LETTER LV.

TO MONS. DE VIC.

[MS. Harl. 7000, last letter in vol.]

S. in Christo.

WORTHY SIR,—I received lately letters from you out of France, and with them others enclosed from Peter Moulin^u, for conveyance whereof I heartily thank you. I likewise received three sheets of the new Bible, which is now there under the press^v. I have heard heretofore very much of that work, but never saw anything of it till you sent me these sheets. That nation may brag of the work in many respects, for so many various and difficult characters of the Eastern languages did I never see together before; and it is a great and very chargeable work for an advocate or a greater man to undertake single. It is great pity that they are enforced to make use of a Jew for the correction of the Hebrew, for howsoever he be converted, (and I pray God he be heartily,) yet so few of the late converts have been hearty, that he must needs be himself, and expose the work also, liable to suspicion. I thank you heartily for this advertisement, and so wishing your employment there happy both to the state and yourself, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your very loving Friend,

To my much honoured Friend,
Mr. de Vic, his Majesty's Agent

LETTER LVI.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 15.]

S. in Christo.

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP,—Mr. Secretary delivered your Lordship's letters to me, and in them a petition to his Majesty. Truly, my Lord, I did not a little wonder (considering what answer I was commanded to give your Lordship's former letters) that you would choose me out to this service; yet, since you would needs put this office upon me, I resolved rather to venture upon it, than to give cause to think I was disaffected to yourself, or your peace. And how formidable I have been represented to your Lordship (to use your own word) you best know; but what I am to you or others, that, I think, I should know best. This I am sure of, I judge not your Lordship in anything by the false representations of other men, and shall thank you for the like measure.

Having received your petition, I sought the first and best opportunity I could get to present it to his Majesty, and all that I got by it for myself was a smart chiding; his Majesty telling me, he thought he had forewarned me enough of this error, and that he had distinguished clearly enough to me between a Churchman and a Church cause when I moved it first. But when I had gotten leave to read it to him, his Majesty was pleased to say he would consider of it; and that was all the answer I could get.

For Sir John Lambe, I think he is of as ancient acquaintance with your Lordship, as with me; if he have done anything unworthy either of himself or you, let him bear his own burden. I did never joy in the differences that are fallen out between you, and am sorry for some occurrences that have happened^w. Since this is all the account I am able to give your Lordship either of your letters or your petition, so I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your Lordship's loving Friend and Brother.

LETTER LVII.

TO DR. RICHARD ASTLEY, WARDEN OF ALL SOULS.

[Tanner MSS. vol. cccxl. fol. 115 a*.]

S. in Christo.

SIR,—I thank you and that whole society very heartily for the respective letters which you writ unto me by two of the Fellows. I gave them hearing so soon as they came to me, and I think I do now understand the business concerning your surplusage, and the division of it; and how it arises, as well from the means your Founder left you, as from the Statute of Provision^v. And for this present year I am content to take no more from your dividend than to make your Tower-stock £1,000, which, if the Fellows inform me right, is £900 already. For the rest which you desire for the years to come, I do not yet like for the present to pitch upon a certain medium, because the occasions of the College are, or may be, both greater and more various than your dividend. And further, I like not to make a certain rule for a business of which I have had so little experience as I have of this; and I had rather not make such a rule, than, by after-occasions, be forced to break it. Yet this I shall do for the College; I shall not every year cause two of the Fellows to take such a dirty journey as these two have done, nor put the College to any needless charge. But this I shall expect, that every year, after the audit ended, you give me an account, by letter, what the Tower-stock is, and what the surplusage of that year; and then I will return you an answer what I think fit for the Dead College, and what for the Living: Always provided, that my late predecessor's orders stand in force still, and that I may have two of the Fellows come up to me to give me further account by word of mouth in all such years, and upon all such occasions as I shall think fit to call upon them.

And now, since I have dealt thus freely, and with such an

* [Marginal notes are added by Archbishop Sancroft, and the text is corrected in his hand.]

^v [This is the Act xviii. Eliz. cap.

vi. which provides that upon leases made by Colleges, a third part of the rent shall be reserved in corn.]

open hand to the Company, I must desire you, Mr. Warden, to let them know that I shall take it very ill if the Fellows do not every way conform themselves to honour their Founder, by obeying his Statutes, and conforming themselves to that which will be most beneficial for them. It is not long since I have heard of two complaints against the Fellows, or rather against the government; and I hope you, and they together, will mend both. The one is, that the scholar-like exercises required by statute are not duly kept: and the other, that the Fellows, divers of them, are too chargeable in their clothes, and follow the fashions too much. I hope the fault in these kinds is not so great as it is made to me, but the greater it is, the fitter to be amended, and I shall expect it be.

This enclosed petition was delivered me not an hour before the Fellows came to me.

I shall not ask you to do anything against either the Statutes or good orders of the College; but with preservation of them, pray do as much as you can for the youth. So, wishing all honour and happiness to that foundation, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest service I could, and am glad your troublesome suits are at an end. I hope that which the King hath now done will preserve you against your pressing necessities, through which I pray God send you a good passage. But for Westminster foes, they did very much wrong you, whoever they [were], that made those relations to you of great sum; for my former [letters told] the truth to you.

Concerning your preferme[nt, until any better] place falls, I can promise nothing; but I assure [you, his Majesty] hath a very good opinion both of you and your service; and therefore I [cannot] doubt but that he will take you and your estate into his consideration. At this time you have given his Majesty good content, and he expects that you continue in that course; and let him still receive a note who they be that conform, and who not; for I see his Majesty is resolved to go constantly on, and therefore you must not fail.

I have considered how much reason you speak concerning the poor singing men, and have received their petition, which you sent enclosed. I must needs say their case deserves a great deal of commiseration; and the very first time I got access to his Majesty, after the receipt of your letters, I acquainted him with their necessities, and he, like a gracious and a good Prince, was very much moved with it, and commanded me to deliver their petition to my Lord Sterling, that some course might be taken for them; and this, God willing, I will do so soon as ever I can meet with that Lord, which I hope will be this day, and so soon as I can drive it to any good issue you shall hear from me. So, in haste, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LIX.

TO HIS MAJESTY'S PRINTERS.

After my hearty commendations, &c.

These are to let you know, that his Majesty takes special care of furnishing of a Greek press, that such of his subjects as are learned in that language may have means to set forth such manuscripts as are in his Majesty's library, or in either of his Universities; a thing greatly tending to the honour of the kingdom, and the good of the Church. And because you have been faulty in the English print with which you are trusted^c, his Majesty is resolved your fine shall be converted to buy matrices and letters, &c., for the Greek. And further, because the patent which you hold under him by his gracious favour is a thing of great profit to you, he expects that you, and all that succeed you in the enjoying of that or the like patent for the press, shall at your own and your successors' proper costs and charges print, or cause to be printed, one volume every year, of what bigness soever it be, in Greek, or Greek and Latin, if the Reverend Father in God, Augustin, Lord Bishop of Peterborough, or Mr. Patrick Young, his Majesty's Library-keeper, or any other of his Majesty's learned subjects, provide it and make it ready for the press; as you will see more particularly and at large by his Majesty's letters themselves directed unto me; which here follow in these words:—

“ Most Reverend Father in God, right trusty and right entirely beloved Counsellor, we greet you well. Whereas our servant, Patrick Young, Keeper of our Library, hath lately, with great industry and care, published in print an Epistle of Clemens Romanus in Greek and Latin^d, which was never printed before,

^b [This letter is taken by Wilkins from Reg. Laud, fol. 195 b. It is also printed by Archdeacon Todd, in the Transactions of the Royal Society of Literature, vol. ii. pp. 210-212, from Lambeth MSS. No. 943, pp. 299 seq.]

^c [In omitting the word 'not' in the seventh Commandment.]

^d [This was the first edition of the Epistles of Clemens Romanus. The Preface gives an account of the Alex. MS., at the end of which these epistles were found written in the same hand. The Alex. MS., it is well known, is now in the British Museum.]

and hath done this to the benefit of the Church and our great honour, the manuscript by which he printed it being in our library; and whereas we further understand, that the Right Reverend Father in God, Augustin, now Bishop of Peterborough*, and our said servant, Patrick Young†, are resolved to make ready for the press one or more Greek copies every year, by such manuscripts as are either in our library, or in the libraries of our Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, or elsewhere, if there were Greek letters, matrices, and money ready for the work; which pains of theirs will tend to the great honour of ourself, this Church, and nation: We have thought good to give them all possible encouragement herein, and do therefore, first, require you, that the fine lately imposed by our High Commissioners upon Robert Barker and Martin Lucas for base and corrupt printing of the Bible, being the sum of three hundred pounds, be converted to the present buying of such and so many Greek letters and matrices, as shall be by you thought fit for this great and honourable work. And our further will and pleasure is, that the said Robert Barker and Martin Lucas, our patentees for printing which either now are, [or] shall hereafter succeed them, being great gainers by that patent which they hold under us, shall, at their own proper costs and charges of ink, paper, and workmanship, print, or cause to be printed in Greek, or Greek and Latin, one such volume in a year, be it bigger or less, as the Right Rev. Father aforesaid, or our servant Patrick Young, or any other of our learned subjects, shall provide and make ready for the press; and shall print such a number of each copy as yourself or your successors for the time being shall think fit. And all this they shall perform whether the said copies be to be printed in London, Oxford, or Cambridge, which shall be left free to their judgments and desire, whose pains prepare the copy or copies for the press. And last of all, our further will and pleasure is, that the aforesaid patentees do, without delay, procure such and so many matrices and letters as aforesaid, that no hindrance be put upon the work; and that they be at the charge of printing in the meantime with such letters as are already in the kingdom. Of all which, or any other necessary circumstance for the furtherance of this work, we shall not fail to call for a strict account from you; and therefore do look that you call for as strict a one from them. Provided always, that it shall be, and remain in your power to mitigate their fine aforesaid, according as you shall see their diligence and care for the advancing of this work. Given under our signet, at our Palace of Westminster, the thirteenth day of January, in the ninth year of our reign.”

I doubt not but that having taken these his Majesty's most gracious letters into your due and dutiful consideration, you will apply yourselves with all care and diligence to give his Majesty all satisfaction herein. In which, I assure you, his Majesty will not be pleased with any delay, knowing that there will be a copy ready for the press before you can be ready with letters and other things necessary. These are, therefore, to pray you, that you presently furnish yourselves with all things necessary, especially matrices and letters of all sorts for the work aforesaid, that I may be able to give his Majesty such an account as he professes he will require of me; and that you give me your answer, in writing, what obedience you will yield to these his Majesty's directions; of which I pray you not to fail. So I bid you farewell, and rest LETTER LX.

TO THE BISHOPS OF HIS PROVINCE.

[Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. p. 486 ^b.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Your Lordship cannot but know that his Majesty, taking into his princely care the decayed and ruinous estate of the Cathedral Church of St. Paul in London, was graciously pleased not many years since to grant a commission towards the repair thereof; the copy of which being first drawn by his Majesty's Attorney-General, was afterwards reviewed by my Lord Keeper; and by the joint consent of my predecessor, and all the Lords of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, it was then thought fit, that the clergy, bishops and deans excepted, which give annually, should contribute, together with the laity, to the end that their good example might the better move them to the furtherance of so necessary and pious a work. But this course, it seems, took not that good effect which was wished, divers of the clergy disliking it; wherefore, upon the renewing of the said commission, it is thought expedient to alter the former way, and to leave the clergy wholly to their ordinary, not doubting but that by your Lordship's good example and persuasion they will be very forward in advancing that good work. These are therefore heartily to pray your Lordship to take special care herein, and by yourself or by your archdeacons, to call the clergy of your diocese together accordingly at such time or times as your Lordship shall approve to be most convenient, and to give them thanks, that have already contributed, not pressing any man beyond that which he shall please voluntarily and cheerfully to give. So assuring myself that you will use all effectual means with those of your Lordship's diocese of London, and that they of themselves will be very ready to give their utmost assistance to a work of that nature and consequence, that so nearly concerns the service of God and the honour of this church and nation, with remembrance of my love, I leave you to God's grace, and rest LETTER LXI.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 18.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,—
My due respects premised, upon the message delivered unto me by Mr. Sherman concerning your Grace's intention to visit my diocese, which no Archbishop of Canterbury hath done this hundred years, I have caused some search to be made in the registries at Lincoln, and have found there so much as emboldens me to become a humble suitor unto your Grace to forbear this visitation for such a reasonable time as these records may be transcribed and well weighed by your Grace's counsel and mine. All that I humbly desire is but to preserve the rights, exemptions, customs, and privileges of this see, which have been formerly granted, continued, and used in the times of my predecessors, bishops of this place. Upon the well weighing and considering whereof, if it shall be found that your Grace hath right to visit, I will most willingly (as far as the use and right hath been) in all obedience submit thereunto. If otherwise it shall appear, that by privilege, use, prescription, or custom, this diocese be cleared from any metropolitocal visitation, or exempted otherwise legally, I do nothing doubt but your Grace shall receive as much honour from that justice which shall suffer the bishopric to enjoy those freedoms which in former times it had, as it can from the power of metropolitocal visitation; and so with my thankful acknowledgment of your Grace's late favours towards me, I humbly rest

Your Grace's much obliged Servant and Suffragan,

JO. LINCOLN.

From my poor house at Lincoln, this 2d of Feb. 1633.

very good Lord, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, &c. &c.

LETTER LXIII.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 19.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your Lordship's letter concerning my intended visitation of that diocese. And truly, my Lord, why any of my predecessors omitted their visitation of that See, I can neither satisfy myself nor give you an account. Yet this much, I think, is clear, that de jure ordinario, I have as much power to visit your Lordship's diocese as any other part of my province. To take away this power, it will lie upon you not only to plead but to show your exemption, and if you had any exemption and that be after disannulled, and the Archbishop left to his ordinary right again, then I think it is clear enough for me ; and I hope I shall be able to make that appear. Two things there are of which I shall assure your Lordship. The one is, that I intend not the offering of any hard measure either to your Lordship or your See, but I hope it shall be esteemed as much both justice and duty in me to maintain the rights of the archbishopric, as in your Lordship to preserve the privileges of that diocese ; and this is all I seek for. The other is, that his Majesty, taking into due consideration the hurt which either doth or may arise from any such exemption from the power of visitation, is resolved that I shall go on with my visitation for every diocese of my province ; and that I may both obey his sacred Majesty, and preserve and settle the rights of mine own See, I think I shall hold my resolution to visit Lincoln diocese this year, and send out my inhibitions accordingly without delay. For your Lordship's notion of referring it to counsel before I proceed, I shall not stay my inhibitions for that ; yet I hold the motion so reasonable, as that I shall refer the consideration of it to Mr. Attorney-General, that he may know his Majesty's command in this particular, and advise upon my right. And if your Lordship please to join any counsel for yourself, you may so do, and bring or send up your Lordship's evidences, and have them perused to your best advantage^r.

My Lord, I take this occasion also to signify to you, that I represented to his Majesty the care that your Lordship took in your diocese, according to your certificate which you sent to me, and particularly that which concerns the Company of the Mercers, in London, who by the gift of Mr. Fishburn, a brother of theirs, and by a proviso in his gift, take upon them to place and displace a Lecturer at Huntingdon upon any dislike, at a month or a fortnight's warning, without any relation to Bishop or Archbishop^s. This, his Majesty says, your Lordship did justly dislike, and gave his answer to that passage in writing in his own hand, and in these words :

^r [The letters of Archbishop Laud and Bishop Williams to Attorney-General Noye, and his decision of the question in the Archbishop's favour, are printed in Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. pp. 487-490, from Reg. Laud, foll. 112, 113.

Works, vol. v. p. 321. Richard Fishburn gave, in 1630, 2,000*l.* to the Mercers' Company. This, with other sums, was invested in the purchase of the Manor of Chalgrave, from which 60*l.* is paid yearly to the Lecturer. (Lewis's Topog. Dict.)]

‘That he could not hold it fit that any lay person or corporation whatsoever should have the power these men would take to themselves, for he would have no priest have any necessity of dependency upon their people;’ and commanded me to signify to your Lordship that he would have this remedied. I pray your Lordship, therefore, in his Majesty’s name, to take present order that the Mercers either relinquish the grant and submit to the orders of the Church, or else that you admit no Lecturer there, unless your Lordship can think of any better way to remedy this new lay encroachment upon your Church.

Concerning those things in your Lordship’s certificate which are not within his Majesty’s instructions, I have received no answer but this: That his Majesty leaves them to your Canon and ordinary rule of the Church, with this, that though the Canon say the people may receive the Communion in the chancel or in the body of the church, yet he likes not that the ordinary (to whose discretion this disjunctive is left) should suffer it to be in the body of the church; both because the people usually sit in their seats, and cannot be discerned whether they kneel or no while they receive, and because the minister cannot possibly come with any convenience at them which are placed farthest in their seats, to deliver the Sacrament to them, unless every other seat should be left void. I am sorry I have so much occasion to trouble your Lordship, but you will, I hope, bear with it, because the greatest part concerns yourself, and your own particular; so, in haste, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,—My humble duty and service remembered. To your Grace's letter concerning this visiting of my diocese, however my predecessors have heretofore framed their appeals, I humbly crave pardon to offer rather some reasons why it should not be now, or not in this manner by way of inhibitions, than why your Grace should not visit at all. And this I have endeavoured to do in a letter to Mr. Attorney General, to be (in my absence by reason of indisposition) made good as far as my records will serve the turn, by my counsel, if your Grace shall be likewise pleased to design any solicitor to attend the business: and whatsoever Mr. Attorney shall, either out of his own knowledge, or by direction from his most excellent Majesty, order therein, I shall most steadily abide and perform.

For these two things your Grace is pleased to assure me of, the fair measure intended for my See and myself, and his Majesty's pleasure and providence not to allow any exemptions in this kind, (were it but expressed in a line or two, to remain upon record,) would end this difference to my full contentment.

I will put down the Lecturer at Huntingdon, until the Company of the Mercers shall clearly and absolutely nominate a clerk to be approved by the ordinary for the discharge of that preaching-place, for so long a time as he the said ordinary shall hold him fit to lecture there, in regard of his life, doctrine, and diligence. I was mistaken in that disjunctive about the placing of the Communion-table in country churches, and thought it had related to the spaciousness of the room and the usual reading-place; but his most excellent Majesty conceiving it to be entirely left to the discretion of the ordinary, I am better instructed for the like occurrences in the times to come.

To conclude where I began : when your Grace shall resolve to visit these parts, however the diocese shall appear, the Bishop will be found a very sick man, until your Grace (upon whom he mainly depends therein) shall be the happy messenger to bring unto him some dawning hopes of his Majesty's favour, which blessing if your Grace shall once procure him, there is no Bishop in Christendom shall more affectionately honour or more devoutly pray for your Grace, than

and Suffragan,

JO. LINCOLN.

Buckden, this 7th of March, 1633.

To the Most Reverend Father in God my very good Lord, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, &c. &c.

LETTER LXV.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 212—214.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received a pair of cards from you or two, but they are not to play withal, the packet is too serious ; therefore I will begin with the outworks, your letter which came to me single[†], and give you an account of other things in my own hand as there shall be cause.

I have known the Bishop of Waterford^u long, and when he lived in the College, he would have done anything, or sold any man, for sixpence profit¹. It seems he carried the same mind with him into Ireland, by which means Lismore and Youghall have fared never the better by him. But since Lismore was in huckster's handling^x before he came to Waterford, it may be, if he be handsomely wrought on, he ¹ I had a touch in Dr. Bramhall's Letter of getting the College money from the Bishop of Waterford. Good my Lord, forget it not.

[†] [This letter does not appear to have been preserved. It is probably the letter of Oct. 31, to which Strafford refers. (Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p.

will be brought to petition me about it, which will be an excellent ground for us both to work on.

I thank your Lordship heartily for the Dean of Londonderry^y; it will be a brave example, and he deserves it plentifully. You may see by this what a miserable thing it is when buying and selling comes into the Church, for it stays not till they sell one preferment, if they may be able to buy another, as it seems Sutton did.

The Bishop of Waterford was ever full of jests, and would at any time lose a friend rather than spare it. And therefore it is no wonder, if he spare not the Earl his kinsman. But a passing good jest it was that he broke upon him, and as like him as could be. I could find in my heart to forgive him some errors, so he would petition me about Lismore; but 'tis so easy a thing for the Earl to keep him from it, that I shall not believe he will do it, till it be done; for if the Earl will feed him with a little money, farewell Lismore, and the petition too.

I have given my Lord of London^z thanks from your Lordship, though neither myself nor he expect any such compliment from you¹, where the justice of your cause challenged all we did^b, and where I conceive the King was more concerned than your person; and howsoever, where you serve the Church so heartily, we Churchmen were much to blame if we should not serve you. This is true, by St. Dunstan and his tongs: for my Lord Cottington tells me he hath got a precedent of a Bishop that dares take the devil by the nose without them, which St. Dunstan never durst do. But wot you what? He tells me of another civilizing precedent in as fair and handsome a way as the Court hath any: but I believe neither the Attorney^c, nor himself will be much the better by it. Yet I cannot tell, now his wife is dead^d, what he may ¹ You must take this in answer for your great love expressed to me in the conclusion of your letter^a.

It must have been decided the previous November, or early in December. See Garrard's letter to the Lord Deputy, Dec. 6, 1633. (Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 167.)] do, for the little Secretary^e says the original precedent did not begin till he was left a widower^f. You see how merry these gentlemen are, while I am fain to drudge at Lambeth.

Thus far concerning your outworks; now to the serious business of your larger letter^g. And first, concerning the reformation of that Church to the Church of England. It is certainly deeply seated in his Majesty's thoughts, but your Lordship is very right, that the material church must be built, and an abler clergy in some measure provided, or else it will be vain to attempt it. And since you desire not only my counsel, but his Majesty's resolution, you shall here have it, as far as he is pleased to give it.

And first, the anatomy which you make of the Irish ecclesiastical disease, makes it apparent that it is spread so universally over the body, that a very wise physician can scarce tell where to begin his cure. But if you will have my foolish judgment, thus it is. I would set upon the repair of the material and the spiritual Church together; and first, I would have a general and a strict command issued out, that every minister should read all Divine Service wholly and distinctly, in a grave and religious manner, to their people; and this, I take it, may be presently done without any noise, because they have the English Liturgy already. And at the same time would I have an Act made, that no man, of what degree soever, should hold above two benefices with cure, and those within a limited distance, that they may the better take care of them. If these two were once settled, the rest would follow in order, especially if your Lordship can reduce some more of their temporalities for maintenance, and keep them (especially the Bishops) from their sacrilegious alienations, about which you are in a very good way, and his Majesty commands me to thank you for that care.

For the schools, if your Lordship will remedy anything,

^e [Sir Francis Windebank. He styles himself, in a letter to Strafford, 'Your little, but most true servant.' (Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 215.)]

^f [This refers to the change which took place in Wentworth's politics, after his second widowhood.]

^g [This was the despatch written by Wentworth on the 31st of the previous January, and which he sent, together with other important papers, by Sir George Wentworth, his brother. See Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 187-189, 194, 218.]

you must take the same way for restoring their temporalities, without which reward no man will take pains, and there are not many men which deserve better or worse of a state than schoolmasters. And where abuses are grown so many and great, I do not see any reformation possible, without some severity. Therefore if your Lordship will rectify this, you must turn out the insufficient, and especially those which train the youth in Popery.

For the third thing your Lordship mentions, I conceive the remedy is more easy; for there you have nothing to do but to turn the money given to charitable uses to the use intended by the donor; to reduce such patronages as are unjustly gotten from the Crown, and to enter into the first-fruit office all such benefices as are not there already, and yet are valuable in that account; which I mention so, because with us in England no benefice pays any subsidy, that is not above 6*l.* value in the King's books¹.

As for the College, I am very sorry they have chosen me Chancellor^h, and if they will follow the directions I have given them by my Lord Primate, I hope they will send me a resignation, that I may give it over, and your Lordship be chosen, being upon the place, and able to do them much more good. As for their Statutes, if they need any mending, I shall not refuse that pains. But before I can enter upon that service, if they have a confirmation of their Statutes under the Broad Seal of that kingdom, or this, I must have a commission under the same seal, to authorize me to alter or do what I think fit with them, else I may not meddle. If this shall be thought fit, I will presently send for a copy of their Statutes, and such exceptions as the wisest men in that Society can make against them, and so proceed. For the Provostⁱ, if he be a weak one, the fault is not mine. For when the Bishop of Kilmore was preferred from that government^k, I was resolved to make the Dean of Cashel that now is^l, his successor ; and though my Lord Primate writ very earnestly for a native and his kinsman, that now is Provost, with assurance of his sufficiency¹ ; and though two of the Fellows came over and petitioned his Majesty, yet all this should hardly have taken me off, had not the Dean of Cashel at that time absolutely refused me ; and if now your Lordship think him as fit for the place as I do, I will join with you for the preferring of the present Provost, and to be revenged of his former refusal, put in the Dean of Cashel, alway provided, that for his better encouragement he may hold his deanery. And in the meantime, for the prohibiting of the teaching of Arts abroad in the country, I think that must proceed from your authority, and the sooner it be done the better.

For the 1,000*l.*, &c., your Lordship is in as good a way as can be ; and if you can get the 600*l.* back, it is an excellent work ; if you cannot, the next best is, to keep the 400*l.* there, where you will have means to bestow it very well.

Your Lordship is likewise in a very right way for the commutations, for I do not see as yet, how you can go further than the taking of their own accounts, both for receipts and layings out. And you do very nobly to keep off scandal from their persons, as much as you can ; for it will reflect upon the Church. And I am afraid that many of them will be found guilty. You give me one shrewd instance in the Bishop of Waterford ; and truly, my Lord, I must needs say, if but half the articles, which you send with the petition against him, be proved true, I should give my consent to make him an example. How fit it may be to do so, I leave to your judgment, who are in authority, and upon the place. But your Lordship need not make such a preface, when you begin with him, for you may remember I told you, when you went out of England, what you should find of him, though I must confess I did not think he could have been so bad as this petition doth represent him. But your Lordship is very sorry to tell the truth, but only that it will out. A St. John's man you say he is, and of Oxford; your Cambridge panniers never brought such a fairing to the market. Yes, my good Lord, but it hath; for what say you of Dean Palmer^o? who besides his other virtues, sold all the lead off from the church at Peterburgh, yet he was brought in your Cambridge panniers; and so was Bishop Howland^p too, who used that Bishopric, as well he did the Deanry. I must confess this man's baseness hath not many fellows, but his bribery may have store. And I pray, is that ever a whit the less fault, because it is gentleman-like for hundreds and thousands? Whereas this man deals for twenty shillings and less. I hope you will not say so, and if you do not, then I pray examine your Cambridge panniers again, for some say such may be found there, but I for my part will not believe it, unless your Lordship make me.

I thank your Lordship for your love to the Dean of Cashel; I hope he will deserve it all: and for the Bishop of Kilmore, I make no doubt, but that you will find him very ready and constant in the King's service: and then I know his other worth will merit your love.

For the Bishop of Cork^q, I dare not say sententias loquitur, for fear of what follows; but having given you my former judgment of him and his letter, I must needs advise you now to answer him in such a style, as may leave him and his sentences free from that sentence, which may otherwise come upon him. But I must needs say, his pieces of Latin were like the old ends of gold and silver, which you see both he and his brother love very well.

Thus much in answer to your Lordship's letters, or rather to the outside of them. The other businesses of moment I can say nothing to till I have spoken with his Majesty again,

LETTER LXVI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 211.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—The King is yet at Newmarket, so I can give you no account of anything that relates to him.

I here enclosed send you an answer to all those things which are in my power or knowledge, the rest must come after, as I can get despatch for them.

I heartily thank your Lordship for your noble favour, care, and pains, in sending me the duplicates; if you be at the pains to write, I will certainly be at the pains to read, and thank your Lordship. I carry the business as you wish me, and know nothing but what is told me by others. In the general, I can say this, I find my Lord Cottington and Mr. Secretary Windebank very careful for the despatch of all your proposals; but the King hath referred them to the consideration of a Committée, and my Lord Treasurer^r hath not his health very well, but I hope that will not cause any long stay.

Two things there are which I heartily pray you to take into serious consideration; the one is my Lord of Cork's tomb. I have received, since your brother's coming, letters about it, not only from the Earl himself^s, but from my Lord Primate^t and my Lord Archbishop of Dublin^u. Both of them justify, that the tomb stands not in the place of the altar, and that it is a great ornament to that church, so far from being any inconvenience. That your Lordship may see how they plead for him and it, I here send you a true copy of both their letters. I confess I am not satisfied with that they say, yet it is hard for me that am absent to cross directly the report of two Archbishops. But this is not it, for which I desire you to take it into consideration. This it is : the copies of these letters sent to me, I am informed, are sent to my Lord Treasurer. He takes it very highly, because of his kinsman the Lord Chancellor Weston^{*}. You must have daily use of his Lordship here, and I would not, both in regard of the King's service and your own good, that this should occasion a breach between you. For myself, I am not considerable, and can bear the jealousies that are upon me ; but I would have your Lordship keep all great friends entire. This I know, you are beholden to Mr. Secretary Windebank for a great deal of care of your despatches.

The other is, I hear you intend to make Mr. Philip Mainwaring^y Secretary there. I hope you know what opinion I have of the gentleman, and I profess I should be right glad to hear of any good come to him. But I cannot put him in the scales with you, and rather than that you should run upon a rock, I will speak plainly that which I cannot tell whether any of your other friends will signify, and I presume you will burn this letter, and let no man know what I write. You writ this to my Lord Cottington, and he purposes to move the King as you desire ; but I know he is very much troubled at it, and I know to whom he said, that of his knowledge, if you meddled with making him Secretary, you would burn your fingers, with some other expressions, which I cannot think fit to write.

I can scarce keep open my eyes, it is so late ; therefore I end abruptly, and with hearty wishes for your good, answer-

I had almost forgotten to tell you, that all this business about demolishing my Lord of Cork's tomb is charged upon you, as if it were done only because he will not marry his son to my Lord Clifford's^a daughter, and that I do it to join with you; whereas the complaint came against it to me out of Ireland, and was presented by me to the King, before I knew your Lordship was named for Deputy there. But jealousies know no end.

WORTHY SIR,—I foresee there are some troubles likely to arise about my metropolitical visitation, my Lord the Bishop of Lincoln and myself differing as yet in some circumstances about it; but by a letter which I lately received from his Lordship, I understand that he hath referred the examination of his right in this business to you^c, and so shall I mine too with all my heart; praying you, that you will take some time, betwixt this and the next term, for the perusal of our records on both sides; and whatsoever you shall find to be just and fitting, I shall promise for my part very readily to yield unto;

LETTER LXVIII.

TO LANCELOT BULKELEY, ARCHBISHOP OF DUBLIN^e.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 85, 86.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—It is most true that I have taken offence at a tomb erected by the Earl of Cork in the Cathedral of St. Patrick; but I did not take that offence lately only, but before ever my Lord Deputy that now is was named to the place. And I took that offence by a complaint thence sent unto me (for I was never there), though I cannot recall who it was that complained. And I am sure that the complaint came then unto me with a full cry, that it was built in the place where the high altar first stood, and the communion-table afterwards.

Your Lordship, at the Earl's entreaty, hath signified to me your knowledge (for so you say) that the tomb stands in a great arch at the end of the quire, which was plastered up to keep out the wind, and that the high altar stood at the end of the Lady Mary's Chapel, which is beyond it, and that the east window is at the top of the arch, and not darkened.

^d [Noye undertook the office of referee, and gave his decision in favour of the Archbishop. See his opinion in Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. pp. 488—490, from Reg. Laud, fol. 113 a, b.]

^e [Lancelot Bulkeley, the youngest son of Sir Richard Bulkeley, of Beaumaris, in Anglesey, was consecrated Archbishop of Dublin October 3, 1619. He died in 1650.]

My Lord, it will be hard for me to speak anything contrary to your Lordship, who hath been so often upon that place, where I never was; yet I shall deal freely, and tell your Lordship what I think.

And first, my Lord, I am satisfied that the tomb darkens none of the east window. But I am no way satisfied that the altar stood at the upper end of the Lady Mary's Chapel. That an altar stood there, I easily grant, for in those times there were divers altars in one cathedral, and every by-chapel had one at least. But that the high altar did ever stand in any cathedral in other place than the east end of the quire, is quite out of my knowledge, nor did I ever hear it till now by your Lordship's letters.

That the place before the arch was an earthen floor, and often troubled with a fresh, I do again really believe your Lordship, and the Earl hath done very well to raise it, and pave it with stone. But that the swelling of the tomb, the iron grate before it, the taking in of some ancient monuments on either side, the erecting of a screen, before which you say the communion-table should stand, would take off little or no room from the quire; that, I must confess, I do not very well understand.

Your Lordship adds, that when the screen is built, and the communion-table placed before it, it will much beautify the quire, and be like other cathedrals. To that I can say nothing, but must leave it to their eyesight and judgment that are upon the place. And whereas your Lordship says, that my Lord had leave of the Dean and Chapter with their unanimous consent to erect a monument in that place;—if the place be fit for a monument, the consent was very well asked, and given. But if it appear the place were inconvenient, then my Lord of Cork did not very well to ask a consent, and the Dean and Chapter did very ill to grant it; and the more unanimous the consent was, the worse. And whereas you write, that there are other honourable personages, whose memory is preserved in that monument: to that I say, if the monument stand where it ought, God forbid it should be touched; if it stand where it ought not, it may be fairly and decently removed, and set up in some convenient place upon the side of the quire, or elsewhere, where it will as well preserve the memory of those honourable personages which you mention, as now it doth. And God forbid any violence should be offered to that, in any kind.

And last of all, whereas your Lordship desires I should take into consideration the merits of that noble Earl; I am very willing to do that. And first, I am very glad to hear from your Lordship his zeal for the advancement of true religion; but I may not conceal from your Lordship, that I have likewise heard from others, and that some years since, that he hath gotten into his hands no small proportion of the Church's means; and if that be so, any man may see his end in advancing true religion. But such a zeal that poor Church hath little need of, and God bless every part of the Church from it. As for his Lordship's building of churches, schools, and hospitals, I know nothing of that, and can say as little to it. Only this I can say, that if he take from the Church in one place, to build church, school, or hospital in another, 'tis no zeal, nor the way which Christian bounty uses to tread. And if his Lordship hath done any public work for strength and fortification to the kingdom, I pray God that be not done with the Church's money too. But howsoever his Lordship hath got a very full estate in that kingdom, and he doth very wisely to fortify it as well as he can. But besides these, I have long since heard, though you now mention it not, that his Lordship hath done greater service to the Church in some other particulars; as, namely, to the Bishopric of Lismore, and the College of Youghall, for which it is great pity but that his Lordship's memory should be preserved in the Church.

Thus I have given your Grace a distinct answer to all the particulars in your letter. But for the tomb, which occasioned all the rest, I will not take upon me to judge (unless I were upon the place) how fitly, or unfitly, it stands there, but shall wholly leave it to the view, and resolution, which shall thereupon be taken in that place. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother,

LETTER LXIX.

TO RICHARD BOYLE, EARL OF CORK.

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—It is very true that I have taken exceptions to the monument which you have built in St. Patrick's Church, and I hope your Lordship will easily conceive I could not prophesy of any such thing, and therefore must needs have the knowledge of it from thence, as I assure your Lordship I had, and from good hands; though I cannot now recall from whom. My Lord, the report that the tomb was built in the place where the high altar stood, and the communion-table should now stand, did not come lately to me, as your Lordship supposes; for, I assure you, I heard of it, and complained of it to the King, and desired remedy, before ever my Lord Deputy that now is was so much as named to that place. And therefore, whereas your Lordship writes, that you built it three years since, and never heard any mouth opened against it; it seems some mouths, which durst not open there, did open fully here; for I assure you, upon my credit, the information before-mentioned came unto me. I had then just cause to doubt, considering the forms of all other cathedrals which I had seen, that the east window was darkened by it; but that it is not so, I am fully satisfied. For the other exception, that it stands where the high altar stood, and the communion-table ought to stand, I must clearly confess to your Lordship, I am not satisfied: nor whether it will not take off too much room from the quire, when the screen is built as you intend it. Neither can your Lordship think, that I shall make myself judge of these or any other inconveniences, having never been upon the place to see it, but shall leave it wholly to such view and consideration as shall there be had of it, yet wishing with all my heart that you had erected that monument upon the side of the quire, or any other convenient place, rather than where you have now set it. And I must needs tell your Lordship, such an erection as that would have asked very good deliberation where to have placed it. As for the Dean and Chapter's consent, if they had understood themselves and the Church better, your Lordship had been free from these fears. I have received, together with your Lordship's letters, two other; one from my Lord Primate of Armagh, and the other from the Lord Archbishop of Dublin, but neither of their reports do fully satisfy me, as will appear by the answer I have given their Lordships; neither can I give your Lordship such an answer as I see you expect. For as yet I did never see that cathedral church where the high altar stood in the Lady Mary's Chapel, and not at the upper end of the quire; which place, under favour of better judgments, I cannot say is a fit place for any man's monument. And whereas your Lordship writes at the latter end of your letters, that you bestow a great part of your estate and time in charitable works, I am heartily glad to hear it; but withal, your Lordship will, I hope, give me leave to deal freely with you, and then I must tell your Lordship, if you have done as you write, you have suffered strangely for many years together by the tongues of men, who have often and constantly affirmed, that you have not been a very good friend to the Church in the point of her maintenance. I hope these reports are not true, but if they be, I cannot account your works charitable, having no better foundation than the livelihood of the Church taken away to do them. I am sorry I cannot give your Lordship any other answer to your letters than what here I have written; and therefore leave the tomb to be viewed and ordered by my Lord Deputy and the Archbishops there, as they shall find fittest to be done. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb mxxx. p. 23.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,
—I must ever acknowledge your Grace's just proceedings with me in the referring of the business of your metropolitanical visitation unto the arbitrement of Mr. Attorney-General, upon whose opinion I shall satisfy myself, submit unto your Grace, and leave all further impleading of this cause to the the next ages.

I shall only in the last branch, which concerns your Grace's inhibiting of me and my officers, wherein Mr. Attorney forbears to deliver his opinion, humbly leave it to your Grace's consideration whether, if your Grace expects we should obey the same at all (which was never done in this diocese before), yet in that case we should do it before such time as your Grace hath fully visited your diocese of Canterbury. And withal, however your Grace shall resolve therein, I do humbly desire your Grace to take the poor officers of the diocese, whose livelihood depends upon the exercise of the jurisdiction, unto your gracious consideration; and with the remembrance of my duty to your Grace, I shall never fail to remain

Your Grace's most humble Servant and Suffragan,

LETTER LXXI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT SCUDAMORE^f.

[In the possession of the Rev. J. F. Russell *].

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am glad to see by your letters, that you are returned safe to your own home; where God bless you, your lady^h, and your son with health. I remember you told me when you were lately here, you thought your sister'sⁱ business would bring you to London again in Easter

^f [See vol. iii. p. 175.]

* [This letter Mr. Russell obligingly informed me, when favouring me with the transcript, was formerly in the possession of the Duke of Sussex.]

^h [Elizabeth, only daughter of Sir Arthur Porter.]

ⁱ [Mary Scudamore, the wife of Sir Giles Brydges.]

Term; if it do, I shall be very glad to see you, and though I have little leisure left me, yet I shall find enough, I hope, to give you as many turns in my stone-gallery, if you have any occasion to see me, as I did at your late being here; for which your company and kindness, I thank you heartily.

About a week before I received your Lordship's letters, I had a letter sent me from the party, whose long sickness you give me such an account of as you can. And though Mr. Parry express little to you, yet I doubt, I can give a shrewd guess at his disease; not that he hath expressed in his letters anything to me, but all that I guess, is by some expressions upon the bye. And truly, my Lord, if I mistake not, all his disease is discontent, but for what, is nowhere expressed; but if I collect right, it is for that which I cannot remedy, and which, were I as pettish as some men are, would give me just cause of offence. For your Lordship knows, no man better, how ready I was, when you were in treaty for him for the Chancellorship of Gloucester, to do him all the favour, and give him all the assistance I could. Besides, you know how careful I was, to fit him nearer you than so, by all my endeavours for Hereford, till it appeared plainly that no good could be done that way. Since that, I would have given him (and your Lordship knows that too) a Principality of a Hall in Oxford^k, had not his necessary attendance upon you made him incapable of it, which I could not help. Yet he writes, that he is almost obliterated out of my memory. Your Lordship shall take no notice of this, but it is not well. Perhaps he thinks, I might in all this space have given him some such place in mine own gift; but he would have done very well, before he had drunk in his discontent, to have asked me whether any such place had fallen void or no, and I would have answered him as truly, as easily, that I was never yet so happy, as to have any such place to give. And for those which are now in my power, they are for the greatest and ablest lawyers in the kingdom, if ever they should fall void in my lifetime, which I know not whether they will or no. I am willing to give your Lordship this large account, that you may see how little cause I have given of discontent. And if that which I cannot do, or not do with my credit, be thus expected from me, it will make me shrink up indeed, and not lie so open to my friends as I have done. So in haste, I leave your Lordship to the grace of God, ever resting to serve you,

LETTER LXXII.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 24.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your Lordship's letters by the hands of your ancient officer, Mr. Prigeon, and thank your Lordship for your fair respect in them; and as I was willing to refer the examination and censure of my right to Mr. Attorney-General—for I assure your Lordship, if I had not seen a fair way in mine own judgment and good evidences for my right, which by my forbearance might in time have been lost, I should not have troubled your Lordship with it at this time; but now I am glad 'tis settled, and I hope your Lordship shall have little cause to complain of it.

My Lord, concerning my inhibitions, I did not send them to your Lordship without very good advice; for though I have not fully made an end of the visitation of my own diocese of Canterbury, yet no law that I know or hear of forbids my inhibitions before. And though I have been thus careful to keep the strictest rule, and visit none of my brethren till I have visited myself, yet I believe were the acts of my registers thoroughly scanned, there are some hundreds of years past in which scarce any one Archbishop hath kept himself so close and so strict to the Canon as I have done in this. And whereas your Lordship says, that

Mr. Attorney hath forborne to deliver his opinion in this particular; I do not, under favour, conceive it so; for though he does not so positively express himself as in the former, yet I suppose he hath laid down those reasons in a fair and a modest way, which make that part more strong for me than any of the rest which he hath formally declared. And, therefore, since your Lordship, in the beginning of your letter, submits unto me, and afterwards desires me to express myself in this particular, Whether I would have my inhibitions obeyed, till the visitation of my own diocese be past? I must needs tell your Lordship, I would have them obeyed, for I hold my inhibition, and the citations also that are to be sent forth, to be the necessary preparatories to the actual visitation that is to follow.

For the last passage of your letters, concerning your officers, I shall be ready to do all that your Lordship desires, and will charge my officers to use them as fairly as they do the officers of any other diocese, if they, or any of them, do not by their own default make themselves incapable of favour. So wishing your Lordship all health and happiness, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother.

TO THE LORD MAYOR OF LONDON.

[Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. pp. 492, 493¹.]

S. in Christo.

After my hearty commendations, &c. His Majesty, out of his princely care, not only of St. Paul's Church, London, but of that city, and the kingdom in general, hath been graciously pleased to write unto me, that against all base and unworthy rumours, he is not only resolute to cause the work to go on, but, further, to take upon himself and his own charge the repair of the whole west end of the church^m; which as it will be a great work in itself, so will it also be an excellent memorial to all posterity of so pious and gracious a prince. In these his Majesty's letters, there is an express command upon me, that I should send a copy of them to your Lordship, and the aldermen your brethren, that ye may see not the King's bounty only, but the clearness of all his royal intentions in and concerning that pious work; and, in obedience to the command which I have received, I here send you a true and perfect copy of his Majesty's gracious letters sent to me; not doubting but that you will cheerfully receive them, and cause them to be registered among those things, which you keep with greatest care in that city. And further, I hope that this piety and great munificence of his Majesty will stir up your Lordship, and the rest of that honourable city, to extend your charity, that so the work may go on, to the great honour of yourselves, and this whole kingdom. Thus with my prayers to God, that He would open and enlarge your hearts to this work of His service, I leave you to His grace, and rest

TO ADAM BALLANDEN, BISHOP OF DUNBLANE.

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am right sorry for the death of the Bishop of Edinburgh^o, the loss being very great both to the King and the Church. I acquainted his Majesty how needful it was to fill that place with an able successor; and when mention was made of divers men to succeed, I did, as you desire, show his Majesty what your desires were, and what necessities lay upon you. After much consideration of the business, his Majesty resolved to give the Bishopric of Edinburgh to my Lord of Brechin^p; and for yourself, he commanded me to write expressly to you that he did not take it well, that, contrary to his express command, you had omitted prayers in his Chapel Royal, according to the English Liturgy, with some omissions there, which pleased him not; besides, his Majesty hath heard that there have lately been some differences in Edinburgh about the sufferings of Christ, &c., and that your Lordship was some cause of them; or, at least, such an occasion as might have bred much disturbance, if the late Bishop of Edinburgh's care and temper had not moderated them; and this his Majesty is not well pleased with neither; and this hath been the cause, as I conceive, why his Majesty hath passed you over in this remove; and you shall do very well to apply yourself better, both to his Majesty's service and the well ordering of that Church, lest you give just occasion to the King to pass you by, when any other remove falls^q. I am very sorry that I must write thus unto you; but the only way of help lies in yourself, and your own carriage, and therefore, if you will not be careful of that, I do not see what any friend can be able to do for you. Therefore, not doubting but you will take these things into serious consideration for your own good, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LXXV.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 253—256.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received from you a very large packet, and three letters in it, besides the duplicate; for all which I thank you, and will make my answer as short as I can.

I'll begin with your brother^r. I pray deliver him the letter which is herein directed to him. I never had so much thanks for so little service, all that I did being rather duty than kindness. If it please your Lordship, I would desire the letter herewith also sent, may be delivered to the Lord Mountnorris by your own hand, or your brother's, that I may be sure they are come to his. I take myself very unworthily used in Croxton^s by that Lord. But though I am angry, my letters are not so, and may fairly be delivered, as you may see by the copy of them, which I here send you open. But I heartily thank your Lordship for taking him into your care, for what you have done, and what you mean to do; and do heartily pray you to let him bear your name, for he shall have no more relation at all to that other Lord, but to pay him the money, which necessity hath made him borrow of him.

I am sorry Dr. Bramhall found Munster in so ill case^t.

I hope you will make the Dean of Londonderry^u know himself and his fault, before you let him loose again; and 'tis great mercy to do it, for by that you will keep many out of that danger.

In the next place, you begin to be merry with your heifer, and I wonder you have so little pity, as not to let it rest, when I have ploughed with it. By St. Dunstan (if it were not for swearing), I see you guess unhappily that your friends can tell how to be merry, as well as serious together, and you shall not need to entreat us to continue it, for we have no other purpose, only I am in ill case by it. For your Spaniard^x, and the gravity which he learnt there, while he went to buy pigeons, hath tempted my old friend, the Secretary^y, from me, and he is become his man. So I have need to look to myself, when the relation is grown so near between them. As for that which you desire me so earnestly to let Mr. Secretary know, I protest I writ it in merriment, and did merely put it upon him, and cannot now recal what it is; you may, because you have my letter.

From your mirth you leap into those directions, which at your entreaty I gave; and I am glad you will so soon take order, that Divine Service may be read throughout in the churches, be the company that vouchsafe to come never so few. Let God have His whole service with reverence, and He will quickly send in more to help perform it.

For the holding of two livings, and but two with cure, since you approve me in the substance, I will yield to you in the circumstance of time. Indeed, my Lord, I knew it was bad, very bad in Ireland, but that it was so stark naught I did not believe. Six benefits not able to find the minister clothes; in six parishes scarce six to come to church. Good God! Stay the time you must, till there be more means, and some more conformable people.

Yet, in this sober discourse, I pray what means this Johnnism^z of yours, 'till the rights of the Pastors be a little more settled?' You learned this from old Alvey^a, or Billy Nelson^b. For where, I pray, in all the ancient fathers do you find Pastor applied to any but a Bishop? Well, I see the errors of your breeding will stick by you; Pastors and Elders, and all will come in, if I let you alone.

Well, 'tis no matter for the old trot that kept the goodwife while she lay in; look you to the Bishops, lest they make

^y [Sir F. Windebank.]

^a [Richard Alvey was appointed Master of the Temple, Feb. 13, 1548, and the first Prebendary of the 5th Stall in Westminster Abbey, on its erection into a Collegiate Church by Queen Elizabeth, June 21, 1560. He died in 1585, and was succeeded in his Mastership of the Temple by Rich. Hooker. Mr. Keble (Hooker's Works, vol. i. p. 65, note 14) observes, "Mr. Alvie himself appears to have been inclined to Puritanism, as his name occurs in 'Troubles at Frankfurt,' among the signatures to the Discipline, 1557. (Phoenix, vol. ii. 142.) This may partly account for Travers's appointment." Alvey was much followed as a preacher in his day, as is noticed in Walton's Life of Hooker.]

themselves or their successors lie out. And in the care for the schools, it was passing well thought on, that they might be taught English, not only to soften the malignity and stubbornness of the nation, as you write, but also because they will with the more ease and sooner be acquainted with English fashions, which yet can do no harm in that country.

On with your care for monies given to charitable uses; for righting the Crown in patronages; for entering the benefices into the first-fruit office. But I have done speaking of under six pounds. Do what your judgment leads you to upon the place, and where six will not find the minister clothes, the King's first-fruits will buy no lace. And while you prohibit Arts to be taught in this country, God send you art enough to get back your monies out of the friars' hands. I doubt it much.

Concerning the college at Dublin, since they have made me Chancellor, and your Lordship approves them in so doing, I will begin to take them to task; and if I have so much leisure, there comes a letter with these to the college, which I pray command be delivered.

The draught about the Commission for commutation monies, &c., was the last I could finish, and I sent it back with our Civilians' notes upon it, when your brother returned; and therefore I hope you have received it, and that the passage in your letter which now calls for it, was written in some mistake; for I assure you I have sent back all you sent me.

I have received the petition, and a letter from the Lord Bishop of Waterford; I here send you back the petition, accompanied as it ought to be. The King said, as soon as I had read it to him, God forbid, but that I should grant that. As for the other complaint against *, 'tis stark naught. But I hope you will make use of all that number, before you proclaim him.

Now you are merry again. God hold it. And what? Dr. Palmer acted like a king^c. Be it so. But he was another card in the pack. As for Bishop Howland, you never heard of him. What? Nor of Jeames's wife neither^d? Good

^d [Does this refer to the widow of William James, Bishop of Durham? There was a dispute between his heir and his successor, Neile, respecting dilapidations. (See Diary, Jan. 31, 1623. Works, vol. iii. p. 146.)]

Lord, how ignorant you can be, when you list. Yea, but you have taken St. John's, Ox. flagrante crimine, and I put you to your memory. Is it so? Come on then, you know there is a cause in the Star-Chamber, some were to answer, and they brought their answers ready written. If the Bishop of Lincoln sent them ready for his turn, hath he not an excellent forge^o? What if this appear? I hope you will not then say, I put you to your memory. 'Tis now under examination, and is not this if, &c. flagrante crimine? Go brag now; yet for your comfort I'll tell you, suppose all this, I doubt all will come to nothing.

I hope you will join Sir Thomas Fitz-Edmonds to the rest of his fellows, and make him vomit up Cloyne^f. As for the building of a new church at Lismore^g, I will believe it when I see it; yet this I must needs say, none so fit to build a new one by repentance, as he that pulled down the old by sacrilege; and it is a fine pretence to speak of a new, when he is ready to be questioned for the old. And for Sir Beverley's tale, I have told it the King, who shook his head, yet could not but laugh at the cooks and the sculls.

Now, my Lord, to your great business: since the Bishop of Derry is dead^h, I have (though against the rule which I have lodged with his Majesty) moved earnestly for Dr. Bramhall to succeed him, and given him the reasons why, for his own service, and the good of the Church in that kingdom, he should dispense in this particular for the Doctor's being a little too youngⁱ. His Majesty, after some arguing of the business, and with great testimony of your

^f [The Bishopric of Cloyne had been reduced in value to five marks a-year. See Bramhall's Life, in Biogr. Brit. note F.]

^g [This refers to a proposal made by the Earl of Cork to rebuild Lismore Church. See above, p. 363.]

^h [George Downham, of Christ's College, Cambridge. He was appointed Bishop of Derry in 1618. His treatise on 'The Covenant of Grace,' published at Dublin in 1631, was suppressed by royal authority, which Prynne (Cant. Doom, p. 171) ascribes to Laud's interference. Elrington (Life of Ussher, p. 130) suggests that the letter of Ussher on which this statement was grounded is probably a forgery.]

ⁱ [There appears some mistake as to the date of Bramhall's birth. For if, as stated in his Life, he was born in 1593, which agrees also with the statement in his Will, he was at this time more than forty years of age, which Laud had laid down in a previous letter (see above, p. 322) as the age he should adhere to in recommending those who were to be promoted to bishoprics. (See Life of Bramhall, p. iii. note ^a. Works, vol. i.)]

Lordship's good service to himself and the Church, granted him the bishopric, as you will see by the letters which accompany these. This I have readily done to serve you, with some departure from my own judgment in matter of age, hoping the Doctor will supply it with temper, and then he hath the more strength for his business, which, he says, he will not, and I say he must not leave, till that Church be better settled, which I dare say must be now, when a King, a Lord Deputy, and a poor Archbishop set jointly to it, or never.

What Dr. Bramhall holds in England he must leave^k. The bishopric being good needs no commendam; if it did, it must be helped there. For I foresee marvellous great inconvenience, and very little less than mischief, if a way be given to Bishops there to hold commendams here. And, I pray, let Dr. Bramhall send me present word, what the names of the preferments are, which he is to part with.

The King hath now commanded me to write thus; and the Provost ere long may be fitted with a bishopric, if he make himself fit.

The sequel which your Lordship draws out of this is very good; That the Provost may have his Archdeaconry^l, (so then less than a little bishopric will fetch him off, contrary to your fears,) and the Dean of Cashells may be Dean and Provost, if the Fellows will elect him; if not, the King, I know, will give it him. I would willingly do nothing to disserve you, and so send me word, whether all deans and inferior clergymen to them be not in your own preferment, without moving the King, and only Bishops reserved to himself. But one thing more there is, which you must not deny me, and I hope you shall thank me for it. Dr. Bramhall, being once Bishop, though he stay a good part of the year with you, and attend the more general service of the Church, yet he cannot stay always with you, nor perform all those inferior services, which one in your house must do; I pray take Croxton into that under-service, I will answer for his sufficiency to do it.

I have showed to his Majesty that passage in your letters which concerns *, and his coming over; and the reason

^k [The English preferment, which he still retained, was his Prebendal stall at York, which he did not vacate till Aug. 6, 1634. (See Life of Bramhall, p. vi. note ^r. Works, vol. i.) His stall at Ripon, and the Rectory of Elvington, seem to have been resigned by him when he first came to Ireland.]

^l [Dr. Robert Ussher was appointed at once to the Archdeaconry of Meath, vacated by Bramhall's promotion. He was consecrated Bishop of Kildare, Feb. 25, 1635.]

why neither your Lordship nor myself can think fit that way be given to him at this time, being to attend in the great service of the Parliament there. His Majesty likes this proposal well, and promises to give no way to such his desires. But you know the workings of a Court, what they are; yet I hope the best. I have likewise acquainted his Majesty what a considerable business that must needs be, which, besides the fine to him, may be forty thousand pounds in point of restitution^m.

Now I have done with all your large letters, have at you a little for your harangue to that Council about the Parliament. I thank you for that duplicate. Young Windebankⁿ (for whom I thank you also) came hither on Saturday, May the 3d. The next day, at Greenwich, your despatch to Secretary Coke^o was read to the Committee, the King present, order given for us to meet, and for speed of our answer to you. If speed be not made to your mind, I am not in fault, and I hope you will have all things in time. Everybody liked your carriage and discourse to the Council, but thought it too long, and that too much strength was put upon it; but you may see what it is to be an able speaker. Your old friend says, he had rather see you talk something into the Exchequer; but he pleases himself extremely to see how able Brutus is in the Senate House; and wot you what? When we came to this passage in your despatch: 'Again, I did beseech them to look well about, and to be wise by others' harms; they were not ignorant of the misfortunes these meetings had run in England of late years, &c.' Here a good friend of yours interposed, quorum pars magna fui. I hope you will charge this home upon my Lord Cottington, he hath so many Spanish tricks, that I cannot tell how to trust him for anything, but making of legs to fair ladies.

I have received a letter from Croxton, and do here send you one passage of it, that you may see how the Lord Mountnorris stands affected to the Church, and your courses for redeeming it out of misery: Cæterum, quod ad Præcento-

ord's interest, a Member of the Irish Parliament. (See Prynne's Hidden Works, p. 118.)]

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR LORDSHIP,—I took the first and best opportunity I could get to present your Lordship's petition to his Majesty; and I did it to the best advantage I could to yourself and your cause, or, to use your own words, I did labour to improve it as far as I might. His Majesty, after he had read and considered it, commanded me to return this answer: That he was not yet satisfied concerning your business, but would not do your Lordship nor any man else wrong. And that there was one part of your petition which he did much dislike, namely, the pleading of his gracious remission of all that was past at several times formerly granted unto you, &c. And his Majesty gave me special command to let you know, that when he, upon earnest entreaty, gave you leave to kiss his hands, he did not thereby give any remission of anything which he knew not, as then he did not know that for which you are now questioned; and that if such interpretations be made of it by your Lordship or any other, either the wrong will be in his Majesty, who in that way may be thought to remit that which is no way fit for a King to pass over, or may make him more strange to delinquents in that kind. So this his Majesty utterly dislikes, and bids you not to trust unto it. This is all the answer I can give you. And I profess I did not expect that his Majesty would have pitched here of all parts of your petition. I have dealt truly and really with you, but am not able to do you any more service. I take my leave, and rest

[Christian Remembrancer, Dec. 1841 P.]

S. in Christo.

SIR,—Now I know to whom I am beholding for two young roebuck pies, and I thank you heartily for them. They came not as you intended; but I will take leave to tell you how they came. The two pies came to me a little before Christmas, as mouldy as if they had been sent from a far country. No direction at all came with them, but only that they came from Durham; so I thought they had been my Lord Bishop's sendings, and I either did give him thanks for them, or intended so to do. Now in the middle of May came your letter, by which I understand the pies came from you; and, truly, I thank you as heartily as if they had come to me in very good case, for so I know you intended them. And with these thanks I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LXXVIII.

TO THE MERCHANTS AT DELFT.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 407, 408.]

After our hearty commendations, &c. — We are commanded by his Majesty to signify unto you, that this bearer, Mr. Beaumont^a, chosen by joint consent of your Company to be your preacher at Delft, or where else you shall at any time reside, is a man learned, sober, and conformable to the doctrine and discipline established in the Church of England; and that you are to receive him with all decent and courteous usage, fitting his person and calling, and to allow him the usual ancient stipend, which Mr. Forbes^r lately, or any other before him, hath received. And, further, we are to let you know, that it is his Majesty's express command, that both you, the Deputy, and all and every other merchant, that is or shall be residing in those parts beyond the seas, do conform themselves to the doctrine and discipline settled in the Church of England; and that they frequent the Common Prayers with all religious duty, and reverence, at all times required, as well as they do sermons; and that out of your Company you do yearly, about Easter, as the Canons prescribe, name two churchwardens and two sidesmen,

^a [Heylin describes him as 'reputed for a learned, sober, and conformable man.' (Cypr. Angl. p. 259.)]

^r [Concerning this person there is the following notice in William Whiteway's Diary, printed in 'Willis's Current Notes,' for July 1853: — "1633, Jan. 1.—This winter Mr. Forbes, a Scotchman, minister of the English Church at Delft, in Holland, having been sent for over by the King returned back into Holland. The King sent for him to employ him about the English Discipline in the English Churches in the Low Countries, which he flatly refused to do, but said he would hinder it to his power. Whereupon the King told him that, if he would do it he would make him a bishop; and he rejecting the offer the King dismissed him of his charge at Delft, having power from the States to appoint ministers and discipline for the English Churches there. In this conference Mr. Forbes told the King that King James a little before his death sent for him out of Holland, and told him very seriously that he desired him to give him a reason why it came to pass that he had found the Scotch Church good and left it bad, and that he found the English Church bad and should leave it far worse. Forbes said it proceeded from the bishops whose government was anti-Christian. Then King James craved his advice how it might be remedied. Forbes told him it might easily be altered in Scotland, where that Government was not yet so strongly settled, and in England it might be done, so it were wisely managed. King James promised to think upon some course to effect it, and to advise farther with him about it, in the meantime he charged him to conceal this their conference. The next news that Forbes heard of the King was of his death. How he came God knows."] which may look to the orders of the Church, and give an account according to their office. And Mr. Beaumont himself is hereby to take notice, that his Majesty's express pleasure and command to him is, that he do punctually keep and observe all the orders of the Church of England, as they are prescribed in the Canons and the Rubrics of the Liturgy. And that if any of your Company shall show themselves refractory to this ordinance of his Majesty, (which we hope will not be,) he is to certify the name of any such offender and his offence to the Lord Bishop of London for the time being, who is to take order and give remedy accordingly. And these letters you are to register and keep by you, that they which come after may understand what care his Majesty hath taken for the well ordering of your Company in Church affairs. And you are likewise to deliver a copy of these letters to Mr. Beaumont, and to every successor of his respectively, that he and they may know what his Majesty expects from them, and be the more inexcusable if they disobey. Thus, not doubting but that you will show yourselves very respectful of these his Majesty's commands, we leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LXXIX.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 268.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—After I had sealed my letters, I received one from the Dean of Cashells*, with another enclosed, from some friend of his unknown to me. That letter enclosed importunes the Dean very earnestly to get a letter from me to your Lordship, in the behalf of one Mr. Chadwick, that he may succeed, as a Baron of the Exchequer, in the room of Sir Gerard Lowther. That which moved the Dean to send me the letter, is not any forwardness of his to meddle in businesses of this nature, but only, as himself expresseth it, a fair respect, fearing lest if he should speed, and he seem backward, he and his causes for the Church might fare the worse, which made him choose rather to put me to the denial than himself, and I am very well contented with it. But I, my Lord, choose rather to grant in part than to deny for all; and out of this reason, the letter which came to the Dean tells him, that your Lordship hath a very good opinion of Mr. Chadwick as a fit man for this place; and if he be so, and you think so, these are so far to second his desires, as they may therein fulfil your own; but I cannot write to you according to all that is desired of me, not so much by the Dean, as by him that writes in behalf of Mr. Chadwick, because he desires from me an effectual letter to your Lordship for Mr. Chadwick against all competitors. And truly, my Lord, I do not use to write so to any friend, where I do know the man and his sufficiency, much less when I know him not; nor am I indeed well pleased, when any man writes so to me. Therefore, my Lord, all that I'll write is this, if Mr. Chadwick be as fit a man as any other for the King's service and your own, and as able and well set for the Church, I think you shall do the poor Dean of Cashells a great deal of favour, if you pitch upon him for this place; and I doubt not but the Dean (whom you are now drawing into a more public way) will both deserve it, and make good use of it for the Church. But if you have no such opinion of Mr. Chadwick, as the letter to the Dean pretends, then these letters of mine are not written. And I know you will order the matter so, whoever have the place, that the Church businesses shall proceed with favour enough, wherever they be just. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

LETTER LXXX.

TO ADAM BALLANDEN, BISHOP OF DUNBLANE.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—My haste at this time forces me to write very briefly: and these are to let you know, that I writ nothing in my former letters but as the King was informed, and myself by him commanded. I have now read your Lordship's letters to his Majesty, which hath in some part satisfied him, but not altogether. And for the first, his Majesty saith, that though the gentlemen of the Chapel Royal did absent themselves for fear of arrests, having not to pay, and though that might hinder the service in the Chapel in a solemn and formal way of singing by them; yet his Majesty thinks you might have got a Chaplain of your own to have read the English Liturgy, that so the work for the main part of it might have gone on. And for the payment of those men, I think your Lordship knows, I have done all the good offices I can, but have it not in my power to mend all the difficulties of the time.

Concerning the disturbance that was in Edinburgh, if any wrong was done your Lordship, that must lie upon those who misreported you to the King, whoever they were. And, howsoever, the King took it not ill you advised the then Bishop of Edinburgh to appease the differences, for that was very worthily and deservedly done by you. But as far as I remember, the charge laid upon you to the King was, that in your own sermon, which you preached about that time, you did rather side with one party, than either repress or compose the difference^z. Though I must needs confess to your Lordship, that by reason of the multitude of businesses which lie upon me, I cannot charge my memory with the particular.

You have done very well to acquaint the Lordships of the letter referred to in the 1st Art. of the Scottish Commissioners. See above, vol. iii. p. 804; and also Fryane's Hidden Works, p. 149.]

^z [This probably is the passage of Council and Session, &c. with his Majesty's resolution concerning the Communion in the Chapel Royal. And I doubt not, if you continue to do that which his Majesty looks for in the course of your Church, and which is most just and fit to be done, but that you will easily recover his Majesty's favour, and find the good of it. LETTER LXXXI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 271.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your letters of June the 23d, and the duplicate in them. It pities me to think how you stay for our answers. You will by the date of my former letters see, how long mine lay in Mr. Raylton's^y hands, before others that were to go with them could be got in. My cypher is packed up for Croydon, whither I am going this day, else I would tell you what little rest I am like to have at my country house, till the King be gone in progress, and somewhat else.

Since my letters were sealed, your long despatch about the Apostiling^z was read to the Committee, the King present. Order given to Mr. Secretary Coke for answer; and I hope you have it. The old man is exceeding diligent; and the truth is, so are we all, if you will believe us. I beseech your Lordship for favour. I do most heartily thank you for your short letter; and, I pray, remember I do so, that your threatening to make the next a souser may blow over. I was fain to write nine letters yesterday into Scotland. I think you have a plot, to see whether I will be universalis episcopus, that you and your brethren may take occasion to call me Antichrist.

Well, whate'er I am, or am called, I thank you for the Church with all my heart; and I hope so doth my Lord of Clonfert^b too. If I thought he did not, I would send him a link to see his benefactors. Mr. Raylton calls, and I doubt it is for these letters, which are as short as yours. The Lady Mora^d commends her to you, and tells you she would make more haste, did she not stay to accommodate private ends. I rest LETTER LXXXII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 272.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—The bearer hereof^d hath been with me at Croydon, and these are both to give your Lordship thanks for your favour to him, and to certify you, that my opinion concerning his worth is the same that it was at first; and I doubt not, but that he will every day improve himself for the service of the Church and your Lordship, in which way I shall heartily thank you for any encouragement you shall please to afford him. And for the Mastership of the College at Dublin, the sooner he shall be settled there the better.

^d [Wm. Chappell, the Dean of Cashel.]

I have only one more thing to trouble your Lordship with at this time, and that is concerning one Mr. Cressy*, a Divine who is lately arrived in Ireland. I have received good testimony of his sufficiency, as a younger man, and had thought to have recommended him to your Lordship a good while since, but that other businesses have caused me to slip it. I pray you, when he comes in your way, will you be pleased to take notice of him from me? And as he shall approve himself by his good carriage, so let him stand or fall in your Lordship's estimation. Thus far in haste, that Mr. Dean might not return empty-handed. Of other things I will, God willing, give your Lordship an account by the next return. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LXXXIII.

TO DR. RICHARD ASTLEY, WARDEN OF ALL SOULS.

[Tanner MSS. vol. cccxl. fol. 115 b.]

S. in Christo.

SIR,—When the Fellows came to me the last year about the money which was to be divided among them at the end of their audit, I was willing the first act that I did as Visitor of that College should be with as much favour as could well be showed to the Company, preserving the state and government of the College. And to that end I spake to the Fellows which were trusted, that they should not fail to let the Company understand how careful I then was, that the exercise of the House should be duly performed, as well as all other moral and civil duties.

* [This was Hugh Cressy, who had already been Lord Wentworth's Chaplain when in the North. (See Wentworth's reply to this letter, Aug. 23, 1634; Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 300.) In 1642 he became, by the interest of Lord Falkland, Canon of Windsor, and about the same time Dean of Leigh-lin. In 1646 he joined the Church of Rome, and was the author of the 'Church History of Britanny,' and other books on the Romish side, which involved him in controversy with Lord Clarendon and Stillingfleet. (Wood, Ath. Ox. iii. 1011—1016.)]

Since this time I have had as watchful an eye as I might upon that government ; and do find that some things are very much out of order there, both against the local statutes and all other common rules of reason and government, which I must desire may be amended fairly. And, first, I understand that in the yearly choice of your Deans (an office of great consequence for upholding, or perverting, the discipline of a College), you, and the rest of the electors, are quite departed from the statute and ordinance of your Founder. For your statutes require that your Deans should be chosen de discretioribus, et maturioribus sociis^f. And surely none but such are fit to be joined with the Warden in giving consent to punishments. But contrary to this, you choose your Deans not by worth or judgment, but only by ordinary course of seniority ; and by that means descend to juniors, who are very unfit to govern such a College. And from hence it is, that some of the students neglect not only public exercise, but even their private studies also. Beside, when you, as Warden, would willingly, I conceive, punish not only these neglects, but other excesses in apparel and miscarriages in conversation, these young Deans refuse to concur to the punishing of such delinquents : and I doubt a great reason of it is, because themselves are equally culpable with the offenders, and so might be thought to punish themselves in others. And all this comes by departing from your Founder's statutes, in not choosing these officers according to worth and merit.

Secondly, I am informed that you, and the rest of the Fellows Electors, are run into the same error in the choice of your Bursars by seniority too, and not putting a difference. Whereas your statutes require that the Bursars should be aptiores, et magis circumspecti^g, a quality not easily found in younger men, who usually are too profuse to be trusted with the estate of a College, and too often prove not responsible.

These are therefore to require you, Mr. Warden, to call the Fellows together, and to take notice yourself, and communicate to them, especially such as have voice in the choice of officers, that I give it as a strict charge, that hereafter you make neither Dean nor Bursar by seniority only ; but that you choose such as are seniors, or others that are very deserving by their studies and conversation. And that you keep all those from being elected Deans, which have been defective in their studies, or are otherwise obnoxious in life and conversation. And if any man being once chosen Dean shall refuse to join with the Warden in the punishment of any excess whatsoever, where just proof is made against the delinquent, I shall take such course with him upon complaint made to me, as I hope shall remedy that notorious kind of maintenance by a governor against government.

^f [See Statutes of All Souls College, cap. viii.]

Next, that I lay the same charge upon yourself and the Electors, that such Fellows only be chosen Bursars as are known to be provident, and fit for that place; for if the stock of the dead College be not well maintained, the state of the living College, which are yourself and the Fellows, cannot be upheld, which would turn to the great dishonour of a bountiful Founder. And, particularly, I do require of you and them, that no man be elected to the office of a Bursar, or any other office, that hath misbehaved himself in the office of Dean. Besides, I do hereby particularly give in charge, that every year one of the Bursars at the least be chosen out of the ancientest Fellows of the House, against whose carriage in former offices there hath been no exception. And this I do because I understand the College revenues have been in some later years in younger men's hands in this office, whence they have not been recovered without difficulty.

And this charge I require you, Mr. Warden, to deliver to all the Fellows, but especially the officers, that they use not long, undecent hair, nor wear large falling bands, nor boots under their gowns, nor any other like unstatutable novelty in their apparel. For these kinds of excesses, I understand, are much grown into that College; and that some officers, especially the Deans, who should punish these faults in others, are too usually themselves seen in such uncomely habits. And now, Mr. Warden, I desire you both to let the officers and the Fellows in general know, that though I think fit to send yourself and them this admonition by letter, being most unwilling to fall upon the sourest way at first, yet I shall assure you, that if your elections shall not hereafter be regularly made according to your statutes, or that these and the like abuses shall continue without reformation, I shall, God willing, use that power which your honourable Founder hath left, and commended to me, and not suffer either the discipline or the thrift of that College to decay or be impaired. But I hope this fair admonition will amongst such ingenuous men produce all such good effects as are desired. In which hope I leave you to the grace of God, and shall ever rest

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Whereas his Majesty, in a princely consideration of the several bishoprics of this kingdom, hath, amongst others, written to your Lordship, to take care that hereafter the lands belonging to your See be let for one-and-twenty years, and not for three lives, for the benefit of the Church and your successors; I make no doubt but you will carefully observe that his gracious pleasure: but in that diocese I hold it requisite you enlarge your care concerning the lands of your bishopric already demised. I pray, therefore, and do hereby require you to call upon every tenant that holds lands of your bishopric, that he make a survey of the lands he holds, and set the quantity of acres, the particular names of the closes and other lands as they are and have been called, and in what township, parish, or county the same and every part thereof lieth; and if it be possible, that they do this before Michaelmas day next; also, that they certify you how long they and their ancestors have held the said lands now in lease to them, and what houses they, or their ancestors, have suffered to decay, and what remain in repair upon the same; and whether the rents answered unto the bishopric, be out of the lands they hold by the said several leases respectively, or out of any other lands held from the archbishopric, which they do receive of the bishop's freeholders as a chief; and that they express by what right they receive such rents, and how much the rents are, if they be not issuing out of the lands demised unto them. And though this course be taken, yet it is not intended that you shall be concluded thereby; but the end is, to prevent the concealment of the Church's land, and to discover such as go about to conceal the same¹; and if you make it appear that any tenant of your Lordship doth hold more lands than he doth acknowledge upon this survey, I will inform his Majesty of him, and his course against the Church, that such further order may be taken with him as shall appertain to justice. But I hope they will all deal fairly and conscionably with you. Thus recommending to you in this the care both of yourself and successors, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER LXXXV.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 28.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—These are only to remember my love to you, and to prevent any mistakes which may arise about my visitation, which now draws towards an end in your Lordship's diocese, and I am most willing it should end as it began, without any the least unkindness put upon you.

When your Lordship's servant, Mr. Prigeon, was last with me at Croydon, he desired, in your Lordship's name, that he might have my relaxation ready drawn by the eleventh of September next, about which time he said my half-year expired. I told him I could not foresee my necessary occasions of absence, which might fall as well upon that day as any other, but I promised it should be ready for him within two or three days after his then coming, and that he should have it with him; or upon the very day he desired, if I were not necessarily hindered.

My Lord, this promise, as well as any other I have hitherto made, I am most willing to keep; but then I must desire of your Lordship, that all like fair respects may be used towards me; for if I hold my visitation but just my half-year, yet the procurations from the six several Archdeacons must be due to me, either for Our Lady-day, or for Michaelmas. Now, my Lord, I know not whether my Vicar-general have received them for Our Lady-day or not; if he have received them, or that your Lordship will undertake to me that they shall be paid unto me, I shall most willingly make my relaxation accordingly; for I have no purpose to continue my visitation to gain both half-years; and the one which is my due, I presume you will as freely allow me. That which makes me move this to your Lordship is, because I know not whether you will acknowledge my visitation to begin from the date of my inhibition, or from Mr. Attorney's publishing his award. If from my inhibition, then Our Lady-day's procurations are payable unto me; if from the award, my half-year comes not out till Michaelmas, and then the procurations due at that time will be to me. I pray your Lordship to take which you will, so you leave one to me, that all things may end as fairly as they began, and that I may have cause still to continue

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Being at Lambeth this day upon some necessary occasions, my secretary acquainted me that he received a letter from your Lordship's servant, Mr. Prigeon ; the contents were concerning your procurations of your Archdeacons, which I conceive to be due to me by reason of my visitation, and to that purpose I wrote my letters unto your Lordship about some three weeks since or more, and if they came not to your Lordship's hands I have been ill-used. But, upon the whole matter, all that I shall say is briefly this : I shall use my best endeavour to uphold the rights of that place where it hath pleased God and his Majesty to set me, but shall be very careful not to do your Lordship, or any other of my brethren, wrong, willingly I certainly will not ; and for this particular, if the procurations for the half-year be not due to me, I shall very easily and readily quit my claim to them whenever that shall be made apparent. But if it appear to be otherwise, and that they are due to me, your Lordship will give me leave in a fair way to preserve my rights ; and that your Lordship may perceive how ready I am to show you what courtesy I may, I have without more ado sent you down by this bearer your relaxation, which you had received sooner, but that I expected every day your Lordship's letters in answer of mine. So in great haste I leave you to God's grace, and rest

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,
My duty and respects unto your Grace remembered,—

I have not indeed received any letter from your Grace since my coming down unto this country, before that which was delivered unto me upon Saturday last at night, together with the relaxation, for which I humbly thank your Grace. Your Grace hath all the reason that can be to receive those procurations mentioned in your Grace's letters from any parties which by law or practice ought to pay them, but truly I cannot hear or find that ever any sum of money was paid at all, or any such sum demanded from any Bishop of this See by any of the Lords your Grace's predecessors in their visitations, under what power or letters of association soever they were performed. The procurations which the Archdeacons pay unto me are valued in the King's books to a penny in the corps and temporalities of my bishopric, for the which I answer firstfruits, tenths, and subsidies.

Nor are they paid unto me half-yearly by the Archdeacons, but as it happeneth once within the year, when their visitations are despatched, for want whereof they have yet forborne to pay me anything all this year. Thus I conceive the case to stand, if it please your Grace; but if either by your Grace's records or mine own I may be otherwise informed,

And that the other half was paid before to one, I think, of their company, whom themselves employed to receive it: who, it seems, was a bankrupt, and either ran away with their money, or misspent it, or else served his own turn with it. Now, what to say to this I cannot tell, for the chequer is not in that case that I can think it fit, or if I do, I am sure the Lord Treasurer will not think so, that the King should pay the same sum twice; and yet I must confess, it falls very hard upon the poor men to bear the loss; but they should have been wiser in the choice of their agent. Notwithstanding, if there can be any hope in this case to relieve them, I shall do my best; and for the future, my Lord hath promised that they shall be duly paid. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

LETTER XCI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 329—331.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—To the answer of your letters^r, and as briefly as I can. I like your resolution well, not to mention things in fieri, but where you would have advice, of which God be thanked you need little, and I am not able to give much.

I knew how you would find my Lord Primate affected to the Articles of Ireland; but I am glad the trouble that hath been in it will end there without advertising of it over to us. And whereas you propose to have the Articles of England received in ipsissimis verbis, and leave the other, as no way concerned, neither affirmed nor denied, you are certainly in the right, and so says the King (to whom I imparted it) as well as I; go, hold close and you will do a great service in it^a.

I am glad Streach hath refused, since the Bishop hath the land^b.

Now, fie upon it, if the salmon of that river be bad, yet your loss is the less, since you have so many trouts that may be tickled into anything, or anything out of them. And I see you owe me much for that praise and commendations, which works upon the dullest capacities. And the more because it works not only on them, but on all Parsons and their children, and them that marry them, especially where praise is Lowder than ordinary, and hath it entailed^c.

Your letters, you tell me, came by so safe a hand, as frees us both from the trouble of cypher. Be it so. And I am always glad in this kind to have but little arithmetic; yet was your letter written by so safe a hand too? Your own hand it is not; whose it is I know not; nor will I cast any jealousy causelessly on any. But I'll tell you a tale, which I assure you comes from very good hands, and I will for all this sure hand tell it you in arithmetic, and enjoin you silence. The Lord Treasurer says, that the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Lord Deputy of Ireland are very great; and the Lord Deputy poisons me by letters, and then the Archbishop doth him all the ill offices that may be to the King. If ever I hear of this again I will call you blab, and never write more.

Now for that great matter which you trust so freely; you see what you great men do with us Churchmen and our certificates. But if now the Earl will take down the tomb^d, to prevent pulling of it down, all is well.

Sir Philip Mainwaring hath paid me thanks enough; but I hope he will not be known that he owns me any. I take it all for compliment.

^a [This refers to the adoption of the English Articles, as well as the Irish, in the Convocation.]

^c [The two words in italics in this sentence refer to Sir Gerard Lowder, who was about to marry Sir William Parsons's daughter, and are in allusion to a remark in Strafford's letter.]

As for my marginal note, I see you deciphered it well ; and I see you make use of it too. Do so still, thorow and thorow. Oh that I were where I might go so too ! but I am shackled between delays and uncertainties. You have a great deal of honour here for your proceedings. Go on, a God's name.

The next passage in your letters, concerning the great man that hath engrossed so many parsonages, &c. as are mortgaged for four thousand and eighty pounds^r, I read over to his Majesty, who bids you be sure your ground is good, and then spare none.

Since you would fain know in good earnest who it was that took so much pains to abuse you about your speech, certainly it could be none but that old companion of Lerma and Rotherigo^s; and I verily think he got some one or other in the house by brachygraphy to take your speech, or some notes of it, and send it over in haste ; if this were not it, I am at a loss.

I thank your Lordship for the Dean of Cashells ; I hope he will play the Provost well ; and that he may do so, I will do the best I can to set their statutes right ; they are now in my hands, and I will perfect them before I return them if God say 'Amen' to it. And I thank your Lordship as much for dispensing with his oath, as for the Provostship ; for there are very good reasons of his refusal^a. I have received a letter from the Archbishop of Tuam, that he is willing to leave his commendam which he hath in Dublin^b; and I thought to be an earnest suitor to you, that now Dr. Bramhall is better fitted^c, you would give the Deanery of Christ Church to the Dean of Cashells, that so he might be nearer the Colledge, and make another Dean of Cashells. But asking about this, I am told you are resolved upon another^d, and if it be so, there's an end of that business, for I love to be modest with my friends.

^s [Lord Cottington. This refers to an expression in Wentworth's letter.]

^a [The oath of the new Provost was dispensed with in order that a way might be left for the introduction of the proposed new Statutes. (See Chappell's Life in Biogr. Brit. note C.)]

^b [Dr. Randolph Barlow held up to this time the Deanery of Christ Church, Dublin, in commendam. See above, p. 258.]

^c [Recently appointed Bishop of Derry.]

^d [Henry Tilson, one of Wentworth's Chaplains, afterwards Bishop of Elphin. (Wood, Ath. Ox. iv. 814.)]

I like your proposal to have half-a-dozen good scholars sent over to help fill that College, and the hopes you put them in, cæteris paribus. For that, none so fit to think of it as the new Provost; and when he shall send me word of what degree they may or must be, I will give him the best assistance I can.

I am very glad you are so confident for Youghall^e; and for Lismore you have all the records which the rats have left uneaten. If any Nemesis have a better stomach to the Earl, than the rats had to the records, let her eat on. And I think your Lordship is very right, that one great example will do much good on that side; and so it would on this too, could we light upon the making of it. I spake both with his Majesty and with Secretary Coke; to the one to grant, and to the other to hasten a new Commission for the Castle Chamber. Mr. Secretary told me at Nonesuch it was ready, so I hope you have it by this time. And God speed you.

Well, you have given me freedom, where I dissent in judgment; I will make use of it, and not deny you that which you so kindly challenge to yourself, and give to me; and as long as you shall retain the obedience of a son, I will take upon me to be your ghostly father. If, therefore, from henceforward I take on me to command, lay down your sword for the time, and know your duty.

For the Lady Mora I have said all, and I see you will not let me be alone in that opinion. In too much earnest here is such delay and uncertainty, that I know not where I am, if I step never so little out of myself, as needs I must, having so much to do and with many.

As concerning Mr. Chadwick^f, he is a stranger to me; I writ upon entreaty, and I think I sent you such word. But to me you shall not be answerable for him, if he answer not your judgment of him there.

So soon as ever the King returned from progress, I stepped to him, and read over that part of your first letter to me, which concerned the keeping of the subsidies on that side for the necessities of that kingdom, and that they might not by any art be drawn over hither^g. His Majesty liked the motion very well, and promised me you should order them there according as you have proposed. Yet, finding in these your last, sent by Secretary Mainwaring, another passage large and full to the same purpose, I took an occasion to second the motion I had formerly made, and read that over to his Majesty, not sparing either 'the raising up of a kind of emulation,' as you there wish; nor this, 'that they on this side are driven to such straits, that, like sinking men, they catch hold of each twig to keep themselves above water, &c.^h' His Majesty gave the same answer, that the money should not be called thence. So I have done in that, all that you desire, and all I can.

I have before given you all the account I can, how the Lord Cottington got so many passages of your speech, and so soon. But I thank you for giving me warning of a man that hath traded twenty years with Lerma and Rotherigo. If he deceive me after such a warning, he hath good luck; yet I cannot tell what he may do, if he fall to pray upon his beads againⁱ. I have got him to tell me the tale. I assure you, it is the most exquisite piece of hypocrisy that ever I heard of, and what 'tis else your letters have told me already.

I here send you back letters signed for the Bishop of Clonfert^k. God's blessing be upon you; 'tis an excellent work. Mr. Secretary Windebank told me, he would remit his fees; and if it be not done, somebody is in fault; but I hope it is.

So I am come to the end of your letters. Now I shall first thank you for the duplicate of the despatch you sent me. Next I am to tell your Lordship, that the King hath given the Bishopric of Limerick to Dr. Webbe, one of his ancient chaplains, who I hope will discharge that place well, and give you content. For Dean Lesley¹, I think him one of the fittest on that side, and shall be ready to assist him, when you shall find it fit. I received a letter from the Dean of Limerick, Mr. Geo. Andrews^m, that he might now succeed in the bishopric; but his letters came too late, and had they come sooner they could not have varied his Majesty's resolution for Dr. Webbe. I did formerly receive a letter from the Lords Justices of that kingdom in Mr. Andrews's behalf, with a great testimony of his sufficiency. And truly, my Lord, I should have done any reasonable thing for him upon their testimony, had not the King been settled upon another. Now my thoughts do a little stagger, and by the letters which he hath sent me that staggering is occasioned. I send you herein his letters, that you may see what fustian they are; but when you have read them, I pray you burn them, (for I would not publicly disgrace him,) and send me word in your next what esteem you have of the man for honesty and sufficiency.

My Lord of Derry writ unto me, what good might be done by buying in impropriationsⁿ. And he conceives a stock might be raised to do it out of the fourth part which is to come to the King upon Mr. Porter and Mr. Murray's patent; and he writes further, that your Lordship approves of it. I have acquainted his Majesty with this, and he likes it well, and bid me tell you, he hopes if you turn this from him to the Church, you will be so circumspect as that you will not fail to find some other thing, as good or better for his profit. And I pray of this be careful, else some great mountain or another may be made of it, I know by whom^o.

I herein likewise send you a letter of the Bishop of Waterford, in which he desires your Lordship's favour towards him for the bettering of his means. I pray let him know I have written ; and I know you will do what is fitting, according to the merits of Churchmen, and that's all I can ask.

When I had written almost thus far, in came your letters of Sept. 22, with a duplicate in them ; and truly I made just account at my next coming to Court to see as much as I might (your own rules being observed) what became of your suit P ; but I fell very ill, and have not seen the King this fortnight. Now I am going to Court again, and if I find anything worth the adding, you shall be sure to find it at the close of these. Yet whatsoever become of your suit, or anything else, I love my master's service, the common good, and your own person so well, that I here take the liberty to desire you not to guide yourself so much by that compass, but to go as resolutely on, be the suit denied, as if it were granted. I have weighty reasons for this, but for the present want strength to express them to you. All my comfort is, I assure myself you understand me fully, and can give reason enough to yourself for what I say.

After this I received your Lordship's letters of the 1st of October, in which you do not complain without cause ; and if at any time I meet with any opportunity, I will do you and your services there all the right I can to the King ; so shall I do in this, if any hint be given me.

'Tis true, the Primate hath recommended Dean Andrews to me, but 'tis upon the old stock, and very fairly, and I have returned him my answer, fit for me, and true from the King. I came to know that man's zeal before these last letters of yours described him, and I doubt it is not much according to knowledge ^q.

LETTER XCII.

TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF NORWICH.

[Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. pp. 494, 495^a.]

S. in Christo ^t.

After my hearty commendations, &c.—I do very well remember the late alteration of your Statutes^u, and the settlement of them in Bishop Harsnet^x and Dean Suckling's^y time; my predecessor and myself, among other, being employed in that service. At that time it troubled me very much, as it hath since done, upon the consideration of other Churches, to see the weakness of that quire, and the small means that was left to make it better; considering that neither the quire, nor anything else about the Church, can flourish without some proportionable reward to service. The good old Dean, to help things on as far as he might, projected two things; the one was some proportion of corn to be allowed them, which I think was then settled, and I hope continues; the other I do not well remember that it was settled by statute, the more the pity, but it was generally thought fit and approved by all of us, to whom the consideration of the Statutes was then recommended; that is, that such small benefices, or cures, within the city and suburbs as are in the Church's gift, should, as they fell void, be given to the petty canons respectively, and to no other; and that the Church should be very careful, from time to time, to choose such petty canons into vacant places, as might be fit and able to discharge both duties, both to sing in the quire, and to catechise and preach in the parish. This custom of giving those small cures to the petty canons is usual with other Churches, where the quire is as mean as yours, and it being great help to them; and fit and able men will never be wanting, if this course for their preferment be held constant.

I write this unto you, because I am informed that there are divers very sufficient men already in expectation of those places, whensoever it shall please God to make any void, so that you need not be to seek to furnish yourselves. But I hear withal there is a purpose amongst some of you, without any regard of the honour and good of the Church, to bestow these livings, when they fall, upon their private friends, without any respect had to the quire; which, if it be, will utterly overthrow the quire service, and you will not be able to retain either voices or skill amongst you. I would be glad to hope this information were not true, but it is so constantly affirmed to me, that I cannot distrust it altogether. These are, therefore, to pray and require you to be careful in this business, as you have any care of the Church's good, or of any good opinion that I shall hold of you; and this I assure you, that if I shall find, that you do at any time put other men in those cures, and leave the petty canons destitute, to the utter prejudicing of the quire, I shall take all the ways that wisely I can, to make you see your error; but I hope you will do your duties, and so preserve my love to you, and my care for you, which I shall be glad to extend to the utmost, if you shall make yourselves capable of it. Thus, not doubting of your obedience to this direction, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD, AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,
—My humble service and all due respects remembered,
I humbly beseech your Grace to excuse me for this year's representation, and to receive the account of my diocese from your Vicar-general. I hope he will assure your Grace, as he hath done me and others, that all things are here practised, required in his most excellent Majesty's instructions.

And so they shall be, (by God's grace,) as far as my unworthy ministry can advance that service.

I humbly beseech your Grace not to cease your mediation unto his most excellent Majesty, for his mercy towards me.
I do endeavour, by my life and conversation, to make myself a vessel not altogether incapable of that sacred oil; and will be ever as ready to acknowledge, as I am now to implore, your Grace's mediation; and shall never cease to pray unto God for your Grace's health and happiness, as well

LETTER XCIV.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 33.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I lately received a letter from your Lordship by the hands of Mr. Ireland^a, to the first part whereof I can give you full satisfaction, namely, That I shall, according to the time prefixed, give his Majesty an account from the Bishops within my province. And I shall for this year take it for your diocese, being one of them which I visited, from my Vicar-general's report, and shall not fail to represent it so to his Majesty, as he hath done it to me ^b.

The second part of your Lordship's letter is fuller of difficulty, to me especially, who have been employed twice at least already in the same business and without success. Yet I resolved to put it once more to his Majesty, which I did yesterday. And, because I found your Lordship had expressed your desires very briefly and yet very effectually, and in fair terms of respect to his Majesty's goodness, as in other of your Lordship's letters you had formerly done, I did not only move your suit, but obtained liberty to read that part of your letter to him; but all the answer I could gain from his Majesty was, that he had answered me already to that particular, and could not as yet say any more to it. If I have any fair opportunity these holidays to move his Majesty again, I shall not fail to do it; but the present answer given me I have truly related to your Lordship. So wishing you health, I commend you to God's blessed protection.

Your Lordship's loving Friend and Brother.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 34.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD,
—May it please your Grace to accept of my most humble thanks for that letter of your Grace's which I received from Mr. Ireland this last week, and especially for laying my humble petition for grace and mercy with so much expedition, at his Majesty's feet.

Indeed, if I should believe either the vain reports of that man that is appointed relator against me ^c, or the surmises of greater persons, I should not dare to hope so much upon your Grace's favour. But finding in mine own bosom no want of true affections unto your Grace, nor of taking all opportunities to express the same when I had some power, and withal calling to mind of what small consideration it were unto your Grace (though disaffected unto me) to suffer a Bishop to end his days in a private manner, amongst books and papers, without shame or undoing, I have resolved with myself, to make (beside my private prayers unto God) no other mediation unto his Majesty for his mercy and goodness, than by your Grace, and to reserve my greatest obligations and acknowledgments unto your Grace, for any comfort I shall receive thereby, submitting in all humility the effect to God's good will and pleasure, whom I beseech, with all my heart, to bless your Grace with all health and happiness, remaining

LETTER XCVI.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 35.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I perceive my late letters came safe to you, because you gave me thanks for them; and truly, my Lord, I did present your humble petition to his Majesty with the expedition mentioned in those my letters. And I read that passage of your letter over, so that he might see your suit in your own expression.

But whereas it follows in your letters now sent, that you could not hope for much upon my favour, if you did believe either the vain reports of your relator, or the surmises of greater persons; my Lord, here I take myself bound to say something to you both of and for myself, especially since in one of your former letters to me, dated Dec. 3, 1633, you are pleased to say that other men had made me formidable to you, which I took to be some slip, till now I see it in a manner repeated.

First, therefore, the relator, he is a mere stranger to me; I do not remember that ever I spoke with him in my life but once, and that was about a reference from the King. But, concerning you or your cause, I never spake word with him. As for his tongue, I have no bridle for it, nor for other men's who have taken this liberty with me. Secondly, for the surmises of greater persons, I can say as little: though the greater the men be, the less liberty should they take to speak otherwise of me than they know; for if to surmise be enough, I know not that man that may not be made guilty of anything. But, my Lord, this is truth, and I will avow it. You did never put letter or petition into my hand about your business, but I did (and with all the expedition I could) present it carefully, and with all due respects, to his Majesty, and returned you from time to time such answer as I could obtain.

Thirdly, since there are such surmises upon me (as you write), I will take this occasion to express myself clearly to your Lordship. What I have formerly done both upon your letters and petitions I have above related, and shall at any time do the like, for I find not myself under surmises for it. But, my Lord, as I should be glad, with the preservation of the King's honour and justice, to do your Lordship, or any Bishop, all lawful favours, and give you or them my best assistance for mercy where they deserve it; yet, if my suit for mercy be not heard and received, I shall not hold myself so bound to any Bishop, as for his sake to forget the duty which I owe to the King's honour and justice, where and when it shall appear they are alike concerned. Therefore, if your Lordship, upon any greater persons' surmises, shall think I have not performed towards you all I undertook, you wrong me; but if you think I shall forsake any just cause of the King's to assist you, you deceive yourself; for it is one thing to sue for favour, and another to do justice, if proofs arise, and you be left unto them.

The rest of your Lordship's letters expects no answer from me, further than that, in the way of asking favours, I shall at any time be ready to do your Lordship such service as is fit for me to undertake. But what you mean by ending your days in a private manner, amongst books and papers, without shame or undoing (for so you write), I confess I know not. Thus, wishing you a happy new year, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest

Your loving Friend and Brother,

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am very glad to hear your resolutions for the ordering of his Majesty's Chapel Royal, and that you are resolved to wear your whites, notwithstanding the maliciousness of foolish men. I know his Majesty will take your obedience and care very well; and being fully satisfied both concerning your sermon, and all things else committed to your trust, you may, as opportunity serves, expect from his Majesty all reasonable things; and I shall not be wanting to give you all the assistance that I can upon all occasions; of which I heartily pray you not to doubt.

My Lord the Earl of Traquair^e is now come, and I shall take care, the first opportunity I can, to speak with him once more about the Gentlemen of the Chapel, and shall show him what your Lordship writes concerning one Edward Kelly, whom you mention; and what answer soever I can get, you shall receive from me. TO JOHN DURY.

Salutem in Domino.

Reversus e Germania in Britanniam, literas mihi attulisti gratissimas a quibusdam venerabilibus Theologis, Augustanam Confessionem profitentibus. Per illas intelligo, quam studiose, non sine sudore et periculis, pacem Ecclesiæ sis prosecutus: ex iisdem etiam facile perspicio, quam misere sit afflicta ibidem bellis et tumultu facies Ecclesiæ. Et certe quod ad has miseriarum angustias redigatur, dissensionibus propriis nimium debet, Deo meritissime religionis dissidia bellis (dolet dicere) plusquam civilibus vindicante; eo magis necessarium illis pacis studium, eo magis in te laudandum simul et fovendum pacis Christianæ desiderium. Quod et in illis summis viris, et in te ipso non solum ipse (qualis qualis sim) medullitus approbo, sed (audeo dicere) tota etiam Ecclesia Anglicana; publice tamen nihil possum, priusquam

De Novatoribus nostris apud vos quæ scribis vera sunt; quæ contra illos conaris pia, et pro pace Ecclesiæ. Si nolint se ad pacatiora studia recipere, (et certe nolunt,) sint quod esse cupiunt, inter pusillos gigantes, modo sint, quod et esse et haberi merentur, inter doctos scioli, et inter prudentes temerarii.

Literæ tuæ secundæ causam Blauii tantum exponunt, patris, filiique, et quo consilio Twissum typis mandarit^k. Certe prudenter Farnabius, qui mentionem privilegii sui fecit^l; sed valde inconsulto Londinenses typographi privilegia sua silentio damnarunt. Unde enim exteri caveant quod nesciunt? Num prophetas volunt typographos esse? Sed responsum his literis retulit diu abhinc Blauii Filius, utpote quem statim post literas tuas acceptas, sine ulteriori processu, sumptibusve, dimisi e curia in tui solius gratiam. Responsum putavi illud scripto melius, præcipue cum tunc nihil mihi daretur otii. Et video ex subsequentibus literis tuis, fidum se fuisse narrando tibi parentique suo, quid in ea re fecerim. Gratias enim literæ tuæ referunt et tuas et patris. In literis autem tuis novissime scriptis^m non solum lego gratias mihi supra meritum repensas, sed hoc etiam, te labores tuos Grammaticos ad finem perduxisse. Gaudeo certe, et eo magis, quia semper cogito de Baronio. Librum etiam una cum literis misisti, tradidit mihi Goffius, qui et antè hæc literas has ad te detulisset, si citius redire potuisset. Sed quum res ita se habeant, alia aggrediendum est via, et sapienter meo judicio facis, si alia animo tuo agitare incipias. De reditu autem ejus in Angliam noli cogitare. Nam mensis vix præterit, quo publica fama Cantabrigiæ increbuit, illum non solum fidem dedisse mulieri illi, de qua antea scripsi, sed cum ea solennia matrimonii publice in facie Ecclesiæ celebrasse. Nominatur locus tempusque. Præpositus et Socii Collegii Jesu consilia ineunt, de alio in ejus locum, utpote sic vacantem, surrogando. Fama etiam in aures meas volat. Ego ad Ecclesiam Parochialem nominatam mitto, Registrum Matrimoniale (quo in singulis Parochiis utimur) inspiciendum curo; nihil ibi reperitur de solennizatione matrimonii. Desistunt ergo ab intentione sua Socii, nec alium eligunt. Sed vides, quæ sit opinio, quæ expectatio; et si redierit filius, certo certius aliquid eveniet, quod nolis. Et, ut finis sit huic malo, optime opinor consules et famæ et salutis filii tui, si ibi eum retineas, disponasque, ut ei magis congruum esse inveneris. Resignatio autem Societatis in Collegio

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 374—376.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I was never so busy as I am at this present, and am very heartily weary, and therefore to your short letters^p I shall give as short an answer.

And, first, this afternoon we are to sit at the Irish Committee, where I purpose, God willing, to press the passing of the statute concerning the Bishops in Ulster^q, with all the strength I have. For I confess I was not only absolutely satisfied concerning the business before my last letters went out of my hands, but did further think, that there was a great mistake both in myself and the rest of the Lords. For, for myself, I ingenuously acknowledge, that though I did much wonder why that favour should be showed to four or five bishops, and not the rest, and that the Bishop of Derry was one of them, yet all this did not make me reflect upon the plantation; which thought alone, had it come into me, would have suggested all the reasons your Lordship gives for

This business is settled, and you shall have your act to your contentment.

^p [These letters are not preserved.]

^q [This was a statute for confirmation of leases made by the Primate and other prelates of Ulster, of the endowment which had been granted by King James to the sees of Armagh, Derry, Clogher, Raphoe, and Kilmore. It was the Irish Statute 10 Charles II. sess. iii. capp. 1 and 5. See Mant's History of the Irish Church, vol. i. p. 482.]

the statute. Well, I am glad you have sent it back again, and I hope to give your Lordship and the Bishops content; I have already possessed the King that there is great reason in it, so I hope well.

Concerning Dr. Bruce^r, the King hath heard nothing of him yet, neither have I, nor hath any man in Court spoken to me concerning him or his cause, which is more than a wonder,^s should he be in England. For his appeal, I think it will hold, if it be made within fifteen days; but I purpose shortly to speak with Sir Henry Martin, and other civilians here, about it; and you may be sure I will do whatsoever I may against that palpable simony. The King thinks, as your Lordship doth, that there is great reason that it should be tried there, upon the place where the witnesses are at hand.

I have now a very great suit to your Lordship; 'tis this. Sir William Paddy^s, our old St. John's man, is dead, and hath left the College money to purchase land, to set up the quire and maintain it. Perhaps you will think it no wisdom to sue for a particular purchase, lest we be made pay unreasonably for it; yet there is such a convenience to the house in a particular following, as that we are resolved, if the land may be had, to overbuy it, so we be not put to extremity, and herein I must heartily pray your Lordship's assistance in your full strength. Sir William Rives, his Majesty's Attorney in Ireland, hath land within two miles of the College, and less. It lies in several portions, all intermixed with the College land, no house upon it, nor do I know that Sir William hath any other land near it, so it's far fitter for the College than anybody else, and we are well content to give the very utmost value. Sir William offered the sale of it some five or six years ago, and it may be would part with it yet. I hear of late he hath richly married his son in Ireland, and stated this land upon him; but I doubt not but his son and his father-in-law will be well enough content to part with it, so there be money enough given, and as much other land in value stated upon his son. And to the end my letters may come with the more credit to Mr. Attorney's hands, though it be somewhat unmannerly, yet I shall pray your Lordship to receive them here enclosed, and to let one of your gentlemen deliver them to him.

^r [This was, probably, Thomas Bruce, Archdeacon of Raphoc. The nature of the cause here mentioned has not been ascertained.]

One word more for Croxton, and I have done. I hear from my Lord of Derry that my Lord Primate is not very well pleased with him, nor his manner of preaching. I am sorry if the young man hath given any just offence, but I hope he hath not; and I doubt this is some foolish business of Arminianism. I see that sin of his, in speaking freely in the Convocation †, will not be forgiven him; yet I hope your Lordship will not be brought to join in the punishment, but that you will give him the living which you intended to him. I see you can conceal your infirmities; for your brother tells me you are in the gout, but there's not a word of it in your letter. This 'tis to write with your fingers, and not with your toes; had you been to write with these, I should have heard some complaints, or discovered it by your manner of writing. I promise you, you can make haste, that can get the gout so soon; I thought you had been contented to stay till you had been nearer threescore first; 'tis no such lovely companion, and I know you would be glad to be rid of it. Well, now there's work for Dr. Williams^u, and I know, if he had not been so near you, you would have sent to me for my counsel, who have more skill in those things than you are aware of. And though he be there, I'll venture to prescribe to you. Take heed of applying any medicine to it that may beat it back, but draw it out into public as much as you can, and now while you have so good an advantage, follow it, use your power in both Houses, make an Act of Parliament against it; that if ever it comes to lay hold of you again, especially when you are so busy in the King's service, it shall incur your high displeasure, and be expelled the Castle, so soon as ever you can be rid of it, and not return again, under pain of being endured there against your will. Indeed I do much marvel how it durst venture upon you in a Parliament time, and do verily think, it would hardly have been so bold, had it not had the suffrages of some mutineers in the House. Well, † [Croxton, in his letter to Archbishop Laud, speaks of his opposing singlehanded the decree of Predestination which was obtruded on the

^u [Afterwards Sir Maurice Williams, Wentworth's physician.]

I pray, while you are wrapping of this foot of yours, commend me to the Master of the Rolls^x, or the Mistress rather, and let them enrol it, that the more you make of it, the longer it may continue to do you service. I hope now the sentence is passed in the Star-Chamber for the King^y, and that your Lordship is to take care of the Plantation, you will be sure to send it to Culmore; it will be an excellent thing to bestow upon some one of the warders there, for it will be sure to keep him within the Castle, and not suffer him to go a gadding to Coleraine, while he should guard the Castle. Well, I wish you health, and hope I shall hear of it in your next letters. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER CI.

TO THE BISHOPS OF HIS PROVINCE.

[Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. pp. 516, 517^x.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—It hath pleased his Majesty, out of his princely compassion towards the distressed estate of the Ministers of the Palatinate, to grant them his letters patents for a collection throughout this kingdom of the charitable contributions of well-minded people towards their relief; and though not many years past they have had some former collections in this kind, yet having lately suffered sundry calamities by the continual incursions of their enemies, they are now in very low and dangerous estate, and with the same fears attending. These are therefore heartily to pray your Lordship, that you will take care by some of your officers, that the Briefs, which are herewith sent you by his Majesty's command, be diligently dispersed into the several parishes within your diocese, and that the collection which shall be made thereupon be duly, carefully, and with all convenient speed returned to me, according to the tenor of his Majesty's said letters patents. Thus not doubting of your best assistance and furtherance in a work so pious and full of charity, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER CII.

TO JAMES USSHER, ARCHBISHOP OF ARMAGH.

[Parr's Life, Letter clxxxiv. pp. 476, 477.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I thank you heartily for your letters, and am as heartily glad that your Parliament and Convocation are so happily ended, especially for the Church; and that, both for the particular of your letting leases, which is for maintenance^a, and for the quiet, and well ordering and ending of the Book of Canons^b. I hope now the Church of Ireland will begin to flourish again, and that both with inward sufficiency and outward means to support it. And for your Canons, to speak truth, and with wonted liberty and freedom, though I cannot but think the English Canons entire (especially with some few amendments) would have done better; yet since you, and that Church, have thought otherwise, I do very easily submit to it, and you shall have my prayers that ^a [There were two Acts of Parliament passed in the last session, relating to the Church. The one limited the time for which leases might be granted by ecclesiastical persons, and the other permitted restitutions of impropriations, &c. to the Clergy. See Irish

Statutes, 10 and 11 Charles I. chap. 2 and 3.]

^b [See an account of the differences between the English and the Irish Canons, in Mant's History of the Irish Church, vol. i. pp. 495, seq.]

God would bless it. As for the particular about subscription, I think you have couched that well, since, as it seems, there was some necessity to carry that article closely. And God forbid you should, upon any occasion, have rolled back upon your former controversy about the Articles. For if you should have risen from this Convocation in heat, God knows when or how that Church would have cooled again, had the cause of difference been never so slight. By which means the Romanist, which is too strong a party already, would both have strengthened, and made a scorn of you. And therefore ye are much bound to God that in this nice and picked age you have ended all things canonically, and yet in peace. And I hope you will be all careful to continue and maintain that which God hath thus mercifully bestowed upon you.

I hope, if the Bishops be pleased to continue their good example and their care, all things will settle beyond expectation.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. p. 431.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am bold to trouble your Lordship with this short letter after the making up of the packet, and upon this occasion: the business about the Impropriations, by the King's gracious favour, and your Lordship's nobleness, is now in so fair a way^h, that I hope, ere long, by God's blessing, to see it fully settled; and I assure myself you will not vary from what you have formerly written. But I have lately understood of some practising on the Queen's side about portions of tithesⁱ, to keep them still alienated from the Church. I am bold to give your Lordship notice of this which I hear, that if there be any such thing, you would be pleased to make stay of it, till his Majesty's pleasure be further known, whose royal intendments I make no doubt are alike gracious touching the portions of tithes, as the im-

LETTER CVI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 438, 439.]

Salut. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have not much to write to your Lordship, and 'tis well I have not, for I never had so little leisure in my life, as I have had since I was a Commissioner of the Treasury^k, and so have still; yet I must find somewhat to write to you, that your Secretary may not go empty from me.

I will not offer to write any foreign news, because I assure myself you know as much as I do, and at home I know little, and inquire after less; yet, if you know it not already, let me tell you, that, as the last year there was money raised upon the ports, according to ancient precedent, for the setting out of the navy, which is now at sea, and there God bless it, so we are now going on to prepare for a greater navy against the next year; and because the charge will be too heavy to lay it upon the ports or maritime counties only, therefore his Majesty hath thought fit, a paritate rationis, and for the like defence of the kingdom, to extend it to all counties and corporations within England and Wales, that so the navy may be full, and yet the charge less, as coming from so many hands. I pray God bless this business, for if it go well the King will be a great master at sea, and in these active times we, by God's blessing, may be the more safe at land. But of this I shall write more to you as it proceeds^l.

^k [See Diary, March 14, 1634. Among the Treasury papers in the custody of the Master of the Rolls, is a record of the Archbishop's proceedings as Commissioner of the Treasury.]

^l [Hence arose the celebrated case of ship-money, which the majority of the judges decided against John Hampden.]

There's no speech here, but who shall be Lord Treasurer; and I would to God the King would name one, that our troublesome Commission were at an end; and yet I cannot be so ill a servant to my master and the public, as to wish an end to this Commission for my own ease, till the King resolve of a good one; for certainly such an one he will need, and perhaps more an honest than a cunning one^m. I would write more at large to you in this argument, were I at leisure for my own hand, which at present I am not; yet let me tell you, here is no speech at all for any but 29, 16, and 110ⁿ; but which of these will speed, I know not; if either of the former speed, they will be as empty in the place as cyphers; the third is able enough; but I would fain hear from your Lordship, how you think business would be carried by that hand. For what I think both in regard of King and Church, I have written to you already.

About a year since, your northern neighbour, Sir Arthur Ingram^o, took many occasions to apply himself to me, inso-much that Sir Edward Osborne^p, and some others, were doubtful of his getting too near within me, and I thank them, not without some fear (as I have heard) of my safety, in case I should admit him to any nearness. What danger is in the man, I do not know; but for any nearness with me, I shall give him leave to hurt me with it if he can. But here, I pray, let me ask you a question; I know you have known the man long. Do you not think him fit to be a Chancellor, if the party above figured be preferred? I promise you, we do here; and it is in many men's mouths, that it shall be so; the rather, because 'tis thought that Chancery is no court of conscience, as may be proved both by ancient and modern precedents. Two little circumstances I have of late observed concerning Sir Arthur, and they be pretty ones; the one is, that since the Lord Treasurer's^q death, by which he conceived the other way open, he never came at me; the

ⁿ [Knowler in his note on this place, states that this was Lord Cottington.]

^o [The son of the elder Sir Arthur Ingram, who purchased the manor of Temple Newsome, in Yorkshire, which made him a neighbour of Wentworth's.]

^p [He was Vice-President of the Council of the North, and on the breaking out of the Rebellion, was General of the King's forces in those parts. His son, Sir Thomas Osborne, was the first Duke of Leeds.]

other is, that I having interest in the Master of University College^r, and writing to him in your brother's behalf, that he might be tenant to the land given that College by Sir Simon Bennet^s, I know not by whose motion, but Sir Arthur was desired to write too, and, as I am informed, did so in your brother's behalf. But when the Master came to speak to his daughter^t, the Lady Bennet, she answered directly, that she intended it for a servant of her own. I doubt not but you can make English enough of this.

I have lately received a letter from Sir William Rives; there is nothing in it, but that he means to come into England this summer, or the next spring at furthest, and then give me satisfaction about the sale of his land to the College^u. I heartily pray your Lordship to excuse my not writing to Mr. Attorney, and to thank him for his love and care in that business; but if he hath no other occasion to bring him into England, he shall not need to stir for this, for that land of his is held in capite, and the College Mortmain makes them capable of no tenure but soccage, so we must look other, and may not think of that land.

So for this time I will cease to be further troublesome to you, but wish you all good success in the plantation of Connaught, where while you are, the King's express pleasure is, that you take consideration of this enclosed paper^x; it concerns a Lord of Scotland that is a tenant to the Londoners, but to tell you the truth, his name is too hard for my memory; and when you have considered it, the King would have you return me your answer, and then he will grant or deny, as you hold the thing and conditions fit. I leave your Lordship to the grace of God, and rest LETTER CVII.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 36.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD, My duty and service unto your Grace remembered,—Being to ride this visitation in person (if it shall please God to preserve me in any reasonable health), the rather for the advancing of some especial services which your Grace hath recommended unto my care, I beseech your Grace to give me leave to crave your Grace's opinion in some few particulars.

If peradventure your Grace hath already spent any thoughts upon them, and not otherwise either to give your Grace any offence, or create unto your Grace any molestation.

First, concerning the contribution to Paul's. If I find any brethren of the Clergy, that either have not given at all, or have given nothing to the purpose, willing to contribute annually, though in lesser sums, towards that repair, whether may I safely run that way without any disservice to that great work, or shall I call upon them to present their respects at one entire payment? I do conceive (under reformation) the former way in a poor Clergy will be more willingly entertained, and, at the last, make up a greater produce.

Secondly, in that most gracious intention of his Majesty, (for the which God Almighty ever bless him in this, and crown him, but after many years, with an accumulation of all happiness in the other life,) to better the poor vicarages of the kingdom with an augmentation of their compositions, which all Diocesans are supposed able to effect jure communi, and some of them jure particulari, by special pacts and reservations in the compositions themselves;—I humbly beg your Grace's advice in two points, being so cordially addicted to the service, that I would willingly spend the remainder of my life to bring it into any hope of perfection.

First, whether your Grace hath not heard from the lawyers, grounding themselves upon 32d Hen. VIII. c. 7, and some other statutes and judgments at common law, that the impropriations now, as they stand in England, to all intents and purposes, except only the recovery of their tithes, are translated (as it were) into lay fees or uses (as the statute terms them), and so put out of our cognisance in courts ecclesiastical; howbeit, I should conceive the statute cited to aim only at the conveyances and assurances in law of the said impropriations, but not at any transubstantiating (as it were) of their essence into another nature, than they were of in the Abbots' or the King's hands, from whence they were purchased or obtained by the subject. If your Grace have received any notes or directions in this particular that may be imparted, I will promise to improve them to the best of my poor endeavours for the advancement of the service.

The second point is of vicarages endowed upon such rectories as are possessed by Colleges, Bishops, Chapters, Prebendaries, and some other particular persons, who have but small rents reserved upon the same, the corps (and, consequently, the fat and the profits) being in the hands of lessees for long terms of lives or years. I humbly crave your Grace's direction, whence the Diocesan shall expect an increase for the Vicar's composition in this case? If he fall upon the lessors, he shall sink many Colleges, Bishoprics, Chapters, and (in a manner) all the Prebendaries of most Churches of the old foundation in this kingdom which are erected upon tithes. If upon the lessee, quere whether in this case he will be denied a prohibition? Also, it is very considerable, if it may please your Grace, what shall be done in that other case, which falls too too often in this diocese, where there is no vicarage endowed at all, but a bare and dry pension, and that of a miserable poor value, such as peradventure the religious house did allow to a member of their own, or to some poor secular priest, that for this service had his chamber and corrody at their convent. Is there any law whereby the Diocesan may help in such a case?

Another question, but of a meaner alloy, I presume to move unto your Grace; that is, whether your Grace doth conceive the Injunctions of the late Queen Elizabeth to be of any binding, but only of a teaching and directing, force in the present Church of England? I conceive the doubt lieth in this: first, whether they needed not a revival; and then, whether they obtained any such from the late King of famous memory? I do not trouble your Grace with this question for any fancy I have to all of them, but only that I found the Lord Chancellor, whom I served^y, much taken with two of the number. The one, that all Rectors or parsons of one 100*l.* a-year and upwards, should allow somewhat to maintain poor scholar in one of the Universities (which that Lord always, and I have sometimes, caused the King's presentees in that nature to do, giving them the nomination of their own scholars); and the other, that every non-resident who kept no house at all upon his benefice, should allow the fortieth part thereof unto the poor, which is a very small allotment, if we look into that collop which the ancient Councils do cut out as due unto the poor from every benefice ecclesiastical.

Lastly, I beg your Grace's leave to make not a complaint, for it is not of such a moment, but a representation only of one particular to your Grace. Your Grace knoweth well how things stand between Sir John Lambe and me at this time, though neither of us peradventure will confess himself in an error. I am informed from good hands, that no inhibitions have used to issue forth heretofore to stay proceedings in acts despatched by any Bishop in person, without first acquainting your Grace's predecessors; and I am sure I have continued thirteen years a Bishop, and in all that time I saw but one inhibition, which was deserted presently by the party who procured it. But, in the compass of this last year, I have been saluted with them sans nombre in matters of no moment or effect. If your Grace will be pleased to take notice thereof, whatsoever your Grace shall determine shall be acceptable unto me, who am by nature not very unwilling to be rid of businesses. And so, craving your Grace's pardon for this tedious paper, whereunto I expect no answer, but at your Grace's best leisure, I humbly take my leave, and beseeching God to bless your Grace with all happiness, do rest

Your Grace's most humble Servant and Suffragan, JO. LINCOLN.

LETTER CVIII.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 37.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I pray God bless you and speed you in your visitation, nothing doubting but your personal presence there will give good satisfaction to your Clergy, and be otherwise beneficial to the Church^z. For the particulars contained in your letters, though you are pleased to leave me free from giving any answers till I may have leisure, yet, because there is scarce any one of them which I have not in some measure thought on before, I am willing to strain upon my other occasions, and give your Lordship present answer, reserving my fuller answer to further consideration. And I do the rather give this answer present, that no opportunity may be lost in this your visitation.

And, first, concerning the contribution to St. Paul's Church. As I thank your Lordship heartily for the profession of your love and care to that great work^a, so I give you hereby to understand, that it was provided at the first, and hath been practised since in divers dioceses, that our brethren the Clergy might contribute by annual payments, which will be more ease for them, and all one for the work; and therefore I pray your Lordship to proceed in that way, being most agreeable also to your own judgment. Only I desire that a book may be kept, and one copy of it sent to the Chamber of London, according to which those annual payments may be demanded.

^a [See Hacket's Life of Williams, par. ii. p. 59.]

Secondly, we have all great reason to bless God and his Majesty, as your Lordship doth, for his care over the Church, and particularly for the bettering of the poor vicarages throughout the kingdom, according as by care and industry it may be effected. And your Lordship is very right, that the several Diocesans are supposed able to effect it jure communi; and, in some cases, that they have further power by reservations in the old compositions; neither doth his Majesty intend to proceed any other way than that. Upon this your Lordship is pleased to crave my advice in two points. First, whether the statute of Hen. VIII., which your Lordship mentions, or any other statutes and judgments at the common law, do so put these impropriations out of the cognisance of our courts ecclesiastical, as that the Bishop may not increase the Vicar's stipends where he finds just cause, as well as he might have done when those tithes were in the Abbeyes' or the King's hands? To this I have heretofore received different answers from some lawyers of good note; and though they, upon whose judgments I have most relied, were of opinion that these statutes did neither alter the nature of the tithes (which indeed is impossible for them to do), nor vacate the Bishop's power quoad hoc, (and this was Mr. Attorney Noy's judgment, with others'^b;) yet all my counsel here are of opinion, that the best way is not to have these last meddled withal. Your second point is, what course shall be held with vicarages endowed; whether an augmentation of them; and if so, whether to be laid upon the lessors, being Bishops, Colleges, Chapters, Prebendaries, &c., or upon the lessees? My Lord, in this case you do rightly observe, that the lessor's rent is small, and that the lessee goes away with almost all the profit; therefore, the course thought on is, that the lessors be desired, as leases determine and come within their power by renewing, to make addition to the several vicarages, endowed or not endowed, and charge it upon the lessee. And this, upon notice given, takes well; and I, for mine own part, God willing, shall carefully pursue it; and where the leases

^b [Noy was supported in his opinion by the Lord Keeper Coventry and Sir Henry Martin. Bishop Morton, who was anxious for the augmentation of

are in lives, or great number of years, there the Ordinary may proceed, and de jure communi lay the augmentation upon the lessee ratably to his profits above his rent, and with such moderation as he thinks fit. And so my Lord the Bishop of Salisbury did make an augmentation this very last year in the vicarage (as I remember) where Sir Francis Seymour^c dwells, who showed himself a very noble friend to the business. The lessees fled to the Common Pleas for help. There the prohibition was denied, and so was another prohibition not long before in the King's Bench. So we have gained two precedents in the strengthening of jus commune in the Ordinary. And all my counsel are of opinion, that this is the best way to go on and gather strength. But then I must tell your Lordship, that this augmentation made by the Bishop of Sarum was upon the corps of a Prebend, and upon such kind of lessees will be your Lordship's best beginning, and then we may go on to the laity after, if the law shall so far favour us in this very Christian cause; and for the poor stipendiaries, where there are no vicarages endowed, I am not so certainly informed what law there is for the Diocesan to make increase, but methinks, a paritate rationis, the Diocesan should have as much or more power here to preserve a poor Churchman in livelihood, where there is less allowance than any endowment makes. But for this your Lordship, when you come to any such particular, may advise further, and I shall give you all assistance that I may be able.

Thirdly, concerning the Injunctions of the Queen. I doubt they are hardly of a binding force. Most of the best of them are received in the Canons, though I confess there are some omitted of very good consequence, for which omission I could never yet receive any satisfactory answer by any of the Bishops which were then of the Convocation House; yet perhaps this omission is recompensed by the passing by of some others not so fit for a revival, and which had special reference to those times.

^c [Sir Francis Seymour was third son of Edward Lord Beauchamp, and younger brother of William Marquis of Hertford and Duke of Somerset. Sir Francis was created Lord Seymour of Trowbridge, Feb. 19, 1641.

He resided at Preshute near Marlborough, where he subsequently erected a mansion, now forming part of the buildings of Marlborough College. The sentence for the augmentation of Preshute Vicarage, is recorded in Bishop Davenant's Register, and bears date Sept. 23, 1634.]

For the two which your Lordship mentions, I shall give you one and the same answer to both. And truly, my Lord, though the Councils of old allow a larger portion to the poor^d than that which you mention out of one of these Injunctions^e, yet, both for that, and for the allowance to any poor scholars, which is the other, I do conceive, as the chargeableness of the times now are, and the many contributions by subsidies to shipping, and otherwise, which the Clergy in those ages and places felt not, and the great difference in housekeeping, between the diet and manner of living in those hotter countries and these of ours, that it will be best, till it shall please God better to furnish this Church with means, to leave the Clergy free masters of their own charity; for certainly, as the times now go, I cannot, for my part, hold it fit to impose upon the Clergy according to either of those Injunctions; and I hope, for the reasons given, your Lordship may be of my opinion.

For your Lordship's last passage concerning inhibitions, I am sure I have taken greater care than any Archbishop hath done these twice forty years, and particularly that no inhibition should issue out for acts despatched by any Bishop in person, without my knowledge. And I suspended three Proctors but this last term about that and such like disorders; and, therefore, if your Lordship have received any hard measure that way, it is more than I know, and I shall take the best care I can for prevention hereafter. Besides, at this very present, before I make a release of my visitation of the Arches, I am proceeding against all inconveniences of inhibitions as far as I can foresee them^f. And for Sir John Lambe, and his particular, if he hath done anything towards your Lordship otherwise than just and fair, he deceives my trust and weakens his own discretion; I shall speak with him about it at my next opportunity. In the meantime I pray

 and Brother.

LETTER CIX.

TO THE DUTCH AND WALLOON CONGREGATIONS AT NORWICH.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 406, 407.]

His Majesty was resolved, that his Injunctions shall hold, and that obedience shall be yielded to them by all the natives after the first descent, who might continue in their congregations, to the end the aliens might the better look to the education of their children, and that their several congregations might not be too much lessened at once; but that all of the second descent born here in England, and so termed, should resort to their several parish churches, whereat they dwell.

And thus I have given you answer fairly in all your particulars, and do expect all obedience and conformity to my Injunctions; which if you shall perform, the State will have occasion to see how ready you are to practise the obedience which you teach. And for my part, I doubt not, but yourselves, or your posterity at least, shall have cause to thank both the State and the Church for this care taken of you. But if you refuse, (as you have no cause to do, and I hope you will not,) I shall then proceed against the natives according to the laws and canons ecclesiastical. So hoping the best of yourselves, and your obedience, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

TO DR. ROBERT PINKE, WARDEN OF NEW COLLEGE.

S. in Christo.

SIR,—You cannot but know that I am in my visitation of Winchester College, where, though I have not been so well used as I might, yet I shall for some reasons pass by some carriages of the Warden^h, which otherwise I would not endure. And as occasion serves, you shall do very well to let him know, that immediately after your founder's death, that college was visited metropolitically by Thomas Arundel, my predecessor, during that vacancy, and by that power which he delegated into an inferior handⁱ. And this the Warden, at his late being in London, might have seen in my records, if it had pleased him to make any search. And this visitation, with others, was without tender of any protestation^k. Nevertheless, though his carriage hath been thus towards me, I shall not prejudice any act that is to be performed by yourself, or the Fellows of St. Mary New College in Oxon, towards that other society, be it election, visitation, or aught else which your statutes require^l. These are, therefore, to give you express leave and warrant to perform any or all the said acts, at your time, or times appointed. Provided that if you speed any act of visitation, or rather survey of that house, you do expressly mention therein this leave which I have given you during the continuance of my visitation, that they may not hereafter object this power of yours against mine and my successors'. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest LETTER CXI.

TO DR. JOHN MAXWELL, BISHOP OF ROSS.

[Baillie's Letters and Journals, Append. II, No. xii.^m]S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—My Lord Sterlingⁿ is not yet come; but I have acquainted his Majesty in what forwardness your Liturgy there is, and with what approbation it is like to come forth. And by the King's command I have sent for Yonge, the printer, the better to prepare him to make ready a black-letter letter, and to bethink himself to send to his servants at Edinburgh, that so, against the Lord Sterling's coming, all things might be in the better readiness, which is all the service I can do till his Lordship come.

I am very glad your Canons are also in so good a readiness; and that the true meaning of that one Canon remains still under the curtain^o. I hope you will take care that it may be fully printed and passed with the rest. 'Twill be of great use for the settling of that Church^p.

I thank you for your care of Dr. Wedderburne^q. He is very able to do service, and will certainly do it, if you can keep up his heart. I was in good hope he had been consecrated as well as my Lord of Brechin^r, but I perceive he is not; what the reason is [I know] not; but 'tis a thousand pities that those uncertainties abide with him. I pray [commend] my love to him, and tell him I would not have him stickle at anything, for the King will not leave him long at Dunblane, after he hath once settled the Chapel right, which I see will settle apace, if he keep his footing. My letters are gone to the Bishop of Aberdeen^s, by the King's command, to desert his protestation concerning the Chapel, [and] to leave the rents presently to Dr. Wedderburne; and 'twill not be long ere letters come from the King to take off the annats from the bishoprics; and Dr. Forbes^t, being the late Bishop's " executor, being a worthy man, may be better considered some other way. As for the annats of the ministers, the King is resolved not to touch them at all.

Concerning that which you mention about fitting of the Chapel, both with silver vessels and other ornaments, upon the sale now to be made of some stuff of the King's, I think my Lord of St. Andrews will very shortly receive a letter, under the King's hand, to give power for all that you desire; and then if you do not see the Chapel well furnished, the blame for ever be yours.

The Bishop of Brechin is come, and my Lord of St. Andrews hath written at large by [him], and I have given my Lord's Grace answer to all the particulars as well as I can. Indeed, my [Lord, I hold no]thing certain in Court till it be done; yet I have that affiance in my Lord Marquis^x, [that I am confi]dent, he will pass Arbroth, full and wholly, precinct and all; and [his Majesty is of the] same opinion with me. Therefore I hope that both my Lord of St. Andrews' fear [and yours is cause]less.

[The next passa]ge in your letter is only an expression of an apprehension which you [have for your over]throw; and that if they can bring you into disgrace with the King, [they will find easier passa]ge to damnify the Church. I pray trouble not yourself with these [conceits, but s]erve God and the King, and leave the rest to their protection. It may be such [a fear were] fitter for me; and, perhaps, I have juster cause of apprehensions, would I give way to [such thoughts.]

In the next passage you are more confident; hold you there, and let no man stagger [you in the ser]vice of God and the King. But whereas you write, that some which have promised, and [protested f]air to me, concerning the Church, have in all judicatures, since your last return, gone [against] the Church, I pray name them; for I am loth to mistake persons; and then I shall not [spare] to acquaint the King with what they do: and in the meantime, you have no cause to doubt, either the change of the King's countenance, or his giving full credit to any against the Church, till the Church be heard.

You need not fear anything in my Lord of Roxborough's business^y, for I do not believe the King will erect any other bishopric in haste. God bless him, and make him able to better those which are already, and stand in need of help. I do not hear of any alteration to the loss, or anything more about the Exchequer there; but should there be any, I have moved his Majesty that nothing be concluded till my Lord of St. Andrews' judgment be known, according as you desire. As for the instance you make, in the commuting of tithes, I read that also to the King: and you cannot but remember that the King hath said enough to you in that par[ticular. Let this] be enough.

My Lord, for the close of your letter, all that I can say is this, my assistance you shall have in all just and honourable ways for the Church; but the King is so gracious of himself, that you may be better able at any time to do your own business with him, than I am to do it for you, being not able to understand many difficulties of your businesses. Yet, considering my presence is here, where yours cannot always be, I shall be ever as ready to serve you as I have been, that is, to the utmost of my power. So wishing you all health and happiness, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

SIR,—These are on behalf of an honest man, and a good scholar. Mr. Osborn, being to give over his Fellowship, was with me at Lambeth, and, I thank him, freely proffered me the nomination of a scholar to succeed him in that place. Now, having seriously deliberated with myself touching this business, and being willing to recommend such an one to you as you might thank me for, I am resolv'd to pitch upon Mr. Jeremy Taylor, of whose abilities and sufficiencies every ways I have received very good assurance. And I do hereby heartily pray you to give him all furtherance by yourself and the Fellows at your next election, not doubting, but that he will approve himself a worthy and learned member of that society. And though he hath had his breeding, for the most part, in the other University^b, yet I hope that shall be no prejudice to him, in regard he is incorporated into Oxford, ut sit eodem gradu et ordine, etc., and admitted into University College. Neither can I learn that there is anything in your local statutes against it. I doubt not but you will use him with so fair respects, as befits a man of his rank and learning, for which I shall give you thanks. So I leave him to your kindness, and rest

TO JOHN SPOTTISWOOD, ARCHBISHOP OF ST. ANDREWS.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 150, 151.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—For the particulars entrusted by the Church to the Lord Bishop of Brechin, and namely about the Abbacy of Lindores^c, you must expect them from the Lord Bishop himself, and from such relations as you will receive by my Lord, and the Earl of Traquair^d. Now at this time you shall receive nothing, but that which is commanded me by the King, and must be my part to act in the present and future business for the Church of Scotland.

My Lord, for the present the King is resolved, upon some great reasons of state which have prevailed with him, not to meddle with the Abbacy of Lindores, or any other of that nature, as yet, but to leave them in that state in which they now are, till such time as he may consider the Decrees, and the Act, or Acts, of Parliament which concern them, and till he can find a way to order them better, both for his own profit, and the contentment of his people there; assuring you in the meantime, that both in this and all other business, he will be very careful, both of the credit, and of the maintenance of the Church; whereof, if yourself, or any other bishop or clergymen, shall make doubt, I am commanded to tell you, that therein you will not only do his Majesty wrong, but hurt yourselves, and the Church which you seek to benefit. And in this very particular you are to know, and make known to others, that it is not the dislike of any person or persons, or of the thing itself, that causes this present stay, but reason of state only, and the care which the King hath, that all proceedings may go on according to law. As for the bishoprics, his Majesty will take their wants into as provident care as he can, and hath settled Arbroth upon the Bishopric of Brechin, but in what form I am not able to tell you, as not being so well acquainted with the customs and constitutions of that kingdom ; and, therefore, lest I should mistake in any circumstance, I leave that wholly to the Bishop's own relation.

For all the business of that Church in future, which must come to the Exchequer, or any other public audience, or any other business that may reflect upon the Church, or anything that belongs to the King's service, in which Churchmen are trusted, you are immutably to hold this rule, and that by his Majesty's strict and most special command ; namely, that yourself, or the Lord Ross, or both of you together, do privately acquaint the Earl of Traquair with it, before it be proposed in public, either at the Council-table, or the Exchequer, or elsewhere ; and the Earl hath assumed to the King in my presence, that he will strictly observe and hold the same correspondency and course with you ; and further, that he will very readily and faithfully do all good offices for the Church, that come within his power, according to all such commands as he shall receive, either immediately from the King, or otherwise by direction of his Majesty from myself. And if at any time your Lordships, and my Lord Traquair, shall upon any of the aforementioned businesses so differ in judgment, that you cannot accord it among yourselves, let it rest, and write up either to his Majesty or to myself, to move his Majesty for further direction, which once received you are all to obey. That so this little unhappy difference, which lately arose about Lindores, may be laid asleep ; and that no other may hereafter rise up in the place of it, to disturb either the King's or the Church's service, or disorder any of yourselves, who are known to be such careful and discreet servants to both. And to the end this may go on with better success, his Majesty precisely commands, that this mutual relation between the Earl of Traquair and you be kept very secret, and made known to no other person, either clergy or lay ; for the divulging of these things cannot but breed jealousies amongst men, and disservices in regard of the things themselves. And therefore the King bids me tell you, that he shall take it very ill at his hand, whoever he be, that shall not strictly observe these his directions. This is all which I had in command to deliver to you, and I shall not mingle with it any particulars of my own ; therefore, wishing you all health and happiness and good speed in your great affairs, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CXIV.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 479, 480.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Your letters to me are very large, and what with an indisposition by wind in my body, and the multitude of pressing occasions, I have yet had no leisure at all so much as to read them. But your letters, which came with mine to his Majesty^e, I had the happiness to deliver to his gracious hands, within one hour after I received them. His Majesty was pleased to read them over, though to himself, yet while I was present. I humbly besought him, that since no other letters were at this return come to Mr. Secretary's, he would be graciously pleased to say nothing of these; and that such answer as he thought in wisdom fit to send, his Majesty would be pleased to entrust to me. Hereupon the King was pleased to tell me, he would write himself, and send it by me. So I am heartily glad you shall now receive his Majesty's resolution under his own hand, to which I know your Lordship will conform yourself (as 'tis most fit you should) in all things. For I find his Majesty very careful that the Church should have all her own restored to her, and that the Earl^f be fined answerable to that, which upon publication his cause shall merit; and that the ordering of this shall be by your Lordship, and your experience upon the place, and of the fact. All that I can perceive is earnestly desired, is the declining of a public sentence, and saving of the Earl, for his place and alliance sake, from the stain, which a sentence would leave upon record both on himself and his posterity; which, when you have taken into serious consideration, I leave to your wisdom.

* [See Strafforde Letters, vol. i. pp. 477, 478.]

My Lord, I am the bolder to write this last line to you, upon a late accident, which I have very casually discovered in Court. I find that, notwithstanding all your great services in Ireland, which are most graciously accepted by the King, you want not them which whisper, and perhaps speak louder where they think they may, against your proceedings in Ireland, as being over-full of personal prosecutions against men of quality; and they stick not to instance in St. Albans^s, the Lord Wilmot^h, and this Earl. And this is somewhat loudly spoken by some on the Queen's side. And although I know a great part of this proceeds from your wise and noble proceedings against the Romish party in that kingdom, yet that shall never be made the cause in public, but advantages taken, such as they can, from these and the like particulars to blast you and your honour, if they be able to do it. I know you have a great deal more resolution in you, than to decline any service due to the King, State, or Church, for the barking of discontented persons; and God forbid but you should. And yet, my Lord, if you could find a way to do all these great services, and decline these storms, I think it would be excellent well thought on. I heartily pray your Lordship to pardon me this freedom, which I brought with me into your friendship, and which (though sometimes to my own hurt) I have used with all the friends I have; for I profess I write this to you out of a great deal of sense what clamorous reports may work in time, though I am most confident they cannot wrong you with the King our master, who looks upon the services which are done him, with his own eyes, and not through other men's reports.

My Lord, in this particular, I leave you to follow his Majesty's own directions, which I presume are such, as shall always preserve your honour in the great place you bear

MY LORD,—When the King delivered me this inclosed, I took occasion to show him your duplicate of your answer to the two Lords Chamberlainⁱ, and Salisbury^k, wherein is mention of the Lord Clifford's^l judgment concerning the Earl of Cork's coming over; whereupon his Majesty commanded me to add thus much more to my letters, namely:—

That notwithstanding these his letters, if the Lord Clifford do change the Lords' minds, that they desire not the Earl of Cork's coming, then the King is satisfied, and your Lordship may go on.

As also, if he do not make a clear submission, then your Lordship is not to suffer him to come; but, if he do this, and make full restitution to the Church, and submit to such fine as you shall proportion, then his Majesty is willing so far to gratify these two Lords, as that he would have leave given him to come over, as these his letters express.

These in great haste, my Lord; but I do solemnly protest to you, I have not yet had leisure to read half your letters to me, though this day they have been a full week in my hands, therefore you must not look for an answer suddenly. In the meantime take this: Cottington is bringing off the Bishop of Lincoln, which certainly, among other good causes and considerations him thereunto moving, is to do me a great kindness, for he knows he loves me heartily.

I have not been able to take a copy of these letters myself, and I did not think them fit to be trusted to any servant.

LETTER CXV.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, p. 152.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have but one thing at this present to trouble you with, but that hath much displeased the King, and not without very just cause; for now while the King is settling that Church against all things that were defective in it, and against the continuance of all unwarrantable customs unknown to, or opposed by the ancient Church of Christ, the new Bishop of Aberdeen^m hath given way to, and allowed a public fast throughout his diocese to be kept upon the Lord's day, contrary to the rules of Christianity, and all the ancient Canons of the Churchⁿ. I was in good hope that Church had quite laid down that ill custom; but since it appears the new Bishop of Aberdeen hath continued it, and perhaps others may follow his example, if this pass without a check; therefore his Majesty's express will and command to your Grace is, That you and my Lord Glasgow^o take order with all the Bishops in your several provinces respectively, that no man presume to command, or suffer, any fast to be upon that day, or, indeed, any public fast upon any other day, without the special leave and command of the King, to whose power it belongs, and not to them. And further, his Majesty's will and pleasure is, that if the Canons be not already printed, (as I presume they are not,) that you make a Canon purposely against this unworthy custom^p, and see it printed with the rest; and that you write a short letter to the Bishop of Aberdeen, to let him understand how he hath overshot himself; which letter you may send together with these of mine, if you so

S. in Christo.

SIR,—I have considered of the letters which you sent me, and I should have been altogether to seek what to do for your treasury, or for yourselves, out of this year's allowance, had not Dr. Sheldon⁹, who brought me your letters, been able to tell me in what state your tower and treasury is, for that is not so much as mentioned in your letters, but he acquainted me with it, and I am reasonably well satisfied. In hope, therefore, that both yourself and your Fellows will be careful to treasure up and increase the honour of your worthy Founder, and of your society, by all studious and sober carriage, and particularly by your observance of those things which not long since I writ unto you, I am very well content to allow to yourself and your Fellows a full livery for this present year, which is two hundred fifty-four pounds ten shillings. And the surplusage which remains, I would have you put into the tower, towards the increasing of your stock; which, were it more than it is, you may perhaps find means enough to spend it, though not presently. I am sorry to hear that your weakness

Strena sunt literæ hæ, vir clarissime, quam calendis hisce Januariis mitto more et fide antiquis. Tres, ni fallor, apud me sunt literæ tuæ et omnes gratissimæ, pro tribus unam reddat vel ipsa inurbanitas. Nec tamen inurbanitas adeo me gravat, quam negotium; nec tam illam affecto, quam hoc premor. Veniam dabit, scio, humanitas tua singularis amico nimium extra se viventi.

LETTER CXVIII.

TO SIR KENELM DIGBY ^d.

[Laud's History, &c., vol. i. pp. 610—616.]

Salutem in Christo.

WORTHY SIR,—I am sorry for all the contents of your letter, save that which expresses your love to me. And I was not a little troubled at the very first words of it. For you begin, that my Lord Ambassador ^e told you, I was not pleased to hear you had made a defection from the Church of England ^f. 'Tis most true, I was informed so; and thereupon I writ to my Lord Ambassador, to know what he heard of it there. But 'tis true likewise, that I writ to yourself; and Mr. Secretary Coke sent my letters very carefully. Now seeing your letters mentioned my Lord Ambassador's speech with you, without any notice taken of my writing; I could not but fear these letters of mine came not to your

^d [Sir Kenelm, the son of Sir Everard Digby, who was executed for his share in the Gunpowder Plot, had been reclaimed when quite young from the Church of Rome; by Laud's influence, as is stated in the Biographia Britannica, though Laud himself does not say anything of the kind. He was educated under Thomas Allen, in Gloucester Hall, and was knighted on his return from Spain with Prince Charles. His life is given at some length in the Biogr. Britann.]

^f [It appears from a letter of James Howell to Lord Wentworth, that Sir K. Digby had joined the Church of Rome prior to Oct. 22, 1635. (Stratford Letters, vol. i. p. 474.)] hands. Out of this fear your second letters took me; for they acknowledged the receipt of mine, and your kind acceptance of them. Had they miscarried, I should have held it a great misfortune. For you must needs have condemned me deeply in your own thoughts, if in such a near and tender business, I should have solicited my Lord Ambassador, and not written to yourself.

In the next place, I thank you, and take it for a great testimony of your love to me, that you have been pleased to give me so open and clear account of your proceedings with yourself in this matter of religion. In which as I cannot but commend the strict reckoning, to which you have called yourself; so I could have wished, before you had absolutely settled the foot of that account, you would have called in some friend, and made use of his eye as a by-stander, who oftentimes sees more than he that plays the game. You write, I confess, that after you had fallen upon these troublesome thoughts, you were nigh two years in the diligent discussion of this matter; and that you omitted no industry, either of conversing with learned men, or of reading the best authors, to beget in you a right intelligence of this subject. I believe all this, and you did wisely to do it. But I have some questions, out of the freedom of a friend, to ask about it. Were not all the learned men, you conversed with for this particular, of the Roman party? Were not the best authors, you mention, of the same side? If both men and authors were the same way, can they beget any righter intelligence in you, than is in themselves? If they were men and authors on both sides, with whom you conversed, why was I (whom you are pleased to style one of your best friends) omitted? True, it may be, you could not reckon me among those learned men and able for direction, with whom you conversed: suppose that; yet yourself accounts me among your friends. And is it not many times as useful, when thoughts are distracted, to make use of the freedom and openness of a friend not altogether ignorant, as of those which are thought more learned; but not so free, nor perhaps so indifferent?

‘But the result,’ you say, ‘that first began to settle you, was that you discerned by this your diligent conversation, and studious reading, that there were great mistakings on both sides, and that passion and affection to a party transported too many of those that entered into the lists in this quarrel.' Suppose this also to be true, I am heartily sorry, and have been ever since I was of any understanding in matters of religion, to hear of sides in the Church. And I make no doubt, but 'twill one day fall heavy upon all, that wilfully make, or purposely continue sidings in that body. But, when sides are made and continued, remember you confess there are great mistakings on both sides. And how then can you go from one side to the other, but you must go from one great mistaking to another? And if so, then by changing the side, you do but change the mistaking, not quit yourself from mistakes. And if you do quit yourself from them, by God's goodness, and your own strength; yet why might not that have been done, without changing the side; since mistakes are on both sides? As for the passion and transportation of many that enter the lists in this quarrel, I am sure you mean not to make their passion your guide; for that would make you mistake indeed. And why then should their passion work upon your judgment? especially, since the passion, as well as the mistakes, are confessed to be on both sides.

After this follows the main part of your letters, and that which principally resolved you to enter again the communion of the Church of Rome, in which you had been born and bred, against that semblance of good reason, which formerly had made you adhere to the Church of England.

And first you say, 'You now perceive that you may preserve yourself in that Church, without having your belief bound up in several particulars, the dislike whereof had been a motive to you to free yourself from the jurisdiction which you conceived did impose them.' 'Tis true, all Churches leave some particulars free. But doth that Church leave you free to believe, or not believe, anything determined by it? And did not your former dislike arise from some things determined in and by that Church? And if so, what freedom see you now, that you saw not then? And you cannot well say, that your dislike arose from anything not determined; for in those, the jurisdiction of that Church imposes not.

You add, 'That your greatest difficulties were solved, when you could distinguish between the opinions of some new men raised upon wrested inferences, and the plain and solid articles of faith delivered at the first.' Why, but I cannot but be confident you could distinguish these long since, and long before you joined yourself to the Church of England. And that therefore your greatest difficulties (if these were they) were as fully and fairly solved then, as now they are, or can be. Besides, if by these plain and solid articles you mean none but the Creed (and certainly no other were delivered at the first), you seem to intimate, by comparing this and the former passage, that so you believe these plain and first articles, you may preserve yourself in that Church from having your belief bound up to other particulars; which I think few will believe besides yourself, if you can believe it. And the opinions of new men, and the wrested inferences upon these, are some of those great mistakes which you say are on both sides, and therefore needed not to have caused your change.

To these first articles you say, 'The Church in no succeeding age hath power to add (as such) the least tittle of new doctrine.' Be it so; and I believe it heartily (not as such), especially if you mean the articles of the Creed. But yet if that Church do maintain, that all her decisions in a General Council are articles Fidei Catholicæ; and that all Christians are bound to believe all and every of them, eadem fide, qua Fidei articulos; and that he is an heretic which believes them not all: where is then your freedom, or your not being bound up in several particulars? And if you reply, you dislike no determination which that Church hath made; then why did you formerly leave it, to free yourself from that jurisdiction that you conceived imposed them? For if the things which troubled you were particulars not determined, they were not imposed upon your belief. And if they were determined, and so imposed; how are you now set free more than then?

You say again, 'You see now, that to be a Catholic, doth not deprive them of the forenamed liberty, who have abilities to examine the things you formerly stuck at, and drive them up to their first principles.' But first then, what shall become of their liberty, who are not able to examine; shall they enthrall their consciences? Next, what shall secure them, who think themselves, and are perhaps thought by others, able to examine, yet indeed are not? Thirdly, what assurance is there in cases not demonstrable (as few things in religion are), that they which are able to examine, have either no affection to blind their judgment, or may not mistake themselves and their way, in driving a doubtful point to its first principles? Lastly, how much doth this differ from leaning upon a private spirit; so much cried out against by that side, when men, under pretence of their ability, shall examine the tenets of the Church, and assume a liberty to themselves, under a colour of not being bound?

But, you say, 'This is not the breaking of any obligation that Church lays upon you; but only an exact understanding of the just and utmost obligations that side ties men to.' I must here question again: for first, what shall become of their freedom, that cannot reach to this exact understanding? And next, do not you make yourself, as a private man, judge of the Church's obligations upon you? And is it not as great an usurpation upon the Church's power and right, to be judge of her obligations, as of her tenets? For if the points be left free, there's no obligation: nor can you, or need any other, have any scruple. But if the points be binding by the predetermination of the Church; can you any way be judge of her obligation, but you must be judge also of the point to which she obliges? Now, I think, that Church will hardly give liberty to any private man to be so far her judge, since she scarce allows so much to any, as judicium discretionis, in things determined by her.

These utmost obligations, to which that side ties men, you believe many men (and not of the meanest note) pass over in gross, without ever thoroughly entering into the due consideration thereof. And truly I believe so too, that among too many men on both sides, neither the points, nor the obligations to them, are weighed as they ought. But that's no warrant (pardon my freedom) that yourself hath considered them in all circumstances; or that you have considered them better now, than you did before, when the dislike of that imposing jurisdiction was your first motive to free yourself from it, by joining to the Church of England.

And whereas you say, 'That you have returned into that communion, who from your birth had right of possession in you, and therefore ought to continue it, unless clear and evident proof (which you say surely cannot be found) should have evicted you from it:’ truly, Sir, I think this had been spoken with more advantage to you and your cause, before your adhering to the Church of England, than now; for then right of possession could not have been thought little. But now since you deserted that communion, either you did it upon clear and evident proof, or upon apparent only. If you did it then upon clear and evident proof, why say you now no such can be found? If you did it but upon apparent and seeming proof (a semblance of very good reason, as yourself calls it), why did you then come off from that communion, till your proof were clear and evident? And why may not that, which now seems clear and evident, be but apparent, as well as that which then seemed clear unto you, be but semblance now? Nor would I have you say, that clear and evident proof cannot be found for a man, in this case of religion, to forego the communion which had right of possession in him from his birth: for the proposition is an universal negative, and of hard proof. And therefore though I think I know you and your judgment so well, that I may not without manifest wrong charge you, that you did in this great action, and so nearly concerning you, ad pauca respicere, which our great master tells us [‡] breeds facile and easy, rather than safe and warrantable determinations; yet it will lie upon you not only in honour without, but also in conscience within, to be able to assure yourself, that you did ad plurima, if not ad omnia respicere. The thing being so weighty in itself, and the miserable division of Christendom (never sufficiently to be lamented) making the doubt so great, that you who have been on both sides, must needs lie under the dispute of both sides, whether this last act of yours be not in you rather a relapse into a former sickness, than a recovery from a former fall.

But against this, ‘The temper of your mind (you say) arms you against all censures, no slight air of reputation being able to move you.’ In this, I must needs say, you are happy: for he that can be moved from himself by the changeable breath of men, lives more out of, than in himself; and (which is a misery beyond all expression) must in all doubts go to other men for resolution, not to himself; as if he had no soul within him. But yet post conscientiam fama. And though I would not desire to live by reputation; yet would I leave no good means untried, rather than live without it. And how far you have brought yourself in question, which of these two, conscience or reputation, you have shaken by this double change, I leave yourself to judge; because you say your first was with a semblance of very good reason. And though you say again, 'That it now appears you were then misled;' yet you will have much ado to make the world think so.

The way you took in concealing this your resolution of returning into that communion, and the reasons which you give why you so privately carried it here, I cannot but approve. They are full of all ingenuity, tender and civil respects, fitted to avoid discontent in your friends, and scandal that might be taken by others, or contumely that might be returned upon yourself. And as are these reasons, so is the whole frame of your letter (setting aside that I cannot concur in judgment) full of discretion and temper, and so like yourself, that I cannot but love even that which I dislike in it. And though I shall never be other than I have been to the worth of Sir Kenelm Digby; yet most heartily sorry I am, that a man whose discourse did so much content me, should thus slide away from me, before I had so much as suspicion to awaken me, and suggest that he was going. Had you put me into a dispensation, and communicated your thoughts to me before they had grown up into resolutions, I am a priest, and would have put on what secrecy you should have commanded. A little knowledge I have (God knows a little), I would have ventured it with you in that serious debate you have had with yourself. I have ever honoured you, since I knew your worth, and I would have done all offices of a friend to keep you nearer than now you are. But since you are gone, and settled another way, before you would let me know it, I know not now what to say to a man of judgment, and so resolved: for to what end should I treat, when a resolution is set already? So set, as that you say no clear and evident proof can be found against it: nor can I tell how to press such a man as you to ring the changes in religion. In your power it was not to change; in mine it is not to make you change again. Therefore to the moderation of your own heart, under the grace of God, I must and do now leave you for matter of religion; but retaining still with me, and entirely, all the love and friendliness which your worth won from me; well knowing, that all differences in opinion shake not the foundations of religion.

Now to your postscript, and then I have done. That I am the first, and the only person to whom you have written thus freely: I thank you heartily for it. For I cannot conceive anything thereby, but your great respect to me, which hath abundantly spread itself all over your letter. And had you written this to me, with a restraint of making it further known, I should have performed that trust. But since you have submitted it to me, what further knowledge of it I shall think fit to give to any other person; I have, as I took myself bound, acquainted his Majesty with it, who gave a great deal of very good expression concerning you, and is not a little sorry to lose the service of so able a subject. I have likewise made it known in private to Mr. Secretary Coke, who was as confident of you as myself. I could hardly believe your own letters, and he as hardly my relation. To my secretary I must needs trust it, having not time to write it again out of my scribbled copy; but I dare trust the secrecy in which I have bound him. To others I am silent, and shall so continue, till the thing open itself; and I shall do it out of reasons, very like to those which you give, why yourself would not divulge it here. In the last place, you promise yourself, 'That the condition you are in will not hinder me from continuing to be the best friend you have.' To this I can say no more, than that I could never arrogate to myself to be your best friend; but a poor, yet respective friend of yours I have been, ever since I knew you: and it is not your change that can change me, who never yet left, but where I was first forsaken; and not always there. So praying for God's blessing upon you, and in that way which He knows most necessary for you, I rest

Your very loving Friend to serve you in Domino.

Lambeth, March 27, 1636.

I have writ this letter freely; I shall look upon all the trust that ever you mean to carry with me, that you show it not, nor deliver any copy to any man. Nor will I look for any answer to the queries I have herein made. If they do you any good, I am glad; if not, yet I have satisfied myself. But leisure I have none to write such letters; nor will I entertain a quarrel in this wrangling age, and now my strength is past. For all things of moment in this letter, I have pregnant places in the Council of Trent, Thomas, Bellarmin, Stapleton, Valentia, &c. But I did not mean to make a volume of a letter.

Endorsed thus with the Archbishop's own hand :—

TO JAMES WEDDERBURNE, BISHOP OF DUNBLANE ^h.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 152—154.]

I have received other letters from you, by which I find you have written to his Majesty about the communion in the Chapel Royal, concerning which the King holds his former resolution, that he would be very glad there should be a full communion at all solemn times as is appointed ^l. But because men do not always fit themselves as they ought for that great and holy work, therefore his Majesty will be satisfied, if every one that is required to communicate there, do solemnly and conformably perform that action once a year at least. And in conformity to this you are to signify once a year unto his sacred Majesty, who have communicated within the compass of that year, and who not; and of this you must not fail.

By these last letters of yours, I find that you are consecrated. God give you joy. And whereas you desire a copy of our Book of Ordination, I have here sent you one. And

^l [See the King's directions dated Oct. 8, 1633. Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 148, 149.]

I have acquainted his Majesty with the two great reasons that you gave, why the book which you had in King James's time is short and insufficient. (1.) As first, that the Order of Deacons is made but as a lay office, at least as that book may be understood. (2.) And secondly, that in the admission to Priesthood, the very essential words of conferring Orders are left out. At which his Majesty was much troubled, as he had great cause, and concerning which he hath commanded me to write, that either you do admit of our Book of Ordination, or else that you amend your own in these two gross oversights, or anything else, if in more it be to be corrected, and then see the book reprinted. I pray fail not to acquaint my Lord of Saint Andrewes and my Lord Ross with this express command of his Majesty.

I received likewise from you, at the same time, certain notes to be considered of, that all, or at least so many of them as his Majesty should approve, might be made use of in your Liturgy, which is now in printing. And though my business hath of late lain very heavy upon me, yet I presently acquainted his Majesty with what you had written. After this I, and Bishop Wren, (my Lord Treasurer^k being now otherwise busied,) by his Majesty's appointment sat down seriously, and considered of them all; and then I tendered them again to the King, with our animadversions upon them, and his Majesty had the patience to weigh and consider them all again. This done, so many of them as his Majesty approved, I have written into a Service Book of ours, and sent you the book with his Majesty's hand to it, to warrant all your alterations made therein^l. So in the printing of your Liturgy you are to follow the book which my Lord Ross brought, and the additions which are made to the book I now send. But if you find the book of my Lord Ross's, and this, to differ in anything that is material, there you are to follow this later book I now send, as expressing some things more fully.

And now that your Lordship sees all of your animadversions, which the King approved, written into this book, I shall not need to write largely to you, what the reasons were, why all of yours were not admitted; for your judgment and modesty is such, that you will easily conceive some reason was apprehended for it. Yet because it is necessary, that you know somewhat more distinctly, I shall here give you a particular account of some things which are of most moment, and which otherwise perhaps might breed a doubtfulness in you.

^k [Bishop Juxon.]

And first, I thought you could not have doubted, but that the Magnificat, &c. was to be printed according to the translation of King James, for that was named once for all. And that translation is to be followed in the Epistles and Gospels, as well as in the Psalms. Where I pray observe in the title-page of the Psalms, in the book I now send, an alteration which I think my Lord Ross's book had not. And if you have not printed those Psalms with a colon in the middle of every verse, as it is with ours ordinarily in the English, it is impossible those Psalms should ever be well sung to the organ. And if this error be run into, it must be mended by a painful way, by a pen for all such books as the Chapel Royal useth, and then by one of them the next impression of your Liturgy may be mended wholly.

Secondly, in the Creed of Saint Athanasius, we can agree to no more emendations, no, not according to our best Greek copies, than you shall find amended in this book.

Thirdly, though the Bishops there were willed to consider of the Holy Days, yet it was never intended, but that the office appointed for every of them should be kept in the Liturgy, and the consideration was only to be of the observation of them.

Fourthly, for the Sentences at the Offertory. We admit of all yours, but we think withal that divers which are in our book would be retained together with yours. As, namely, the 2d, 4th, 6th, 7th, 8th; 9th, 10th, 13th, 14th, 15th.

Fifthly, I would have every prayer or other action through the whole Communion named in the rubric before it, that it may be known to the people what it is, as I have begun to do in the Prayer of Consecration, and in the Memorial, or Prayer of Oblation. Fac similiter.

Sixthly, we do fully approve the Collect of Consecration and Oblation should precede, and the Lord's Prayer follow next, and be said before the Communion, in that order which you have expressed. But for the Invitation, Confession, Absolution, Sentences, Preface, and Doxology, we think they stand best as they are now placed in our Liturgy; and as for the Prayer of humble access to the Holy Communion, that will stand very well next before the participation.

Seventhly, I have ordered a rubric in the margin of this book, according as you desire, to direct him that celebrates, when to take the sacrament into his hand. Namely, to take, and break, and lay hands on the chalice, as he speaks the words. For certainly the practice of the Church of England therein is very right. And for the objection, that we should not do it, till we express our warrant so to do, which you conceive is in these words, 'Do this,' &c.; I answer, first, that those words, 'Do this,' &c., are rather our warrant for the participation, or communication, than the consecration. Secondly, that our repeating what Christ did is our warrant to do the same, being thereto commanded. Thirdly, that the whole action is actus continuus, and therefore though in our saying, 'Do this' follows after, yet it doth, and must be intended to that which we did before, and comes last to seal and confirm our warrant for doing so. And so 'tis in the other sacrament of Baptism, where we take the child first, and baptize it, and then afterwards we say, 'We receive this child,' &c.; which in actu continuo must needs relate to the preceding act, for the child was actually received into the Church by the very act of baptism itself. And this is but our declaration of that reception.

And whereas you write, that much more might have been done, if the times would have borne it, I make no doubt, but there might have been a fuller addition. But God be thanked this will do very well, and I hope breed up a great deal of devout and religious piety in that kingdom. Yet I pray, for my further satisfaction, at your best leisure draw up all those particulars, which you think might make the Liturgy perfect, whether the times will bear them, or not. And send them safe to me, and I will not fail to give you my judgment of them, and perhaps put some of them to further use, at least in my own particular.

One thing more, and then I have done. In his Majesty's authorizing of the notes in this book prefixed at the beginning of it, though he leave a liberty to my Lord the Archbishop of St. Andrewes, and brethren the Bishops who are upon the place, upon apparent reason to vary some things; yet you must know, and inform them, that his Majesty having viewed all these additions, hopes there will be no need of change of anything, and will be best pleased with little or rather no alteration. So wishing all prosperity to that Church, and a happy finishing of your Liturgy, and health to my brethren the Bishops, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother,

LETTER CXX.

TO WILLIAM KINGSLEY, ARCHDEACON OF CANTERBURY.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 92, 93.]

S. in Christo.

SIR,—Your letters of April 13 I have received, and I thank you for your care and pains in visiting the churches of your archdeaconry within the city of Canterbury, in which I have often heard there are some things amiss, and find by your report that the information given me was true. And because you certify me of some things of greater moment than ordinary, I thought it very fit to acquaint his Majesty with all the contents of your letter, and did so. By which means I shall with more freedom give you the fuller answer to the three particulars mentioned by you^m.

For the first, which is the raising of galleries and seats from the ground three or four ascents, his Majesty hath commanded me to write unto you, that they be taken down, and the seats left orderly in the church. But you are to take care to acquaint the minister and churchwardens with it, and to see it done in a fair and peaceable manner. The like course you are to take with the second, for it is no way fit that any monument whatsoever should be set up at the east end of the chancel, thereby standing equal at least, if not above the communion-table, and fit for nothing but to cast it out of its proper place. Therefore if any such be in any church within your jurisdiction, you are to speak with them that are next of kin, or whom such monuments may most concern: and if they will remove them, and set them up in any other place, on the sides of the church, you are to give them leave so to do; but if they will not, you are then to take them down in an orderly way, and not to suffer any to stand at the east end of the chancel.

Your third business is of greater consequence. It is, that there is another monument in St. George's Church, in which there is described in capital letters the Gunpowder Treason, with this motto, In perpetuam Papistarum infamiam, etc. I hope this stands not at the east end of the chancel, for if it do, you must see it removed to some other place; but if it stand upon any side of either chancel or church, then you are, with the knowledge of the minister and the churchwardens, or any other whom that monument may concern, to take some painter to you, and cause him to put out of the monument all that concerns the Fleet in '88, because that belongs to a foreign nation. And though your letters make no mention of '88, yet the picture of the monument, which you sent me up, doth, which I showed his Majesty, as well as your letter. So having here given you a clear direction in all your three particulars, I shall expect your care in the execution of them according to it. So I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your very loving Friend,

LETTER CXXI.

TO THE WARDEN AND FELLOWS OF MERTON COLLEGE.

[Reg. Laud, fol. 245 a.]

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations,—I have been moved in the behalf of one Henry Jacobⁿ, chosen some years since into your College, and admitted into his year of probation (but by discontinuance from the College disabled for further admittance into your fellowship in the ordinary way), and informed that against this incapacity which he hath contracted by his absence, and by his not proceeding in the usual course of studies and discipline, there may be opposed an equivalent capacity, grounded upon a fundamental statute of your College^o, which requires that there shall always be in your Society grammaticus unus, qui studio grammatico totaliter vacet, hereupon I have considered of that statute, and, upon mature deliberation, conceive the intention of your founder in that statute to have been, that besides those which were to be trained up in a course of philosophy, there should be one who wholly should intend the studies of philology. Whereas, therefore, I am informed concerning Jacob's eminent abilities in the way of philology, by such persons whose judgments and sincerity I have not reason to distrust, I have thought fit to recommend him unto you, to the end, that since he hath deserted his first capacity, you may be induced, out of the charitable consideration of his abilities and wants, to lay hold of his second capacity, and presently to admit him Fellow by virtue of the forementioned statute.

My meaning is not, howsoever, that he shall be admitted absolutely, without any composition, but with this clog perpetually to be annexed to him and his place, that once a-week during the University term (the day, hour, and auditors to be appointed by the Warden), he shall openly, in your college-hall (unto which it shall be lawful for any of the University to resort), read upon some title of antiquity; in which he shall compare the Roman, Greek, and Oriental antiquities one with another. And further, by way of punishment for his discontinuing from the College, I would have him, immediately upon his being admitted Fellow, notwithstanding he was senior to divers who are now Masters of Arts in the College, to be admitted in numerum Magistrorum, but junior to all those that are now already Masters. I think it sufficient barely to express my desires in this business, not doubting but you will readily comply with them, as being grounded upon the plain letter of your statutes; whereof otherwise, were it ambiguous, you know your Patron hath the power of interpreting, and of exacting obedience in conformity to his interpretation. I think fit, also, that a copy of this my letter be entered into your Registry, whereby it may appear unto posterity upon what grounds both I and you proceeded in this business. So I leave you all to God's blessing, and rest

Rex serenissimus, ut vidit quo tendebant literæ, tradidit eas Secretario Domino Joanni Coco, a quo puto responsum potest Calendrinus expectare. Mihi enim nullum dedit Rex, nec ad me pertinet in rebus ad monilia et pecunias spectantibus responsa dare. Hoc tamen tibi ausim dicere, nisi admodum falsa mihi memoria nimis labilis suggerat, Calendrinus parum candide se gessit, in negotio de Monilium Jocaliumque Regiorum restitutione. Nec hoc mihi tantum visum est, sed et aliis, et summis quidem regni proceribus. Sed audio nunc fere superatas esse illas difficultates, et, si ita res sit, gaudeo. Sin aliter, non habeo, quo te amplius detineam. Nam quo in loco res Burlamachianæ jam sunt, ego plane nescio. Scio quod scribis, Calendrinum in Bataviam profectum, ad expediendum Regium negotium. Si ille iterum operam det ad impediendum, sub nescio quali prætextu, (sicut nonnulli apud nos prudentes augurantur), quid est, quod ego illi in gratiam præstare possim? Spero meliora de persona et familia, tam bene de te merente. Et si quid possim pro Calendrino, nihil prætermittam, ne occasionem ipsam, semel si constiterit sedulam illum Regio negotio navare operam. Hoc quamprimum te volui scire, literas Calendrinas in manus Regias pervenisse. Vale.

Sic jubet tibi amicissimus,

LETTER CXXIII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 24, 25.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I will not acknowledge your ill memory, but I am glad your good one did a little fail you, that so I might hear of you the sooner. And your letter being about nothing else but this one business, I shall not fail to do as much as my Lady of Leicester^r hath by you band from the Treasury. See her Letter to Wentworth. (Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 45.)] entreated of me ; and if she send at any time, I shall let her know how earnestly your Lordship hath dealt with me about it. This to your letter. But I have somewhat else for you. Here are letters come from Secretary Coke to my Lord Treasurer, showing the King's dislike of the City's offer both for the sum and the manner of payment*. Now you see what our omission hath caused, that I told you of at our parting. And no more can be done till we speak with his Majesty.

The mischief which the most Christian Turks did about Plymouth is most true. And I pray God it do no mischief about our shipping business this ensuing year.

I have within these two days received letters out of Ireland from my Lord Primate. All is naught there. His letters are three sides of a paper in his small close hand. All the proceedings set down at large. If the relation be true, the Provost is much to blame^t. The business is now brought to me, which I am most sorry for, in regard I know how things are between them two. I send you no copy of this large letter, because the Primate writes, he hath sent you one himself. One good circumstance is in it, and not many more ; he desires me to speak with your Lordship about it (that I cannot now do but by letters), and that I would determine nothing till your Lordship's coming over ; which desire of his is most welcome to me, and I was from the first line's reading resolved to

* [This appears to have been an offer made by the City of London towards the expenses of the plantation at Londonderry. Wentworth, in his reply, vindicates the course pursued by the Londoners. (Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 25.)]

^t [The history of the transaction here referred to is detailed at length by Dr. Elrington (Life of Ussher, pp. 191—198). The facts were these:—A Senior Fellowship was vacant in Dec. 1635. Chappell, the Provost, passed over Hoyle, Pheasant, and Cullen, who were notoriously negligent in attending chapel, and proposed instead Mr. Ware. An inhibition was issued to stay this proceeding, to which Chappell submitted. It must be further mentioned that, by Charter, the right of election was vested in the Provost and four Senior Fellows. Chappell, fearing that the power of election would cease, as the number of Fellows was rapidly diminishing, proposed a repeal of the Statute, in which he was supported by the two Senior Fellows. A visitation was then held, and the Fellows, Newman and Conway, who voted with him, expelled. At the same visitation, 'Hoyle and Pheasant, two of the petitioning Fellows, were appointed Senior Fellows, and with them Ware, Cullen having been passed over.' It appears that within the next ten months 'some reconciliation had taken place between the Visitors and the Provost' 'by the restoration of Newman and Conway, and the expulsion of Pheasant.' Such disturbances were prevented for the future by the Archbishop giving the College a new Charter and body of Statutes, which, after some difficulties, and a liberal exercise of the royal prerogative on the part of Wentworth, were accepted June 5, 1637, and Cullen, at the same time, elected Senior Fellow.] have done it unasked. But though upon the former ground I send you not the letter, yet I here send you a copy of the Visitors' last act against the two Senior Fellows, that joined with the Provost in this business, and himself. I hope at your return you will be able so to moderate things, that I from you may find what is fittest for me publicly to decree, to prevent the like mischief hereafter, and to settle this as well as may be.

When I had written thus far, a petition came to me from the Provost. The papers sent me are long, and I can say nothing of them till I have read them. But there is mention that the Lords Justices and Council have transmitted the whole proceedings to your Lordship and the King. And if you think fit to leave me out, I shall be right glad of it.

I hope you are welcome into the North. You must excuse me to Sir Philip Mainwaring; I would have written to any man else, but to my Lord of Cork in such business I cannot; but I can ever rest

Your Lordship's loving and faithful Friend,

LETTER CXXIV.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 31, 32.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I begin at the end of your last letter^x, where you tell me you will not detain me longer, because you know I will be busied about small matters at Oxford with great care. 'Tis most true, the matters are small in themselves, but to me they have been great, and I am most heartily glad they are over^y.

Your letters came to me very seasonably. For, had they come to me one hour later, I could have had no opportunity to speak with the King, as you desire, for some mark of his favour to be set, and now, upon you. I moved fully, both in general, and for the particular you mention². His Majesty's answer was, that he would do that which should strengthen you enough against any practising here. But commanded me to tell you, that for the particular, and all that concerned it, he would give you answer himself so soon as he came to his next place of leisure.

For the case of the Lord of St. Alban's in particular, I heard Mr. Secretary Coke say, he had much to write to you. So to him I refer that.

To your former letter³, and the great care you expressed concerning the business of the shipping, and manner of defending the west coast, and about the foreign affairs in this ticklish business between Spain and France, I can say no more but this; I took occasion to show both those passages to the King at Woodstock, and the King bid me thank you, and tell you it was a very honest letter.

I am now this Wednesday morning at an end of my troublesome business, and not at leisure to write to any man but yourself, for I am extreme weary. So I leave your Lordship to all God's blessings upon you, and shall ever be found

Your Lordship's loving poor Friend to serve you,

LETTER CXXV.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 36, 37.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am heartily sorry for the difference that is fallen out between my Lord Primate and the Visitors of the College near Dublin, and the Provost and some Senior Fellows there ^b. This unhappy difference began, as I take it, while your Lordship was there, but I am confident it had never grown to this height, had not your Lordship come thence. It is in my judgment a great business in itself, that the prime prelates of the kingdom, and the Provost of the College, should be at such an eager difference in the open face of that state, and in view of so many Romanists as swarm there, and cannot but look upon it with joy. But it is far more dangerous in the consequence, if I much mistake not. For that College, as your Lordship hath often acknowledged unto me, both by letters and otherwise, having been as ill-governed as any in Christendom, or worse, will never be able to recover and settle to be a good seminary for that Church, if both the power and credit of the Provost be not upheld by his superiors; and should a Provost, that is otherwise vigilant and careful, err in some circumstantial business, it is far better for the public, if not to maintain his errors, yet to pass by them, rather than to give countenance and encouragement to such young heads, as seek for no other liberty, than that which may make way for licentiousness.

² [This was that he might be created an Earl. This title was not conferred on him till some years later.]

³ [Written Aug. 17. See Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 25, 26.]

My Lord, upon this ground I could heartily wish the heats, which I doubt have been in this business, had been forborne, or that yet your Lordship could bring it to that temper, that both parties would lay down the cause, and not put me to give a public decision, which, as this case stands, may do some hurt, which way soever the justice of the cause, upon full evidence, shall sway my judgment. But since the first of these my wishes is now impossible, and that I can very hardly hope for the happiness of the second, I have been at the pains to enable myself, as well as I can, to give a final sentence and decision in the cause; and have read over all the letters and papers very carefully which were sent to myself, either from the Lord Primate, or from Mr. Provost, or that were delivered in unto me by young Pheasant at his late being here; as also all those papers which were sent from the Council-table to your Lordship, and by you delivered to me; so that now, if it must needs come to the giving of a public sentence, I am almost ready for it.

Yet one thing there is remaining, which I think very necessary to be done in point of common and indifferent justice, before I give my determination ; which is, that a narration of the fact be agreed upon by all parties, that none of them may say, that that upon which I ground my sentence is mistaken. To this end I have, out of all the papers that have come to my hands, drawn a brief history of the fact from first to last, with reference to the several papers for proofs, by letters and other marks. This recital of the fact, and all the papers ready marked to your hand, I send your Lordship in this packet. It is a very brief one, and therefore first I desire your Lordship to read it over, and compare what you doubt with the papers ; then I humbly desire your Lordship to call all parties before you, at some time of leisure, such as you have, and let them read it ; and if they agree to it, as a full and true narration of the fact, then I desire they may all sign it, for I cannot decide anything till I have a state of the question agreed on before me ; but in case they differ in any material circumstance, then I heartily pray you, that they may clear their own doubts, and set the fact so down, as that they may agree upon it, and sign it ; and so soon as that is done, and the fact sent signed unto me, I shall proceed to sentence with all indifferency, and without respect of persons.

I am further to acquaint your Lordship, that I have herewith sent a paper of all such objections as have come to my hands, and the answers to them, that you may see the cause as fully as I hitherto do. And because the Provost was referred by the sentence of the Visitors to the King, I have acquainted his Majesty with so much of the cause as is yet certainly known unto me, who is not pleased with these differences, but hath commanded me to proceed as the justice of the cause shall lead me, which circumstance I thought fit to make known unto your Lordship. These are therefore heartily to pray you, that if you can make a peaceable end, and such as may stand with the good government of the College, and freedom of their statutes, and prevent my decision for peace sake, that your Lordship would do it. For then I know your wisdom will so moderate it, as that you will make no end, but such as shall be best for the condition of these times and that kingdom. But if either your Lordship can make no such fit end, or that you think it better a legal decision be made, then I beseech your Lordship send me the fact agreed on, and I will send my decision, with all the convenient speed I can. Thus not doubting of your Lordship's love to me, and care of this troublesome business, I leave you to the grace of God, and rest

Your Lordship's most loving Friend to serve you,

TO JAMES USSHER, ARCHBISHOP OF ARMAGH.

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have been put to no small pains, considering my other occasions, to read over, and in a manner to study the several letters and other papers, which have been sent and come to my hands, some from your Grace, some from the Provost and Fellows that join with him; some from Pheasant and the other party; and some from the Lords Justices and Council there to the Lord Deputy, and from his Lordship to me; and all of them about the late unhappy difference fallen between the Visitors of the College near Dublin and the Provost. The more carefully I have read over these papers, the more (I clearly confess to your Grace) I am troubled at the business, and could heartily wish some friendly way were thought on there, to prevent a formal and legal decision by me. Of which yet seeing so little hope as I do, I have taken all the pains which I can, preparatory to a final sentence. For I have very carefully, and with all indifference, drawn a brief history of the fact and the whole proceedings, with relation in the margin to every several paper that hath come to my hands. A copy of this brief, together with all the several papers to which it relates, I have sent to my Lord Deputy, and desired him to show it to your Grace, and all the other parties whom it concerns: to this end, that if your Lordship and they agree upon the fact, I may have it returned unto me, and go on to my decision. But if you agree not upon the fact, as I have set it down, that then you may there settle any difference, and agree upon it, that no one whom it concerns may say I had not a right state of the question before me. When this is done, I shall go on to do my duty with justice to all parties, as far as I can apprehend the cause, and as far as my learned counsel here shall be able to advise me. But I cannot but still wish, and that very heartily, that my decision may be prevented by the care and wisdom of my Lord Deputy, and the moderate and prudent respects of the parties interested, which I presume your Grace will further. For it appears very ill to his Majesty (who was of necessity to be made acquainted with the business, because the censure of the Provost, if he deserve it, is referred to himself), and must needs appear so to all wise men, both here and there, that such a difference concerning young men newly started up from boys, should cause so great a disturbance among grave and wise men, as this hath done. And 'tis somewhat too that the Romanists, which swarm in those parts, have such an occasion as this difference to please themselves withal. My hopes are great in your Grace's moderation; but if all fail, I shall make a binding decision so soon as ever the state of the business is sent me back. So wishing your Grace all health and happiness, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest

Your Grace's very loving Friend and Brother,

LETTER CXXVII.

TO THE CORPORATION OF READING.

[Bruce's Account of Abp. Laud's Berkshire Benefactions, pp. 12—14.]

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations, &c.—I have received your kind letters^c, and read in them the death of Dr. Byrd^d, who hath taken a great deal of pains, and done a great deal of service in your school at Reading, and hath brought up ments, who united the professions of pedagogue and physician, and was well thought of in both of them." He died Nov. 28.]

divers of your sons, and some of them are at this day very able men to do God, the King, and the Church, service. And, if you desire the flourishing of that school, and the like good to be continued to your children hereafter, it will lie upon you, by the advice of your friends, and the best care yourselves can take, to fit yourselves with an able and a painful man, that will be contented to do as Dr. Byrd did in his beginnings. And, to do him right that is gone, I do not think it will be an easy thing in all respects to equal him; but what help or assistance I can give you in that, or anything else that may do good to the town, I shall, neither now, nor at any time else while I live, be wanting. Besides, you are much bound to his Majesty, that he hath been pleased to descend so low, as by his Secretary to take care for the well-fitting and furnishing of that your school; for which I purpose, God willing, in your names, on Sunday next, to give his Majesty thanks, and withal to acquaint him, how ready and careful you are to conform to such directions as he was pleased to give you by Mr. Secretary^e.

Two things there are, which will be great hindrances to the getting of an able schoolmaster into that place. The one is, the poorness of the stipend, not exceeding, as I remember, 10*l*. per annum^f. The other is, that the house, which heretofore belonged to the schoolmaster, and stood very conveniently for him, you have neglected, when the time was, to renew and continue in your hands to the schoolmaster's use. So that now, there being no house for him, and the times being so chargeable for all things of necessary use, yourselves must needs conceive it will be a thing of great difficulty to get a sufficient and a careful man that will be content to reside upon the school for such maintenance, unless you can think upon some way how to recover that house, or another, and to make some addition to increase his means, which I refer to your consideration; and, in the meantime, I shall do the best I can to inform myself, and provide you, of as able a man as I can get.

I pray give me leave to put you in mind, that you have no preferment for your school, but only for two places into Saint John's College in Oxford; and, by God's blessing, of later times some of your sons have thrived extraordinarily well there; and at this time there are two hopeful young men in the college^s, and therefore I think you shall do very advisedly to write to the President and senior Fellows to name some able and sufficient man to you, which I presume they will not refuse to do, and take it kindly besides. And this I assure you, that, as well as I love that place, if they have not a sufficient man to send you, they shall not send unto you any one insufficient, or any way unfitting. And I do hereby pray you, together with those letters of your own, to send these of mine, in which I have desired the President^h, for my sake, to take all the care that possibly he can, and to fit your school with a Saint John's man, if it may be, or else to provide you some able and sufficient young man in the University, whose fitness I will examine myself, before I will absolutely recommend him to you.

So, with thanks for your kind remembrance of me in the close of your letters, and giving you hereby assurance that I shall always be most ready to serve the town in all things which are within my power, I leave you all to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CXXVIII.

TO THE CORPORATION OF READING.

[Bruce's Account of Abp. Laud's Berkshire Benefactions, pp. 17, 18.]

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations, &c.,—Upon the receipt of your first letters to me after the death of your worthy school-master, and my ancient acquaintance, Dr. Byrd, I writ to ^s ["William Brackston and William Creed were the young men referred to. The former . . . became one of Laud's Chaplains; the latter was an eloquent preacher and a divine of great eminence."—Bruce, note to this passage.]

St. John's College, in Oxon, as yourselves know; to this end, that if they could furnish your town with an able and sufficient schoolmaster, I might not be driven to look further. The rather, because of the relation which our worthy founder hath left between that college and your school:

In these my letters I laid so strict a charge upon the President and senior Fellows of that House, that they should name no man to me for whose both honesty and discretion, as well as sufficiency in learning, they would not be as answerable to me, as I must be to the town; as that I thought it fit, more letters than one should pass between us before I would resolve to recommend any to your choice. In this respect, if I have made you stay a little the longer, yet I hope you will take it kindly, partly because you may by this perceive, how careful I am to name no man to you, till I have taken him and his worth into serious consideration; and partly, because this stay can be no great hindrance to your children, Christmas being near, in which time there is no great schooling.

I have seen the letter which you sent to the College¹. It is a very kind one, and with a great deal of respect both to myself and them, for which I heartily thank you. And you can never do yourselves, nor the town, more right, than to think upon some way for the bettering of the schoolmaster's allowance; for till that be done, you may, by favour and God's blessing, get a sufficient schoolmaster; but the place of itself, as it now stands, will never invite an able man to continue and reside upon it. And whereas you write, that you will consider of some encouragement by adding to the schoolmaster to hold up the reputation of your school; I do not only thank you heartily for it, but do hereby promise you, that if I live to outgrow the great expenses I have been at, I will do somewhat also myself, being sensible to this day what it is to be bred under an ill schoolmaster^j.

Now, after all deliberations, I do hereby recommend unto you the bearer hereof, Mr. Page. He is a Master of Arts, and

[Lloyd (Memoirs, p. 225) states that this "very severe schoolmaster promised him that greatness which he afterwards enjoyed, saying to him, 'When you are a little great man, remember Reading School.'"]

Fellow of St. John's College^k; which he is willing to leave, and reside upon the school. He was bred at a very good school himself, and therefore knows the better how to be a schoolmaster. Besides this, I have received from Mr. President and the Fellows a very large testimony of his sufficiency in that kind of learning, as also of his honesty and soberness in conversation. He was with me at Croydon, and by that exercise of his which I myself saw, I hope he will answer the testimony given him. And, therefore, I do hereby recommend him to you, and pray you to make choice of him for your schoolmaster. And, when he is in that place, I shall not fail to lay all my powers upon him, to be diligent and careful in the discharge of his duty to yourselves and your children. And yet, notwithstanding this testimony given me concerning him, I shall desire you to try him (if you think fit) by any or all of your three learned ministers that live with you in the town, whom I doubt not but he will satisfy. Thus, with the remembrance of my love to yourselves, and my daily prayers for the good of that place, I leave you all to the grace of God, and rest

Your very loving and assured Friend,

LETTER CXXIX.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 50.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD, with my due respect unto your Grace remembered,—I have often importuned your Grace, by myself and my noble Lord the Lord Deputy of Ireland, either solely to undertake, or ^k [William Page was admitted Scholar of St. John's in 1628 from Merchant Taylors' School. He was ejected from his Mastership in 1644, and became M.D. in 1653, "which renders it probable that he supported himself during the usurpation by the practice of physic; at the Restoration he procured a writ of restitution to the school, but it was abandoned; and on the 6th March, 1662, he resigned his right, probably for a consideration."—Bruce, p. 19.

He must not be mistaken, as he is by Antony Wood, for William Page, Fellow of All Souls. See above, vol. v. p. 39.]

graciously to assist to procure his Majesty to accept of my submission, and to cease his prosecution against me, which without any profit at all to his Majesty, hath wasted my body, mind, studies, and estate to nothing.

Your Grace's answer was, that the business was in another hand, by his Majesty's knowledge and direction, and so long (without his Majesty's command to that effect) your Grace thought it inconvenient to interpose therein; but if that were altered, and that occasion removed, your Grace would either advance my petition to that purpose, or return me a reasonable answer.

About the first week in November last, the Lord Cottington, by his letter, did quite discharge himself from any more dealing with my business, wishing me to make use of some other mediator (naming none), not without giving me some hope that his Majesty was not unwilling to commiserate my condition. But upon the receipt of this letter I was so eagerly called upon to answer more fully, and to be examined upon interrogatories in the second cause, that I suspected his Majesty might desire some satisfaction therein by my oath, his Majesty being informed underhand, that by my examination and my servants' much might be discovered; and therefore I resolved to give his Majesty in all humility satisfaction therein, before I troubled your Grace to mediate for me, which clearly and ingenuously, more than by any law I was bound, I have performed.

I humbly, therefore, beseech your Grace to tender my submission unto the King, which is as large and ample as ever any defendant in this High Court made unto any King of England: After answer and examination upon oath, that is, to submit myself wholly to his royal pleasure to do and abide what his Majesty pleaseth, rather than any longer in this kind placitare cum domino rege, to appear in any court of justice a defendant against my sovereign lord and master. This is the most that ever was offered by any defendant after answer, and was not (for aught appears in the abstract of the records of that court) ever refused by any King; with this, that howbeit I have no estate, nor ever had, to make any present satisfaction, yet in time (which is all one for his Majesty's occasions) I will truly perform whatsoever his Majesty shall require or intimate. I may not, were it in case of life, press your Grace to any act that your reason (which as in most things else, so in this particular especially, must be clearer than mine) shall persuade your Grace to be unfitting for your Grace to undertake. But I do humbly move your Grace to deliver and improve my submission to his Majesty, and give your Grace this assurance, that if your Grace shall effect it, upon what conditions his Majesty shall prescribe, there is no subject in England shall have so merited of or obliged, as your Grace shall thereby do

LETTER CXXX.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 51.]

MOST REVEREND FATHER IN GOD AND MY VERY GOOD LORD, with my due respects remembered unto your Grace,—

This year having lain heavy, by reason of the infection upon all the parts of my diocese, my officers have not returned unto me any particulars worthy to be represented unto your Grace.

And this hath been a main reason why my brethren of the clergy are behind in their payments for the church of St. Paul's. But upon the receipt of your Grace's letter about ten days since, which enabled me to appoint collectors (the registers in some places being not responsal), I have put the business to that forwardness, that (I will hope) the money with all the arrears shall be paid in at the furthest in Easter term.

One of my clergy in Bedfordshire (a learned and pious gentleman¹) had set up a stone upon pillars of brick for his communion-table, believing it to have been the altar-stone, whereas it was a plain grave-stone. This raising up a rumour in that country, where some of the preciser sort are averse to his Majesty's just supplies in the ship-money, I caused it quietly to be removed, and the ancient communion-table to be placed instead of the same, without further questioning of the party (whom I found harmless and otherwise deserving), to avoid rumours in the country. Which yet I make bold to write unto your Grace, lest it should be more tragically represented.

Some small quarrels have risen in the southern parts of my diocese about some ministers forcing of the people to receive at the rails (which I have procured to be placed about the holy table), and the people's refusing so to do. Wherein I spare to settle any order, not as doubting that both priest and people are herein in the wrong, but as not knowing myself what is the right where the Canon doth not prescribe it. For otherwise, it is no honour to the minister to have their people to come so near the holy table in their receiving of the Eucharist, nor any disparagement, but more respect than can be preceded by antiquity, for the people to be permitted to approach so nigh. It was in former times the special privilege of kings and princes.

I have left the ministers to their own discretion, so as they did not refuse the Communion (which some began to do) to such as would not receive at the rails. If your Grace shall send me any directions herein, I do not find but all my diocese will readily obey them.

I humbly crave your Grace's pardon for being thus troublesome in matters of no greater consequence. And beseeching God to bless your Grace with many new years, do humbly take my leave, as being

Your Grace's humble Servant and Suffragan,

LETTER CXXXI.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 52.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received by Mr. Ireland's^m hands two letters from your Lordship; the one of them contains the account of your diocese at this time to be given to his Majesty; whereon, first, I thank your Lordship for the care you have taken for St. Paul's, and the answer you are pleased to give to my letters about it; and if that money come in Easter term it will do very well.

For the clergyman in Bedfordshire which your Lordship saith set up a grave-stone instead of an altar-stone for the communion-table, I know not what desert the man may be of, but surely, though you give him a very good testimony, yet I must needs think this a very bold and unadvised part in him to attempt a business of this nature without the knowledge and approbation of his Ordinary.

As for the differences that are arisen in the southern part of your Lordship's diocese, about the people's being urged to receive at the rails which encompass the communion-tableⁿ, ⁿ [The following petition and reply of the Archbishop, preserved in St. John's College, Cambridge, may be introduced in illustration of this passage:—

“To the most reverend Father in God William, Lord Arch-Bp. of Cant. his Grace, Primate & Metropolitan of all England, the humble petition of y^e inhabitants of Wellyn in Hertfordshyre, “Humbly complayninge shew,

“That whereas your Graces petitioners repayrynge to bee partakers of y^e holy Sacrament, according to the uniform & ancyente custome of our parish & y^e parishes adjoyninge where wee live, w^h. is to assemble our selves in the body of the chancle, meekly kneeling on our knees: Wee have there three tymes, to y^e greate greife of our soules & disturbance of y^e congregation at y^e holy duty assembled, bine rejected, & by Mr. Thomas Wiltshyre, Rector of our Ch, and Mr. Judson his Curate, denied the holy Sacrament. The reason, they sayde, was because wee came not to the rayles to receive: Whereas wee had not, nor as yet have, any commande to alter our ancyent forme, nor any satisfaction to y^e reason of our capacities soe to do, although we have often requested not onely our Minist. but also have repayed both to the register & divers surrogates of y^e Ecclesiastical courts, & also to Sr John Lambe and Dr. Holdsworth. Now wee, y^e Graces humble petitioners, hatinge faction, and ever havinge been persons conformable to y^e orders & government of y^e Ch. of England established, & beinge timorous of introducing any new form in matters of religion established, unless we have received an authority commanding us therein.

Our humble petition to your Grace then is, if you would bee pleased to take knowledge of this our lamentable grievance and distraction, & y^t you woulde, for y^e preventinge of all it is a thing to which the canons of the Church doth not expressly reach, and therefore I shall fairly represent it to his Majesty, as your letter hath done it to me, and then expect his gracious direction, which so soon as I have received, I shall acquaint your Lordship with.

But, my Lord, your Lordship's second letters did not a little trouble me, because I cannot do all that they desire of me. And whereas your Lordship begins your letter, that you have oftentimes importuned me to assist your cause to the King for your dismissal out of Star-Chamber; your Lordship cannot but know that I have done that often, and returned to your Lordship's several letters and petitions such answers as I was able to give from his Majesty. And how your Lordship used me at the close for all these services done, you best know, and I joy not to repeat.

And whereas you add, that you got the Right Honourable the Lord Deputy of Ireland, his late being in these parts, to speak with me to the same purpose; my Lord did speak with me accordingly, and the answer which I gave his Lordship was, that I shall be very willing and ready to do your Lordship any service that is fit for me to appear in, and that may be done with preservation of his Majesty's honour and justice in a cause of this moment. And this answer I shall be ready to make good.

After this your Lordship tells me that my former answer to yourself was, that since his Majesty had put the business into another hand, it was no way convenient for me to meddle with that which his Majesty has wholly and solely put to another's care. Nor durst I be so bold with the King forther disturbances to our consciences & unity, give such farther order herein as to your Graces wisdom shall seem best, & y^e wee bee no longer without y^e Sacram^t, but to our unspeakable comforts agayne, according to the laws of this realme & customs of this Ch. established, bee made partakers, till there shall bee a law to the contrary declared to us, & as in duty bound wee shall ever pray, &c."

His answer :—

"I desyre Mr. Archdeacon Dr. Holdsworth to order Mr. Wiltshyre, parson of Wellyn within his Archdeaconry, to administer the communion duly & orderly to these petitioners & all other of his parish (they coming & presenting themselves as they ought) to receive it kneeling, though it bee in any part of the chancel, leaving only such to come to the rayles & receive as are willing so to do, & that neither Mr. Nash nor Mr. Hudson nor any other coming thither to preache, disturbe any of y^e people, being conformable to the laws of this realm & canons & rubricks of y^e Ch.; & if they shall not obey let mee bee acquainted with it."] in a business of this nature. And your Lordship could not then deny but that my answer was reasonable. And whereas you add, that my Lord Cottington hath given over further meddling in the business; yet that is no warrant for me to take it on; besides, having moved so often for your Lordship, and not being able to effect your desire, made me fearful to adventure further.

Notwithstanding all this, I did make bold in all humble manner to present your petition to his Majesty, which when his Majesty had seen, he gave me this present answer, that my Lord Duke of Lennox^o had lately moved him in this very particular, and that he had given him his final answer. I durst not presume to move his Majesty to know what that answer was, but I am confident my Lord Duke's Grace of Lennox either hath already or will speedily give your Lordship an account of it.

My Lord, this is all that I am able to write unto you in this great business, and therefore do pray you to take this which I have done as well as it is meant. And so wishing your Lordship health, and a happy new year, I leave you, &c.

LETTER CXXXII.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 54.]

May it please your Grace,—I do humbly acknowledge your Grace's favour in the delivery of that paper enclosed unto his Majesty, and impute it unto mine own misfortune that it had no better success. I have sometimes this last summer troubled my Lord Duke of Lennox with representing unto his Majesty my apologies to some by-complaints made against me, and sometimes his Grace hath vouchsafed me answer by word of mouth, but never by letter. Albeit of the nature of my last paper I never put any unto his Grace, or your Grace's, or any man's hands before, for it is a submission drawn by advice of counsel, (which peradventure if his Majesty had observed, his Majesty would have graciously vouchsafed to speak with the Lord Keeper^p and his Attorney-General about the same), and so binding (being subscribed with my hand), that it is doubted I am not enabled to make any further defence unless it be returned. What his Majesty's final answer may be, I cannot guess, but do hope (in imitation of that God who is infinite in mercy and clemency) his Majesty will never make an end of his grace and goodness towards me, and the rather by means of your Grace's mediation in the behalf of

LETTER CXXXIII.

FROM JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 55.]

May it please your Grace,—I most humbly thank your Grace for your letter; but being much afraid to be mistaken, I earnestly beseech your Grace to conceive that it was written, not that your Grace should subduct or withdraw, but, on the contrary side, that your Grace would be pleased to improve and declare unto his most excellent Majesty the nature of that submission I last tendered by your Grace's hands, which, by a kind of legal course, puts a power into his Majesty to declare his pleasure of me, and, stopping both mine own and the mouths of all men beside, leaves his Majesty upon record just and merciful to all posterity. This was that which Mr. Attorney Noy called for from the beginning, and had obtained upon the first motion, had not a great man (since dead) deterred me from this way, and put me into another course of composition. And therefore I humbly beseech your Grace to press it home as far as you can, and as soon as you can, and to make me thereby your Grace's creature as long as I live. I would, understanding of your Grace's return to Lambeth, have waited upon your Grace in person, but that I am not able, diseases growing so fast upon me, and especially the greatest disease of all, weariness of life by reason of these misfortunes. I hear it from many hands, that his Majesty should be informed, that I should report, I should never be free from lawsuits as long as his Majesty lived. God is my witness I never said so, or conceived any such words, in my life; but did absolutely believe, until the middle of November last, that all lawsuits between his Majesty and me had been fully concluded and ended. And I had been more mad than of late I am painted forth; to have treated with the Lord Cottington upon such terms as I did, if I had harboured any such conceit. An imprisonment, in such a case, had been more advantageous for me than a composition.

Lastly, I humbly thank your Grace for reproving of Shelley's boldness and impudency against me. He hath by copyhold but three acres of ground in this town, is (for purse-taking) bound to good behaviour for ever, and a common drunkard as any in this country: and, therefore, no competent cessor of the lord of the manor, nor accuser of the bishop of the diocese. I shall not be able to answer his railing speeches, because I know them not; his petition I shall disprove in every point that concerns me. The sums that I am cessed in, in the first and second cessment, will be found to differ more in form than in quantity^a.

This young man's course being contrary to the directions of your Lordships, and most prejudicial to his Majesty's service, to cess the lord of the manor for all his tenants; the latter cessment, directed by the sheriff, cessing the lords for what they hold only in their own hands, and the tenants for what they likewise hold and occupy; which, with me, comes to one and the same reckoning at the half-year's day.

^a [Shelley was employed to assess Bishop Williams to the payment of ship-money. The Bishop, on demurring to the assessment, was called in question as an opponent of the tax.]

But, if it please your Grace, I am fain to digest a thousand of these affronts and injuries in a year, which I meet with upon all occasions from mean and sorry people, that conceive they may do anything against the Bishop of Lincoln.

Which will help to make my obligations stronger and faster unto your Grace, when, by your Grace's mediation, the King shall be pleased to receive me into some degrees of shelter and protection again, and to make me odious to the world and myself if I shall not remain

Your Grace's faithful Servant and Suffragan,

LETTER CXXXIV.

TO JOHN WILLIAMS, BISHOP OF LINCOLN.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. mxxx. p. 56.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Since my late letter to your Lordship, I have received another from you by the hands of Mr. Ireland, bearing date the 13th of this present January, in which you write that your former letters were not that I should withdraw your petition which I had delivered to his Majesty, but that I should rather improve your suit therein contained. My Lord, I beseech you pardon me, for your former letters are expressly that it is doubted you are not enabled to make any further defence, unless it were returned. And surely, my Lord, I could not return it, but that I must withdraw it first.

But now, my Lord, I have once more done all that you desire at my hands, for I have withdrawn your petition, and returned it here inclosed; and, besides, I have pressed it also as far as I could, for I used all the motives you suggested to me in any of your late letters; and, to the end his Majesty might not think I was mistaken in anything, I first read unto him whatsoever concerned that business in words of your own letters. His Majesty's answer was, that he gave me free leave to return your petition, but that he would return no other answer than he had already given to my Lord Duke of Lennox; and that that was his Majesty's final answer. And further, his Majesty hath commanded me not to trouble him any more in this business; and therefore I do heartily pray your Lordship that I may be no further pressed in it.

In the business of Shelley, I both spake and did what I thought just and fit for me, and if it were anything that gave your Lordship content, I am glad of it. I think some part of the business is referred to a further hearing before the Lords, at which time, if he be such a man as your Lordship describes him, and his petition delivered so false, your advantage will be greater against him. So I leave your Lordship to God's blessed protection, and rest

S. in Christo.

After my hearty commendations, &c.—I have now, after my long pains and your as long expectation, finished the Statutes for the Church of Canterbury, according to the trust reposed in me by his Majesty, and the power which he was pleased to give me under the Broad Seal to perfect this work. Besides this stay by my pains, we have had other delays and trouble at the Seal, most men being in something or other to seek how to dispose such a business as this, under his Majesty's confirmation, there having been but few books of this nature of later years brought to the Great Seal. But now (God be thanked) all doubts are removed, not only for these particular Statutes, but for any other which shall hereafter be finished, if so it please God to bless my undertakings. This copy of your Statutes I here send you by the hands of Dr. Warner^a, and hereby require you, in his Majesty's name, to keep safe this original book of Statutes, and to guide and govern yourselves, and all businesses concerning that Church, by these Statutes and no other. And to the end this book may be kept both safe and fair, you may transcribe such and so many copies out of it, for the daily use of the Dean and Chapter, as yourselves shall think fit, and to be kept in such hands only as by Chapter act you shall appoint. My Lord Keeper hath been very kind and careful in this business, as well to free you from a great deal of charge, as other trouble. And, therefore, I think you shall do very well to send up a letter of thanks to his Lordship. So God bless you in the government of that Church, that it may be (as it ought to be) an example to others. To His blessed protection I leave you, and rest LETTER CXXXVI.

TO THE PROVOST AND FELLOWS OF ETON COLLEGE.

[Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. p. 532 †.]

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations, &c.—You cannot but remember, that after my metropolitical visitation of your college at Eton was begun, there was delivered unto me a petition from King's College in Cambridge, and another to his sacred Majesty, both concerning certain rights to the Fellowships of Eton, as they pretended; and the petition delivered to his Majesty was after sent unto me, with a reference under Secretary Windebank's hand, requiring me to take their cause into consideration, and to do them that justice, which upon due deliberation I should find did belong to them and their cause. Thereupon I had divers times cognizance of this cause in the presence of some, both of your and their societies, and heard at large both your and their counsel. But by reason of the shortness of my visitation, being unwilling to hold it much longer than the ordinary time of six months, and because of my other many and great occasions not suffering me to attend that business wholly, I was constrained to reserve this and all such businesses as were then depending before me, in the relaxation of my visitation aforesaid, to such other further and fit time, as I might have to end them. And having now maturely considered of the aforesaid petition of King's College, with all incidents thereunto belonging, and of all such answers as you, the Provost and Fellows of Eton, have given, I have now at last made my decision, with an injunction of obedience in time to come^u, and have sent it herewith unto you under my archiepiscopal seal, requiring you that it be registered at the end of your statute-book, and observed in all future elections of Fellows into that society; that so these two great bodies, which had one and the same royal founder, may, according to his will and frequent desires in your and their statutes, grow up into a nearer relation and amity one to, and with, the other, which God grant. So with my love remembered to you, I leave you all to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CXXXVII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Reg. Laud, fol. 259 b.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—At this present I give no answer to any letter of yours, for I have answered all that are come to my hands, so that ball is at your foot; but high time is it that you had the new both Charter and Statutes for the College near Dublin. And I have herewith sent as followeth: First, I have sent your Lordship the Charter with his Majesty's hand to it; the Broad Seal must be put to it there; and your Lordship must, by your powerful way, gain the consent, or else we must think of another way; but this is thought here by far the best. With the Charter your Lordship shall find Mr. Attorney's directions under his own hands, for your guidance to the settling of it; the way that Sir Geo. Radcliffe thought upon at Croydon being not approved by the King's Counsel here, as I formerly writ unto you.

I have likewise sent you two fair copies of the Statutes for the College. That which hath his Majesty's name at the beginning and mine at the bottom of every page, must have the Broad Seal put to it, which must be fixed to the Confirmation at the end of the book; this Confirmation must be written in chancery hand, in the two spare leaves at the end of the book, and then be enrolled. I have sent you a copy of the same Confirmation which was joined to the Statutes of Canterbury, which, mutatis mutandis, is to be followed. This copy your Lordship shall find in the statute-book. Out of this original copy, the Provost is to transcribe one or more copies (as he shall think fit) for the daily use of the College; but this original is to lie safe in the College treasury, or place of evidences, to which they are to have recourse against any errors that may creep into transcribed copies.

The other fair copy is to remain with your Lordship and the State, that you may the better see the growth and increase of the College in government and good order, or the contrary, and be the better able to apply, or call upon the Chancellor for remedies when any shall be necessary.

A third copy, on paper, I keep for my own use, and such as shall succeed me in that Chancellorship. So I humbly take my leave, and rest

Your Lordship's loving poor Friend to serve you,

Salutem in Christo.

SIR,—I am about to draw up my order for Worcester, and to settle peace between the Bishop, the City, and the Chapter, if I can[‡]. In the meantime I am informed there is some flaw found in the lease of the rectory of Wimbledon, and that my Lord[§] is about to renew it again of your Church of Worcester. To this rectory, Putney and Mortlake are chapels of ease; and Mortlake hath been for divers years, and is at present, a place of great inconformity, and where usually such men are placed as will take little from your lessee, and live upon the humour of the people.

Upon this I have two requests to make to you. The one, that you would find a means to increase the stipend of the curate there, and at Putney also, and to make it certain. The other, that you would (as it well beseems you) take the nomination of the curates in both places to yourselves, and not to leave it to your tenant my Lord Wimbledon, or any other. And I shall expect to receive satisfaction from you in both these particulars, having acquainted his Majesty with them

LETTER CXLI.

TO THE EARL OF TRAQUAIR, LORD TREASURER OF SCOTLAND.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 163, 164.]

S. in Christo.

MY GOOD LORD,—Your Lordship's of June 26 came to my hands on Sunday, July 2; and they were the first I received out of Scotland since your return thither, save only that I had one from the King's Advocate^j in answer to mine, and one from my Lord of Brechin^k. And I confess I did and do a little wonder at it, considering how many letters I writ, and what their contents were. So I was glad to see one come from your Lordship, till I read it, but then I confess I was much troubled to see things go on there in such a way. For I thought we had been happily come to an end of those troubles.

My Lord, I have much ado to read some words in your

[See Accounts of Province for vourer of the Presbyteriana.]

^j [Sir Thomas Hope, a secret fa-handwriting, and some things concerning that kingdom I understand not. Between these two if I mistake anything, I heartily pray you it may go pro non scripto. And now for instance, I confess I do not well understand what that particular is, at which my Lord of St. Andrews¹ checks; but whatever it be, I am sorry his Grace will not privately debate it before it come in public; or, since he cannot gain his Commission in Exchequer, he will take a course before the Commission of Surrenders, that may be prejudicial to the archbishopric. For I hope he will not think of any advantageous way to particular persons with disadvantage to the public.

His Majesty's intention certainly is, that all mortifications to bishoprics, or other pious uses, should have all immunities for the advantage of the Church that may be had. And if my Lord of St. Andrews, either by the Commission to which his Majesty's hand was gotten, or by valuation before the Commission of Surrenders, depart from the good of the Church in the particular of the priory, I must be sorry for it, but certainly the King's bounty must not be abused. Only I beseech your Lordship look carefully to it, that my Lord Archbishop have no prejudice; for it seems exceeding strange to me, that anything should be attempted by him in this, that is not pregnantly for the Church's good.

For the Commission of Surrenders^m, you know my opinion of it, and of whom I learned it. And I hope, before these letters come to you, you will understand his Majesty's pleasure concerning that Commission from the Earl of Sterling.

To your Lordship's demands and desires I give you briefly this answer.

First, I heartily thank you, that you are minded once more in a private way, to move my Lord Chancellorⁿ to alter his intended course by debate there, or from hence (if there be any use of me), and I heartily pray you so to do. And if you think fit, you may tell him, 'tis my desire as well as yours. For I have not at this time written any one word of this business.

vol. ii. p. 756.]

^m [See an account of this Commission in Collier's Church History, ⁿ [The Archbishop of St. Andrews.]

Secondly, If the King's intentions for laying the foundation of the Cathedral Church of St. Andrews will, in this way my Lord Chancellor now takes, be wholly eluded, you must by all good and fair means prevent it. And if you cannot so do it, you must acquaint his Majesty with it, before it be too late°.

Thirdly, I do hereby heartily pray you to stop all things which come to your knowledge, if you find the Church prejudged, or anything intended contrary to the general course introduced in favour of the Church. And I assure myself, that his Majesty will thank you for the service.

Lastly, Your Lordship did understand me right, and I am still of opinion, that more care is to be taken in the settling of all these Church businesses, for the dignity and advantage of the places themselves. And that course, I beseech you, hold for those things which come within your power. And yet I shall still desire the present incumbent may be considered also, where it may be without prejudice to the place itself in perpetuity.

This hath been one of the heaviest terms that ever I endured, and it seems you have had troubles enough. The best is, the remembrances which I last put into your hands may stay for times of more leisure. The sickness increases sorely, yet I cannot get out of London. God bless you with health in those parts, in which prayers I rest

Your Lordship's loving poor Friend to serve you,

LETTER CXLII.

TO THE EARL OF TRAQUAIR.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 165, 166.]

For the Commission of Tithes, I ever was against it in my own judgment, and therein I agreed with my Lords of St. Andrews and Ross, since neither of them hath given me sufficient reason, why I should change my mind; yet if the

° [The King proposed to rebuild the Cathedral of St. Andrews, and to annex thereto the Abbey of St. Andrews, which was in the possession of the Duke of Richmond. Laud's share in this business was made one of the charges of the Scotch against him. See above, vol. iii. pp. 310—313.]

Commission lie asleep awhile to see what may be said further for it, I think 'tis not amiss. And then if nothing can be said, that shall make it appear more beneficial to that Church, than yet it doth to me, it may be with the better deliberation quite extinguished. The truth is, at least as it appears to me, in the present use of it it is made a public pretence to private ends.

My Lord, I think you know my opinion how I would have Church business carried, were I as great a master of men, as, I thank God, I am of things. 'Tis true the Church, as well there as elsewhere, hath been overborne by violence, both in matter of maintenance and jurisdiction. But if the Church will recover in either of these, she and her governors must proceed, not as she was proceeded against, but by a constant temper she must make the world see she had the wrong, but offer none. And since law hath followed in that kingdom, perhaps to make good that which was ill done, yet since a law it is, such a reformation or restitution would be sought for, as might stand with the law, and some expedient be found out, how the law may be by some just exposition helped, till the State shall see cause to abolish it ^P.

His Majesty takes it very ill, that the business concerning the stablishment of the Service-book hath been so weakly carried; and hath great reason to think himself and his Government dishonoured by the late tumult in Edinburgh, July 23; and, therefore, expects that your Lordship and the rest of the honourable Council set yourselves to it, that the Liturgy may be established orderly and with peace, to repair what hath been done amiss. For his Majesty well knows the Clergy alone have not power enough to go through with a business of this nature, and, therefore, is not very well satisfied with them, either for the omission in that kind, to advise for assistance of his Lords' Council, or for the preparation or way they took. For certainly the publication the week before, that on the next Sunday the prayers according to the Liturgy should be read in all the churches of Edinburgh, was upon the matter to give to those that were ill-affected to the service, time to communicate their thoughts, and to premeditate and provide against it, as it is most apparent they did.

^P [The Scotch Act of 1633 provided that tithes should be redeemed at the value of nine years' purchase. See

Nor is his Majesty well satisfied with the Clergy, that they which are in authority were not advertised, that they might attend the countenancing of such a service, so much tending to the honour of God and the King. And I am verily persuaded, if that accident of the marriage of your kinsman had not carried your Lordship out of the city that day, some things would not have been altogether so bad, and my Lord Privy Seal^a would have had the better assistance.

Neither was this the best act that ever they did, to send away their letters apart, without acquainting the Council, that their advertisements might have come by the same messenger, together with their joint advice, which way was best to punish the offenders, at least the prime and chief of them, and which to prevent the like disorders. And after so long time of preparation, to be to seek who should read the service, is more than strange to me, unless they think such a business can do itself; but his Majesty, out of his piety and wisdom, gave, by the messenger which the Bishop sent, such full directions, both to the Lords of the Council and the Lords of the Clergy, as I hope will settle the business from further trouble. But the Proclamation, which you have now sent up to the King, I have not yet seen.

Of all the rest, the weakest part was, the interdicting of all Divine service till his Majesty's pleasure was further known. And this, as also the giving warning of the publishing, his Majesty, at the first reading of the letters and report of the fact, checked at, and commanded me to write so much to my Lord of Saint Andrews; which I did. And your Lordship at the Council, July 24, spake very worthily against the interdicting of the service. For that were in effect as much as to disclaim the work, or to give way to the insolency of the baser multitude; and his Majesty hath commanded me to thank you for it in his name. But the disclaiming the book as any act of theirs, but as it was his Majesty's command, was most unworthy. 'Tis most true the King commanded a Liturgy, and it was time they had one. They did not like to admit of ours, but thought it more reputation for them, as indeed it was, to compile one of their own, yet as near as might be, and they have done it well. Will they now cast down the milk they have given, because a few milkmaids have scolded at them? I hope they will be better advised; certainly they were very ill-advised, when they spake thus at the Council-board. But, my Lord, of this there was not one word in the letter. So I hope they have done with that.

LETTER CXLIII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 99—102.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Your stay from answering of my letters fell out at this time so happily, as that instead of pardon, I could be very well content to give you thanks; for, the truth is, I have been so exercised with libellings and Star-chamber business, and the consequences which have followed upon them, that had any packet come from you, it must have lain by me, as now my letters have lain by you. And yet as things fall out with me here, I have yet, and am like to have, so little leisure, as that I persuade myself I shall scarce have a fortnight's vacation before the approach of Michaelmas term.

I thank your Lordship I have received (as I take it) a full answer concerning Mr. Steward, and his petition to be printer in Ireland, &c. But how he will be satisfied with it, I know not, till he comes at me; but I, for my part, shall make no other answer, than according to my Lord Primate's certificate, and I hope that will satisfy his Majesty¹. But I would to God you had sent me back his petition, for my answer would have been best set down at the end of it; and, besides, I doubt he will call for it again: therefore, I pray, send it by the next.

Next, to your two letters concerning Mr. Terence O'Dermot, and Mr. Lisle. Both my letters to you were wrung from me by extreme importunity; for as for Terence O'Dermot, ¹ I have acquainted his Majesty with it, and he approves it. This hath made me take occasion to write to the Primate, but not one word of * or *.

I know him not, but a friend of mine that did, urged me hard for him; and if your Lordship respect him so far, as to remember his father's services to the Crown, and his own suit so far as it shall be reasonable, I shall ask no more for him. And for Lisle, he married a kinswoman of my Lord Duke of Buckingham's, and that moved me to write as I did; but I am abundantly satisfied with your answer, and so will he be, if he be wise. But, my Lord, I pray, when such by-letters as these, or indeed any other, shall come from me in the nature of suitors, understand them all with this limitation, which I would make myself were I present, that I would have no one of them granted to the least dishonour of yourself, or disservice of the King, whose trust is upon you; and I assure your Lordship, in both these cases, the denial shall be more welcome to me than the grant.

I am very glad to hear, that you have received the Charter, and the other papers which were sent with it concerning the College at Dublin^r, and that all is finished accordingly. I hope now, the patent being under the Broad Seal, that government will settle, and the College be in better temper than it hath, which I pray God it may.

I have received the copy of the sentence against Paterson, and am verily of your Lordship's mind, that a little more quickness in the government would cure this itch of libelling, and something that is amiss besides; but you know what I have written, and truly I have done expecting of 'thorow' on this side, and therefore shall betake myself to that which you say, and I believe, is the next best; and yet I would not give over neither. As for Challenour, it was the weakest part that ever Mr. Secretary Coke did, to leave him in the hands of a messenger, and not commit him to a very safe prison. But what can you think of 'thorow,' where there shall be such slips in business of consequence? But what say you to it, that Prynne and his fellows should be suffered to talk what they pleased while they stood in the pillory^s, and win acclamations from the people, and have notes taken of what they spake, and those notes spread in written copies about the City; and that when they went out of town to their several imprisonments, there were thousands suffered to be upon the way to take their leave, and God knows what else^t?

And for my part, let them take it amongst them too, but certainly that business of Mrs. Leaky was a money business; and if that devil be so fast knit up in the Bishop's purse, it seems they will have but a cold pluck of it; but that matter is now quite out of speech^u.

For my Lord of Cashells^x, I would you had another that you might purge with him; for I believe a little Irish physic from so skilful a hand as yours would do the party more good, than any physic that will be given here, and then you might send me word of both their recoveries together.

There is very good news come from the fleet of the services done by the ships that were sent to Sallee; and not only so, but that there was expectation of far greater, in case the pinnace came once safe to them; so that we have been, by this means and God's blessing, as free from Turkish incur-sions this year as you.

By that which I have above written your Lordship will easily see, that the Triumviri^y will be far enough from being kept dark. It is true, that when this business is spoken of, some men speak, as your Lordship writes, that this business concerns the King and government more than me. But when anything comes to be acted against them, be it but the execution of a sentence, in which lies the honour and safety of all justice, yet there's little or nothing done, nor shall I ever live to see it otherwise.

I pray when your Lordship writes next to my Lady of Carlisle^z, will you be pleased to return my humble thanks to her Ladyship? for it was a mere casualty that gave me opportunity to speak to her before, and 'tis likely I may never have the like again, yet I would not willingly lose the opinion she hath of my civility towards her.

My Lord, I am very confident of my Lord of Derry's integrity to the Church service, and of his respects to me, and in the way of the Church he cannot lose me, till I lose myself.

For my Lord Antrim^a, he went hence almost as soon as my Lady Duchess^b was perfectly recovered, and I believe will not come from thence, till he hath settled as much of his business as possibly he can. The counsel which your Lordship formerly gave him was very good, but not possible to be followed; and so much your Lordship knows I writ in my former letters. He hath now purchased the house, which my Lord Zouch built at Bramsell, near Hartley-row^c, with some little land to it; and a great pennyworth he had. I think the reason of the purchase was the unhealthfulness of Newhall in Essex^d, which especially at this time of the year is very aguish; his Lordship is very much beholding to you for furnishing him with so much money. The rest which concerns this business you shall find in my other letter apart; only I thought fit to let you know, that about a fortnight since, I married the Lady Mary Villiers to the Duke of Lennox at Lambeth, the King being present^e.

Your Ulster eels are the fattest and the fairest that ever I saw, and 'tis a thousand pities there should be any error in their salting, or anything else about them. For how the carriage should hurt them I do not see, considering that other salted eels are brought as far, and retain their goodness; but the dried fish was exceeding good. For the cap, I must keep it till I am older, and the perfume grown colder; but I thank you heartily for it. And for the martin fur, and the saddle, since you will send them, I will accept them.

I am heartily glad that the differences at the College are at last appeased; and great pity it is, that such young fellows, and so ill-conditioned, as Pheasant and Cullen^f, should be able to get within the Visitors, and cause such disturbance. But the expulsion of Pheasant, being so deservedly laid hold on, hath wrought that cure, if a full cure it be; for your Lordship knows as well as I, that the disease had another cause, which cannot be expelled, and therefore the malady may, I doubt, fret inwardly still; so that I must be an humble suitor to your Lordship to keep a continual eye upon that business, till we shall be able to place the Provost elsewhere, and have another fit man ready to succeed him. As for the passages which you refer to Sir George Radcliffe, I will answer them, as you after send them me, upon Sir George Radcliffe's excusing himself.

If my Lord Chancellor^s stay his journey, there will be the less noise about it here. But how that will settle anything for his eldest son, must be left to them whom it concerns.

The Dean of Armagh (for so you say now Dr. Wentworth^h is) will, I hope, do very well, and not need much direction; yet for that which he may need, your Lordship hath done very well to fasten him upon my Lord of Derry: for as for some others, which you speak of, certainly they do not only sing the Psalms after the Geneva tune, but expound the text too in the Geneva sense, at least so far as they can possibly venture upon it; and your Lordship knows, I ever said so much, and have had too good cause to know it. But those things and many other must be passed over, or there will be no peace.

I am glad your Lordship hath so good an opinion of Mr. Gale; for indeed I think him an honest man, and I doubt not but he will answer your Lordship's expectation, and make him capable of your further favour.

Once again you return to Prynne and his fellows, and observe most rightly, that these men do but begin with the Church, that they might after have the freer access to the State; and I would to God other men were of your Lordship's opinion, or if they be so already, I would they had some of your zeal too for timely prevention; but for all that we are all too secure, and will not believe there's any foul weather towards us, till the storm break upon us. For in what sort these men were suffered in the pillory, and how they were attended out of the City, I have already written; and since, I hear Prynne was very much welcomed both at Coventry and West Chester, as he passed towards Carnarvon¹.

What I think of the main business about which * writ her letters to *, as also of the counsel given by *, you shall find in my side paper; in the meantime, if the Church and City of York agree themselves, there is nothing better^k. But, if their differences continue, it will be necessary for peace sake that they be settled; and I thank your Lordship in the Church's name for the great respect you bear to it.

My Lord, to your next passage, I must and do thank you heartily for the great opinion you have and express of my poor self and service; but I am sorry your affections to me should so far deceive your judgment; but whereas you protest it so deeply, yet can you not make me either pluck my spectacles or swear again, as you know what waggery * * * * * and * played at the Council-table; and you know, Quorum pars magna—take the rest to yourself.

I thank your Lordship still for your respects to my Lord of Antrim, and your kind reception of my letters by him, and the care you have of the settling and bettering his estate; concerning all which I can say no more than I have expressed already; but only the addition of these my further thanks on his behalf.

I have already expressed in these letters all that I know concerning the libellers. And for my Lord of Lincoln, he is yet in the Tower^l, but how long he shall stay there, is not in me to prophesy.

And now that you are come to wishing, I would you were here with all my heart, but not so long as you mention; for though it be more to your trouble, yet it is far more to the advantage of the public that you stay, and be troubled there with that part of the army which is garrisoned in Ulster, and with the finishing of the business concerning Ormonde and Clare^m, than that you should be idle here, for so I am sure you would be after a day or two.

My Lord, I thank you heartily for your care of the Bishopric of Waterford and Lismore, but I shall not need to give you any answer to that passage of your letters, because I have since received a letter from my Lord of Derry, that that business is come to an end, and I thank your Lordship. He hath sent me a copy of the agreement signed by your Lordship and the rest of the Council, and [which] is certainly to the great advancement of the bishopric; and I have already given answer and thanks to my Lord of Derry for his pains, as he deserves.

I thank your Lordship heartily for your noble expression concerning Sir Hamon L'Estrange^a. My letters I think were put into his own hands, and perhaps that made them come so late. The gentleman is a mere stranger to me; but the suit that I would write proceeded, as I told you before, from the Earl of Holland^o. Your Lordship by this may see what opinion all men have of the interest I have in you, which makes so many men make me a great deal more troublesome to your Lordship than I am willing to be, and yet I assure you I put by as many things as possibly I can. As for this gentleman, I shall expect nothing from you on his behalf, but what is just and honourable for you to do, and by doing that, my Lord of Holland will owe you the thanks, though I pay it.

My Lord of Down^p hath written unto me, that the cathedral of his diocese lies waste, and cannot possibly be built without the aid of a general purse, or his Majesty's special favour in granting some part of the fines imposed in the Court of High Commission towards so pious a work. I am heartily glad to see the Bishop's care of that his Church, but am not willing to stir far in that business, till I hear from your Lordship what possibility you find for it; and the rather, because you gave me a touch in your last letters of the ruinousness of Christ Church in Dublin; and whether you would be content another cathedral should be thought on before it, is in my thoughts worth asking you the question; and as I shall hear from you, so will I proceed. It is time to make an end, unless I should resolve to tire you altogether. I wish your Lordship all health and happiness, in hope you need no further assurance than I have already given, that I am

LETTER CXLIV.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, p. 163.]

Touching the tumult, I can say no more than I have already. And for the casting of any fault upon your Grace, and the rest of your brethren, as if the thing were done precipitately; I think few men will believe that. But that which is thought here is, that though you took advice among yourselves, yet the whole body of the Council was not acquainted with all your determinations, nor their advice taken, nor their power called in for assistance till it was too late. And that after the thing was done, you consulted apart, and sent up to the King without calling a Council, or joining the Lay-Lords with you; whereas all was little enough in a business of this nature, and so much opposed by some factious men, gathered, it seems, purposely together at Edinburgh to disturb this business. And indeed, my Lord, you could not in this particular have engaged the Lay-Lords too far. And if any Lord here spake too much, when he thought the Service might have been received throughout all that kingdom in one day, I hope your Grace falls as much too short on the other side. For I hope it will be settled in far less time than seven years.

And whereas you write, that the fault is most in your ministers; I easily believe that to be true. But then they should have been dealt withal beforehand, and made pliable, especially in Edinburgh, or else some others appointed in the room of such as disliked. And since your Grace is of opinion that a sharper course would do more good, and that you would have taken such with Master Ramsey, if my Lords had not altered your opinion; his Majesty leaves you to take that course both with him and others, as you shall find fittest for his service, and the Church's. And for the Postscript, I am sorry as well as you for Master Rollock^a, and that is all I have to say of him. So desiring God to bless you through these troubles, I leave you, &c.

LETTER CXLV.

TO THE EARL OF TRAQUAIR.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, pp. 169, 170.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your letters of August 20; and am very glad to read in them, that mine came safe to you by your servant. For the business, I had some little inkling given me by my Lord Sterling about the stay of the Service. But till I read your letter, I did not believe it possible that way should be given to an Interdiction, especially considering how strongly you had ever opposed it; and withal how weak and uncounsellable (at least in my judgment) the thing itself was. For they could not but foresee, that that course would add a great deal of heartning and encouragement to the Puritan party. And therefore 'tis no wonder, if such Lords, and others as were ill-affected to the Liturgy, were easy in giving way to that counsel, which they could not but see would advance their own ends. But that my Lord of Ross should give the advice, and my Lord of St. Andrews follow it with such stiffness, may be a wonder to any man that knows them and the business.

My Lord of St. Andrews hath lately written to me, that my

^a [Rollock, one of the Ministers of Edinburgh, had been suspended for not reading the Service-book.]

Lord of Ross was gone into his diocese. But for my part, I did not think that all the rest would have gone away, and left the business; for they cannot but think, that the adverse part would make use of the present time to put further difficulties upon the work; and therefore they should have been as careful to uphold it, my Lord of Ross especially, whose hand hath been as much in it as the most. But since they are gone, his Majesty takes it extremely well from my Lord of Edinburgh^r, Galloway^s, and Dunblane^t, that they stay and attend the business as well as they can. But he hath expressly commanded me to give your Lordship thanks for staying with them, and keeping them so well in heart; for as the business is now foiled, if you do not stick close to God's and the King's service in it, it will certainly suffer more than is fit it should.

His Majesty likewise takes it exceeding well from your Lordship, that you have dealt with the City of Edinburgh for maintenance for such as shall take upon them to read the Liturgy; and takes it as well from the City itself, from whom I have received a very fair and discreet letter^u, which I have showed his Majesty, and writ the City an answer by this return, and given them his Majesty's thanks, which indeed he commanded me to do very heartily. And in truth they deserve it, especially as the times stand.

As for the Ministers of Edinburgh, I know the refusal of Mr. Ramsey and Mr. Rollock; but that any other of them stuck at it, or that any Bishops seem not to be forward, is more than I heard till now. But for that of Mr. Ramsey, or any of the Bishops that would have somewhat amended, if that should be yielded unto now (unless they should be able to give such reason against it, as I know they cannot), it would mightily dishonour the King, who to my knowledge hath carefully looked over, and approved every word in this Liturgy. And I doubt it would utterly destroy the Service itself. For while one man out of a humour dislikes one thing, and another another, by that time every man's dislike were satisfied, I doubt there would be but little left

^t [James Wedderburne.]

^u [See Prynne's Hidden Works,
 p. 166.]

to serve God with. Besides, it is not improbable, but that some men would be as earnest to have the selfsame thing kept in, which others would so fain thrust out, whate'er it be; and that may make it grow up into a formal contestation upon some particulars, and quite distemper the Service. But whereas you write, That some Bishops speak plainly, that if their opinions had been craved, they would have advised the amending of something; truly for that, and in that way, I would with all my heart they had seen it. And why my Lord of St. Andrews, and they which were trusted by the King, did not discreetly acquaint every Bishop with it, (considering that every Bishop must be used in their several dioceses,) I know no reason; and sure I am there was no prohibition upon them. And since I hear from others that some exception is taken, because there is more in that Liturgy in some few particulars, than is in the Liturgy in England, why did they not then admit the Liturgy of England without more ado? But by their refusal of that, and their dislike of this, 'tis more than manifest they would have neither, perhaps none at all, were they left to themselves. But, my Lord, to yourself only, and in your ear, a great favour you should do me, if you will get my Lord of Galloway to set me down in brief propositions, without any further discourse, all the exceptions that are taken against the Liturgy by Ramsey, Rollock, or any other; and I could be content to know which the Bishops are, which would have amended something, had they been advised with, and what that is which they would have so amended, &c.

LETTER CXLVI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 104.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—The letter which I received from your Lordship of August 16, concerning the settlement of the Deanery of Armagh^x, missed me at Court, being detained at Croydon about the consecration of the Bishop of Bangor^y, but William Raylton came carefully to me the next morning, and by him I writ to Mr. Secretary Coke for present despatch. So that I hope the letters which you desired to be signed were with you a good while since. And this was all that letter contained.

Your second letters of August 16, you say, came to be but a cover for the duplicate. Yet I must heartily thank you for them, and for the noble expression which you begin with, viz. that at Limerick you will discharge yourself of all you owe me, saving your love and service, which you say you will carry along with you for me to your grave. My Lord, I am very much bound to you for the constancy of your love towards me, yet you may see our Court arts are not yet dead. There came a report to me, since I received these your Lordship's letters, that the kindness between you and me was not quite broken off, but that it was of late very much impaired. I cannot for my life find out from whom this report first came, but if I can drive it to a head, you shall hear more of it.

I am very glad to hear that your business succeeds so well for Ormonde and Clare^z. And I am as confident as you, that the steady hand carried in the business of Galway made this so ready for your hand, being so much to the King's honour and the good of that people. And yet you know well, what a labour we had to keep Galway business constant, and in a right way. And to tell you truly, I have now as much to do with some other business, the practices in Court are so many, and there being such a want of 'thorow.' On Sunday last I acquainted his Majesty with what you had written, and I found that he was not ignorant of your despatch, but exceedingly pleased with your service, as indeed he had reason to be. And for my part I thank your Lordship heartily for the copy of the despatch, for indeed it is an excellent good one.

having suffered in common with his brethren in the Great Rebellion, regained his See, and died in 1665. (Wood, Ath. Ox. ii. 888.)]

I am glad you find so much good ground in Ireland, as this progress of yours hath showed you lying together. And 'tis great pity, but that there should be a constant hand of forbearance carried over them, to invite the English over, that they may settle there. And I will not fail to do you all the service I can, if anything be proposed at the Irish Committee, or elsewhere in my presepece, that may press too suddenly upon them. And I am heartily glad to hear from you, with what demonstration of love and respect that people have entertained you, as you pass. And you have all the reason in the world to hold their affections to you, so long as you may do it without impeachment of his Majesty's service, as I will still hope you may. And that you may, you have the daily prayers of

LETTER CXLVII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 126, 127.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am sorry the gout, which disables you to go, should run so fast upon you. I can give you no better counsel against that, than I have often already, you must take heed of late watching and an over-full diet ^b.

By your Lordship's letters I see your freedom and your trust. They both proceed from your love, and I shall, God willing, fail you in neither.

In one of your Lordship's letters you desire me to show the other to the King, and in both you are pleased to ask my counsel. I have read over the larger of your letters to the King, every word of them, and humbly desired his answer to each particular, which you shall here receive.

^a [Algernon Percy, shortly afterwards appointed the Lord High Admiral.]

^b [This letter was in reply to a letter of Sept. 17. See Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 105—107.]

His Majesty, as I was preparing to read the letter, said to me, your Lordship was a brave servant in your place, and uttered it, to my apprehension, with a great deal of reality and heartiness. I did the part of a friend in my reply, and then proceeded to read.

To the first charge, that you have two or three and twenty thousand pounds a-year coming in; to the third, that you purchase all before you; and to the fourth, that you grow extremely rich; his Majesty gave me the same answer to them all, namely, that it was nothing to him what revenue you had, how much you purchased, or how rich you grew, as long as you took nothing out of his coffers, nor wrung it unjustly from his people. And most freely acquitted you of both, with a profession of much joy, that any his good servants should in honourable ways grow and increase in his service; with this touch, that he scorned all such informations, so would he have you. To the second charge, that you build up to the sky, his Majesty was well pleased with what you writ, and the manner of your buildings, and your end proposed in it, and the offer made to himself to take or refuse them. To the fifth and last, which concerns Mr. Barr^c, (I remember the man well, since his being before the Committee when you were on this side,) his Majesty let fall some several particulars, and commanded me to represent them unto you, which I will do with as faithful a memory as I have.

1. And first, his Majesty saith, he doth not think that Barr loves you, yet his carriage hath been such, as that he durst never complain to his Majesty of you to his remembrance.

2. Next, though he have a licence to come over for some special occasions, his Majesty would not have such a trifle thought on; but if that make him forget himself towards you in anything, he shall hear of it.

3. For his access to the King, his Majesty says plainly, he never admitted him to his presence, but once, or twice at the most; but he remembered but once. And then other men present spake, and perhaps from him, but he little, and not one word personal against your Lordship. How this agrees with his familiar boasting, how freely he speaks with his Majesty, I know not.

4. And in the last place, his Majesty laughed at that passage which you had written to me concerning *, and said he knew it well; by which I see, and so may you, how things stand there. But his Majesty commanded me in fine to write these two things to you: the one, that he approves passing well of your service; the other, that he would have you contemn these reports, and remember your own metaphor; not to weary yourself with putting on your armour, till you be better charged than you have been yet, which he is confident he shall not see.

One thing more, and then I have done. As I read the first charge upon this passage, "His Majesty's revenues are increased in his Customs more than twenty thousand pounds by year, which proves, nevertheless, a greater profit to me than ever I dreamt of;" his Majesty said, "But he doth not tell you how much." I replied, "'Tis true, but I presume your Majesty, considering the great services done to yourself, will allow him and Sir George Radcliffe that you promised them.' And the King replied, 'Yea, God forbid else ^d.'

And now having made this relation, I come to my counsel, such as it is. And since you will needs have it, though you may laugh both at me and it, I will give it you. And I take my first rise from the last passage. It may argue, that his Majesty would be content to know in special, what your gain is of the part of the farm. I protest he spake no more than I have written; but lest anything stick there, what hurt were it, that I knew it in particular, and to the utmost, and leave me to make my use of it.

Next, I would seriously advise you to consider all circumstances about the lease of the Customs let by the Lord Treasurer Weston at that time, when you came in; for I have of late heard some muttering about it in Court, but can meet with nothing to fasten on. Only it makes me doubt somebody hath been nibbling about it. I remember I heard you relate it at your being here, but I cannot carry those things in memory.

^d [Wentworth's profit on the Customs formed the 10th charge against him at his trial.]

Thirdly, 'tis counsel enough that I do infinitely approve your resolution, not to speak any more about any public mark of his Majesty's favour: I am confident it will come; and you know, I ever held it best to be left to his own time.

Upon the whole business is my last advice; and it is, that whosoever your enemies be, and whatsoever they attempt, you would offer at no defence, till they shall dare to appear openly; and in the meantime (if you shall think fit) I would pray your Lordship to take notice of this his Majesty's gracious answer given you by me, and by letter to thank him for it. In which letter you may further humbly desire of his Majesty, that he will favour you so much as to call for an account from you, in case he shall hereafter hear any complaint against you, which he in his wisdom shall think worthy an answer; and that for all things else you may stand right in his favour against all causeless malignity. This favour he hath showed to divers upon my knowledge, and I assure myself he will not deny it you. This done, you may rest secure, till the King himself call upon you, and then bark who will.

You have made me bold to give you counsel, and so I challenge from you that you pardon all defects in it; and where you find it weak, as I doubt 'tis all along, that you forget not, it proceeds from a faithful heart, though an understanding of no great reach.

The rest, if I find anything upon my hands, you shall receive by my Lord of Derry, who is now very well with us, and heartily welcome to me. I hope by this time you are crept out of your gout. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your Lordship's faithful Friend and Servant,

LETTER CXLVIII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 131—133.]

Salut. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Having written a short letter to your Lordship's very large one of October 18th^e, and though the course of my service, as you justly observe, admits little leisure, yet your letters, short or long, are so full of kindness to me, and of useful observation in themselves, that they cannot but be welcome, and merit thanks besides, which I heartily give you.

* [See Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 119—122.]

I have received with your letters Mr. Stewart's^f petition. He is now, I think, in Scotland, but whensoever he comes again to me, I shall, I hope, be able to satisfy him, especially if I have not laid my Lord Primate's certificate so aside, as that in the great number of my papers I cannot find it; for the truth is, as yet I cannot. The observation which you make upon this is certainly of consequence for his Majesty's service, and I am sorry if the Ministers on this side do not keep the quarter they should with you. For there is no reason in the world that the sourness of every negative should be put upon you on that side. Great reason there is, that it should be kept off from the King as much as may be, and as great that it should be divided among the Ministers with some indifferency, and not lodged upon one or few. But this is not the way, for every man saves himself as well as he can, let the burden light where it will. And now I am grown almost as proud as you; for whereas you write, that his Majesty must not always look to be served upon such terms, I shall say so too; and perhaps when I am gone, my saying shall be found true. I am heartily glad to hear, that there is not only a fair end made of the cause between the Primate and the Provost, but that they are grown into a good liking either of other, which certainly must needs do a great deal of good, if they can be kept constant in that good way.

My Lord, I use to measure my friends by myself. And though I am loth to deny, yet sometimes I must, or do much worse. And as in such cases I would not willingly my friends should causelessly be offended with me, so neither am I with them upon like occasions. For it is an easy thing for any man to be mistaken or misinformed in a request made to friends. Therefore I pray still rather a denial, than any unworthiness to yourself or your proceedings, if by any mishap I should ask such a thing.

For Challenour^g, he is certainly worth nothing but the gallows. But having made an escape, I believe he will be wise enough to keep out of the way.

Your Lordship apprehends right the ill consequences of the liberty of these times, both in speech and otherwise, and that Prynne is not the first that hath done mischief in this kind; nor do I think he will be the last. Nor have I any great hope to see these things settle, nor other things as considerable as these, till reward and punishment have their full course, and attend merit, not persons.

For Sallee, the town is taken, and delivered into the hands of the King of Morocco, against his rebel, the Saint (as they call him) that would have taken it, and all the captives at Sallee and Morocco delivered; as many, our merchants say, as, according to the price of the market, come to ten thousand pounds at least. There is an ambassador also come with a present of Barbary horses to the King, and to treat of conditions of trade, &c. He had his solemn audience on Sunday, November 5th, and desired a committee to treat^h. What success it will have, your Lordship shall hear hereafter.

I shall thank your Lordship for writing according as you speak to the Countess of Carlisle. For that was true which I writ to you in my last letters, and, I must needs say, I am beholden to her.

The truth is, Bramsell was purchased for the unwholesomeness of Newhallⁱ, and I came thus to know it. In Hugh May's lifetime the purchase was offered to my choice for any friend I had, and I then, knowing what was like to be between the Duke of Lennox and his now lady^j, made him the offer of it. He could not go through with it. After the death of my Lord of Antrim the father^k, my Lady Duchess of Buckingham^l disliking the air at Newhall (as she had reason) spake with me about Bramsell. Hugh May was then dead, so my interest was at an end; but I referred her to young Zouch, the owner of it. So the business went on. And the Magnificat sung among the wild Irish (as you are pleased to be merry) was but the flourish of a young man, who may live to understand himself better.

I have received Sir George Radcliffe's account concerning the settlement between the Primate and the Provost, and given him thanks for it. But I must give you more; for, certainly, without your interposition, that business must have had a sour ending; for I should never have betrayed so deserving a man for any man's greatness; but God be thanked, 'tis much better as it is, and I heartily thank you for it. I see your Lordship hath a great opinion of him, or else you would not trust your son^m with him. And I hope he will discharge that trust so as shall give you content, and lay such a foundation in your son, as shall enable him to withstand any 'Prynning.' And truly, my Lord, I think the Provost will deserve good preferment; but I would not willingly have him left to future times, when I shall be dead naturally, and you civilly as to that place, to be a perpetual drudge to the College, and perchance then get no other preferment. Therefore, since you are upon this resolution, I pray think upon some good bishopric for him, when it falls void, that may not lie too far from the College; and then he may hold the College in commendam, if we can prevail so far with his Majesty; for you know 'tis against his rules for any Bishop to hold Deanery or College. And there will be no way to obtain it, but by acquainting his Majesty how necessary it is, this man stay there till the government of the College be settled, which perchance will not prosper so in another hand. And this, God willing, I shall not fail to do when time shall serve, if you continue in the same mind you are. But one thing more must be done, if you will give the Provost content indeed; that is, he hath a brother which lives in Ireland with himⁿ, a divine, and a deserving man; and if your Lordship would in some moderate way provide for him, I think the Provost would have full content.

I am very glad my Lord Antrim hath so far improved his estate, and certainly there is but need of it, considering what debts are to be paid for himself and his lady^o. As for his prosecution of the Lord President of Munster^p for my Lady Duchess her dower, I am clear of your Lordship's opinion, that he will get little honour in the prosecution, since what is recovered out of my Lord President's estate must be repaid by the young Duke^q when he comes to age. And though perchance it may prove unwelcome, yet if I can have leisure and some fit opportunity with it, I will speak freely with my Lady Duchess, if that may put an end to the business.

I thank your Lordship I have received a very fair letter from Sir Hamon L'Estrange^r, in which he gives me great thanks for the noble respects he hath found from you. But wot you what? I have played the courtier upon this occasion, and thanked the Earl of Holland for putting this occasion into my hands. So your Lordship sees I gain every way, and yet cannot get to be Rich^s.

Your Lordship is very right, that there is no reason all public works should be put upon the Crown. And yet you see how unwilling the people are to contribute to any, be it never so honourable or necessary for themselves. Witness the Ship-money, which at this very present ending of the term is under argument in the Exchequer Chamber before all the Judges, brought thither upon a case of Mr. Hampden's, as I think^t; but I am sure, either upon a case of his, or the Lord Say's^u. So have you the greatest news of the time.

As for the Cathedral of Down^v, the public work you mention, I have acquainted the King with it, and his Majesty is very well pleased you should make such an Act of State as you mention, and set upon the work at such time as you find most convenient. And because we are here not so well acquainted with the affairs of that kingdom as your Lordship is, I do hereby heartily pray your Lordship to cause the letter, which you would have for that Cathedral, drawn there under your own eye, and sent hither ready for his Majesty's hand; which I shall then easily procure you, when I can assure myself there will be no mistake in it.

I am glad to hear that you have settled the Deanery of Armagh to the advantage both of the Primate and the Dean^w; and I hope all good Churchmen there will bless your memory. I hear by my Lord of Derry, that the Dean of Armagh^x hath of late escaped a great mischance from his horse, and am very glad of it.

That which I writ lately concerning a report raised of unkindness between your Lordship and myself^y, I thought had been raised in the Court and spread into the country; but upon search, as privately made as I could, I find it was raised in the country, and sent to Court. The author is dead, and for that and other respects, I'll say no more.

I can write to you no more concerning Ormond and Clare, &c., than I did in my last. The King takes the service exceeding well; and he hath reason so to do. And I well remember what counsels were given in the business of Connaught, and how dangerous they would have been to this of Ormond, had they been embraced; but, God be thanked, He blessed his Majesty better, and I hope will do so still, than to let him follow any counsel that may hurt himself or his affairs.

So far, my Lord, in answer of your letters. But I am told the post goes away this day, and I am willing you should hear from me, though it be to halves. Therefore that which remains of your letter, you shall have by my Lord of Derry when he returns. So, in great haste, I leave your Lordship to God's blessed protection, and rest

MR. LETTER CL.

TO JOHN BRAMHALL, BISHOP OF DERRY.

[Rawdon Papers, Letter xviii. pp. 46—50.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am very glad you are safe come into Ireland, but that you should venture to be twice beaten back upon those rough seas, was neither my command nor counsel. My Lords of the Council here are now thinking upon a new supply to St. Paul's, and as soon as ever that is begun, my Lord Deputy shall be sure to hear of me with the first. As for the money sent by Mr. Culme¹, the party trusted here hath been with me, and so soon as the money is paid in, and that I can see a discharge, I will write an answer to the Dean of St. Patrick's², and give him thanks.

My Lord, I thank you heartily for your Lenten present. The salmon^a and the eels I have received, but not the herrings, which makes me think they were not sent together in the same vessel; and I am the more sorry the herrings are not come, because those which we have here are stark naught. The salmon and the eels are so lately come, that I cannot yet send you word how they prove. But if this letter go not suddenly away, you shall have it in a postscript; for the meantime I pray commend me to my Lord Deputy, and tell him that I have oftentimes purposed to write to him about his Martinmas beef, but still forgot it. It was the worst that ever I tasted; and you may tell him, if he does not take order to send me better, I will not believe that there's any good in Yorkshire. I am very glad to hear, that since my Lord Primate had a mischance by his coach, he caught no harm by it; and for the rest, I shall leave it to my Lord Deputy and you; and secure myself that it will be done sine strepitu.

Now for your merry suit, which may perchance end in earnest; I will take my first opportunity to speak with Dr. Gwin, somewhat afar off, and see what he will say to me, and then come closer to him as I see cause. But in the meantime I must desire you to send me present word, how I shall be enabled for proof against him, in case he stand out resolutely against me, 'That the Church of St. Culy is within the Act of dissolution.' I am glad my Lord is pleased to be so mindful of the Provost and his brother. I hope they will deserve both such preferment as he shall think them fit for, and I shall concur most willingly, if it be such as I may serve them in. Since my Lord employs you so thick upon your return, I shall be content to stay for the account of restitutions to the Church, till leisure will give you leave to send it me perfect^b. Only I could be content, you would add to

But if my Lord fall to conjuring of them, I make no doubt but I shall quickly hear more. Your mentioning of my Lord's forwardness to St. Paul's, makes me think farther of that business; and you may tell my Lord from me, that when I send to him for his second 100*l.*, I will desire him to take care, that yourself, and such other Englishmen as are Bishops there, and likewise your Master of the Rolls ^c, and your Secretary ^d, and such other English as are of the Council there, or in places of judicature, may contribute as well as his Lordship; and I hope there's none of you will refuse me in this motion. Since I writ this, I have spoken to Dr. Gwin about the Church of St. Culy at Holyhead, and he confirms 'tis his, and withal hath told me what he means to do with it, which is, that he will take direction from the Diocesan, what is fit for him to add for maintenance of the Incumbent for ever; and that addition he will make. The rest of the means he intends to settle upon Jesus College in Oxford, which is a Welsh foundation there, and needs it^e. So you see he intends the public in it; but yet if there be any strong title against it that you know, it is not amiss you impart it to me, that so

S. in Christo.

SIR,—I should have written sooner to you, but that I did not till now hear of your return to Oxford. My business is this inclosed paper, which was put up to the Lords Committees by the King's Commissioners for Depopulations at the end of the last term. I then desired of the Lords that the College might not be called to answer till your return home, which was granted. But the next term, when we sit again, you must either come up yourself to attend that business, or send somebody fully instructed for the College.

One thing more I must tell you, that though I did you this favour, to make stay of the hearing till your return, yet for the business itself, I can show you none; partly because I am a great hater of depopulations in any kind, as being one of the greatest mischiefs in this kingdom, and of very ill example from a College, or college tenant; and partly because it concerns me very deeply in the particular of my archbishopric. For, by reason of decay of tillage in that parish, the rectory, which was thrust upon the archbishopric for better land, and was wont to yield 30*l.* per annum rent, and apportionable fine, is now turned upon my hands, and no man will give me 15*l.* a year, and that without a fine. So that you must think I shall take the best care I can to preserve the rights of my archbishopric against any kind of depopulation, or decay of tillage whatsoever; and I am sorry to find your College named in the business. This is all that I have at present to trouble you with. So, wishing you health, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CLII.

[Twells's Life of Pocock.]

The Primate^s is persuaded that the Patriarch Cyril can procure Clemens Alexandrinus's Hypotyposes. It were wonderful well worth getting, if it might be had. But for my own part I do not think the Patriarch hath it. Yet you may try and hearken after it, that I may be able to give the Primate the better satisfaction. The Primate writes further to me, that Greece having been so often gleaned, the likeliest way left for good Greek manuscripts is for you to strike over from the place where you are to Natolia, and see what that and Mount Athos will afford you, whilst you are so near them: which yet I must leave to your own conveniences.

LETTER CLIII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 169—171.]

Salut. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your Lordship's letters of April the 10th^h, in full answer to such of mine as lay by you; and must crave your pardon that I writ not to you, when William Raylton writ last. The truth is, my business here grows upon me, though I grow older and more unfit for it. But I am very sorry to read in the beginning of your letters, that you complain of a decay in your sight, and the whole frame of your body, for this is no time to have such as you are fail. But though I could not write when William Raylton writ last, being suddenly after the receipt of your letters, yet I desired him to signify unto you, that I had spoken home to his Majesty (as indeed I did) concerning your great business with the Lord Chancellor of Ireland¹, which I hope will go well, and if it should not, * * * * nay * would be worse for it, considering how all government is shaken at this present.

I cannot possibly say more to your Lordship than I have concerning the new book of Rates; and when the Ministers of State on that side shall have sent over their judgment upon it, we shall soon see what will become of it; and whatever be an Englishman's quality, not to let things alone when they are well, yet in this particular there is a Dominus opus habet, and that will go far in all these businesses; and if it go not too far 'tis well.

I shall be very glad to hear that Christ Church goes on, but sorry withal for that which you write after, that there is such a great death of cattle and sheep amongst you, that it cannot begin this year; and a murrain amongst cattle is no good sign.

I leave my Lord of Antrim's patent to the care you mean to take of it for my sake, and I am very much bound to you that you will take the care you do, since I cannot but collect by your letters, that it is for my sake only you do it. But I am sorry the while, that any distaste hath been given you. And for the business that concerns the Lord President of Munster, I am glad to hear from you, that you conceive he hath not given any rough or distasteful answer to my Lady Duchess, and do hereby promise you to do all the good offices I can, that the business may settle to the Lord President's content, and that nothing may be done to the prejudice of my Lord Duke's memory, or the young Duke's fortune¹.

Concerning the Bishop of Cashell^k, I am clearly of your Lordship's mind, that he hath as much as he deserves, and can write no more in that business than I have already; and I profess I would not have writ so much, but for the Queen of Bohemia's sake, who writ to me; but how far you will let that prevail with you, I leave to yourself; only I doubt, if nothing at all be done, his wife will clamour to the Queen again, and it may be, though the man deserve little, if something were done to satisfy their importunity, it might not be amiss; but I leave it wholly to you.

The plantations of Ormond and Clare are a marvellous great work for the honour and profit of the King and safety of that kingdom, and you have done very nobly to follow that business so close¹; but I am sorry to read in your letters, that you want men extremely to fill that work; and this is the more considerable a great deal, that you should want men in Ireland, and that the while there should be here such an universal running to New England, and God knows whither^m; but this it is, when men think nothing is their advantage, but to run from government. As for your being left alone in the envious and thorny part of the work, that's no news, at least to me, who am forced to the like here, scarce a man appearing where the way is rough indeed. But as for the encouragement, which you will needs say you have received from me, I am glad if I have given you any, though I profess I cannot arrogate anything in this to myself.

I cannot but continue my counsel still for your health, and that not only out of my due respect to your person, but for the public service-sake of God and the King, there being so few considerable in this public way, indeed not many able, and fewer willing. As for the encouragements in the service, which are reward and punishment, there is as much, if not more, in the right placing them, as in the things themselves; and to place them right, is not every governor's either skill or good fortune, nor the happiness, on the receiving part, of many that serve both prudently and faithfully, which makes up that most certain uncertainty, which waits upon the life of man, at least in regard of his own knowledge of them, or power to prevent or order them, though not in regard of that Supreme Power that is over them. But once for all, if you will but read over the short book of Ecclesiastes, while these thoughts are in you, you will see a better disposition of these things, and the vanity of all their shadows, than is to be found in any anagrams of Dr. Donne's, or any designs of Vandyke; so to the lines there drawn I leave you. This done I shall not need to answer the next passage of your philosophy; but that he that serves shall see how to steer himself, whatever the governor do, or omit, that is over him, and make his best use of that, which is oftentimes worst done. But for your close, I agree wholly with you, that a prince puts a great prejudice upon his own affairs, if he continue a servant longer in any great employment, than he will give him trust and power to execute it.

Your mention of Mr. Hampden (and I must tell you, I like your censure of him and the rest very well) puts me in mind of the Ship-business as now it stands. The Judges have argued by four in a term, and so eight are passed, and four to come for the next term. Of the eight that are past, none have gone against the King but J. Crooke and J. Hutton^a, who both did it, and very sourly. The accidents which have followed upon it already are these: First, the faction are grown very bold. Secondly, the King's monies come in a great deal more slowly than they did in former years, and that to a very considerable sum. Thirdly, it puts thoughts into wise and moderate men's heads, which were better out; for they think if the Judges, which are behind, do not their parts both exceeding well and thoroughly, it may much distemper this extraordinary and great service. But one thing else hath happened strangely, and which must needs do a great deal of hurt. There is a divine, one Mr. Harrison, a St. John's man^o (I am sorry for it), a man of between forty and fifty years of age, a very excellent good scholar in all kind of learning, but wilful and proud, and that hath full out as much want of discretion, as store of learning; this man, it seems, thought he was able to confute Judge Hutton's argument, and that in a strange way too; for upon Friday, May the 4th, (the Judge having made his argument the Saturday before,) Harrison came into Westminster Hall, and to the

^a [These were the only two who went against the King. See a statement respecting Crooke's irresolution just at the last in Whitelocke's Memorials, p. 24. Their opinions are reported in extenso by Rushworth (Collections, vol. iii. Append. pp. 159—212).]

^o [Thomas Harrison was Rector of Creeke, in Northamptonshire. The proceedings against him are given in Rushworth's Collections, vol. iii. Append. p. 268. See also a letter from Mr. Justice Hutton to the Lord Deputy, Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 177, 178.]

Common-Pleas Bar, and there openly accused Judge Hutton of high treason. You must think this made a great noise in the Hall, as indeed it did, and the man was committed to the Fleet. I left this space thinking I might be able before the sealing of my letters to let you know what is like to be done to Harrison for this offence; but he keeps his Whitsuntide in the Fleet, and what will be done to him the next term I cannot prophesy.

I do not understand how the removing of the Bishop of Down to Knockfergus ^P, can build the Cathedral of Down; therefore I pray you send me your comment, or else I'll send for the chimney-sweeper of Oxford, according to your advice, and so divert my thoughts.

There is a great contention fallen out between the now Lord Clare ^Q and his brother, about the old Lord's will, and some other differences, but what issue it will have, God knows. I find by some of my friends that the Earl is jealous of me, as if I took him to be a man great with the Bishop of Lincoln, and therefore liked him not. But the truth is, his Lordship is a stranger to me, more than that I know him; and I meddle not with his or any man's friendships; I hear his Lordship is a wise man, and not likely to follow any man's courses to his own prejudice.

The Irish Committee hath not sat since your Lordship's last letter came to me; but when it doth, I shall do the best service I can, towards the reglement of appeals from thence.

The last business in your Lordship's letters concerns the composition with recusants; and though I do wish from my heart the King's revenue were increased in another way rather than that, yet since the wisdom of his Majesty and the State have thought it expedient to go that way, I shall be very careful not to distemper any public service, and therefore your Lordship may be sure, as I will do nothing against the thing itself, so neither will I proceed in anything, which shall be thought fit to be proceeded with, but with public allowance. But, my Lord, if any of them shall commit such crimes, as that the conformable subject of England should be punished for them in the High Commission, I hope in that case no man can think it fit they should have immunity; for if that should be once resolved on, that very impunity would in short time make a great step into the change of religion, and God forbid it should have any such operation. As for the Bishop which you mention^r, I shall neither rely upon his judgment, nor be swayed with his earnestness, nor make profit to apparitors, but take only known crimes, and that in the warrantable way. So have you my answer to your large letter.

And now, my Lord, I have not much to add, yet somewhat I have. My Lord of Northumberland was at the last made Lord Admiral^s, till the Duke of York^t come of age, and I am sure you know the steps of that business. But now (which I am heartily sorry to write) all the hopes of his service are in danger, for he hath been in a high fever now these three weeks; and though the physicians speak of out of danger, yet I for my part, out of my love to him and his worth, am very fearful. I pray God comfort and repair him, for his loss will be great in these times.

Since I writ the passage before concerning my Lady Duchess and the Lord President of Munster, I casually met my Lord Antrim in Court, where I spoke very seriously with him about the business, and found him for himself very reasonable; yet he professed withal, that his Counsel were all clear for his Lady's right, without any recovery to be had from the young Duke at his coming to age. I urged as well as I could what your Lordship had written, and spared not to add withal, how kind your Lordship had been towards him in all his business on that side, and what continual use he must needs have of your favour. My Lord replied with serious protestation, that he held himself very much beholden to you, and should ever labour to deserve your love, and that he thought his Lady would have been as willing as himself, had it not been for two things; the one was, the Lord President had refused to do anything at my Lady's intreats for the relict of Captain Gosnall, notwithstanding the main profit came to his Lordship, though the Captain was the first mover, and that the satisfaction could not be justly demanded of any but of the Lord President, to whom by my Lord Duke's favour the benefit descended; the other was, that Sir Robert Pye^u and the other trustees for my Lord Duke's estate had given their judgment by the advice of Counsel to his Lady, that the money in question did belong to his Lady's right, and that this would clearly appear. I desired his Lordship, when he saw Sir Robert Pye next, to send him to me, which he did, and Sir Robert Pye affirmed all as I have above written, and having brought his papers with him, showed me first the business concerning Gosnall's widow, who seemed to have some grounds of relief, both in honour and conscience; and this relief, whate'er it were, (at least as it seemed to me,) was to come from the Lord President. And for the other business, he told me, it had received an hearing in Ireland since your Lordship's own time, before Sir William Parsons^v and Sir George Radcliffe, and was awarded for my Lady Duchess. I could not tell what to say to this, but leaving his other papers (for he had many), I desired copies of his Majesty's letters to Sir William Parsons, and of the award made by Sir William and Sir George Radcliffe, which he sent me, and I send you here enclosed. I cannot tell what I should do more, but if your Lordship shall be pleased to give me any further light, I shall do anything that is fitting for me, though a hard task it will be for me or any man to persuade people to give away their own; though I must needs do my Lord and his Lady this right, that they are very forward to do anything they can, wherein your Lordship's name is used. I have brought Sir Maurice Williams^x to kiss the King's hand, and more kindness than that he desired not of me. So I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CLIV.

TO SIR WILLIAM BOSWELL^y.

[Brit. Museum, Add. MSS. 6394, fol. 292.]

WORTHY SIR,—I perceive by your letters, that you have been very careful of our Church-businesses in those parts. And very sorry I am to hear from you to what little purpose that great good pains of yours hath been taken. And now you see I am so well acquainted with these men and their ways, that I was able to prophesy to you that the Synod would fit the time, and provide for you a May-game in May.

I see likewise, that you find my judgment true which I passed upon Balmford, whose peevishness hath done a great deal of harm there, and crossed, or delayed at least, the progress of that which could not but have done a great deal of honour to the English Church, and been of great use and benefit to such Englishmen as live there. But now, since things are so distempered, you must take as prudent and wise a way as you can to regain the ground which Balmford's frowardness hath lost.

I am sorry to hear that such swarms of wasps (for bees they are not) are flown over to those parts, and with such clamours against our Church affairs; for which, God be thanked, there is no cause. Nor hath the Church of England suffered of late any way so much, as by their base and libelous both tongues and pens; for which God forgive them. And if the copy of my speech ^z hath done you such extraordinary good service (as you write), I am heartily glad of it. And if you have any friends there which understand English, I have some copies by me to spare, and will send them to you, if you do but send me word that you have friends there to receive them. That which remains I must leave to your wisdom and moderation, and yourself to God's blessed protection. So I rest

Your very loving Friend to serve you,

S. in Christo.

WORTHY SIR,—I have had great reason to approve your desires, and your endeavours too, for the advancement of the honour of the English Church in those parts. But I see you will have much ado to do any good that way as things now stand. And whereas you write, that you neither have nor are like to have such opportunities as others in former times have had, I doubt that be too true. For I find that I may say that as well as you. The more to blame they who had not only so fair a time, and lost it; but carried things so as that they have made the work far more difficult for others which come after them.

Concerning the differences which fell out between some English and Scottish ministers, it was very well it went no further than Breda. But sure the answer which you gave about the determining of it there was very well taken. For else I should have been sure to have heard of it, Mr. Secretary Coke having at that present forgotten to acquaint me with it. And, indeed, I think this forgetfulness did the rather fall upon him, because (as himself hath told me more than once) he thinks you give me an immediate advertisement of such things as belong to the Church.

I have herewith sent you a dozen copies of my speech in the Star-chamber; because I find 'tis translated into Dutch: for Dr. Goffe^a brought me a copy in Dutch not past a day before I received your last letters.

I have together with your letters received a letter from the Queen of Bohemia, and another from Dr. Higgs^b. And because I know no other way how to convey my answers to their hands, being now at Rhenen, I shall make bold to trouble you with them. And if I have so much leisure to write my answers now, you shall receive them here inclosed;

but if not, you shall have them the next time I write. So wishing you all health and happiness, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest

Your very loving Friend to serve you,

LETTER CLVI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 184, 185.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Since I writ last, I have received no letters from you, and was therefore minded to trouble you with none of mine, till I had heard from your Lordship again, but there are two occasions which make me trouble you with these few lines.

The one is, an offer that is made here for the bringing in of certain finable men into the judicatories there. What he can perform that offers, I know not, but I am therefore glad that he came to me, that I might be able without any further noise in Court to put him into a right way, and have therefore moved the King that I might send him back to you, to judge and order both him and his project. The party hath been very ill, and therefore cannot return yet; but so soon as he is able to go back thither, you shall by his hands receive another letter from me with all particulars.

The other is concerning Croxton, from whom I never heard word since your Lordship settled him upon the benefice he now hath till now, and this letter (the copy whereof you shall find here inclosed^c) I received not till July the 6th, though it bear date April the 18th, and he that made the pro-

^c [Croxton's letter is preserved by Prynne (Cant. Doom, pp. 194, 195). Speaking of his own practice he says, "To provide the best I could for the more worthy receiving of the holy Communion last Easter, I have (I thank God for it) been able in some measure to do that here, which able men have sufficiently spoken of elsewhere, I have sacramentally heard the confessions of the people committed to my care in Goran . . . they kneeling before the altar." He then speaks of the conduct of Dean Synge in the Irish ject above mentioned brought it to me^d. I remember very well there is somewhat in the Canons of Ireland established last Parliament, that belongs to Confession^e, but I have not the Canons by me at Croydon, and therefore cannot particularize it, only I doubt Croxton hath borne himself too boldly upon it; besides, it seems he hath not forgotten Dean Sing^f, and the business which befel him in the Convocation. Howsoever, upon the whole matter, I thought it very requisite to send the copy of his letter to your Lordship, that if any noise be there made about it, you may timely prevent or meet it, before it do harm in these broken times; and for Dr. Sing, I desire the passage about him may be concealed to yourself, otherwise it will exasperate, but do no good. I did not hold it fit to send this copy to my Lord Primate, because both you and I know he hath a stitch against Croxton already, and I love not to make things worse, since I know too well that very little trifles in Church pretensions make much noise, and are hardly laid down; as you may see by the Scottish business, which is grown very ill.

The Scottish business is extreme ill indeed, and what will become of it God knows, but certainly no good, and his Majesty hath been notoriously betrayed by some of them. There is a speech here that they have sent to know the number of Scotchmen in Ulster; and that privately there hath been a list taken of such as are able to bear arms, and that they are found to be above forty thousand in Ulster only. This is a very private report, and perhaps false, but in such a time as this, I could not think it fit to conceal it from your

Convocation. The receipt of this letter from Croxton was urged against the Archbishop at his trial. See above, vol. iv. p. 288.]

^d [Croxton states in his letter that the bearer was "a servant to the Earl of Ormond, and Chirurgeon to his troop, by name Michael Oxenbridge."]

^e [The Nineteenth Canon of the Irish Church provides that "the minister of every parish shall, in the afternoon before the said administration, give warning by the tolling of the bell, or otherwise, to the intent that if any have any scruple of conscience, or desire the ministry of reconciliation, he may afford it to those that need it," &c.

(Wilkins' Conc. tom. iv. p. 501.)

Wentworth, in his reply to this letter (Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 195), remarks: "There is something further touching confession in these Canons, than are in those of England, and in my poor judgment much to the better. For howbeit auricular confession to the parish priest is not allowed as a necessary duty to be imposed upon the conscience, yet did I never hear any but commend the free and voluntary practice of it to such a worthy and holy person as should be thought fit to communicate with in so serious and important a business."]

LETTER CLVII.

TO JOHN BRAMHALL, BISHOP OF DERRY.

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I shall expect the beginning of the exact account you promise of the Church of Ireland this vacation^g; and should be very glad it might not only be a beginning, but a full account to this present, if it may be. But whatever you send shall be welcome, till more come; only I pray keep a copy of both, that you may know exactly where you leave, and that you may have it safe, in case the copy you send to me should miscarry. I make no doubt but it will please God and the King to give you good content in the way of service you now are. And for my Lord Deputy and myself, I think you are sure enough of both of us. And howsoever, I am of the same opinion I was, that you are not to think of a private life, but must make a contentment to yourself out of the public as well as you can. I thank your Lordship for your respect to my kinswoman, Mrs. Browne^h; and if your Lordship and my Lord Deputy do think her daughter will be a fit match for Mr. Howlettⁱ, I shall easily rest satisfied; and am very glad to hear that Mr. Howlett is a man of that temper and moderation that you express in your letters. But for my own part, I have never been a meddler in marriages, and do not mean to begin now.

ⁱ [See above, vol. iv. p. 5, notes ^a, ^b.]

For the Provost, the motion of his keeping the College, though he was a Bishop, proceeded originally from my Lord Deputy, and not from me. And there is no man that loves the Church, but hath great reason to observe him, and give him all the content he can in his just desires. And if it appear to him that the dispensation will not serve, I promise you absolutely for my part, I will not take away the statute. I have written to my Lord again about it, and there leave him free to do whatsoever he shall find best and fittest. For two Bishops being of the Committee for Plantations, you may let it rest if you please; for I am clearly of opinion as well as you, there will be little use of them in my Lord Deputy's time, for he will supply all defects that way. But for after times, though this would have been a good example, yet they will be regulated according to the Deputy there, and his disposition toward the Church; and therefore that must be left to God's blessing, and I will trouble you no further in this particular. I like the clause^l well you desire should be added to the minutes of those letters which are for Bishops, and I shall deliver a note concerning it in writing to W. Raylton^j, that so it may be put in practice upon the next opportunity, and so after to continue in use. For your brother I have heard no more speech at the Council-table since I writ last. So that if the gentlemen of Cheshire stir not, it may be that business may die. I have nothing else to trouble you with, but to thank you for your love and respect to myself. So I leave you to God's protection, and rest ^l You shall do well to acquaint my Lord Deputy with this clause, that it may not appear strange to him when the letters come.

W. CANT.^k

Croydon, Aug. 11, 1638.

^k [This letter appears to have fallen by mistake into Wentworth's hands, for under the superscription is added in his writing: "In truth, my Lord, though I opened this letter unawares, taking it to have been for myself, yet I only read two or three of the first lines, when finding my mistake I gave over."]

LETTER CLVIII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 211—213.]

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am heartily sorry to hear you have been ill, and that that indisposition hath continued from the 22d of June to the 24th of July¹, yet I find you have been subject to two diseases in this space, the army and the stone. And of the two I think the army is the stronger, though the stone be the more painful. Well, I am no physician, yet I'll venture to give you some good counsel, which is, that you should bring down the army, and conquer the stone. And if it be not able to do that for you, then get out the stone, and throw it at the army; and if you can but do this latter, you shall be sure to be master of as many stones as you throw away.

Since I writ last to you about this particular, my Lord of Clare hath been with me. His Lordship told me that the sickness of my Lady, his mother, kept him so long away. He seemed also to know that it was his brother^m that had written to your Lordship about this difference. I told him I knew not who had written to your Lordship, but I am sure you had written to me upon no partial motive, but only for the maintaining of peace and honour in that family. And that for myself, I had work enough, and should be glad he would refuse me, yet nevertheless, since the work was so good, and that you had desired it, and his brother submitted, I would not refuse the pains. My Lord pleaded that my Lady his mother took it very heavily to be so dishonoured by her son; that she expected reparation, which she doubted could not be given by an award. At last he took time till Michaelmas Term to speak with his mother, and give me an answer.

When William Raylton delivered me your Lordship's

¹ [This letter was in reply to Lord Wentworth's of Aug. 7, 1638. See Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 194—196.]

^m [This was Denzil Holles. See Wentworth's Letter to Laud, May 23, 1638. Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 172.]

letters, he said nothing to me of the letters which are to be mended for the Bishop of Cork^a; but it comes all to one, so he hath them. For his Majesty is now at Woodstock, but so soon as ever he returns, that shall be done, and the letters sent back. My last gave your Lordship notice, that both the Primate and my Lord of Derry were earnest with me, by their several letters, not against the Provost, but for Mr. Howlett^o, in regard they thought the Statute would no way bear his continuance in the College. I likewise acquainted you what answer I had given both of them. But I am very heartily sorry to hear that there is like to be a new quarrel between the Primate and the Provost. And if your Lordship take his stay in the College to heart, as you write you do, you must prevent that quarrel, or else you will have a party raised in the College to hinder all the good which the Provost might do, which is the chief aim of your wishing his stay there. And methinks you might speak privately with the Primate, and so do what you would with him. As for the Bishop of Derry, I presume you can rule him; but if this be not done, you were better send the Provost fairly with honour to his bishopric, and think of as good a successor as you can for the College.

I writ to your Lordship freely what I knew concerning the Book of Rates, and thereupon was bold to add what I thought was fittest for you, but most freely leaving you to do what you shall find best for the King's service, and most agreeable to that duty which yourself owe him.

For the recusants, and their composition, I can say no more than I have already, nor are they meddled with in any other way than as they give open and public scandal against the laws. So I shall trouble you no more with that.

I see Sir Maurice Williams was knighted to get a wife, and that to make a wife a lady will carry her into Ireland. If she prove an agree, the more fits she hath, the less fit she will be for him. For I never knew physician yet, that was able to do more with his wife in that kind of cure than other men are with theirs. As for men of your experience of three wives a-piece^p, I have not so little wit as to offer to talk to you. But this I daily see amongst you all, you speak your pleasure of the poor women, and the trouble which they create to you; and yet so soon as ever they are gone, you marry again. I pray, can you tell me what you call this in your experience? But for the Doctor, if his wife do prove an ague, the studying of Hippocrates well will do him more good than either Galen or Paracelsus; for to that most learned author I see most married men have daily recourse.

^a [This See was vacant by the promotion of Richard Boyle to Tuam. Chappel was ultimately appointed

Bishop, being permitted, contrary to Statute, to retain his Provostship.]

Out I am of the hearing of Londonderry bells, but I am glad they are there.

I thank your Lordship for your answer concerning Mr. Giles Rawlins; I can expect no more, and he must have patience to stay (though it be two years) till the division of Ormond be made. As for your Lordship's being an old Deputy, that's nothing, for you must be older yet, or it will not be very well either with the King's business or the Church's there.

My Lord, I thank you heartily, that you are pleased to take every thing so kindly that I do. The truth is, I have done all things that I can in your service very heartily, and if I have not been as successful as I wish it might, yet of me you can expect no more than my real endeavours, which you have had to the uttermost both of my power and of my understanding. And I believe, since the writing of your last, there are letters come to you which will give you reasonable content in the business of the Chancellor, to which I refer you^q.

Your Lordship may assure yourself I shall not show anything in your letters to his Majesty, but that which I think shall turn to your advantage. But I'll be sure it shall not prejudice you.

I doubt not but by this time your Lordship hath received my letters from the hands of the party himself^r, who will inform you concerning those criminal persons mentioned. And I thought it best to refer him to yourself, that so no man else might make a court business of it, to distemper services there.

I could do no less but acquaint you with that business concerning Croxton, and in that case I thought it fitter to send you the letter itself, than any collection or relation of my out of it. But I am heartily glad if it will so lie asleep. For though the Irish Canon in that particular be much better than ours, and that which he hath done be, for aught I know, according to it, yet I doubt, if it come in question, he will be remembered for the differences which happened in Convocation, and which were pursued by Dr. Sing, and somebody else was in it, as I know you remember.

I do not well understand that which you mention concerning the Earl of Annandale*. It is true he went into Scotland, I know, for he came to take his leave of me; but I did not hear him speak of his going into Ireland. But it seems he had some business there, which they would all have if they might. And though I can scarce read his name in your letters, yet you describe him so lively, that I think I am not mistaken in his person. As for his speech, as 'tis like enough to be his, so it savours too much a great deal of the humour of the times. And it will stand the King upon every way to look well to himself, and to consider whom and how far he may trust. For myself, I thank you for putting me in mind of my prayers; for I well know they love me as heartily as they do you. And I have so many tokens of their favour, as that I need not otherwise be put in mind of their love. And yourself may remember what they said to your Chaplain concerning me as well as you.

By the last passage of your letter, I see you are gone on hunting. God send you good sport; and you do well by recreation to settle some health against Michaelmas business overtake you. For my own part, I have scarce had any leisure all this summer.

I find, by your letters, as I said, you are gone on hunting. I hope you will find a time to go on fishing too, for I mean to be a very bold beggar, and desire you to send me some more of the dried fish (I do not know what you call it) which you sent me the last year; it was the best that ever I spent. And now you cannot say but I give you warning enough; if it prove not too much, 'tis well; for I doubt you will go near to hunt it out of your memory, and then think to stop my mouth with some of your hung beef out of Yorkshire, which, to your skill and commendation be it spoken, was the worst that ever I tasted, and as hard as the very horn the old runt wore when she lived. Nor would I have you think that I go against any old proverb in this, for 'tis one thing for a man not to look a gift-horse in the mouth, and another how gift-beef relishes in one's own mouth. But since you are for both occupations, flesh and fish, I wonder you do not think of powdering or drying some of your Irish venison, and send that over to brag too. Well, there's enough of this stuff. The rest, now that I have spoken with his Majesty, follows.

If Dr. Bruce will justify that Galbreth hath either sworn or subscribed the Covenant, your Lordship is to make stay, and not to put him into possession of Taboine^t. And in the meantime, I have, by his Majesty's command, spoken with my Lord Marquis Hamilton (who is suddenly and unexpectedly come hither^u), to inform himself, and send up present word of the truth of it; and if he have subscribed, his Majesty is resolved he shall not have the benefice. In the meantime, I would I knew his Christian name, and the place in Scotland where he subscribed.

I have acquainted his Majesty with the strength of the Scots in Ulster, and made him very sensible of that great inconvenience, as you will see more at large in my inclosed.

^t [Taboine, or Teaghboyne, a benefice in the gift of the Duke of Richmond, had been held by Thomas Bruce, Archdeacon of Raphoe. It does not appear in what manner this preferment was now vacant, or how the presentation to it came into the hands of the Government. The surmises against Galbreth appear to have been ill-founded; for (in Carte's Life of Ormond, vol. i. p. 531) mention is made of a "Mr. Archdeacon Galbraith, a Scot by original, but well affected to episcopacy and monarchy, of very good sense and learning, great prudence, and full as great resolution; well beloved and esteemed by all the British officers and gentlemen in those parts." (See Mant's History of the Irish Church, vol. i. pp. 524—527.) It may be added, that the name of James Galbreth is, together with that of Thomas Bruce, subscribed to an Abjuration of the Covenant, printed in Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 344.]

^u [He left Scotland, Aug. 25, to obtain enlarged instructions from the King, and to induce him to accept the Covenant. He left England with new instructions on the day when this letter was written. (See Rushworth's Collections, vol. ii. pp. 765—767.)]

As for their malignity against you for Connaught, you must bear it. But God forbid they should come to have any more strength, either in Connaught or the Derry, or anywhere else in that kingdom, if they go on in the ways of their country, as it now stands.

As for my Lord of Annandale, you have described him notably; and I care not for all that that's merriment, but his speech in the close will not so well down with me: 'I sware sike a gudely sihte it was i' gude faith as liked him intull his vary hart.' For the sight had been very good indeed, had they contained themselves in their duty. But being as they are, 'tis strange he should call it 'a gudely sihte,' but that his wisdom may do anything. I have now done. So God send you good sport in hunting, and a safe return to Dublin to your business, whilst I rest

Your very loving Friend to serve you,

LETTER CLIX.

TO SIR FRANCIS WINDEBANK.

[Clarendon's State Papers, vol. ii. pp. 17, 18.]

HONOURED SIR,—I thank your Honour for your large letter; and I have read it all over to the King, who was as well pleased with your relation as he is altogether unsatisfied with the Bishop's answer and carriage. For the High-Commission business, I shall give your Honour further account at leisure; but I think the Court did him justice, and showed him favour. 'Tis all of a piece; and I think, if you viewed him well, there appeared little show of melancholy, discontent, or of great infirmity by the stone, in his countenance or carriage. Yet I see you are not merciful enough to weep for a man's sorrow, that cries downright for a mother of fourscore years old, and wipes his nose in velvet^v.

^v [The Editor of Clarendon's State Papers remarks, "This first paragraph relates to Godfrey Goodman, Bishop of Gloucester, who was perverted to Popery by one William Hammer, as appears by a letter from Hammer to Sir William Hamilton, then at Rome, who communicated the whole affair to his Majesty, and Secretary Windebank. The Bishop, as appears by some papers

For your advertisement concerning the Bishop of Chalcedon^x, and his sending to Rome to solicit the making of some English titular Bishops, I had that information in my paper before; but with this difference. I heard nothing of the Bishop of Chalcedon's sending, but I heard one Dr. Holden was sent^y, and that he is at or near Rome by this time: and, as I remember, sent by the Seculars in England; and a jealousy cast abroad, as if it had been done with his Majesty's privity at least. I acquainted his Majesty both with what you had written, and what I had heard; and his Majesty commanded me to write unto you, that you should, out of hand, advertise Sir William Hamilton^z of this, and cause him to labour a prevention as seriously as may be^a.

Mr. Price^b likewise informed me, that he knew from his confidant in Rome, that Mr. Conn^c would never be made a Cardinal, unless it may be understood that his Majesty will take it for a courtesy done for his sake. In the meantime, I hear that Conn stands upon his own merit, and talks so. So, upon the matter, the King's favour shall make him, and he not stand obliged to his Majesty. I put this home, and the inconveniences. So his Majesty hereupon commands you to let Sir William Hamilton understand, that his Majesty expects no courtesy thence, and to require him, as opportunity shall serve, handsomely to let that be known. His Majesty presumes you come not at your son, to receive any prejudice by his disease, and would have you come to Court concerning this business, petitioned his Majesty for leave to go to the Spaw for his health, pretending to be troubled with the stone; but his design being made known to his Majesty, as above, he could not obtain it. Within a year he conformed again."

Laud, in his defence of his treatment of Bishop Goodman for refusing to sign the Canons in the Convocation of 1640, states, "that a writ Ne exeat regno was sent him," adding, "that this writ proceeded, not for anything said or done by his Lordship in the Convocation, but upon other information which his Majesty had received from some other agents of his beyond the seas, as shall appear hereafter, if this be objected against me;" evidently referring to the circumstances alluded to in this letter. LETTER CLX.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 230, 231.]

Salut. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—This letter is as full of love to you and care of your business as you will find it empty of ceremony.

I received about two days since from William Raylton (who is not yet well) a packet from you without a letter; there were in it three duplicates, which I was desired in your name to read over advisedly, and then give you my sense of them. Truly, my Lord, I will.

1. That which concerns the King and your own mistake in the placing of a figure about the valuation of Londonderry lands, is modest and fit, and could not, I think, but please the King^d.

2. That which concerns the four several propositions which have been made to his Majesty about the Derry lands, cost you a great deal of pains to a very good purpose, if as good use will be made of it here, as you have offered from thence^e. The propositions are very prudently both weighed and compared, and I am clear of your judgment which is best and fittest to be taken; and now you have made me to understand them so well, I will do the best service I can, if it come in my way.

3. As for the third, I am half-way into purgatory to think such a motion, in such a place, at such a time, amidst such people, should be offered to you^f; but in this you have played the courtier notably, and I hope to good purpose; you may see by that, what good offices I have done me here, for I have many motions from thence which I can scarce tell what to say to.

But what needs this excuse of not writing to me because of your promise? Your promise was but till Michaelmas, and I asked forbearance no longer, and 'tis now Allhallow-tide; and the reason why I desired that, was partly my being overlaid with these base, Scottish affairs, and partly because, by the King's desire, (which I take for a command) I am once more going to be a fool in print^g; and I had no time but this summer vacation to think of it with any freedom; so you see I hide nothing from you.

Galbreth^h, that would have your great benefice, is a Covenanter; there is certain news of it brought now to the King, and thereupon his Majesty hath commanded me to signify unto you, that you shall not give him the benefice; and yet I will not give you counsel to bestow it without the King's privity. But when you have it in your power, and the time draws on for the bestowing it, if you then send me word, I'll do my best to give you content. I hear further, that this Galbreth hasted out of Scotland for killing a man there, but I am not so certain of this, as I am that he is a Covenanter, that is, upon the matter, that he is a traitor.

I would I had been of your council before you sent to the King to have leave to examine the Earl of Hollandⁱ in your cause against Sir Piers Crosby^j. I find many men of quality relish it ill, and, above the rest, Holland is very much nettled; and though I know your Lordship weighs not this,

^f [This was a letter from the Queen, requesting Wentworth to allow the pilgrimage of the Irish to St. Patrick's Purgatory. See the Queen's Letter and Wentworth's reply, in Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 221, 222.]

^g [He was at this time preparing the second edition of his 'Conference with Fisher,' for the press. It appeared the following year.]

ⁱ [Henry Rich.]

^j [This was a criminal information for a libel against Lord Wentworth. See Rushworth's Collections, vol. iii. pp. 888, seq.]

yet two exceptions take many; one, that you would offer this without sending a fair civil letter to my Lord himself, to show some necessity you conceived you had to examine him; the other, that the interrogatories were general, and too much pressing upon him as a Privy Counsellor. It was moved in the inner Star-Chamber by my Lord himself, and the interrogatories found unfit by the common consent of the Lords.

Now I have done for those things. But this morning your servant brought me your letters of October 22d, 1638, and with it a letter from the Bishop of Down to yourself^k; the Bishop's letter, according to your desire, I here send you back; and, this afternoon, after the Council had been in a body to do our duty to [the] Queen Mother at St. James's^l, I stayed two hours at Whitehall for the King, that your servant might not stay for me. When the King came, I read over (as you desire) both the Bishop's letter and your own to him, and the answer commanded me to give you is this:—

1. First, he thanks you for your great care and circumspection concerning the Scottish business; and though he did send you former direction, that you should have an eye to my Lord Marquis's proceedings, so long as he had hope the Marquis might do good amongst them; yet, now that he sees all the favour he hath showed brings forth no better fruit than their last protestation, his Majesty leaves you to your wisdom with all freedom to take what course you think best, so you take it timely, and suppress them. Therefore now, my Lord, you cannot say but you have your warrant; and my care is such, that I have not slept between the receipt of your letters and this answer.

2. Secondly, whereas the Bishop writes he is informed that some Scots in Ireland are drawing a petition to his Majesty, that they may have the like favour in Ireland which is granted to them in Scotland; to this his Majesty says you may make this answer, That whatsoever he hath indulged to Scotland, is because they have there had sometime a Church-government, such as it was, confused enough, without Bishops; but for Ireland, it hath been ever reformed by and to the Church of England; and your Lordship, his Majesty hopes, will keep the people steady to that; and the Scottish-men which will live there, your Lordship must see that they conform themselves to it, or if they will not, they may return into Scotland, and leave honest men to fill the plantations.

My Lord, this is the sum of his Majesty's answer to both letters. I have moved him to give the like instructions to Mr. Secretary Coke to send you, that all the envy (which is already very heavy) may not lie upon me; but if the King should forget it, or Secretary Coke mistake it, this is the King's resolute answer to me, and you may bide by it, that is, that you take what order you in your wisdom think fittest with your refractory Scottishmen there, so you do it in time, and suppress them before they get the bit between their teeth. So, in haste and weariness, I leave you to God's blessed protection, and rest

Your Lordship's faithful Friend and humble Servant,

Salutem in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Just as I had sent away my letters by your servant, my Lady Cornwallis^m sends to me to entreat me to trouble your Lordship with this postscript only, which is to give you very humble thanks for your favour already showed to her brother-in-law, Sir John Sherlock, and to pray the continuation of the same in any just business of his that shall occasion him to come before you; which kindness of

Just as I was reading my letter, this sad information came from Dr. Wickham^a to my Secretary, which I make bold to send to your Lordship, and am heartily sorry for it, viz. of the lamentable accident of Sir Edward Osborne's son's death, by the fall of the chimneys at York Manor, the last of October^o.

LETTER CLXII.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. p. 245.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—These are briefly to let you know that I am so sensible of the business of Pont and his wife, in the diocese of Raphoe, that I have put it again to his Majesty's serious consideration, and thus he hath commanded me to write to your Lordship.

He would have the Bishop of Raphoe^p to deprive Pont of his benefice for the wild sermon he made against the Bishop's jurisdiction, and to proceed against his wife in such way as her fault deserves, and the laws will bear; and if the crime be not of too old a date, his Majesty would have Sir William Stewart^q questioned for that whoredom and bastardy; but howsoever that fall out, his Majesty's command is, that if

^q [It appears from two subsequent letters of Wentworth that Pont escaped into Scotland, that his wife was imprisoned, and that on the case being heard before the Lord Deputy, Sir William Stewart was publicly rebuked for his contempt of ecclesiastical authority. (See Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 270, 337.)]

Sir William Stewart do not give your letters a good answer, and yourself satisfaction in the public way, you are to remove him from being a counsellor in that state, which he serves no better; yet if all or any part of this his Majesty's direction shall seem too sharp, it is left wholly to your judgment to moderate, as you find cause upon the place.

The Earl of Cork^r and his son were with me at dinner about a month since, all fair, but I then used no speech concerning you; since I heard by Secretary Coke how discreetly and nobly the old man spake of your Lordship, which was the more welcome news to me, the less I expected it: and since coming to take his leave of me, before his return into Dorsetshire, where he means to expect the spring for the use of the Bath, we had a little more free discourse; and truly my Lord did to me speak as much good of your Lordship as any friend you have could do, for your prudence, your indefatigable industry, and most impartial justice, with a protestation that he never spake other language since his coming over, nor ever meant to do; and concluded all with this, that you were the best servant of the Crown that ever came into those parts. He hath likewise promised me some money for St. Paul's. This I thought fit to let you know, the rather because, if I be not much mistaken, he hath been solicited to speak other language. God preserve you and us through these difficult times. To His blessed protection I leave you, and rest LETTER CLXIII.

TO THE MARQUIS OF HAMILTON.

[Rushworth's Collections, vol. ii. pp. 863, 864.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I received your Lordship's letters of November 27; they came safe to me on December 2, after eight at night. I was glad to see them short, but their shortness is abundantly supplied by the length of two letters, one from the Lord Ross^a, and the other from the Dean^t. They have between them made their word good to your Lordship, for they have sent me all the passages, from the beginning of the Assembly to the time of the date of their letters. And this I will be bold to say, Never were there more gross absurdities, nor half so many in so short a time, committed in any public meeting; and for a National Assembly never did the Church of Christ see the like.

Besides his Majesty's service in general, that Church is much beholden to you, and so are the Bishops in their persons and callings; and heartily sorry I am, that the people are so beyond your expression furious, that you think it fit to send the two Bishops from Glasgow to Hamilton; and much more that you should doubt your own safety. My Lord, God bless your Grace with life and health to see this business at a good end; for certainly, as I see the face of things now, there will very much depend upon it, and more than I think fit to express in letters; nay, perhaps, more than I can well express if I would.

I am as sorry as your Grace can be, that the King's preparations can make no more haste; I hope you think (for truth it is) I have called upon his Majesty, and, by his command, upon some others, to hasten all that may be, and more than this I cannot do; but I am glad to read in your letters, that you have written at length to his Majesty, that you may receive from himself a punctual answer to all necessary particulars; and I [am] presently going to him to write largely to you, that you may not be in the dark for anything.

But, my Lord, to meet with it again in your letters, that you cannot tell whether this may be your last letter, and that therefore you have disclosed the very thoughts of your heart, doth mightily trouble me. But I trust in God He will preserve you, and by your great patience, wisdom, and industry, set his Majesty's affairs (to your great honour) in a right posture once again; which if I might live to see, I would be glad to sing my Nunc dimittis.

I pray, my Lord, accept my thanks for the poor clergy there, and particularly for the Bishop of Ross, who protests himself most infinitely obliged to you.

I heartily pray your Lordship to thank both the Bishop of Ross and the Dean for their kind letters, and the full account they have given me; but there is no particular that requires an answer in either of them, saving that I find in the Dean's letter, that Mr. Alex. Henderson, who went all this while for a quiet and well-spirited man, hath showed himself a most violent and passionate man, and a Moderator without moderation^a. Truly, my Lord, never did I see any man of that humour yet, but he was deep dyed in some violence or other; and it would have been a wonder to me if Henderson had held free. Good my Lord, since you are good in the active part, in the commixture of wisdom and patience, hold it out till the people may see the violence and injustice of them that would be their leaders, and suffer not a rupture till there be no remedy. God bless you in all your ways, which is the daily prayer of

LETTER CLXIV.

TO THE MARQUIS OF HAMILTON.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—This day I have received your other letter, with three papers, viz. that which shows you have kept within your Instructions; the copy of the Proclamation which dissolves the Assembly^x; and a copy of the Council's letter to the King^y: both which his Majesty takes to be very good service done for him, and commands me to give your Grace thanks in his name, which I am very glad to do, and I do it heartily.

I have done, and do daily call upon his Majesty for his preparations^z. He protests he makes all the haste he can, and I believe him; but the jealousies of giving the Covenanters umbrage too soon, have made preparations here too late.

LETTER CLXV.

[Mickleton and Spearman MSS. at Durham.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I perceived by the letters which you sent me by Sir Wm. Bellasis^a, that my last letters came safe to your hands. And that's all the business in them that concerns me.

The next, which is very little, is about your Chaplain whom you have left here behind you in the South. I sent you word that he was going to print a book which my Chaplain had licensed to the press. To this your Lordship answers, That if he would have been ruled by you, he should have printed it long ago. My Lord, in this you are deceived; for this which he hath now put to the press is not the sermon which you wished him to print, but another larger tract, which my Chaplain tells me is indifferent good; but how it will satisfy your Lordship's judgment I do not know.

I have good luck this year with mistaken letters; for I use Natha. Butter, the stationer, to send my letters to my Lord the Bishop of Exeter^b, by his Lordship's appointment. Butter inclosed mine in a letter of his own, and being at the same time to send another letter to a factor of his in Ireland, he sends my Lord of Exeter's letter to his factor, and his factor's to my Lord of Exeter. Have you none of these devices in the North? Methinks some secretary or other might do as badly there. Well, my Lord, these are only to fill the sheriff's hands, that he may not go down into the country without a writ to serve upon your Lordship. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest LETTER CLXVI.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT WENTWORTH.

[Strafforde Letters, vol. ii. pp. 262—266^c.]

Salut. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am heartily sorry to hear that your Lordship is laid up in a fit of the gout, but I hope it is not very sharp, because it gives your Lordship leave to write so many letters, and some of them of moment. And as this makes me believe the fit is not sharp, so I pray God it may not be long. But I see your hunting at Cosha^d could not prevent this, and I am confident you did not go thither to hunt for it.

I thank your Lordship for your noble respects to my Lord Antrim^e for my sake; and my respects to him are for his lady, yet I shall press no further for him than his services to the Crown and his good carriage towards you shall merit. And very sorry I am to hear that the lady, being willing to take so great a journey, should be no better fitted at the end of it. I confess I heard some flying reports of it before, but gave no great credit to them till now, that I hear too much from your Lordship. As for their manner of living, let it be as it please themselves, so they pay their debts; for that once done, they are freed from their greatest danger, and may mend anything else at after as they please.

Since I writ last to your Lordship, the Earl of Clare^f hath

been with me, and absolutely, though in very fair terms, refuses my pains, and all other private ways of ending their differences. He saith further, that the lady his mother^e hath been so much slandered in this business by her younger son^h, as that she cannot with her honour admit of a private satisfaction, but will have it publicly by law. So the case stands at present. Yet, if they shall change their minds, and become joint suitors to me to hear and end their differences, I will, as your Lordship desires me, take the pains upon me. But I see it will not come to that.

I shall be glad that all may continue in peace between my Lord Primate and my Lord of Corkⁱ; but I much doubt it will not be. For when those men take a dislike about matter of opinion, usually their differences are as endless as the controversies of the time use to be. Yet I am glad your Lordship hath been at Drogheda, and that there you find one of the best houses in Ireland. It seems Primate Hampton^j did that good to the See. And truly I would wonder that the chapel should have never a communion-table in it, save that I knew some divines are of opinion, that nothing belonging to that sacrament is aught extra usum, and do therefore set the table aside in any corner (good enough for it), save only at the time of administration. Now I pray you tell me in good earnest, may not churches and chapels be thought so too, might they be as easily removed and set up again as the tables may? But I take myself bound to give you an account, why I think all will not be quiet between my Lord Primate and my Lord of Cork. The truth is, when I understood your Lordship's mind so fully set to have my Lord of Cork continue Provost, I writ to my Lord Primate a very fair answer to a letter of his which he had written against it. In that my letter I made a fair interpretation for the Provost's holding the College in commendam, and as I thought then, and do still, a just one; to this I added this clause, that it was fit for his Lordship and myself to give your Lordship all content in anything we might possibly do,

considering what a great benefactor under God and the King you have been to the Church of Ireland. But since these letters of mine, sent four months since at least, I never heard word from my Lord Primate. And I take it his Grace hath printed a book since that^k, and sent me never a copy, unless perchance it have miscarried. And yet further I believe, this business of my Lord Cork's holding the College thrives never the better, because I know my Lord of Derry was as earnest with me as the Primate himself was, that the College could not be held in commendam by the Statutes. But I have taken no further notice of any of this, than the giving a fair answer, neither I hope will your Lordship.

I can say nothing to the Book of Rates till it come over, and then I believe I shall be able to say as little; for I think it will be referred to the great officers of the Exchequer to consider of. But if anything do come in public to the Board, I must needs be of opinion, that you there understand the trading of that kingdom, and consequently the rates which it may bear, better than Sir Abraham^l. And yet let me tell you beforehand, that if you have sunk the rates, which he set, overmuch, it will hardly please here. For though Dives dwell in this Abraham's bosom, yet I know where Lazarus dwells too.

I am very glad to hear that Croxton's^m business sleeps, the times indeed being very ill-disposed for the stirring of any questions, which in themselves are best for the Church. And I thank your Lordship heartily for the care you have of him.

'Tis well that your hunting hath not made you forget your fishing, but I somewhat fear, if it be yet to come from Galway, it will hardly get hither by Lent. And it is the best Lent provision that ever I met with, next to old Sir John Ling. As for venison, if you have any purpose to salt that the next year, your philosophy is very good. It will not take salt if it be heated, and therefore if you do make danger, in the English-Dutch sense of *periculum facere*ⁿ, you must do it upon such venison as is shot dead in the place ; otherwise all, both labour and charge, are lost.

For the martin-skins, when they come, they shall be welcome, but I am sure now they cannot be here by Christmas. And being so much worth, I like your device well of storing your woods with some of the vermin. If they do hurt your pheasants the matter is not great, since their feathers are so much better than the others'.

I am glad Cosha is such a fine mountainous solitary place, and gives you such content ; but the error which I was in, when I thought you dry in your chamber, whilst you were wet in the fields, needs not trouble your conscience much to rectify it. If you got yourself well dried, it was ne'er the worse. I have heard of them that have gone up and down in the dew in thin shoes to cure themselves of the gout. Methinks you should try this experiment, rather than lie bedridden as you do. And I doubt whether your Æsculapius, Sir Maurice°, would approve of the medicine.

Since you refuse to have your hung beef judged by the General Assembly, (and I must needs say your reason is very good against it) my conscience will serve me very well to be both judge and party. For, considering the question goes no deeper than a matter of taste, and the old said saw is, Non est disputandum de gustibus, that is, not one man of another's, I hope I shall have the liberty of a subject to be judge and party here. And yet, being thus a judge, I shall deal very justly with you ; the beef I received last is excellently good, and so fat as to my knowledge I never saw the like of that bone. So you see you may have your commendation of me when you deserve it. 'Tis a pretty accident that all the officers of your army should meet upon the day of the General Assembly's sitting down in Scotland. It must needs set your speculativi on work. And I am glad to hear all that kingdom, not Scottish, are so right set for the Crown. God thank you for it, and so must the King.

I see your Lordship's care hath extended further into your government in Yorkshire ; and your judgment is as right there for the stay of the officers, which you have sent to exercise the train-soldiers ; for I believe as few miracles as you do, and in a military way least. And for the trainbands of England, I am clearly, and have been long, of your opinion, and it hath exceedingly troubled me to see the carriages of these businesses at the Board. And, which is worse, I have no great hope to see it better. For, even upon this great occasion, I do not find so serious and rigorous proceeding as I could wish. And here give me leave to tell you, there is right now a letter come from Sir Edward Osborne, subscribed by him and all that Council. 'Tis very disserviceable to the King, and displeasing here, but I will not trouble you with the particulars, because I know Mr. Secretary Coke was commanded to write them to you, and I presume he hath, before these can come to you. But this particular I shall acquaint you with, which perchance he hath not. Here is a speech, and I doubt true, that there is some difference arisen betwixt the Vice-President and Sir William Savile^p, which must needs make the King's businesses go worse in that great county, which hath hitherto been so forward upon all occasions. And this I thought fit to impart to you, that you may set all public and private as right as you can.

I thank your Lordship heartily for your care about the Lady Carew's business. 'Tis true, I have been often plucked by the sleeve about it, and that in the Queen's presence; and do therefore heartily wish I had some end of it; and I take myself very much beholden to my Lord of Derry for his mindfulness of it.

Indeed, my Lord, the business of Scotland, I can be bold to say without vanity, was well laid, and was a great service to the Crown, as well as to God Himself. And that it should so fatally fail in the execution, is a great blow, as well to the power as honour of the King. And your Lordship is most right in saying there was a failure in the direction. For the truth is, there was too great a desire there to do all without noise, and there was undoubtedly a great misrepresentation of the business itself there; and some seasons and opportunities slipped, and that more than once, and the easy suffering of oppositions too common in a hundred men and more. But these three last, by your Lordship's leave, were all errors about the execution, not the direction; but the first of these mentioned by you was indeed an error in the direction, and a great one; but I could not help it. For such of the Bishops of Scotland as were trusted with it, were all for the quiet way; and that fitting his Majesty's disposition, I was not able to withstand it; and indeed must have been thought very bold, had I taken upon me to understand the course of that Church and kingdom better than they. But the main failure in the direction, if I mistake not, was, that all the Lords of that Council were not more thoroughly dealt with by the King, and their judgments more thoroughly sifted, before anything had been put to execution. And I am confident all had gone well enough, if Traquair had done his duty. But he thought he had all in a string, and out of a desire to disgrace some Bishops, did not only suffer, but certainly underhand do some things, which let all loose, and quite out of their imagined power to recal. And this was the greatest bane of the business, which I have been able to observe, next to the overmuch confidence which the King would still put in him, notwithstanding some Bishops still informed how false and unworthy his carriage was. And for that which follows, I wholly agree with you, that since it is come to this height, if his Majesty do not master them, and bring them under obedience, the first error will be so far seconded with a greater, as that the consequences may be God knows what; such I am sure as I hold not fit to prognosticate.

I humbly thank your Lordship for giving me leave to write my thoughts freely. And I did it, when I writ to you to be careful that nothing might be done on that side by you, that might difficult my Lord Marquis's proceedings. For truly, my Lord, I have been as careful of this business as possibly I could, to the utmost of that poor understanding which God hath given me. But now, my Lord, this consideration is at an end; for the Assembly sits, notwithstanding the Proclamation published by my Lord Marquis in his Majesty's name to dissolve it, and that under the pain of treason; and notwithstanding another Proclamation since, setting down the causes why his Majesty dissolved it, and requiring all his subjects not to accept of it as of an Assembly^a. So that now my Lord Marquis hath sent away his friends that were with him, and they are come to Court these holidays, himself being forced to stay a little longer by reason of a boil broken out upon him, but is now thought to be on his way hitherward. So that you are now free to go in that way for his Majesty's service, which your own wisdom shall dictate to you, according to the instructions lately given you by Mr. Secretary Coke.

And whereas you write, that you are deeply fallen into my Lord Marquis's displeasure, I hope it is not so; but if there be any such thing, it must either come by the infusion of _____, or if not so, then by the clamours of Sir Patrick Hamilton, who hangs here upon my Lord's followers, and no question hath written to my Lord himself. But I do not much fear this business. For upon Mr. Secretary Windbank's presenting of your Lordship's letters to the King (which William Raylton tells me he did freely and fairly), that business is referred to the Judges, as yourself would have it, and of which I doubt not but he hath given you a full account.

If you hear nothing of Mr. Smithwick or his agent, I have nothing more to say till you do, save to thank you for your readiness to hear them, which I do.

I thank your Lordship also for Captain Sherlock, and your great readiness to pleasure the kindred of the Lord Duke of Buckingham; you have done me a great deal of honour by it with my Lady Cornwallis^r.

Truly I am sorry also for the Vice-President's loss of his son^s, and cannot blame the women and children which are with you if they be fearful of such old, rotten, and yet high-built chimneys, which you say are in the Castle; and you shall do very well, I think, to mend them next spring, and so secure their fears.

For the last passage of your letters, I did the very next morning send the paper, which the Master of the Ordnance put into your hands, to the Vice-Chancellor^t, with a special charge that he should consider of the business. I have no answer yet, because this Christmas-time the carrier came not. But if Sir John Borlase be not deceived (as sometimes fathers use to be) in his son's cause, he shall have all the favour he asks ^u. For if that which he desires hath been done for Killigrew ^z, or any other, or if it be doable by the Statute, it shall be done for him. But if the new Statutes will not bear it, and that it hath been done for none, then I am confident you will give me leave to stop at it. For, if I shall break the Statutes in my own time, I shall lay all the government of the University loose again to posterity, which I have been almost nine years in rectifying, and, though I say it, have done some good there. But, at first sight, I hope well of this business, and will give you further account of it, wishing very well in my own particular to Sir John Borlase.

I have now done with your letters, but there is another short one by me, which concerns your Chaplain, Mr. Watts ^y. The truth is, I am exceeding sorry I have not in all this time been able to do somewhat for him at your entreaty. But I hope you will pardon that necessity which I am not able to help. For nothing hath fallen in my own gift within distance, to better that which he hath already, and I have not been able to prevail with his Majesty, the suits of his own Chaplains in Ordinary coming so thick upon him for all those few preferments which are now left in the Crown. Yet this you shall be sure of, I will slip no opportunity till I have done somewhat.

My Lord, I have received a letter from one, whether Mr. or Sir Robert Travers, I know not, but Robert Travers is his name, nor do I know in what course of life he is, but in his younger time he was bred in St. John's, where I well remember him. He did never address himself by letters, or any other way, to me, till now. Now his letters bare date Sept. 24, from Cork, and the desire that is in them is general, that I would write to make him known to your Lordship and my Lord of Derry, but sure it is for some good to be done him, could I tell what. My suit therefore to your Lordship must be as general as his to me, and 'tis only this, that if he come in your way, and deserve favour, you will do what in honour and wisdom you shall think fit, and let him know that I have written to your Lordship to take notice of him. So 'tis time to make an end, and I leave your Lordship to God's blessed protection, and rest LETTER CLXVII.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, p. 177.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received an order from the Lords of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, giving me notice of the great preparations made by some in Scotland, both of arms, and of all other necessaries for war; and that this can have no other end than to invade or annoy this his Majesty's kingdom of England. For his Majesty having a good while since most graciously yielded to their demands for securing the religion by law established amongst them, hath made it appear to the world, that it is not religion, but sedition that stirs in them, and fills them with this most irreligious disobedience, which at last breaks forth into a high degree of treason against their lawful Sovereign. In this case of so great danger, both to the State and Church of England, your Lordship, I doubt not, and your Clergy under you, will not only be vigilant against the close workings of any pretenders of that kind, but very free also to your power and proportion of means left to the Church, to contribute towards the raising of such an army, as, by God's blessing, and his Majesty's care, may secure this Church and kingdom from all intended violence. And according unto the order sent unto me by the Lords (a copy whereof you shall herewith receive*), these are to pray your Lordship to give a good example in your own person; and with all convenient speed to call your clergy, and the abler schoolmasters, (as well those which are in peculiars, as others,) and excite them by yourself, or such commissioners as you will answer for, to contribute to this great and necessary service, in which if they give not a good example, they will be much to blame. But you are to call no poor Curates, nor Stipendiaries, but such as in other legal ways of payment have been, and are by order of law bound to pay. The proportion I know not well how to prescribe to you, but I hope they of your Clergy whom God hath blessed with better estates than ordinary, will give freely, and thereby help the want of means in others. And I hope also your Lordship will so order it, as that every man will at the least give after the proportion of three shillings tenpence in the pound of the valuation of his living, or other preferment, in the King's books. And this I thought fit to let you further know, That if any man hath double benefices, or a benefice and a prebend, or the like, in divers dioceses, yet your Lordship must call upon them only for such preferments as they have within your diocese, and leave them to pay for any other which they hold, to that Bishop in whose diocese their other preferments are. As for the time, your Lordship must use all the diligence you can, and send up the moneys, if it be possible, by the first of May next. And for your indemnity, the Lord Treasurer is commanded to give you such discharge, by striking a tally, or tallies, upon your several payments into the Exchequer, as shall be fit to secure you without your charge. And of this service you must not fail. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother,

Lambeth, Januar. ult. 1638.

W. CANT.

Your Lordships must further be pleased to send up a list of the names of such as refuse this service within your diocese; but I hope none will put you to that trouble.

It is expected that your Lordship, and every other Bishop, express by itself, and not in the general sum of his Clergy, that which himself gives.

LETTER CLXVIII.

[Mickleton and Spearman MSS.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—The opportunity of sending makes me write these my letters to your Lordship. And though I doubt not but that of yourself you will be very ready to do his Majesty and the Church all faithful service to the utmost of your ability, yet considering the danger of the times, and the hazard which both your Lordship and a great many more in those parts will run in case any disaster should happen (which God forbid), I thought it not amiss to give you this friendly Item, and to pray you to use all the possible care and industry you can, that the Clergy under you be not found backward in furnishing of arms, or performing any other duty which they owe to God or the King. I shall not need to instance in any particulars, as being very confident of your Lordship's care and providence in the general. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your very loving Friend and Brother,

W. CANT.

Lambeth, Febr. 10, 1634.

My Lord, there is a book of mine newly come wet from the press^a, but the haste of these would not suffer me to send you one now. You shall not miss, God willing, both of that and another letter very shortly.

LETTER CLXIX.

TO SIR JOHN LAMB, DEAN OF THE ARCHES.

[Prynne's Hidden Works, p. 178.]

After my hearty commendations, &c.—I have received a warrant from the Lords of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, which requires me to write to all the Bishops in my Province, to call their Clergy together, and put them in mind of the great danger which this kingdom is in, by the traitorous conspiracies of some ill-affected in Scotland. These seditious persons have begun, and continued hitherto, their foul disloyalty under the pretence of religion, which by factious spirits in all times is made the cloak to cover and hide (if it might be) their designs. But now it appears clearly to the State; that they daily strengthen themselves by arms and munition, and other preparations for war. And though his Majesty hath graciously condescended to more than they could justly ask in all things concerning their religion and their laws, yet they go on still, and are satisfied with nothing but their rebellious disobedience, and have no less aim than to invade or annoy England. The letters to the several Bishops I have sent as I was commanded, and I doubt not but they and the Clergy in general will give very freely towards this great and necessary defence of the kingdom. And because this great and common danger cannot be kept off, but by a common defence; and for that the reverend Judges and others of the Common-Law have bountifully expressed themselves already; I am required to write to you also, that you, calling to you the rest of the Doctors of the Commons, propose to them now, while most of them are together, this great and weighty business, belonging as much to their defence, as to other men's; and let every man set down what he will give to this service. When this is done I will acquaint his Majesty with it, and your and their forwardness therein^b. And it is expected that you hasten this with all convenient speed. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your very loving Friend,

Lambeth, Feb. 11, 1638.

W. CANT.

You must send to such Chancellors and Officials, as are not at the Commons, but at their several residences. And if you give them a good example here, I doubt not but they will follow it.

You shall not need to call Sir H. Martin, for his Majesty will send to him himself, and looks for a greater sum than in an ordinary way.

LETTER CLXX.

TO G. J. VOSSIUS.

[Apud Claror. Viror. ad Vossium Epist., Epist. cclxxvi. pp. 182, 183.]

Salutem in Christo.

VIR EXIMIE,—Binas a te accepi literas. Diu hæserunt apud me quasi mutum, et nihil respondentem. Harum priores ad me datæ sunt pridie Kalend. Octob. 1637; posteriores vero 12 Kalend. Augusti 1638.

Puderet me certe tanti silentii tali amico, nisi satis tibi, nimium mihi, nota essent intestina pericula, pene jam bella, quibus laboramus. Causa horum malorum e scandalo accepto, sed non dato, prorupit, sed cum gravi scandalo dato Religioni Reformatæ, quæ apud multos Scotorum (in tenebris illiteratorum illiberaliter versantes) didicit contra Regem suum arma sumere, et assumpta defendere. Spero meliora, sed vix habeo quod promittam.

Nolo particularia literarum vestrarum examinare, non solum quia non datur otium, sed quia negotia cum tempore ut plurimum aut variantur, aut finiuntur. Præcipue post tam longa intervalla, quibus, necessitate pene cogente, prorsus silui. Spero tamen uxorem tuam e longo illo, quem meministi, morbo liberatam.

Quod vero nunc me impellit te, Vir literatissime, et otia tua, si quæ habes, interpellare, hoc est. Voluit Rex Serenissimus (i. e. apud me jussit), ut scripta quædam mea, non tamen sub meo nomine tunc edita contra Fischerum Jesuitam^c, iterum prelo, et sub nomine proprio, committerem. Interim scripsit contra illa mea Jesuita A. C., Fischerus ipse, an alius, nescio^d. Multa impediunt, quo minus illi possem respondere; præcipue vero multiplicitas negotiorum, quibus quotidie fatigatus, et qualibet fere horula avocatus fui, me penitus ineptum reddidit huic operi. Sed iustitit Rex Serenissimus; ego obtempero; et sine læsione octavi præcepti temporis quædam fragmenta furatus sum, et lucubrationes meas, quales quales sint, perfeci, et in lucem edidi. Nolui te hoc ignorare, et libellum tibi misissem, nisi quod Anglico idiomate conscriptum tibi prorsus inutilem fore putarem.

Sed audio ita quibusdam hic placuisse, ut in se suscipiant e malo Anglico bonum Latinum facere, saltem quod ad phrasin attinet. Nam aliter quid poterit a me jam sene, et per annos totos duodecim ad minimum a libris literisque avulsum, expectari. Quamprimum liber iste meus, utcumque imperfectus, Latine loqui didicerit, tibi exemplar mittam, et acerrimo iudicii tui acumini subdam, libentius a te amico auditurus in quibus erravi, quam ab inimicis, apud quos utriusque factionis scio decretum esse non parcere. Vivas valeasque, et me, ut soles, ames, et contra malevolos orationibus tuis, quoties coram altari Dei et Christi nostri sis devolutus, tutum præstes

LETTER CLXXI.

TO CERTAIN SWISS PASTORS.

[Apud Præst. ac Erud. Viror. Epistt., Epist. dlīi. pp. 799, 800.]

Wilhelmus Laud, Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis, Pastoribus et Professoribus Helveticis, S.

Confratres mei carissimi, doctissimique Ecclesiarum et Academiarum Tigurinæ, Bernensis, Basileensis, et Schaphusianæ Pastores et Professores.—Literas vestras datas Tiguri 21, Martii 1639, ego recepi 11, (unum scilicet earum exemplar,) duplum vero earundem April. 18, stilo nostro. Et gratæ certe mihi fuere duplici nomine, scilicet quod vestræ, et quod Christianæ pacis suasoriæ. Tales enim decent ejusdem corporis membra, eosque qui communionem sanctorum et credunt et profitentur.

Et certe quod monetis, quanta calamitas Germaniam vestram, et præ cæteris partibus Palatinatum, invaserit, non ignoro; sed nec miseriarum illarum oblitus sum, quæ civilia arma ubique sequuntur, et quæ Britanniam nostram proprio sanguine madidam cito redderent, si invalescerent: sed summis et quotidianis precibus Deum et misericordiarum omnium Patrem oremus, ne sic in ore gladii tantum non nostri pereamus.

Cæterum acerbum licet sit, verum tamen est, quod scribitis; Serenissimum Regem nostrum exercitum in Scotos suos, non suos, ducendum conscripsisse, imo conscriptum duxisse, et nunc una cum exercitu in partibus Regni borealibus paratum esse ad eorum insolentias reprimendas. Sed sicut antehac omnia tentavit, quò rebelles ad meliorem mentem reduceret; ita nullus dubito, quin, si adhuc quæ tuta, quæ honesta, quæ subditis factu necessaria, et secundum Christi religionem ac patrias leges debita facturi sint, clementissimus Rex reliqua omnia, etsi valde facinorosa, oblivioni sepelienda sit traditurus. Reliquum Epistolæ vestræ gratiosissimæ in duas se diffindit partes; una est, quod nullas vobis omnino (sic scribitis) vel cognoscendi vel judicandi sumitis partes, nec velle vos falcem mittere in alienam messem. At messis hæc, piissimi fratres, non prorsus aliena est. Epistola enim vestra sic orditur; ‘Si patitur unum membrum, dolent omnia.’ Corpus itaque unum, alias non membra ejusdem; et qua unum non alienum. Nec cognoscendi partes potestis declinare. Hoc enim dicitis omnium sermone percrebescere, et literis amicorum confirmatum vobis esse, nec tristius quidquam turbis hisce nostris universæ Reformatae Ecclesiæ accidisse. Sed sensu forte forensi vocabulum cognoscendi usurpatis, sicut et judicandi. At utinam judicandi partes in vos susciperetis, et sicut huc literas pacificatorias amice et prudenter misistis, mitteretis etiam ad conjuratos Scotorum alias, quæ suaderent Regi suo obedientiam, confirmarent Regiam in causis Ecclesiasticis, eandem quam optimi Judæorum Reges exercuere, potestatem, condemnarent armatam eorum, sub prætextu Religionis, potestatibus a Deo ordinatis resistentiam, primitivis Ecclesiæ temporibus inauditam; dico, condemnarent et vestræ et omnium Reformatarum Ecclesiarum tum literæ, tum sententiæ.

Nam eo usque excrevit Confœderatorum rebellis audacia, ut post se reliquerit omnem vel Jesuiticam. Et nihil non factura est in Regem suum nativum, eumque clementissimum, in ordine ad Deum et Religionem. Et quod nescio magis dolendum quam execrandum sit, ita potenter apud eos operatur humani generis hostis, ut nulli majores horum tumultuum antesignani sint, quam ministri, et nullibi magis quam e suggestu subditi contra Regem suum pientissimum animen-

tur. Iterum dico, condemnarent. Nam rebellio isthæc adeo gravis et odiosa est vel moderate sapientibus, ut verear, ne tota Reformata Ecclesia pessime audiat ab omnibus præsentibus posterisque, si non aliquid saltem publice scribatur contra infamem hanc erga Principes conjurationem. Nec pericula nostra, qualiacunque futura sint, majora tripudia aut æqualia Ecclesiæ Reformatæ ludibria creare possunt, ac scandala hinc suppullulantia, quæ religionem ipsam omni infamiæ subjiiciunt.

Altera est, quod ex ingenuo (sic dicitis) Helvetiæ vestræ spiritu, ex affectu erga Britanniam nostram, non nuper assumpto, sed a majoribus vestris hausto, ex periculis bellum intestinum sequentibus, denique ex conscientiæ pace, et nominis mei gloria, id velim efficere, ne res armis, sed regia auctoritate et clementia conficiatur, &c. Id velim efficere? Mutate, obsecro, mutate sententiam. Nam si id possem efficere, statim effectum daturus essem. Deum testor et Regem unctum suum, et senatum Regium, qui Regi a secretioribus sunt consiliis, quotquot tum præsentibus erant, me omnia et sola pacis consilia et privatim et publice subministrasse. Quin et fere solus rationibus simul et orationibus apud Regem pietissimum militans (vera dico) illud tandem obtinui, ut rebellibus inter Scotos omnes pacis conditiones semel iterumque et sæpius offerrentur, quæ aut Rex cum honore concedere, aut subditi ulla juris specie expectare potuerunt*. Interim Rex Serenissimus nihil obtinuit, illis Gorgonis capite concussis, et in saxeam duritiem conversis. Nec adhuc tamen desisto, sed qua possum fide, pacem suggero, si inimici non essent rebelles tam sibi quam nobis, et vereor ne plus paci, quam aut nobis aut sibi. Et quid, quæso, in his angustiis potest imbecillitas mea, quando cum illis res agitur, qui aut pacem nolunt, aut talem volunt, quam nulla Regia Majestas ferre potest? Si quis interea me detulit apud vos ut inimicum pacis, (scio enim me utrique factioni invisum satis) Deum oro illi misericordiam, mihi patientiam donet.

* [Vide supra, vol. iii. p. 279.]

TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF EXETER.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. dccccliii. p. 471.]

S. in Christo.

After my hearty commendations,—I send you by this bearer the orders I have drawn up by his Majesty's command concerning the letting of the leases of your manors^f, upon which his Majesty had graciously laid a restraint for the good of that Cathedral, and of succession in it, as well as of yourselves the present Dean and Chapter there. When I set myself to this business, you were present at the hearing and settling of all things. And I have kept myself close to that which I then thought fit, and yourselves consented unto. Since that hearing and settling of the business, I have by letters acquainted his Majesty with all that I have done therein. And his Majesty is graciously pleased to approve of all that I have done, and commands your obedience in all things, with the like command upon myself to have an eye upon it, and see that you perform it. And I hope you will be so careful of your own and the Church's good, as that by your ready obedience and care therein you will ease me of that burden, which otherwise must be upon me, to call continually upon this business. You all know what trouble you have put me to, and how often, to settle peace among you^g. And one great occasion of those dislikes of one another's proceedings hath risen from the variety of opinions concerning the leasing of these manors; which now being at an end, if there be not better order and more peace amongst you hereafter, I shall attribute it to something amiss in your own

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your letters of July the 3d, by the hands of Dr. Cosin ; and I heartily thank your Lordship for them. For the Doctor, I do very well know his deserts are great, and his means not so. But his Majesty hath a very good opinion of him ; and that will, I doubt not, in good time mend his fortunes^h.

I thank your Lordship heartily for your kind acceptance of my last letters ; and as you acknowledge them punctual, so I assure you they were true, and real, and without any empty pretensions at all. And for the business of your Chaplain, Mr. Williamsⁱ, and the Prebendal House which the Bishop of Lichfield^k claims, I shall do indifferent justice between them to the utmost of my understanding, if it come on to hearing. His Majesty's being so long in these parts troubles us all, and makes me for the present have no more to say to you, than to write myself

TO HUGH MENARD.

[Cotelerii Patres Apost. tom. i. ad init.]

Hugoni Menardo Salutem in Christo.

LITERATISSIME VIR,—Gratæ fuerunt mihi valde literæ tuæ, quas una cum Epistola (ut dicitur) Barnabæ, et lucubrationibus tuis annexis¹, accepi. Benevolentia vestra erga me, nescio unde orta, pergrata est, is tamen non sum, qui illud ausim in me suscipere, quod et in literis privatis, et præcipue in Epistola dedicatoria ascribis, et calamo (ut mihi videtur) uberiori quam par est. Post gratias itaque tibi, vir docte, repensas, breviori forsân stylo, quam expectas, sed meo, et quo uti necessitas, et negotiorum moles cogit, hæc pauca dicam.

Barnabæ Epistolam satis antiquam agnosco, non canonicam. Hoc aperte a te dictum vellem, ne auctoritatem ascribendo huic nomini celebriori parum confirmatam, simul et nomini et auctoritati injuria fiat; quin et ipse tibi aliqua, quasi hoc nescires. Quominus autem credam hæc Barnabæ scripta et genuina esse, hæc sunt quæ impediunt.

1. Numeralis illa theologia, sive scientia trium litterarum I. H. T. (ut loquitur^m) mihi non placet. Nam etsi nescius non sum, scriptores satis et antiquos et consultos (Tertullianum, Clementem Alexandrinum, Irenæum, et aliosⁿ) in ea ludere aliquando, tamen non sapit spiritum Apostolicum.

2. Non magis mihi arridet illa Judaica Deuterosis, quam Barnabas hic arripuit, de sex mille annis mundi^o, de qua nec D. Paulus, S. Barnabæ conjunctissimus, nec quisquam alius Apostolorum somniavit, (appropinquare potius diem Domini-cum ubique prædicant) nec Hydaspes, aut Trismegistus, vel Sibyllæ id possunt efficere, ut fides huic detur.

3. Vel ingens admittitur ἀντιχρονισμὸς in hac Epistola, aut auctor non est Barnabas; loquitur enim aperte de excidio

^o [Ibid. § xv. p. 45.]

Hierosolymitano, quod post mortem Barnabæ accidit^p. Nec sufficit dicere, quod in annotationibus adjicis, spiritu prophético et prævidente, et sic de re futura, quasi jam præterita, pronunciantem hæc scripsisse Barnabam; principii enim hæc petitio esset, utrum hanc Epistolam, aliave aliqua scripserit Sanctus Barnabas spiritu prophético.

Ad annotationes vestras quod attinet, doctas quidem et eruditas, quia vis (sic enim scribis) ut aliquid meorum admisceam, loquar eadem libertate, quam ipse tibi vindicas. Quædam explicanda, quædam corrigenda sunt, sive critica spectes, sive theologica. Quin et properante calamo aliquid excidit, quod hic apud nos viri doctiores non nimis approbant, ne quid gravius dicam. Quin et agitavit multa Barnabas hic, quibus animos incautos facile percelleret, quæ tamen ne levi digitulo tetigisti ad cicatricem obducendam; cum apud nos non pauci sint, qui nova moliendi quamlibet ansam arripere avidissimi sunt. Qualia sunt, fuisse Ecclesias istis sæculis incognitas, priusquam ad Constantini tempora veneris, non comparentes. Denique templis non manufactis habitare Dominum, et similia; quæ fluctuante populo aut non proponenda, aut non sine antidoto.

Alia forte sunt limatius adhuc perpendenda, sed et alia etiam me ab altiori hac de re consideratione, et a libris ipsis et eorum usu penitus avocarunt. Hæc tamen summatim (negotiis licet pene obrutus) scribere in animum induxi meum, ne benevolentia vestra in ingratum tibi videretur incidisse. Breviter itaque hæc velim; aut ut ipse accuratiori filo rem omnem perpenderes; (et in hunc finem, si placet, chartulas tuas remittam, per manus honoratissimi viri Domini Scudamore, nuperrime ad Regem Christianiss. legati, qui eas mihi tradidit;) aut, si visum fuerit, chirographum a te expectabo, quo opus hoc mihi vel capellanis meis submittas, ut quædam vel refingantur, vel addantur, priusquam in lucem prodeat; et utrum horum tibi placuerit, factum dabo. Epistola vero dedicatoria, quam vis perlegi, nimias in me conjicis laudes, et quarum ne ipse apud me conscius sum. Nec modestia id pati potest, ut hic, sub meo auspicio, laudes propriæ prelo mandentur. Itaque si post paulo attentio-rem hujus Epistolæ culturam, eam cum annotationibus, nomini.

meo dicatam, vis in lucem prodire, necesse erit Dedicatoriam plane aliam facere, aut eam ibi apud vos excudere, etiamsi opus ipsum hic apud nos publicum fiet; ni tu adulator, ego arrogans audire velimus. Hæc breviter sunt, quæ dicere volui potuive, in angustiis illis et temporum et negotiorum, in quæ conjectus sum. Quæ, obsecro, eodem animo accipias, quo scripta sunt; et si quæ non placent, aut minus firma tibi videntur, ea aut non mihi, aut saltem non nisi mihi implicato placeat ascribere. Vale, meque inter tuos reputa

LETTER CLXXV.

TO THE BISHOPS OF HIS PROVINCE.

[Lambeth MSS. Numb. decccxluii. p. 655.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—The state of the Scottish affairs, as now they stand, cannot be unknown to you. Nor the violence which hath been used in Church businesses. Nor the indignities which have been put upon such grave and orderly Churchmen there, as have showed themselves dutiful towards his Majesty, and zealously careful of good order in the Church. For divers of them have been forced to forsake their country, and to betake themselves with their wives and children, some hither, and some to Ireland, the persecution at home showing no mercy. In this their extremity his Majesty, out of a Christian and pious care to preserve them which have suffered for him and the Church of Christ, hath thought fit to provide in some measure for their necessities; and as soon as might be. And hath therefore taken some of them to his own care, and recommended divers to the Right Honourable the Lord Keeper for such benefices as exceed not 100*l.* per annum. And hath commanded me to take care of other some. And to write my letters to every Bishop in my Province, to provide for one or more of them, according as any benefice within the value aforesaid shall fall void within their gift and disposition respectively. And my Lord the Archbishop of York is to do the same for his Province. To your Lordship his Majesty hath commanded me to assign , and doubts not but you will take the best care you can accordingly. Of which you must not fail. Nor of giving me an account of the receipt of these letters. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother,

W. CANT.

Lambeth, October 13, 1639.

So soon as your Lordship can provide for any of them, you are to give notice hither, that the man, or men, may be sent down to receive the benefice, or benefices, which shall be in your disposal for them.

LETTER CLXXVI.

[Mickleton and Spearman MSS.]

S. in Christo.

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—Your Lordship's letters of August 28 have lain long by me; but it was partly because I had then no opportunity of sending, and partly because the times are so full of danger, that, as I know not whom to believe, so scarce do I know what to write in answer to the contents of your letter. Yet now that term is come and opportunity given me to write, I thought it not longer fit to leave you without an answer, such at least as I am able to give.

Your complaint is somewhat large, that there hath been sinister working against you through the sides of others. But your Lordship shall do well not to trouble yourself much with it. For I know not that Bishop whose place calls him to do anything, but he is so served; so at least: but for myself 'tis not only so, but besides that I am publicly laid at on all hands, and have no fence but to bear it.

I took the best care that I could with Bar. Hendon^a, that he should do for you and your See whatsoever he was able to do with honour and justice. I see by your letters he hath performed both with me and you. And I have given him thanks for it. And the truth is, the Church hath had very good assistance from him in the Exchequer ever since he sat there.

Mr. Treasurer^r, who was with you when you writ your letters, is now here with us, and I am very glad to hear from you how much good he hath done in those parts. The truth is, if the Church had had no worse friends than he, when the King was at Berwick, I think things had gone better than they did. But that's now past; and the next generation will both censure and feel, if things go on in the way they now are. I pray God bless the King and the Church. So to His blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your Lordship's very loving Friend and Brother,

LETTER CLXXVII.

TO JOSEPH HALL, BISHOP OF EXETER.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 233, 234.]

THE rest of your Lordship's letter^a is fitter to be answered by my own hand; and so you have it. And since you are pleased so worthily and brotherlike to acquaint me with the whole plot of your intended work, and to yield it up to my censure and better advice, (so you are pleased to write,) I do not only thank you heartily for it, but shall in the same brotherly way, and with equal freedom, put some few animadversions, such as occur on the sudden, to your further consideration, aiming at nothing but what you do, the perfection of the work, in which so much is concerned.

And first for Mr. George Graham^t. I leave you free to work upon his business and his ignorance as you please, assuring

^r [Sir Henry Vane, appointed Sept. 1639 Treasurer to the Household. His jealousies against the Court had not yet manifested themselves.]

^a [The letter to which this is a reply is printed by Prynne, Cant. Doom, pp. 231—233. The work of Bishop Hall which is alluded to, is his 'Episcopacy by Divine Right.']

myself that you will not depart from the gravity of yourself, or the cause, therein.

Next you say in the first head, That Episcopacy is an ancient, holy, and divine institution. It must needs be ancient and holy, if divine. Would it not be more full, went it thus, So ancient as that it is of divine institution? Then you define Episcopacy by being joined with imparity and superiority of jurisdiction. This seems short; for every Archpresbyter's or Archdeacon's place is so, yea and so was Mr. Henderson in his chair at Glasgow; unless you will define it by a distinction of Order. I draw the superiority not from that jurisdiction which is attributed to Bishops jure positivo in their audience of ecclesiastical matters; but from that which is intrinsical and original in the power of excommunication. Again, you say in that first point, That where Episcopacy hath obtained, it cannot be abdicated without violation of God's ordinance. This proposition I conceive is inter minus habentes; for never was there any Church yet, where it hath not obtained; the Christian faith was never yet planted anywhere, but the very first feature of the body of a Church was by, or with, Episcopacy; and wheresoever now Episcopacy is not suffered to be, it is by such an abdication, for certainly there it was a principio. In your second head you grant that the Presbyterian government may be of use, where Episcopacy may not be had. First, I pray you consider, whether this concession be not needless here, and in itself of a dangerous consequence. Next, I conceive there is no place where Episcopacy may not be had, if there be a Church more than in title only. Thirdly, since they challenge their Presbyterian fiction to be Christ's kingdom and ordinance (as yourself expresseth), and cast out Episcopacy as opposite to it, we must not use any mincing terms, but unmask them plainly; nor shall I ever give way to hamper ourselves, for fear of speaking plain truth, though it be against Amsterdam or Geneva; and this must be sadly thought on.

Concerning your Postulata I shall pray you to allow me the like freedom, among which the two first^a are true, but (as expressed) too restrictive. For Episcopacy is not so to be ^a [The first postulatam, as proposed by Bishop Hall in his letter to the Archbishop, was as follows: "That government which was of apostolical institution, cannot be denied to be of Divine institution." Laud's suggestions asserted to apostolical institution, as to bar it from looking higher, and from fetching it materially and originally, in the ground and intention of it, from Christ Himself, though perhaps the Apostles formalized it. And here give me leave a little to enlarge. The adversaries of Episcopacy are not only the furious Aërian heretics (out of which are now raised Prynne, Bastwick, and our Scottish masters), but some also of a milder and subtler alloy, both in the Genevan and the Roman faction. And it will become the Church of England so to vindicate it against the furious Puritans, as that we lay it not open to be wounded by either of the other two, more cunning and more learned adversaries. Not to the Roman faction, for that will be content it shall be juris divini mediati, by, from, for, and under the Pope; that so the government of the Church may be monarchical in him; but not immediati, which makes the Church aristocratical in the Bishops. This is the Italian rock, not the Genevan; for that will not deny Episcopacy to be juris divini, so you^t will take it, ut suadentis, vel approbantis, but not imperantis; for then they may take and leave as they will, which is that they would be at. Nay (if I much forget not) Beza himself is said to have acknowledged Episcopacy to be juris divini imperantis, so you will not take it as universaliter imperantis, (for then Geneva might escape,) et citra considerationem durationis, for then, though they had it before, yet now upon wiser thoughts they may be without it; which Scotland says now, and who will may say it after, if this be good divinity. And then all in that time shall be democratical. I am bold to add this, because I find in your second Postulatum, that Episcopacy is directly commanded; but you go not so far as to meet with this subtilty of Beza, which is the great rock in the Lake of Geneva^x. In your ninth Postulatum, That the accession of honourable titles or privileges makes no difference in the substance of the calling; if you mean the titles of Archbishops, Primates, Metropolitans, Patriarchs, &c. 'tis well.

appear to have been adopted, for the proposition as it appeared in print was modified thus: "That government whose foundation is laid by Christ, and whose fabric is laid by the Apostles, is of Divine institution." (Hall's Episcopacy by Divine Right, part i. sect. I.)]

^x [The third postulatum, as finally put forth by Bishop Hall, seems to meet this objection. It stands thus:—"The forms ordained for the Church's administration by the Apostles, were for universal and perpetual use."]

And I presume you do so. But then in any case take heed you assert it so, as that the faction lay not hold of it, as if the Bishop's were but the title of honour, and the same calling with a Priest; for that they all aim at, &c. The eleventh postulatium is large^y, and I shall not repeat it, because I am sure you retain a copy of what you writ to me, being the ribs of your work; nor shall I say more to it, than that it must be warily handled for fear of a saucy answer, which is more ready a great deal with them than a learned one. I presume I am pardoned already for this freedom, by your submission of all to me. And now I heartily pray you be pleased to send me up (keeping a copy to yourself against the accidents of carriage), not the whole work together, but each particular head or postulatium, as you finish it; that so we here may be the better able to consider of it, and the work come on the faster. So to God's blessed protection, &c.

LETTER CLXXVIII.

TO DR. JOSEPH HALL, BISHOP OF EXETER.

[Prynne's Cant. Doom, pp. 263, 264, (rectius, 273, 274.)]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I have received your Lordship's letters of Dec. 6, 23, and with them the copy of your book, and in them a paper of short propositions^a, which you think (and so do I) is fitter for the attestation of divers hands than the book itself. These propositions shall be well weighed against the time of Convocation, which I conceive will be a ^y ["If that order which they say Christ set for the government of His Church . . . be but one and undoubted, then it would and should have been ere this agreed upon amongst them, what and which it is." It was afterwards corrected as follows:—"If Christ had left this pretended order of government, [i. e. the Presbyterian,] it would have, ere this time, been agreed upon what that form is, and how to be managed."] fit time to take other Bishops' attestation, without further noise or trouble.

For your book, I first thank you very heartily for your pains; and next, more than heartily (were it possible) for your noble and free submission of it, not only to many eyes and judgments, but also in the main to be ordered, and after that pressed or suppressed, as it shall be thought fit here^b. Which care or conscience would men use which set out books, we should not have so much froth and vanity in this world, as now 'tis full of.

But whereas you writ, first, that the book grew into greater length under your hand than you expected; I cannot be sorry for that, since that which you have added concerning Parker^c, Anti-Tilenus^d, and Vedelius^e, seems to me very necessary; secondly, that you are pleased to subject the work to me, and to interpret it, that you meant not personally to me, because I could not have time from other great occasions to revise it, but by way of deputation; these are to let you know, that were my occasions greater than they are, I would not suffer a book of that argument, and in these times, to pass without my particular view. And, therefore, my Lord, these may tell you, that both my chaplains have read over your book; and that since them, I have read it over myself very carefully, every line of it; and I have now put it into the hands of my Lord the Bishop of Ely^f; and this thrice reading over hath been the cause why I did not give you a more speedy account of it.

And now, my Lord, according to the freedom which you have given me, I must tell you, that I have here and there in my reading of it over, made bold to alter, or leave out a phrase or two, but have as yet varied nothing that is material; and indeed I should think it very uncivil and unjust too, to vary anything that is substantial, without first acquainting you with it, that so it may be done either by your own pen, or, at the least, not without your own consent.

The particulars which I chiefly insist upon are these: First, you do extremely well to distinguish the Scottish business from the state of the foreign Churches^g; but yet to those Churches, and their authors, you are a little more favourable than our case will now bear. But this I conceive will be easily helped, and that without pressing too much upon them. The second is, the first touch which you have concerning the Sabbatarians^h, where you let their strict superstition pass without any touch at all, I think one little one will do no harm.

The third, which you seem to pass by, as not much material in the question, is, in our judgment here, the very main of the cause; and it is, whether Episcopacy be an Order or Degreeⁱ. An order certainly, if it be of Divine and Apostolical institution. For that which is but different by degree and circumstantially, cannot be other than juris positivi; and the ancient word in the Fathers is, Ordinatio Episcopi; and our ordinary phrase is of any of our brethren the Bishops, he is one of our Order; and why does the Church of England ordain or consecrate every one that is made a Bishop, if it be but a Degree of the same Order? For when a Bishop is translated, or made an Archbishop, there's then no consecration, because they are juris positivi, and only degrees. Your Lordship is very near a whole leaf upon this transition; I beseech you weigh it well, and then let me have it altered by your own pen, and the sooner sent the betterⁱ.

The last (with which I durst not but acquaint the King) is about Antichrist; which title, in three or four places of your book, you bestow upon the Pope positively and determinately; whereas King James of blessed memory, having brought strong proof, in a work of his, as you well know, to prove the Pope to be Antichrist; yet being afterwards challenged about it, he made this answer, when the King that now is went into Spain, and acquainted him with it, that he writ that not concludingly, but by way of argument only, that the Pope and his adherents might see, there were as good and better arguments to prove him Antichrist, than for the Pope to challenge temporal jurisdiction over kings^l. This whole passage being known to me, I could not but speak with the King about it, who commanded me to write unto you, that you might qualify your expression in these particulars, and so not differ from the known judgment of his pious and learned father. This is easily done by your own pen; and the rather because all Protestants join not in this opinion of Antichrist. I have no more to trouble your Lordship with, but to pray you to have your answer to these with as much speed as may be. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations,—I have had a great longing in myself to do some good for the town of Reading, according to such ability as it should please God to bless me with^m. And, I heartily thank Him for it, I have now done it. And I have done it in such a way, as I hope, by God's blessing, shall be a means to prevent the increase of poor in that populous town, and yet bring none to it. I have provided so as that both the poor, and the Vicar of St. Lawrence, whose means is poor, and your schoolmaster, whose allowance is not great, shall be bettered by it. And, in the disposition of this my charity, I have so far prevailed with his gracious Majesty, as that the fifty pound a-year which I give to the Vicar of St. Lawrence, shall not fill up any part of the mortmain which I formerly procured for the town, as you will see by the instrument under the Broad Seal, which, together with my own deed for the landsⁿ, I delivered to Mr. Mayor and Mr. Brackstone, at their late being with me, for the use of the town. And it is to remain in your custody, not in the Vicar's. And whereas you will find by the deed that I have expressed charitable uses for the full sum of two hundred pound a-year; and that the land, for these two or three years, will not yield that whole and entire sum; yet I will that you proceed, at the several times appointed, to do all which I have required in my deed. And I shall supply that which is wanting for the years aforesaid, out of my own purse, till the rent of the lands answer in full to the sum by me designed. This I thought fit to do in my lifetime, and not burden my executors with it. And that which I shall expect from you and your successors is, that you do from time to time continually perform that which I have ordered by my deed, and all the uses therein land which I after conveyed to the town. In this letter you and your brethren are desirous to know what my will and pleasure is concerning the distribution of the 25£ assigned by half-yearly payment to the Vicar of St. Lawrence in the deed which I have made to the town. In these your letters you signify to me that the late Vicar, Mr. Taylor^p, did not die till the 9th of May last; and that, therefore, it is conceived the 25£ should belong to him. The truth is, in strictness of law and right, one half of the said sum, or near it, belongs to Mr. Taylor's executor (unless it be considered that my grant did not pass till after our Lady-day). But howsoever, Mr. Taylor was a very honest man, and one to whom I intended more good than this, had God been pleased to lend him life to enjoy it. And, therefore, I desire you, the Mayor, and your brethren, to pay the whole 25£ to Mr. Taylor's executor; and God send them much good of it! MY VERY GOOD LORD,—As I was coming from the Star-Chamber this day se'nnight at night, there came to me a gentleman-like man, who, it seems, some way belongs to your Grace. He came to inform me, that he had received some denial of the keys of the D. of Westminster's lodgings². I told him that I had moved his Majesty that you might have the use of these lodgings this winter time, and that his Majesty was graciously pleased that you should have them, and that I had acquainted Dr. Newell³, the Sub-dean of the College, with so much, and did not find him otherwise than willing thereunto. But, my Lord, if I mistake not, the error is in this: the gentleman, or somebody else to your use, demanded the keys of the lodging, if I misunderstood him not. Now the keys cannot be delivered, for the King's scholars must come thither daily to dinner and supper in the hall; and the butlers and other officers must come in to attend them. And to this end there is a porter by office and oath, that keeps the keys. Besides, the Prebends must come into their Chapter-house, and, as I think, during the Chapter-time have their diet in the hall. But there is a room plentiful enough for your Grace besides this. I advised this gentleman to speak again with the Sub-dean, according to this direction, and more I could not possibly do. And by that time these letters come to you, I presume the Sub-dean will be in town again. And if he be, I will speak with him, and do all that lies in me to accommodate your Grace.

Since this, some of the Bishop of Lincoln's friends whisper privately that he hopes to be in Parliament, and if he be, he must use his own house. And whether the Sub-dean have heard anything of this or no, I cannot tell. Neither do I myself know any certainty, but yet did not think it fit to conceal anything that I hear in this from you. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

The reason why I receive the money is because the rents are somewhat imperfect, and so will continue for about two years. And I am willing (if God lend me so long life) both to make all perfect, according to my gift: and to see it so ordered, as that nothing may cross with that which I have done for Oxford^e. I desire you therefore to remember my love to your brethren the Aldermen, that they may know thus much, and do heartily pray you all both to pay the money, and to bind out the poor apprentices, at the times and in the manner as is prescribed in my conveyance, to which I refer both myself and you. to know; that the reason why I did not write unto you to recommend the choice of a burgess for this Parliament, as I did for the last^f, was, not out of any opinion that you would give me less respect now than you formerly did, but it was out of two considerations: the one, because I saw that in the former election there was a difference between you and the Commons about the right of choosing; which I was not willing to stir a second time;—though what your own right was, and what theirs, you might have certainly known before this time, had you followed my direction, and attended the King's Solicitor, Mr. Herbert, with your Charters. The other, because I found there was a great deal of causeless malignity cast upon me, for I know not what, as yourselves cannot but know by the tumult which lately beset my house^g; and I was very careful that, whatsoever malice reported of me, or did to me, no part of it should in the least degree reflect upon the town, by choosing a burgess at my entreaty. I have nothing else to trouble you with, but hope that your officer hath taken a copy of my conveyance, to lie ready for your daily use, that the original may be kept the fairer and the safer. So wishing you all health and happiness, I leave you to God's blessed protection, ever resting

Salutem in Christo.

After my hearty commendations,—These are only to let you understand, that when Mr. Brackstone, one of your Company, was lately with me at Lambeth for the receipt of the hundred pound due to your town from me at Michaelmas last, there was a suit preferred to me by some there whom I have cause to esteem, that, in the putting forth of this year's apprentices, I would give way that a widow woman, left with many children, might take a son of her own to be her apprentice, and have the allowance which is assigned by my deeds^h. When Mr. Brackstone came to me, I was going in haste to the Parliament House, and so sent my answer by him only by word of mouth, which answer was, that I was contented, upon the entreaty made to me, to grant this one particular, but that, for hereafter, I would have no more done in that kind.

^f [Sir Edward Herbert, Solicitor-General, and Sir John Berkeley, afterwards one of the King's most faithful adherents, had been elected as bur-

Now, lest my verbal answer then given should be in anything mistaken, or not remembered in the future, I thought fit to write these few lines to you, and to signify that, in all times to come, I will have poor men's sons bound to be apprentices, according to all conditions expressed in my deeds to the town, and no other. Neither will I any more permit, that any man, or widow-woman, shall have my pension, or allowance, to have any one of their children bound apprentice to themselves, because I easily see how my charity in that kind may be abused.

To the end, therefore, that this will and desire of mine may be strictly and perpetually observed, these are to pray you, the now Mayor and Aldermen, to register this letter in your Town-book, and to lay up this letter itself with the evidences for the land, that so it may be kept in memory, and my will herein not broken. This is all that, for the present, I have to trouble you with. But my prayers are, and shall be daily, for all happiness upon you, and that place. So to God's blessed protection I leave you.

LETTER CLXXXIX.

[General Dictionary, sub nomine SELDEN.]

Sal. in Christo.

WORTHY SIR,—I understand that the business about the late Canons will be handled again in your House to-morrow. I shall never ask any unworthy thing of you; but give me leave to say as follows. If we have erred in any point of legality unknown unto us, we shall be heartily sorry for it, and hope that error shall not be made a crime. We hear that ship-money is laid aside, as a thing [which] will die of itself; and I am glad it will have so quiet a death. May not these unfortunate Canons be suffered to die as quietly, without blemishing the Church, which hath too many enemies both at home and abroad? If this may be, I here promise you, I will presently humbly beseech his Majesty for a licence to review the Canons, and abrogate them; assuring myself, that all my brethren will join with me to preserve the public peace, rather than that any act of ours shall be thought a public grievance. And upon my credit with you I had moved for this licence at the very first sitting of this Parliament, but that both myself and others did fear the House of Commons would take offence at it, (as they did at the last) and said we did it on purpose to prevent them. I understand you mean to speak of this business in the House to-morrow, and that hath made me write these lines to you, to let you know our meaning and desires. And I shall take it for a great kindness to me, and a great service to the Church, if by your means the House will be satisfied with this, which is here offered of abrogating the Canons. To God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Your loving poor Friend,

MAY IT PLEASE YOUR MAJESTY,—I conceive the Great Seal being left as it is^j, your Majesty will bestow all such livings as shall be void, and were usually in the gift of the Lord Keeper, of what value soever they be. This I took my duty to put your Majesty in mind of, since it in part belongs to the service which your Majesty was wont to trust me with. And I am the more bold to put your Majesty in mind of this; because by this means (if you please to make use of it) you may the sooner provide for the Scottish men which suffer, and for other men which have served your Majesty at sea. At this time I am informed that the Rectory of Ashen in Northamptonshire is void, and in your Majesty's gift. It is thought not to exceed one hundred pound a-year. The Bishop of Brechin hath a son (if your Majesty please) that is ready to take orders, and may be fit for it^k. And by that means may be some help to his father, who certainly needs it. If your Majesty like of this, and let me know so much, I shall give warrant for it accordingly. But I submit all this, and my own unhappy condition, to God's will and your Majesty's.

though unfortunate,

TO THE CORPORATION OF READING.

[Bruce's Account of Abp. Laud's Berkshire Benefactions, pp. 39, 40.]

After my hearty commendations,—These are to remember my love to yourself and your brethren, and God's blessing be upon the town! I cannot but be sensible of the great affliction that lies upon me, in which yet, by God's mercy and goodness, I have two great comforts, my innocence, and my patience, both which it hath pleased God by His grace to give me. In this my misfortune I humbly thank God I have not yet forgotten myself, and, as long as I forget not myself, I cannot but remember that place.

These are therefore further to let you know, that I have received almost all the rent for Bray, and am ready to make the sum perfect. So that if you please to send such a man to me as you will trust with the receipt of the money, and let him bring with him an acquittance to me for the receipt, I will presently pay it him. It is in silver, and therefore I conceive fittest to be returned. But that I leave to your own wisdom: only I pray send a safe man to receive it, and the sooner the better. So with desire of your prayers for me, I commend you all to God's blessing, resting, so long as it pleases Him,

LETTER CXCII.

TO THE CORPORATION OF READING.

[Ibid. pp. 40—42.]

After my hearty commendations,—I have received a thankful and a kind letter from you, in the name of the town, for that little with which God hath enabled me to do some good to that place, to which, under God, I owe my birth. And

I am very glad to hear from you, that poor gift of mine is like to be so beneficial to that place. God bless it that it may.

In these letters you put me in mind, that, at the three years' end, appointed for the visitation of my gift and the ordering of it, there is, and will be by my deed, thirty pound to entertain the visitors for one day and a night. This sum you conceive will be too large for that use; and that six pound of it, after the proportion of forty shillings per annum, may well be allowed out of it to your town-clerk, for his pains in registering the carriage of this trust residing in you. That so the visitors from time to time may see how careful you have been, both of me and the poor, in this business.

The truth is, I was careful that my visitors might be well entertained without any the least charge to the town, to whom I must be sufficiently beholding for their pains. But no man put me in mind of the town-clerk's pains. And my thoughts were so full otherwise, that I quite omitted it. But I heartily thank you for putting me in mind of it, and finding out this way for him. I do therefore order, that, out of the thirty pound reserved for the visitors' entertainment, there shall be for ever six pound, after the proportion of forty shillings a-year, be paid to the town-clerk for the time being, for his pains in this business; and for your so doing, this letter of mine shall be your warrant. And, therefore, I desire this letter may both be kept and registered.

One thing more I am to thank you for. And that is, your great care which I hear was taken at your last election of boys to be bound apprentices, in which you were like to be deceived with some not born in your town, but that your care prevented it. I thank you all heartily for this, and desire the continuance of it in all particulars; for if you shall give way to a breach in one, it will be taken in another, and nothing in the end remain entire. But I pray take heed that no journeyman, or any that is not a housekeeper for himself, or is an inmate, have any boy bound with him, for those great inconveniences which may attend upon it. And I am bold to give you this caution, because I hear this was like to be put upon you. I have nothing else to trouble you with at present, but do humbly and heartily desire of God, that no abuse may pervert my good intentions in that work.

To whose blessed and merciful protection I recommend both myself and you, and rest

TO THE MAYOR OF READING.

[Bruce's Account of Abp. Laud's Berkshire Benefactions, pp. 42, 43.]

SIR,—Now that Michaelmas is past, and you settled in your office, I would heartily desire you, if you have any occasion of coming to London, you would come to me yourself; or, if not, that then you would send somebody to me whom you will trust for the town, to receive the money for this year past, or at least so much of it as can be gotten from the tenants; for I doubt Loggins^p will not do well with me and the town at parting. When you come or send, you shall have my letters to yourself and the town, how I think fit the money should be disposed this year.

LETTER CXCV.

TO THE MAYOR AND ALDERMEN OF READING.

[Ibid. pp. 44, 45.]

After my hearty commendations, &c.—I have sent you by this bearer one hundred and threescore pound of my rents from Bray, which is all I can get of my rents this year past. I hope I have ordered business so, as that the town will not suffer any more in that kind. But now, so it is, that Loggins's term being expired, he leaves the thing, but pays not the forty pound rent which is now due. I am informed he hath made over his estate to pay debts, but whether that be truth, or but a pretence, I know not, neither am I in a condition at present, fit to relieve myself or you. Nor am I in that case, that I can make up the sum for you out of my own means. Therefore I conceive there will be a necessity of proportioning this business this year according to this failing, which I conceive, also, is fittest to be done this way. I would not have the number of the maids which are now to be relieved, lessened. But I desire Mr. Mayor, and the Aldermen his brethren, to order it thus, that whereas forty pound is to be abated, they take one twenty pound of it from that which should otherwise have been paid to Dr. Lloyd^q; and other twenty proportionably from each maid, so that each of them may have so much less as the twenty pound comes to. This is all the occasion I have at present to write to you, and am sorry with all my heart I should have it. And truly, if my fortunes had been such as they might have been, had it so pleased God, I would most willingly have supplied this want myself; but now I must desire them who by it are put to this loss, to bear it, as I do more, with patience. I pray God bless the town, and all that are in it; and let me have your prayers to help guide me to an end of my troubles. So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest

Whereas I am informed by Alderman Harrison^r, that the day for the Visitation is past, and that there will be no need of a Visitation during my life, I am contented for this time, that the money which is in bank for the entertainment of the Visitors, be applied to the charitable use, and then Dr. Lloyd may have all his money; and the maids must be content for this year to take their several sums with proportionable abatement.

LETTER CXCVI.

TO THE VICE-CHANCELLOR OF OXFORD.*

[Somers' Tracts, vol. iv. pp. 438—441. Lond. 1810.]

MASTER VICE-CHANCELLOR,

And you, gentlemen, the rest of my ancient friends and fellow-students;—God, whose judgments are inscrutable, before whom the wisdom of the children of men is but foolishness, hath been pleased to lay His afflictions on me with a heavy hand; glorified be His name in all His works; but no one among all the numbers of my miseries hath, or does more afflict me, than that I am, by my misfortunes, made incapable of serving you, and that famous nurse of good letters, your University (of which I had sometimes the honour to be Chancellor), with that entire zeal and devotion which my intentions aimed at. Man purposeth, and God disposeth; otherwise had His Almighty will been concurrent to my wishes, my endeavours should have rendered Oxford the glory of the Christian world for good literature; but men's hopes resemble much [the] sun, that at his rising and declension casts large shadows, at noon, when he is clothed in all his brightness, casts little, or none at all: when we are furthest from our expectations, they appear nearest to our hopes; our hopes feeding our imaginations with the prosperity of our intents, which then approach swiftly to ruin, like quite spent tapers, that give a sudden flash ere they extinguish. It was just so with me, who now, instead of all the honours I possessed, am now a prisoner, and so like to continue; and would take it as an ample testimony of God Almighty's mercy to me, were I but assured to carry my grey hairs down to the grave in peace; but His will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. I shall

* [This letter is printed from the copy in Somers' Tracts. The contemporary tract from which, it is presumed, Somers' reprint was made, has eluded the research of the Editor. He has not been able to find the paper itself, or any notice of it. It is not mentioned by Wood in his list of the Archbishop's publications; and the style and sentiments of the letter of themselves raise a suspicion of its genuineness. It would seem that in a former instance (see vol. v. p. 300) a forged letter had been published, pretending to be addressed by Abp. Laud to the Vice-Chancellor, and the Editor conceives that this is so also. It would serve party purposes to have it believed that Laud entertained the views expressed in this letter. The letter must have been sent out in the latter part of the year 1642, when the king had made Oxford his headquarters.]

endeavour to make the best of my sufferings, that I may say with the Psalmist, It was good for me that I was in trouble. And surely I shall so demean myself towards God, my King, and the Commonwealth, in this my durance, that in my very enemies I shall beget compassion, in you, my friends, a hearty sorrow for my miseries, which have taught me that true dictamen of wisdom, that I shall advise all, especially you of my own calling, the Clergy, never to meddle with things above your reach ; I mean State affairs ; but to devote yourselves solely to the service and worship of God, the true feeding the flocks committed to your charge ; for dangerous it is to meddle with the counsel of kings, especially for those who have professed themselves ministers of the Almighty, on whose laws they ought only to meditate ; the affairs of State being theatres, on which whosoever acts his part, though it appear to him comical in the beginning, the end will produce his own tragedy, if he look not with the greater care to his performance ; as it happened to that most famous clergyman of all our nation, that great Cardinal Wolsey ; whom some (in a merry mockery) have unaptly made my parallel in dignity and fortune ; who laden with disgraces, jam sumus ergo pares, not long before his departing minute exclaimed, that if he had served God with but half that integrity he had done the King, He would not have so deserted him in his old age. How I have served my King, than whom no man ever had the happiness to serve a more gracious master, the world must be my judge ; how I have performed my duty to God, of that, my own conscience ; nor shall I strive to give the world satisfaction in that point, only desire them to remember the Divine command, Judge not, lest you be judged. Howsoever I have demeaned myself, it is enough now I suffer, without either repining at the will of the Almighty, or exprobrating mine accusers with the least accusation of malice, though never man hath had so many scandalous abuses cast upon him ; none ever (considering my calling) having been made so notorious a subject for ridiculous pamphlets and ballads. But it is not I alone that have endured injuries of that nature ; they have fallen, with the same licentious petulancy, upon betters ; and I have long since studied that precept of the wise man, When a fool reviles thee, regard him not: and so enough of this matter, and all other, but the main cause of my writing to you. Impute this needless exordium to my human weakness, which is always prone to tediousness in relation of its misfortunes to those it is confident will lament and pity them: an instance whereof we have in children, who use to bemoan themselves to their mothers and nurses, purposely to have them bemoan them. But to my business. It is not unknown to you, gentlemen, nor to me, though darkness and the shadow of death have even encompassed me round, what myriads of increasing mischiefs these times have produced in this languishing and almost expiring kingdom; dissensions, wars, bloodsheds reigning in every place; fellow-subjects, like the ancient sword-players in the Roman cirques and amphitheatres, butchering one another, merely for their delight in blood.

may fitly be applied to the condition of our distressed country, whose soul is, as it were, divided from the body, and itself only the carcase of that England it was formerly; the King's gracious Majesty, by fatal fears and misconstructions, being separated from the body of the commonwealth, the honourable the high court of Parliament. And if any comfort can arise to make a man love his misery, or take delight in his enthrallment, certainly I have, that my durance was inflicted on me before this sad and lamentable breach (which heaven, in its great mercy, soon knit up) happened betwixt his Majesty and his Parliament; for, had I been at liberty, and enjoyed the gracious ear of my Sovereign, as formerly, surely I had not been to have had that aspersion cast upon me, as the author of this distraction; such a fatality as [is] always attendant on persons high in the favour of their prince, to have all the misfortunes of the commonwealth inflicted on them, who may be, perchance, not only innocent, but have also endeavoured to have diverted from the State those mischiefs of which they are suspected by some, and by some concluded, to have been the main incendiaries. And surely I could wish, so my sufferings might have impeached the impetuous current of the kingdom's miseries, that I had undergone a thousand deaths before this disjunction had fallen out between the high court of Parliament and his Majesty, who being, as I am informed, now with you at Oxford, and intending there to reside, I thought myself engaged in conscience to intimate my intentions to you, and to give you that counsel, which if any one had given me in my prosperity, I might perchance at this instant, not have been unhappy. I know there are among you divers of great and able souls: take heed, I beseech you, lest you pervert those excellent gifts which God and education hath conferred upon you, by intruding yourselves into the affairs of the State, and inverting religion to advance and cherish the present distractions. The King is now amongst you; a good and gracious prince he is, as ever Heaven blest this land with. Do not you, by any ends whatsoever, increase the number of those malignants, who have given fire to all the cedars of Lebanon, at once kindled a flame, which in a moment hath almost burnt up all the glories of this kingdom. Let neither the disgraces cast on the Clergy by some factious spirits, without the licence or patronage of the Parliament, incense you to cherish the distractions betwixt his Majesty and that honourable and wise assembly, nor hope of preferment seduce you to it; for, credit me, who hath more experience in such affairs than many of you, though the beginning of proceedings of that nature may, in fair and specious outsides, court your imaginations, their period will be nothing but confusion and bitterness to the undertakers, as other sins are, which, like subtile panthers, display their gorgeous spots to entice the traveller to gaze upon them, till the careless wretches are surely in their reach, and then they assault and devour them. It is ill going between the bark and the tree, (says the proverb,) take heed of it: there is as near a relation betwixt the King and his Parliament; and though they may awhile be separated, that violence cannot be long-lived; it will at last conclude in the ruin of those that have caused this separation; they will be sure to suffer. It cannot be but offences must come; but woe be to him from whom they come: mischiefs always meet their catastrophes in the destruction of their authors. Since, then, his Majesty hath graciously been pleased to honour your university and city with his royal presence, like good Samaritans, endeavour to pour balm and oil into the wounds of the commonwealth; labour, as much as in you lies, to compose these dissensions. It is your calling to propagate peace as well as the Gospel, which is the testimony of peace, given by the King of Peace to the children of men. You may inform his Majesty, even out of your pulpits, and boldly, that nothing is more requisite to the duty of a sovereign, than to acquire and advance the good of his subjects; which can no way so well and suddenly be affected, as by a fair accommodation of peace between his royal self and his high court of Parliament. And, as an incitement to move his Majesty to think of it, if such a wretched man as I be not quite lost to his memory, tender this to him, as the humblest petition of his unfortunate servant,—that his goodness would vouchsafe to reflect on my sufferings, who am impossibilitated, by his absence, of ever coming to my trial, and so likely to end my days in a prison; but this only as the least motive, because it is for myself. But further beseech his Highness from me, to look with a compassionate and tender eye on the religion, nobility, and commons of this unhappy kingdom, and by a speedy reconciliation with the honourable the high court of Parliament, at once finish all their miseries. And lastly, pray you signify to his Majesty, that I lay down my life in all humility at his royal feet, beseech God day and night for his prosperity, peace and happiness, desiring no longer life for any end but this, to see his Majesty, the glory of our Israel, return to his Jerusalem, all differences attoned betwixt him and his Parliament, which are the continual prayers of his Highness' humblest servant, and your true friend,

LETTER CXCVII.

TO THE DEAN AND CHAPTER OF BRISTOL.

[Tanner MSS. vol. cxxix. fol. 36.]

AFTER my hearty commendations.—His Majesty understanding that the marsh lying under the College walls of Bristol, (if the same were in hand,) would be a great accommodation to the Dean and other residentiaries, who are there but meanly provided for, and that there is now but one life remaining in the estate granted of the said marsh; and understanding, likewise, that there is a lease of divers tenements in the said city, let unto one Mr. Vowes for about seventeen years yet to run: out of which (if the same were made into several tenements) there might be good means raised, not only to improve the revenue of the said Dean and Chapter, but the choirmen there might thereby be conveniently accommodated with dwellings, whereof they are now destitute; his Majesty, of his pious care of the good of that Church, hath commanded me to signify to you, that it is his pleasure that you grant no further estate at all in the said marsh; but when it shall fall in hand that the same be divided, or used for a proportionable augmentation of the revenue of the Dean and residentiaries there; and that you likewise take order that, when the estate in the said tenements shall come to be renewed, the same be no more let in one lease. And that you take effectual care that, out of the said tenements, there be not only some provision made for accommodating the choirmen there with convenient dwellings, but also an improvement of the revenue for the future advantage of the Dean and Chapter there. And of this his Majesty's command for the good of the said Church you are to make a register, to the end that the same may be duly observed by yourselves and your successors. And so I rest LETTER CXCVIII.

[In the possession of Edwin H. Lawrence, Esq.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am very much bound to you, and I thank you for your love, which I will return upon all ^u [The Editor is indebted to the courtesy of the present possessor of this letter, Edwin H. Lawrence, Esq., of the Stock Exchange, for permission to add it to this collection.

Both this letter and the one which next follows have lost either the whole, or a portion, of the fly-leaf containing the direction. But that they were both written to Lord Conway appears from the following considerations:—

First, they appear to have been both written to the same person; for the endorsements are by the same writer, and the following passage in the second letter, 'Concerning the horse, I told your Lordship in my last, that my Lord Lieutenant undertook to write to you what was fit,' is an evident allusion to the passage in the first letter, in which Laud speaks of his having left the Lord Lieutenant 'to give the answer.'

Secondly, sufficient of the direction of the second letter has been left to show that it was addressed to 'My very good Lord at Newcastle.' Again, they are evidently written to one in command of the army against the Scots. Lord Conway was at this time General of the Horse, and in command of that army at Newcastle. He was on intimate terms with Strafford; many letters which passed between these two noblemen being printed in the Strafford letters. In one of these, dated Aug. 27, 1640, Strafford comments severely on his mismanagement of affairs. (Strafford's Letters, vol. ii. p. 413.) It appears also, both from this letter and from Clarendon's remarks, (Hist. of Rebellion, vol. i. p. 254,) that Conway had been very remiss in obtaining information of the enemy's movements, which is all of a piece with the hesitation, real or pretended, to employ a spy, on which Laud comments in this letter. Laud probably had been imposed on by Conway in this and in other ways, as appears from the tenor of Clarendon's remarks, that 'no man was more pleased with his being appointed general of the horse, than the Archbishop of Canterbury, who had contracted an extraordinary opinion of this man, and took great delight in his company, he being well able to speak in the affairs of the Church, and taking care to be thought by him a very zealous defender of it; when they who knew him better, knew he occasions within my power. I have received two letters from you: One of April 29, and the other of Maii 5. The first of these was almost all one with that which you writ to my Lord Lieutenant^x, and I left him to give the answer, as being more proper a great deal for him than for me. But the passage in your letter concerning the sending of a spy into Scotland, may fit me well enough to answer. And first, I think you have taken a good resolution, to send one first, and dispute it after. Next, most true it is, the spy goes upon his own peril, and he is not sent to lie or deceive. He may dexterously do that for which he is sent, without either lying or deceit. And I do not find Joshua anywhere discommended for sending spies to Jericho. If when they are sent, they will do anything that is not justifiable, that I conceive under reformation of better judgment, is the fault of them, not of their mission.

Your Lordship's other letter made his Majesty, and all else that saw it, laugh. Sure the fellow is either mad or at Bedlam door, as near entering in as may be. But the verses which you sent, (such as they are,) I have given to my [Lord] Lieutenant, the rather because they so much magnify his very good friend. I am sure you hear before this that the Parliament was dissolved on Tuesday, May the fifth, so that noise is at an end; but what is next to be done, since they would do nothing, I dare not prescribe.

So to God's blessed protection I leave you, and rest,

Your Lordship's very loving Friend to serve you, had no kind of sense of religion.' (Hist. of Rebell. ibid. p. 251.)

W. CANT.

Thirdly, these inferences amount to a positive certainty, when it is added that the second of the two was undoubtedly addressed to Lord Conway. For in Fyenne's Hidden Works (pp. 183, 184) is preserved a letter from Conway to Laud, in which he speaks of having received two letters from him, and refers to the disturbance at Lambeth and Strafford's illness, as the two principal subjects of the latter of them. This letter is dated, "Newcastle, June 8, 1640," and is unquestionably a reply to the second of Laud's letters, dated May 25, in which it will be seen that both these points are mentioned.]

[In the possession of John Dillon, Esq., Croydon.]

MY VERY GOOD LORD,—I am sorry to hear you have had a mutiny; but I hope the speedy course which you have taken will remedy that, which suffered to grow will undo all. But it is an ill beginning,—I pray God, worse follow not. For the two-pence taken for arms, I remember nothing of it, and so can say nothing to it. I believe it was ordered at the Council of War; for had it been at our Committee, I should (I think) have recalled something concerning it, which now I do not.

I hear not yet of any meeting in London, but a blind man may see there is a great and frequent art to raise one; but who are the artificers, either is not, or will not be known. But at Lambeth my house was beset at midnight, May 11th⁸, with 500 people, that came thither with a drum beating before them. I had some little notice of it about two hours before, and went to Whitehall, leaving my house as well ordered as I could, with such arms and men as I could get ready. And I thank God by his goodness kept all safe. Some were taken, and to be tried for their lives. But the day before the trial, some of their company came in the day-time, brake down the prison,—the White Lion, in Southwark,—let out all the prisoners, the rest as well as their own company. One of them hath been taken since, and on Saturday last was hanged and quartered. And this, it may be, is the mutiny which you heard was in London.

Concerning the Horse⁹, I told your Lordship in my last, that my Lord Lieutenant undertook to write to you what was fit, but that from myself you could not look for any ⁹ [Strafford was to raise a thousand horse for the war against the Scots.

See the King's order to him, March 2, 1640. Strafford's Letters, p. 393. The subject of 'the horse,' as well as the military arrangements generally, are frequently alluded to in his letters, see pp. 400, 403, 404, 408. thing that way. Now that my Lord Lieutenant hath not written to you, the cause is too apparent, for he hath been very extreme sick, and though he now mend a little, yet very ill he is. And his mind is disquieted with these affairs, because all goes not so round as he hoped, and that, I fear, is a second disease to him. God send him health, and your Lordship happiness, which is the prayer of

Your Lordship's true Friend and humble Servant,

LETTER CC.

TO THE LORD VISCOUNT CONWAY.^b

[Dalrymple's Memorials of the Reign of Chas. I. p. 98. Glasgow, 1766.]

... IT is true that your letter that you sent, and the opinion you express, what would become of Newcastle, in case the Scots came in, was censured, and not to your advantage; and so much I wrote to my Lord Lieutenant since his going northward; and all that you wrote is found too true. But that which is thought might have been done more, is, that the hill on this side might have had some defence put upon it; and that, as yourself writes, more might have been done to hinder the passage of Newburnford; but if the soldiers there, and men of experience be of opinion, that as things were then conditioned, you could not hinder them; and that things which you did at the first advise, are now doing by the Scots, I think you mean surely that you cannot be blamed for the one, but somebody may be blamed for the other. . . .

^b [This passage is cited in the Lord Conway's 'Relation concerning the passages in the late Northern expedition, 1640,' printed by Dalrymple from the Harleian MSS. vol. 1579.

He says, 'And for the second part, to think Newcastle would be lost, the Lord Conway conceiveth to be no sudden or rash opinion; for he had divers times before propounded that the town should be fortified, and declared that without fortification it was not tenable; as several letters, written to him after the same was lost, may witness. In one of which from the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, amongst other things, these words were contained:—"It is true, &c."']

NOTES ON CARDINAL BELLARMINI.

THE Editor is indebted to the Rev. Dr. Todd, Senior Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin, for the transcription of the following notes on Bellarmine, (referred to above, vol. iv. p. 289,) for his careful revision of them while passing through the press, and for the subjoined notice of the volumes in which they are written.

"The following notes occur in the margin of a copy of "Bellarmine's Disputations," now in the Library of St. Sepulchre's, commonly called Archbishop Marsh's Library, Dublin. This book belonged formerly to Bishop Stillingfleet, whose whole Library was purchased by Primate Marsh, and now forms a part of the public Library of St. Sepulchre's. It is thus alluded to by Stillingfleet, in the Preface to his "Discourse on the Idolatry of the Church of Rome:"—"I shall conclude all (although I might produce more) with the testimony of Archbishop Laud, who, in his Conference, saith, &c. . . . And in his marginal notes upon Bellarmine, (written with his own hand, now in my possession,) where Bellarmine answers the Testimony of the Council of Laodicea, &c."

"The copy of Bellarmine which contains these notes, is in three vols. folio. Its full title is as follows:—"Disputationvm Roberti Bellarmini Politiani Societatis Jesv de controversiis Christianæ fidei adversus huius temporis Hæreticos." The first vol. is dated Lugduni, 1596; the second, Lugduni, 1599; and the third, 1596. They are all by the same printer:—"Apud Joannem Pillehotte, sub signo nominis Jesv." The second vol. is a little shorter than the other two. On the title-page of the first and third Laud had written his name, but this is now carefully obliterated with ink; and in the third vol. it appears to have been first scratched out with a knife until a hole was made in the paper, and then blotted out with ink. Still we can very plainly make out, in the first vol., "William Laud," and in the third vol., "William ———," the name being entirely erased, and the place it occupied scratched into a hole in the paper.

"From his having thus written his name, we may perhaps infer that these notes were written before he became a bishop.

"On the fly-leaf opposite the title-page is the following note in Laud's hand:—"Ad singula loca Bellarmini de quibus aliquid habet in Recognitione sua Impress. Ingolstadij, An. 1608, adiecj paginam Recognitionis, secundum eandem Recognit: in octavo,"—we may therefore reasonably assume that these notes were written at some period between 1608 and 1621, at which latter date Laud became Bishop of St. David's. He seems in fact to have been engaged in this study during the whole time that he held the Presidentship of St. John's."

It has not been considered necessary to print these references to the "Recognitio," nor similar references to other parts of Bellarmine's controversies, excepting where they seem intended to point out any modifications of or contradictions in his statements. And it would have been quite needless to publish any mere summaries of the contents of chapters and sections, and other like notices, which possess no special value, except as indicating the extreme care with which these volumes were studied.

The chapters and sections to which the notes refer have been carefully marked all through, by which means they can be found without much difficulty in any edition of Bellarmine.

DE VERBO
DEI.

Col. 104. D. § In Africa.

Nam nulla est mentio apud ullum auctorem ullius translationis Punicæ.]
Concludit valde probabiliter sed non necessario.

Et D. Augustinus . . . dicit tempore suo Psalmos in Ecclesia Latine cantari consuevisse.] Colligitur hoc ex eo loco Augustini; sed aperte non dicit, (imo nec colligitur). Sed nihil videtur hic locus inferre. Nam

1. Forte non loquitur de Afris tantum, sed de aliis etiam, dicit enim in plurali de ore cantantium populorum, &c.

2. Forte si de Africa sola loquatur, non obscure colligitur linguam Latinam illis vulgariter notam fuisse, quum os populorum cantare potuit. Et aperte Kemnit. Exam. p. 1. Sess. 4. Decr. 2. "Erant" inquit "Latinæ linguæ homines," &c. Et quid aliud Bellarm: ipse L. 3. de Ro. pont. c. 24. col. 705. D. ubi scribit ex Possidio in vita B. Aug. Valerium episcopum Hipponensem commisisse presbytero suo Aug. officium prædicandi, quia, ipse Græcus quum fuit, non potuit Latino populo prædicare? Ergo populus Hipponensis Latinus fuit.

Col. 105. A. § At eo.

At eo tempore non fuisse Latinam linguam omnibus vulgarem in Africa.] Forte adeo immutata est lingua Punica post devictam a Romanis Carthaginem, &c. ut lingua Romanorum (quæ tum Latina fuit) vulgariter invaluit per multas partes Africæ. Et hoc quidem, quum hoc ipso capite col. 102. D. ita immutatum docet Bellarminus idioma Judæorum post captivitatem Babylonicam. Et in hac ipsa col. B. dicit proculdubio Gothos et Mauros novam linguam invexisse in Hispaniam, &c. Et probabile est, quia Aug. ipse L. 2. de Doctri. Chr. c. 13, (quem locum citat Bellarminus col. 104. D. et intelligit de Africa,) dicit populum canere, et colligitur quod canebant Psalmos Latine.

Col. 106. D. § Sed accedat.

Nisi enim sit Scripturarum publicus usus in lingua communi, tolletur imprimis communicatio ecclesiarum.] 1. An major cura erit (quod hæc ratio videtur inferre) paucorum qui peregrinantur in terra aliena, quam omnium qui in propria sua patria degunt. 2. Præterea ii difficultate non magna possunt linguam illic vulgarem quotidiano commercio perdiscere, non ita Latinam. 3°. Peregrini etiam in terra aliena possunt habere liturgiam ecclesiæ in templis sibi destinatis, et proprio idiomate; sicut Londini in Anglia, The French Church, The Dutch Church.

Non poterunt fieri ulla generalia Concilia.] Non sequitur; nam ut sint generalia concilia, non requiritur ut quotidie publicus usus Scripturæ sit lingua Latina, sed tunc tantum quando concilium congregatur. Et spero omnes qui ad concilium vocantur noverint linguam Latinam sine dono linguarum.

Possumus sane de aliis controversiis judicare per communionem linguæ Latinæ, sed non de translationibus tot gentium et linguarum. Nec opus est, nam quum quælibet in quamcunque vulgarem linguam scripturarum versio, ad illam solam gentem pertinet cujus versio est, illa provincialis ecclesia sufficiens iudex est judicare de propria translatione. Nec hinc diminuitur Catholicæ ecclesiæ unitas. Nam si quæ doctrinales controversiæ finiendæ sint, non iudicantur secundum translationes in multas linguas vulgares (neque ideo earum peritia omnibus qui ad concilium veniunt necessaria) sed secundum fontes et vulgatam editionem. Ut omnes intelligerent. At certè populus non intelligeret Prophetas.] Doctissimi non intelligunt omnes Scripturæ; sed rudes possunt intelligere moralia præcepta saltem quoad generale quod vel mandant vel prohibent; possunt item intelligere minas Dei adversus peccata, &c.

Col. 107. B. § Quid quod.

Populus . . . etiam caperet detrimentum?] 1º. Omnes non capiunt detrimentum, imo nec plurimi.

Col. 107. D. § Sexto.

Oporteret etiam singulis atatibus mutare translationes.] Non sequitur; nam non ita mutantur vulgares linguæ, ut intelligi ab incolis nequeant, nisi diuturno tempore.

Nam non semper inveniuntur idonei interpretes.] At ea cura debet esse in qualibet provinciali ecclesia, ut non fiat mutatio translationum, nisi quando sunt idonei interpretes.

Col. 108. A. § Septimo.

Dicimus hoc ipso esse graviorem (Latinam linguam) . . . quod non est vulgaris.] Nec hæc responsio est ad rem, nam et olim, quum Latina lingua vulgaris fuit, fuerunt quidem et versiones scripturarum in ea, et divina officia in eadem facta.

Col. 108. A. § His omnibus.

Refert Theodor. li. 4. hist. cap. 17.] Hæc loca D. Nemo enim audit, id est, nemo attendit, quia nemo intelligit.] Si hoc verum sit, eum non loqui de divinis officiis, tamen non valet hæc responsio; nam hoc certum est, per totum illud caput, 1 Cor. 14, laudat præ cæteris donum prophetiæ, et præ cæteris exhortationem ut omnia fiant ad ædificationem ecclesiæ: ergo validior est (ut mihi videtur) hæc consequentia; Apostolus non agens de divinis officiis tantam habet curam ædificationis populi in sapientia Christi, ergo in ipsis publicis divinis officiis peragendis majorem aut saltem æqualem curam haberet ille (et nos etiam habere debemus) ædificationis populi; quod quæ fieri possit, cum tota fere plebs ignoret liturgiam et preces ecclesiæ, ego equidem non intelligo.

Sed sive pauci sive multi, potest ecclesia mutare ordinem, non abjicere curam ædificationis, imo nec scienter renuere.

Col. 111. B. § At objicies.

At divinatorum officiorum nec est finis præcipuus instructio vel consolatio populi.] At cultus Dei requirit populum aliqua ex parte participantem.

Deinde nescio an ingratus Deo sit ille cultus, qui ita fit, ut populus, qui ad colendum accedit, nesciat quomodo colat, imo non certū sit utrum colat necne. Et Bellarminus ipse dum et hic et postea dicit instructionem populi et consolationem non esse finem præcipuum, concedit aliquo modo esse finem.

DE VERBO
DEI.

Col. 111. B. § Secunda objectio.

Falsum est eē publica oratione ecclesiæ nullum fructum a populo percipi.] Non nego posse populum aliquem fructum percipere per preces quocunque idiomate a Sacerdote fideliter pro populo effusas; sed in publicis divinis officiis peragendis non requiritur, ut solus sacerdos oret et colat Deum pro populo, sed ut ipse etiam populus simul oret et colat Deum, (quum cultus patriæ requiratur ab omnibus Christianis); et ideo laborandum est, ut populus non modo aliquem, sed quam maximum fructum percipiant.

Col. 111. D. § Præterea.

Etiamsi non intelligas illic recondita.] Forte id est, etiamsi non plene intelligas sensum, tamen, &c.

Ex ipsa lectione multa nascitur sanctimonia.] At ne legere potuit forte, si lingua aliena esset.

Col. 111. D. § Neque solum.

Quarum significationes multi eorum minus intelligebant.] Forte ignorabant plenitudinem significationis, interim tamen hæ figuræ et ceremoniæ exprimebantur lingua populo nota.

Col. 111. D: § Præterea idem Augustinus.

Per ignorantie simplicitatem.] Hic (ui multum fallor) apertissime agitur de sensu precum ab Hæreticis compositarum, quem non potuerunt simplices discernere, non de idiomate in quo scriptæ fuerunt. Nam aliter cur dicit [S. Augustinus] 'irruunt in eas' et 'utuntur eis.' Et ante sub nota (†) ex ipsa lectione, &c. [referring to the passage from S. Chryst. quoted above.] Nam nec uti iis, nec eas legere possunt, multo minus facile irruere in eas preces quæ alieno idiomate conscriptæ sunt.

Col. 112. B. § Hinc Origenes.

Scriptura sancta . . . prodest, etiamsi sensus noster ad præsens intelligentiam non capit.] Manifestus et hic est de intelligentia sensus, non verborum, quia dicit [Origenes] 'ad præsens,' ac si postea posset et sensum attingere.

Et hoc aperte colligitur ex his verbis. [sc. ex verbis Bellarmini in sectione Præterea si necessarium.]

Col. 112. C. § Præterea si.

S. Antonius dicere solebat illam esse perfectam orationem, in qua animus ita absorbetur in Deum, ut non intelligat ipse verba sua.] Probenb populum ita absorberi, et prævalebunt.

DE VEREO
DEI.

Col. 112. C. § Neque his.

Populus hic labiis me honorat, &c. &c.] Utraque hæc expositio vera; et tamen nihilominus vera et illa esse potest de precibus in ignota lingua.

Col. 112. D. § In posteriore.

Sed ei anteponitur oratio quæ intelligitur.] Ergo et anteponuntur etiam orationes publicæ, quæ habentur lingua nota.

Col. 113. A. § Objectio tertia.

Col. 113. B. § Respondeo Innocentium.

Qui Græce Græcis et qui Latine Latinis, &c.] At hoc non tollit difficultatem, nam supponendo locutum concilium de Græca et Latina lingua tantum, tamen scopus est, ut Græci sua, et Latini sua nota lingua haberent sacra celebrata; et si illi, cur non et aliæ gentes?

Col. 113. C. § Respondeo, et.

Finis præcipuus divinatorum officiorum non est populi instructio vel consolatio sed cultus Deo ab ecclesia debitus.] At hic finis . . . non impeditur vel . . . etur instructione populi.

Clericorum . . . officium est, nomine totius populi Christiani immolare sacrificium laudis.] Ergo videtur, populus Christianus non tenetur Deum laudare, orare, &c. quia sacerdos, &c.

Col. 113. D. § Respondeo, et.

Cæteri (imperitissimi) non instruerentur, etiamsi vulgari lingua officium celebraretur.] i. non plene, sed non igitur sequitur in nihilo eos instrui.

Non enim in verbis sed in sensu instructio est.] At in via ordinaria ecclesiæ non potest esse instructio in sensu, si verba non intelligantur; nam quid nomina, i. quid verba significant, est præcognitum in omnium scientia. Si verba ignoret populus, sensum minus scit.—Juel. Art. 3. § 13.

Col. 114. B. § Respondeo, hoc.

Cur Apostoli solum scripserunt Græce.] Vide Cap. 15. Col. 103. C.

Et nobis dubium non videtur, quin quibus ethnici linguis ad Deum adducti fuerunt, iisdem preces suas ad Deum facerent.—Juel. Art. 3. § 10.

Col. 114. C. § Respondeo, hoc.

Ita non licet argumentari, ministratur populis verbum Dei explicatum a concionatore; igitur administrari etiam debeat sine explicatione, et lingua vulgari scriptum.] Similitudo non recte aptatur, 1º. quia nemo dicit (quod scio) scripturam solum ut panem integrum debere dari infantibus Dei, sed et exponi debere per sacerdotes concionatores.

2º. Quia non est undique par ratio panis corporalis et spiritualis; nam in pane eum integrum tractare non adjuvat ad nutritionem; sed Scripturam legere, etiamsi omnia non intelligamus, facit ut et melius et plenus intelligamus quæ a concionatoribus exponuntur in ecclesia; tum etiam, ut et retineamus fidelius, etc.

Editio Chaldaica non tam versio, quam paraphrasis est.] Sed sive versio sive paraphrasis fuit, fecit ad intelligentiam Scripturarum Chaldaice.

Col. 114. D. § Quod vero.

Non . . . in linguam Græcam translate sunt Scripturæ, quia ea lingua esset quibusdam vulgaris, sed quia communissima.] Sed sicut communissima, ita in multis locis vulgaris: et si Ptolomæo non fuit vulgaris, fuit tamen nota et tunc temporis doctissima, et ideo forte in eam voluit versam doctrinam Judæorum.

Ascendi, inquit Paulus, Hierosolymam, &c.] Ascendi secundum Revelationem ver. 2. Sive revelationem habuit ut ascenderet, sive revelationem habens nihilominus ascendebat: magni ponderis locus est.

Col. 131. C. § Septimum.

Dicens fuisse Petrum, Jacobum et Joannem.] S. Jacobus præponitur S. Petro. Ibidem. Gal. 2. 9.

Diserte affirmant ecclesiam non esse Paulo credituram, nisi ejus Evangelium a Petro confirmatum fuisset.] Dicit ibid. diserte S. Paulus ver. 6. Jacobum, Petrum, Johannem nihil ei contulisse; et patet, neque authoritatis, neque doctrinæ, respectu Apostolatus sui. Sed respectu fidelium, qui certe noverunt Paulum prius fuisse persecutorem, de conversione ejus, et præcipue de vocatione ejus ad munus Apostolicum non ita ubique certiores fuerint, petiit ab Apostolis, ut certior fieret ecclesia, &c. &c.

Hoc sensu (ni fallor) intelligendi Patres illi. Et tum non valet quod infertur, nam nec Petrus solus fuit, nec Petrus et qui cum eo, de doctrina Pauli judicaverunt, sed tantum notam fecerunt ecclesiæ certitudinem vocationis ejus.

CAP. III.

Col. 149. C. § At iidem.

Jam vero si non minor est auctoritas Apostoli ore præcipientis, quam literis mandantis.] Eadem est autoritas loquentis et scribentis Apostoli, sed iis tantum qui tam certi sunt de voce, quam de scriptura ejus; nobis autem forte non ita, nam infallibiliter certi sumus de scriptura, de traditionibus non item. De iis scimus ex scriptura aliquas ab Apostolis traditas, sed quas et quales per omnia opinor nescimus.

Deinde fidem ego non detraho venerandæ antiquitati, scriptis illis vetustis de apostolicis traditionibus magna ex parte credo, non tamen tam certo credo atque scripturæ sacræ, quia non tam certo scio esse apostolicas.

Col. 151. C. § Decimum est.

Nam Cyrillus Hierosolymitanus . . . inquit . . . facimus mentionem eorum.] Hic locus non videtur mihi necessario inferre invocationem Sanctorum. Nam 1°. Aliud est facere mentionem, aliud invocare.

2°. Non est difficultas, quæ Deus orationibus illorum suscipiat preces nostras, sed quæritur an illi ideo orant, quia orantur a nobis, et distinctim pro particularibus necessitatibus nostris, an moti ex perfectione charitatis et in genere pro militante ecclesia, etiamsi non orentur a nobis.

Imo et plus quam hoc et ipse agnoscit in fine capituli*, et hic; et potest hoc argumentum sufficere contra Durandum, sed non dilucide satis se exprimit Bellarminus. Nam qui dicit Christum solum quoad effectum descendisse, nihil singulare dicit de Christo quoad descensum: nam multæ creaturæ possunt esse in multis locis simul per effecta. Col. 1480. C. § Ad locum Ambrosii.

'Non esse opus suffragatore' intelligitur ex parte Dei.] Addit S. Ambros. 'sed mente devota,' ergo non opus suffragatoribus nec ex parte nostri.

Col. 1480. C. § Dices, hoc idem.

Dices, hoc idem poterant respondere Gentiles.] Ergo immediate accessibilis est: ergo quidni sic accedamus? &c. § Præterea Coloss. infra, e § Deinde quod ad.

Theod. in cap. 1. ad Coloss.] Ergo et aliter potest [Deus accedi] quam per sanctos.

Col. 1481. D. § Hinc solvitur.

Mediatorem quodammodo redemptionis.] S. Aug. ibid. [Contra Epist. Parmen. lib. ii. cap. 8.] meminit interpellationis: mediatoris: exorationis: orationis: et ne verbum addit de redemptione. Ergo verisimile est quod ibi agat de mediatore intercessionis, non redemptionis. Et omnia hæc, dum respondet loco S. Johan. 9. 'Deus peccatores non exaudit.' Ergo de intercessione.

Quin et Bellarmin. hic dicit 'quodammodo:' et sic ni fallor, omnis qui intercedit, innitendo scilicet et premendo meritum Christi.

Col. 1482. B. § Urget Calvinus.

Respondeo, B. Augustinum velle dicere Christum esse per quem omnes interpellant.] At S. Aug. ib. bis dicit 'interpellat,' &c. &c. et opinor satis novit quod voluit dicere.

Col. 1482. C. § Urget Calvinus.

Quia ipsi egent Christo.] At qui, quæso, egent [Angeli] Christo (quod subnectit) si non oratione ejus. Et si Angeli non indigebant oratione Christi, quia nunc confirmati: ergo nec animæ beatæ, quia nunc et illæ confirmatæ.

Col. 1482. D. § Ad tertium locum.

Concilium (Laod.) non damnat quamlibet venerationem Angelorum.] Sed verbum Theodoretus est, 'Ne precarentur Angelos:' ergo preces illis fundere, idololatria illa fuit de qua concilium loquitur.

PLAIN COMMENTARY.

A PLAIN COMMENTARY ON THE FOUR HOLY GOSPELS, intended chiefly for Devotional Reading. The set, with Illustrations, 7 vols., cloth, 1l. 8s. 6d.; strongly bound, 2l. 2s.

ST. MATTHEW. 2 vols., 7s.	ST. LUKE. 2 vols., 7s.
ST. MARK. 4s. 6d.	ST. JOHN. 2 vols., 10s.

"The Commentary is said to be intended for devotional reading, and certainly ought not to be approached in a controversial or even critical spirit. We will say only that the portion before us, including the Commentary on St. Matthew, fulfils the promise of the title-page, in being plain and fit for readers of all classes. The learning, which is great, is everywhere subordinated to real illustration and enforcing of the sacred text."—Guardian, Feb. 15, 1854.

"The Plain Commentary on the Four Holy Gospels is now carried on in the two additional volumes before us to the end of the Gospel of St. Luke. We desire to repeat and enforce, if possible, our expressions as to the beauty and value of this book, the simplicity of which is almost as remarkable as its depth and learning."—Guardian, Aug. 23, 1854.
