis primæ, dein primorum sæculorum episcopis, martyribus, scriptoribus ecclesiasticis secundæ deferrentur. Hammond. contr. Blondell. in prælim. cap. xiv. sect. 13.

Rex cum Ecclesia Anglicana pronuntiat, eam demum se doctrinam pro vera simul et necessaria ad salutem agnoscere, quæ e fonte Sacræ Scripturæ manans, per consensum veteris Ecclesiæ, cæu per canalem, ad hæc tempora fuerit derivata. Casaubon. Epist. ad Perron. 838. p. 493. A. D. 1612.

Quod si me conjectura non fallit, totius reformationis pars integerrima est in Anglia, ubi cum studio veritatis, viget studium antiquitatis. Idem ad

Salmas. Epist. 837. p. 489. A. D. 1612.

<sup>z</sup> Vid. Rivet. Tractat. de Patr. Auctoritate, cap. vii. p. 40, &c. Patrick on Tradition, p. 41. Stillingfleet's Rational Account, part i. c. 5. p. 80. &c.

N. B. In the fourteenth article of the Creed of Pope Pius IV. the words run thus: "I do receive the holy Scriptures in the same sense that holy Mother Church doth, and all ways hath—neither will I receive and interpret them otherwise than according to the unanimous consent of the Fathers." Here are two contradictory things blended together, the sense of their present Church, and the unanimous consent of Fathers: which are eno more to be reconciled than light and darkness; except it be by making antiquity as much a Lesbian rule as they make the Scripture. I follow the copy of that Creed given in Latin and English at the end of Dr. Hicckes's Letters, published A. D. 1705.

like kind, he may please to consult such as have collected them, some of which I refer to at the bottom of the page<sup>a</sup>.

IX. It may still be objected, that the appealing to antiquity may be both fruitless and endless, and can never decide differences or silence disputes, because all parties almost have or may put in their claim to it; and as it will be hard to decide among the several claimants, so the whole will terminate in confusion<sup>b</sup>: therefore the shortest and best method is, to throw off antiquity, and to abide by Scripture alone. This objection does, in some measure, fall in with others before mentioned: but because it contains, in a manner, the sum and substance of several, I shall return a distinct answer to it, in so many particulars.

I. I would observe, that since all parties almost have put in their claim to antiquity, it is a certain sign that they have a value and esteem for it, and think it of some force. They appeal to Scripture also, because it is of weight: one has a plea from it, and another a pretence. Whatever is worth the having, where it is to be had, will be also thought worth the counterfeiting, where it is not: therefore, we may expect, in such cases, counterfeit Scripture and counterfeit antiquity, to give colour to false claims, as well as genuine Scripture and genuine antiquity, to support true ones. All this shews that it is generally thought a great advantage to have antiquity on one's side, and as great a disadvantage to any cause to want it. Men would never contend about it, were it worthless or insignificant: they would not take pains to adulterate the coin, if the coin itself were not valuable. Therefore let us not too hastily part with any thing which all parties either openly speak well of, or secretly covet and admire<sup>c</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Scrivener adv. Dallæum, par. i. cap. 9. p. 57, &c. Dr. Fuller's Moderation of the Church of England, p. 80, &c. Bull. Apolog. pro Harmon. sect. i. p. 634. Grabe, Spicileg. vol. i. in præfatione. Saywell, Præfat. Apologet. præfix. Launouii Epist. A.D. 1689.

"It is a calumny, to affirm that the Church of England rejects all tradition: and I hope none of her children are so ignorant, as, when they hear that word, to imagine they must rise up and oppose it. No, the Scripture itself is a tradition; and we admit all other tradi- tions which are subordinate and agreeable to that; together with all those things which can be proved to be apostolical by the general testimony of the Church in all ages." Patrick on Tradition, p. 48.

<sup>b</sup> Whitby, Dissert. præf. p. 28, 75, 80.

<sup>c</sup> It is remarkable of Socinus, who contemned tradition and all the ancients, undertaking to coin a new religion from Scripture alone; I say, it is remarkable of him, that when he found that his disciples would not submit to worship Christ, after all he could bring from Scripture to persuade

2. As to deciding differences, or silencing disputes, it is granted that antiquity will not always be effectual, neither will Scripture; neither indeed will any thing but what would be effectual to make all men humble and modest, wise and good. That so many several sects and parties differ so widely from each other, and from the truth, is not generally owing to this, that their different interpretations of Scripture have led them into different opinions in religion, but their different opinions have led them into different interpretations. All must of necessity pretend colour, at least, from Scripture, (if they would not be taken for madmen or infidels,) and if true interpretation will not answer the purpose, false must come up of course. So it is in vain to cast about for any rules of interpretation, as certain remedies for the healing differences, or ending all disputes: the disease lies deeper, and is too stubborn for human means. There is no infallible preservative, no irresistible expedient against heresy, any more than against any other vices: neither ought there to be any; for then a right belief would be no matter of choice, nor faith any longer a virtue, as God designed it should be. We pretend not therefore to infallible cures by any means whatever. But though we cannot expect to work miracles by the help of antiquity and Scripture together, (for heresies there will be notwithstanding, and Scripture itself intimates there must be<sup>d</sup>.) yet they are both of them of very great use, and may have their effect, in a human way, among reasonable men; which is sufficient. We are very sensible that they who study to pervert Scripture will pervert tradition too, and will often turn those weapons against the truth which were intended only for defence of it. That is an inconvenience common to a thousand other cases besides this: we must be content to bear with it, and to conduct as prudently as we can, under direction from the word of God. And when we have so done all that is proper or required, and without effect, the appeal must lie to the common reason of mankind; and there it must rest till the cause comes to be heard before a higher tribunal.

them to it, he reminded them of the ancient and universal practice of saints and martyrs, as an argument to prove that such was the sense of Scripture. Quia nimis aperte in sanctis literis ea illi tribui animadvertunt &c. [Ad Matt. Radee. Epist. iii. p. 391.] An argument which, if he had uniformly attended to it, ought to have given some check to his most exorbitant wantonness and self-sufficiency in other matters.

<sup>d</sup> 1 Cor. xi. 19.

3. But though Scripture and antiquity may both of them be resisted, or both perverted, and are not certainly effectual, nor intended to be so, yet both together are of greater force than Scripture singly can be; and that is reason sufficient for super-adding antiquity. Two witnesses are better than one, though one be superior; and two proofs of the same thing (though one be as primary, and the other secondary) amount to more than either of them singly can do. Every additional light contributes some lustre, and every accessional weight helps to turn the scale. A man may be able to evade Scripture alone, who may not be able to evade both Scripture and antiquity; or if he can evade both, yet perhaps not so easily: therefore, if the taking in antiquity is of service, as it reinforces truth, and bears the harder upon error<sup>e</sup>, it is worth the urging, for the same reason as all kinds of arguments or dissuasives against sin and wickedness are to be urged in due place.

4. Lastly, I must observe, that there is no such great difficulty as some persons may fancy, in distinguishing false claims from true, or in pointing out, among the several claimants, where the right lies. Men of ready wit and invention may draw up a catalogue of innumerable difficulties, taking in all such as might possibly happen in any case, and throwing them together, so as to make up one large and floating idea of difficulty, for the reader to apply to every case: but if one looks a little closer into any particular instance, he will be surprised to find how easy it is, after all, to form a judgment of it, and that not a hundredth part perhaps of that general confuse idea of difficulty does really belong to it. If a man were inclined to hear what fine harangues might be made upon the uncertainty of the reports of sense, how often, and how many several ways his eyes or ears, or other senses might deceive him, (which may be illustrated with great variety of instances from history, embellished with all the ornaments of wit and fancy,) he might be apt, for some time, almost to mistrust his senses, and to take life itself for a dream. But notwithstanding all, when he comes to consider use and experience, he will soon find that his senses may, for the most part, be securely trusted to, without danger of deception, and that it is scarce once in a thousand trials that they lead him into error. The like may be said, with regard to the studied harangues drawn up by some writers, about the uncertainty of all tradition, and the obscurity of the Fathers, and the danger of deception: they amount only to loose, general discourse, which may seem, at first, to have something in it<sup>f</sup>, but is soon confuted by use and experience, the safest criterion to judge by. The truth of what I say may best appear by an induction of particulars; and therefore I shall next briefly run over the most observable pretences to tradition, ancient and modern, (such as at present occur to me,) that we may judge from the particular instances how that case stands.

<sup>e</sup> Quis vero non fateatur, præscriptione ejusmodi multum firmari animos nostros in genuina Scripturæ interpretatione, validius quoque munitiusque hæreses refelli? Quare hoc armorum genere semper pugnatum fuit a

sanctis patribus: qui præcipue quidem se tuentur Scripturæ auctoritate, nec tamen prætereunt priorum temporum consensum. Gerard. Voss. Epist. ad Forbes.

Basilides, of the first or second century, and his partizans, pleaded antiquity, and put in their claim to tradition, deriving it, by one Glaucias, from St. Peter himself<sup>e</sup>. But the vanity and folly of the plea was apparent at first sight: and no sensible man could ever think it at all reasonable to give credit to a wandering tale, or to that obscure Glaucias, rather than to certain fact, (appearing in Scripture, and in the churches founded by St. Peter,) that St. Peter's doctrine was quite another thing from what Basilides had fathered upon him.

Valentinus, of the second century, and his disciples, pleaded antiquity also, as well as Scripture, and fetched their doctrine by one Theodades, as they said, from the Apostle Paul<sup>h</sup>. A likely matter! that Theodades, whoever he was, should know more of St. Paul's mind than all the churches founded by that blessed Apostle. The silliness of such a plea betrayed itself at once; and but to name it was to expose it.

The Marcionites, along with the Basilidians and Valentinians, pretended also to derive their common doctrines down by tradition from the Apostle Matthias<sup>i</sup>. But their plea was mere artifice and pretence, and was effectually confuted by the standing doctrine of all the apostolical churches. By their common doctrines, I mean such as they all agreed in, as about the origin of evil, and the denial of Christ's real humanity, or the like.

<sup>f</sup> Legi libros de abusu patrum, et quidem sæpius: sed, nescio quomodo, dum lego, assentior; cum posui libros, et mecum ipse de nervis argumentorum cœpi cogitare, assensio illis illa elabatur. Zornius, p. 665.

<sup>e</sup> Clemens Alexandrin. Strom. vii. p. 898. ed. Oxon.

<sup>h</sup> Clemens Alexandrin. ibid.

<sup>i</sup> Clem. Alex. Strom. vii. p. 900. Conf. Dodwell. Dissert. in Iren. i. p. 48.

The Artemonians, of the third century, pretended tradition for their heresy, from the Apostles themselves, and by the apostolical churches<sup>k</sup>. Which was saying something, had they been able to make out the fact: but the falsity of the report was palpable, and a child might see it. For they had contrived their story so oddly, and brought it down so low, that besides ancient records in great numbers, there might be thousands of living witnesses who could contradict it, and expose it as a shameful imposture.

The Arians after them, in the fourth century, claimed tradition, equally with the Catholics, but not with equal reason. They pretended to derive their doctrine down by the Fathers that lived before them; particularly by Origen, and Theognostus, and Dionysius Alexandrinus: but Athanasius easily detected the iniquity of their claim, and effectually confuted it<sup>l</sup>.

The Macedonians also, in their turn, pleaded tradition for their rejecting the Divinity of the Holy Ghost. But the great St. Basil laid open the falsity of their pretences that way, and demonstrated that tradition was on the contrary side<sup>m</sup>. Afterwards, (A. D. 383,) when both they and the Arians were solemnly called upon, and asked if they would admit the common suffrage of the ancients, and be concluded by it; they shrunk, and would not stand the test, choosing rather to rest the issue of the cause upon logical disputation<sup>n</sup>, their usual refuge, and which they thought their safest retreat. It seldom happens, but that those who make false pretences to antiquity do, by their own conduct, (by their evading, or shifting when pressed, or some other as significant marks,) betray their own cause; insomuch that a stander by, of ordinary sagacity, may often, without entering into the heart of the dispute, give a shrewd conjecture how the case stands. Having considered some of the most noted instances of unjustifiable claims among the ancients, let us next descend to moderns, for further illustration of what we are upon.

The Romanists are great pretenders to Catholic tradition, or primitive antiquity: and yet the fact is so full and plain against <sup>k</sup> Euseb. Eccl. Hist. lib. v. cap. 28.

<sup>l</sup> Athanas. De Decret. Synod. Nic. p. 230, &c. de sententia Dionysii, 243, &c.

<sup>m</sup> Basil. de Spiritu Sancto.

<sup>n</sup> Socrat. Eccles. Histor. lib. v. cap.

10. Sozom. E. Hist. lib. vii. cap. 12. See my Second Defence, Preface, vol. ii.

them, that we can point out to them in every age, when, and where, and how every corruption almost commenced, and every innovation crept in<sup>o</sup>: or can prove, at least, that it was not from the beginning. And it gives ground for suspicion that they are themselves conscious of the nullity of their claim, when they decline fair disputation. They screen themselves under modern infallibility, and take sanctuary commonly in their own authority, as sole judges of every thing, rather than rest the issue of the cause upon a strict and fair inquiry into ancient fact. I may further add, that it can scarce be thought a very difficult matter, to discern how antiquity stands as to that controversy, when a single writer of our own (our excellent Bishop Jewel) was not afraid, though a very modest man, to challenge them publicly upon a great many articles, twenty-seven in number, and to give them six whole centuries to look out in, only to produce any one sufficient sentence out of any old Catholic Doctor or Father, or general Council, that should be found to declare clearly and plainly on their side, in any of the said articles. He made the challenge, and upon trial was sufficient to stand his ground<sup>p</sup>. The like challenges, with respect to the first three or four centuries, have been offered by others<sup>q</sup>, and may be easily maintained by any man of competent learning or judgment<sup>r</sup>; so little difficulty is there in tracing tradition, or in distinguishing pretence from reality. Wherefore one can scarce forbear lamenting, that so able a writer as Daillé should take the pains he did to depreciate the use and value of the Fathers, only for fear the Romanists should take advantage of them<sup>s</sup>. He wanted at that time either the spirit or the penetration of Jewel: otherwise he might have considered, that the Protestant cause could not desire any fairer or greater advantage than to join issue upon the point of mosius modo, sed doctius quoque, vel felicius impugnavit adversarios? Non defuere quidem quibus hoc disputandi genus minus probaretur, sed præstantissimi etiam Whitakeri iudicio, timidiōres hi fuere quam necesse erat. Ger. Voss. ad Forbes.

<sup>o</sup> See more particularly Bishop Bull's Answer to the Bishop of Meaux; and Bishop Stillingfleet's Council of Trent examined and disproved by Catholic Tradition, A. D. 1688, and Dr. Whitby's Treatise of Tradition.

<sup>p</sup> Fidem fecerint vel solius Magnæ Britanniae vestrae, vel etiam nostrae, tot theologi summi: ante omnes κειμήλιον illud hominis, Joannes Juellus, antistes Sarisburiensis. Quis enim e Conciliis vel Doctoribus, quotquot primis fuere annis sexcentis, non ani-

<sup>q</sup> See Dr. Hickeys's Letters to a Popish Priest, p. 188, 189.

<sup>r</sup> See his Epistle Dedicatory prefixed to his Right Use of the Fathers; as also his Preface to the same.

<sup>s</sup> Vid. Scrivener in Præfat.

genuine antiquity, and to be concluded by it. Indeed, it seems that he did perceive it afterwards, and made very good use of it, when years and experience had more enlarged his views.

The modern Socinians, though their way has been, for the most part, to reject antiquity, or to undervalue it, (finding it run against them,) have yet many of them, and of late more especially, thought it policy to set up a claim to tradition, deducing it from the Apostles, by the Ebionites and Nazareans, (whom they ignorantly or artfully confound,) down as far as to the days of Justin Martyr, where they are pleased to imagine a break in the descent, making him the first innovator. The story is better laid than that of their predecessors the Artemonians, before mentioned: for they confine us within fifty years from the apostolical age; and they know that we have but few records, within that compass, to confute their tale by. However, by laying all our evidences together, and making the best of them, means have been found to demonstrate<sup>t</sup>, so far as a matter of fact can be demonstrated, the falsity and nullity of their pretended tradition. And indeed it must look very odd, at first sight, to every considering man, that a tradition from the Apostles should be brought down by Ebionites, men condemned by all the apostolical churches; nay, and by the Apostles themselves, as may appear from what I have offered above.

There remain now only the modern Arians to be spoken to. Some of whom do with great assurance lay claim to ancient tradition; while others fluctuate and hesitate upon it, as upon a point which they neither know how to abide by, nor how to give up. As to those who put on the greatest assurance, it is a strong presumption of their consciousness of something wrong, that they are unwilling to acquiesce in the Canonical Scriptures, without superadding another Gospel to them, a new book of Constitutions, spurious and interpolated pieces of the third, fourth, and fifth centuries<sup>u</sup>; which, whatever else they be, are undoubtedly no part of the oracles of God. Another circumstance which looks suspicious is, that this pretended tradition

<sup>t</sup> Bull. Primitiva et Apostolica Traditio, per tot. Mosheim Vindic. Antiq. contr. Joan. Toland. Stillingfleet's Vindication of the Trinity, cap. iii.

p. 15, &c.

<sup>u</sup> See Mr. Turner on the Apostolical Constitutions. Printed A. D. 1715.

is confined within two centuries. The reason is, because the evidences afterwards come in too full and strong to be eluded: besides that Clemens of Alexandria, and Tertullian, who are both within the compass, but happen to speak too broad and clear, are excluded from giving their testimony<sup>x</sup>. And yet, after all, even those which are taken in, as Justin, Irenæus, Athenagoras, &c. furnish out evidence enough to confute the ill-contrived claim, and to prove it a figment.

As to other more prudent and cautious abettors of the same cause, though they decline not testimonies from the ancients, when any can be made to look favourable to that side, yet they endeavour, more ways than one, to sink the value of antiquity, and to lessen the just esteem which we ought to have for it. The testimonies of the ancients are depreciated under the low name of bare illustrations<sup>y</sup>, because they are not proofs in the highest sense, as the Scriptures themselves are. But there is a medium between proofs in that strongest sense, and mere illustrations; for subordinate proofs of the Church's doctrine from the beginning drawn from Church writers are proofs of something, (though not foundations of our faith,) proofs in the moral kind, second only to Scripture<sup>z</sup>, and such as ought at least to have a negative, so far as concerns fundamentals, in the interpretation of Scripture.

Another instance of the low esteem which those gentlemen have of the Fathers is seen in this, that while they quote passages from them, such as they can most easily warp to their own hypothesis, yet they undertake not, so far as I have observed, to reconcile the other numerous passages, or to make the Fathers, upon the whole, consistent evidences on their side, as we do on ours: this, I say, is another presumptive argument that they are themselves, in some measure, conscious how precarious and unsupported their claims to antiquity are.

I may add, that some amongst them have taken all possible pains to expose the Fathers to the utmost<sup>a</sup>, on purpose to render their suffrage, in this cause, useless and insignificant: a plain sign

<sup>x</sup> Whiston, Primitive Christianity Revived, vol. iv. p. 2. Compare Grabe's Instances of Defects, &c. p. 8, &c.

<sup>y</sup> Clarke's Script. Doctr. Introduct. p. 24. third edit.

<sup>z</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p.

538. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 736, &c. See also above, p. 615.

<sup>a</sup> Dr. Whitby's Dissertation, [de Scripturar. Interpret.] is entirely on this subject, and written with that view.

that they take them not for friends, since they do not use them like friends. From this single mark, a man of ordinary discernment may competently judge (without looking further) whom the Fathers belong to, as Solomon, by a like direction, knew whose was the child.

Enough hath been said to shew, that it is no such very difficult matter, as some would represent, to judge between the claimants, or to distinguish the rightful possessor from the false challenger. I believe it is, at least, as easy (generally speaking) as it is to judge in a critical way upon texts: for that is what the plainest texts imaginable must at length be brought to<sup>b</sup>, if one has a subtle adversary to deal with, who has learned to play the whole game. Much learning commonly will be spent on both sides, before the plainest cause can be brought to a full hearing, and argued quite through. I need but instance in the rounds which Artemonius has led us upon John i. 1. mentioned above.

X. There is one objection more, which, though sufficiently obviated already, may yet perhaps deserve to have something more distinctly said to it in this place. It is pleaded, that men ought to judge for themselves, to make use of their own understandings, and to admit no human authorities. I allow the plea: but, I presume, it is not hereby meant that we should receive no human explications of texts; for then we must receive none at all. If I interpret Scripture for myself, my explication is human to me: or else, how it should become human to others who may take it of me, I do not see. No doubt but Socinus's, or Crellius's, or Enjedine's explications were human, as it is certain that many of them were false: and therefore they that talk in the general against all human explications seem not to consider what they say, or they forget themselves to be men.

As to authority, in a strict and proper sense, I do not know that the Fathers have any over us: they are all dead men. Therefore we urge not their authority, but their testimony, their suffrage, their judgment, as carrying great force of reason with it; and reason we should all submit to<sup>c</sup>. Taking them in here, as <sup>b</sup> Le Clerc very well observes, that, "to men governed by their passions, and conceited of their prejudices, the most evident things in the world are obscure; and that there is no law so clear, but a wrangler may raise a thousand difficulties about "it." Le Clerc, Causes of Incredulity, p. 172.

<sup>c</sup> "Reason is that faculty whereby a man must judge of every thing: nor can a man believe any thing except he have some reason for it; whether that reason be a deduction lights or helps, is doing what is reasonable, and using our own understanding in the best manner, and to the best purposes: it is judging rightly for ourselves. If it were not so, what prudent man would advise it, or endeavour to persuade others to it? But, says an objector, do not you follow the Fathers? Yes, as far as reason requires, and no further; therefore this is following our own reason: and he that deserts the Fathers, in this instance, deserts himself and his own reason. Their sentiments, so ancient, so universal, carry the force of an argument<sup>d</sup> along with them, and a very strong argument too, all things considered<sup>e</sup>. Therefore the being conducted by those sentiments, along with Scripture, is the same thing with being convinced or persuaded by argument; which is hearkening to right reason, which is submitting to God, (who gave us reason for our guide,) and not to human authority. It is following the safest and best light which divine Providence has graciously afforded us: for, as a great and good Prelate has observed, “the general tradition of the Church, “next to Scripture, is the best and surest confirmation of this “great point now in question between us; and that which gives “from the light of nature, or a branch “of divine revelation in the oracles of “holy Scripture, or the general inter- “pretation of genuine antiquity, or

“the proposal of our own Church “consentaneous thereto, or lastly, the “result of some or all of these; for “he that will rightly make use of his “reason, must take all that is reason- “able into consideration. And it is “admirable to consider how the same “conclusions do naturally flow from “all these several principles: and “what, in the faithful use of the fac“ulties that God hath given, men
“have believed for true, doth excel“lently agree with that revelation that “God hath exhibited in the Scrip“ture; and the doctrine of the ancient “Church with them both.” New Sect
“of Latitude-men, in the Phoenix, vol.
ii. p. 706. written A. D. 1662.

<sup>d</sup> “It is a good argument for us to “follow such an opinion, because it “is made sacred by the authority of “councils and ecclesiastical tradition:
“and sometimes it is the best reason
“we have in a question; and then it “is to be strictly followed. But there “may be also at other times a reason “greater than it, that speaks against

“it; and then the authority must not “carry it. But then the difference is “not between reason and authority,
“but between this reason and that,
“which is greater: for authority is a “very good reason, and is to prevail, “unless a stronger comes and dis“arms it, and then it must give place.
“So that in this question, by reason
“I do not mean a distinct topic, but “a transcendent that runs through “all topics.” Taylor's Liberty of Prophecy, sect. x. p. 220.

<sup>e</sup> “Since we know what the Catho- “lic faith was, and how the Catholic “Fathers expounded Scripture, if the “words of Scripture will naturally
“and easily admit that sense, (much “more if they will not admit any “other sense, without great force and “violence.) let any man judge which “is most safe and reasonable, to ex“pound Scripture as the Catholic “faith and Catholic Fathers expound
“it, and as Scripture most easily and “naturally expounds itself, or to “force new senses and old heresies “upon Scripture, which the Catholic “Church has always rejected and “condemned.” Sherlock's Present
State of Soc. Controv. p. 80.

“ us the greatest and truest light for the right understanding “ of the true sense and meaning of Scripture, not only in this,
 “ but in most other important doctrines of the Christian re“ ligion.”

What I have said appears sufficient to shew, that the taking the ancients in for the assisting or informing our judgments in this question, is judging for ourselves in the most rational way that can be thought on. Nevertheless, I take the liberty to observe, that those who talk most of men's using their own understandings often mean little by it, but to get the direction of their faith and consciences to themselves, or to make them change a reasonable veneration of the ancients for a blind admiration of some modern preceptors. They very well know that the generality of mankind (such as read little, and think less) will scarce judge for themselves at all, except it be as to the choice of some leader or leaders, whom they may suppose it safest to confide in. And it is among such as these, commonly, that new teachers seek proselytes; obtruding themselves as guides, and at the same time assuring them that they need no guides: which, in effect, is leading them about what way soever they please, artfully telling them that they go by themselves, when, in truth, they only change their leaders. To say all at once, the true and the whole meaning of the incredible pains which some persons have taken to set the Fathers aside, has been generally neither more nor less than this; to remove as much of the evidence which stands against them as they can with any decency attempt to remove. They cannot, they dare not pretend to throw off Scripture itself, unless they were resolved to throw up Christianity with it, and to declare openly for infidelity: but there may be colours invented for throwing off the Fathers; and therefore thus far they can proceed, in opposing the ancient faith, and at the same time save appearances. There lies the whole of this matter, as I conceive, generally speaking: otherwise, it is manifestly against all sense and reason to make the least question either of the use or the value of ecclesiastical antiquity.

The sum of what I have been endeavouring through this whole chapter is, that Scripture and antiquity (under the conduct of right reason) are what we ought to abide by for the settling points of doctrine. I have not put the case of Scripture and antiquity interfering or clashing with each other : because it is a case which never will appear in points of importance, such as that is which we are now upon. However, as to the general case, we may say, that those two ought always to go together, and to coincide with each other, and when they do so, they stand the firmer in their united strength : but if ever they clash, or appear to clash, then undoubtedly there is an error somewhere, like as when two accountants vary in casting up the same sum. In such a case, a wise man will not rest satisfied, (if the thing be of moment,) till he finds out, if possible, the reason of the difference, and discovers where the error lies. For either it must lie on the Scripture side, (when a man takes that for Scripture which is not Scripture, or that for true interpretation which is not true interpretation,) or it must lie on the tradition side, through some misreport made of the ancients, or some mistake of the ancients themselves. Then the question will be, which of the two suppositions is most likely to be true in that instance : and the resolution at length must turn upon a due weighing and considering all circumstances, with the reasons offered here and there, and then balancing the whole account.

† Archbishop Tillotson, vol. i. Sermon. xlv. p. 456. fol. edit.

CHAP. VIII.

Shewing that what has been lately offered in favour of the Arian Interpretation of John i. 1, 2. and of Hebr. i. is of no Force or Validity.

THE author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition had been pleased to say, that “ an honest mind, inquisitive after truth, and “ willing to weigh the matter impartially, and to examine the “ evidence on both sides thoroughly, might be long in suspense “ before he could determine to his full satisfaction : and that “ several men of equal sense, learning, capacity, probity, and “ piety, may after such examination make different determinations upon the matter &c.” He refers to his appendix for proof, which appendix contains two opposite views of John i. 1. and of Hebr. i. I would here previously remark something of his manner of wording the thing, and then proceed. Might it not as well have been said, that there is as much reason on one side of the question as there is on the other ? Why should an invidious turn be given to what we are doing, that if we maintain our point, and insist upon it as true and just, it shall be interpreted to be as much as saying, that our adversaries have not equal sense, learning, &c. with ourselves? We design not, we desire not to make any such comparisons: we leave persons out of the question, and desire only to come to the truth of things. It is natural for many to admire the founders of their sect, or the leading advocates of their party<sup>h</sup>: and it might look like rudeness to say a word reflecting on their sense, learning, capacity, or probity. Neither indeed is there any occasion for detracting from their general character, since it is certain that men of as great sense, learning, and piety, to all outward appearance, as any in their times, have sometimes fallen into heresy, (as they might into any other great sin,) and have perverted the Gospel of Christ: "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall." It is a wrong way to judge of faith by the men<sup>i</sup>, rather than of the men by their faith and conduct. There is no sense however in going against truth, no learning in contradicting the wisdom of Heaven, no piety nor probity in departing from God. Persons must be tried by the rule, and not the rule by their character, be it otherwise ever so high or commendable<sup>j</sup>. Men may behave unworthy of themselves; and God permits even wise men and good men (as Solomon and David) sometimes to fall, when they grow secure or assuming, for a punishment to them, and for a trial to others<sup>k</sup>, and for a warning to all, that martyr lapsus a regula fuerit, ideo hæreses veritatem videbuntur obtinere? Ex personis probamus fidem, an ex fide personas? Nemo sapiens est nisi fidelis, nemo major nisi Christianus; nemo autem Christianus, nisi qui ad finem perseveraverit. Tertull. Præscript. c. iii.

‡ Sober and Charitable &c. p. 42, 43.

<sup>h</sup> Magni profecto nescio quis significatur magister, et tantæ scientiæ qui sectatoribus propriis non solum quæ humana sunt nosse, verum etiam quæ supra hominem sunt prænoscere posse videatur; quales fere discipuli sui jactitant fuisse Valentinum, Donatum, Photinum, Apollinarem, cæterosque ejusmodi. Vincent. Lirinens. c. xv.

<sup>i</sup> Solent quidem isti infirmiores etiam de quibusdam personis ab hæresi captis ædificari in ruinam: quare ille vel ille fidelissimi et veritatisissimi in Ecclesia, in illam partem transierunt? Quis, hoc dicens, non ipse sibi respondet, neque prudentes, neque fideles, neque veritatis æstimandos, quos hæreses potuerint demutare. Tertull. Præscript. c. iii.

<sup>j</sup> Quid ergo si episcopus, si diaconus, si vidua, si virgo, si doctor, si etiam

<sup>k</sup> Luce clarius aperta causa est, cur interdum divina Providentia quosdam Ecclesiarum magistros nova quædam dogmata prædicare patiatur: ut tentet vos, inquit, Dominus Deus vester. Deut. xiii. 3. Et profecto magna tentatio est, cum illum quem tu Prophetam, quem Prophetarum discipulum, quem Doctorem, et adsertorem veritatis putes, quem summa veneratione et amore complexus sis, is subito latentes noxios subinducat errores; quos nec cito deprehendere valeas, dum antiqui they may learn to be humble and watchful, and not to trust so much to their own worth or parts, as to their care and circumspection, and God's blessing upon it.

Thus much being premised for the taking off all undue admiration of any man's person, and for the preventing any invidious comparisons, (foreign and useless to the point in hand,) as well as for the putting the cause upon a right issue; I now proceed to examine the merits of the debate between the Arians and the Athanasians, so far as concerns John i. i. and Hebr. i. 10.

I. The author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition undertook to represent the Athanasian and Arian constructions of John i. i. fairly and impartially, as indeed common equity and justice required. He begins with the Athanasian: but how soon does he discover marks of partiality and unequal dealing. He smooths over the Arian construction with all affectionate tenderness, covering even its real and greatest faults, as we shall see presently: but does he shew any favour at all to the other? When he is interpreting for us, THE WORD WAS GOD, he presently throws in, the self-same Being with the Father<sup>k</sup>. He must have known how ambiguous and equivocal<sup>l</sup> that expression of self-same Being is, and that, in one sense of it, it is not our doctrine, but the Sabellian heresy. Might it not therefore have sufficed to have said, the same God with the Father, or one God with the Father? That is a doctrine which we inviolably maintain and adhere to, because Scripture forbids us to admit two adorable Gods. As to the question about calling them the self-same Being, it is a question about a name, or a phrase, and a scholastic question, invented several ages after our doctrine had stood secure and independent of it. And when the Schoolmen undertook to consider this verbal affair, (for it is no more,) they either rejected or admitted the expression with proper distinctions; not scrupling to say tres res, or tria entia relativa, always meaning that the union was too close to admit of the name of Beings in the plural<sup>m</sup>, without a softening epithet: and therefore Being of being, or Substance of substance, (not beings or substances,) has been the Catholic language. Let but those who object sameness

magisterii duceri præjudicio, nec facile damnare fas ducis, dum magistri veteris impeditis affectu. Vincent. Lirin. c. xv.

<sup>k</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 51.

<sup>l</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. p. 371, 465.

<sup>m</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. Query xxiii. p. 712—718.

of being define the terms, and tell us what constitutes sameness, and then it will be very easy to tell them how far we suppose the three Persons to be the same Being. All the difficulties about sameness, or individual, or numerical, &c. resolve only into this, that we know not precisely, in all cases, what to call same, individual, numerical, and the like. The general notion of the Trinity is clear, but the meaning of those terms is loose, confuse, and undeterminate: so that the perplexity (if there be any) lies not in the thing, but in some dark names, which many use without any certain meaning. Say but what those words or names precisely signify, and it will be very easy to determine how far they are applicable to the true notion of the Trinity. But to proceed :

I have observed how unfairly the gentleman has dealt with our doctrine: let us next take notice, how tenderly he deals with the Arian construction of the same words. The Word was God, viz. a divine Person, a most God-like Being<sup>n</sup>. He should have said, another God, a creature of the great God<sup>o</sup>, which is their plain and certain meaning; though they are very reserved and bashful in the wording of that article, as they have always been, dreading to speak it out in broad terms. However, if God the Son be God, as the text plainly says, he must be either another God, or one God with the Father: so that if our doctrine of one God be rejected, two Gods is the consequence directly. Besides, since they must own, and do own, that he was God before the world was made, they should tell us, whether he was God by nature, or by office. He had no office so early, that I know of: it seems then he was God by nature. So there are two Gods by nature upon the Arian principles. Therefore let any sober Christian judge which is the true interpretation of the text, theirs or ours, thus far. Now let us proceed.

THE WORD WAS IN THE BEGINNING WITH GOD. That is, say we, before any thing was made. And we say it for these two plain reasons: because the order of the sentence requires it, since the account of the creation follows after; and because all things were made by the Word: therefore he was before all creatures. The Arian construction, as this gentleman represents it<sup>p</sup>, is, "IN THE BEGINNING, when God created the heavens and the earth."

<sup>n</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 54.

fence, vol. i. and ii. Query v.

<sup>o</sup> See my First and Second De-

<sup>p</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 54, 55.

Now if heaven and earth are words which signify all creatures, we admit the exposition: but if they mean any thing less, they are short of St. John's exposition of his own phrase, which he interprets to mean all things that ever were made, that is, all creatures.

ALL THINGS WERE MADE BY HIM, AND WITHOUT HIM WAS NOT ANY THING MADE THAT WAS MADE<sup>9</sup>. Now we interpret and say, that if all things were made by him, then he himself must be unmade: and since made by him amounts to declaring him Maker of all creatures, (as we shall see upon Heb. i. 10.) we again conclude he is no creature; because a creature creator, if at all reconcilable with reason<sup>r</sup>, is however utterly irreconcilable with Scripture, which every where makes creative power the distinguishing character of God most high<sup>s</sup>. The Arian construction is, "All [other] things were made by him, and without him " was not any thing made that was [then] made." So by inserting other there, and then here, that is, by altering St. John's most express, most emphatical propositions, a new sense is made for him which he had doubly excluded, as far as words could do it. For our construction we have, 1. Express text. 2. The order and coherence of the sentence. 3. The tenor of Scripture, appropri-

<sup>9</sup> One may observe the force of this text even upon those that came very unwillingly (and upon the whole not sincerely) into the doctrine it contained, since it obliged Eunomius himself, one of the grosser kind of Arians, but the shrewdest man of the sect, to admit thus much, that Christ must be as much superior to his creatures, as the Maker must be to the things he has made; and that he was really invested with creative powers by the Father. A remarkable concession, and such as ought to have made a modest man renounce all his metaphysics; which alone hindered him from coming entirely into Church principles. The place I speak of is in his Apologetic, (which was answered by St. Basil,) and runs as here follows:

Τοσαύτην αὐτῷ νέμομεν ὑπεροχὴν, ὅσην ἔχειν ἀναγκαῖον τῶν ἰδίων ποιημάτων τὸν ποιητὴν. πάντα γὰρ δι' αὐτοῦ γεγενῆσθαι κατὰ τὸν μακάριον Ἰωάννην ὁμολογοῦμαι, συνασπογεννηθείσης ἀνωθεν αὐτῷ τῆς δημιουργικῆς δυνάμεως, ὡς εἶναι Θεὸν μονογενῆ πάντων τῶν μετ' αὐτὸν, καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ γενομένων. Eunom.

Apolog. p. 281. Fabr. Bibl. Græc. lib. v. c. 23. Basil. Opp. tom. i. p. 623. edit. Bened. Conf. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. ii. p. 255. edit. Bened.

<sup>r</sup> A late ingenious writer argues the point, in a very rational manner, thus: "Creation, or the bringing a " thing into being which before had " none, or was once nothing, is undoubtedly the proper act of an al- " mighty or infinite power: and, as " must be granted, infinite power is " an incommunicable attribute or " perfection. Besides, if a power of " creating could be communicated, " then the being on which it is conferred, having the same power, " might endue a creature of its own " with such a power; and this creature might make another such creature, and so on in infinitum; which is " so shocking an absurdity, that no one " can bear the thought or imagination " of it." Essay concerning Rational Notions, p. 159. printed for W. Innys, 1733.

<sup>s</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 72, &c.

ating creative powers to God supreme. 4. The reason of the thing: for it is not reasonable to suppose that one creature should create another. 5. The universal judgment of the first and purest ages of the Christian Church. What is there now, on the other hand, to counterbalance these reasons, or to oblige us to run cross to so many evident marks of a true interpretation? The author of Sober and Charitable &c. pleads on the other side, that the Apostle, if he had intended to teach that the Logos was God, Creator of all things, might have said it more plainly, and with less circumlocution<sup>t</sup>. But we think St. John has done it in chosen and expressive words, and could not have made use of better to express what he intended, all things considered<sup>u</sup>. He might have said, adds this gentleman, that “in God are three personal distinctions, the Father, the Word, and the Spirit.” But St. John was wiser than to teach Sabbellianism, as it has been since called; the blessed Three are not personal distinctions, but distinct persons; as is proved from St. John in this very place, because the Word was with God.

It is asked, could either Jew or heathen guess that he did not mean a distinct being<sup>x</sup>? I answer, neither Jew nor heathen, who knew that St. John believed the Old Testament, could be so weak as to imagine that he meant to teach another God, or two Gods. However, the Christian Church are the properest interpreters of St. John's meaning: why must Jews or heathens, as such, be appealed to<sup>y</sup>, rather than Christ's disciples, for the understanding Christian doctrine? The objector here twice<sup>z</sup> confounds personal characters (as he had before done personal distinctions) with persons; which is not fair towards our side, nor so prudent for the other side, because it is tacitly confessing that our notion wants to be misrepresented, in order to afford some colour for disputing against it.

He asks, “Why is it doubled over, THE SAME WAS IN THE BEGINNING?” To be the more emphatical against heretics, or the better to connect the sentence, and to introduce what follows.

“And why so minute, as to inform us, not one is to be ex-

<sup>t</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 55.

<sup>u</sup> See the whole explained above. Compare Tillotson, Sermon xliii. vol. i. fol. edit.

<sup>x</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 56.

<sup>y</sup> See my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 46, 47.

<sup>z</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 56, 57.

“cepted<sup>a</sup>?” Perhaps to foreclose, condemn, and put to shame all those who, notwithstanding such his minuteness, would yet be bold enough to foist in other there, and then here, to elude and frustrate his meaning: experience shews that all his guards are useful, none superfluous. But if the reader desires a fuller account, he may please to look back to what I have said above<sup>b</sup>. I have answered all the questions: and now let the reader judge, whether they have weight enough to bear down the Christian interpretation founded upon the reasons before recited. Yet the author is pleased to recommend the other in very high terms: “Not a word is lost, in that way, every thing has a plain, “proper, and obvious sense<sup>c</sup>.” Is it possible? Has the word God, for instance, its plain, proper, and obvious sense<sup>d</sup>, when it is made to signify a Godlike creature? And is there not a word lost, when the very strongest expressions which the Apostle could use, to exempt the Logos from being one of the things made, are defeated and frustrated, by forcing the words other and then upon him, which he never wrote, and by obtruding a sense, which, it is likely, he abhorred? Have the words, all things, and was not any thing, their plain and obvious sense assigned them, when they are violently wrested from their absolute meaning to a limited one; and are arbitrarily clogged with reserves and restrictions, though, according to the plain letter, and other plain circumstances, they form universal propositions, affirmative and negative? If such liberties as these are to be taken with plain texts, and without any apparent necessity, it is in vain to prescribe any sober rules of interpretation, or to attempt to prove any thing from dead writings. But if words can be of any weight or significancy, these texts of St. John are plainly definitive on our side of the question: which I have shewn more at large elsewhere<sup>e</sup>. Or if the reader pleases to peruse Professor Frank’s Treatise, lately translated from the German into English<sup>f</sup>, he will there find the Divinity of our blessed Lord solidly demonstrated by six several arguments drawn from this single chapter, but compared with other texts.

I may over and above advance one more argument, fairly de-

<sup>a</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 57.

<sup>b</sup> See above, p. 543.

<sup>c</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 55.

<sup>d</sup> As to the strict sense of the word God, in that place, see my Sermons, vol. ii. p. 44, 45.

<sup>e</sup> Sermons the first, second, and third, at Lady Moyer’s Lecture.

<sup>f</sup> Frank’s Nucleus, or Christ the Sum and Substance of Scripture, p. 93—173.

ducible from the distress which the impugners of Christ's Divinity have all along been in, with relation to this proeme of St. John, and the difficulties they have lain under in contriving to evade its force. The Alogi<sup>s</sup>, (who appear to have been a branch of the Ebionites,) as also Theodotus<sup>b</sup>, took the short and plain way, which was to reject the whole Gospel, as not being of St. John's inditing.

The Arians were so distressed with the same passages, that they knew not how to evade them but by a new invention of a twofold Logos<sup>i</sup>, one considered as an attribute, quality, or operation of God, (after the Sabellian way,) the other considered as a creature, made by the former. And here they were under a dilemma which they could never get clear of: for either all things were made by the Logos in the former sense, and then how was the Logos MADE FLESH? Or all things were made by the Logos in the latter sense, created by a creature, who must also, if the word all be strictly taken, have created himself; which is palpably absurd. It seems that they inclined most to the former; and if we may trust to Anastasius Sinaïta, that was the very construction which Arius himself espoused<sup>k</sup>.

Next let us inquire, whether the modern impugners of Christ's Divinity have succeeded any better, or whether they also have not betrayed the like confusion and distress. I need not say any thing of Socinus's wild and extravagant interpretation, which has long been exploded by his own disciples, and which stands now only as a monument of the wonderful virtue of strong prejudices and self-admiration. Zwicker came after, and he took the surer way, which was to deny the authenticity of the proeme, and to strike it out of the Canon of the New Testament. Artemonius (alias Sam. Crellius) is a later instance, and which comes as fully up to my purpose: he has been moving heaven and earth (as I have before<sup>l</sup> intimated) to persuade us into a different reading of one of the critical words in St. John, on which much depends. He has ransacked

<sup>s</sup> Epiphani. Hær. l. i. 3. Philastr. Hær. lx. Damascen. Hær. li.

<sup>b</sup> Epiphani. Hær. liv. i.

<sup>l</sup> Vid. Athanasii Opp. 260, 282, 398, 409, 413, 503, 505, 620. edit. Bened.

<sup>k</sup> Arius's interpretation of the place, according to Anastasius in his Hodegus, runs thus:

Καλῶς εἶπεν ὁ Ἰωάννης, ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Λόγος, τοῦτ' ἐστὶ τὸ ῥῆμα τοῦ Θεοῦ. οὐ γὰρ εἶπεν, ἐν ἀρχῇ ἦν ὁ Υἱός, ἀλλ' ὁ Λόγος ὁ προφορικὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ. Anastas. Hodeg. p. 330.

<sup>l</sup> See above, p. 567.

all antiquity<sup>m</sup> for authorities to justify an alteration; and because he could find none, he has made as many as he pleased. by mere dint of wit and fancy. Certainly St. John had some direction extraordinary, or was otherwise a very sagacious person, that, after the utmost improvements made in the art of chicanery, and wire-drawing of words, yet nothing can effectually do the business, even at this day, but altering the text; though, after all, there is no manner of countenance from any copies for doing it. One thing however I may observe of Artemonius, which, as it shews his acuteness, betrays at the same time a consciousness, or a tacit acknowledgment, that we are in the right to interpret the word God in the strict sense, as we do. He argues, that it was by no means proper that the Word should be called God, lest that appellation, taken with so many other plausible circumstances, should lead men into a snare, and make them believe Christ to be God most high<sup>n</sup>. Now what is this but confessing, that such an inference is natural and obvious, upon the supposition that Christ is called God in Scripture? He saw the force of it, and the inevitable necessity we are under of so interpreting: and that consideration made him take such immense, but fruitless pains, to defeat all those texts where Christ is expressly called God. But if that single consideration struck this gentleman in so sensible a manner, what can we think of all the other texts, which over and above ascribe to Christ divine perfections, and divine worship also? It is plain, that Artemonius could not have been against us, had he not set out at first upon a false principle, that human imagination is the measure of divine truths.

II. From John i., I now pass on to Hebr. i., in order to examine whether what we find there be not altogether as definitive as the former. Here the author of Sober and Charitable &c. undertakes to give a fair and impartial account of both parties. Notwithstanding which, in his very first setting out, he represents us as direct and manifest Sabellians, against all reason and justice, and common equity. He puts these words upon us, as expressing our sense: "God may be said to make all things by "his Son, as a man to understand by his reason<sup>o</sup>." This is not our way of speaking or thinking on the subject, (it was Sabellius's, it was Arius's,) and therefore ought not to be reported as ours. For what if we do not call Father and Son two substances, (the union being too close to admit of such expressions,) yet we scruple not to say, Substance of substance, like as God of God. We contrive our expressions so as to suit the Scripture idea of a real distinction without division, and of an union also without confusion. We maintain, that there may be a real diversity consistent with real unity, and that what is multiple in one respect may be one in another. And thus we stand clear, as of Sabellianism on one hand, so likewise of Tritheism on the other<sup>p</sup>. The author proceeds to set forth<sup>q</sup> a summary of our reasonings upon Hebr. i. And he has indeed brought together a great deal more than can ever be fairly answered. But without replying to what was offered on our side, and without so much as endeavouring to shew how the force of those many strong expressions can be evaded, or the words accounted for, he contents himself barely with representing the pleadings on the other side, producing our antagonists not as respondents, but opponents only. But supposing that the adversaries had ever so much to urge in that way, yet, unless they could reconcile it with the words of the texts, and give a clear account of the whole, it is doing the work by halves, and can, at most, be esteemed but as a lame defence. However, by this means all our arguments from Hebr. i. are left standing in full force, and it remains only that we remove objections, to clear the whole thing. Two considerations are suggested by this author; first, that the chapter here under inquiry makes the Son another being from God; secondly, it makes him also an inferior being<sup>r</sup>. Let us now examine how these pretences are supported.

<sup>m</sup> Initium Evangelii S. Joannis ex Antiquitate Ecclesiastica restitutum. Per L. M. Artemonium, A. D. 1726.

<sup>n</sup> Artemonius, par. ii. p. 295.

<sup>o</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 59.

1. As to the first suggestion, it is to be observed, that it amounts only to a metaphysical subtlety about being and person, as if the words were convertible terms; which, though it has been tried a thousand times over, could never yet be made out. But here we may perceive, who they are that run into metaphysical and logical niceties to evade plain words of Scripture<sup>s</sup>, in-

<sup>p</sup> See my First Defence, vol. i. Query xxii. p. 465, &c. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 716, &c. Further Vindication, vol. iii. p. 43—46.

<sup>q</sup> Sober and Charitable Disquisition, p. 59—65.

<sup>r</sup> Ibid. p. 66.

<sup>s</sup> How common and constant the practice is, I have often observed elsewhere. First Defence, vol. i. Query stead of keeping close to sacred Writ, and what it teaches in full and express terms. But I would further remark, though I have occasionally hinted it before, that all this discourse about being and person is foreign, and not pertinent; because, if both these terms were thrown out, our doctrine would stand just as before, independent of them, and very intelligible without them. So it stood for above one hundred and fifty years, before person was heard of in it: and it was later before being was mentioned. Therefore, if all the objection be against those, however innocent, expressions, let the objectors drop the names, and accept the thing. They may express the doctrine thus, if they please; that the Father is God, the Son God, the Holy Ghost God, and all one God; and yet the Father is not the Son, nor Holy Ghost, nor either of them the Father: this is plainly the doctrine of Scripture, let them express it in what terms they please. Each is Jehovah, and yet they are not three Jehovahs: this is truth, (if Scripture can prove a truth,) and we need no more. But if any one has a mind to express this doctrine in such words as Justin Martyr, and Athenagoras, and Irenæus, and Theophilus, and Clemens Alexandrinus expressed it in, (before person or being was heard of,) he is at liberty as to words, while he admits the sense: for we are not bound down to names, but to things. These considerations premised, I now proceed with our author.

He objects, that the "Son is distinguished from God<sup>u</sup>." From God the Father, he means: and so he should be, because God the Son is not God the Father. He adds, if "God means God the Father, he only must be God, for he says of himself, he is God "ALONE." Here I might run out into a particular explication of what concerns exclusive terms: but because I have often done it before, I choose to refer<sup>x</sup>. But in the mean while, if the exclusive terms are so strict, how come the Arians off with their doctrine of two Gods? We can give a good reason why the exclusive terms should yet tacitly suppose and include what so intimately belongs to God: but certainly all creatures are for ever excluded.

The author goes on to observe, that Father and Son must be xxii. p. 463, 464, 555. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 432, 468, 496, 550, 629, 696, 703, 737, 757, 758, 762.

<sup>t</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 709.

<sup>u</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 66.

<sup>x</sup> Vol. ii. Sermon iv. per tot. Second Defence, vol. ii. p. 405, 423, 424, 444, 455, 527, 665. Third Defence, or Further Vindication, p. 28 of this vol.

*two things*γ. One would hope he does not mean two Gods, equal or unequal: as to any thing else, we are unconcerned; we allow that the Father is not the Son, and so vice versa. He says further, the Son is “not the self-same individual substance<sup>z</sup>.” Here again the reader may observe what kind of arguments we are attacked with: no regard to the proper, obvious, natural sense of the texts, but all the dispute is made to turn upon logical niceties, or metaphysical subtleties about the nature of things confessedly mysterious, or rather upon the meaning of technical terms and names, such as individual<sup>a</sup>, &c. It is sufficient again to say, that the Son is not the Father, and yet each is Jehovah, and Jehovah is one. Either deny this to be Scripture, or say that no Scripture can prove the point: and then what signifies arguing from John i. or from Hebr. i.?? it is all but empty amusement.

It is asked, can a person begotten be the express image of a person unbegotten, when the properties are so unlike<sup>b</sup>? That our Scripture has so taught<sup>c</sup>, is as plain as the sun: therefore the question should have been put, whether the texts shall be allowed, or shall be struck out of the Canon? As to begotten and unbegotten, they are relations only; and (to compare small things with great) Adam unbegotten and Seth begotten were exceedingly alike, and one the express image of the other, notwithstanding: so there must be something more than the circumstance before mentioned, to prove a dissimilitude, or inequality<sup>d</sup>. But this way of prying into what is unsearchable, in order to evade plain Scripture texts, is not treating the Scripture reverently: neither is there any argument in it, any more than in a blind man’s reasoning about the nature of colours. A very acute and judicious writer well says, “It is certain we cannot speak of God with too “great moderation. It is better to rest satisfied with an im“perfect knowledge of him, by being content with general ideas, “than to run the hazard of thinking unworthily of that great “Being, by our rashness in proceeding to determinate ideas<sup>e</sup>.” That is to say, by attempting to determine the modus, about which we have properly no ideas; or by turning ideas of pure γ Sober and Charitable &c. p. 67.

z Ibid. p. 68.

<sup>a</sup> See my Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. ix. p. 620. Qu. xviii. p. 709.

<sup>b</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 68.

<sup>c</sup> Col. i. 15. Hebr. i. 3.

<sup>d</sup> See my Answer to Whithy, vol. ii. p. 555, 556.

<sup>e</sup> Crousaz, New Art of Thinking, vol. ii. p. 80. English edition.

intellect into ideas of imagination, which is equally absurd. Hitherto we have been considering, whether the Son be another being (by which the author means another God) different from God the Father: which the objector has not proved.

2. We are next to consider, whether the Son be inferior, in nature or perfections, or can be proved to be so from Hebr. i. It is pleaded, that God "appointed him heir of all things<sup>f</sup>." Therefore (for that must be the consequence, or none) he is an inferior God. Why then is it not said that they are two Gods? However, to answer more directly, but withal very briefly; the Son's voluntary condescension neither supposes him inferior, nor makes him so.

It is further objected, that since God made the worlds by him, the Father only is efficient, and the Son the instrument g. It must be owned that the Arians, formerly<sup>h</sup> as well as since, have suggested as much: but it is all fiction and fancy, without support from Scripture, confuted in this very chapter, as we shall see presently. There is no foundation in the text for any such unworthy thought of God the Son. The preposition by proves nothing of it; for it is frequently made use of in Scripture, when the Father himself is the person to whom it is applied<sup>i</sup>. But what room is there for further dispute here upon that head, when the text itself expresses the proper efficiency of God the Son, as fully and clearly as it is possible to be expressed? THOU, LORD, IN THE BEGINNING HAST LAID THE FOUNDATION OF THE EARTH; AND THE HEAVENS ARE THE WORKS OF THINE HANDS<sup>k</sup>. This is said of God the Son<sup>l</sup>, who is also Jehovah in the Psalm from whence these words are taken: could there be any words thought on, either plainer or stronger to express a proper efficiency than those are? and if those are not sufficient to ground our doctrine upon, what can we think of sacred Writ, (with reverence be it spoken,) but as of a book overspread with traps and snares, to deceive the Christian world? It is true, there are tropes, figures, and metaphors in holy Scripture, as when Christ is called a door,

<sup>f</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 69.

<sup>g</sup> Id. Ibid.

<sup>h</sup> Vid. Athanas. Orat. i. p. 430. Orat. ii. p. 498.

<sup>i</sup> Basil. de Spir. Sancto, Opp. tom. iii. c. 5. p. 6, &c. edit. Bened. Taylor's True Scripture Doctrine, p. 347. Alexander's Essay on Irenæus, p. 148.

Franck's Nucleus, p. 118.

<sup>k</sup> Hebrews i. 10. Compare Psalm cii. 25.

<sup>l</sup> See my Defence, vol. i. p. 327. Sermons, vol. ii. p. 37. Compare Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. v. s. 8. p. 319. Dr. Knight's Sermons, p. 51, &c.

a vine, a icay, and the like; or when God is said to have eyes, hands, mouth, heart, &c. And, in such cases, every sensible man knows that a literal construction would be absurd: but in the instance now before us, here is no mark at all of any trope, figure, or metaphor, nor any reasonable objection against interpreting up to the letter. So far from it, that the whole tenour of Scripture confirms us in it, that Christ is Jehovah, and properly Creator: and the worship ascribed to him is another concurring circumstance to complete the demonstration. In short then, those Arian salvos come too late: the text itself has, in express words, precluded them.

The author goes on to object: "Upholding all things, but by "the word of God's power." Dr. Clarke interprets it Father's power: which is a possible, not a certain construction. The text may as probably, or more probably, be understood of the Son's own power. However, be it Father's or Son's, it is all one power, and he and his Father are one. The author<sup>m</sup> adds, "Seating "himself not in God's throne, but at his right hand<sup>n</sup>." And what then? Is he not a second Person? But, it seems, that if he had been seated in the same throne, the author would then allow the equality. Turn we therefore to the book of Revelations, and there we find them both in one throne. It is THE THRONE (not thrones) OF GOD AND OF THE LAMB<sup>o</sup>: and Christ himself declares that he was in his Father's throne<sup>p</sup>.

It is asked, why should angels be called upon to worship him, if he were God equal to the Father? "Can they be supposed ignorant, if that were the case?" To which I reply, that though angels were fully apprised of his high perfection and dignity, yet as to the particular times, places, and circumstances, when, and where, and in what manner, they should pay their homage or devotions, they might wait for special orders. The Father's manifesting his Son to the world was a new and extraordinary occasion: and how should the angels know in what manner they were to behave upon it, without particular direction? They were ordered thereupon to repeat or renew their solemn exercises of devotion towards the Son, now become man, and clothed in flesh:

<sup>m</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 69.

<sup>n</sup> What the phrase of sitting at God's right hand imports, is very judiciously and carefully discussed by Vitranga, Observ. Sacr. lib. ii. c. 4, 5.

<sup>o</sup> Revel. xxii. 1.

<sup>p</sup> Revel. iii. 21. Compare Zechar. vi. 12, 13. and Vitranga, ibid. c. 5. p. 310.

<sup>q</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 70, 71.

as they had also special directions for celebrating his nativity or incarnation in devout doxologies<sup>r</sup>.

It is further pleaded, that the words, GOD, EVEN THY GOD, argue some inferiority of God the Son. Yes, of the Son considered as man<sup>s</sup> and in his state of humiliation, in which God the Father anointed him with the oil of gladness, with the unction of the Spirit, above his fellows; his partners in the same nature<sup>t</sup>, partakers of the same flesh and blood; on which account "he is "not ashamed to call them brethren<sup>u</sup>."

The author asks, why should not the Apostle roundly assert that Christ was Jehovah, if it were his purpose to set him forth as such<sup>x</sup>? Had he done it ever so roundly, a contentious adversary might still have found fault, and might have required somewhat further. The Apostle has said what is sufficient for the conviction of any reasonable man, by applying what is directed to Jehovah in the Psalm, to God the Son in this chapter. This is saying the thing roundly enough: and we are not obliged to give reasons why he has said no more, if he has said what may suffice with men of ordinary discernment. But I may hint further, that a very probable reason may be assigned why he did not take that precise method which the objector fancies he should have done. It was the Apostle's direct design, as it seems, to prove that the Son was above the angels, in opposition, very probably, to the Simonians or Cerinthians of that time, who attributed the creation of the world to angels, and who looked upon Jesus as a mere man, and as such inferior to angels<sup>y</sup>. Therefore the Apostle chiefly labours these two points, namely, to prove that Christ was really Creator<sup>z</sup>, and that he is vastly superior to angels. What he further insinuates of his being Jehovah comes in by the bye: and it would not have been directly to his purpose to have insisted more particularly upon it: because even that would not have proved him (in the opinion of who explains the text at large, and very justly; excepting that he dislikes the ancient notion of the unction of the Spirit, which yet seems to be the true one, p. 31—35.

<sup>r</sup> Luke ii. 13, 14. Compare Rev. xii. 11, 12.

<sup>s</sup> Ἡ θεότης οὐ χρίεται, ἀλλ' ἡ ἀνθρωπότης. εἶτα παρὰ τοὺς μετόχους σου φησί. τίνες δὲ εἰσιν οἱ μετόχοι, ἀλλ' ἡ οἱ ἄνθρωποι; τούτεστι τὸ πνεῦμα οὐκ ἐκ μέτρου ἔλαβεν ὁ Χριστός. Chrysost. in loc. And so other Greek Fathers, Basil, Theodoret, Theophylact, Œcumenius.

<sup>t</sup> See Dr. Bennet on the Trinity,

<sup>u</sup> Hebr. ii. 11.

<sup>x</sup> Sober and Charitable &c. p. 73.

<sup>y</sup> Vid. Bull. Judic. Eccl. c. v. s. 8. p. 320.

<sup>z</sup> Hebr. i. 2, 10.

the heretics then prevailing) superior to angels, since they looked upon Jehovah, the God of the Old Testament, as no more than angel<sup>a</sup>. However, though I assign a reason which appears not improbable for the Apostle's saying no more, yet we have a right to insist upon it, that there is no need of assigning any reason at all for his not saying more than was sufficient for every purpose. There is no end of cavils when men are disposed to indulge them. The Jews sought after a sign, but had none more given them, after they had had enough. They demanded that Christ should come down from the cross for their satisfaction: but infinite wisdom would not condescend to satisfy them in their way, when they would not submit to other very sufficient and better evidences. The question therefore is not, whether the Apostle in this place has said all that could have been said, but whether he has said as much as was needful. We conceive that he has; and let those who think otherwise consider how they can fairly evade the force of what they here find, before they require more. Let them think how it is possible to elude what St. Paul has here said to prove that Christ is Jehovah, though he has proved it only by the bye, and has not largely or directly insisted upon it.

I shall only add, that if the point is to be decided by the asking of questions in this way, let leave be given to the orthodox also to ask a few questions in their turn. If Christ be a creature, why is it not roundly asserted either in Old or New Testament? And if he and the Father be two Gods, supreme and inferior, why is not that also roundly asserted, in some part of Scripture at least? We have the more reason to expect it should, because otherwise the contrary doctrine hath so many and so plausible appearances of truth, that the most serious and conscientious persons are under inevitable danger of deception by them. And therefore, if we may be allowed to reason and argue with the tremendous Deity upon the subject of his revelations, or dispensations towards mankind, none, we imagine, can with more justice, or with better grace, ask, why has not Scripture some-tendens; ipsam quoque legem ab angelis datam perhibens; Judæorum Deum, non Dominum, sed angelum promens. Pseudo-Tertull. Præscript. c. xlvi. Conf. Epiphani. Hær. xxviii. 1.

<sup>a</sup> Post hunc Cerinthus hæreticus erupit, similia docens: nam et ipse mundum institutum esse ab illis [angelis] dicit: Christum ex semine Joseph natum proponit, hominem illum tantummodo sine divinitate con-

where or other dropped a hint or two about Christ's being a creature, or about his being an inferior God, admitting two Gods, two adorable Deities, to prevent our falling into an otherwise unavoidable delusion? I doubt not, if that were the truth, but that our Lord himself, (whose humility is so justly celebrated,) and his Disciples after him, would have openly proclaimed it; and that we should have as plainly found it in the New Testament throughout, as now we find the reverse. Can we imagine that a truth of that moment (if it were a truth) should be left in obscurity, to be drawn out, at length, after more than 300 years, by Arius, Aetius, and Eunomius<sup>b</sup>; and that by the help chiefly of logical conceits and metaphysical speculations, far above the reach of common capacities? Certainly, Divine Wisdom could not be so much wanting to the bulk of mankind, but would have provided better for them in a scriptural way, and by plain words, that so they might be more beholden to Christ and his Apostles for their faith, than to the Dialectics of Aristotle, or Chrysippus's subtleties<sup>c</sup>. But I forbear to press this further: and having briefly run through all that the author of Sober and Charitable Disquisition had to urge in favour of the Arian interpretation, both of John i. and Hebr. i., I must now leave it to the impartial readers to judge, whether any thing has been offered on that side, which can be thought sufficient to counter-balance our plain and direct evidences brought from express words, fixed to a certain meaning by all the approved rules of grammar and criticism, and confirmed by the universal suffrage of the first and purest ages. Thus far I was obliged to enter into a small part of the other controversy, which affects the truth of the doctrine, rather than the importance; because, as I hinted in the entrance, the author I am concerned with had nihil amplius scit quam nos: nec illa ipsi quidem notior, nobis autem obscurior. Fabric. Bibl. Græc. lib. v. c. 23. p. 272. Conf. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. i. p. 224. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. lib. iv. c. 3. Cyrill. Alex. Thesaur. p. 260. Chrysost. Hom. xxvii. tom. i. p. 307. Philostorg. lib. i. p. 468, 470. ed. Vales. Gregor. Nazianz. Orat. xxxiv. p. 539.

<sup>b</sup> Clarissimis Scripturæ testimoniis argumentationes metaphysicæ argutiæ opponere, Eunomii est, qui ab Aetio magistro edoctus, essentiam divinam penitus ac perfecte scilicet cognitam sibi habere persuadebat. Tam perspicue Deum qualis sit novi, ac tantam illius notitiam sum consecutus, ut ne me ipsum quidam melius quam illum noverim. Aetius apud Epiphanium lxxvi. p. 916, 989. Eunomius ipse, majore etiam insolentia apud Socratem, iv. 7. De sui ipsius essentia, Deus

<sup>c</sup> Vid. Basil. contr. Eunom. lib. i. p. 214, 221.

mingled them in some sort together. But they who desire fuller satisfaction in that other question may please to consult those treatises which are professedly written upon it. What comes in here amounts only to slight touches, and so far only as related to the texts mentioned: which, though justly reckoned definitive on our side, are yet but a very slender part of what the whole Scripture affords us in that cause.

A D D E N D A.

---

Additional Illustrations referring to the respective Pages above.

Page 406. IDEAS of intellect, &c. The distinction between ideas of intellect and ideas of imagination is much insisted on by Des Cartes in his Metaphysics<sup>a</sup>, and is explained more clearly and to better advantage in a late judicious treatise written by Mr. Crousaz in French, and now rendered into English<sup>b</sup>.

P. 441. The same with denying his eternal existence. I should have omitted the word denying, or else have said, the same with denying the necessity of believing his eternal existence. All I meant to say was, that Episcopius (which is true also of Limborch) did not distinguish in that instance between the eternal generation of the Logos and the eternal existence; as some of the ancients did<sup>c</sup>.

P. 460. Such effects might last beyond the apostolic age. I might have expressed myself with greater assurance, and said, that they actually did last as far down as to the Cyprianic age<sup>d</sup>: nay, and if we may believe Paulinus<sup>e</sup>, who reports it as an eyewitness, they continued down to the latter end of the fourth century. From whence may fairly be accounted for the long continuance of the phrase of delivering over to Satan in excommunications<sup>f</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> Cartesii Meditat. vi. p. 36. Object. v. p. 45. Respons. v. p. 78.

<sup>b</sup> Crousaz, New Treatise of the Art of Thinking, vol. i. p. 16, &c.

<sup>c</sup> See my Defence, vol. i. Qu. viii. p. 368, 369. Second Defence, vol. ii. Qu. viii. p. 618.

<sup>d</sup> See Dodwell, Dissertat. in Iren. ii. 54. p. 191—194.

<sup>e</sup> Quem cum interrogasset [Ambrosius] et deprehendisset autorem

tanti flagitii, ait : Oportet illum tradi Satanae in interitum carnis, ne talia in posterum audeat admittere : quem eodem momento, cum adhuc sermo esset in ore sacerdotis, spiritus immundus arreptum discernere cepit. Quo viso, non minimo timore repleti sumus et admiratione. Paulin. in Vit. Ambros. p. 9.

<sup>f</sup> See Bishop Hare, Scripture Vindicated, p. 69, 70.

Indeed, the use of the form remained afterwards, when such miraculous effects had entirely ceased: because the form had been customary from the beginning; and because it might still be understood in a sense not altogether foreign to its first intention, such as I have expressed above.

P. 468. He may be in some measure hurt in his reputation by it, and that is all. I would be understood here of the general case only, abstracting from particular cases and circumstances; as of ministers, suppose, whose maintenance also may be accidentally affected by it. An inconvenience common to ecclesiastical offices or civil, as often as men disable themselves from serving, either by refusing to give the legal securities, or by opposing the public measures.

P. 469. Or to pay them so much as common civilities. That is to say, when such civilities were likely to be interpreted as an approbation of the men and of their principles. But see this rule of the Apostle considered more at large, under its proper restrictions and limitations, by an able hand<sup>h</sup>.

P. 485. A wicked life the worst heresy, which is scarce sense, &c. At the best, it is a strong figure, or a turn of wit, and the thought not just upon the whole. But something of it may be traced up as high as to St. Bernard of the twelfth century, who argued that vicious persons were seducers by their bad example, and therefore were a kind of heretics in practice, corrupting more by their ill lives than heretics, properly so called, could do by their bad doctrines<sup>i</sup>: and he applies it particularly to vicious clergymen; not to extenuate the guilt of heresy, but to enhance the guilt of such bad example. The thought was not much amiss, if he had not carried it too far. He should not have suggested that bad example is worse than heresy, properly so called. It is true, that bad example commonly will do more harm than sound preaching will do good; because such example runs in with cor-

§ Denique bono aut æquo non contraria est excommunicationis pœna, qua nulla mansuetior. Non admovet flagra corporibus, non aptat vincula, non denuntiat mortem, non eripit bona, non abdicat dignitates; indignis abnuat sacramenta quibus in perniciem suam abuterentur. Itaque tota et ad Dei gloriam et ad peccantis salutem est comparata. Sam. Basnag. Annal. tom. ii. p. 481.

<sup>h</sup> Dr. Berriman's Sermon, in the Appendix to his Boyle's Lectures, vol. ii. p. 339.

<sup>i</sup> Multi sunt Catholici prædicando, qui hæretici sunt operando. Quod hæretici faciunt per prava dogmata, hoc faciunt plures hodie per mala exempla: seducunt scilicet populum et inducunt in errorem; et tanto graviores sunt hæreticis quanto prævalent opera verbis. Bernard. Serm. ad Pastores, p. 1732.

rupt nature, and the other is contrary: but if the doctrine be on the same side, it will do infinitely more mischief; and one loose casuist will debauch more than a hundred others shall do who are only loose in their lives. Bad example, under the check and discountenance of sound doctrine taught by the same person, carries its antidote along with it. But bad doctrine is a very dangerous snare: it is not merely breaking a law, but loosening the authority of all<sup>k</sup>. Therefore Bernard strained the thought too far: and so did Dean Colet after him<sup>l</sup>; who is the first man I have met with that ventured formally to say (for Bernard had not expressed the figure so boldly) that a bad life was a heresy, and the worst heresy. However, neither of them intended to extenuate the guilt of heresy at all, but to magnify another kind of guilt, as still greater according to their way of reasoning, or rather rhetoricating.

Archbishop Tillotson glances upon the same thought<sup>m</sup>, but gives a very different turn to it; and cannot, I think, be reasonably understood of heresy strictly and properly such, but of what some have wrongfully called so. Bishop Taylor, a very moderate <sup>k</sup> "Who will maintain that a prince would do better in changing the laws according to his present passions, than to let them subsist, and break them every hour? Nobody. For if he observes not the laws as he should, he leaves them their authority however, with respect to his subjects and such other princes as are willing to observe them; which is absolutely necessary to society.— If it be asked then, which carriage is most dangerous and blamable, that of such as violate the laws of the Gospel which they believe to be divine, or that of the incredulous who reject the Divinity of those laws, because they have no mind to obey them; it is plain that the latter is much worse than the former, supposing the laws of the Gospel to be beneficial to society, which cannot be doubted." Le Clerc, Causes of Incredulity, p. 88, 89.

The case which Le Clerc here puts is not precisely the same with the other, but the reason is the same for both.

<sup>l</sup> "He sheweth plainly, that there be two kinds of heresies, one arising from perverse teaching, and the "other from a naughty life: of which two this latter is far worse and more perilous, reigning now in priests." Colet's Sermon before the Convocation, A. D. 1511. Reprinted in the Phoenix, vol. i. p. 7.

<sup>m</sup> Tillotson's Sermons, vol. i. p. 402. fol. edit. His reflection upon those who were too censorious in charging heresy upon others, and at the same time too indulgent to their own vices, runs thus:

"Deluded people! that do not consider, that the greatest heresy in the world is a wicked life, because it is so directly opposite to the whole design of the Christian faith and religion; and that do not consider, that God will sooner forgive a man a hundred defects of his understanding, than one fault of his will."

N. B. Heresy, justly so called, is not a mere defect of understanding, but a fault of the will: and it is more directly opposite to religion than common offences; as overturning the authority of a law is worse than transgressing it, or as mutiny, sedition, and rebellion are worse than common felonies.

man, in a treatise written on the side of liberty, may be a very proper arbitrator to clear and determine the whole dispute.

“ Men think they have more reason to be zealous against “ heresy than against a vice in manners, because it is infectious “ and dangerous, and the principle of much evil. Indeed, if by “ heresy we mean that which is against an article of the Creed, “ and breaks part of the covenant between God and man by the “ mediation of Jesus Christ, I grant it to be a grievous crime, a “ calling God’s veracity in question, and a destruction also of a “ good life; because upon the articles of the Creed obedience is “ built, and it lives or dies as the effect does by its proper cause :
 “ for faith is the moral cause of obedience. But then heresy, that “ is, such as this, is also a vice, and the person criminal, and so “ the sin is to be esteemed in its degrees of malignity. And let “ men be as zealous against it as they can, and employ the whole “ arsenal of the spiritual armour against it. Such as this is “ worse than adultery or murder; inasmuch as the soul is more “ noble than the body, and a false doctrine is of greater dissemi“ nation and extent than a single act of violence or impurity.
 “ Adultery or murder is a duel, but heresy (truly and indeed “ such) is an unlawful war, it slays thousands. The losing of “ faith is digging down a foundation: all the superstructure of “ hope and patience and charity fall with it.—But then concern“ ing those things which men nowadays call heresy, they cannot “ be so formidable as they are represented. And if we consider “ that drunkenness is certainly a damnable sin, and that there “ are more drunkards than heretics, and that drunkenness is the “ parent of a thousand vices, it may be better said of this vice than “ of most of those opinions which we call heresies, it is infectious “ and dangerous, and the principle of much evil, and therefore as “ fit an object of our pious zeal to contest against<sup>n</sup>,” &c. Thus far Bishop Taylor.

In the sum of the matter I entirely agree with him. The result, I think, is, that nominal heresy, or an error in slight matters, not affecting the foundation, not hurting the vitals of Christianity, is not so bad as real immorality: and it is equally true, on the other hand, that nominal immorality is not so bad as real error in religion, though in the slighter doctrines. But supposing the error and the maintaining of it to amount to real heresy, it is then a vice, and the greatest of vices : so the whole will turn upon the nature, quality, and tendency of what is charged as an heresy. Invincible ignorance will equally excuse any other vice ; and so is wide of the purpose.

<sup>n</sup> Taylor’s Liberty of Prophesying, Dedicat. p. 42, 43.

P. 508. All parties are for creeds under one shape or other. It may be asked perhaps, what creed the Sceptics are for, who profess to doubt of every thing ? I answer, that their pretended scepticism is mostly affectation, and they generally are as credulous as other men ; frequently more so. If they believe less of religion, as some of them perhaps may, yet they are easy of belief as to any thing else. They have their systems, their maxims, their probabilities, (as they are pleased to call them,) which make up as long and large creeds as our certainities do : only there is this difference, that they commonly prefer a creed of paradoxes, and sometimes glaring absurdities, before a rational faith. And while we believe as much as we can prove, and no more, (which is believing like wise men,) they believe what they have a mind to, proving nothing, by their own confession ; which is resolving all into fond persuasion and credulity.

The most considerable writer I know of that ever appeared in behalf of general scepticism (matters of faith only excepted) is the celebrated Huetius, in a posthumous treatise<sup>o</sup>, written, I suppose, for an exercise of wit, to divert himself and friends ; unless he had some further latent view to serve the Romish cause. I may remark, that one article of his sceptical creed is, that the certainty of faith is superior to that of sense : a second is, that it is superior even to that of the first principles and axioms of Geometry<sup>p</sup>. One cannot desire any two plainer instances of the credulity of a sceptic. I mention not how often he forgets the part he was to act, talking in the style of a dogmatist : Sure it is, or It is certain<sup>q</sup>. Sometimes, he is fully persuaded<sup>r</sup>, or fully convinced<sup>s</sup>, or certainly knows<sup>t</sup> : at other times he speaks of evident proof<sup>u</sup>, and irrefragable argument<sup>x</sup>, and demonstration<sup>y</sup>, just as any dogmatist would do. So hard a thing is it for the finest wit even to personate a sceptic with any tolerable grace, or without perpetual inconsistency : for which reason

<sup>o</sup> A Philosophical Treatise concerning the Weakness of human Understanding. Printed in English, London, 1725.

<sup>p</sup> Huet. Philosoph. Treatise, &c. p. 15.

<sup>q</sup> Page 28, 30, 34, 68, 75, 98, 150.

<sup>r</sup> P. 7.

<sup>s</sup> P. 33.

<sup>t</sup> P. 14.

<sup>u</sup> P. 40.

<sup>x</sup> P. 52.

<sup>y</sup> P. 99. comp. 100, 104.

I before hinted that I look upon scepticism, so called, to be little else but affectation. Or if there really be any such kind of men who believe that they believe nothing, that very instance is an undeniable argument of their more than common credulity. Indeed, for a man to fall to arguing and proving that there is no such thing as proof or argument, is much the same as if one should make an eloquent harangue, lamenting that mortal men have not the faculty of speech, loudly complaining that all mankind are mutes.

P. 510. Our way supposes that men ought to examine (if capable, and as far as capable) in order to know that the doctrine proposed is true. If it should be asked, what need of examination after so many wise and good men, and all morally certain; I would ask again, what need is there of studying the demonstrations of Euclid, which all the world agree in, as containing certain truth? A man might safely enough take them for granted, and by so doing might as soon become a sound Geometrician, as by the like method, in the other case, he might commence a sound Divine, or a confirmed Christian. At best, it would be resting faith upon mere human authority, which would be resting it on a wrong bottom; and, besides, would be neglecting the due improvement of the heart and cultivation of the mind.

But may there not be danger in examining, danger of being led to dissent from what is right, and to embrace some error? Undoubtedly there may. And what conveniency is there without some inconveniency? Such danger must be risked, rather than found our faith upon a wrong principle, to render it worthless or contemptible: and it is better to hazard the chance of falling into some error in faith, than to be certain of committing a greater error in conduct. However, if men come with humility, modesty, and circumspection to the examination, and have patience to stay till they are clear, before they formally dissent, or before they declare it openly; there will be no great danger in examining every thing with the utmost severity.

P. 511. The phrase of having dominion over one's faith, is of obscure meaning, &c. I did not then call to mind how well the meaning of that phrase had been lately cleared up by a very learned hand<sup>z</sup>.

P. 544. The darkness cometh not upon it. I referred to a very judicious critic, Lambert Bos, for the justifying my rendering of this text. I find since, that the learned Wolfius disapproves of what Bos had offered<sup>a</sup>: but I abide by Bos notwithstanding, who plainly has reason on his side. He did not insist merely upon the force of the word καταλαβείν, but upon the phrase, upon the verb as joined with σκότος, or σκοτία. The examples which he gives from sacred and profane writers, of the use of the phrase, are all clear and full to his purpose. And if there be need of additional examples from ecclesiastical writers, there are several; as Origen<sup>b</sup>, Cyril of Alexandria<sup>c</sup>, and Theophylact<sup>d</sup>. Clemens of Alexandria, in his comment, (if it be his,) seems to take in both the senses of that verb into his construction of the text<sup>e</sup>. As to the allusion to the Gnostic principles (I use the word Gnostic in the larger sense) which I suppose in the words of St. John, neither Bos nor Wolfius take notice, nor seem to have been aware of it. But if the observation be just, as it appears very probable, (and I shall say more of it presently,) that also is a confirmation of such sense of the phrase as Bos pleads for; and the two considerations taken together answer very aptly to each other, which is an argument that both are right.

<sup>z</sup> Bishop Hare, Scripture Vindicated, p. 60—63.

544. The ancient Magian notion of a good God and an evil God, the first called light, and the other darkness, &c. A brief account of that ancient notion may be seen in Dean Prideaux<sup>f</sup>, and a large history both of its rise and progress among the Pagans, in Wolfius<sup>g</sup>. And how the same notion was revived, or augmented with new fooleries, among the heretics of the apostolical times, may be understood from a noted fragment of Basilides, preserved by Archelaus, of the third century, in his account of his Disputation with Manes<sup>h</sup>. Now, considering that <sup>a</sup> Ingeniosior quam verior hic est Lamb. Bos interpretatio — quod natura λόγου sanctissima et purissima sit, nec minimam cum impuritate habet communionem. Quæ notio quamvis in N. T. et apud ipsum Joannem nostrum, cap. xii. 35. occurrat, ab hoc tamen loco aliena merito censetur, in quo non tam quid tenebræ in Christum molitæ sint, aut moliri potuerint, quam quid Christum in tenebras molitus sit, exponitur. Conf. v. 10, 11. — Itaque rectius notio illa vocis καταλαβείν hic tenetur, quæ receptionem aut agnitionem infert. Hanc enim N. T. Scriptoribus imprimis familiarem esse patet ex Actor. v. 13. Rom. ix. 30.

Wolfii Curæ Philolog. et Crit. in loc. vol. i. p. 784.

<sup>b</sup> Origen. Comment. in Johan. edit. Huet. p. 73, 74.

<sup>c</sup> Cyril. Alex. Comment. in Johan. p. 23.

<sup>d</sup> Theophylact. in loc. p. 561.

<sup>e</sup> Clemens Alex. Excerpt. Theodoti. p. 969. edit. Ox.

<sup>f</sup> Prideaux's Connection, vol. i. p. 179. 8vo. edit.

<sup>g</sup> Wolfii Manichæismus ante Manichæum, sect. ii. p. 48—174.

<sup>h</sup> The fragment of Basilides is as follows:

“ Desine ab inani et curiosa varietate; requiramus autem magis quæ

Cerinthus was among those who had adopted the old notion of a good God and an evil God, (as Epiphanius has informed us,) and so of course must have fallen in with the old Magian principles; Basilides may reasonably be allowed of as a good interpreter of Cerinthus in those articles: and since St. John very manifestly struck at several other tenets of Cerinthus, in his divine proeme, it is more than probable that what he says in verse the fifth about light and darkness alludes to the Gnostic notion then prevailing, and is a confutation of it<sup>k</sup>. They pretended that the evil God Darkness pursued the Light, and came up to it: he asserts, that the Darkness came not upon it, never laid hold of it, never approached to obstruct or obscure it, but was irradiated and illuminated by it. It may further be considered, that Basilides probably flourished in the first century, and might be contemporary with St. John, as both Jerome<sup>l</sup> and Epiphanius<sup>m</sup> seem to assert: and though learned men have disputed it, yet <sup>n</sup>Massuet appears to have well cleared up the point against the most material objections. Now, if Basilides himself was so early, it is so much the more likely that St. John, writing at that time, might have an eye to the pernicious doctrine then propagated by him, and by the whole set of Gnostics. By Gnostics I understand all that sort of men who derived their principles from Simon Magus, and lived in the apostolic age;

“ de bonis et malis etiam barbari in-“ quisierunt, et in quas opiniones de
 “ his omnibus pervenerunt. Quidam “ enim horum dixerunt, Initia omnium “ duo esse, quibus bona et mala asso-“ ciaverunt, ipsa dicentes initia esse
 “ et ingenita: id est, in principiis, “ lucem fuisse ac tenebras, quæ ex
 “ semetipsis erant, non quæ esse di“ cebantur. Hæc cum apud semet“ ipsa essent, proprium unum quod“ que eorum vitam agebat quam vel“ let, et qualis sibi competeret: om“ nibus enim amicum est quod est
 “ proprium, et nihil sibi ipsi malum “ videtur. Postquam autem ad alter-“ utrûm agnitionem uterque pervenit, “ et tenebræ contemplatæ sunt lucem,
 “ tanquam melioris rei sumpta con“ cupiscentia, insectabantur ea com“ misceri.” Archel. et Manet. Dis- put. p. 194. Fabric. Conf. Wolf. Man- nich. p. 177. Grab. Spicileg. vol. ii.
 p. 30.

<sup>l</sup> Epiphanius, Hæres. xxviii. 2. p. 111.

<sup>k</sup> Accordingly, Archelaus (in his dispute with Manes) confutes that hypothesis from this very text; which is a great confirmation, not only of the construction of the phrase before given, but likewise of such application of the text as I have been pleading for. His words are:

“ Quomodo et ipse [malus Deus]
 “ cum sit omnino totus tenebræ, luci “ supervenit et comprehendit, Evan-“ gelista testimonium ferente, quia “ lucet in tenebris, et tenebræ eam non “ comprehenderunt.”

“ How could it be that the evil God, “ being that he is all darkness, should “ come upon the light, and compass it,
 “ when the Evangelist declares, that
 “ the light shined through the dark“ ness, and the darkness compassed it “ not.”

<sup>l</sup> Hieronymus, contr. Lucifer. p. 304. Opp. tom. iv. Bened. ed.

<sup>m</sup> Epiphanius, Hæres. xxxi. 2.

<sup>n</sup> Massuet, Dissertat. Præv. in Irenæum, p. 60.

though I am aware that, in a stricter and more special sense<sup>o</sup>, the Gnostics may be said to have risen up in the second century.

P. 568. Irenæus born in or near the Apostles' times, and was advanced in years when he wrote. I here follow Dodwell in a matter which requires not, and indeed admits not, of a scrupulous or critical exactness. However, since Dodwell has been blamed by more than one for his chronology in that article, I may just mention how the different accounts stand in relation to the year when Irenæus was born. According to Dodwell, A. D. 97: Grabe chooses the year 108; Tillemont, the year 120; others, 135: Massuet sets it the latest of all, A. D. 140. According to which different computations, Irenæus must be supposed either older or younger when he wrote, if he wrote in 176, or thereabouts, as most agree that he did: though some differ also as to that, setting the date of his writings ten or fifteen years lower.

P. 649. In strictness they were not interpretations of Scripture, but rather pious meditations upon Scripture: I am sensible that some of them were intended as strict interpretations: but in the general, &c.

To confirm and illustrate what I have here said, it may be observed, that St. Austin took into the allegorical way of interpreting when he was yet but a new convert, because he thought it much easier than the literal way, which he was not then so well prepared for. He had not at that time (so he tells us himself<sup>e</sup>) sufficient leisure or abilities to undertake so hard a province as the unfolding the literal sense, and therefore contented himself with giving only the mystical or allegorical. Could a sensible man so speak, and at the same time imagine that the mystical construction he pretended to give was the true mind of the Holy Ghost? Or could he conceive that he had any certain foundation for the mystical sense (so considered) before he had found out the literal one to ground it upon? No, surely. But thinking himself at

<sup>o</sup> See Wolfius, Manichæismus, &c. p. 206. Buddæus, Eccles. Apostol. p. 344, 345, 571, &c.

P Et quia non mihi tunc occurrerant omnia quemadmodum proprie possint accipi, magisque non posse accipi videbantur, aut vix posse, aut difficile; ne retardarer, quid figurate significarent ea quæ ad literam non potui invenire, quanta valui brevitate et perspicuitate explicavi, ne vel multa lectione vel disputationis obscuritate deterriti, in manus ea sumere non curarent. Augustin. de Gen. ad Liter. lib. viii. c. 2. p. 227. tom. iii. Bened.

Note, that St. Austin in the year 389, then a new convert, ventured no further than the allegorical exposition of Genesis: but in the year 401 he undertook the literal explication also, in twelve books, [de Genesi ad Literam.] which he finished about 415.

liberty to raise any true and instructive moral from the text, he gave it as a good lesson to ruminare upon rather than as a strict interpretation of the words before him. He, and other allegorizers like him, might apprehend that dry history, or a mere narrative of facts, would be unentertaining or unedifying to common readers or hearers, and therefore they had a mind to furnish them with proper meditations, moral and religious, to graft upon such parts of sacred Writ; that so, whenever they should hear or read any Scripture history, such reflections also might occur to their minds, for improving the same to spiritual uses<sup>q</sup>. And whether such spiritual uses were really intended in such place by the sacred penman or no; yet if the words might be but aptly accommodated thereto, and were but pertinently and soberly applied, and the analogy of faith preserved, a good end was answered thereby, and true doctrine at least kept, if not true interpretation<sup>r</sup>.

Nevertheless it must be owned that the allegorizing Fathers did sometimes intend such comments as strict and proper interpretations; particularly where they thought that the obvious literal meaning carried some absurdity in it, or else was too low and trivial to be the whole design of the sacred writer, or Spirit of God. They had St. Paul's example to go upon: "Doth God," says he, "take care for oxen<sup>s</sup>?" Intimating that such literal interpretation, singly considered, was too low and jejune a sense to fix upon the law in Deuteronomy<sup>t</sup>, and that therefore there was a necessity of supposing some higher meaning, and good reason for looking out for one. The like might be the case with other passages of the Old Testament, and very probably is: and so the Fathers endeavoured, wherever they apprehended any et sanitate Catholicæ fidei muniuntur, id potissimum deligamus quod certum apparuerit eum sensisse quem legimus. Si autem hoc latet, id certe quod circumstantia Scripturæ non impedit, et cum sana fide concordat. Si autem et Scripturæ circumstantia pertractari ac discuti non potest, saltem id solum quod fides sana præscribit. Aliud est enim quid potissimum scriptor senserit non dignoscere, aliud a regula pietatis errare.—Si voluntas scriptoris incerta sit, sana fidei congruam non inutile est eruisse sententiam. Augustin de Gen. ad Litteram, lib. i. cap. 41. p. 132.

<sup>q</sup> Eo minus vero mirandum, quod veteris Ecclesiæ doctoribus hæc ipsa (allegorica) scripturarum explicandi ratio placuerit, quod et illi crederent, in Scripturæ lectione unice hoc agendum, ut quæ fidem alere ac fovere, vitamque instruere possunt, inde hauriamus, reliqua non magnopere ad nos pertinere.—Prævaluit fere mystica illa et allegorica interpretandi ratio; pluribusque, ob insignem quem in vitæ fideique praxi habere videbatur usum, se commendabat. Buddæi Isagog. vol. ii. p. 1786.

<sup>r</sup> Cum divinos libros legimus, in tanta multitudine verorum intellectuum qui de paucis verbis eruuntur,

<sup>s</sup> 1 Cor. ix. 9.

<sup>t</sup> Deuteron. xxv. 4.

necessity of rising above the letter, to search out the mystical intendment; and in their searches of that kind they sometimes indulged their fancies too far, giving their own conjectures (but modestly, and within the analogy of faith) for the sense of Scripture. And what commentator is there that may not sometimes, or often, mistake in interpreting the obscure places of sacred Writ! A good sense, that is to say, a sense consistent with sound doctrine, every wise man will be sure to make choice of: but as to the true sense of the place, in such instances, it is what the wisest cannot often be sure of, or take upon them to warrant.

I shall only add, that in order to form a more distinct idea of the ancient ways of interpreting, it may be proper to bear in mind that threefold method of commenting which St. Jerome lays down<sup>u</sup>; namely, the historical, tropological, and theorical: or, in more familiar terms, the literal, moral, and sublime. The first of the three looked only to the grammatical meaning of the words, for the information of the hearers: the other two aimed at improving their morals and elevating their affections: which ends might be, in a good measure, answered by apposite meditations upon the text, though they should not happen to be true interpretations. And it was that consideration chiefly, as I conceive, which made the Fathers take the more freedom in moralizing and spiritualizing (if I may so speak) the letter of sacred writ. See the last passage which I quoted from St. Austin, intimating as much.

P. 667. Men of as great sense, learning, and piety, to all outward appearance, as any in their times, have sometimes fallen into heresy. I might mention Tertullian, Apollinaris, and several more<sup>x</sup>. But it has been suggested by some persons, that according to the Scripture account of heresy, none were chargeable with it but men who knowingly espoused false doctrine, who were directly self-condemned as teaching what they knew to be wrong, men of vile and dishonest principles, and of a flagitious character; in short, monsters of lewdness or impiety. And all

<sup>u</sup> Triplex in corde nostro descriptio et regula Scripturarum est. Prima, ut intelligamus eas juxta historiam: secunda, juxta tropologiam: tertia, juxta intelligentiam spiritualem.

1. In historia, eorum quæ scripta sunt ordo servatur:

2. In tropologia, de litera ad majora consurgimus: et quidquid in priori populo carnaliter factum est, juxta moralem interpretamur locum, et ad animæ nostræ emolumenta convertimus.

3. In spirituali theologia, ad sublimiora transimus, terrena dimittimus, de futurorum beatitudine et cælestibus disputamus, ut præsentis vitæ meditatio umbra futuræ beatitudinis sit. Hieronym. ad Hedib. tom. iv. p. 186. edit. Bened.

<sup>x</sup> Vid. Vincent. Lirinens. cap. xv. xvi. xxiii. xxiv.

this is grounded upon the scattered descriptions given of several kinds of heretics in several parts of the New Testament. I have not here room to consider this whole matter at large; nor is it necessary I should, since I have obviated the main of it in the preceding sheets: but to prevent any person's being imposed upon by such suggestions, I may here throw in a few brief and, I hope, pertinent considerations.

1. All heresies mentioned in Scripture were not of equal malignity. It is not right to apply to all what was true of some only; or to draw together all the ill features of several sects, or men, into one picture of deformity, and to make it serve for the picture of every individual.

2. The Apostles do not charge all the false teachers with flagitious, or openly scandalous lives and lewd doctrines, but the Nicolaitans chiefly, if not solely.

3. Some others are charged with secularity and selfish views, but not all. The Apostles, having the gift of discerning spirits, and writing by the Spirit of God, might justly so charge them: otherwise many of them might have passed, and would have passed, as persons of a fair character, full of godly zeal, and ministers of righteousness<sup>2</sup>. It was to prevent their passing for such that the Apostles took the advantage they extraordinarily had to expose the secret views of the men, lest they should deceive whole churches by a fair outward deportment.

4. As to those whom the Apostles so charged with sinister views, or corrupt motives, it cannot be proved that they taught what they knew to be false, or believed to be wrong: but their inclinations governed their faith, and they easily believed what their passions, pride, vanity, or popularity suggested to them; which is a very common case<sup>3</sup>. So that it does not appear that those false Apostles were formally self-condemned, or any otherwise than as all false teachers and evil-doers are self-condemned, when they might know and do better; though many of them enjoy great self-satisfaction.

5. Whatever the motives of such men were, the Apostles did not anathematize them for their corrupt motives, but for their corrupt doctrines; which would have deserved the same anathema, though taught with the best intention and most upright views,

<sup>1</sup> Gal. iv. 17.

<sup>2</sup> 2 Cor. xi. 13, 14, 15.

<sup>3</sup> "Men are apt to believe what they desire: and the weakest reasons which persuade them appear like either by the Apostles themselves, or by an angel from heaven<sup>b</sup>. St. John, in particular, does not say, whosoever upon ill motives abideth not in Christ's doctrine, or bringeth not this doctrine, "receive him not;" but simply, "whosoever transgresseth, and "abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, or bringeth not this doctrine:" there lay all the stress.

"demonstrations." See Le Clerc's whole chapter on this head, in his Parrhasiana, chap. vii. p. 226. Compare Causes of Incredulity, part i. c. 1, 2, 3.

6. Ill motives would corrupt even the best works: so the throwing all the malignity of heresy upon the ill motives, is making no fault of the heresy at all, nor specifying any difference, in moral account, between preaching the truth of the Gospel, and subverting it: for to do either upon wicked motives is undoubtedly a wicked thing.

7. The design of the Apostles in exposing the corrupt views of heretics was not to justify their anathema, or censure, (which was just without, because of the corrupt doctrine,) but to prevent the deception of the simple, who were in danger of being beguiled by flattering professions of love and tenderness towards men, and of zeal and conscience towards God: as is plain in the case of the Judaizing heretics, who were believing Pharisees, and who plausibly pleaded the law of God<sup>d</sup>. To obviate such plausible and ensnaring pretences, it was very proper to acquaint the unwary, that those false teachers were really men of selfish views and secular aims<sup>e</sup>, and were not to be implicitly trusted upon ever so many smooth speeches or artful professions, whether of friendliness or godliness.

8. Lastly, let it be noted, that open declared libertines are not the most dangerous of heretics; neither are the wildest heresies, though worst in quality, the most destructive in their consequences. Some things are too gross to deceive many, and too shocking to prevail much, or long. There is vastly greater danger of the Christian world's running into an half religion, than there is of their taking up with none, or with one that is plainly scandalous: and infinitely more, in all likelihood, will at length perish for not being good enough, than for being monsters of lewdness or impiety.

<sup>b</sup> Gal. i. 8.<sup>c</sup> 2 John 9, 10.<sup>d</sup> Acts xv. 5.<sup>e</sup> Rom. xvi. 17, 18.

DATE DUE

FEB 03 1999

DEMCO, INC. 38-2931

3 2044 052 776 689

31 21 1925

