MACMILLAN & Co. have lately Published

Handwritten

A History of the Christian Church from the Seventh Century to the Reformation. By the Rev. CHARLES HARDWICK, M.A., Fellow of St Catharine's Hall, and late Cambridge Preacher at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall, Author of "A History of the XXXIX Articles." With Four Maps constructed for this Work by A. Keith Johnston. Crown 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"It is full in references and authority, systematic and formal in division, with enough of life in the style to counteract the dryness inseparable from its brevity, and exhibiting the results rather than the principles of investigation. Mr HARDWICK is to be congratulated on the successful achievement of a difficult task."—CHRISTIAN REMEMBRANCE, October, 1853.

"This book is one of a promised series of 'THEOLOGICAL MANUALS.' In one respect, it may be taken as a sign of the times. It is a small unpretending volume in appearance, but it is based on learning enough to have sufficed, half a century since, for the ground of two or three quartos, or at least for several portly octavos. For its purpose it is admirable, giving you a careful and intelligent summary of events, and at the same time indicating the best sources of information for the further guidance of the student. Among the authorities thus referred to, we find the most modern as well as the most ancient, the continental as well as the English."—BRITISH QUARTERLY, Nov. 1853.

"He has bestowed patient and extensive reading on the collection of his materials; he has selected them with judgment; and he presents them in an equable and compact style."—SPECTATOR, September 7, 1853.

"It is distinguished by the same diligent research and conscientious acknowledgement of authorities which procured for Mr HARDWICK'S 'History of the Articles of Religion' such a favourable reception."—NOTES AND QUERIES, October 1, 1853.

"To a good method and good materials Mr HARDWICK adds that great virtue, a perfectly transparent style. We did not expect to find great literary qualities in such a manual, but we have found them: we should be satisfied in this respect with conciseness and intelligibility; but while this book has both, it is also elegant, highly finished, and highly interesting."—NONCONFORMIST, November 30, 1853.

"Of the history of the Medieval Church this is a concise and complete Manual. With all the chief authorities, Catholic as well as Protestant, Mr HARDWICK shews himself familiar, and he has diligently collected and judiciously used his abundant materials. The book throughout bears mark of much learned research, and it is written in a strain of candour and moderation."—LITERARY GAZETTE, October 1, 1853.

"This forms one of a series of Theological Manuals which Messrs MACMILLAN, Cambridge, have in course of publication. If the other volumes of the series are as well and carefully written as this, theological students will have good cause to thank them."—CLERICAL JOURNAL, Sept. 22, 1853.

THE History and Rationale of the Book of Common Prayer are subjects which have been already treated by numerous writers of distinction. At the time, however, when the present series of Manuals was projected in the hope of supplying wants expressed on every side by students in Theology, it did not appear that any one of the existing volumes, taken singly, was available for the desired object. During the greater part of the past century, Wheatly's Rational Illustration was the chief source of knowledge on liturgical subjects, and notwithstanding its obvious blemishes and defects was very generally read. But in the course of the last twenty years the whole question has been re-opened by divines of greater learning, and more accurate research; and it is mainly with the view of epitomizing their extensive publications, and correcting by their help the errors and misconceptions which had obtained a currency amongst us, that the present volume has been put together. The materials, out of which it is composed, lie scattered in the older works of Strype, Nicholls¹, and Comber², and in those of more recent date which have resulted from the investigations of Dr Cardwell¹, and Messrs Palmer², Maskell³, Clay⁴, and Lathbury⁵.

The Author has of course been under the necessity of touching many questions which have always given rise to controversy; some of these relating to differences of opinion in the Church itself, and others to more serious disputations which maintainers of the Prayer-Book hold with its opponents. On the former class of controversies he claims for himself the liberty of giving free expression to what he believes to be the truth; while in reference to the latter, as might naturally be

A pleasing duty now remains,—to thank those friends of the Author who have given him the benefit of their suggestions, and examined for him such references as lay beyond the compass of his own library. He would especially mention the Rev. C. Hardwick, and the Rev. J. S. Purton, Fellows of St Catharine's Hall, whose kindness in this matter is accepted as an evidence of true friendship, worthy of the members of their ancient brotherhood.

CHAPTER I.

‘According to these various uses (various yet harmonious) the Holy Eucharist was celebrated in England until the year 1547. Their origin cannot be attributed merely to man’s ingenuity, and learning, or even piety; but they are to be traced through the Sacramentaries of Gregory, Gelasius, and Leo, to the well-spring of all Christian truth, the age of the Apostles.’—MASELL.

THE Liturgies of the Western Church seem to be derived from two models, the Roman and the Gallican. The Gallican was of Oriental origin, and is said to have been followed by the churches of Spain and Britain¹. But whatever may have been the earlier history of Christianity in this island², it is clear that at the close of the sixth century the portion afterwards called ‘England’ was occupied by tribes of heathen, and the British Church compelled to seek a shelter in the districts of Wales, Cumberland and Cornwall.

USES.

Augustine, the missionary from Pope Gregory the Great, doubtless brought with him the Ritual which was at that time used at Rome. But, in passing through Gaul, where indeed he stayed some months, he became acquainted with the 'Gallican Use.' Accordingly, when he was allowed to found a church in Kent, he hesitated as to the form of service he should appoint under the ecclesiastical circumstances of the country. His own converts might be willing to receive the Roman Use; but within the limits of his archbishopric, as granted by Gregory¹, there were the antient British churches in communion with their primate at Caerleon, and numerous Irish missionaries in the north of Scotland who had churches of their converts. What therefore was to be the English Use, since the Gallican customs of saying mass differed from the Roman? Upon this question he sought Gregory's decision, who allowed him to choose either the Roman or the Gallican form, or to select what he thought most suitable from the various forms used in the Catholic Church². The natural result was that the influence of Augustine and his successors led to the general adoption, in its main features, of the Roman Ritual, as Christianity spread among the Anglo-Saxons³. And the same influence was no doubt felt by the British churches, not indeed to make them discard their old Gallican order, but to guide those changes in rites, and ceremonies, and prayers, which every bishop was empowered to ordain within his own diocese.

The exercise of this power caused, in process of time, a considerable variety in the manner of performing divine service; and the custom of a diocese in its ceremonial, mode of chanting, arrangement of certain portions of its service, introduction or omission of collects, became a distinct Uso, and was known by the name of that diocese. Thus gradually the Uses or customs of York, Sarum, Hereford, Exeter, Lincoln, Bangor, Aberdeen, and doubtless others of which the records have perished, were recognised as defined and established varieties of the Ritual of the English Church¹.

¹ The use of a cathedral was not necessarily followed by all the churches and monasteries in the diocese. Grandisson, bishop of Exeter (1339), drew up a body of Statutes for his newly founded collegiate church of St Mary at Ottery: in the 7th he orders the divine office on certain occasions to be performed 'secundum ordinale et consuetudinarium quæ eis fecimus et extraximus ex Exoniæ et Sarum usibus.' This cursum Romanæ Curie was a shortened service: Azevedo, De Div. Off. Exercit. ix. p. 33: 'Officium Curie contractum erat, et mutationibus obnoxium, ob varias et continuas occupationes Summi Pontificis, et Cardinalium, aliorumque Prælatorum, qui ei in sacello diu noctuque interesse solebant.' It may be mentioned in connection with this short 'Cursus R. Curie,' that Quignon's reformed Breviary (1536), containing more Scripture than 'the Roman,' is withal much shorter, and is entitled 'Breviarium Romanæ Curie.' The Use of St Paul's in London continued until 1414, in which year, 'Oct. 15. Richard Clifford, then Bishop of London, by the consent of the dean and chapter, ordained that from

USES.

Use of Sarum.

The most remarkable of these was the Use of Sarum. It was drawn up about 1085 by Osmund, Bishop of Salisbury and Chancellor of England. He rebuilt his cathedral, collected together clergy distinguished for learning and skill in chanting, and took much pains to regulate the ecclesiastical offices; so that his church became a model for others, and his 'custom-book'¹ was wholly or partially followed in various parts of the kingdom, more particularly in the South of England².

Irish Uses.

Upon this settlement of a model service-book for England, an attempt was made to attain ritual uniformity in Ireland. There the varieties of Use seem to have been greater than in this country. Gilbert, Bishop of Limerick (1090), speaks of some of them as schismatical delusions³.

the first day of December following, beginning then at Vespers, the solemn celebration of Divine service therein, which before that time had been according to a peculiar form antiently used, and called Usus Sancti Pauli, should thenceforth be conformable to that of the church of Salisbury, for all Canonical Hours, both night and day.' Dugdale, Hist. of St Paul's, p. 24. See Maskell, Antient Liturgy of the Church of England, Preface, chap. iv.

² Among the many foreigners who were appointed to bishoprics and abbacies was Thurstan abbot of Glastonbury (1083). Simeon of Durham (Scriptores x. col. 212) relates his attempt to compel his monks to use a style of chanting invented by William of Fescamp.

And the Anglo-Saxon Chronicle (Stevenson's translation, in Church Historians of England, Vol. II. p. 130) gives a piteous description of the tumult and bloodshed that ensued; for armed soldiers drove the monks from the chapter, and slew many of them in the church. It is supposed that this outrage drew the attention of Osmund to the varieties of use, and led him to revise the ritual upon the occasion of opening his new cathedral. Palmer, Orig. Lit. pp. 186 sq.

³ 'Episcopis, presbyteris totius Hiberniæ, infimus præsulum Gilebertus Lunicensis in Christo salutem. Rogatu, necnon et præcepto multorum ex vobis, carissimi, canonicalem consuetudinem in dicendis horis et peragendo totius ecclesiastici ordinis officio scribere conatus sum, non præsumptivo, sed vestræ cupiens piissimæ servire jussioni; ut diversi et schismatici illi ordines, quibus Hibernia pene tota delusa est, uni Catholico et Romano cedant officio. Quid enim magis indecens aut schismaticum

Probably this means that the Oriental calendar was retained, and the Uses, however various, had not borrowed much from Rome. And Gilbert had set himself to bring the Irish Church into exact conformity with the Roman; while his old friend Anselm, of Canterbury, was labouring to subject the English Church to the papal authority. This effort was continued in the next century by Malachy O'Morgair, who prevailed upon a national synod, assembled at Holmpatrick (1148), to petition the Pope for palls for the Archbishops of Armagh and Cashel. And in 1152 the synod met at Kells to receive the papal legate Paparo, with four palls, for Armagh, Dublin, Cashel, and Tuam, and to adopt the Roman missal in its then improved state¹.

BOOKS.

*Books men-

Ælfric,*

I. THE Church-Books used in the Anglo-Saxon period are enumerated in the 21st of the Canons called archbishop Ælfric's (circ. 1006). 'Habebit etiam presbyter quilibet, priusquam ordinatus fuerit, arma ad opus spirituale pertinentia, videlicet codices sacros, id est, psalterium, epistolarum librum, et librum evangeliorum, librum missalem, libros canticorum, librum manualem, seu enchiridion, gerim [= numerales, in Wilkins], passionalem, poenitentialem, et lectionarium¹.' The books used in the Anglo-Norman period are enumerated among the things which the parishioners were bound to provide for the service of their church, in the fourth of the Constitutions of archbishop Winchelsey, published in a synod at Merton, (circ. 1300) '...legenda, antiphonarium, gradale, psalterium, troperium, ordinale, missale, manuale²,...' In addition to these, Quivil, bishop of Exeter (1287), had ordered 'venitare, hymnare, et collectare³.' For the time immediately preceding the Reformation, we find these named in the preface to a Portiforium secundum usum Sarum (1544), as church-books which might be printed only by Richard Grafton and Edward Whitchurch:—'the Masse booke, the Graile, the Hymnal, the Antyphoner, the Processyonall, the Manuel, the Porteaues, and the Prymer both in latine and also in english⁴.' And the statute of 1549⁵, which ordered the old church-books to be abolished and extinguished, described them under the names of 'Antiphoners, Missals, Grayles, Processionals, Manuals, Legends, Pies, Portuasses, Primers in Latin or English, Couchers, Journals, and Ordinals⁶.'

2. The Legenda contained the Lections read at the Matin offices, whether taken from Scripture, homilies of the Fathers, or lives of the Saints¹. This describes the complete book, which probably was more commonly used in the separate parts which are mentioned by Du Cange:—Legenda, or Legendarius, containing the Acts of the Saints; Lectionarius, containing the lectios from Scripture, said to be compiled by Jerome; Sermologus, discourses of Popes and Fathers; Passionarius, the sufferings of the Martyrs read on their festivals; Homiliarius, homilies of the Fathers; and Bibliotheca, sometimes containing the four Gospels, sometimes the whole Bible². Legenda.

3. The Antiphonarium contained the Antiphons sung in the services of the Hours, arranged for the respective days and hours: it gradually collected other portions, the Invitatories, Hymns, Responses, Verses, Collects, and Little Chapters; i. e. the portions sung in the service of the Canonical Hours³. Antiphonarium.

4. The Gradale, or Graduale, was the 'Antiphonarium' for the service of High Mass, containing the portions to be sung by the Choir, so called from certain short phrases after the Epistle sung 'in gradibus'⁴. Graduale.

5. The Psalterium, as a separate book according to the use of particular churches, contained the Book of Psalms divided into certain portions, so as to be sung through in the course of the week in the service of the Hours⁵. Psalterium.

6. The Troperium contained the Sequences, and was required only when the Gradale did not contain them⁶. These Tropi, or Sequentiæ, were verses sung before or after the Introit and Hymns, and sometimes in the middle of them. At the last revision of the Roman Missal under Pius the Fifth, all were removed, except four Sequences⁷. Troperium.

7. The Ordinale regulated the whole duty of the Canonical Hours, and was generally known about the 15th century as the Pica, or *Pie*⁸. The Priest by referring to this might learn, ac- Ordinale.

Missale.

8. In the earlier ages of the Church the office of the Holy Communion was contained usually in four volumes, viz. the Antiphoner, the Lectionary, the Book of the Gospels, and the Sacramentary. This Antiphoner was afterwards called the Gradual; and this Lectionary was the Book of the Epistles read at Mass², being otherwise named the Epistolarium, Comes, and Apostolus. The Evangelistarium, Evangeliarium, Textus, or Textevangelium, contained the portions appointed to be read from the Gospels: if the book contained all the four Gospels, it was called Evangelistarium plenarium. The Sacramentary, Liber Sacramentorum, sometimes Liber Mysteriorum, known in its successive stages or editions as the Leonine, Gelasian and Gregorian, contained the rites and prayers relating to the 'Sacraments,' of the administration of Baptism, of reconciling penitents, of Marriage, of Orders, as well as of the Eucharist. Of the latter, it contained the prayers of the service, as distinguished from the Lections and the portions sung by the choir. This volume was called the Missal perhaps in the eighth century. In later times this arrangement was simplified, and The Missal contained all that the priest required for the service of the Mass. The Ordinary and Canon, i. e. the fixed portion, was placed in the middle of the volume, preceded by the variable portions, the Introit, Collect, Epistle, Gospel, &c., for the Sundays from Advent to Easter: after the Canon followed these portions for the remaining Sundays of the year; and then

This word, denoting an Index or Table of Reference, is supposed to have been formed from the Greek πιναξ, such Tables being written on a board or a framed sheet, and marked with the first letters only of the word, or at least so called for shortness, Pi'es. But these Tables were generally made with red initial letters; and so, from being party-coloured, their name in Latin was Pica. Also the letters of such Tables being smaller than the usual text-hand, the early printers gave the name Pica to a medium size of type. Nicholls.

MEDIEVAL
BOOKS.

9. The Manual was the book of Occasional Offices, containing the services for baptism, matrimony, visitation of the sick, churching of women, extreme unction, burial, and others of less frequent use, as well as portions of the Service of Mass upon great occasions¹.

Manuale.

10. The Hymns were also arranged in a separate volume, or Hymnarium, in the order of the days on which they occurred in the offices of the Hours. In an edition printed at Cologne (1525), there are 122 hymns; and not only are these noted fully, but some, which at certain seasons varied in their chant, have these variations also given².

11. We do not know at what early period the 'Canonical Hours' of prayer were settled in the Christian Church. 'Tertullian,' (A. D. 200) calls the 3rd, 6th, and 9th hours of the day, 'horas insigniores, Apostolicas.' The Apostolical Constitutions³ direct prayers to be offered at dawn, 3rd, 6th, 9th hours, evening, and cock-crowing. In time of persecution Christian assemblies were held at night; and when the cause ceased, the practice was continued in remembrance of their sufferings, and commemoration of the martyrs, until experience proved the danger of such meetings. Hence the service of 'Nocturns' became joined with that of 'Lauds;' and seven hours were appointed for the Church's prayers, at dawn, and the 1st, 3rd, 6th, 9th, 11th, and 12th hours of the day; the names of the services being, Matins and Lauds, Prime, Tierce, Sext, Nones, Vespers, and Compline. The services of these Hours were to be said in Church, and were called 'the Divine Office,' or 'the Canonical Hours:' they were formed with Prayers, and Psalms, and Hymns, and Canticles, with Lessons out of Scripture, and writings of the Fathers.

Breviary towards the end of the eleventh century, when the ancient offices were arranged and shortened by the authority of Pope Gregory VII. (1073—1086.) In its full and settled state, it contained the whole offices of the Canonical Hours throughout the year, arranged in order under their respective days, with rubrics directing to certain prayers and hymns and anthems which occurred frequently, and to the Psalter, which formed a portion of the volume. The usual contents of the Sarum Breviary are given by Mr Maskell, in his *Dissertation on the Prymer*¹. Its title is Portiforium seu Breviarium; and it appears that, as soon as the name 'Breviary' was used abroad, the book was called 'Portiforium' in England, with the common English names, Pörtfory, Porteau, Portuary, Portuis, Portuasse, Porthoos.

Horæ.

13. Not only were the greater services of the Breviary appointed for the Canonical Hours, but smaller offices were prepared, to be used at the same times for greater devotion. Such were the Hours of the Holy Spirit, of the Blessed Trinity, of the Cross, and the most complete of all, the Hours of the Blessed Virgin. This was commonly called the Little Office, and before the middle of the sixth century was ordered by the Popes Gregory III. and Zachary to be said by certain orders of monks in addition to the Divine Office. The observance having gradually fallen away, it was restored, and the office itself revised, by Peter Damian (1056)². This office was very much used by the laity; and as prepared for them, the books did not commonly contain the rules for the variations of the service on different days. It appears to have been held sufficient and praiseworthy, if they recited the same office unvaried throughout the year. Being not so much a service-book of the Church, as a compilation for the devotion of the people, the Horæ varied much in its contents. Sometimes it contained only the Hours of the Virgin, sometimes the Litany and occasional prayers were added; sometimes it was a considerable volume, and contained also the Dirge, the seven Penitential Psalms, and various offices and prayers: sometimes English prayers were mingled with the Latin. Many copies of this book exist in MS. and in printed editions: some are most beautifully illuminated, with miniatures and armorial bearings of the owners, pictures of the life and sufferings of our blessed Lord, of the saints and martyrs, or descriptive of the offices, such as of the Vigils, or Burial¹.

14. English versions of the Hours and occasional devotions, the Litany, the Dirge, &c., may be traced to the 14th century, under the name of The Prymer. This word is peculiarly English; and it is highly probable that it was derived from some small manuals, which were spread among the people, of the first lessons of religious belief and practice: and in its first state the Prymer may have been known among the Anglo-Saxons, as containing the Creed, and the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments. There are still remaining in manuscript many short expositions in the vulgar tongue, of these elements of Christian knowledge, to which are often added the seven Works of Mercy, the seven Sacraments of Grace, the two precepts of the Gospel, and such like. Springing from some such early manuals, the Prymer received its gradual additions in successive ages, until we find it commonly mentioned in the 15th century, as a well-known book of private devotion, containing certain set prayers and offices. It was in English, or in English and Latin, and sometimes in Latin, with occasional portions or collects in English. The title was 'This Prymer of Salisbury use,' or 'The Prymer both in English and Latin,' or 'The Prymer set forth by the King's Majesty.' The earliest known copy, belonging most probably to the latter part of the 14th century, has been printed by Mr Maskell²; and comparing it with the famous Prymer of King Henry VIII. (1545), we may say that, for 150 years preceding the Reformation, and probably for a much longer period, the Prymer was the book authorized by the English Church for the private devotion of the people.

15. Use was made of this well-known name in the time of Henry VIII. to attempt the circulation of a similar book, but with alterations showing a great advance in reformed doctrines. Thus Marshall published a Prymer before 1530¹, in which he omitted the Litany, because of the invocations of saints which it contained, and a second edition in 1535², in which he inserts the Litany with its invocations, but with a warning against their very possible abuse. This book contains the offices for the hours of prayer: but a considerable portion of the volume is occupied with an exposition of Psalm li., and a harmony of the Gospel-narrative of our Saviour's Passion. It has also a doctrinal instruction in the form of a dialogue between a father and his child. It contains the Dirige and Commendations; but with an admonition and warning prefixed against prayer for the dead, and showing the true meaning of the Psalms and Lessons, read in that service³. This book was strictly suppressed⁴.

16. In 1539, Hilsey, bishop of Rochester, published a book more nearly resembling the Primer, and with some authority¹. This was intended to 'introduce as much doctrinal improvement as the King's Vicegerent in ecclesiastical matters could venture upon. It has 'the form of bidding of the beads, by the King's commandment', and 'the Abrogation of the Holydays.' Many of the psalms, anthems, lessons and hymns, are changed for others of more plain sentence: also a great number of the saints invoked in the Litany are omitted, according to the Injunctions of 1536. Prayer for the dead is retained in the bidding of the beads and in the 'Dirige,' but the Lessons of this service are changed for others, declaring the miserable state of man's life, the condition of the dead, and the general resurrection. It contains 'an instruction of the manner of hearing of the mass,' opposing the doctrine of the sacramentaries. The book follows three main divisions, faith, prayer (the Hours, with the xv. O'es, the vii. and the xv. psalms, and the Litany, &c.) and works, concluding after passages of Scripture upon the relative duties, with an extract from 2 Pet. ii., headed, 'The bishop of Rome with his adherences, destroyers of all estates.' This with all preceding Primers was superseded in 1545 by 'The Primer set forth by the King's Majesty, and his Clergy, to be taught, learned, and read; and none other to be used throughout all his dominions'.

CHAPTER II.

The Prayer-Book in the Reign of Edward VI.

[A.D. 1547—1553.]

‘And where heretofore there hath been great diversity in saying and singing in churches within this realm : some following Salisbury use, some Hereford use, some the use of Bangor, some of York, and some of Lincoln : Now from henceforth all the whole realm shall have but one use.’—The Preface to the Book of Common Prayer, 1549.

VIII.

IN the latter years of Henry VIII. reformed opinions were steadily progressing. A truly great event was the order (1540) to set up the English Bible in the churches¹, where it might be read by the people, although it was not as yet read in the public service. In 1542 it was proposed in Convocation that certain church-books should be examined and corrected²; but it is not certain whether this correction went beyond the erasure of the names of the pope and of Becket. The Upper House of Convocation also ordered that ‘every Sunday and holiday throughout the year, the curate of every parish-church, after the

² ‘These books, which the archbishop signified it was the King’s pleasure they should be examined, were all mass-books, antiphoners and portuises: that they should be corrected, reformed and castigated from all manner of mention of the bishop of Rome’s name; and from all apocryphas, feigned legends, superstitious oraisons, collects, versicles, and responses: and that the names and memories of all saints, which be not mentioned in the scriptures, or other authentic doctors, be put away... It was ordered that the examination and correction of the said books of service should be committed to the bishops of Sarum and Ely, taking to each of them three of the lower house, such as should be appointed for that purpose. But that the lower house released. (A gentle refusal to have anything to do therein).’ Strype, Mem. Eccles. Hen. VIII. bk. i. ch. 50.

Te Deum and Magnificat, should openly read to the people one chapter of the New Testament in English, without exposition; and when the New Testament was read over, then to begin the Old¹. Thus the first step was taken towards liturgical reformation by introducing the reading of scripture in English into the public service of the church: and this was done by the authority of the House of Bishops in Convocation, who had also received the proposal to correct the Service-books. The way was thus prepared for the further substitution of English for Latin in the prayers. The first change in this respect was made in the Litany. This form of petition, used in solemn processions, had been in the hands of the people in their own tongue in the Primer, certainly for a hundred and fifty years; but in 1544 it was revised by Cranmer, who, besides the old litanies of the English Church, had also before him the litany, formed from the same antient model, which had been prepared by Melancthon and Bucer (1543) for Hermann, the Archbishop of Cologne². The chief alteration consisted in the omission of the long list of names of saints, which had gradually been inserted in the Western litanies; although Cranmer still retained three clauses, in which the prayers of the Virgin Mary, the angels, and the patriarchs, prophets, and apostles, were desired. With this exception our English Litany was set forth for public use by command of Henry VIII.³ (June 11, 1544) in its present form, and very nearly in its present words. All the other parts of Divine Service continued to be celebrated according to the several books and Uses which have been noticed.

On the accession of Edward VI. (Jan. 28, 1547), the first progressive measure towards reformation was to provide scriptural instruction for the people, that should be independent of the opinions of the parish priests, by the publication of the First Book of Homilies, to be read in the churches on Sunday, and a translation of the Paraphrase of Erasmus on the Gospels and Acts of the Apostles, to be studied by the clergy, and to be set up in the churches together with the great Bible¹. Injunctions and Articles of Enquiry were also issued with a royal visitation in September, which renewed the orders of Henry against superstition and the pope; and besides one chapter of the New Testament to be read at Matins, and at Evensong one chapter of the Old Testament, on every Sunday and holiday, the significant direction was now added, that the Epistle and Gospel at high mass should be read in English².

for festivals, which, however, were not taken into use. The letter sent with the book to the King (Cranmer, Works, II. 412, ed. Park. Soc.) shows the method in which he compiled, or revised, the prayers, and also mentions the musical notation, which now had to be transferred from the Latin to English words: '...I have translated...certain processions to be used upon festival days... I was constrained to use more than the liberty of a translator; for in some processions I have altered divers words; in some I have added part; in some taken part away; some I have left out whole, either for by cause the matter appeared to me to be little to purpose, or by cause the days be not with us festival days; and some processions I have added whole... If your grace command some devout and solemn note to be made thereunto (as is to the procession which your majesty hath already set forth in English), I trust it will much stir the hearts of all men unto devotion...' Oct. 7. [most prob. 1544].

THE ORDER OF THE COMMUNION, (1548).

In issuing these injunctions the royal council acted under the authority of the late king's will, and the statutes which empowered the advisers of Edward during his minority to direct ecclesiastical affairs by proclamation¹. But changes were aimed at, which went far beyond the intention of those statutes, and which therefore awaited the meeting of parliament and convocation in the beginning of November (1547). Among other matters of ecclesiastical law, the Lower House of Convocation now turned their attention to reforms in the church service which had been for some time in contemplation, and approved a proposition, introduced by the archbishop, for administering the Communion in both kinds². This change was accepted by the parliament³; and under their authority certain bishops and divines, associated with Cranmer, were assembled at Windsor, in January 1548⁴. The first publication of these commissioners was 'The Order of the Communion.' This was not a full Communion Office, but an addition of an English form of communion for the people to the Latin mass. In preparing those portions which did not exist in the Latin office, the book commonly known as Hermann's Communion in both kinds sanctioned by Convocation, and Parliament.

² Convocation met, Nov. 5. Session III. Nov. 22, the lower house presented some petitions to the archbishop, and among them, 'that the works of the bishops and others, who by the command of the convocation have laboured in examining, reforming, and publishing the divine service, may be produced, and laid before the examination of this house.' Nov. ult. 'a form of a certain ordinance,' delivered by the archbishop, 'for the receiving of the body of our Lord under both kinds, viz. of bread and wine,' was read, and subscribed by several members: and Session VI. ‘Consultation¹’ was mainly followed. The particular points of resemblance will be noticed in their place: here it is enough to observe that the idea and the subject-matter of the Exhortation, the Confession, and the Comfortable Words, are due to that source. This Order of Communion restored the cup to the laity, and turned ‘the Mass’ into the ‘Communion:’ it was also a step towards the adoption of ‘a tongue understood of the people’ in the most solemn office of the Church².

The book was issued with a proclamation (March 8); and letters were sent (March 13) from the council to the bishops, requiring them to distribute it through their respective dioceses in time for the curates to instruct and advise themselves for the ministration of the communion according to its order, at Easter (April 1); and to direct their clergy to use ‘such good, gentle and charitable instruction of their simple and unlearned parishioners, that there might be one uniform manner quietly used in all parts of the realm³.’ However, some of the bishops were backward in directing the use of the new form; and many parish priests were so far from instructing their parishioners for their good satisfaction in the matter, that they laboured to excite them against it, and declared in their sermons that the real intention of the government was to lay a tax of half-a-crown upon every marriage, christening, and burial. To remedy these disorders, all preaching was forbidden by a proclamation⁴ (April 24), except under licence from the King, the Lord Protector, or the Archbishop of Canterbury, and afterwards was more strictly prohibited by another proclamation¹ (Sept. 23), that the people might be the more ready to receive a most quiet, godly, and uniform order to be had throughout the realm².

The 'Order of the Communion' had been published with all possible speed, and was meant only to serve until a more complete book could be prepared. The divines assembled at Windsor therefore continued their deliberations³, and before the end of the year, with the sanction of Convocation⁴, presented 'The Book of Common Prayer' to the king, to be by him laid before parliament. The main discussion turned upon the manner of Christ's ² Besides the opposition of the papists, the council had to control the innovations of the reformers. Strype (Eccles. Mem. Ed. VI. bk. I. ch. 11) says that 'several preachers and laymen... had of themselves begun changes in their parish-churches, laying aside the old rites and orders, and had brought in new ones, according to their own judgments and opinions....' Compare the Proclamation prefixed to 'The Order of the Communion' (1548), shewing that some enterprised to run before authority: and the Act of Uniformity (1549), stating that, besides the old uses, divers forms and fashions were used in cathedral and parish-churches, concerning Matins and Evensong, the Holy Communion, and the administration of other sacraments of the Church: (Clay, P. B. Illustrated, pp. 185, 189.) See also Lathbury, Hist. Convoc. pp. 135, sqq. A book, which must have been printed in 1548, seems to have been intended for an Order of Matrimony.

³ Heylin (Hist. Ref. 2 Ed. VI. § 17) says that these bishops and divines were ordered to assemble on the 1st of September, and that the reason of the publication of the Book of Common Prayer was the difficulty of restraining the preachers. Communion in both kinds was fully sanctioned; but the form in which it was to be administered had only the authority of a proclamation: hence 'it was advised that a public Liturgy should be drawn, and confirmed by parliament....' Strype (Eccles. Mem. Ed. VI. I. 11.) says that the commissioners met again in May 1548; which is more probable, if indeed they had ceased to act. It never could have been the intention to retain so incongruous a service, as the English 'Order of Communion,' in connection with the Latin mass.

⁴ The King's message to the Devonshire rebels says that the Book of Common Prayer was 'by the whole clergy agreed.' Fox, Acts and Mon. v. 734. In a letter preserved in Bonner's Register (ibid. p. 726) the king states distinctly that the book was approved or set forth by the bishops and all other learned men 'of this our realm in their synods and convocations provincial.' See Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. p. 138; Clay, P. B. Illustrated, Pref. § 3.

presence in the Eucharist; and before the book passed the Commons, a public disputation¹ was held upon this subject, with the apparent intention of laying open the arguments which had caused the bishops and divines to retain, or to alter the old Services. After this, the book was readily accepted by Parliament, and the Act of Uniformity² ordered the administration of each of the two sacraments, and all other common and open prayer to be said and used only in such order and form as was there set forth³, from and after the Feast of Pentecost (June 9)⁴.

This was Dec. 14, and the Book was read the first time in the Commons on Wednesday, Dec. 19, and in the Lords on the following day.

understood: and for the further encouraging of learning in the tongues in the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford, that those Universities might use and exercise in their common and open prayer in their chapels, being no parish-churches, the Matins, Evensong, Litany, and all other prayers, (the Holy Communion, commonly called the Mass, excepted,) prescribed in the said book, in Greek, Latin or Hebrew:—and that all men might, as well in churches, chapels and oratories, as in other places, use openly any psalms or prayer taken out of the Bible, at any due time, not letting or omitting thereby the service mentioned in the said book, § 6. Clay, P. B. Illustr. p. 192.

⁴ This was a long delay, since the books were ready in March. It seems to imply a desire of the compilers of our Prayer-Book to dedicate their work to the especial service of God the Holy Ghost. See Clay, Histor. Sketch, §§ 10, 11; Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. pp. 138, sqq.

⁵ The 'notable learned men' associated with Cranmer about the 'Order of Communion' (1548), were, George Day, bishop of Chichester, Tho. Goodryke, of Ely, John Skyp, of Common Prayer are stated in 'the Preface';—that now all the realm should have but one 'Use;' that the 'Pie' should be simplified; that more scripture should be read, and the reading of the chapters not interrupted by 'legends, responds, verses, vain repetitions, commemorations, and synodals;' that nothing should be read but the very pure Word of God, the holy Scriptures, or that which is evidently grounded upon the same; and that all should be in English.

The principal differences between the first Prayer-book of Edward VI., and that now in use¹, are as follows: Matins and Evensong began with the Lord's prayer, and ended with the third collect: the Litany was placed after the Communion Office; in some early editions it was added as a separate sheet at the end of the volume; there was no

Fuller (Ch. Hist. bk. vii. p. 386) adds concerning the persons employed about the Book of Common Prayer (1549), 'We meet not with their particular names, but may probably conceive they were the same with the former for the main, though some might be superadded by royal appointment.'

Burnet (Hist. Ref. II. bk. i. Vol. II. p. 98. ed. Nares) mentions in addition to the above names, the Archbishop of York (Holgate), the bishops of London (Bonner), Durham (Tonstal), Worcester (Hethe), Norwich (Reps), St Asaph (Par-few), Salisbury (Salcot or Capon), Coventry and Litchfield (Sampson), Carlisle (Aldrich), Bristol (Bush), and St David's (Farrar). Cardwell (The Two Liturgies of Edw. VI. compared, Pref. p. xiii.) and Todd (Life of Cranmer, II. 64) consider that the larger number were appointed in the first instance in 1547, to draw up 'The Order of the Communion,' but that afterwards the smaller number only were appointed; or at all events they only acted in the business of composing the Book of Common Prayer. 'All subscribed their names unto it, but Day of Chichester,' says Heylin, (Hist. Ref. 2 Ed. VI. § 20) from the register-book of the parish of Petworth. But the bishops of Westminster and Hereford joined with him in protesting against the Act of Uniformity when the Bill was before the House of Lords; and probably Robertson and Redman liked it as little. rubric to direct its use as a part of the Morning Prayer; the address to the Virgin Mary, which had been retained in Henry's Litany, was omitted, together with the similar invocations of the angels and patriarchs. The Communion Service began with an Introit, or psalm sung as the minister was proceeding to the altar; the commandments were not read; the prayers differed from our present form, but chiefly in their arrangement; the name of the Virgin was especially mentioned in the praise offered for the saints; the Consecration included a prayer for the sanctification of the elements with the Holy Spirit and the Word; water was mixed with the wine; the words used in delivering the elements to the communicants were only the first clause of those now used. The sign of the cross was retained twice in the consecration of the elements; as it was also in Confirmation, and Matrimony, and in the Visitation of the Sick, if the sick person desired to be anointed: a form of exorcism, and anointing, and the trine immersion were still used in Baptism; the water in the font was ordered to be changed once a month at least: in the Burial Service prayer was offered for the deceased person; and an introit, collect, epistle, and gospel, were appointed for a communion at a burial.

In introducing a more continuous reading of Scripture into the daily service, instead of the numerous short and interrupted lections of the Breviary, our reformers had an example before them in the Roman church. Cardinal Quignon, by direction of Clement VII., had published a reformed Breviary in 1536, which was recommended, though not formally enjoined, by Pope Paul III., and was extensively used for forty years¹. The cardinal's great object being to promote the knowledge of Scripture, his work furnished some hints to the compilers of our Book of Service, whose object was so far the same; and the Preface was taken almost entirely from it. The reformed Prayer-book, however, was distinctly Anglican, the ancient Service-books of the English Church being mainly followed, and large portions of them retained, as far as the doctrines now to be inculcated would allow.

Hence the book was received with greater readiness than might have been expected¹. Learned men among the Romanizing party could conform to it, as containing the primitive elements of Christian worship, freed from the innovations of later times. Some indeed called it a parliamentary religion²; and some of the more extreme section of the reformers found fault with it, on the ground that it was tinged with Lutheranism³. It was immediately turned into Latin, that the continental reformers might know how matters were advancing⁴.

'Item, For an uniformity, that no minister do counterfeit the popish mass, as to kiss the Lord's table; washing his fingers at every time in the Communion; blessing his eyes with the paten, or sudary; that there should not be more than one Communion¹ in a church upon any day, except Christmas and Easter, when Collects, Epistles, and Gospels were provided for two communions.

It might naturally be expected that some would cling to the old form of service, and watch for some turn of affairs in the political world, which would restore the Missals to their place in the churches. The fall of the Duke of Somerset was thought to be such an event²; and upon his being sent to the Tower in the autumn of this year (1549) it was rumoured that the Latin service, with its ceremonies, would be restored, 'as though the setting forth of the Book of Common Prayer had been the only or crossing his head with the paten; shifting of the book from one place to another; laying down and licking the chalice of the Communion; holding up his fingers, hands, or thumbs, joined towards his temples; breathing upon the bread or chalice; shewing the sacrament openly before the distribution of the Communion; ringing of sacring bells; or setting any light upon the Lord's board at any time; and finally to use no other ceremonies than are appointed in the king's book of common prayers, or kneeling, otherwise than is in the said book.'

¹ This order was aimed especially at Bonner, who had retained private masses under the name of communions, in the side-chapels at St Paul's. Hooper to Bullinger, (Dec. 27, 1549) Orig. Lett. xxxvi.: 'Altaria hic in multis ecclesiis facta sunt aræ. Et ne pereat papatus, sacrificuli etsi Latinum idioma abrogare coguntur, tonum eundem ac musicam semper diligentissime observant, quem hactenus in papatu solebant.' A letter was sent to Bonner from the Council (June 24, 1549) commanding that the Communion should be ministered only at the high altar of the church, and only at the usual time of high mass, except some number of people desired (for their necessary business) to have a communion in the morning, and yet the same to be executed in the chancel at the high altar. Therefore to prevent the possibility of a return to the old service, a King's Letter¹ was issued (Dec. 25) to call in, and burn, or deface and destroy all the old church-books, 'the keeping whereof should be a let to the usage of the said Book of Common Prayers.' This Order of Council was afterwards confirmed and extended by an Act of Parliament², to call in the books, and to take away images out of the churches.

By another Act of this Parliament³ (Jan. 31, 1550), the king was empowered to appoint six prelates, and six other men of this realm, learned in God's law, to prepare an Ordinal: and whatever should be 'devised for that purpose by the most number of them, and set forth under the great seal of England, before the 1st day of April, should be lawfully exercised and used, and none other.' The Order of Council appointing the commissioners was made Feb. 2nd; and the book⁴ was brought to the council, Feb. 28th, signed by eleven commissioners, Heath, bishop of Worcester, refusing to subscribe, although the book by no means satisfied those who were bent upon more thorough reformation⁵.

crease during the absence of the Duke of Somerset from the council-board, and still more after his death in 1552. Then indeed it seems that Cranmer kept himself in comparative retirement, while each event, under the influence of the court, tended to advance the views of the more zealous Protestants. Images had been destroyed out of the churches; and now (1550) the Eucharist was made to appear more plainly as the Lord's Supper by the removal of altars. This had been partially begun; but the general impulse was given to it by Hooper's Lent sermons before the court¹. Ridley, who, while Bishop of Rochester, had destroyed 'the altars of Baal' in his church there, was now Bishop of London². In June he visited his new diocese, and set about this alteration, as far as his episcopal authority could reach, seconded as it was by the civil power³. Notwithstanding these efforts many altars remained, with their rich hangings, and jewels, and gold and silver plate: and we can hardly think otherwise than that some courtiers desired their destruction, because they hoped to enrich themselves by the plunder of such valuable furniture⁴, which would not be wanted for 'an honest table.'

¹ Serm. iv. upon Jonas, Early Writings of Bp Hooper, p. 488, (Park. Soc.): 'It were well that it might please the magistrates to turn the altars into tables, according to the first institution of Christ, to take away the false persuasion of the people they have of sacrifices to be done upon the altars; for as long as the altars remain, both the ignorant people, and the ignorant and evil-persuaded priest will dream always of sacrifice. Therefore were it best that the magistrates removed all the monuments and tokens of idolatry and superstition; then should the true religion of God the sooner take place.'

Hence an order was issued in November for the entire removal of the altars, and arguments were prepared, and sent with the Council's letter¹ to the bishops, to reconcile the parishioners to the loss of the ornaments of their churches². The change, however, involved rubrical difficulties: the people had been accustomed to kneel before the altar at the time of communion; but what should be their posture before or around a table? The priest also had been directed to stand before the middle of the altar; but where should he place himself to minister at a table³?

With the same tendency, a great discussion was going on about ecclesiastical vestments. Everything which had been used by popery was unclean in the eyes of the more ardent reformers, who communicated with Switzerland rather than with Germany. But above all, the scarlet portion of the bishop's robes was offensive, as being the colour which identified the papacy with the apocalyptic persecutor. This dispute was brought to a full discussion by the appointment of Hooper to the bishopric of Gloucester⁴. After a long, hot, and fruitless debate with Ridley⁵, Hooper was committed to the Fleet, by order of the Privy Council (Jan. 27, 1551). This curious mode of compelling a bishop elect to be consecrated had the effect desired by those in authority. Hooper yielded so far as to be consecrated (March 8), and then to preach in his pontificals before the king⁶, on the understanding that he would not be required to use the full dress of a bishop on all occasions in the retirement of his diocese.

These disputes were strengthened by the presence of congregations of foreign refugees¹. John-a-Lasco's Dutch and German congregation, an Italian², and French church in London, together with that of Pullain for French and Walloons at Glastonbury, were fully tolerated; and under their respective superintendents, were allowed to conduct their worship after their own fashion: although Ridley, and other bishops, felt that such diversity would tend to disturb the settlement of the English ritual³.

Owing to these causes, the first Prayer-book of Edward VI. was no sooner published than further alterations were mooted. It is believed that the commissioners, who compiled the Ordination Services, in the early part of 1550, prepared some alterations in the Book of Common Prayer. Towards the close of the year, when the Convocation met as usual with the Parliament, this matter was brought forward. Mention was made of doubts which had arisen respecting certain portions of the book; namely, what holidays should still be observed; the dress and posture of the minister in the public service; the entire office of the Holy Communion, and especially the form of words used at the delivery of the consecrated elements⁴. The book was to be revised; but not by Convocation: a committee of divines with Cranmer at their head was appointed for that purpose by the king, who had determined on many changes⁵; and the opinions of Bucer and Martyr, the Regius Professors of Divinity at Cambridge and Oxford, were asked upon the existing Service-book¹. It must, however, be observed that, although Convocation did not discuss the particular alterations that were made, it might have been induced to delegate its authority to a royal commission², chiefly composed of its leading members; and the alterations, important as they are, were said to be adopted only for the sake of rendering the book ‘fully perfect in all such places in which it was necessary to be made more earnest and fit for the stirring up of all Christian people to the true honouring of Almighty God,’ and with no intention of condemning the doctrines of the former book. And Edward’s second Act of Uniformity³ declared that it had contained nothing ‘but what was agreeable to the Word of God and the primitive church;’ and that ‘such doubts as had been raised in the use and exercise thereof, proceeded rather from the curiosity of the minister and mistakers, than of any other worthy cause.’

made in 1552.

In the Communion Office, the Decalogue and Responses were added; the Introit, the name of the Virgin Mary, the thanksgiving for the Patriarchs and Prophets, the sign of the cross and the invocation of the Word and the Holy Ghost at the consecration of the elements, and the mixture of water with the wine, were omitted: at the delivery of the elements the second clause of our present form was ordered instead of the first; whereby direct mention of taking the Body and Blood of Christ was avoided: the long prayer of consecration, beginning with the Prayer for the Universal Church and ending with the Lord's Prayer, which had been formed on the most ancient model, was changed into the Prayer for the Church Militant, the Prayer of Consecration, and the first form of the Prayer after Communion. In Baptism, the exorcism, the anointing, the use of chrisom, and the trine immersion, were omitted; the water was to be consecrated whenever the service was used.

In the Visitation of the Sick, the allusion to Tobias and Sarah, the anointing, and the direction for private confessions and reserving portions of the consecrated elements, were omitted. In the Burial Service, the prayers for the dead, and the office for the Eucharist at funerals, were omitted. The rubric concerning Vestments ordered that neither alb, vestment, nor cope should be used; a bishop should wear a rochet, a priest or deacon only a surplice¹.

*Doctrinal change respecting Christ's pre-

The great doctrinal alteration referred to the presence of Christ in the consecrated elements of the Eucharist. In the book of 1549 the Communion Service had been so constructed as to be consistent with the belief of a real, and perhaps of a substantial and corporal presence. But the alterations in 1552 were such as to authorize and foster the belief that the consecrated elements had no new virtues imparted to them, and that Christ was present in the Eucharist in no other manner than as He is ever present to the prayers of the faithful. The pale of Church communion was thus enlarged for the more earnest reformers, but closed against the slightest leaning to Mediæval doctrine².

This revisal was a long time in hand. The archbishop and his coadjutors were engaged upon it in 1550. The 'censures' of Bucer and Martyr were obtained early in January 1551, when certain points were already determined. The French Order of Service was published by Pullain (Pollanus), about the end of February; and that of the German Congregation, by John-a-Lasco, probably about the same time. In November a private discussion was held concerning the manner of Christ's presence in the Sacrament¹. Parliament met January 23rd, 1552; and Convocation, as usual, on the following day. The Act of Uniformity passed both Houses April 6th, and a long interval was allowed before the revised book was to come into use, which was not until the Feast of All Saints. This delay seems to have arisen from a contest of opinion. Many considered that there was no real necessity to supersede the first Prayer-book: and the more zealous Protestant party were not satisfied even with the second, as now printed. Their opinions too were gaining ground with those in authority in the royal council; and they succeeded so far as to introduce a clause involving further condemnation of the views opposed by them, before the books were published. Indeed, the issue was suspended in September, until certain faults were corrected²; and almost at the last moment before the book was to be used according to the Act of Parliament, a declaration was ordered to be added to the Communion Office, in explanation of the rubric which requires communicants to kneel at receiving the consecrated elements,—‘that it is not meant thereby, that any adoration is done, or ought to be done, either unto the sacramental bread or wine there bodily received, or to any real and essential presence there being of Christ’s natural flesh and blood¹.’

*The Prayer-
Ireland.*

The Church of Ireland, although having its own Convocation, followed in ecclesiastical reforms the orders which were sent across from England. Edward’s first Act of Parliament², which commanded the communion to be given ‘under both the kinds,’ applied to ‘the people within the Church of England and Ireland;’ and the Proclamation prefixed to ‘The Order of the Communion’ (1548), made no distinction between the two countries³: yet it was not until February 6th, 1551, that an Injunction was sent to the Lord-deputy to have the English Book of Common Prayer read in the Irish churches. Sir Anthony St Leger immediately summoned the whole clergy, but not as a Convocation⁴, for the 1st of March, to acquaint them with his Majesty’s commands; and after some opposition from the Archbishop of Armagh, and several bishops, a proclamation was issued for carrying the order into effect: and thus the English Prayer-book began to be publicly used on Easter Sunday (March 29), in the cathedral of Christ church, Dublin¹. The second Book of Common Prayer (1552) does not appear to have been ordered for observance in the Irish Church: nor was any attempt made to translate the whole or parts of it into the Irish language. It may be doubted whether it was used beyond the circle of the Lord Deputy's Court: for the native priests did not understand English; and if adopted by those English clergy, who occupied the larger benefices, it would be as unintelligible to the people as the Latin service which it supplanted. The language, indeed, presented such obstacles, that the proposal was entertained to allow a Latin translation of the Book of Common Prayer to be used in the Irish churches,—a proposal which was actually sanctioned by the Irish Parliament at the commencement of the reign of Elizabeth². The Irish and the Welsh were left in their ignorance, from the unwillingness of the learned to master their languages. We must conclude that this alone hindered the translation of the reformed Service-book for the use of those countries; since we find that the first Prayer-Book (1549) was translated into French for the use of the king's subjects in Calais and the Channel Islands; and

APPENDIX.

Notices of certain foreigners who have been supposed to have influenced the composition or revival of the Prayer-Book in the reign of Edward VI.

1. CONTINUAL controversies within the English Church have turned upon the comparative merits and authority of the First and Second Prayer-Books of Edward VI. As to their merits, some regard the first Book as still leavened with Popish doctrines and practices : to others the second Book appears the work of foreign influence, and of pertinacious opposition to catholic antiquity¹. The question of authority, however it may be historically decided, can be of little moment to those who now use our Prayer-Book, as successively amended, and as fully authorized by Parliament and Convocation in 1662.

ERS.

It may be quite certain that the Convocation 'was not permitted to pass its judgment on the second Service-Book put forth by authority of parliament in the reign of Edward VI., and for this plain reason, that it would have thrown all possible difficulties in the way of its publication'; yet this second Book must be regarded as an English book revised by a selected number of English bishops and divines. It may be said that foreigners were consulted about the revival ; and it is true that the opinions of some strangers were asked : but even in the case of such men as Bucer and Martyr, who from their position would naturally be consulted, and on points where alterations agreed with their expressed opinions, it does not appear that those alterations were made in consequence of their influence. Of all the foreigners who were engaged in the work of reformation, Melancthon and Luther had the greatest influence both in the general reformation of the English Church, and in the composition of the English Book of Common Prayer, where it differed from the mediæval Service-Books.

2. Melancthon was repeatedly invited into England ; and it seems probable that his opinion, supported by his character and learning, had great influence on Cranmer's mind. As early as March, 1534, he had been invited more than once¹; so that the attention of Henry VIII. and Cranmer had been turned towards him, before they proceeded to any doctrinal reformation. The formularies of faith, which were put forth in the reign of Henry, are supposed to have originated in his advice². On the death of Bucer (Feb. 17, 1551,) the professorship of divinity at Cambridge was offered to Melancthon, and after many letters he was at last formally appointed³ (May, 1553). It is perhaps needless to add that he never came into England; and although his presence had been so much desired, it does not appear that he had any influence with regard to the alterations introduced into Edward's second Prayer-Book.

3. The first Book was largely indebted to Luther, who had composed a form of Service in 1533, for the use of Brandenburg and Nuremberg⁴. This was taken by Melancthon and Bucer as their model, when they were invited (1543) by Hermann, Prince Archbishop of Cologne⁵, to draw up a Scriptural form of doctrine and worship for his subjects⁶. This book 'contained directions for the public services and administration of the sacraments, with forms of prayer and a litany; and also expositions of several points of faith and duty'. The Litany presents many striking affinities with the

The exhortations in the Communion Service (1548 and 1549), and portions of the Baptismal Services, are mainly due to this book, through which the influence of Luther may be traced in our Prayer-Book, where additions, or considerable changes were made in translating the old Latin Services¹.

INFLUENCE OF FOREIGNERS.

4. Martin Bucer arrived in England, at Cranmer's invitation, in April 1549, and was appointed King's professor of divinity at Cambridge. His opinion of the First Prayer-Book, which was then in course of publication, he gives in a letter written to the friends whom he had left at Strasburg, on the day after he reached Lambeth: 'The cause of religion, as far as appertains to the establishment of doctrines and the definition of rites, is nearly what could be wished.... We hear that some concessions have been made both to a respect for antiquity, and to the infirmity of the present age...' Of the use of vestments, candles, commemoration of the dead, and chrisom, he says, 'They affirm that there is no superstition in these things, and that they are only to be retained for a time.... This circumstance greatly refreshed us, that all the services in the churches are read and sung in the vernacular tongue, that the doctrine of justification is purely and soundly taught, and the Eucharist administered according to Christ's ordinance²....' In the following year he was required to state his opinion touching any parts of the Prayer-Book which seemed to him to need alteration: and he then again expressed his general satisfaction with it³. prepared, however, a laborious criticism of the whole book, extending to twenty-eight chapters'. 'He objects to the separation in choirs of the clergy from the laity, as an antichristian usage; to the Romish habits, as having been abused to superstition;—to the use of circular wafers at the communion, because encouraging a notion that this form was necessary for comprising Christ's mystical body;—to the receiving of oblations at the holy table from absentees, because likely to make some men fancy that the devotions of such as bore their offerings would be beneficial to themselves;—to the practice of putting the wafer into the communicant's mouth, as comparatively modern, and tending to keep alive the superstitious conceit, that a layman's hands were unfit to touch the Lord's body;—and to the rubric enjoining the priest to consecrate only a sufficiency of the sacramental elements, as tending to foster a belief that the sacerdotal act altered the character of such substances. He finds fault with some gestures used in the mass, and not yet discontinued, though for the most part unauthorized by the Book of Common Prayer, such as kneeling, crossing, holding up the hands, and smiting upon the breast. He approves the reading of homilies to congregations unprovided with ministers capable of preaching. He excepts against the prayer recommending the dead to the mercy of God, and to that which represented angelic ministry as engaged in conveying our devotions to heaven. In the Baptismal Office, he suggests that the use of chrisom, and of the white habit, should be laid aside; that the passage asserting the sanctification of water to the mystical washing away of sin, ought to be expunged; and that, when the child is signed with a cross, which he admits to be a practice of high antiquity, the address ought not to be made to him personally. He disapproves also of exorcising the infants, and of demanding answers in their names from sponsors. He argues that a knowledge of the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments, and the other matters contained in the Catechism, is not sufficient for such as come for confirmation; he recommends frequent catechizing. The permission to anoint sick persons at their own desire, he thinks ought to be withdrawn. In the Churching of Women, he excepts against the chrisom. In the Communion, he wishes to have the denunciations follow the order of the Ten Commandments. He recommends that the number of holydays be diminished; and that bells be not rung except upon some public and religious account¹. Bucer delivered this work to the Bishop of Ely, Jan. 5, 1551. In it he had fully and plainly recorded his opinion of the Prayer-Book; but although the points censured were for the most part altered in the revised book, yet these alterations do not seem to have resulted from Bucer's opinion, but rather to have been settled before the two foreign professors were even asked to give their judgments². Bucer died at the end of February in this year.

Bucer.

5. Peter Martyr arrived in England in November 1547, and was appointed King's Professor of Divinity at Oxford. We might therefore expect him to have been employed about the first Book of Edward VI. But his name is not among the compilers; nor does he appear to have been consulted, until the revisal of the book was in hand. We have his own account of his criticism, in a letter to Bucer (Jan. 10, 1551). It seems that he was not acquainted with the contents of the Prayer-Book, and that no complete Latin version was within his reach. A version, probably of the ordinary services, by Cheke, was put into his hands, and upon it he offered his annotations to the archbishop. Afterwards on reading Bucer's larger treatise, he was surprised to find what the book contained, and added his approval of his friend's observations. He notices one point which he marvels that Bucer had overlooked, that if a sick person was to receive the Communion on the same day that it was publicly administered in the Church, a portion of the consecrated elements was to be reserved and carried to the sick person. The conclusion of his letter shews that he perfectly understood that his opinion was not to guide the amendments which would be introduced into the Prayer-Book, though he rejoices in having the opportunity of 'admonishing the bishops¹.'

Bullinger.

6. Bullinger kept up a continual correspondence with all who were engaged in the work of reformation. He dedicated treatises to Henry VIII. and Edward VI., and also to English noblemen, whose names and titles were carefully sent to him by his countrymen, several of whom were in England for purposes of education². His opinion was often sought upon points of doctrine and order; but it does not appear that he had any influence in the formation or revisal of our Service-Book. On the homiletic teaching of the English Church his influence must be allowed. One of his great works was a body of divinity in fifty sermons, of which each parcel was sent into England as soon as published. This work was translated for the especial benefit of the clergy in Q. Elizabeth's reign³.

Calvin.

7. Upon such a subject as the reformation of the Service-Book of a national Church, it cannot be doubted that Calvin would put forth all the influence which he had. Accordingly we find him endeavouring to guide those whom he conceived to be the leaders of the cause in this country. He wrote a long letter to the Protector Somerset (Oct. 22, 1548), introducing every subject which possibly might be debated; treating of forms of prayer, which he approves; of the Sacraments; of ceremonies; and of discipline¹. At the same time he wrote to Bucer, who had been invited by Cranmer to come to England, not to fail, through his well-known moderation, in urging a thorough removal of superstitious rites². To the same effect he wrote to Cranmer himself³. No part, however, of our formularies can be traced to his influence. He had prepared a directory for divine service in French, while he was at Strasburg. This he afterwards published in Latin with emendations, as the form of the church at Geneva, in 1545. It is quite certain that our Book of Common Prayer (1549) had not the most distant resemblance to this production⁴.

8. During the revisal of the Prayer-Book, the forms of service were published, which were used by the congregations of foreign refugees in England. One of these was, in its original shape, the above-named French work of Calvin. He had been succeeded in the pastorate of the Church of Strangers at Strasburg by Pullain, who was obliged to flee from that city with his congregation by reason of the publication of the *Interim*⁵, an imperial manifesto adverse to the reformers. These people were chiefly weavers of worsted; and on their arrival in England the Duke of Somerset gave them a home in the abbey buildings at Glastonbury, and provided them with the means of carrying on their manufacture⁶. In February, 1551, Pullain published their order of service in Latin⁷, with a dedication to K. Edward, to defend his Church from the slanders of the Romanists, who, as usual, had accused them of licentiousness⁸. This book has been supposed to have furnished hints to the revisers of the Book of Common Prayer in some additions which were made in 1552 to the ancient services. The introductory sentences, with the Exhortation, Confession and Absolution, which were then placed at the beginning of the Morning and Evening Prayer, and the Ten Commandments with the Responses, especially the last, subjoined to them, which were at the same time introduced at the beginning of the Communion Service, are supposed to be due in some degree to this publication of Pollanus. Possibly another source may be found for a part of these additions. It was only an idea, however, or an occasional allusion, which was borrowed: and in the above-mentioned particulars, where alone any resemblance can be traced, the similarity belongs to the work of Pollanus, not to Calvin's translation of the same original¹. The following is the passage referred to, being the commencement of the Sunday Service:

Amen.

Hic Ecclesia eandem orationem verbis prope iisdem Choraule præeunte succinit.

It will be seen from this extract that this service of Pollanus may have furnished the hint, that the decalogue should be repeated in the public service. But in the English book the Commandments were to be plainly recited in the hearing of the people, instead of being sung by them in metre; and they were appointed to be said not in the Morning Prayer, but at the commencement of the Communion, or principal service. The words, 'dignare cordibus nostris eam ita tuo Spiritu inscribere,' contain the subject of the petition which was placed as the concluding response after the Commandments, 'write all these thy laws in our hearts.' Comparing this extract with the commencement of our Daily Prayer, we must observe that there is not one strictly parallel sentence, and Pollanus gives no form of Absolution at all. The truth respecting the very appropriate opening of our Service seems to be, that the hint was taken from two books of Service used by congregations of refugees in England, which were published about this time: the one being the version of Calvin's form, by Pollanus; and the other, that used by the Walloons under John a-Lasco.

9. This truly influential person was a Polish noble, who left his country and his honours for the freer acknowledgment of the Gospel. His first visit to England was in September 1548, when he resided six months with Cranmer. The introduction of the Interim into Friesland compelled him to seek a shelter in England in 1550¹. He was then appointed superintendent of the German protestant congregation in London: and his personal character appears to have obtained for them the church of St Augustine's Monastery², with permission to use their own ceremonies. He published in Latin the service used by his Church, most probably about the close of 1550³. His friendly intercourse with Cranmer would naturally lead to an inquiry as to the form of his worship; and that, not only with a reference to the English Service-Book then under review, but that the English government might know to what they were giving shelter and sanction. In this book there is a form of Confession and of Absolution, in which some phrases resemble the corresponding portions which were added to the Second Book of Edward VI.

DURING the reign of Mary the history of the Prayer-book is traced at Frankfort. Thither Pullain fled with his companions, when the refugees of various nations were driven from their homes in England¹. The magistrates assigned a church for the use of the French protestant congregation: and when a company of English exiles settled there, they were allowed to use the same church on alternate days in the week, and at different times on the Sunday. A stipulation was, however, made that the English service was to be brought somewhat into agreement with the French order. Probably this was done, not only from the prevalent ignorance of toleration, but at the desire of some among the English exiles, who preferred the French form of service to their own². Knox was invited to act as their minister; and a description of the English Service-book was sent to Calvin for his disapproval³. It is a painfully interesting document, and the first of a long series of expressions of dislike to ritual observances, to primitive institutions, and Apostolical order, which unhappily form a large

Elizabeth.*

On the accession of Elizabeth (Nov. 17, 1558) the people generally were more prepared to receive the religious teaching of the reformers, than they had been in the time of Henry, or even of Edward. They had now learned that it alone would give them freedom from the most revolting cruelty¹. The protestant divines who remained alive came forth from their hiding-places, and with others who now returned from the continent, began once more to occupy the pulpits. The conduct of the Queen was marked by extreme caution²; from the very probable fear that the reformers would outstrip the royal prerogative, and the difficulty of restoring the Prayer-Book, while the statutes of the late reign were unrepealed, and the benefices were mostly held by Romanists. The mass therefore still continued, and the Queen was crowned according to the ceremonies of the Roman Pontifical. An English Litany³ was, however, used in the royal chapel; and about the beginning of December a

³ As it was in debate which of Edward's Prayer-Books should be revised for the use of the Church, the Litany printed in the first month of Elizabeth's reign was not taken from either of them, but rather from the original form (1544), with amendments in the collects, and concluding with the Prayer of St Chrysostom. It has the word 'dolour of our heart' (from 1544); one edition retains the petition for deliverance 'from the tyranny of the bishop of Rome, and all his detestable enormities,' which is omitted in another, the same in all other respects. A copy of each edition is in the Cambridge University Library. It is reprinted in 'Liturgical Services of the Reign of Q. Elizabeth' (Park. Soc.). See Mr Clay's Pref. pp. ix. sqq. No authority is claimed for these publications: yet changes which appear in them were sanctioned in 1559; and no copy of the Litany, which was in use in the royal chapel on the 27th of December, is known to be extant, unless it be the one of these editions, which omits the mention of the bishop of Rome.

paper of questions and advices was prepared¹, suggesting the mode in which the reformed religion could be most safely re-established². The 'manner of doing of it' is advised to be by a consultation of 'such learned men as be meet to shew their minds herein; and to bring a plat or book hereof, ready drawn, to her Highness: which being approved of her Majesty, may be so put into the Parliament House: to the which for the time it is thought that these are apt men, Dr Bill, Dr Parker, Dr May, Dr Cox, Mr Whitehead, Mr Grindal, Mr Pilkington...' and meanwhile to prohibit 'all innovation, until such time as the book come forth; as well that there be no often changes in religion, which would take away authority in the common people's estimation; as also to exercise the Queen's Majesty's subjects to obedience.' Another question is propounded, 'What may be done of her Highness for her own conscience openly, before the whole alteration; or, if the alteration must tarry longer, what order be fit to be in the whole realm, as an Interim?' To which it is proposed 'to alter no further than her Majesty hath, except it be to receive the communion as her Highness pleaseth on high feasts: and that where there be more chaplains at mass, that they do always communicate in both kinds: and for her Highness's conscience till then, if there be some other devout sort of prayers, or Memory said, and the seldomer mass.' This advice was acted upon. Preaching was forbidden by a proclamation (Dec. 27, 1558), which allowed the Gospel and Epistle, and the Ten Command-

To the same effect was the speech of the Lord-Keeper Bacon at the opening of Parliament (Jan. 25, 1559): ‘that laws should be made for the according and uniting of the people into an uniform order of religion: . . . that nothing be advised or done which any-way in continuance of time were likely to breed or nourish any kind of idolatry or superstition; so on the other side heed is to be taken, that by no licentious or loose handling any manner of occasion be given whereby any contempt or irreverent behaviour towards God and godly things, or any spice of irreligion, might creep in or be conceived¹. These were the views by which the alterations now made in the Prayer-Book were guided. If we may judge by the result, it seems to have been considered that Edward's first book did not entirely preclude the possibility of superstition, and that his second book went within the limits of danger of irreverence. The parties openly engaged in the revisal were the committee of divines, and the royal council; but the work may be traced to fewer hands, Secretary Cecil having the general supervision, and Guest² being appointed by him to take a leading part among the select divines. Archbishop Parker was absent from the deliberations through sickness; but Guest was appointed in his place with especial instructions 'to compare both K. Edward's Communion Books together, and from them both to frame a book for the use of the Church of England, by correcting and amending, altering, and adding, or taking away, according to his judgment and the ancient Liturgies³.' When the book was completed by the divines, Guest wrote an explanatory letter to Cecil, in which he seems to refer to a paper of leading questions, which had been put before him by the secretary, and gives the reasons which had guided him in disallowing those suggestions⁴. He speaks too in his own person, as though the revision had been especially his work. It is clear from this letter that the book, in the shape in which it left the committee of divines, was more favourable to Puritan opinions than was agreeable to the Queen or to her secretary. The surplice was allowed, but no vestment was to be peculiarly used at the Communion; and the posture of communicants, standing or kneeling, was left as a thing indifferent. These things were altered in the book as authorized by Parliament; and it does not appear that either House did more than read and approve the book in the form in which it was laid before them. It is most probable, from the known sentiments and subsequent conduct of the Queen, that these changes were ordered by herself and her council¹; and that the book was then laid before Parliament², which shewed itself quite willing communicants should be dismissed before the consecration, and (as it seems) after the offertory. The Creed is ordained to be said only of the communicants. Prayer for the dead is not used, because it seems to make for sacrifice: as used in the first Book, it makes some of the faithful to be in heaven, and to need no mercy, and some of them to be in another place, and to lack help and mercy. The Prayer (in the first Book) for Consecration, 'O merciful Father, &c.,' is to be disliked, because it is taken to be so needful to the consecration, that the consecration is not thought to be without it: which is not true; for petition is no part of consecration: Christ in ordaining the Sacrament made no petition, but a thanksgiving. The sacrament is to be received in our hands. The old use of the church was to communicate standing; yet because it is taken of some by itself to be sin to receive kneeling, whereas of itself it is lawful, it is left indifferent to every man's choice to follow the one way or the other, to teach men that it is lawful to receive either standing or kneeling. Strype, Annals, I. Append. xiv.

to accept the royal amendments, and authorized the Queen to ordain further ceremonies, if the orders appointed in the book should be contemned or irreverently used¹. The following variations of the Elizabethan from Edward's second Prayer-book were noted by Archbishop Parker² for the Lord Treasurer Burghley. The first rubric now directed 'the Morning and Evening Prayer to be used in the accustomed place of the church, chapel, or chancel,' instead of 'in such place as the people may best hear.' The second rubric had forbidden all ecclesiastical vestments but the rochet and the surplice: the minister was now directed, at the time of Communion, and at all other times in his ministration, to use such ornaments in the church [as were in use by authority of Parliament in the second year of K. Edward VI. In the Litany, the words 'From the tyranny of the Bishop of Rome, and all his detestable enormities' were omitted; and the suffrage for the Queen was altered by the addition of the words, strengthen in the true worshipping of thee in righteousness, and true holiness of life. The prayers for the Queen, and for the Clergy and people, with the collect, 'O God, whose nature and property,' &c., were now placed at the end of the Litany: of two collects for time of Dearth, one was omitted, as also was the note to the Prayer of St naments of the Church and of the ministers thereof shall be retained and be in use, as was in this Church of England, by authority of Parliament, in the second year of the reign of K. Edw. VI., until other order shall be therein taken, &c.,' (§ 13). The copies printed in this year (1559) differ from each other in small particulars, chiefly in the collects at the end of the Litany. The Ordinal differed from that of 1552 only in the form of the oath. It is styled 'The Oath of the Queen's sovereignty,' instead of 'The Oath of the King's supremacy;' and it is directed 'against the power and authority of all foreign potentates,' instead of 'against the usurped power and authority of the Bishop of Rome.'

The Ordinal.

The Act of Uniformity specified the feast of the Nativity of St John Baptist as the day on which the revised Prayer-Book was to be used. Parliament was dissolved May 8; and on the Sunday following (May 12), the Queen caused it to be read in her chapel, and on the following Wednesday it was read before 'a very august assembly of the court, at St Paul's³.'

This restoration of the reformed service did not meet with any very strong opposition. At the third reading of the bill (April 28), only nine bishops and nine temporal peers dissented; and of the whole body of 9,400 clergy, it appears that not more than 189 refused to conform, and resigned their benefices⁴.

 ROYAL
TION.

In the summer of this year a royal visitation was ordered, with the intention of suppressing superstition, and planting true religion, to the extirpation of all hypocrisy, enormities, and abuses. It was again necessary to enquire after popish Service-books, and to regulate the mode in which the new book of service should be used. The Injunctions¹ are supposed to have been compiled by the select divines who had been employed in Sir Thomas Smith's house about the Prayer-Book; but the hand of the secretary Cecil was upon them, to amend them after the Queen's mind². So that, as had been the case with the Prayer-Book itself, the influence of the court was exercised against the opinion of the leading Protestant divines. The chief point of dispute was the removal of altars. There was great difficulty in prevailing upon the Queen to accede to this under any terms; and she would not order their removal unconditionally. A long string of reasons was prepared, *Why it was not convenient that the communion should be ministered at an altar*³. The result of this movement was an Order subjoined to the Injunctions, declaring that the matter seemed to be of no great moment, so that the Sacrament were duly and reverently ministered; yet for uniformity, that no altar should be taken down but by oversight of the curate and churchwardens; and that the holy table should commonly be set where the altar stood, and at Communion-time should be so placed within the chancel that the minister might be conveniently heard. This royal order, however, did not quell the controversy. In the next year the bishops drew up a paper of 'Interpretations and further considerations'¹ upon the meaning of these Injunctions, for the guidance of the clergy; where they direct, 'that the table be removed out of the choir into the body of the church, before the chancel-door, where either the choir seemeth to be too little, or at great feasts of receivings, and at the end of the communion to be set up again, according to the Injunctions.' On the question of vestments and ornaments the court had overruled the divines, and the Act of Uniformity fixed upon the second year of Edward VI. as the standard, thereby disallowing the Puritanical bareness of ornament which had marked Edward's Second Book, and which Guest himself would have continued. Still, the use of the earlier ornaments was not generally introduced; and the notion was plainly expressed among the bishops, that the rubric was not intended to be compulsory, but was mainly introduced to legalize the usages of the royal chapel².

These Injunctions also make mention of Psalmody. Chanting and Psalmody. In collegiate, and some parish-churches, there were bequests for the maintenance of a choir. This laudable service of music was to be retained, and in such churches a modest and distinct song to be so used in all parts of the common prayers, that they might be as plainly understood as if it were read without singing; and besides this, or where there was no such provision, a hymn was allowed to be sung at the beginning or end of the Morning or Evening Prayers³.

Uniformity.*

In 1560 the Book of Common Prayer was published in Latin, upon the petition of the Universities, and with the royal authority for its use among the learned¹. Walter Haddon has been called the author of this version²; but he followed a translation of the book of 1549 by Alexander Ales, to such an extent, that it cannot be considered a faithful rendering of its presumed English counterpart³. The variations also are of such a nature as to shew that it was intended to keep up the forms and observances of the First Book of Edward VI. in the chapels of the schools and colleges, and among the clergy in their private devotions.

In Ireland, it appears that the use of the Book of Common Prayer, at the death of Edward VI., rested on an Act of the English Parliament; that the book of 1552 was not ordered for observance there during the short period in which it was used in England; and that no act was passed in Ireland in Queen Mary's reign to prohibit the use of the English Service-Book. However, it was disused from the death of Edward VI. until August 30th, 1559, when the English Litany was sung in Christ-Church cathedral, on the occasion of the Earl of Sussex taking the oaths as Lord-Deputy. Part of his instructions were, 'to set up the worship of God as it is in England, and to make such statutes next Parliament as were lately made in England.' Therefore, on the meeting of the Irish Parliament, in January 1560, the second business they took in hand was to pass an Act of Uniformity, following the English Act of the preceding year, and authorizing the Prayer-Book which had been put forth in England¹. All other books of service were set aside; and the Parliament then met the difficulty of supplying the Irish churches with Prayer-books,—a difficulty arising from the circumstance, that in most places the priests did not understand English, that there was no Irish printing press, and that few could read the Irish letters. Their strange expedient was to sanction the use of all common and open prayer in the Latin tongue². And it appears that Haddon's Latin version³ was completed with this object: for it comprehends the Occasional Offices, which would not have been required if it were only for the use of college-chapels.

In this year also appeared the first of a long series of Occasional Services. *Successive changes in

One point specified in the Act of Uniformity, in which a change had been introduced into the Prayer-Book of 1559, is the 'addition of certain lessons to be used on every Sunday in the year.' The Calendar (1549) contained the chapters to be read at the daily Matins and Evensong: the Proper Psalms and Lessons for Feasts being given with the Collects, Epistles, and Gospels. In 1552 the 'Proper Psalms and Lessons for divers feasts and days, at Morning and Evening Prayer,' were placed before the Calendar. In 1559 this part of the book assumed more of its present shape, having 'Proper Lessons to be read for the First Lessons, both at Morning Prayer and Evening Prayer on the Sundays throughout the year, and for some also the Second Lessons,' in addition to the 'Lessons proper for holydays,' and the chapters for ordinary days in the Calendar. All was not, however, quite satisfactory. In 1561 a letter was issued to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners², directing them to 'peruse the order of the said Lessons throughout the whole year, and to cause some new Calendars to be imprinted, whereby such chapters or parcels of less edification may be removed, and other more profitable may supply their rooms³.' The reason assigned for this ap-

³ Cardwell, Doc. Ann. LV. This commission was also to consider the decays of churches, and unseemly keeping of chancels, and to order the commandments to be set up at the east end of the chancel, to be not only read for edification, but also to give some comely or-pointment can hardly have been the true one; for only the First Lessons for Whitsunday were changed, and one error corrected¹. No further alteration in the Calendar was directed in the Queen's letter; yet we find that it was revised in other respects. Tables of the Moveable Feasts, and for determining Easter, were added: and the names of saints, which had been omitted from the first reformed Prayer-book, were inserted as they stand in our present Calendar². It was a small selection from the list of names, one for almost every day in the year, which had been published in the preceding year with the Latin Prayer-Book, and was now placed in the English Calendar, partly no doubt that the marks of time employed in courts of law might be understood, and that the old dates of parochial festivities and fairs might be retained; but partly with the higher object of perpetuating the memory of ancient Christian worthies, some of them connected, or supposed to be connected with the English Church, and thereby of namement and demonstration that the same is a place of religion and prayer.

¹ Deut. xvi. and Wisd. i. were substituted for Deut. xvii. and xviii. as the first lessons for Whitsunday; and for Evensong of the eleventh Sunday after Trinity, 4 Kings ix. was put instead of 4 Kings xix. Perhaps less care was taken in revising the lists of daily lessons from the discretion which was allowed of reading other chapters than those appointed. The clergy were enjoined to use this discretion, in the Admonition prefixed to the Second Book of Homilies (1564). And Abbot, afterwards Archbp of Canterbury (1611), writes that in his time it was 'not only permitted to the minister, but commended in him, if wisely and quietly he do read canonical scripture, where the apocryphal upon good judgment seemeth not so fit; or any chapter of the canonical may be conceived not to have in it so much edification before the simple, as some other part of the same canonical may be thought to have.' ² With the Festivals of our Lord, the Purification and Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, John the Baptist, the apostles and evangelists, All Saints, and Innocents, the Calendar (1559) contained only the names of St George, St Lawrence, and St Michael.

APPENDIX.

SECT. I.—Latin Versions of the Prayer-Book.

THE 'Order of the Communion' (March, 1548) was sent to Frankfort, as soon as it was published. There Miles Coverdale translated it into German, and also into Latin; the Latin copy being sent to Calvin, with some idea that he would approve and cause it to be printed¹. This, however, does not seem to have been done. Another translation was made, and was immediately printed in London. The title is, Ordo distributionis sacramenti altaris sub utraque specie, et formula confessionis faciendæ in regno Angliæ. The initials of the translator are 'A. A. S. D. Th.²,' which mark it as the work of Alexander Alesius, a Scotch divine and physician of known reformed opinions in the time of Henry VIII.³, and who afterwards translated the entire Prayer-Book of 1549.

This work has been generally considered as undertaken in order to meet Bucer's wants, when he was required to give his judgment of the English reformed Book of Service⁴, a statement which seems to have arisen from the fact that the translation is printed in Bucer's Scripta Anglicana, before his Censura.

*The First Book of Edward VI.

Mr Clay, in his valuable preface to the Elizabethan Liturgical Services, (p. xxv.) argues that Bucer could not have used this translation, because his treatise is dated 'Nonis Januarii,' 1551, the same year in which it was published: and, moreover, Ales himself gives other reasons for his work, that he desired to make known the progress of the reformed doctrines and practices 'pæne patriæ ipsius' among the foreigners with whom he had lived, 'vel ad exemplum, vel consolationem, vel etiam dolorem aliquorum;'

and it was published at that particular time when a convention to debate upon ecclesiastical matters was expected to be held under the auspices of the Emperor Charles V.¹ But although it was not circulated until 1551, it is possible that Bucer may have seen this translation by Ales. He must have had access to a much more complete version than that of Sir John Cheke, which was laid before Martyr. And his information respecting the contents of the Prayer-Book can hardly have been derived merely from an oral translation, from which, at his first coming into England, he had formed a notion of the Church to which he was joining himself². A translation had been made at Cambridge by Dryander³, before June 1549⁴: and this version, or compendium, made by the Greek Professor at 'his own University,' was most probably known to Bucer. Still, the title, which Bucer gives to the Prayer-Book in his Censura, calling it 'Liber Sacrorum, seu Ordinatio Ecclesie atque Ministerii Ecclesiastici in Regno Angliæ,' seems to be taken from Ales; for the real title of the English book was 'The Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and other Rites and Ceremonies in the Church of England,' while Ales's title was Ordinatio Ecclesie, seu Ministerii Ecclesiastici, in florentissimo Regno Angliæ, conscripta sermone patrio, et in Latinam linguam bona fide conversa, et ad consolationem Ecclesiarum Christi, ubicunque locorum ac gentium, his tristissimis temporibus, edita ab Alexandro Alesio, Scoto, Sacræ Theologiæ Doctore. Lipsiæ. M.D.LI.

As to the work itself, it cannot be said to come up to those expressions of good faith and of simple honesty as a translation, which Ales put forth in his title-page and preface. Some portions, which had been altered in translating from the Missal, are given in their old Latin words, (e. g. among the Collects, that for St Stephen's Day, Second Sunday in Lent, &c.); some clauses are interpolated,

In the Communion Office, the second Collect for the King is almost entirely a composition: Omnipotens æterne Deus, in cujus manu corda sunt Regum, qui es humilium consolator, et fidelium fortitudo, ac protector in te sperantium, da Regi nostro Edvardo sexto ut super omnia, et in omnibus te honoret et amet, et studeat servare populo suæ Majestati commisso pacem, cum omni pietate et honestate, per Christum Dominum nostrum. Then in the rubric, 'the priest, or he that is appointed, shall read the Epistle,' is Sacerdos aut subdiaconus; and, 'the priest, or one appointed to read the Gospel,' is Sacerdos aut diaconus. 'The most comfortable Sacrament of the body and blood of Christ,' is Sacramentum plenum consolationis, Hoc est, corpus et sanguinem Christi. The whole sentence beginning, 'And if any man have done wrong to any other, &c.,' is omitted: it was inserted in 1549, and Ales in this part retained his translation of the Office of 1548. The rubric directing communicants to 'tarry still in the quire...the men on the one side, and the women on the other side,' is rendered, Tunc communicaturi pervenient in Chorum, vel locum vicinum, viri a dextris, mulieres a sinistris separatim et disjunctim genuflectant. The rubric directing the preparation of the elements is, Tunc sacerdos tot hostias calici aut corporali imponet, i. e. 'so much bread

...laying the bread upon the corporas, or else in the paten, or in some other comely thing prepared for that purpose.' The Absolution widely differs from the English, which is our present form : Dominus noster Jesus Christus, qui suam potestatem dedit Ecclesie, ut absolvat penitentes a peccatis ipsorum, et reconciliet celesti Patri eos, qui suam fiduciam collocant in Christum, misereatur vestri, &c.: this Ales took from Hermann's 'Simplex ac pia Deliberatio.' The form of words at the delivery of the elements is rendered, Corpus Domini nostri Jesu Christi, quod traditum est pro te, conservet corpus tuum, et perducat animam tuam ad vitam eternam. Sanguis...qui pro te effusus est, conservet animam tuam ad vitam eternam. The second clause of the concluding blessing is omitted, Ales retaining the short form of his previous version of the office of 1548. In the Office of Baptism all mention is omitted of the anointing after putting on the chrism.

These notices of the carelessness of Ales in his version of the Prayer-Book of 1549 are more than historical curiosities. The English Book was much altered, as we have seen, in 1552, and was again revised at the beginning of Elizabeth's reign. Then it was determined that the revised book should appear also in Latin. This was done in compliance with a petition of the Universities, that the Act of Uniformity, which allowed public service only according to the English book, should not be strictly applied to the chapels of colleges. Permission was granted by a royal letter¹ that the service might be said in such chapels in Latin, provision being also made for an English Service and Communion, at least on festivals. And all ministers were exhorted to use this Latin form privately on those days on which they did not say the public prayers in English in their churches.

Walter Haddon (1560) follows Ales's Version of the Prayer-Book (1549).

The authorship of this Latin version has been given to Walter Haddon². He was probably editor, or one of the editors³; but the real basis of the work was the old translation of the Prayer-Book of 1549 by Ales. And so little care seems to have been taken to bring the Latin into agreement with the revised English Book, that it has been suspected that this apparent carelessness was intentional, and that by means of this Latin version, the Universities and public schools, and the clergy in their private devotions,

The book is entitled, Liber precum publicarum, seu ministerii Ecclesiasticæ administrationis Sacramentorum, aliorumque rituum et cæremoniæ in Ecclesia Anglicana. Cum privilegio Regiæ Majestatis. The letters patent of Elizabeth stand in the place of the Act of Uniformity. The 'Preface' is Ales's, with a few verbal corrections of latinity, and omitting, as not suiting the intention of the book, the directions for daily prayer in the parish-churches, and the permission to clerks to say the Morning and Evening Prayer privately in any language they understand. The Calendar has a name attached to almost every day²; and a chapter is added, De anno et partibus ejus. The Athanasian Creed is placed after Morning Prayer, instead of after Evening Prayer, which was its position in the English Book. The opening of the Litany is correctly given. Of the Collects, that for St Stephen's Day, which Ales had taken from the Missal, Haddon altered partially, as also that for St Mark's day. In those for the Annunciation, and the 8th and 11th Sundays after Trinity, Haddon retains Ales's variation from the English. That for St Andrew's day Ales had given rightly enough from his copy; but a new Collect was substituted in 1552: Haddon's Latin, however, remains as a transcript from Ales.

In the Communion Office, the rubric after the Decalogue, 'The Priest standing up, and saying,' is rendered, Tunc per ministrum, stantem ad sacram mensam, legetur..., determining the Priest's position by these additional words to be the same as that directed by the fourth rubric before the office, ad mensæ septentrionalem partem. The rubric before reading the Epistle agrees neither with the English, nor with Ales's Latin, but is a translation of that of 1549: Post has Collectas, sacerdos, seu quis alius minister

² In 1549, there were no names but those for which there were Collects; which are common to all the Calendars: and here Ales exactly followed his copy. In 1552, St George, St Lawrence, and St Clement were inserted, but Magdalen was omitted: Barnabas was also omitted in the Calendar; but it must have been by an error of the printer, since the Collect was retained. The Calendar in Edward's Primer (1553) has some names of saints. The English Calendar (1559) has none, except St Lawrence and St George. The Latin Calendar (1560) has far more names than the Roman.

*ad id deputatus, legat Epistolam, in loco ad id assignato, et sic inci-

The Absolution is taken from Ales, Dominus noster Jesus Christus, qui suam potestatem dedit Ecclesiæ, ut absolvat... misereatur vestri..., but the words, Per Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum, are added, making the conclusion resemble the English, without regard to his own preceding clause. The Proper Prefaces remain as Ales had taken them from the Missal, without noticing the omissions or changes of the English; yet in that for Easter, where Ales has 'Ipse enim verus est Agnus,' Haddon gives Ipse enim est vere Agnus. In the Office of Visitation of the Sick, the opening versicle, 'Send him help from thy holy place,' taken from the Sarum Ordo, 'Mitte ei Domine auxilium de sancto,' had been rendered by Ales, 'Mitte ei Domine angelum de sanctuario,' which Haddon retained, adding tu as a correction from the English; a blunder was made in printing, so that the sentence is Mitte eum Domine angelum de sanctuario tuo. In the exhortation, the words, 'that Almighty God is the Lord of life and death,' are rendered as they were by Ales, Christum esse Dominum mortis et vitæ: and the directions about making a will, declaring debts, &c., are arranged as they stand in Ales's version. The Office of 1549, which Ales translated, ended with a form for anointing, if the sick person desired it, and after the prayer followed the words, 'Usque quo Domine? Psalm. viii.' Ales omitted all mention of the anointing, and the prayer which was to accompany it when used; and gave in its place his own direction, 'si videtur commodum, dicatur etiam hic Psalmus, pro usitata ante hæc tempora unctione. 14. Usque quo Domine, &c.' This ceremony was omitted in 1552, and of course did not appear in the English Book of 1559, yet Haddon concludes his office with Ales's direction, changing however his word 'unctione,' si videtur commodum, dicatur etiam hic Psalmus, pro usitata ante hæc tempora visitatione. Psalmus xiiii.

In the office of Communion of the Sick, the error of the press, of giving notice postridie is continued from Ales; and the following rubrics are drawn from the same source: 'Quod si contingat eodem die Cœnam Domini in ecclesia celebrari, tunc sacerdos in cœna tantum Sacramenti servabit, quantum sufficit ægroti: et mox finita cœna [Missa, Ales] una cum aliquot ex his qui intersunt, ibit ad ægrotum, et primo communicabit cum illis [eos, Ales] qui assistunt ægroti [ægro, Ales] et interfuerunt cœnæ, et postremo cum infirmo [infirm-

We cannot help noticing that Haddon has altered Ales's Latinity, and substituted cæna for missa; which shows that the reappearance of this rubric in 1560 was not the mere result of carelessness, but that the attempt was made to give these directions to the clergy for their guidance in administering the Communion to the sick, at least within the walls of the colleges. The English office also merely gives a Collect with its Epistle and Gospel, without any further directions; which implies that the service should begin as in the public office, the proper Collect being used instead of that for the day. If the service of Visitation and Communion were used at one time, the minister was directed to omit the concluding verse and benediction of the Visitation Service, and to go straight to the Communion: but nothing was said about beginning otherwise than at the commencement of the Communion Office. In this Latin form, however, Haddon still follows Ales, and by ending his rubric with the words hoc modo directs the service of private Communion to begin with the proper Collect and Epistle and Gospel; and then by adding, 'Dominus vobiscum,' and 'Sursum corda, usque ad finem, ut supra dictum est,' directs the Communion Office to be taken up at those words, proceeding to the Preface, Prayer in the name of the communicants, Prayer of Consecration, distribution of the elements, and so on to the end; thereby omitting the Confession and Absolution, which occur in a previous part of the service. In giving this direction Ales had correctly rendered the Service of 1549; but the position of its several parts had been changed, and the same direction in 1560 was without meaning. This part of Haddon's work is a careless transcript of Ales, though the insertion of the above-mentioned rubric cannot have this excuse.

In the first of the rubrics at the end of the Office, directing the order in which those who are present are to receive the Sacrament, Haddon alters Ales's Latin, and omits the second and fourth rubrics. The second was perhaps dropped on the plea that the book was intended for learned societies, whose members did not need the curate's instruction: and possibly, the fourth, permitting the priest alone to communicate with the sick person in time of contagious sickness, may have been omitted from a charitable hope that in such fraternities the sick man would not be quite deserted; or because the mode in which the whole service is ordered, of communicating the sick by a reservation of the consecrated elements, implies the permission of a strictly private communion¹.

Version.

The Celebratio cœnæ Domini in funebribus, si amici et vicini defuncti communicare velint, and a service 'In commendationibus Benefactorum,' form an Appendix to the book, opening with a quotation from St Augustine, (De Civit. Dei, i. 12): 'Curatio funeris, conditio sepulturæ, pompa exequiarum, magis sunt vivorum solatia, quam subsidia mortuorum.' A proper Collect, Epistle, and Gospel are appointed for communion at funerals. The Collect is the original form of the present second Collect at the end of the Burial Service. The Epistle, 1 Thess. iiiii. [13—18], and the Gospel, Joan. vi. [37—40]. This was transcribed from Ales's version of the service of 1549. A second Gospel was now added, 'vel hoc Evangelium. Joan. v.' [24—29.]

*Celebratio Cœnæ Domini in Fu-

A form analogous to the following 'Commemoration Service' is still used in college chapels².

¹ L'Estrange justifies this order (Alliance, p. 300) because learned societies would be less prone to error and superstition; as he also justifies the permission to celebrate the Lord's Supper at funerals (p. 304), because the whole book was compiled for men of discerning spirits. But we can hardly avoid Mr Clay's observation (Elizabethan Liturg. Services, Pref. p. xxviii). 'Was this design, or the result of haste and inattention? Did Haddon mean (of course in obedience to command) to prepare a book which should allow of such reservation; or did he merely transcribe what

Ales had previously, and correctly, given? Many reasons induce us to think that, if Haddon was careless, (and he cannot be wholly excused,) he ever remembered what he was about, and still fulfilled his appointed task.'

² An English form, which differs slightly from that here given, both in its materials and their arrangement, was prescribed in 1570 by Elizabeth for the use of Colleges in the University of Cambridge. It will be found in chap. 50 of her Statutes, intitled 'De ordinationibus Collegiis præscriptis.'

The object of this Latin Book, as expressed in Elizabeth’s letters patent, authorising or enjoining its use, was such as not to require the occasional services, except those for the Visitation of the Sick, and Burial. However, it appears that the book was first printed with the occasional offices, these being placed out of their order, after the Burial Service, which we may suppose to have been at first intended to end the volume. The reason for this addition is conjectured¹ to have been a clause in the first Irish Act of Uniformity, passed in January of this year, sanctioning the Latin tongue in places where the common minister or priest had not the use or knowledge of the English tongue². And Haddon's Latin version, which had been prepared, and, it may be, printed for the use of the learned in England, hastily received the addition of the services of Public and Private Baptism, Confirmation, with the Catechism, Matrimony, and Churching of Women, that it might exhibit the necessary parochial services for the use of the unlearned in Ireland. Hence two editions of the book appear to have been printed in the same year; one containing these occasional offices, and the other with the above-mentioned Appendix in their place. In both editions, or forms of the edition, the Communion Service was omitted, although Ales had translated it.

The discrepancy between this Latin version and the English Book of Common Prayer was felt at the time. Strype³ (anno 1568) says that 'most of the colleges in Cambridge would not tolerate it, as being the Pope's Dreggs;' and that 'some of the Fellowship of Benet College went contemptuously from the Latin Prayers, the master being the minister then that read the same.' Whitaker, the master of St John's College, in 1569 dedicated a small Prayer-book in Greek and Latin⁴ to his uncle, Dean Nowell, in which he endeavoured to account for this discrepancy, on the plea that it only arose from the expansion or contraction of the original in a translation⁵.

In 1571, another Latin version was published, intentionally made to exhibit a close resemblance to the English Book, in its complete state, with the new calendar prepared in 1561. The Act of Uniformity is prefixed; the occasional services are arranged in

In this book the peculiarities of Haddon's version (1560) are avoided ; yet even here we find traces of Ales's original translation : and the postridie notice of Communion of the Sick, and the Collect for St Andrew's day (altered in 1552) remained in Latin according to the form of 1549, through the whole reign of Elizabeth².

SECT. II.—Books of private devotion.

The old custom of the English Church, in having books of private devotion for the people, following in a great measure the order of the public services, but containing also forms of more constant prayer, was still retained in the early period of the reformation. The clerk used to have his Portuise, the more learned of the people had their Latin Horæ, and by degrees the unlearned also had prepared for them what was peculiarly their own book, the Prymer. In reformed times these laymen's books of devotion were styled the 'Orarium,' and the 'Primer.'

We may consider that there were two series of reformed Primers. The one dates from that of Henry VIII. (1545), which was often reprinted with successive alterations, showing the steady advancement of religious opinion. Edward's first Primer (1547) was a republication of this ; so also was that of 1549, with the Litany as amended for the Book of Common Prayer by the omission of the invocations of the Virgin Mary, the angels and the patriarchs. Alterations of this sort were ordered by the Act of Parliament (3 & 4 Edw. VI.) 'for the abolishing and putting away of divers books and images,' which provided that any person might use any Primers in English or Latin, set forth by the late king, 'so that the sentences of Invocation of Prayer to Saints be blotted or clearly put out of the same.' The edition of 1551 omitted the 'Hail Mary,' with other objectionable passages, though many strong doctrinal statements still remained. This was reprinted in 1552, with the addition of the Catechism, and again at the commencement of Elizabeth's reign in 1559¹, and with some changes again in 1575.

Reformed
1553.

The Primer of 1553² was not an improved edition, but rather a new publication, the first of a distinct series of Primers. 'An order of private prayer for morning and evening, every day in the week, and so throughout the whole year,' was substituted for the divisions of prayer according to the Canonical Hours; the prayers were taken from the Book of Common Prayer, with a selection of psalms, one or two for each service, and short lessons from Scripture, or from the book of Ecclesiasticus; thus forming a course of devotion for a week. With the Hours of prayer, the ancient Hymns were omitted, and the Penitential Psalms, as well as the Dirge and the Commendations, with every thing touching upon prayers for the dead, or the efficacy of the saints' prayers. The Catechism, and Graces, and a Preparation for prayer³, were placed at the beginning, and a collection of 'Sundry godly prayers for divers purposes' at the end of the book. This was reprinted in the reign of Elizabeth at least twice, in 1560 and 1568⁴.

rium' of Henry VIII.

These reformed Primers were accompanied by their more learned counterparts in Latin. When Henry put forth his famous Primer in 1545, he 'provided the self-same form of praying to be set forth in Latin also,' to the intent that he would 'be all things to all persons, and that all parties may at large be satisfied.' The title of the Latin book of private devotion, which was substituted for the older 'Horæ,' was, Orarium, seu libellus precationum, per regiam majestatem et clerum latine editus: 1546. This title was taken for the Latin Book of Private Prayer, which was compiled at the beginning of Elizabeth's reign, as Companion to the Primer of the older series (1559), and published in 1560¹. The 'Orarium,' however, was not a mere version of that Primer. Besides smaller variations, the Calendar is full of names of saints; it has the short Catechism; and it has not the 'Dirige' and 'Commendations.'

In 1564, or early in 1565, another Latin book of devotion was published under the title, *Preces privatae, in studiosorum gratiam collectae et Regia autoritate approbatæ*². This differs from the preceding 'Orarium' mainly in substituting an order of morning and evening prayer in the place of devotions for 'the Hours;' still retaining, however, some of the hymns, antiphons, psalms and lessons of the 'Orarium.' For instance, the course of Morning Prayer begins with the Sentences, then follows the Confession, a prayer of Absolution, the Lord's Prayer, 'Domine, labia mea aperies, &c.,' 'Venite,' an Antiphon, the Hymn 'Jam lucis orto sidere, &c.,' three Psalms, an Antiphon, 1st Lesson, 'Te Deum,' 'Deus in adjutorium, &c.,' 'Gloria Patri, &c.,' an Antiphon, 'Jubilate,' 'Benedicite,' 'Laudate Dominum de caelis, &c.,' (Psalm 149), an Antiphon, 2nd Lesson, the Hymn 'Consors Paterni luminis, &c.,' 'Benedictus,' the Creed, Lord's Prayer, Versicles, Collects, and the Litany. After a similar course of Evening Prayer, and a short devotion for night, follow select Psalms, Lessons and Prayers adapted to the great Festivals, the seven Psalms, other select Psalms, 'Flores Psalmorum, quos Psalterium Hieronymi appellant' (selected versicles from the Psalms), Pious Meditations concerning death and the resurrection, Prayers gathered from Scripture, 'Precationes Piæ variis usibus, temporibus, et personis accommodatæ,' Graces, and some devotional Poems, or Hymns. This book was reprinted in 1573 with the addition of the 'XV. Psalms or Prayers taken out of holy Scripture,'—devotional exercises composed by Fisher, bishop of Rochester, during his year's imprisonment (1534-5) before his execution,—and some short sentences from the New Testament, supposed to have been collected by Sir Thomas More under the same circumstances³.

Thus there were four series of books prepared for private devotion, and published with the royal authority in the reign of

Elizabeth; and the latest of these publications was an edition of the Primer of the first series, in 1575, following the ancient Hours of Prayer, and containing the Office of the Dead, the 'Dirige' and 'Psalms of Commendation.'

*Christian
prayers.*

To these may be added a fifth and sixth series of devotional works, published without authority, containing prayers and meditations for sundry occasions: and books of this character gradually displaced those which were formed upon the plan either of the Canonical Hours, or of the Morning and Evening Services of the Prayer-book. They seem to have originated with some compositions of Ludovicus Vives, which were translated by Bradford, and Becon's 'Flower of godly prayers,' and 'Pomander of Prayer.' Thus, as Protestant books of devotion, we have 'Bull's Christian Prayers and Meditations' in 1566¹; and in 1569 a considerable volume with the same title, and with illustrations². From the contents of some of these books it seems that the Romanizing party also put forth their devotional works upon the same plan, and with the same names, and partially formed of the same materials. Thus we have 'The Pomander of Prayer' (1558), and 'Christian Prayers and Meditations collected out of the antient writers' (1578)³, in which Bradford's translations are joined with the 'XV. Oes of St Bridget,' and a prayer for the Communion from Knox's Book of Common Order.

SECT. III.—'A description of the Liturgy, or book of Service that is used in England.' (Troubles at Frankfurt, pp. xxviii.—xxxiii. 1575.)

Some extracts from this curious description will show how obnoxious the Prayer-book was to an extreme section of Protestants in the early years of the Reformation. Their objections were not raised merely against a few isolated particulars, such as the use of the surplice, or the cross in baptism, but against the whole genius and structure of the book: it was to them 'a huge volume of ceremonies' (p. xli.). The description was drawn in Latin by Knox, Whittingham, and others at Frankfort, and sent to Calvin 'for his judgment therein,' or for an expression of his known opinion touching the matter in dispute; which was, whether Knox should minister to the English exiles according to the Genevan fashion, or whether Dr Cox and Horne should read the service in the congregation of their countrymen according to the Book authorised by the last protestant parliament of England. The objections, therefore, apply to the Second Book of Edward VI., or to the Prayer-book at its greatest distance from Romanism.

DESCRIPTION OF
THE
BOOK.

After a short summary of the daily prayer, which is given The Litany. with some fairness, the Litany is thus described: 'Besides upon every Sabbath-day, Wednesday and Friday, there is yet in use certain suffrages devised of Pope Gregory, which beginneth after this manner, O God, the Father of heaven, have mercy upon us miserable sinners; O God the Son, Redeemer of the world, &c.: only leaving out the invocation of saints, otherwise we use a certain conjuring of God, By the mystery of his incarnation, By his holy nativity and circumcision, By his baptism, fasting and temptation, By his agony and bloody sweat, &c. Yea, it comprehendeth in plain words a prayer to be delivered from sudden death: the people answering to the end of every clause, either Spare us, good Lord, or else, Good Lord, deliver us, or We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord. O Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world, is thrice repeated. Then, Lord have mercy upon us, thrice; and then the Lord's Prayer, with this prayer also, O Lord, deal not with us after our sins, to the same adjoined: passing over some things lest we should seem to sift all those drosses which remain still among us.' Of the Order of the Lord's Supper it is observed, 'The number of three at the least is counted a fit number to communicate; and yet it is permitted (the pestilence or some other common sickness being among the people) the minister alone may communicate with the sick man in his house.' Of the Collect of the day, 'every holyday hath his Collect, Epistle and Gospel, which fill seventy-three great leaves of the book, when the rest fill scarce fifty. For all holydays are now in like use among us as were among the papists, only very few excepted.' The portion following the prayer for the state of the Church militant is described as 'a long heap and mixture of matters, until they come, after a certain confession of sins, to Lift up your hearts.... Now, about the end the Lord's Prayer is used again, the minister saying it aloud, and all the people following: to conclude, they have a giving of thanks in the end, with Glory to God in the highest, as it was used among the papists....'

Baptism.

In Baptism the points mentioned are the questions addressed to the godfathers, the action of baptism by dipping warily and discreetly, and the making a cross upon the child's forehead.

Confirmation.

Confirmation is especially obnoxious: 'afterward, sending away the godfathers and godmothers, he chargeth them that they bring the child to be confirmed of the Bishop as soon as he can say the Articles of the faith, the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments. And seeing there be many causes, as the book saith, which should move them to the Confirmation of children, this forsooth of all others is the weightiest, that by imposition of hands they may receive strength and defence against all temptations of sin and the assaults of the world and the devil, because that when children come to that age, partly by the frailty of their own flesh, partly by the assaults of the world and the devil, they begin to be in danger. And lest any should think any error to be in this Confirmation, therefore they take a certain pamphlet of a Catechism, which consisteth of the Articles of the faith, the Lord's prayer, and Ten Commandments, and all this is despatched in less than two leaves.'

Matrimony.

The description of 'their manner of marriage' passes over 'many petty ceremonies,' and fixes upon 'these follies,'—the ring, and the form of words which accompany it. The Lord's Supper in connection with this service is objected to.

Conclusion.

After a very short mention of the Offices of Visitation of the Sick, Burial, and Thanksgiving of Women, which is 'common with the papists and Jews,' this description of our Prayer-book thus concludes: 'Other things, not so much shame itself, as a certain kind of pity compelleth me to keep close; in the mean season nothing diminishing the honour due to those reverend men, who partly being hindered by those times, and by the obstinacy and also multitude of adversaries (to whom nothing was ever delightful besides their own corruptions) being as it were overflown, did always in their mind continually as much as they could strive to more perfect things¹.'

SECT. IV.—Puritan editions of the Book of Common Prayer.

The dislike of the Prayer-Book, which led to scandalous scenes among the English exiles at Frankfort, and which was emphatically expressed by Knox and those who owned his leadership, was increased by the natural results of so bitter a dispute. The noisiest of the malcontents were compelled to leave Frankfort, and carried off with their party the honours of martyrdom for the Protestant faith. Supported by the authority of Calvin, himself a host in a battle of opinion, their ideas of a fitting Christian service became more clearly developed, and were embodied in Knox's Book of Common Order¹. Hence, when the exiles were able to return to England after the death of Mary, the Genevan faction, or as we may now begin to call them, the Puritan party, were more prepared to find fault both with the Liturgy and with Episcopacy. And their annoyance must have been great, when the revisal of the Prayer-Book at the opening of Elizabeth's reign went in all respects directly contrary to their wishes, sweeping away the Puritan portions of Edward's Second Book, and bringing back some of the discarded ceremonies and vestments of earlier times.

The law moreover would not allow of any public service in England, except that which was prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer². Accordingly an attempt seems to have been made to bring the book itself into conformity with their views, not indeed by urging any further authoritative revisal which was hopeless, but by printing it in a somewhat altered form. A series of such Prayer-Books appeared between 1578 and 1640. What we may call the first Puritan edition (1578) varies from the authorised book in the following particulars. It commences with the Table of Proper Lessons, ¹ This has been reprinted by Dr Cumming (Lond. 1840), to recommend its re-introduction into the kirk of Scotland. It appears that the English Prayer-book was used in Scotland by those who allowed the authority of the 'heads of the congregation' from 1557 to 1564; and then Knox's Liturgy was enjoined and used. Pref. p. iv. Heylin, Hist. Ref. II. 322, note (ed. Eccl. Hist. Soc.).

² A request was made by some eminent members of foreign churches in behalf of their English friends; but the queen replied, 'That it was not with her safety, honour and credit, to permit diversity of opinions in a kingdom where none but she and her council governed, not owning either imperial or papal powers, as several of the princes and states there did, and were glad to compound with them.' Strype, Annals, ch. IV. p. 87.

PURITAN
BOOK.

For Morning, For Evening, being put in the place of Mattens, Evensong: Minister is printed throughout for Priest: from the Communion Service the first four rubrics are left out, but the reader is expressly referred for them to the great Booke of Common Prayer. Private celebration of the Sacraments was discarded; hence the phrase great number was substituted for good number in the second rubric at the end of the Communion Service: in the Office of Public Baptism, the introductory rubric was omitted, which concludes with allowing children, if necessity so require, to be at all times baptized at home: the whole service for Private Baptism was omitted: and only the third rubric was retained in the Communion of the Sick. Confirmation, with all the rubrics touching upon it, is omitted, as is also the service for the Churching of Women. A Calendar was also compiled, rather as an addition to that of the Church, than as a substitute for it, each monthly portion being placed under the authorised Calendar. It seems that this was too bold an experiment; or the party could not agree in any uniform practice. Afterwards, we find the book brought into a form much more nearly resembling the original. In 1589, the rubric at the end of Public Baptism, the service for Private Baptism, that for Churching of Women, and the address before the Catechism, were restored to their places. And in these services, the word Priest remained unchanged; which may perhaps be regarded as a silent, but intelligible sign, that these services were added for apparent conformity, but that the use of them was to be discouraged. A later edition, belonging rather to the next reign, differs from the authorised Book merely by putting, For Morning, For Evening, and Minister, instead of Mattens, Evensong, and Priest; Priest, however, being still unaltered in the services for Private Baptism, and the Churching of Women. In this shape we may suppose that this Prayer-Book continued to be printed until 1616, i. e. as long as the Geneva version of the Bible was printed, to which every scriptural quotation had been adjusted. During the next twenty-five years, we find copies of a small size, in which Minister very often stands for Priest, and in which occasionally they are alternated in a most extraordinary manner. These books were always printed by the houses who had the right of printing the Book of Common Prayer, no doubt as part of their exclusive privilege, and usually they were joined to the Geneva Bible; just as some editions of the Bishops' Bible were accompanied by the Prayer-Book in its authorised form. It is not certain what was the actual intention, or use made, of these books. They could not be publicly used in the church without risk of penalties; yet even from the size of some editions we cannot say that less than this was aimed at. It is certain also that the Puritans did not conduct their ministration strictly according to the authorised form; and that the Bishops' Bible was not the only Bible used in the public service¹. The folio edition of the Geneva Bible of 1578, (like the folio editions of the Bishops' Bible, 1568 and 1572,) has two Psalters in parallel columns,—The translation according to the Ebrews, and The translation used in Common Prayer; this latter being divided into the portions for Morning and Evening Prayer. This looks like a provision for the public service, and seems to give the same character to the altered Prayer-Book at the beginning of the volume².

So early as 1567 the more violent of the Puritans began to separate themselves from the worship of the Church, and to meet in private houses, where they had ministers of their own. 'And at these meetings,' says Strype⁴, 'rejecting wholly the Book of Common Prayer, they used a Book of Prayers, framed at Geneva for the congregation of English exiles lately sojourning there. Which book had been overseen and allowed by Calvin and the rest of his divines there, and indeed was, for the most part, taken out of the Geneva form.' And again, in the year 1571, 'The Puritans, however they were not allowed to officiate in public, and had their licences (if they had any before) disallowed and annulled, yet did still in their own or other churches, or in private houses, read prayers different from the established office of Common Prayer; using the Geneva form, or mingling the English Book⁵.'

Parliament.

In 1574 was published A Full and Plain Declaration of Ecclesiastical Discipline out of the Word of God; and in 1584, A Brief and Plain Declaration concerning the Desires of all those Faithful Ministers that have and do seek for the Discipline and Reformation of the Church of England, was printed in London by Robert Waldegrave. Also in the same year (1584) A Book of Common Prayer was presented to Parliament 'with the hope of approval and legal sanction;' and beyond this, a hope of its being substituted for the Book of Common Prayer. This book was altered before its publication, so far as regards the acknowledgment of the office and authority of the magistrate in matters of religion¹: for the liberty claimed, and apparently conceded, by the Puritans, in the Book of Discipline, they neither allowed, nor intended to allow, had the Book of Prayer obtained the sanction of the law.

Bancroft writes², 'In the Parliament (27 of her Majesty, as I remember), the Brethren having made another Book, termed, at that time, A Booke of the Forme of Common Prayers, &c., and containing in it the effect of their whole pretended Discipline; the same book was penned altogether statute and law-like, and their petition in the behalf of it was, viz. May it therefore please your Majesty, &c. that it may be enacted, &c. that the Book hereunto annexed, &c. intituled, A Booke of the Forme of Common Prayers, Administration of Sacraments, &c. and everything therein contained, may be from henceforth authorised, put in use, and practised throughout all your Majesty's dominions. See here, when they hoped to have attained to their purposes by law, and to have had the same accordingly established, they offered to the Parliament a book of their own, for the Form of Common Prayers, &c.; and thought it (as it seemeth) altogether inconvenient to leave every minister to his own choice to use what form he list, other than such as were allowed in some church which had received the Discipline: for any such they liked of indefinitely. Whereby to me it seemeth manifest, that they never meant to have required the enacting of that chapter, De reliquis Liturgiæ Officiis; but only to set down what course their brethren should follow for the interim, until they might take further order for a book of their own.'

² Dangerous Positions, bk. III. ch. 10. pp. 96, 97.

An edition (probably the first) of this Puritan Book of Common Prayer was printed in London by Waldegrave, without date; yet doubtless either in 1584, or the early part of 1585; for it was prohibited by an order of the Star-Chamber in June 1585: and a second edition, somewhat altered in arrangement, appeared at Middleburgh (where a company of English merchants resided under the ministry of Cartwright) in 1586; a third, an exact reprint, but much neater in appearance, in 1587; and a fourth, with additions, in 1602. In 1587, this book was introduced into the Low Countries, its use having been hitherto confined almost exclusively to Northamptonshire, where Edmund Snape resided.

As regards the authorship of the volume,—whether or no Cartwright himself, or his friend Travers, or Dudley Fenner, then at Middleburgh, or even Snape, had any hand in the writing,—it is certain that nothing more was attempted than a brief and desultory compilation from the Genevan form of Calvin, and that perhaps not directly, but through one or other of the abbreviations of Knox's Book of Common Order.

UPON the accession of King James I. (March 24th, 1603) the earliest measure adopted by the general body of the Puritans was to present to him (in April) the famous Millenary petition, so called from the great number of signatures attached to it. Upon the subject of the Prayer-Book they urged that of these ‘offences following, some may be removed, some amended, some qualified :

‘In the Church service : that the cross in baptism, interrogatories ministered to infants, confirmations, as superfluous, may be taken away : baptism not to be ministered by women, and so explained : the cap and surplice not urged : that examination may go before the Communion : that it be ministered with a sermon : that divers terms of priests and absolution and some other used, with the ring in marriage, and other such like in the book, may be corrected : the longness of service abridged : church-songs and music moderated to better edification : that the Lord’s day be not profaned : the rest upon holydays not so strictly urged : that there may be an uniformity of doctrine prescribed : no popish opinion to be any more taught or defended : no ministers charged to teach their people to bow at the name of Jesus: that the canonical scriptures only be read in the church¹.

‘These, with such other abuses yet remaining and practised in the Church of England,’ they declared themselves ‘able to shew not to be agreeable to the Scriptures,’ if it should please the king further to hear them, ‘or more at large by writing to be informed, or by conference among the learned to be resolved².’

A conference proposed,

The king acceded to the request for a conference, as suited to his own fondness for such a debate, though contrary to the wishes of the universities and of the clergy generally. A proclamation was issued (Oct. 24), ‘Touching a meeting for the hearing, and for the determining things pretended to be amiss in the Church,’ to be had before himself and his council of divers of the bishops and other learned men. The meeting was at first intended to be held on the 1st of November, but was deferred till after Christmas. Meanwhile Archbishop Whitgift sent to Hutton, archbishop of York, certain queries of matters that might be debated at the conference; among which these points were noted: ‘Concerning the Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments: whether to overthrow the said book, or to make alterations of things disliked in it: concerning the sign of the cross in the child’s forehead made at its baptism: concerning praying in the Litany to be delivered from sudden death; since we ought so to live, that death should never find us unprepared³.’

14th, 16th, and 18th, of January. The persons summoned to take part in the discussion on the side of the Puritans were Dr Rainolds, Dr Sparkes, Mr Knewstubbs and Mr Chaderton, who had the reputation of being the most grave, learned and modest of the party. The Conference, however, was not a discussion between the Episcopal and Puritan divines in the presence of the royal council, but a conference first between the king and the bishops, and secondly between the king and the invited Puritan divines, concluded by the royal determination upon the points debated. On the first day the king assembled the lords of his council and the bishops with the dean of the chapel royal, and after an hour's speech propounded six points; three of them in the Common Prayer-Book, viz. the general absolution, the confirmation of children, and the private baptism by women: the two former were allowed, but some things in them were to be cleared. After a long discussion on private baptism, it was agreed that it should only be administered by ministers, yet in private houses if occasion required. Some other matters were debated, concerning the jurisdiction of bishops, and the civilization of Ireland.

Conference between the king and the bishops, on Saturday, Jan. 14.

On the second day, the Puritan representatives were called before the king and the council, in the presence of certain of the bishops and the deans, who had been summoned to take part in the conference. The Puritans propounded four points:—purity of doctrine: means to maintain it: the bishops' courts: the Common Prayer-Book. Concerning the book itself and subscription to it, there was much stir about all the ceremonies and every point in it; chiefly Confirmation, the cross in baptism, the surplice, private baptism, kneeling at the Communion, the reading of the Apocrypha, and subscriptions to the Book of Common Prayer and Articles. 'All that day was spent in ceremonies,' writes Dean Montague in a letter giving an account of what passed in his presence, and 'all wondered that they had no more to say against them¹.' The conclusion was that there should be a uniform translation of the Bible, and one catechizing over all the realm; that the Apocrypha should be read, but not as Scripture; and that any doubtful point of the Articles should be cleared.

COURT.

On the third day, the bishops and deans with certain civilians attended at the court, and the archbishop presented to the king a note of those points which had been referred to their consideration on the first day. These were, '1. Absolution or remission of sins, in the rubric of absolution. 2. In private baptism, the lawful minister present. 3. Examination, with confirmation of children. 4. Jesus said to them, twice to be put in the Dominical Gospels, instead of Jesus said to his disciples.' The king also directed an alteration in the rubric of private baptism: instead of, 'They baptize not children,' it should be, 'They cause not children to be baptized;' and instead of, 'Then they minister it,' it should be, 'The curate, or lawful minister present, shall do it on this fashion.' Then, after some discussion about the High Commission, the oath ex officio, and excommunication, and referring some points to special committees, Dr Rainolds and his associates were called in, and the alterations agreed to were read to them. There was a little disputing about the words in the marriage ceremony, 'With my body I thee worship,' and it was agreed that they should be 'worship and honour,' if it were thought fit. And so, after a discourse upon unity and peace from the king, and a vain complaint urged in behalf of some ministers in Lancashire and Suffolk, who would lose their credit, if they were now forced to use the surplice and cross in baptism, which was curtly answered, that the general peace of the Church must be preferred to the credits of a few private men; the Conference ended with a joint promise of the Puritan representatives to be quiet and obedient, now they knew it to be the king's mind to have it so¹.

Revision of the Prayer-Book after the Conference,

Certain alterations were thus agreed to by the king and the bishops at the Conference; but the particular form in which they should be expressed was referred to a small committee of the bishops and the privy council²: and upon their report, the king issued his letters patent³ (Feb. 9), specifying the alterations, and ordering the publication, and the exclusive use of the amended Book. The authority for this was the undefined power of the crown in ecclesiastical matters, as well as the statutable power granted by the Acts of Supremacy and Uniformity in 1559. And care was taken to call the alterations by the name of explanations, to bring them under the clause in Elizabeth's Act of Uniformity, which empowered the sovereign, with the advice of the ecclesiastical commissioners, to ordain further ceremonies, if the orders of the Book should be misused⁴. The following changes were made at this time (1604): In the Calendar: Aug. 26, instead of 'Bel and the Dragon' (or Dan. xiv.), Prov. xxx. was to be read; and Oct. 1 and 2, instead of Tobit v., vi., viii., Exod. vi., Josh. xx. and xxii. were to be read. Into the title of the Absolution were inserted the words, 'or Remission of Sins.' A prayer for the Queen, the Prince, and other the King's and Queen's children, was placed after the prayer for the King; and a corresponding petition was inserted in the Litany. Thanksgivings for particular occasions, for Rain, for Fair Weather, for Plenty, for Peace and Victory, and for Deliverance from the Plague, in two forms, were added to the occasional prayers in the end of the Litany, and were styled, 'An enlargement of thanksgiving for diverse benefits, by way of explanation.' In the Gospels for the 2nd Sunday after Easter, and the 20th Sunday after Trinity, the words 'unto his disciples' were omitted, and 'Christ said,' and 'Jesus said,' were to be printed in letters differing from the text. The main

God we were nice, or rather jealous, that the public form thereof should be free not only from blame, but from suspicion, so as neither the common adversary should have advantage to wrest ought therein contained to other sense than the church of England intendeth, nor any troublesome or ignorant person of this church be able to take the least occasion of cavil against it: and for that purpose gave forth our commission under our great seal of England to the archbishop of Canterbury and others, according to the form which the laws of alteration was made in the rubrics of the Office of Private Baptism; the administration being now restricted to the minister of the parish, or some other lawful minister. The title had been, 'Of them that be baptized in private houses in time of necessity;' now it became, 'Of them that are to be baptized in private houses in time of necessity, by the Minister of the parish, or any other lawful minister that can be procured.' The 2nd rubric,—'that without great cause and necessity they baptize not children at home in their houses... that then they minister on this fashion...' was amended as it now stands, '...they procure not their children to be baptized...' The 3rd rubric, 'First let them that be present call upon God for his grace... and one of them shall name the child, and dip him in the water, or pour...' was now, 'First, let the lawful Minister, and them that be present, call upon God for his grace, and say the Lord's prayer, if the time will suffer. And then the child being named by some one that is present, the said lawful Minister shall dip it in water, or pour water upon it...' A corresponding alteration was made in the 4th rubric; and the enquiry,—'Whether they called upon God for grace and succour in that necessity?'—was omitted, and the reason of caution inserted in its place, 'And because some things, essential to this sacrament, may happen to be omitted through fear or haste in such times of extremity; therefore I demand further...' 'Confirmation' was explained by adding, 'or laying on of hands upon children baptized, and able to render an account of their faith, according to the Catechism following.' The concluding portion upon the Sacraments was added to the Catechism¹, and is generally attributed to Overal, the prolocutor of the Convocation.

In 1608 the Prayer-Book was printed in Irish, having been translated by William Daniel, or O'Donnell, archbishop of Tuam, who had in 1602 published the first Irish version of the New Testament¹.

THE

SCOTLAND.

in Irish.*

In Scotland the Book of Common-Prayer has ever been a matter of controversy. It had been in general use there in the time of Elizabeth, between the years 1557 and 1564; and Knox found no small difficulty in setting it aside for his own Book of Common Order². James I. endeavoured to introduce a Liturgy into that part of his kingdom, and obtained the sanction of the General Assembly at Aberdeen (1616), that a Prayer-Book should be compiled for the use of the Church, and a body of Canons framed as a rule of discipline³. James, however, desired that the English Book should be accepted, and in 1617 it was used in the chapel royal of Holyrood⁴. But the Scottish bishops chose rather to have a distinct book, and in 1618 the proposition was again made, by the king's desire, to the General Assembly at Perth⁵, to have a Liturgy and Canons for the Church of Scotland. At length, in conformity with these resolutions, a Book of Service was prepared⁶, and submitted to the judgment of the king and some Scottish bishops at the English Court. Nothing more, however, was effected during this reign⁷.

daily used in the royal chapel. He also urged it upon the Scottish bishops in 1629, and again when he was crowned at Edinburgh in 1633¹. While the older bishops were apprehensive that a Liturgy would not be tolerated by the people, the younger declared that there was no cause for fear: they, however, would only agree to an independent book for Scotland², thinking that this would satisfy their countrymen. A code of canons, enforcing the observance of the intended Prayer-Book, was sent into the North, in 1635; and a Book of Service was then prepared in Scotland³, and transmitted to Archbishop Laud, who with Wrenn, bishop of Norwich, was appointed by the king to assist the Scottish bishops⁴. Laud's opinion was that, if a Liturgy was adopted by the Northern Church, 'it were best to take the English Liturgy without any variation, that so the same Service-Book might be established in all his majesty's dominions⁵:' but finding that it would not be accepted, he gave his assistance in reviewing the Scottish Book. This had been framed upon the English model; but with it was joined a paper of 'Certain notes to be considered of.' Besides suggesting that the extracts from Scripture should be printed according to the last translation of the Bible, it was proposed 'that every Prayer, or Office, through the whole Communion, should be named in the rubric before it; that the parts of the Service might be better distinguished to the congregation: that the Invitation, Confession, Absolution, Sentences, Prefaces, and Doxology, should be set in the same order they stand in the English Liturgy: and that the Prayer of humble access to the Holy Table might stand immediately before receiving¹. Fault was also found by Wedderburn with the Scottish Ordinal, that the order of deacons was made no more than a lay office; and in the admission to the priesthood the words ‘Receive the Holy Ghost, &c.,’ were omitted².

The king’s instructions³ therefore required the Scottish bishops to keep to the words of the English Book in their ordinations. In the Calendar the first six chapters of Wisdom, and the 1st, 2nd, 5th, 8th, 35th, and 49th chapters of Ecclesiasticus, were placed among the lessons to be read in the daily service: and besides the names of the catholic saints which were in the English Calendar, some of the Scottish nation were inserted. Throughout the book the words Presbyter, or Presbyter or Minister, or Presbyter or Curate, were used instead of Priest or Minister. In the Office of Baptism, the water in the font was ordered to be changed twice in a month at least; and on the occasion of the first baptism after the water had been changed, the Presbyter or Minister should add these words in the first prayer of the service, ‘Sanctify this fountain of baptism, Thou which art the Sanctifier of all things.’ In the Communion Office the

These alterations were written chiefly in presence of the king, on the margin of a 4to English Prayer-Book, with the following warrant for their adoption:—‘CHARLES R., I give

And wheresoever they shall differ from another book, signed by us at Hampt. order of the prayers was changed, so as to bring it more nearly into accordance with the First Book of Edward VI.¹ This Book of Common Prayer for Scotland can hardly be said to have been used²: it was silenced by a popular tumult, as soon as the attempt was made to introduce it, on the 23rd of July, 1637³.

Some alterations which were made by Laud's authority, or acquiescence, in the Prayer-Book designed for Scotland, were adopted at the review after the Savoy Conference. But this was not the only influence which this archbishop has been supposed to have exercised upon the Book of Common Prayer. He was accused by the Puritans of having caused some changes of words and phrases to be inserted in the editions printed under his supervision, in order to give support to doctrines and practices which were now called popish. And the accusation was made so unscrupulously, that it was very generally believed, in spite of the archbishop's solemn denial, and notwithstanding the fact, that no such alterations had been made,—a fact which was patent to any who might choose to compare the printed books⁴.

² The ministers of the episcopal church in Scotland now use the English Prayer-Book in all respects, except in the Communion Office, for which an edition, altered from K. Charles's Service-Book, but still framed upon that of 1549, is used in about one-third of the churches. See below, Append. to Ch. V.

In 1641, it was manifest that a time of trouble was coming speedily upon the Church of England; and attempts were made to lessen the hostility of the Puritans against the Prayer-Book by introducing some important changes. On the 1st of March the House of Lords appointed a committee¹, 'to take into consideration all innovations in the Church respecting religion.' Archbishop Laud thus expresses his fears of the result: 'This committee will meddle with doctrine as well as ceremonies, and will call some divines to them to consider of the business... Upon the whole matter I believe this committee will prove the national synod of England, to the great dishonour of the Church: and what else may follow upon it, God knows².' A sub-committee was appointed, more readily to prepare priest or minister was inserted by the printer at his own discretion, or as a matter of indifference. Moreover such changes were made at random: Prynne says the same of Cosin, that he had made alterations in our Common Prayer-Book, and put priests for ministers. Hist. of Convocation, p. 270. Another charge was that at was printed for in, in the Epistle for the Sunday before Easter, where the phrase was 'in the name of Jesus every knee shall bow:' the archbishop replied that, if the alteration were purposely made by the printers, they followed the Geneva Bible (1557). The fact was that 'at' was printed during the whole of the reign of Charles I. and the practice of bowing at the name of Jesus, which the word was supposed to sanction, had been required by the injunctions of Elizabeth. In the Prayer for the Royal Family, instead of the words—'which hast promised to be a Father of thine elect, and of their seed—the words, 'the fountain of all goodness' were used on the accession of a sovereign who had at that time no children: the prayer having been inserted solely on the authority of K. James in 1604, the same authority of K. Charles altered its terms. See Cardwell, Conferences, ch. v.

sideration of the committee: To expunge from the Calendar the names of some departed saints and others: To set out the reading Psalms, sentences of Scripture, hymns, epistles, and gospels, in the new translation: To mend the rubric, where all vestments in time of Divine Service are now commanded which were used 2 Edw. VI. To substitute canonical Scripture for the Apocrypha in the Calendar: To repeat the Doxology always at the end of the Lord's Prayer: To read the Lessons with a distinct voice: Whether Gloria Patri should be repeated at the end of every Psalm: Instead of daily Morning and Evening Prayers, why not only on Wednesday and Friday Morning, and in the afternoon on Saturday, with holy-day eves: To omit the hymn Benedicite: In the prayer for the clergy, to alter the phrase, 'which only worketh great marvels:.' To alter the rubric, 'that such as intend to communicate shall signify their names to the curate over night, or in the morning before prayers:.' To clear the rubric, how far a minister may repulse a scandalous and notorious sinner from the Communion: To gather the alms when the people depart, instead of before the Communion begin: The confession to be said only by the minister, and then at every clause repeated by the people: Not to print in great letters the words in the form of consecration, 'This is my body—This is my blood of the New Testament:.' To insert a rubric, touching kneeling at the Communion, that it is, to comply in all humility with the prayer which the minister makes when he delivers the elements: Cathedral and collegiate churches to be bound to celebrate the Holy Communion only once in a month: In the first prayer at baptism, to change the words, 'didst sanctify the flood of Jordan and all other waters,' into 'didst sanctify the element of water:.'

*Proposed

Whether it be not fit to have some discreet rubric made to take away all scandal from signing the sign of the cross upon the infants after baptism; or if it shall seem more expedient to be quite disused, whether this reason should be published, That in antient liturgies no cross was confined [? consigned] upon the party but where oil also was used; and therefore oil being now omitted, so may also that which was concomitant with it, the sign of the cross: In private baptism the rubric mentions that which must not be done, that the minister may dip the child in water being at the point of death: To leave out the words in the rubric of Confirmation, ‘and be undoubtedly saved:’ To enlarge the Catechism: To take away the times prohibited for marriage: None to marry without a certificate that they are instructed in their Catechism: To alter the words, ‘with my body I thee worship,’ into ‘I give thee power over my body:’ To mend the rubric, that new-married persons should receive the Communion the same day of their marriage, by adding ‘or upon the Sunday following, when the Communion is celebrated:’ In the Absolution of the Sick, to say, ‘I pronounce thee absolved:’ To compose the Psalm of Thanksgiving of women after childbirth out of proper versicles taken from divers psalms: May not the priest rather read the Communion in the desk, than go up to the pulpit: The rubric in the Communion leaves it doubtful, whether the Liturgy may not be read in divers places in the church: To alter the words of Burial, ‘in sure and certain hope of the resurrection to eternal life,’ into ‘knowing assuredly that the dead shall rise again:’ In the Litany, to put ‘grievous sins,’ for ‘deadly sin.’ To mend the imperfections of the metre in the singing psalms; and then to add lawful authority to have them publicly sung before and after sermons, and sometimes instead of the hymns of Morning and Evening Prayer¹.

The deliberations upon these changes and concessions continued until the middle of May (1641), when motions were entertained in the House of Commons² which evidently shewed that no changes in ritual or discipline would pacify opponents who sought the ruin of the Church, and who were rapidly increasing in power. The idea of making these concessions was laid aside as useless; but it was not forgotten by nonconformists that such alterations had once been approved by persons of high name and station in the Church.

Proposed changes in the Prayer-Book.

In 1643 (June 12) an Ordinance of Parliament summoned the Westminster Assembly, a body designed as a substitute for Convocation, consisting of 30 lay members and 121 divines, 'to be consulted with by the Parliament, for the settling of the government and Liturgy of the Church of England, and clearing of the doctrine of the said Church from false aspersions and interpretations³.'

The Westminster Assembly summoned.

In 1645 (Jan. 3) an Ordinance of Parliament⁴ took away the Book of Common Prayer, and established in its stead the 'Directory for the Public Worship of God in the Three Kingdoms⁵.' This was followed (Aug. 23) by another Ordinance 'for the more effectual putting in execution the Directory⁶.' Henceforth to use the Book of Common Prayer in any 'public place of worship, or in any private place or family within the kingdom,' was punishable by a fine of five pounds for the first offence, ten pounds for the second, and for the third by 'one whole year's imprisonment without bail or mainprize:' not to observe the Directory subjected the minister to a fine of forty shillings; while to do or say anything in 'opposition, derogation, or depraving of the said book,' might be punished by a fine of five pounds, or fifty pounds, at the discretion of the magistrate.

This history does not require any account of those years of hypocrisy and violence, during which the voice of the Church of England was silenced, and Presbyterianism, after trying to bring a spiritual despotism into every parish and household, was in its turn obliged to yield to Independency, 'a hydra of many heads.' 'Old sects revived, new sects were created, and there ensued a state of distraction and impiety, the natural tendency of which was to break up all minor distinctions, and to divide men into two large classes, one of them anxious to find terms of agreement, in order that religion might not be utterly extinguished, and the other indifferent whether any form of religion remained!'

APPENDIX.

The Directory.

AN abridgement of Calvin's Form of Service, or rather of The Service and Discipline. Knox's Book of Common Order, was presented to Parliament, and printed in 1641, and again in 1643¹; and another adaptation of the same original, somewhat larger than the Middleburgh², but much shorter than either that of Calvin or Knox, was presented to the Westminster Assembly, and printed in 1644³. The parliamentary divines, however, preferred to issue a work of their own composition. They had denounced the Book of Common Prayer as unfit to lead the devotions of the people; but they then suffered a year to pass by before they attempted to substitute anything in its place. Then came the ordination of Elders and Deacons by an Association of Ministers in London and other chief towns; and then, the preparation of a book of Service. A committee was appointed to agree upon certain general heads for the direction of the minister in the discharge of his office before the congregation: these, being arranged in London, were sent to Scotland for approbation, and summarily established by ordinance of Parliament, (and denounced by a counter-proclamation from the King,) as the Directory for Public Worship. This was not so much a Form of Devotion, as a Manual of Directions: the minister being allowed a discretion, either to make the most of what was provided for him in the book, or to use his own abilities to supply what he considered needful.

P. Hall's Reliq. Liturg. Vol. I. p. 111.

A few of the variations, more especially directed against preceding usages, were,—the rejection of the Apocrypha: the discontinuance of private baptism; of godfathers and godmothers; of the sign of the cross; of the wedding ring, and of the administration of the Lord's Supper to the sick at home: the removal of the communion-table into the body of the church; with the preference of a sitting or standing to a kneeling posture. All saints' days were discarded, and all vestments. No service was appointed for the burial of the dead: no Creed was recited, nor the Ten Commandments; though these with the Apostles' Creed were added to the Confession of Faith a year or two afterwards¹.

This Parliamentary form of public devotion is entitled A Directory for the Public Worship of God, throughout the Three Kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland. Together with an Ordinance of Parliament for the taking away of the Book of Common Prayer, and the Establishing and Observing of this present Directory throughout the Kingdom of England and Dominion of Wales.

It commences with a note 'Of the assembling of the congregation, and their behaviour in the public worship of God.' The minister is to begin with prayer, in a short form, for a blessing on the portion of the word then to be read. All the Canonical books are to be read over in order: ordinarily one chapter of each Testament at every meeting. After reading and singing the minister who is to preach is to endeavour to get his own and his hearers' hearts to be rightly affected with their sins. A long prayer before the sermon. Then follows a long note of the manner and matter of preaching. After sermon follows a prayer of thanksgiving. The Lord's Prayer, as being not only a pattern of prayer but itself a most comprehensive prayer, is recommended to be used in the prayers of the church.

It is to be dispensed only by a minister, in the place of public worship, and in the face of the congregation, where the people may most conveniently see and hear; and not in the places where fonts in the time of Popery were unfitly and superstitiously placed. The child, after notice given to the minister the day before, is to be presented by the father, or (in case of his necessary absence) by some Christian friend in his place. Before Baptism the minister is to use some words of instruction:—that the seed of the faithful have right to baptism: that they are Christians, and federally holy, before baptism, and therefore are they baptized: that the inward grace of baptism is not tied to the moment of its administration: and that it is not so necessary that through the want of it the infant is in danger of damnation, or the parents guilty. Prayer is to be joined with the word of institution, for sanctifying the water to this spiritual use.

The Communion, or Supper of the Lord, is frequently to be celebrated; but how often, may be considered and determined by the ministers and other church-governors of each congregation. It is requisite that public warning be given on the Sabbath-day before the administration; and we judge it convenient to be done after the morning sermon. Therefore after the sermon and prayer, follows a short exhortation: then, the table being before decently covered, and so conveniently placed that the communicants may orderly sit about it or at it, the minister is to begin the action with sanctifying and blessing the elements of bread and wine set before him. The words of institution are next to be read out of the Evangelists, or 1 Cor. xi. 23—27: then the prayer, thanksgiving, or blessing, offered up to God ‘to vouchsafe his gracious presence, and the effectual working of his Spirit in us; and so to sanctify these elements both of bread and wine, and to bless his own ordinance, that we may receive by faith the body and blood of Jesus Christ crucified for us, and so feed upon him that he may be one with us, and we with him, that he may live in us, and we in him and to him, who hath loved us, and given himself for us.’ ‘The elements being now sanctified by the word and prayer, the minister, being at the table, is to take the bread in his hand, and say in these expressions (or other the like used by Christ, or his Apostle, upon this occasion):—According to the holy institution, command, and example of our blessed Saviour Jesus Christ, I take this bread; and having given thanks, I break it, and give it unto you. (There the minister, who is also himself to communicate, is to break the bread, and give it to the communicants.) Take ye, eat ye. This is the body of Christ, which is broken for you. Do this in remembrance of him. In like manner the minister is to take the cup, and say...According to the institution, command, and example of our Lord Jesus Christ, I take this cup and give it unto you. (Here

DIREC-

he giveth it to the communicants.) This cup is the New Testament, in the blood of Christ, which is shed for the remission of the sins of many; drink ye all of it. After all have communicated, the minister may, in a few words, put them in mind of the grace of God in Jesus Christ: and he is to give solemn thanks to God.

The Collection for the poor is so to be ordered, that no part of the public worship be thereby hindered.

Then follows a note 'of the Sanctification of the Lord's Day.'

Matrimony.

The purpose of marriage between any persons shall be published by the minister three several Sabbath-days in the congregation. And the marriage shall be publicly solemnized in the place appointed by authority for public worship, before a competent number of credible witnesses, at some convenient hour of the day, at any time of the year, except on a day of public humiliation. And we advise that it be not on the Lord's-day.

The manner of marriage is first a prayer, a declaration of the institution, use and ends thereof, a solemn charge, if they know any cause why they may not lawfully proceed to marriage, to discover it: then the minister shall cause, first, the man to take the woman by the right hand, saying these words: I N. do take thee N. to be my married wife, and do, in the presence of God, and before this congregation, promise and covenant to be a loving and faithful husband unto thee, until God shall separate us by death. Then the woman shall take the man by his right hand, and say a like form, adding the word obedient. Then, without any further ceremony, the minister shall pronounce them to be husband and wife according to God's ordinance; and so conclude the action with prayer.

Burial.

'Concerning Burial of the Dead,' all customs of praying, reading, and singing both in going to, and at the grave, are said to have been grossly abused. The simple direction is therefore given, 'When any person departeth this life, let the dead body, upon the day of burial, be decently attended from the house to the place appointed for public burial, and there immediately interred, without any ceremony.'

Holy-Days.

Then follow directions 'Concerning Public Solemn Fasting,' 'Concerning the Observation of Days of Public Thanksgiving,' and 'Of singing of Psalms;' concluding with 'An Appendix touching Days and Places for Public Worship;' in which it is ordered that only the Lord's-day, and days separated for Public

Fasting or Thanksgiving, shall be kept holy ; and the old churches are allowed to be used for the following reason : ‘ As no place is capable of any holiness under pretence of whatsoever Dedication or Consecration, so neither is it subject to such pollution by any superstition formerly used and now laid aside, as may render it unlawful or inconvenient for Christians to meet together therein for the public worship of God. And therefore we hold it requisite that the places of public assembling for worship among us should be continued and employed to that use.’

Holy Places.

The Parliament, it seems, was not entirely satisfied with its own Directory, and soon found it necessary to publish a supplement for the use of the sailors. This is one of the most singular productions of that extraordinary period. It is called A Supply of Prayer for the Ships that want Ministers to pray with them. ‘ A reason of this work’ is prefixed to the book ; and it states, ‘ whereas there are thousands of ships which have not ministers with them to guide them in prayer, and therefore either use the old form of Common Prayer, or no prayer at all ; the former whereof for many weighty reasons hath been abolished, and the latter is likely to make them rather heathens than Christians. Therefore to avoid these inconveniences, it hath been thought fit to frame some prayers, agreeing with the Directory established by Parliament.’ There are certain directions for the use of the form : ‘ the company being assembled, they may thus begin with prayer :’ a short prayer follows, after which the Lord’s Prayer is to be used, and we have this direction, ‘ After this, some psalms and chapters being read out of both Testaments (but none out of those books called Apocrypha), and a psalm being sung, a prayer may follow in this manner.’ Two prayers follow, one being ‘ for the Church universal, and our united Churches and Kingdoms.’—The latter contains a petition for the king, though at the very time they were making war upon him : ‘ We pray thee for all in authority, especially for the king’s majesty, that God would make him rich in blessings both in his person and government, establish his throne in religion, save him from evil counsel, and make him a blessed and glorious instrument for the conservation and propagation of the gospel.’ Next comes a direction, ‘ After this prayer a psalm may be sung, and the conclusion may be with a thanksgiving and blessing.’ Then follows ‘ a prayer particularly fitted for those that travel upon the seas,’ and ‘ a prayer in a storm.’

BOOK.

*The King's
from Breda.*

ESCAPING from the dismal period of rebellion, we pass on with the history of the Prayer-Book to the year 1660, when the restoration of the monarchy brought freedom of conscience and worship to churchmen. On the 1st of May letters from King Charles II. dated from Breda were brought to the Houses of Lords and Commons, with a declaration, in which the king says on the subject of religion, 'that no man shall be disquieted, or called in question, for differences of opinion in matters of religion, which do not disturb the peace of the kingdom; and that we shall be ready to consent to such an act of parliament, as upon mature deliberation shall be offered to us for granting that indulgence¹.' By a resolution of the Commons (May 8) the king was desired to make a speedy return to his parliament, and on the same day was solemnly proclaimed: and on the 10th of May, on the occasion of a day of thanksgiving, the Common Prayer was read before the Lords².

Deputation of Nonconformists to the King at the Hague,

Meanwhile (May 4) a deputation from both houses was sent to meet the king at the Hague. Reynolds, Calamy, Case, Manton, and some other eminent Presbyterian divines went also with an address, to which the king answered kindly; but, as in his previous 'Declaration,' referred to Parliament to determine what toleration was necessary for the repose of the kingdom. This answer, however, was not the object which had brought these divines to gain the king's ear if possible, while he might be willing to listen to any terms of accommodation. In various private audiences they suggested that the Common Prayer had long been discontinued in England, that many of the people had never once heard it, and therefore it would be much wondered at if his majesty at his first landing should revive the use of it in his own chapel: and therefore to prevent the people being shocked at such uncustomary worship, they entreated him not to use it in form, and by rubrical directions; but only to order the reading some part of it with the intermixture of other good prayers.

Finding no hope of abridging the king's liberty of using the regular service, they then requested that the use of the surplice might be discontinued by the royal chaplains, because the sight of this habit would give great offence to the people. But they were plainly told by the king, that he would not be restrained himself, when others had so much indulgence: that the surplice had always been reckoned a decent habit, and constantly worn in the Church of England; that he had all along retained the use of it in foreign parts: that though he might for the present tolerate a failure of solemnity in religious worship, yet he would never abet such irregularity by his own practice¹. These, however, were not the men to be easily put off from their purpose; and it seems that they teased the king, after his return to England, with continual complaints, until he bade them submit their grievances and wishes in writing. they embodied their notions upon Church-matters in a long address¹. They assume that there was no difference between churchmen and themselves 'in the doctrinal truths of the reformed religion, and in the substantial parts of divine worship;' but only 'in some various conceptions about the ancient form of Church government, and some particulars about Liturgy and ceremonies.' Among these differences concerning the Liturgy, they say:

Their ideal of a Liturgy.

1. 'We are satisfied in our judgments concerning the lawfulness of a liturgy, or form of public worship, provided that it be for the matter agreeable unto the word of God, and fitly suited to the nature of the several ordinances and necessities of the Church; neither too tedious in the whole, nor composed of too short prayers, unmeet repetitions or responsals; not to be dissonant from the liturgies of other reformed churches; nor too rigorously imposed; nor the minister so confined thereunto, but that he may also make use of those gifts for prayer and exhortation which Christ hath given him for the service and edification of the Church.'

They desire such a form to be composed;

2. 'That inasmuch as the Book of Common Prayer hath in it many things that are justly offensive and need amendment, hath been long discontinued, and very many, both ministers and people, persons of pious, loyal, and peaceable minds, are therein greatly dissatisfied; whereupon, if it be again imposed, will inevitably follow sad divisions, and widening of the breaches which your Majesty is now endeavouring to heal: we do most humbly offer to your Majesty's wisdom, that for preventing so great evil, and for settling the Church in unity and peace, some learned, godly, and moderate divines of both persuasions, indifferently chosen, may be employed to compile such a form as is before described, as much as may be in scripture words; or at least to revise and effectually reform the old, together with an addition or insertion of some other varying forms in scripture phrase, to be used at the minister's choice; of which variety and liberty there be instances in the Book of Common Prayer.'

3. Concerning ceremonies, they ask 'that kneeling at the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and such holy-days as are but of human institution, may not be imposed upon such as do conscientiously scruple the observation of them: and that the use of the surplice and cross in baptism, and bowing at the name of Jesus rather than the name of Christ, or Immanuel, or other names whereby that divine Person, or either of the other divine Persons, is nominated, may be abolished¹.'

The bishops, in their reply to these proposals of the Presbyterians, pronounce the offices in the Common Prayer wholly unexceptionable, and conceive the book cannot be too strictly enjoined; especially when ministers are not denied the exercise of their gifts in praying before and after sermon; 'which liberty for extemporary or private compositions stands only upon a late custom, without any foundation from law or canons; and that the common use of this practice comes only from connivance. However, they are contented to yield the liturgy may be reviewed, in case his Majesty thinks fit. As for the ceremonies, they are unwilling to part with any of them; being clearly of opinion, that the satisfaction of some private persons ought not to overrule the public peace and uniformity of the church; and that, if any abatements were made, it would only feed a distemper, and encourage unquiet people to further demands¹.

It was impossible to obtain any immediate and legal settlement of these differences between the Presbyterians and the members of the Church of England, who naturally looked for a restoration of their benefices and form of service. The Convention Parliament could not be allowed to meddle with this question: if its members could be trusted, its acts would have no value from the illegal origin of the body from which they emanated.

The King's Declaration concerning Ecclesiastical affairs,

The method adopted to meet the present difficulty was the issue of a 'Royal Declaration concerning Ecclesiastical affairs' (Oct. 25, 1660). This had the sundry advantages of not resting at all for its authority upon the existing Parliament, without seeming to encroach upon its functions; of allowing a greater measure of toleration than probably would be allowed by a final settlement of the matter by just authority, and hence of pacifying some of the nonconformists; while nothing was finally settled, or granted: but the whole question was left open for discussion at a Conference which it promised between the discordant parties, and for the decision of a lawful Parliament and Convocation. Accordingly this Declaration allowed a great number of the demands of the Presbyterians, touching the observance of the Lord's day, the episcopal jurisdiction, the examination of those who should be confirmed, a discretion as to the use of certain ceremonies, such as kneeling at the Communion, signing the cross in Baptism, bowing at the name of Jesus, the surplice, and the oath of canonical obedience: and although wishing ministers to read those parts of the Prayer-Book, against which there could be no exception, yet promising that none should be punished or troubled for not using it, until it had been reviewed, and effectually reformed by the above-mentioned authority¹.

The result was a general expression of satisfaction on the part of the Presbyterians; and the attempt was made to gain some of them over to conformity by the offer of Church preferments². But although the Declaration, by a stretch of the prerogative, sheltered the dissenting ministers for the present from legal penalties, it did not satisfy all their scruples; for they did not look for the continuance of that amount of favour, when a royalist Parliament should have determined their position.

On the King's part there was no delay in forwarding the promised Conference. The warrant³ was issued on the 25th of March, 1661, appointing⁴ twelve Bishops, and the same number of Presbyterians, with nine other divines on each side as assistants, to supply the places of any that were unavoidably absent. The place of meeting was the Bishop of London's lodgings in the Savoy Hospital, and the commission was to continue in force during the ensuing four months. The course of deliberation was precisely stated: the commissioners were empowered to advise upon and review the Book of Common Prayer; comparing it with the most antient Liturgies which have been used in the Church in the primitive and purest times; to take into serious and grave consideration the several directions and rules and forms of prayer in the said Book, and several objections and exceptions raised against it; to make such reasonable and necessary alterations, corrections, and amendments therein, as should be agreed upon to be needful or expedient for the satisfaction of tender consciences, but avoiding all unnecessary alterations of the forms and Liturgy, wherewith the people are already acquainted, and have so long received in the Church of England.

² Dr Cardwell (Conferences, p. 256) says that several of the Presbyterians, including Reynolds and Manton, accepted spiritual appointments, and recognized the authority of the Bishops. Reynolds indeed accepted the bishopric of Norwich, and was consecrated Jan. 6, 1661. But it appears that the other ministers refused the offered promotions. See Collier, Eccles. Hist. VIII. 400. Manton signed the doctrinal Articles, and was instituted by the Bishop of London to his rectory of St Paul's, Covent Garden, Jan. 16, 1661: but he honestly refused the deanery of Rochester; and his conformity did not continue, when the Church-service was re-settled after the Savoy Conference.

The Savoy
Conference opened April 15, 1661.

The Presbyterians are desired to present their
exceptions.

Although the period of the Commission was limited to four months, yet the first meeting did not take place until the 15th of April. The Bishop of London then stated to the Presbyterian ministers, that, since they had requested the Conference for the purpose of making alterations in the Prayer-book, nothing could be done until they had delivered their exceptions in writing, together with the additional forms, and whatever alterations they desired. Accordingly they met from day to day, and prepared a long series of exceptions¹, and alterations, Baxter persuading his colleagues that they were bound to ask for everything that they thought desirable, without regard to the sentiments of others². These exceptions are especially interesting, as having been made against the Prayer-Book, when it had been brought so very nearly into its present state. We may consider that they include all the minute particulars, with which fault could be found by men of learning, acuteness, and piety, whose writings were to be thenceforward the mine of nonconformist divinity³.

The Presbyterians proposed :

1. That all the prayers, and other materials of the Liturgy, may consist of nothing doubtful or questioned among pious, learned, and orthodox persons.

General Exceptions to the

² Cardwell, Conferences, p. 260.

³ The 'Exceptions against the Book of Common Prayer' were preserved by Baxter, and published in his own narrative of his life. The Answers of the Bishops are only known from the 'Rejoinder,' in which Baxter attempted to refute them. The limits of this work will not allow of more than an abstract of this paper. See Cardwell, Conferences, p. 262; and chap. VII. Documents v. VI; Collier, Eccles. Hist. VIII. 404.

SAVOY

General Exceptions to
Book.

2. To consider that, as our first reformers so composed the Liturgy, as to draw the papists into their Church-communion, by varying as little as they well could from the Romish forms before in use; so whether now we should not have our Liturgy so composed, as to gain upon the judgments and affection of all those who in the substantials of the Protestant religion are of the same persuasions with ourselves.

3. To omit the repetitions and responsals of the clerk and people, and the alternate reading of the psalms and hymns, which cause a confused murmur in the congregation: the minister being appointed for the people in all public services appertaining to God; and the holy Scriptures intimating the people's part in public prayer to be only with silence and reverence to attend thereunto, and to declare their consent in the close, by saying Amen.

4. To change the Litany into one solemn prayer¹.

5. That there may be nothing in the Liturgy which may seem to countenance the observation of Lent as a religious fast.

6. To omit the religious observation of saints'-days.

7. That there may be no such imposition of the Liturgy, as that the exercise of the gift of prayer be totally excluded in any part of public worship; and that it may be left to the discretion of the minister to omit part of it, as occasion shall require.

¹ The Litany was disliked for the shortness of the petitions, as were also the Collects; and because the actual prayer is uttered by the people, which was thought 'not to be so consonant to Scripture, which makes the minister the mouth of the people to God in prayer.' The meaning of 'one solemn prayer' was exemplified by Baxter, who composed such a prayer in his 'Reformation of the Liturgy' under the title of 'The General Prayer' (Reliq. Liturg. Vol. IV. pp. 36—43), and another form in the Appendix, entitled, 'A Larger Litany, or General Prayer: to be used at discretion' (Ibid. pp. 142—157).

8. That the new translation of the Bible should alone be used in the portions selected in the Prayer-Book.

9. That nothing be read in the church for lessons, but the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament.

10. That no part of the Liturgy be read at the communion-table but when the Holy Supper is administered.

11. To use the word 'Minister,' and not 'Priest,' or 'Curate,' and 'Lord's-day' instead of 'Sunday.'

12. To amend the version of metrical Psalms.

13. To alter obsolete words.

14. That no portion of the Old Testament, or of the Acts of the Apostles, be called 'Epistles,' and read as such.

15. To reform the offices, where the phrase is such as presumes all persons within the communion of the Church to be regenerated, converted, and in an actual state of grace: which, had ecclesiastical discipline been truly and vigorously executed, might be better supposed, but cannot now be rationally admitted.

The bishops reply to this, The church in her prayers useth no more offensive phrase than St Paul uses, when he writes to the Corinthians, Galatians, and others, calling them in general the churches of God, sanctified in Christ Jesus, by vocation saints, amongst whom notwithstanding there were many, who by their known sins (which the Apostle endeavoured to amend in them) were not properly such, yet he gives the denomination to the whole from the greater part, to whom in charity it was due, and puts the rest in mind what they have by their baptism undertaken to be; and our prayers and the phrase of them surely supposes no more than that they are saints by calling, sanctified in Christ Jesus, by their baptism admitted into Christ's congregation, and so to be reckoned members of that society, till either they shall separate themselves by wilful schism, or be separated by legal excommunication; which they seem earnestly to desire, and so do we.

16. Instead of the short collects, to have one methodical and entire prayer composed out of many of them.

17. The present Liturgy seems defective, in forms of praise and thanksgiving; in consisting very much of general expressions, such as, 'to have our prayers heard, to be kept from all evil, to do God's will:' the Confession does not clearly express original sin, nor sufficiently enumerate actual sins with their aggravations; and there is no preparatory prayer for assistance or acceptance. The Catechism is defective as to many necessary doctrines; some even of the essentials of Christianity not mentioned except in the Creed, and there not so explicit as ought to be in a Catechism.

The bishops reply, There are many Thanksgivings, Te Deum, Benedictus, Magnificat, Benedicite, Glory be to God on high, Therefore with Angels and Archangels, Glory be to the Father, besides occasional thanksgivings after the Litany, of the frequency whereof themselves elsewhere complain. The use of general expressions, as in confession of sin, is the perfection of the Liturgy, the offices of which being intended for common and general services, would cease to be such by descending to particulars: the instances of general expressions are almost the very terms of the petitions of the Lord's Prayer. It is an evil custom springing from false doctrine, to use expressions which may lead people to think that original sin is not forgiven in holy baptism: yet original sin is clearly acknowledged in confessing that the desires of our own hearts render us miserable by following them, &c.

18. The Surplice, the Cross in Baptism, and Kneeling at the Lord's Supper, are brought forward as the usual instances of ceremonies, judged unwarrantable by sundry learned and pious men, and exposing many orthodox, pious, and peaceable ministers to the displeasure of their rulers. They must be fountains of evil, unless all his Majesty's subjects had the same subtilty of judgment to discern even to a ceremony how far the power of man extends in the things of God.

*Exceptions

They wish the first rubric to be expressed as in the Book of 1552; and the second rubric about vestments and ornaments to be omitted.

The doxology to be always added to the Lord's Prayer; and this Prayer not to be so often used.

The Gloria Patri to be used only once in the Morning, and once in the Evening.

'Rubric. And to the end the people may the better hear, in such places where they do sing there shall the Lessons be sung in a plain tune, after the manner of distinct reading: and likewise the Epistle and Gospel.' We know no warrant why they should be sung in any place, and conceive that the distinct reading of them with an audible voice tends more to the edification of the church.

The bishops reply, *The rubric directs only such singing as is after the manner of distinct reading, and we never heard of any inconvenience thereby*¹.

To appoint some Psalm or Scripture hymn instead of the apocryphal Benedicite.

Exceptions
against particular parts of the Prayer-Book.

In the Litany they object to the expressions, deadly sin, sudden death, and all that travel.

To omit the words 'this day,' in the Collect for Christmas-day.

Some other collects were named, 'as having in them divers things that we judge fit to be altered;' some of which were altered, as were also others to which no objection was here raised.

The first rubric had directed intending communicants to 'signify their names to the Curate over night, or else in the morning afore the beginning of Morning Prayer, or immediately after.' It was objected that this notice was not sufficient; and the rubric was altered to 'at least some time the day before.'

They desire that the minister should have a full power to admit or repel communicants.

They object to kneeling during the reading of the Commandments, and also to the petition after each commandment, preferring that the minister should conclude with a suitable prayer.

They desire preaching to be more strictly enjoined, and that ministers should not be bound to 'Homilies hereafter to be set forth,' as things which are as yet but future and not in being.

They object to the Offertory sentences, that two are apocryphal, and four of them more proper to draw out the people's bounty to their ministers, than their charity to the poor; and to the Offertory itself, that collection for the poor may be better made at or a little before the departing of the communicants.

The Exhortation, which was appointed to be read 'at certain times when the Curate shall see the people negligent to come to the Holy Communion,' is objected to as unseasonable to be read at the Communion.

THE SAVOY
CONFERENCE.

They object to the direction 'that no man should come to the holy Communion, but with a full trust in God's mercy, and with a quiet conscience,' as likely to discourage many from coming to the Sacrament, who lie under a doubting and troubled conscience.

Exceptions
against the Communion
Office.

The bishops reply, Certainly themselves cannot desire that men should come to the Holy Communion with a troubled conscience, and therefore have no reason to blame the church for saying it is requisite that men come with a quiet conscience, and prescribing means for quieting thereof.

The General Confession in the name of the communicants was directed to be made 'either by one of them, or else by one of the ministers, or by the priest himself:' they desire that this may be made by the minister only.

To the rubric that the priest or bishop, in pronouncing Absolution, should 'turn himself to the people,' they say, 'The minister turning himself to the people is most convenient throughout the whole ministration.'

As before in the Collect for Christmas-day, they object to the words 'this day,' in the Proper Preface for that day and Whit-Sunday.

Of the Prayer 'in the name of all them that shall receive the Communion,'—'Grant that our sinful bodies may be made clean by his body, and our souls washed through his most precious blood,'—they observe that these words seem to give a greater efficacy to the blood than to the body of Christ, and would have them altered thus—'that our sinful souls and bodies may be cleansed through his precious body and blood.'

The bishops in reply refer to the words of our Lord

‘This is my blood which is shed for you and for many for the remission of sins,’ observing, that He saith not so explicitly of the body.

Of the ‘Prayer at the consecration,’ as they word it, they say, the manner of consecrating is not explicit enough, and the minister’s breaking of the bread is not so much as mentioned.

Of the manner of distributing the elements, and the words used, they desire that the words of our Saviour may be used as near as may be; and that the minister be not required to deliver the bread and wine into every communicant’s hand, and to repeat the words to each one: also that kneeling may be left free.

To the rubric, that ‘Every parishioner shall communicate at the least three times in the year,’ they say, Forasmuch as every parishioner is not duly qualified for the Lord’s Supper, and those habitually prepared are not at all times actually disposed, but many may be hindered by the providence of God, and some by the distemper of their spirits, we desire this rubric may be either wholly omitted, or thus altered: ‘Every minister shall be bound to administer the Sacrament of the Lord’s Supper at least thrice a year, provided there be a due number of communicants manifesting their desires to receive.’ They also desire the Declaration, explanatory of kneeling, which was added to the Communion Office by Order of Council, in October 1552, to be again restored to its place: to which the bishops reply; This rubric is not in the Liturgy of Queen Elizabeth, nor confirmed by law; nor is there any great need of restoring it, the world being now in more danger of profanation than of idolatry. Besides, the sense of it is declared sufficiently in the 28th Article of the Church of England.

*Exceptions
against the
Office.*

The Baptismal Office, and those parts of the Prayer-Book connected with it, furnished special matter for objection. The charitable conclusion of the Church, 'that Christ will favourably accept every infant to baptism that is presented by the Church according to our present order,' was opposed to the ministerial tyranny which the Puritan elders sought to exercise in the way of discipline and excommunication. Thus with regard to the subjects of baptism, they say, There being divers learned, pious and peaceable ministers, who not only judge it unlawful to baptize children, whose parents both of them are atheists, infidels, heretics, and unbaptized, but also such whose parents are excommunicate persons, fornicators, or otherwise notorious and scandalous sinners: we desire they may not be obliged to baptize the children of such, until they have made due profession of their repentance. Then with regard to sponsors, they say, Here is no mention of the parents, in whose right the child is baptized, and who are fittest both to dedicate it unto God, and to covenant for it: we do not know that any persons except the parents, or some others appointed by them, have any power to consent for the children, or to enter them into covenant. We desire it may be left free to parents, whether they will have sureties to undertake for their children in baptism or no. Of the questions addressed to the sponsors they say, We know not by what right the sureties do promise and answer in the name of the infant: it seemeth to us also to countenance the anabaptistical opinion of the necessity of an actual profession of faith and repentance in order to baptism. That such a profession may be required of parents in their own name, and now solemnly renewed when they present their children to baptism, we willingly grant: but the asking of one for another is a practice whose warrant we doubt of; and therefore we desire that the two first interrogatories may be put to the parents to be answered in their own names, and the last propounded to the parents or pro-parents thus, 'Will you have this child baptized into this faith?' As to particular expressions in the Service, they object to the notion of the sanctification of Jordan or any other waters to a sacramental use by Christ's being baptized: the words 'may receive remission of sins by spiritual regeneration,' they would have to be, 'may be regenerated and receive the remission of sins;' and the words of thanksgiving, 'that it hath pleased thee to regenerate this infant by thy Holy Spirit,' to be otherwise expressed, since we cannot in faith say that every child that is baptized is regenerated by God's Holy Spirit; at least it is a disputable point.

Of Private Baptism they say, We desire that baptism may not be administered in a private place at any time, unless by a lawful minister, and in the presence of a competent number: that where it is evident that any child hath been so baptized, no part of the administration may be reiterated in public, under any limitations: and therefore we see no need of any Liturgy in that case.

To these objections to the baptismal services the bishops reply, that the desire to withhold baptism is very hard and uncharitable. It is an erroneous doctrine, and the ground of many others, that children have no other right to baptism than in their parents' right. The Church's primitive practice (St Aug. Ep. 23)¹ forbids it to be left to the pleasure of the parents, whether there shall be other sureties or no. If Jordan and all other waters be not so far sanctified by Christ, as to be the matter of baptism, what authority have we to baptize? and sure His baptism was ‘dedicatio baptismi.’—The expressions objected to are most proper, for baptism is our spiritual regeneration; and seeing that God’s sacraments have their effects, where the receiver doth not ‘ponere obicem,’ put any bar against them (which children cannot do); we may say in faith of every child that is baptized, that it is regenerated by God’s Holy Spirit; and the denial of it tends to anabaptism, and the contempt of this holy sacrament, as nothing worthy, nor material whether it be administered to children or no. As to Private Baptism, we think it fit that children should be baptized in private rather than not at all; and as to the service, nothing done in private is reiterated in public.

THE SAVOY CONFERENCE.

Exceptions against the Baptismal Office.

In the Catechism, they desire the opening questions to be altered, but only as it seems for the temporary reason, because the far greater number of persons baptized within the last twenty years had no godfathers or godmothers at their baptism. The third answer they conceive might be more safely expressed thus, ‘Wherein I was visibly admitted into the number of the members of Christ, the children of God, and the heirs (rather than “inheritors”) of the kingdom of heaven.’ To the answer, declaring our duty towards God, they would add at the end, ‘particularly on the Lord’s day;’ for the reason that otherwise there was nothing in all the answer referring to the fourth commandment. In the latter portion, upon the Sacraments, they would have the first answer to be, ‘Two only, Baptism and the Lord’s Supper.’ Of the baptismal answers they say, We desire that the entering infants into God’s covenant may be more warily expressed, and that the words may not seem to found their baptism upon a really actual faith and repentance of their own; and we desire that a promise may not be taken for a performance of such faith and repentance ; and especially that it be not asserted that they perform these by the promise of their sureties, it being to the seed of believers that the covenant of God is made ; and not (that we can find) to all that have such believing sureties, who are neither parents nor pro-parents of the child¹. They approve, however, generally of this portion of the Catechism, that the doctrine of the Sacraments is much more fully and particularly delivered than the other parts, in short answers fitted to the memories of children : therefore they propose a more distinct and full application of the Creed, the Commandments, and the Lord's Prayer ; and to add somewhat particularly concerning the nature of faith, repentance, the two covenants, justification, sanctification, adoption, and regeneration.

Exceptions
against Confirmation.

Of Confirmation, they conceive that it is not a sufficient qualification that children be able memoriter to repeat the Creed, the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments, and to answer to some questions of this short Catechism : for it is often found that children are able to do this at four or five years old ; and it crosses what is said in another rubric, ordaining that Confirmation should be ministered unto them that are of perfect age, that they being instructed in the Christian religion should openly profess their own faith, and promise to be obedient to the will of God : and therefore they desire that none may be confirmed but according to his Majesty's Declaration (Oct. 25, 1660), ' That Confirmation be rightly and solemnly performed, by the information, and with the consent of the minister of the place.'

them both in their names : which, when they come to age, themselves are bound to perform.'

They object to the words of the rubric, declaring that ‘children being baptized have all things necessary for their salvation,’ as dangerous as to the misleading of the vulgar; although they charitably suppose the meaning of these words was only to exclude the necessity of any other sacraments to baptized infants. They object also to the mention of a godfather or godmother, seeing no need of them either at baptism or confirmation.

SAVOY

Exceptions
against Confirmation.

The words of the ‘Prayer before the imposition of hands,’ suppose that all the children who are brought to be confirmed have the Spirit of Christ, and the forgiveness of all their sins; whereas a great number of children at that age, having committed many sins since their baptism, do shew no evidence of serious repentance, or of any special saving grace; and therefore this confirmation (if administered to such) would be a perilous and gross abuse. To which the bishops reply, It supposeth, and that truly, that all children were at their baptism regenerate by water and the Holy Ghost, and had given unto them the forgiveness of all their sins; and it is charitably presumed that notwithstanding the frailties and slips of their childhood they have not totally lost what was in baptism conferred upon them; and therefore adds, ‘Strengthen them, we beseech thee, O Lord, with the Holy Ghost the Comforter, and daily increase in them thy manifold gifts of grace, &c.’ None that lives in open sin ought to be confirmed.

They also object that the Imposition of hands by the bishop seems to put a higher value upon Confirmation than upon the Sacraments. And they desire that the practice of the apostles may not be alleged as a ground of this imposition of hands for the confirmation of children, both because they did never use it in that case, as also because Article xxv. declares it to be a ‘corrupt imitation of the Apostles' practice : ' that imposition of hands may not be made a sign to certify children of God's grace and favour towards them ; because this seems to speak it a sacrament, and is contrary to that xxvth Article, which saith that ' Confirmation hath no visible sign appointed by God : ' and that Confirmation may not be made so necessary to the Holy Communion, as that none should be admitted to it unless they be confirmed.

Exceptions
against the Marriage
Service,

In the Marriage Service, they desire that the ring may be left indifferent : some other words to be used instead of 'worship,' and 'depart,' which old word, they say, is improperly used : the declaration in the name of the Trinity to be omitted, lest it should seem to favour those who count matrimony a sacrament : to omit the change of place and posture directed in the middle of the Service : to alter or omit the words—'consecrated the state of matrimony to such an excellent mystery,'—seeing the institution of marriage was before the fall, and so before the promise of Christ, and also for that it seems to countenance the opinion of making matrimony a sacrament : and to omit the direction for Communion on the day of marriage.

The Visitation
of the Sick,

In the ' Order for the Visitation of the Sick,' they desire a greater liberty in the prayer as well as in the exhortation ; and that the form of the Absolution be declarative and conditional, as ' I pronounce thee absolved,' instead of, ' I absolve thee,' and, ' if thou doest truly repent and believe ; ' and that it may only be recommended to the minister to be used or omitted as he shall see occasion. Also, of the ' Communion of the Sick,' they propose that the minister be not enjoined to administer the Sacrament to every sick person that shall desire it, but only as he shall judge expedient.

In the ‘Order for the Burial of the Dead,’ they desire the insertion of a rubric declaring that the prayers and exhortations are not for the benefit of the dead, but only for the instruction and comfort of the living; and that ministers may be allowed to perform the whole service in the church if they think fit, for the preventing of inconveniences which many times both ministers and people are exposed unto by standing in the open air. Also some expressions are objected to, that they cannot in truth be said of persons living and dying in open and notorious sin; that they may harden the wicked, and are inconsistent with the largest rational charity; and more than this, that they cannot be used with respect to those persons who have not by their actual repentance given any ground for the hope of their blessed estate.

of the Dead.

The bishops replied at length to these objections, and ended by stating the following concessions, which they were willing to make in the way of alterations in the Prayer-Book¹.

Concessions
of the Bishops.

1. We are willing that all the Epistles and Gospels be used according to the last translation.
2. That when any thing is read for an Epistle which is not in the Epistles, the superscription shall be, ‘For the Epistle.’
3. That the Psalms be collated with the former translation, mentioned in rubric, and printed according to it.
4. That the words, ‘this day,’ both in the collects and prefaces, be used only upon the day itself; and for the following days it be said, ‘as about this time.’
5. That a longer time be required for signification

of the names of the communicants; and the words of the rubric be changed into these, 'at least some time the day before.'

6. That the power of keeping scandalous sinners from the Communion may be expressed in the rubric, according to the 26th and 27th canons; so the minister be obliged to give an account of the same immediately after to the ordinary.

7. That the whole Preface be prefixed to the commandments.

8. That the second exhortation be read some Sunday or holy-day before the celebration of the Communion, at the discretion of the minister.

9. That the General Confession at the Communion be pronounced by one of the ministers, the people saying after him, all kneeling humbly upon their knees.

10. That the manner of consecrating the elements may be made more explicit and express, and to that purpose those words be put into the rubric, 'Then shall he put his hand upon the bread and break it,' 'Then shall he put his hand unto the cup.'

11. That if the font be so placed as the congregation cannot hear, it may be referred to the ordinary to place it more conveniently.

12. That those words, 'Yes, they do perform those, &c.,' may be altered thus, 'Because they promise them both by their sureties.'

13. That the words of the last rubric before the Catechism may be thus altered, 'that children being baptized have all things necessary for their salvation, and dying before they commit any actual sins, be undoubtedly saved, though they be not confirmed.'

14. That to the rubric after Confirmation these words may be added, 'or be ready,' and desirous to be confirmed.'

15. That those words, 'with my body I thee worship,' may be altered thus, 'with my body I thee honour.'

16. That these words, 'till death us depart,' be thus altered, 'till death us do part.'

17. That the words, 'sure and certain,' may be left out.

Of these changes of phrase, or minute improvements of rubrics, there is hardly one of any great importance. The bishops, conscious of their own power, felt that they were not called upon by any plea of tender consciences to adopt alterations of which they did not recognize the clear necessity. They also knew that it was vain to assent to any real changes; for that, if they granted all the proposals of the ministers, and altered all the ceremonies and phrases objected to, the Prayer-Book would still be deemed an intolerable burden, so long as its use in any shape was to be constantly and vigorously enforced¹. The Puritans required the free exercise of the gift of prayer in every part of public worship, and contended that whatever alterations might be made in the Book, it should be left to the discretion of the minister to omit any part of its appointed services².

² Exceptions, § 7. above, p. 112. The Bishops had seen the results of the 'exercise of the gift' in its utmost freedom. They say of it in their reply (Cardwell, p. 341) 'The mischiefs that come by idle, impertinent, ridiculous, sometimes seditious, impious, and blasphemous expressions, under pretence of the gift, to the dishonour of God and scorn of religion, being far greater than the pretended good of exercising the gift, it is fit that they who desire such liberty in public devotions, should first give the Church security, that no private opinions should be put into their prayers, as is desired in the first proposal; and that nothing contrary to the faith should be uttered before God, or offered up to him in the church.'

Additional forms of prayer to be inserted in the Prayer-Book.

Besides making such alterations in the Prayer-Book as should be thought necessary, the King's Warrant authorized the Commissioners to insert 'Some additional forms, in the Scripture phrase as near as might be, suited to the nature of the several parts of worship.' Therefore when the ministers delivered to the bishops their paper of exceptions against the existing Prayer-Book, they said that they had made a considerable progress in preparing new forms, and should (by God's assistance) offer them to the reverend Commissioners with all convenient speed. This portion of their labours was undertaken by Richard Baxter. Whether he had ever any idea of composing forms of prayer, to be inserted among the Collects of the Prayer-Book, so that the same book might be used in public worship by Puritans and Churchmen, while each party retained their essential differences, is very doubtful. He thought amendment all but hopeless in a book of which the framework and the matter of the prayers had respect to primitive models; and to express his own ideas of a befitting Christian worship, he composed an entirely new Directory of Service, under the title of *The Reformation of the Liturgy*¹. This with some slight alterations was accepted by the Presbyterian Committee, and presented

Baxter composes the 'Reformation of the Liturgy.'

¹ 'The work is described as the labour of little more than a fortnight; a suggestion by no means incredible; for, spite of the praise bestowed on it by his biographer, that "few better Liturgies exist," (Orme's Life of Baxter, II. p. 420) a less desultory performance might have been expected from a mind so used to composition, and on an occasion so urgently calling for the exercise of wisdom and deliberation. The method he pursued in its composition was to follow the Lord's Prayer and the Ten Commandments; but "my leisure," he owns,

"was too short for the doing of it with that accurateness, which a business of that nature doth require, or for the consulting with men and authors. I could not have time to make use of any book save the Bible and my Concordance; comparing all with the Assembly's Directory, and the Book of Common Prayer, and Hammond L'Es-trange." to the bishops with a *Petition for Peace*¹, well calculated to irritate Churchmen, and dismiss every thought of union. If the Prayer-Book was to be tolerated by the Puritans, their new Liturgy must also be allowed, so that either of them might be used at the discretion of the minister; they also desired freedom from subscription, oaths, and ceremonies; and demanded that no ordination, whether absolute or conditional, should be required from any who had already been ordained by the parochial pastors².

with a Petition for Peace.

Baxter's next work was to compile a lengthy rejoinder to the reply which the bishops had fully and finally made to the series of Presbyterian objections, without any hope indeed of obtaining the concessions he desired, but rather to express the fulness of his indignation against the bishops and the Prayer-Book³. After these vain disputes only ten days remained of the time limited by the Royal Commission for the Conference. The Non-conformists then desired a personal discussion upon the subject of the papers which had been exchanged; and after two days' debate, it was agreed to, and Dr Pearson, Dr Gunning, and Dr Sparrow, disputed against Dr Bates, Dr Jacomb, and Mr Baxter, in the syllogistic form, on the assertion, 'Nothing contained in the Liturgy is sinful,'

Baxter's rejoinder to the reply of the Bishops.

¹ Baxter's argument in this production is that his brethren dare not conform for fear of God's wrath; that they have regard for the honour of Christ; that the bishops were unmerciful in their imposition of conformity, even if that for which they stood were of God; that many ministers must suffer, and people grieve even for their souls: mingled with expressions which shewed that they would pay no obedience to man's authority, or make any effort to conciliate.

taking the particular instance of kneeling at the Communion¹. At length bishop Cosin produced a paper 'as from a considerable person²,' proposing that the complainants should distinguish between what they taxed as sinful in the Book of Common Prayer, and what they opposed merely as inexpedient: whereupon eight particulars³ were alleged as sinful⁴. And thus the last conference ended on the 24th of July, 1661, with the only result that could reasonably have been expected. The Presbyterians had an opportunity of shewing their untractable spirit in the cavillings of Baxter, which annoyed some influential persons who were previously disposed to

2. That no minister be permitted to exercise his office that dares not wear a surplice.

3. That none be admitted to the Communion that dare not receive it kneeling.

4. That ministers be forced to pronounce all baptized infants to be regenerate by the Holy Ghost, whether they be the children of Christians or not.

5. That ministers be forced to deliver the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ unto the unfit, and that with personal application putting it into their hands; and that such are forced to receive it, though against their own wills, in the conscience of their impenitency.

6. That ministers be forced to absolve the unfit.

7. That they are forced to give thanks for all whom they bury.

8. That none may be a preacher that dare not subscribe that there is nothing in the Common Prayer-Book, the Book of Ordination, and the Thirty-nine Articles, that is contrary to the word of God. Cardwell, Conferences, p. 265. It must be added that this paper was delivered by the three disputants, in their own name only; for here they would not pretend to represent their party. Collier, Eccles. Hist. VIII. 423.

⁴ Collier (Hist. VIII. 424) and Cardwell (Conferences, p. 265) say that, after alleging the above particulars as sinful, it was at last agreed to argue in writing: and the two most remarkable things in the debate were (1) a long argument about the sense of Rom. xiv. 1, 2, 3; and (2) upon the question, 'whether it was sinful to enjoin ministers to deny the Communion to those that would not receive it kneeling.' But this latter was the logical disputation which had preceded the allegation of the eight sinful points; for the episcopal 'opponents,' in opening that disputation with the assertion, 'nothing contained in the Liturgy is sinful,' take the particular instance of kneeling at the Communion, 'because our brethren have as yet by way of disputation charged no other part of it with the imputation of sinfulness.' Cardwell, p. 364.

treat them tenderly. They shewed also that their hostility to the Prayer-Book rested on small reasons, on phrases misinterpreted, or on doctrines opposed to Catholic truth; while their dislike to episcopacy naturally flowed from their notions of the sovereignty of Christ which in their view was exercised through every individual minister.

In the meanwhile Convocation had assembled on the 8th of May, 1661, and had proceeded to business. A Form of Prayer was drawn up for the 29th of May, the anniversary of the King's birth and restoration; and an office for the Baptism of adults was prepared, which was found necessary from the great neglect of religious ordinances during the rebellion¹. In the House of Commons also (June 25) notice was taken of the proceedings of the Nonconformists at the Conference, a Committee was appointed to make search for the original of King Edward's Second Service-Book², 'and to provide for an effectual conformity to the Liturgy of the Church for the time to come;' and a bill for uniformity was passed (July 9), which, as premature, was delayed until the following February, in the House of Lords. The number of the Puritan objections to the Prayer-Book, and especially Baxter's Reformation of the Liturgy, with its Petition for Peace, would naturally recall a host of recollections unfavourable to the Nonconformist party:

² This had been referred to by the Presbyterians at the Conference, as containing matter which they wished to have replaced in the Prayer-Book: such as the first rubrics concerning vestments, &c., and the declaration about kneeling at the Communion. If produced in Parliament, it was probably found not to be sufficiently in accordance with the higher tone of ordinances which had more generally prevailed since the days of Elizabeth; for mention of it was dropped. But while utterly refusing to gratify the Nonconformists in any of their wishes, the Commons as carefully avoided the alleged alterations of Archbishop Laud (sup. p. 92), and purposely annexed to their Bill a copy of the Prayer-Book of 1604. and the declaration of the Commons for uniformity would no doubt help to embitter Baxter's language towards the close of the Conference, when it became clear that the intolerance of the Presbyterians had cut off all hope of his supremacy in religious matters, and had placed his own form of worship under the civil ban¹.

The second session of this royalist Parliament began Nov. 20th, and Convocation reassembled on the following day, when the King's Letters were read, directing the revision of the Common-Prayer, and a Committee of bishops² was appointed for the purpose. The business, however, had been foreseen, and the Committee seem to have at once reported that the preparations were already made³, and that the whole house might proceed to the work of revision. On Saturday, Nov. 23, a portion of the Book with the corrections of the bishops was delivered

² Cosin, bishop of Durham, Wren of Ely, Skinner of Oxford, Warner of Rochester, Henchman of Salisbury, Morley of Worcester, Sanderson of Lincoln, and Nicholson of Gloucester.

³ There is still in existence a copy of the edition of 1634, with a great number of corrections, in the handwriting of Mr Sancroft, who was at that time chaplain to the Bishop of Durham, carrying so much the appearance of completeness and authority, as to contain minute instructions for the printer. It may fairly be presumed that this book was prepared by Mr Sancroft, (partly from a copy full of erasures and corrections in Bishop Cosin's handwriting, Cardwell, p. 390, note) under the directions of Bishops Cosin and Wren, and was produced in the Convocation, Nov. 21. This will easily account for the speed with which the task of revision was completed; and it would be some foundation for the fear which the Commons seem to have entertained, that the Prayer-Book would be altered to suit the religious sentiments of Archbishop Laud. These MS. corrections, though with many improvements, have indications of such sentiments respecting the real presence in the Eucharist, and prayers for the dead. The book does not contain the prayers for the Parliament and for all conditions of men, the general thanksgiving, the prayers added to the Visitation of the Sick, and some others; but it appears to have supplied the greatest portion of the other new matter that was finally adopted. Cardwell, Conferences, p. 389.

to the prolocutor, and the remainder on the following Wednesday, when the first portion was returned from the lower house, with a schedule of amendments. The whole work was speedily completed, and on the 20th of December, 1661, the Book of Common Prayer was adopted and subscribed by the clergy of both houses of Convocation, and of both provinces¹. A copy of the Book confirmed under the great seal, was delivered with a royal message to Parliament, Feb. 25, 1662. The Act of Uniformity passed the house of Lords April 9th², and received the royal assent on the 19th of May³, 1662.

Great pains were taken with this revision; about 600 alterations of every kind were made: and Mr Sancroft was appointed by Convocation (March 8) to superintend the printing of the Book, with Mr Scattergood and Mr Dillingham to correct the press⁴. Certain printed copies having been examined and carefully corrected by Commissioners appointed for the purpose, were certified by them, and exemplified under the great seal: and one of fore it was returned with the corrected book, which it was well known had been amended in Convocation from a copy of 1634, the Commons ordered a close comparison of the Books of the two periods: and April 16, they put the question, whether they should reconsider the amendments of Convocation; they received them, however, on a division of 96 to 90; and then divided on the question, whether they had the power of reconsidering such corrections, and affirmed their own power. these Sealed Books, annexed to a printed copy of the Act of Uniformity, was ordered to be obtained by the respective deans and chapters of every cathedral or collegiate church, before the 25th of December; and a similar copy to be delivered into the respective Courts at Westminster, and into the Tower of London, to be preserved for ever among the records¹.

The following are the most important alterations introduced into the Prayer-Book at this revision². The Preface was prefixed, having been drawn up, it is said, by Sanderson, bishop of Lincoln. The original Preface (1549) followed as a chapter, 'Concerning the Service of the Church.' The stories of Susannah, and Bel and the Dragon were inserted in the Calendar of Lessons. The extracts from the Bible, except the Psalter, the Ten Commandments, and some portions in the Communion Service, were taken generally from the version of 1611. The Sentences, Exhortation, Confession and Absolution, were now printed at the beginning of the Order for Evening Prayer. The Absolution was ordered to be pronounced by the Priest, instead of the Minister. The prayer for the King, and the following prayers were printed in the Order of Morning and Evening Service. In the Litany, the words 'rebellion' and 'schism' were added to the petition against 'sedition.' The words, 'bishops, priests and deacons,' were substituted for 'bishops, pastors and ministers of the Church.' Among the occasional prayers were introduced a second prayer for Fair Weather, the two prayers for the Ember Weeks, the Prayer for the Parliament, the Prayer for all conditions of men, also the General Thanksgiving, and a thanksgiving for the restoration of public peace at home. New collects were appointed for the third Sunday in Advent, and for St Stephen's day: a Collect, Epistle and Gospel were provided for a sixth Sunday after the Epiphany; and a distinct collect for Easter Even: in several places the word 'church' was used for 'congregation.' The Gospel for the Sunday after Christmas was shortened by the omission of the genealogy; as also those for the Sunday next before Easter, and for Good Friday, which had contained the second lesson for the day: an Epistle was provided for the day of the Purification: the first of the anthems on Easter day was added. In the Communion Service, the last clause respecting saints departed was added to the prayer for the Church Militant: the rubrics preceding this prayer were now altered from the Liturgy prepared for Scotland (1634), directing the presentation of the alms, and the placing of the bread and wine upon the table, this latter being also taken from 1549. The first exhortation was inserted where it stands, giving warning of the Communion, instead of being read sometimes at the Communion. The rubric was added before the prayer of consecration, directing the priest so to order the bread and wine, that he may with decency break the bread and take the cup. The rubrics were added, directing the form of consecrating additional bread and wine, if needed; and the remainder of the consecrated elements to be covered with a fair linen cloth. The Order in Council (1552), respecting kneeling at Communion, which had been removed by Q. Elizabeth, was now again placed at the end of the Office, though not printed as a rubric: and the words 'corporal presence' were substituted for 'real and essential presence.' Some careful amendments were made in the Baptismal Offices; the enquiry of obedience added to the examination of the sponsors; and the declaration, which had formed part of the preface to the Confirmation Service, of the undoubted salvation of baptized infants, dying before they commit actual sin, and a reference to the xxxth canon (1604), for the meaning of the sign of the cross, were placed at the end of the Office of Publick Baptism. An Office for the Administration of Baptism to such as were of riper years was added. The Catechism was separated from the Order of Confirmation. The first rubric explaining the end of Confirmation was now appointed to be read as the Preface to the Service, followed, in place of the Catechism, by the enquiry of renewal and ratification of the baptismal vow. A form was now appointed for the publication of Banns of Marriage, and the particular 'time of Service' to be 'immediately before' the Offertory Sentences. The Order following the last Blessing, 'Then shall begin the Communion,' was omitted: and the final rubric, that 'the new married persons, the same day of their marriage, must receive the holy Communion,' was altered to a declaration that it is convenient so to do, or at the first opportunity after their marriage. In the Order for the Visitation of the Sick, instead of a reference to 'Peter's wife's mother, and the captain's servant,' the beautiful petition for the sanctification of sickness was inserted in the prayer before the Exhortation: and the words, 'if he humbly and heartily desire it,' were added to the rubric respecting absolution. The final Benediction, and the Occasional Prayers, were now added. The form of Service for the Communion of the Sick was more clearly directed to begin with the Proper Collect, Epistle and Gospel, and then to pass to the part of the Public Office, beginning 'Ye that do truly, &c.' In the Order for Burial, the first rubric, respecting persons unbaptized, or excommunicate, was added. The Psalms and Lesson were appointed to be read in the Church, according to the rubric (1549). The name of the deceased was omitted in the prayer at the grave. In the Churching Service new Psalms were appointed. The Communion was directed to be used on the first day of Lent. Forms of Prayer were supplied to be used at Sea, and for the 30th of January, and the 29th of May, and the Service for the 5th of November was altered.

¹ A reprint of the 'Sealed Book' is in course of publication by the Ecclesiastical History Society. It is curious that the original MS. Prayer-Book that was annexed to the Act has been missing for about twenty years. Ten copies of the 'Sealed Books' are known still to exist, viz. those belonging to the

Thus the Book remained the same Book of Common Prayer, as to all its distinctive features. Some particulars of small consequence were amended; such as the language, which was made more smooth by verbal changes and slight transpositions; some rubrics were expounded for the direction of ministers to whom the 'customary manner' of former years was unknown; and the selected portions of Scripture were taken from the best translation. Some new Services were also added, which had become necessary from the circumstances of the time; such as that for Adult Baptism, to meet the case of converts from Anabaptism at home, and from heathenism in the 'Plantations;' and that for use at Sea, to meet the requirements of the rapidly increasing trade and navy of the country. But while all this was done with scrupulous care, it seems that no regard was paid to the objections of the Puritans¹. The use of the Apo-

'church,' or 'people,' was substituted for 'congregation,' and 'ministers in' for 'of the congregation;' 'priests and deacons' were especially named instead of 'pastors and ministers.' It deprived of their benefices every person who was not in Holy Orders by episcopal ordination, unless he was so ordained Priest or Deacon before the Feast of St Bartholomew. It provided for the toleration of aliens of the Foreign Reformed Churches allowed, or to be allowed, in England. COMPRE-HENSION AND TOLERATION.

SINCE the year 1662 the Book of Common Prayer has remained in the state to which it was then brought; the Sealed Books being preserved, and presenting the exact form of words in which it was signed by the Members of Convocation, and ratified by Parliament. Attempts have been made to introduce changes in its language; but hitherto it has resisted the efforts both of latitudinarian and of Romanizing innovators.

In 1668, Tillotson and Stillingfleet united with Bates, Manton, and Baxter, in preparing the terms, in which a Bill for the Comprehension of Dissenters might be proposed to Parliament, upon the model of the King's Declaration from Breda. But although recommended in the speech from the throne, the Commons utterly refused the project¹. In 1673, and again in 1675, motions were made for the relief of dissenters; and then Tillotson declined making further efforts, which would be a prejudice to himself, and could not effect the object desired². These efforts were, however, continued by Stillingfleet, who, in 1681, when bishop of Worcester, proposed to allow an alteration, or freedom of choice, in such particulars as the surplice, the sign of the cross and sponsors in baptism, kneeling at Communion, Apocryphal lessons, and subscription to thirty-six only of the Articles. But the temper of the times would not allow the dissenters to accept these condescensions³: even toleration in the later years of Charles II., and throughout the short reign of James II., was suspected, not indeed without reason, of bringing with it an equal toleration of Popery.

The declaration issued by William Prince of Orange promised 'to endeavour a good agreement between the Church of England and Protestant dissenters, and to cover and secure all who would live peaceably under the government, from all persecution upon the account of their religion¹. It was natural that he should desire to repay with his favour those classes of his new subjects who had most readily received him; and the disabilities of dissenters, arising from the sacramental test, which was originally levelled against papists, were mentioned in the royal speech to the Parliament (March 16th, 1689), in which the King said, 'As I doubt not but you will sufficiently provide against papists, so I hope you will leave room for the admission of all protestants, that are willing and able to serve².' The proposal, however, for the comprehension of dissenters was rejected, although toleration was allowed; and finding that ecclesiastical questions were under discussion, while the King had not yet summoned the Convocation, both houses concurred in an address (April 16th), praying that, 'according to the ancient practice and usage of the kingdom, his Majesty would be graciously pleased to issue forth his writs, as soon as conveniently might be, for calling a Convocation of the Clergy to be advised with in ecclesiastical matters³.'

Parliament desire the summoning of Convocation.

Arrangements were made for the meeting of Convocation by a commission issued (Sept. 13th, 1689) to ten bishops and twenty divines⁴, to 'prepare such alterations of the Liturgy and Canons and such proposals for the reformation of ecclesiastical courts, and to consider such other matters as might most conduce to the good order, and edification, and unity of the Church of England, and to the reconciling as much as possible of all differences⁵.' On the same day Tillotson drew up a paper of 'Concessions which would probably be made by the Church of England for the union of protestants⁶.' The Commissioners began their labours on the 3rd of ‘Chanting to be discontinued.

Certain select psalms to be read on Sundays; but the daily course not to be altered.

The omission of the Apocryphal lessons, and of some from the Old Testament.

A rubric on the usefulness of the sign of the Cross in baptism. The use of it may be omitted altogether when desired.

The sacramental elements to be administered in pews to those who might object to kneeling.

A rubric declaring the Lent fasts consisted in extraordinary acts of devotion, not in distinction of meats; and another to explain the meaning of Ember-weeks.

The rubric enjoining the daily reading or hearing of Common Prayer on the clergy to be changed into an exhortation.

The absolution to be read by deacons; the word minister being substituted for priest; and the words ‘remission of sins’ omitted, as not very intelligible.

The Gloria Patri not to be repeated at the end of every psalm.

In the Te Deum, the words only-begotten Son substituted for thine honourable, true, and only Son.

The 128th psalm to be substituted for the Benedicite; and other psalms for the Benedictus and Nunc dimittis.

The versicles after the Lord’s prayer to be read kneeling; and after the words ‘Give peace,’ &c., an answer promissory, on the part of the people, of keeping God’s law, the old response being submission to the doctrine, discipline, and worship of the Church of England, and promise to teach and practise accordingly. (4) To make a new body of canons. (5) To regulate the ecclesiastical courts. (6) That those who have been ordained in any of the foreign reformed churches, be not required to be re-ordained here, to render them capable of preferment in this church; (7) but none to be capable of ecclesiastical preferment that shall be ordained in England otherwise than by bishops.

All titles of the king and queen to be omitted, and the word 'Sovereign' only used.

In the prayer for the King, the clause, 'grant that he may vanquish,' &c., changed into 'prosper all his righteous undertakings against thy enemies.'

The words, 'who worketh great marvels,' changed into 'who alone art the author of all good gifts;' and the words, 'the Holy Spirit of thy grace,' substituted for 'the healthful spirit of thy grace.' The reason assigned for the latter was this, that the word healthful was obsolete.

The prayer, 'O God, whose nature and property,' to be omitted, as full of strange and impertinent expressions.

The Collects to be revised by the Bishop of Chichester, [Patrick.]

If a minister refuse the surplice, and the people desire it, the bishop to be at liberty to appoint another, provided the living would bear it.

Certain alterations to be made in the Litany, the Communion-service, and the *Canons*¹.

These numerous and important alterations were, however, not offered to Convocation, it being quite certain that they would be rejected by the lower house, who in the appointment of their prolocutor, and in the debate on the address², evinced that they

A copy was communicated to Calamy, who thought that the scheme would have brought in two-thirds of the Dissenters; but his copy was lost by lending (see Lathbury, p. 325, note); an abstract was published in his Life of Baxter, p. 452; Cardwell, Conferences, p. 429. It is remarkable that no notice is taken in this account of the question of re-ordination, which the Commissioners certainly debated, and were willing to concede. See Cardwell, p. 419, and p. 429, note. The document is, however, supposed to be in the Lambeth Library, and has recently been made the subject of a motion in the House of Commons.

were opposed to the attempts now made by the Court and bishops for the comprehension of dissenters, as brethren in the Protestant faith. The house of bishops also, lacking nine of its ablest members, was powerless to control the clergy, who were disposed to sympathize with Sancroft and his nonjuring brethren¹. Hence, although Convocation was authorised to proceed to the business of considering alterations in the Prayer-Book and the Canons, and a scheme had been prepared for the purpose, no actual step was taken; and disputes between the two houses were prevented by successive prorogations from Dec. 13th until the close of the Session².

It is probable, indeed, that many concessions would have been made to dissenters in England, but for the downfall of Episcopacy in Scotland, and the violence of the Presbyterians in that country, where they had no ground of complaint, and where even the Episcopalians had no stated Liturgy, and allowed the validity of Presbyterian orders³. Moreover, the toleration, which had now been granted, rendered fresh concessions needless; since dissenters might conduct their worship after their own fashion. Another circumstance of the times might hinder changes in the Prayer-Book, viz. a fear of supplying the Nonjurors with the plea, that 'they still stuck to the ancient Church of England, in opposition to those who were altering it⁴.'

Nonjurors.

One result of the conscientiousness of some ecclesiastics, who considered that they were so bound by their allegiance to James II., that after his deposition they could not take the oath of allegiance to William and Mary, was that Archbishop Sancroft, with eight Bishops⁵, and four hundred clergymen, were all ejected from their benefices. These *Nonjurors*⁶ denied the Episcopal Commission of those who occupied the place of the deprived bishops during their life-time; and prepared the way for a division in the Church not only by ministering privately among those who held their opinions, but by ordaining presbyters and consecrating bishops¹.

With few exceptions the earlier Nonjurors adhered to the Book of Common Prayer; i. e. they used the Prayer-Book of James II., ignoring the changes which had been introduced in the prayer for the King, and in the 'State Services.' Some, however, took advantage of their independent position to use forms which they regarded as more agreeable to primitive practice. Thus Hickes used the Communion Office in the first Book of Edward VI.; and Collier probably did the same: but most others continued to use the Book of Common Prayer until the year 1718².

King Edward's Communion Office was printed in the Appendix to Dr Hickes's Two Treatises on Priesthood and Episcopal Order, in 1707; and founded upon it, yet by no means identical with it, was *The Form and Manner of the Holy Communion*³, printed by the Nonjurors in 1717, as preliminary to their own Office, which was published in the following year⁴. The ceremonies revived in the new Communion Office were, The mixing of Water with the Wine, Prayer for the Dead, Prayer for the descent of the Holy Spirit on the elements, and the Prayer of Oblation. These were called The Usages, and those who practised them were called Usagers. Three other ceremonies are frequently mentioned among the Usages, viz. Immersion three times at Baptism, the use of Chrism at Confirmation, and Unction at the Visitation of the Sick⁵.

Whether Deacon was concerned or not in the compilation of these offices, is uncertain; but he afterwards introduced changes into the Congregational worship of the Nonjurors. In 1734, he published a large 8vo volume, comprising A Complete Collection of *Devotions both Public and Private*¹. These Public Devotions became the more popular form of service among the sect; whereupon, in 1746, Deacon published an 8vo pamphlet of fifty pages, containing:—(1) The Form of Admitting a Convert into the Communion of the Church: (2) A Litany, together with Prayers in behalf of the Catholic Church: (3) Prayers on the Death of Members of the Church, and an Office for those who are deprived of the advantage of receiving the Sacrament, &c. The Litany has been occasionally published for the use of the successors of the Nonjurors assembling in one or two of the larger towns northward: and an edition was printed at Shrewsbury so lately as 1797².

*The Scottish
Office.*

Connected with this brief account of the deviations of the Nonjurors from the forms of the Book of Common Prayer, is the use of the Scottish Communion Office. The episcopal clergy of Scotland participated, almost to a man, in the sentiments of the Nonjurors of England. It has been noticed that a Prayer-Book for Scotland was revised by Archbishop Laud³, and sanctioned by K. Charles I., in 1637. The times, however, would not allow of its use: and so far as any Liturgy was used in the episcopal churches, it was the English, and not the Scottish Book. This continued probably until the publication of the Nonjurors' New Communion Office in 1718. At that time the Scottish bishops Gadderer and Campbell were in London, receiving and imparting counsel on the subject of the Usages; and Gadderer carried with him 500 copies of the New Office on his return to Scotland. He is also said to have reprinted the Communion Office from the Prayer-Book of 1637, about the year 1723⁴. From this time editions have appeared with variations according to the pleasure of individual bishops⁵, who have been supposed to have caused them

⁵ 'Every single bishop,' writes Bp Drummond in 1792, 'has made editions, and even some changes and additions, according to their liking.' The editions, however, were published without any name of the editor, until Skinner's edition in 1800. The actual names of the bishops assigned to them are traditional conjectures. See to be printed, until what may be called the modern standard edition was published by the Rev. John Skinner (son of the late Bishop of Aberdeen) in 1800, and again in 1807, with a Preliminary Dissertation on the Doctrine of the Eucharistical Sacrifice, a copious local Illustration, and an Appendix containing a Collation of the several Communion-Offices in the Prayer-Books of Edward VI., the Scotch Prayer-Book of 1637, the present English Prayer-Book, and that used in the present Scotch Episcopal Church, made by Horsley, Bishop of St Asaph, in 1792. The present Use, however, is not uniform. So lately as 1842, one of the earlier forms (that of 1764) was reprinted at the Edinburgh University Press, For the use of the Scottish Church: and in 1844, besides Skinner's form, an edition appeared For the use of the Church of Scotland, differing from all previous editions. In the same year too, The Order of the Administration of the Holy Communion, according to the Use of the Church in Scotland, was printed in London with musical notes, by Burns, being an attempt to combine the English and Scottish Offices¹. Together with these varying forms for the Holy Communion, the English Prayer-Book is used entirely by about three-fourths of the Episcopalians in Scotland.

SECT. III.—The Prayer-Book in independent Churches and Congregations.

1.—The American Prayer-Book.

After the Declaration of the Independence of the United States, the Episcopal Church of America was also, though not without difficulty², settled in a condition of independence. Bishops were consecrated, in the first instance in Scotland³, and afterwards in England, according to the request of the first General Convention (September, 1785). This could not be immediately accomplished, not only on account of the oath of allegiance required by the English law, but because certain important alterations were at the same time proposed in the Prayer-Book.

Some of them were meant to conciliate the new government, some perhaps were admissible as improvements, but there were others decidedly objectionable and suspicious, such as the omission of the Athanasian and Nicene Creeds, and the clause in the Apostles' Creed affirming the Descent into Hell¹. The reply of the English Archbishops pointed out some of these changes, and some matters of discipline, stating also that, if the Convention would give them satisfaction in these particulars, other hinderances could be removed. Accordingly the Convention (Oct. 1786) replaced the Nicene Creed, and the clause of the Apostles' Creed; and on the 4th of February, 1787, two bishops were consecrated at Lambeth for the American Church².

from the En-

The American edition of the Book of Common Prayer was arranged substantially as it remains at present, by the next General Convention, in 1789. The following are the principal points in which it differs from the English Book. "The Athanasian Creed, and the Absolution in the Visitation of the Sick, were expunged; the omission of the sign of the Cross in Baptism was permitted if desired by the sponsors; and the words, 'Receive ye the Holy Ghost,' in the Ordinal were allowed to be exchanged for another form at the discretion of the bishop ordaining. 'Verily and indeed taken,' was altered to 'spiritually taken;' and the term 'Absolution' in the rubric was altered to 'Declaration of Absolution.' It was provided that any churches might omit the words in the Creed, 'He descended into Hell,' or substitute for them 'He went into the place of departed spirits.' A Selection of Psalms was also inserted, portions of which might be used instead of those in the daily order, at the minister's discretion. On the other hand, the influence of bishop Seabury prevailed sufficiently to restore in the Communion Office the prayers of Invocation and Oblation omitted in the Second Prayer-Book of Edward VI.; and thus the American Communion Service became almost identical with that of the old Scottish Prayer-Book. The rubrics and the actual practice of the Church were rendered generally consistent; but too often at the expence of the former³."

BOOK.

The Book of Common Prayer must contain many excellences, or it would not have been taken as the model after which congregations, avowedly differing from it most widely in points of doctrine, shaped their services. These offices of heretical worship took the form of the Prayer-Book, from a scheme prepared by Dr Samuel Clarke, the Rector of St James's, and at one time chaplain to Queen Anne¹. His plan was to reform the Book, so that it should not exclude the author's opinions respecting the Holy Trinity. The result was a series of perverted editions of the Prayer-Book. Thus there is A Liturgy collected principally from the Book of Common Prayer, for the use of the first Episcopal Chapel in Boston; together with the Psalter or Psalms of David, 1785. This is the Prayer-Book, Arianized by Clarke, and Socinianized by Lindsey; and in the Psalter the objectionable passages are printed in italics, to be omitted in public reading². Among the British residents at Dunkirk many attempts were made to establish a Church entirely conformable to the Church of England; but as that could not be agreed to, a Prayer-Book was compiled on Dr Clarke's plan, 'omitting everything that might offend, and bringing together such sentiments as all might with satisfaction unite in.' The work, a favourable sample of this description of book, 'not avowedly Arian or Socinian³,' has been reprinted by Mr Hall, in Vol. vii. of the Fragmenta Liturgica. The title is, The Book of Common Prayer, compiled for the use of the English Church at Dunkirk,

together with a Collection of [metrical] Psalms. Dunkirk, 1791. The Prayer-Book, perverted upon this plan, is still printed in England: a copy is before me, entitled, The Book of Common Prayer reformed, according to the plan of Dr Samuel Clarke. Bristol, 1830¹.

The variations introduced are subtle, and of different degrees of importance. The Absolution, the Creeds, and the Psalms, with the exception of a few selected portions, are omitted. The words, 'through Jesus Christ our Lord,' are sometimes omitted, but are more frequently retained, sometimes with the alteration, 'according to the gospel of thy Son, &c.' The words, 'prosper all his righteous undertakings against his enemies,' are used in the prayer for the King, and in the Litany, on the authority of the Commissioners, in 1689. The invocation at the opening of the Litany is in one clause only, addressed to God the Father: every word is omitted which refers to the Incarnation of God the Son, the blood of Christ, &c.: mention of Satan, hell, everlasting damnation, false doctrine, heresy and schism, the holy Church universal, the Holy Spirit, &c. is avoided: the Litany ends at the last suffrage. The forms of the Doxology are, (1) 'Glory be to the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only God: Ans. As it was in the beginning, &c.;' or (2) 'Glory be to the Father, the everlasting God: Ans. As it was, &c.' Four forms of 'valedictory blessing' are provided: (1) 'The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with us all evermore. 1 Cor. xvi. 23; Philipp. iv. 23:' (2) 'May the God of all grace, who hath called us unto his eternal glory by Christ Jesus, make us perfect, strengthen, settle us. To him be glory and dominion for ever and ever. 1 Pet. v. 10, 11:' (3) 'The Lord bless us and keep us: may he be gracious unto us; and give us peace now and for evermore. Numb. vi. 24, 25, 26:' (4) 'May the blessing of Almighty God be with us all evermore. Amen.'

The Communion Service causes some change in the order of Morning Prayer: Introductory Sentences, Exhortation, Confession, Ash-Wednesday Collect in place of Absolution; in place of Ps. xciv. or Ps. c., 'the Ten Commandments taken from Deut. v.

much farther in avoiding phrases expressive of Catholic, as opposed to Arian, doctrine.

6—21,' with the response after each, and then 'the words of Christ, Mark xii. 29—31,' with the last response. The Litany: Lesson from the Old Testament: Ps. cxix. 1—8, 89—94: a Hymn: Lesson from the New Testament: Ps. xix.: the Lord's Prayer: Collect for the day: 'Almighty God, unto whom all hearts are open, &c.,' General Thanksgiving, Concluding Prayer (our Prayer of St Chrysostom), and valedictory blessing. Then the Communion Service begins: 'Ye that do truly,' &c.: the Confession: the Absolution in precatory form; the comfortable words: the Preface¹: the Account of the Institution from 1 Cor. xi. 23—26: a Socinian Prayer, retaining a few words of our Consecration Prayer: the Communion, with the words, 'Take, and eat this bread in remembrance of Christ. Take, and drink this wine in remembrance of Christ.' The first of our forms of post-communion Prayer, altered: the 'Glory be to God on high,' with alterations; and a valedictory blessing, 'The peace of God ... and the blessing of God the Father Almighty, be amongst you...', being substituted for the first of the before-mentioned forms.

The remainder of the book consists of Offices of Baptism (much altered) for Infants and Adults; Matrimony, omitting the concluding service; Visitation of the Sick; Burial; Forms of Prayer to be used at Sea, and in the Navy: Occasional Prayers and Thanksgivings, 'For Rain, &c.,' Morning and Evening Prayer for a Family; and a Selection of Collects, as 'Occasional Prayers.'

¹ The only festivals mentioned are Christmas-day, Easter-day, and Whitsunday: all other 'Collects for the day' are omitted. Those who are not acquainted with the subtlety of these heretics will be surprised to find such expressions as these in the Proper Prefaces: 'Because thou didst send thy Son into the world, that the world through him might be saved:' 'But chiefly are we bound to praise thee for the glorious resurrection of thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord; who by his death hath destroyed death; and by his rising to life again hath raised us to the hope of everlasting life:' 'Through Jesus Christ our Lord; according to whose most true promise, thy Holy Spirit was poured forth upon the apostles, to lead them into all the truth; giving them both the gift of divers languages, &c.' Of course all mention of the Angels is omitted.

STOLICAL
BOOK.

3. The Irvingite, or Apostolical Prayer-Book.

Some notice should be taken of another form which the Prayer-Book has been made to assume in the hands of the Irvingites, or 'members of the Catholic and Apostolic Church.' It is a beautifully printed and rubricated book. The service is conducted with much ceremonial; and from the number of proper Collects and Anthems, and from portions being left to the ability or discretion of the minister, and variations if the Angel be present, it must be an imposing form of worship, presenting considerable variety in the course of the year, and requiring close attention to rubrics. The title of the book is The Liturgy and other Divine Offices of the Church: and it contains,

'Part I.—Offices for Daily or Weekly Use.

The Office for Morning Prayer (at six).

The Office for Evening Prayer (at five).

Part II.—Offices for Occasional Use.

Proper Services for Holy Days and Seasons.

The Order for the Administration of Holy Baptism.'

The order of the Early Morning Prayer may be taken as a sample of its arrangement. It commences with an Anthem on the entry of the officiating ministers, 'O come, let us worship,' &c., and the INVOCATION, ☩ 'In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. R. Amen:' the EXHORTATION, the Minister using a form provided, or taking certain prescribed topics: the CONFESSION, our own form, with a passage inserted upon the Unity of the body of Christ, and the hope of the appearing of His Kingdom: the ANSOLUTION may be varied at discretion; a form is given as appropriate, being a variation of our own; 'R. Amen. Peace be with you. R. Amen:' then the PRAYER OF DEDICATION, followed by our Versicles and Doxology: the portion of Holy Scripture as appointed: the Apostles' Creed: Ps. c., or a proper Anthem: the Psalms as appointed: the SUPPLICATIONS, being our Litany', ending at the words, 'graciously hear us, O Lord Christ:' the PRAYERS, commencing with the Versicle, 'O Lord, let thy mercy be shewed upon us. R. As we do put our trust in thee;' Prayers for the Church, in three forms; For Kings; for Seasonable Weather; for the People (on Week-days); the Collect; for Peace; for Protection: the INTERCESSION, at discretion, or according to a provided form: the THANKSGIVING, our own form with variations, and allowing the insertion of any other subject: the LORD'S PRAYER: the MORNING MINISTRY²: 'Benedictus:' and the BENEDICTION.

The Liturgy is intended to be a resuscitation of the Primitive Eucharistic Office, but allows the Church in any age to alter ceremonies and prayers. It is unquestionably a beautiful service, and presents the features commonly understood as belonging to the time of the Apostolical Constitutions³. It is, however, by no means identical with the Office of the Nonjurors, which also claims to be

nion Office.

² The same curious expression occurs at the corresponding part of the Evening Service. It is thus explained: 'That the Ministry in the morning is some word addressed by the Angel to the elders (in the hearing of the people), which shall direct them to right apprehensions of truth, and solemn meditations. At the Evening Ministry, the Angel and Elders give their response to the Morning Ministry, and illustrate the truths then addressed to them, as subjects for their meditation.' As to the subjects that are to be so introduced, it is stated that on both occasions 'the ministry should be such as in the depth of the thoughts expressed, and in dignity of words and manner. befit the sanctity of the occasion, and are consistent with the acts of worship with which it is associated: that this is not the occasion for popular orations, learned disquisitions, logical, critical, or controversial treatises upon doctrine; nor for exhortations addressed to the people; but for holy words, spoken as becomes the presence of God, magnifying the truths He has revealed and His mighty acts, and celebrating the beauty of His house, and the glorious majesty of His kingdom.'

³ See below, in 'Communion

IRVINGITE OR APOSTOLICAL PRAYER-BOOK. formed on the primitive model: and among the usages it does not direct water to be mixed with the wine. From the table of contents it will be seen that a second Communion is allowed in the afternoon, but without consecration. This Service begins with uncovering the holy vessels upon the altar, and an address; then the Confession, Absolution, Collect, Epistle and Gospel, and Creed, from the Communion Service, a Prayer, and the Administration. It must also be observed that the full Eucharistic Office requires the presence of the Angel: otherwise a shorter form is given, which is used also for week-day Communion.

SECT. IV.—Notices of certain Occasional Offices.

1. A curious religious ceremony was used from the time of Henry VII. to Q. Anne, for the supposed cure of scrofula, or as it was formerly called, the King's Evil, by the royal touch: the tradition being that the Kings of England, and France too, had this power, derived from Edward the Confessor¹. The earliest form on record is that used by Henry VII. in Latin. This was used by Henry VIII., omitting mention of the saints and the Virgin Mary. In the reign of Charles I. the service was altogether in English, and in the shape in which it was republished with slight alterations in the reign of Q. Anne². The efficacy of this mode of cure was believed by such men as Heylin, Collier, and Carte³; but it was never formally sanctioned by the Church, though the service was printed in some Prayer-Books between 1661 and 1715.

Touching for the king's evil.

‘AT THE HEALING.

Our Father, &c.

Then shall the infirm persons, one by one, be presented to the Queen upon their knees, and as every one is presented, and while the Queen is laying her hands upon them, and putting the gold about their necks, the Chaplain that officiates, turning himself to her majesty, shall say these words following :

God give a blessing to this work ; and grant that these sick persons on whom the queen lays her hands, may recover, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

After all have been presented, the Chaplain shall say,

O Lord, save thy servants, &c. (the Versicles from the Communion Service.)

Let us pray.

O Almighty God, who art the giver of all health, and the aid of them that seek to thee for succour, we call upon thee for thy help and goodness mercifully to be shewed upon these thy servants, that they being healed of their infirmities, may give thanks unto thee in thy holy Church, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Then the Chaplain, standing with his face towards them that come to be healed, shall say,

The Almighty Lord, who is a most strong, &c. (from the Visitation of the Sick.)

The grace of our Lord,' &c.

2. Before the time of Bishop Andrews it appears that the bishops were accustomed to compose a particular form of Service whenever a church was to be consecrated. Some steps were taken towards the preparation of a form for general use by the Convocation in 1662, but nothing was finished¹. Patrick used a form (1704) drawn up by himself², somewhat different from that of Bishop Andrews. In this service is a prayer for the Consecration of the Communion-plate :

'Most blessed God, accept, we beseech thee, of the oblation we make unto thee of these vessels, which we humbly dedicate to thy divine service at thy holy table ; and as we now wholly give them up to thy use in the ministration of the holy Communion of Christ's body and blood, so we pray thee to receive them for thine own; preserve them from being any way profaned: and being here set apart and consecrated by our office and ministry to thy service, let them always continue to be so employed, through Jesus Christ our only Lord and Saviour. Amen.'

A form was prepared in 1712, by order of Queen Anne, which is said to have been subscribed by Convocation; but it cannot have been fully settled, for in 1714 it was again brought forward.

A Form approved by the bishops.

The bishops approved a Form of Consecrating Churches, Chapels, Church-yards, or places of burial; and certain amendments were proposed by the lower house: but the completion of this also was prevented by the proceedings respecting Hoadley. Thus we have no duly authorized form for the Consecration of Churches¹.

Form of Reception of Converts.

3. In 1714, there was also prepared, A Form for admitting Converts from the Church of Rome, and such as shall renounce their errors. It was not regularly carried through both houses of Convocation: but it is occasionally used, as offering the nearest approach to an authorized form².

The Bidding Prayer.

4. Before the Reformation the prayer before sermon was called the bidding of the beads. The people were bid to pray, as the preacher successively named the subjects of their devotion. The same practice continued after the Reformation, the subjects introduced being gradually changed³. When Henry VIII. assumed the title of supreme head of the Church of England, the name of the Pope was omitted, and especial care taken that the new title of the King should be correctly stated. The Form of bidding the Common-prayers is given in the Injunctions of Edward and the Crown; and that of 1714 was a revision of the preceding service, and approved by the House of Bishops. See Lathbury, pp. 441—444.

³ Bp Hilsey gives the form ordered by Henry VIII. in his Primer, p. 329, Ed. Burton. See the various forms which have been used in Coxe's Forms of Bidding Prayer, Oxf. 1840.

VI. (1547)¹; prayer for the dead was still enjoined, until the form given in the Injunctions of Elizabeth (1559)², which directed praise for the departed. It seems that this form was chiefly regarded by those who framed the Canons of 1604. According to the ancient custom, in issuing these Ecclesiastical orders,

THE BID-DING
PRAYER.

The Form of a Prayer to be used by all Preachers before their Sermons is given in the 55th Canon (1604).

‘Before all sermons, lectures, and homilies, the preachers and ministers shall move the people to join with them in prayer in this form, or to this effect, as briefly as conveniently they may: Ye shall pray for Christ’s holy Catholic Church, that is, for the whole congregation of Christian people dispersed throughout the whole world, and especially for the Churches of England, Scotland, and Ireland: and herein I require you most especially to pray for the king’s most excellent majesty, our sovereign lord JAMES, king of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, defender of the faith, and supreme governor in these his realms, and all other his dominions and countries, over all persons, in all causes, as well ecclesiastical as temporal: ye shall also pray for our gracious queen ANNE, the noble prince HENRY, and the rest of the king and queen’s royal issue: ye shall also pray for the ministers of God’s holy word and sacraments, as well archbishops and bishops, as other pastors and curates: ye shall also pray for the king’s most honourable council, and for all the nobility and magistrates of this realm; that all and every of these, in their several callings, may serve truly and painfully to the glory of God, and the edifying and well governing of his people, remembering the account that they must make: also ye shall pray for the whole commons of this realm, that they may live in true faith and fear of God, in humble obedience to the king, and brotherly charity one to another. Finally, let us praise God for all those which are departed out of this life in the faith of Christ, and pray unto God, that we may have grace to direct our lives after their good example; that, this life ended, we may be made partakers with them of the glorious resurrection in the life everlasting; always concluding with the Lord’s Prayer.’

It appears from various sermons extant that, from the early period of the Reformation downwards until the year 1662, no exact rule was observed as to the position of the prayer: it was

used either before, or after, or more commonly in, the sermon¹. Strictly to comply with the canon requires that the subjects which are there specified should be mentioned briefly, whether in the bidding or precatory form, always concluding with the Lord's Prayer. The ordinary practice of using a Collect with the Lord's Prayer² is now sanctioned by custom: and inasmuch as the sermon, except on rare occasions³, is preceded by the Common Prayers, in which the specified subjects of petition have been introduced, the object of the canon is sufficiently answered. The use, however, of an extempore prayer, unless it be modelled exactly after the form in the canon, is quite unauthorized⁴.

5. The use of metrical hymns began in the Churches of the East⁵, and was brought into the West by Ambrose, Bishop of Milan (374), who composed hymns in Latin to the glory of the holy Trinity for the people to sing in church to preserve them from the Arian heresy⁶. Hilary also composed a book of hymns;

⁴ In the Convocation of 1661 a committee of the lower house was appointed to compile a form of prayer to be used before sermon; but nothing was concluded. Lathbury, p. 212, note. In the time of George I. some clergy incurred the charge of disaffection for using the bidding prayer, as if they would only call upon the people to pray for the king. Ibid. p. 211, note.

The singing of these hymns was intended to relieve the people in their nocturnal prayers and watches in the time of the Arian persecution ('ne populus mœroris tædio contabesceret,' August. ubi sup.), and to fix in their memories the phraseology of the orthodox faith: Ambros. cont. Auentium de Basilicis tradendis, § 34, 'Hymnorum quoque mœrorum carminibus deceptum populum ferunt. Plane nec hoc abnuo. Grande carmen istud est, quo nihil potentius. Quid enim potentius quam confessio Trinitatis, quæ and Mamertus, or Mamerus, Bishop of Vienne in France, collected the psalms and hymns and lessons, proper for the festivals, which were used in his Church, and composed some hymns¹.

Cranmer appears to have attempted to translate some of the fine old hymns from the Breviary, at the same time that he was putting forth the Litany in English (1544). In a letter which has been referred to², written to Henry VIII. on the 7th of October in that year, he speaks of the suitable musical notation for that, as also for other parts of the service: 'in mine opinion, the song that shall be made thereunto would not be full of notes, but as near as may be for every syllable a note³; so that it may be sung distinctly and devoutly, as be in the Matins and Evensong, Venite, the Hymns, Te Deum, Benedictus, Magnificat, Nunc dimittis, and all the Psalms and Versicles; and in the Mass, Gloria in excelsis, Gloria Patri, the Creed, the Preface, the Pater noster, and some of the Sanctus and Agnus. As concerning the Salve festa dies, the Latin note, as I think, is sober and distinct enough; wherefore I have travailed to make the verses in English, and have put the Latin note unto the same. Nevertheless they that be cunning in singing can make a much more solemn note thereto. I made them only for a proof, to see how English would do in song.'

In Henry's Primer, of the following year (1545), we find English versions of seven hymns, one for each Service, according to the old division of the seven hours of prayer; but in Edward's reformed Primer the Hymns are omitted. They were entirely discarded from the reformed Prayer-Book, with the single exception of the Hymn, 'Come, Holy Ghost, eternal God, &c.,' which was inserted in the Ordinal (1549),—a position which it still retains. We have thus lost the hymns which had been sung for many centuries, suited to the times of day and to the Festivals, although these formed the portions of the old service which admitted of the most easy adaptation to the genius of the reformers' music. And this is the more remarkable, since Luther had versified many of the Hymns, together with some of the Psalms, the Lord's Prayer, many parts of his Liturgy, and even his Catechism, and the Augsburg Confession. The earlier opponents of Romanism between the 13th and 15th centuries, the Waldenses, Lollards, and Bohemian brethren, also sung hymns¹.

Versions of the hymns, however, did not find favour with the English or Swiss reformers in the 16th century. The substitute for them was a metrical version of the Psalms. This was first attempted by Clement Marot, a member of the Sorbonne at Paris, and groom of the bedchamber to Francis I. (circ. 1540). His first publication consisted of thirty psalms, to which he afterwards added twenty more. The Psalter was completed by Beza, and published at Strasburg in 1545, and adopted by Calvin (1553), with a number of simple melodies adapted to the psalms by an otherwise unknown musician, Guillaume Franc, who must be regarded as the founder of modern psalmody.

Several of the Psalms were translated into English metre during the latter part of the reign of Henry VIII. by Sir Thomas Wyatt, and printed in 1549. This version, however, is lost². Our 'Old Version' of the Psalms originated with Sternhold, who was groom of the robes to Henry VIII. and Edward VI. At the time of the revision of the Prayer-Book³ (1551—2) he had versified thirty-seven psalms, which he set to music and sung to his

³ It has been conjectured that the custom was gaining ground of singing metrical compositions, and for this reason the Introit was omitted in Edward's second Prayer-Book. Shepherd, Introd. p. l. Sir John Hawkins (Hist. of Music, III. p. 518), says that Sternhold's Psalms were first printed in 1549; and a clause (Sect. VII.) in Edward's first Act of Uniformity has been supposed to contain the authority for their use, providing 'that it shall be lawful for all men, as well in churches, chapels, oratories, or other places, to use openly any psalm or prayer taken out of the Bible at any due time, not letting or omitting thereby the Service, or any part thereof, mentioned in the said book.'

organ¹, to the great delight of the young King. He continued the work until he had completed fifty-one psalms, which were published after his death, in 1553². The Psalter was completed by Hopkins and others, and published in 1562, with about forty tunes adapted to the various metres used in the work³. The title-pages of the early metrical psalters state that they were 'set forth and allowed to be sung in all churches of all the people together, before and after Morning and Evening Prayer, and also before and after Sermons; and moreover in private houses, for their godly solace and comfort⁴.' The allowance was a permission granted in the Injunctions of Elizabeth (1559), 'that in the beginning, or in the end of Common Prayers, either at morning or evening, there may be sung an hymn, or such like song to the praise of Almighty God, in the best sort of melody and music that may be conveniently devised, having respect that the sentence of the hymn may be understood and perceived⁵.' These hymns were metrical versions of the Canticles used in the Morning and Evening Prayer, the Lord's Prayer, the Ten Commandments⁶, &c. The Puritans attempted to introduce such versions instead of the Canticles, read or chanted in the service⁷; and the Committee upon Reform of the Prayer-Book, in 1641, were prepared to sanction their irregularity¹. It is clear that the royal permission was not regarded as an authority for the use of anything that was not specified in the Book of Common Prayer; although it would relieve from the penalties of the Act of Uniformity those who sung metrical psalms, or hymns, or anthems, in addition to the prescribed Services. The royal licence gives the same liberty at the present time. The 'New Version,' intended to remedy the ruggedness of metre of the old versifiers, was the joint production of two Irishmen, in the reign of William and Mary, Dr Nicholas Brady, chaplain to their Majesties, and Nahum Tate, or Teat, the poet-laureat. This was licensed by King William in 1696.

CHAPTER I.

The Order for Daily Morning and Evening Prayer.

SECT. I. The Offices of Matins and Evensong from the Sarum Breviary.

OUR Order of daily prayer is chiefly formed from the corresponding Offices of the Sarum Breviary; the Morning Prayer, from those of Matins, Lauds, and Prime; and the Evening Prayer, from those of Vespers and Compline. Previously to the Reformation these Offices had been so arranged that with the nominal distinction of the ancient seven hours of prayer, the actual public worship consisted of the two services, Morning and Afternoon, which were retained in the present Service-Book, the High Mass forming a third or principal service towards midday. To shew in the most convenient way the origin of this part of our Book of Common Prayer, the Morning and Evening Offices for the First Sunday in Advent are given as examples of the Service used in the Church of England before the Reformation.

³ The following is the Latin version of the Lord's Prayer in the Vulgate translation of Matt. vi. 9—13:—'Pater noster, qui es in cœlis, sanctificetur nomen tuum. adveniat regnum tuum. fiat voluntas tua, sicut in cœlo, et in terra. panem nostrum supersubstantialem [quotidianum, Brev. Rom.] da nobis hodie. Et dimitte nobis debita nostra, sicut et nos dimittimus debitoribus nostris. Et ne nos inducas in tentationem; sed libera nos a malo. Amen.' The prayer has always been used in this form in the Roman church, and said in a subdued tone as far as the words 'Et ne nos inducas in tentationem,' in saying which the priest raises his voice, to prepare the people to answer, 'Sed libera nos a malo. Amen.'

¹ The History was a peculiar term for the Anthem, or Responsory sung after the first Lection during the period in which the Lections were chiefly taken from the Historical Books. These Histories began on the first Sunday after Trinity, which was commonly called in the Breviary Deus omnium, from the first words of this Responsory. Brev. Sar. Dom. i. post Trin. fol. xiv. In the same way the first Sunday after the Octave of Epiphany was called Domine ne in ira. Ibid. fol. 1. See Maskell, Mon. Rit. i. p. xxiii. A remnant of this mode of naming the ecclesiastical seasons is retained in our Calendar: the words O Sapientia, placed opposite to Dec. 16th, are the first words of the antiphon which was sung at Vespers before Magnificat from that day until Christmas Eve. Brev. Sar. fol. xviii.

SECT. II. General Introductory Rubrics.

The Order for Morning and Evening Prayer daily to be said and used throughout the year.

These two rubrics were placed as general directions for the whole public service, in 1552. They give rise to many questions, about which there has always been a difference of opinion and of practice.

Daily Service.

(1) Are the clergy bound to say the daily service? In 1549 the direction was limited to those who ministered in any church: but in 1552 the Common Prayer was directly substituted for the Breviary, by the order that 'all priests and deacons should be bound to say daily the Morning and Evening Prayer, either privately or openly, except they were letted by preaching, studying of divinity, or by some other urgent cause;' and provision continued to be made for the public service by the further order that 'Curates being at home, and not being otherwise reasonably letted, should say the same in their parish-church or chapel.' And this is our present order for the continual maintenance of the public daily prayer by curates, 'being at home, and not otherwise reasonably hindered;' and for the private saying of the same prayers by all priests and deacons who have not joined a public congregation, and are not hindered by 'sickness, or some other urgent cause.'

Litany days.

Directions concerning the Litany and a part of the Communion Service were also given in 1549, that the Litany should be said or sung upon Wednesdays and Fridays, and after the Litany the Communion Service should be begun (though there were none to communicate with the priest,) and read until after the offertory, concluding with a collect and the blessing. And the same part of the Communion Service was directed to be used on 'all other days whensoever the people be customably assembled to pray in the church, and none disposed to communicate.' The only change in this respect made in 1552 was the omission of the Communion Service except on holydays.

(2) In what part of the church should the Morning and Evening Prayer be said? To settle this question was the original intention of the first of these rubrics. In 1549, the simple direction was given, 'The priest being in the quire shall begin with a loud voice. . . .' But great diversity arose in the manner of ministration, the more ardent reformers being anxious to change every custom of the mediæval service: hence not only did some lay aside the vestments worn by the priest, but they left the accustomed place of reading the prayers. And this was not treated as an unimportant matter; for we find Bucer calling it *antichristian*¹ to say service in the choir; and opinions of the same class were constantly gaining ground throughout the reign of Edward VI. Accordingly in the new Prayer-Book of 1552, this portion of the old preface was placed as a general introductory rubric, with the title prefixed, 'The Order where Morning and Evening Prayer shall be used and said:' and the first rubric directed it to be 'used in such place of the church, chapel or chancel, and the minister shall so turn him, as the people may best hear. And if there be any controversy therein, the matter shall be referred to the ordinary. . . .' In 1559, this was altered to 'the accustomed place . . . except it shall be otherwise determined by the ordinary.' The effect of the altered rubric was a permission to retain the customs of 1549, since on Elizabeth's accession the old usages were in force, and the accustomed place of service was the chancel;

Prayers to be said in the accustomed place of the Church, Chapel, or Chancel.

such therefore was to continue, unless the ordinary should appoint otherwise¹ for the better accommodation of the people. Some bishops used the authority which was thus given to them, and caused a seat to be made in the body of great churches, where the minister might sit, or stand, and say the whole of the divine service; or in smaller churches a convenient seat outside the chancel-door². This in turn became the general custom: and the Canons (1604) direct a convenient seat to be made for the minister to read service in, 'in such place of every church as the bishop of the diocese, or ecclesiastical ordinary of the place, shall think meet for the largeness or straitness of the same, so as the people may be most edified³.' The canon thus fixes the meaning of the rubric, which was retained at the last revision (1662), as a sufficient guide to the minister, all mention of Puritan innovations being omitted, and the final direction being left in the hands of the bishop of the diocese.

Vestments.

(3) What should be the dress of the minister? At the end of the Book of 1549 was placed the chapter, now forming a part of the Introduction, 'Of Ceremonies,' with certain notes for the more plain explication and decent ministration of things contained in this book. The ornaments of the ministers are here mentioned, which are that some said service in the chancel, others in the body of the church, some in a seat made in the church, some in the pulpit, with their faces to the people. Strype, Parker, p. 152.

referred to in our present rubric, as sanctioned by Parliament in the second year of Edward VI. 'In the saying or singing of Matins and Evensong, Baptizing and Burying, the minister in parish-churches, and chapels annexed to the same, shall use a surplice. And in all cathedral churches and colleges, the archdeacons, deans, provosts, masters, prebendaries, and fellows, being graduates, may use in the quire, beside their surplices, such hood as pertaineth to their several degrees, which they have taken in any university within this realm. But in all other places, every minister shall be at liberty to use any surplice or no. It is also seemly that graduates when they do preach, shall use such hoods as pertaineth to their several degrees. And whensoever the bishop shall celebrate the holy communion in the church, or execute any other public ministration, he shall have upon him, beside his rochette¹, a surplice or albe², and a cope³ or vestment⁴, and also his

for Bishops,

¹ The word rochette cannot perhaps be traced further back than the thirteenth century. The chief difference between this garment and the surplice formerly was, that its sleeves were narrower. In the time of Henry VIII. and Edward VI. the bishops wore a scarlet chimere over the rochette, which in the time of Elizabeth was changed for the black satin chimere used at present. Palmer, Orig. Lit. II. p. 318.

³ The cope was an ancient garment under the names capa, cappa, pallium, pluviale, &c. Being intended for use in the open air, it had a cowl, and in process of time was entirely open in front. It was used in processions or litanies, and on solemn occasions in morning and evening prayers; by the bishop except in celebrating the Eucharist, ordination, and other occasions, when he used the vestment; and by priests, if they did not use the vestment, at the Eucharist. The Injunctions of Elizabeth (1564) directed the principal minister in collegiate churches to use a cope at Communion with gospeller and epistler agreeably: and this direction was renewed in the canons (1604). Ibid. p. 312.

⁴ The vestment, or chasuble, called in the western churches casula, planeta, pcenula, amphibalum, &c., and in the eastern, φανώλειον or φενώλιον, has been used in the Christian Church from a period of remote antiquity. It was a gar-pastoral staff in his hand, or else borne or holden by his chaplain.' Also the officiating priest at communion was instructed¹ to wear 'a white albe plain, with a vestment or cope,' and the assistant priests or deacons, 'albes with tunicles².'

In the Second Book of Edward VI. these ornaments were reduced to the smallest possible amount: it was then ordered³, 'that the minister at the time of the Communion, and at all other times in his ministration, shall use neither alb, vestment, nor cope: but being archbishop, or bishop, he shall have and wear a rochet: and being a priest or deacon, he shall have and wear a surplice only.'

The rubric in Elizabeth's Prayer-Book did not specify the vestments of the clergy, but referred to her Act of Uniformity which was prefixed to the Book, and which re-appointed the ornaments of the second year of Edward, until other order should be taken by the Queen. Owing to the prevalence of great irregularities it was necessary to publish this further order, which was done in the 'Advertisements' of 1564. These Articles carefully specified ment reaching from the neck nearly to the feet, with only an aperture for the head. The Latins afterwards divided it at the sides for convenience; (but the small, open-sided chasuble was not used in England; Rock, Church of our Fathers, I. p. 323). It was much ornamented, and of various colours. This vestment, or a cope, was appointed by the first English ritual to be worn by bishops in all public ministrations, and by priests in celebrating the Eucharist. Palmer, p. 309.

² The tunicle, tunica, tunicella, dalmatica, originally had no sleeves, and was often called colobium. It is said that wide sleeves were added in the West about the fourth century; and the garment was then called dalmatic, and was the deacon's vestment when assisting at the Holy Communion; while that worn by subdeacons—called by the Anglo-Saxons 'roc,' and tunicle generally after the 13th century—was of the same form, but smaller and less ornamented. Palmer, p. 314; Rock, ib. p. 383.

³ Second general rubric before Morning Prayer (1552).

the public and private 'apparel of persons ecclesiastical.' The vestments for the public ministration in collegiate churches at Communion were copes, and at all other prayers or sermons surplices with hoods: and for parish-priests in saying prayers, or ministering the sacraments, or other rites of the church, 'a comely surplice with sleeves, to be provided at the charges of the parish¹.' The canons (1604) direct surplices to be worn in college-chapels on Sundays, holydays, and their eves, and hoods by graduates: copes to be worn at the ministration of the holy communion in cathedral and collegiate churches, and surplices and hoods at other times; and a surplice by every minister in parish-churches².

(4) What are the legal ornaments of the church? No direction was given upon this subject in Edward's First Prayer-Book, or in the Act of Uniformity which sanctioned it: but the publication of the Book was immediately followed by Injunctions, condemning sundry popish ceremonies, and among them forbidding to set 'any light upon the Lord's board at any time³.' This was especially mentioned, since the Injunctions of 1547 had forbidden candles before pictures or images, but allowed 'only two lights upon the high altar, before the sacrament, for the signification that Christ is the very true light of the world⁴.' Although these Injunctions (1549) have not the authority of Parliament, yet they were undoubtedly issued with the intention of promoting that uniformity in all parts of public worship which had been enjoined by statute, and were not signed by the Queen, and they were only enforced by the bishops on their own canonical authority. In practice, however, they have been uniformly treated as having the full authority of 'Injunctions,' and are recognized in the canons of 1604 (can. xxiv.).

under the large notions of the royal supremacy which then prevailed. They may fairly be considered as affording evidence of the contemporary practice, and of the intention of the authors of the Prayer-Book in matters of rites and ceremonies. Persons who yield the amount of authority to these, which is readily given to other Injunctions, consider that candles upon the Communion Table are ornaments which were forbidden in the second year of Edward VI., and therefore are not authorized by our present rubric¹. On the other hand, we may conclude from the terms of Elizabeth's Act of Uniformity, and of the rubric of her Prayer-Book, that it was her intention to distinguish between the customs of 1549, represented by Edward's Injunctions of that year, and those which not being mentioned and forbidden in the statute might be considered as authorized by the Parliament in 1549. And she certainly gave this practical interpretation to her own law, since in the royal chapel 'the cross stood on the altar, and two candlesticks, and two tapers burning².' But it must be also observed that such a practice was not acceptable to the bishops; and their opinion was plainly expressed to the effect that the law did not mean to enforce a general return to the use of all the ornaments which had been found in churches in the second year of Edward and previously to the Injunctions, but only to sanction those ornaments which the Queen chose to retain³. And the Injunctions issued in 1559 made no mention of such ornaments, but, with the removal of monuments of superstition from the shrines, and walls, and windows of the churches, directed the holy table to be decently made and set where the altar stood, 'and there commonly Chancels.

Another intention of these rubrics was to preserve the chancels from the violence of a class of reformers, who were not satisfied with destroying rood-lofts, but took away the chancel-skreens and stalls, under the pretence of providing that the people might hear the prayers. This purpose was answered by permitting the prayers to be said in whatever part of the church was most convenient; and it was then ordered that the chancels should 'remain as they had done in times past³'—a direction which still forms a part of our rubric.

The Canons (1604) distinctly specify the 'things appertaining to churches:' viz. a great Bible, the Book of Common-Prayer, and the books of Homilies; a font of stone; a decent communion-table, to be covered, in time of divine service, with a carpet of silk or other decent stuff, and with a fair linen cloth at the time of the ministration; the Ten Commandments to be set up on the east end of every church; chosen sentences to be written upon the walls; a convenient seat for the minister to read service in; a pulpit; a chest for alms; a surplice with sleeves. It is observable that the only vessel for the communion mentioned in the Canons is 'a clean and sweet

SECT. III. Morning Prayer.

The Sentences, Exhortation, Confession, and Absolution.

This commencement of our service was prefixed in 1552 to the older formularies. Reference has been made for its supposed original to the forms of worship used by the French and German congregations in England, and severally drawn up by Valerandus Pollanus and John à Lasco, in 1551.² But if the idea of placing a confession at the opening of the service was taken from the book of Pollanus, the peculiar doctrines of the French reformers were carefully avoided³. It has been observed that the Absolution is not in any way due to Pollanus, but possibly to à Lasco, if some similar expressions in his Absolution⁴ must be taken to denote the source of our own. But this addition to the old service may be explained without any distinct reference to these foreign forms. The injunctions (1547) directed parish-priests 'to learn, and have always in a readiness such comfortable places and sentences of scripture as do set forth the mercy, benefits, and goodness of Almighty God towards all penitent and believing persons⁵.' And as the custom of theory, such as the plea for mercy in our Confession, by reason of the promises of God declared unto mankind by Jesus Christ, and the declaration of the Divine mercy in the Absolution,—who desireth not the death of a sinner. See Laurence, Bampt. Lect. notes, pp. 268 sq. and 374.

the period was not to leave much to the uncertain care or discretion of private individuals, homilies were provided to be read by those priests who were not allowed to preach; and addresses to the people were put into the Prayer-Book, wherever the priest was required to exhort them in the course of the Occasional Services. This instruction, therefore, as to the necessity of a daily confession of sins to God, and of a comfortable trust in God's promises of pardon to the penitent through faith in Jesus Christ,—the great subject of the teaching of the reformers,—was naturally placed at the beginning of the daily prayers, and expressed in words suited to bring religion, as a personal matter of continual obligation, to each man's conscience: which will account for the Sentences and Exhortation. Further, in preparing the English Prayers in 1549, the Mediæval Confession and Absolution¹ were entirely omitted, and nothing was put into their place. Hence it became necessary, in revising the Services in 1552, that this defect should be supplied; and the present forms were accordingly composed and brought into a much more suitable position, thereby agreeing with similar arrangements in the Services of other reformed congregations².

Of the Sentences, some contain support for the fearful, and are designed to prevent that excessive dread of God's wrath which hinders the exercise of devotion (3, 10, 7); some are designed to strengthen faith in God's mercy, and thus to comfort the despairing (4, 6, 9); some to inform the ignorant, who think either that they have no sin, or that a slight repentance will procure pardon

² 'It is agreeable to godliness that, as often as we appear before the Lord, before all things we should acknowledge and confess our sins, and pray for remission of the same.' Hermann's Consultation, fol. 213. These words perhaps contain the germ of the appropriate opening of our service.

TENCES,

(11, 1); some to rouse the negligent to the duty of immediate repentance (2, 8); and one to reprove the merely formal worshipper (5)¹.

The Exhortation.

The Exhortation connects the Sentences with the Confession: it derives the necessity for this duty from the Word of God, shews that the present time is most suitable, teaches the manner in which it should be performed, and invites to its performance. Its expressions are adapted to instruct the ignorant, to admonish the negligent, to support the fearful, to comfort the doubtful, to caution the formal, and to check the presumptuous;—tempers which are found in every mixed congregation, and which ought to be prepared for the solemn work of confession of sin.

The Confession.

The form provided for this purpose is called a ‘General Confession.’ It is general, because all are required to make it; and it is expressed in general terms, referring to the failings of human life, which are common to all men, and which may and ought to be confessed by all, without descending to particular sins, of which perhaps some of the congregation may not be guilty. It consists of two parts, besides the Introduction, or Address to God: the first, a confession of our sins of omission and commission; and the second, a supplication of pardon for the past and grace for the future.

The manner in which the Confession should be said is distinctly marked: it is to be said of the whole congregation after the minister: i. e. the minister is to say each clause, and then the people to repeat that clause after him. The manner of saying the Lord’s Prayer is different; that is to be said ‘with him,’ the people repeating the clauses simultaneously with the minister.

¹ The American Prayer-Book has also, Habac. ii. 20; Mal. i. 11; and Ps. xix. 14, 15.

The Absolution, like the Confession, differs entirely from all the forms bearing the same name in the mediæval services. In its terms it is opposed to widely differing errors, one being a groundless trust in sacerdotal power which pervaded the older forms, the second a narrow predestinarian view of divine grace and mercy which was gaining ground within the circle of Calvin's influence. Until the Hampton Court Conference it was entitled¹, The Absolution, to be pronounced by the minister alone: the explanatory words, or Remission of Sins, being added at the revision after that Conference, for the satisfaction of some who thought that the word absolution was only popish. At the last revision, the word priest was substituted for minister;—an alteration which shews the intention of the Church to be, that deacons may read the prayers², but that one in priest's orders only may pronounce the Absolution. When a deacon therefore is officiating, and a priest is also present, and in his place in the choir, or according to the present custom, at the communion table, the most proper course appears to be, that the priest should stand and pronounce the Absolution, the deacon kneeling in the desk,—he being, in fact, assistant to the priest, and ready to proceed in leading the people to the next petitions. But when no priest is present, the deacon

The Absolution.

*Not to be said
by Deacons.*

¹ In the American Prayer-Book it is entitled 'The Declaration of Absolution, or Remission of Sins;' and the Absolution in the Communion Service is given as a second form.

² The present practice arose in Elizabeth's time (1559), from the necessity of supplying some service to churches which had no parish-priest, when not only deacons but even some laymen were licensed by the bishops to read the service. See the Articles, or promises subscribed by Readers, Strype, Annals, i. 151; Cardwell, Doc. Ann. i. p. 302, note. Lay-readers were gradually discontinued, but the public ministrations of deacons became a general custom, and was recognized by the Act of Uniformity of Charles II., which ordered (§ 22) that, when any Sermon or Lecture is to be preached, the Common Prayers and Service appointed for that time of day shall be openly read by some Priest or Deacon.

THE SEN-TENCES,
&c. (1552)

should continue kneeling after the Confession and proceed to the Lord's Prayer.

The Absolution consists of two parts: first, a general declaration of the mercy of God to returning sinners, and an assurance of His pardon, on condition of our true faith and hearty repentance; and secondly, an admonition to ask the help of His Holy Spirit, to enable us to perform those conditions, that the pardon pronounced in His church on earth may be effectual to our eternal salvation.

Amen.

It will be observed that the word Amen is printed at the end of the Confession; but that the first rubric, directing it to be said by the people at the end of all prayers, occurs after the Absolution: also that the word is printed in a different type at the end of the prayers. In these, the minister says the prayer, or the collect, and then stops, while the people answer their Amen. In other parts, as the Confession, Lord's Prayer, Creeds, which are repeated by the minister and people, there is no such difference; the minister goes on, and says Amen himself, thus directing the people to do the same. In the antiphonal portions, as at the end of the Gloria Patri, the word is printed in the same character, thus directing it to be said by the same persons who have said the 'Answer' of the Gloria, it being a part of that 'Answer.'

We come now to the point at which the old Latin service was transferred to the English Prayer-Book. In 1549 as little alteration was made in the form of the service, as was consistent with reformation of doctrine. Hence the Matins and Evensong continued to commence with the Lord's Prayer: the Ave Maria was omitted; and the priest was directed to say the Lord's Prayer with a loud voice, instead of repeating it inaudibly. The custom of the Early Church was to keep this prayer from the knowledge of all who were not prepared for baptism, and hence, as being 'The Prayer of the Faithful,' it was only used publicly in the Communion Service, after the catechumens and others, who for various causes were non-communicants, had been dismissed¹. The first allusion to its use at the beginning of the service of the Hours is in the Cistercian Consuetudinary (13th century); and there, as in the Sarum Breviary, it is preparatory to the office². After it was repeated, the priest began the service with the versicles.

The direction that the people should join in repeating the Lord's Prayer in this place was added in 1661. Previously it had been said by the minister alone on its first occurrence in the Morning and Evening Prayer, and in the Communion Service; and since 1552, by the minister, clerks, and people, when it occurred afterwards. This was contrary to the Roman use, but had the authority of the old Greek³ and Gallican⁴ churches. In 1661, a further change was made, following the Greek, in opposition to the Roman use, by the addition of the Doxology⁵ at the conclusion of the prayer in this and in some other parts of the services. The English Church thus recognizes the received text of Matt. vi. 13, as well as that of Luke xi. 4: and there is special reason for its insertion in this place where the Lord's Prayer immediately follows the Absolution, and the office is one of praise.

The Versicles.

The Versicles have certainly been used since the 6th century. The first is taken from Ps. li. 15; and the second versicle with its response appears in the Anglo-Saxon Offices¹; it is the first verse of the 70th Psalm, which probably was repeated entirely, and concluded with *Gloria Patri*². In 1549, this portion was taken from the Sarum Breviary³, and then followed, 'Praise ye the Lord. *And from Easter to Trinity Sunday, Alleluia*⁴.'

² The ancient form, used in the Greek church, is Δόξα Πατρι, και Τιῶ, και Ἁγίῳ Πνεύματι, νῦν, και δεῖ, και εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας. Liturg. Jacob. ap. Assemani Cod. Lit. v. 63. Arius altered the form of the Doxology to suit his heretical opinions,—δοξάζειν τοὺς ἐξηπατημένους διδάξας τὸν Πατέρα διὰ τοῦ Τιοῦ ἐν Ἁγίῳ Πνεύματι. Theod. Fab. Hæret. iv. c. i. Conc. Vasense III. al. II. 529) can. v.: Mansi, VIII. 727. Great importance was attached to the correct form of this Doxology, after the rise of the Arian heresy. Basil had used different forms, and wrote his treatise 'Concerning the Holy Ghost' to explain and justify himself. The exact form of words used in baptism was henceforth taken as the orthodox form of the Doxology. Basil. Epist. cxxv. (al. 78) p. 216 D. δεῖ γὰρ ἡμᾶς βαπτίζεσθαι μὲν, ὡς παρελάβομεν πιστεύειν δὲ, ὡς βαπτιζόμεθα: δοξάζειν δὲ, ὡς πεπιστεύκαμεν, Πατέρα και Τιοῦ και Ἁγίῳ Πνεύμα. And from the same idea of maintaining the true doctrine, probably arose the custom with the great preachers among the Fathers, continued to the present time, of concluding sermons with a form of doxology to the holy Trinity. See Hooker, Ecccl. Pol. v. 42. §§ 7 sqq.; Bingham, Antiq. xiv. 2. 1.

The answer, 'The Lord's name be praised,' was first inserted in the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637), and was placed in the English Book at the last revision in 1661.

THE PSALMS.

The 95th psalm has been sung in the western churches from a very remote period before the Psalms of the first nocturn¹. It has been generally termed the Invitatory Psalm. The Invitatory was an anthem sung before it, and repeated, in part, or entirely, after each verse². Therefore the rubric (1549) directed it to be 'said or sung without any Invitatory³.'

Venite exultemus.

The Invitatory.

The Psalms follow according to the antient custom; the change from the mediæval services being that the whole Psalter is taken in order every month. With this object the number of psalms for each service was reduced to about three. There was nothing unusual in making a new arrangement of the daily psalms. Every church, and every fraternity of monks, and almost every monastery, had its own rules in this respect⁴. In the English Arrangement of the Psalter.

³ In the rubric preceding Venite there is an instance of confusion between the ecclesiastical terms, reading, saying, and singing, which is found in other rubrics, which belong partly to the earlier Prayer-Books, and partly to the last revision. At that time the phrase 'to read prayers' was coming into use—probably to distinguish the settled prayers of the Church from the extemporaneous effusions of dissenters. See the rubric before the Prayer for the King's Majesty (Morning Prayer) which belongs to this period; 'Then these five Prayers following are to be read here, except when the Litany is read, &c.' See also the rubric before the Apostles' Creed; 'Then shall be sung or said...except only such days as the Creed of St Athanasius is appointed to be read.' the latter part of this rubric was added in 1661.

⁴ Cassian, Institut. Cenobii. ii. 2. Some churches repeated twenty or thirty psalms, some more, and some only eighteen; while in some monasteries in Egypt they read fifty, in others sixty psalms. Ibid. c. 5. By the rule of Columbanus (cap. 7) the whole Psalter was at some seasons of the year sung in two nights. In Spain, three psalms were sung

PSALMS.

Church twelve psalms had been sung in the nocturns of matins.

The custom of singing the Psalms is undoubtedly primitive¹, and was continued by the early Christians from the Temple-service, which consisted chiefly of forms taken out of the Book of Psalms²; and the prayers of the modern Jews are also chiefly gathered from the same source.

In the early Christian Church the Psalms were so often repeated that the poorest Christians could say them by heart, and used to sing them at their labours, in their houses, and in the fields. It is also certain that in the 4th century, if not earlier, they were chanted antiphonally³.

Version of the Psalter.

The version used in the Psalter is the old translation of the Bible—that of Tyndale and Coverdale (1535) and Rogers (1537)—which was revised by Cranmer (1539), and published in a large volume, and placed in the churches in the nocturnal office. Quignon also rearranged the Psalter in his reformed Breviary, giving three psalms to matins, and two or three to the offices of the other hours, so that the Psalter should be read through every week (Psalterium dispositum in dies et horas ordine; quo totum singulis hebdomadibus dicitur per totum annum. Breviar. fol. 1. ed. 1537). with the royal sanction. The other portions of Scripture in the Prayer-Book were taken from the last translation at the revision in 1661. But the old Psalter was not altered: the choirs were accustomed to it; and its language was considered to be more smooth and fit for song.

The repetition of the Doxology 'at the end of every psalm throughout the year' was ordered in 1549. In the Breviary it had been appointed after some psalms, or after a series of psalms. Its use signifies our belief that the same God was worshipped by the Jewish church as by us, only the mystery of the holy Trinity is more clearly revealed to us; and we by this addition turn the Jewish psalms into Christian hymns¹.

The Doxology repeated at the end of every psalm.

The position which our Church gives to the reading of Scripture in the daily service commends itself to our reason. After Confession and Absolution, which may be called the preparation for worship, and psalmody, we are in a fit disposition to hear what God shall speak to us by His word. Two chapters are read, one from the Old, and one from the New Testament; showing the harmony between the Law and the Gospel, and the unity of the Church under its two dispensations; the comparative

¹ The American Prayer-Book divides the Psalter as our own; but it has also ten 'Selections of Psalms, to be used instead of the Psalms for the day, at the discretion of the Minister;' and 'Portions of Psalms to be sung or said at Morning Prayer, on certain Feasts and Fasts, instead of the Venite exultemus, when any of the foregoing Selections are to follow instead of the Psalms, as in the table.' These 'Portions' are formed of verses culled out of certain named psalms; and are invitatories for Christmas-day, Ash-Wednesday, Good-Friday, Ascension-day, and Whit-Sunday. The rubric after Venite is: 'Then shall follow a Portion of the Psalms, as they are appointed, or one of the Selections of Psalms set forth by this Church. And at the end of every Psalm, and likewise at the end of the Venite, Benedicite, Jubilate, Benedictus, Cantate Domino, Bonum est confiteri, Deus miseretur, Benedic, anima mea,—MAY be said or sung the Gloria Patri; and at the end of the whole Portion, or Selection of Psalms for the day, SHALL be said or sung the Gloria Patri, or else the Gloria in excelsis, as followeth.'

darkness of the older prophetic and typical revelation being made clear by the history of the life of Jesus Christ, and the preaching of His apostles.

That in the short extant notices of the early Church we should find traces of this custom, is nothing more than we should expect. Justin Martyr¹ says that the writings of the prophets and apostles were read in the congregation on Sunday. In the 4th century the Psalmody, which formed a large portion of the service, was ordered not to be continuous, but to be mingled with reading². In the Gallican Church, in the fifth century, the Psalms were sung between the reading of the lessons; and four lessons were read in an appointed order, from the books of Moses, the Prophets, the Gospels, and the Epistles³. After the sixth century many of the Western Churches read three, five, seven, or nine lessons⁴. In the English Church there were either three or nine lections in the nocturns of matins⁵; but these were generally very short, some consisting only of a few verses of Scripture, and some being short extracts from Expositions or Homilies of the Fathers, or Lives of the Saints. Hence, although the lessons were numerous, but little Scripture was read; and that small portion was interrupted by anthems⁶.

It was a most important change that was introduced in 1549 into this part of the public service; for not only was the quantity of Scripture increased that was actually read, but the reading was made intelligible by being continuous¹; while the appointment of two, instead of more numerous lessons, was a return to primitive custom².

For the first lessons on ordinary days the course is to begin at the beginning of the year with Genesis, and to continue the reading of the books of the Old Testament in order at the Morning and Evening Services, omitting many chapters of Ezekiel, and the books of Chronicles, and the Song of Solomon. Isaiah is not read in its order, but is reserved for the season of Advent, he being 'the Gospel prophet,' containing the clearest prophecies of Christ. The omissions leave about fifty days unprovided for, and for them lessons are appointed from the Apocryphal books. These have been read in the Western Church since the 4th century, 'for example of life and instruction of manners, but not applied to establish any doctrine³.'

Sunt autem canonicæ Scripturæ, Genesis...Salomonis libri quinque,...Daniel, Tobias, Judith, Esther, Esdræ libri duo, Machabæorum libri duo...'

for Sundays.*

The first lessons appointed for Sundays form a distinct yearly course of selected chapters from the Old Testament. These are taken from Isaiah during Advent and Epiphany: Genesis is commenced on Septuagesima Sunday, which is the first step in the preparation for Lent, and when the Sundays begin to be reckoned with reference to the coming Easter. This book, relating the original of our misery by the sin of Adam, and the judgment of God upon the world, has been read during Lent from very early times in the Christian Church¹. The selections then proceed through the Historical and Prophetic Books, the Book of Proverbs being reserved for the concluding Sundays after Trinity.

Holy-days.*

Another course is provided for Holy-days²: proper chapters are appointed, usually for the first and second lessons, which are suited to the Commemoration, either prophetic of it, or if possible relating the history of it: the lessons appointed for saints' days are mostly taken can. 47. Mansi, III. 891. See upon the subject of the Apocrypha, Horne, Introd. App. i. § 1. An expression of regret may be allowed that the reformed Calendar was not purged of these books; but opposition to a levelling Puritanism seems to have maintained them in a place where nothing but Scripture should be read. The insertion of 'Bel and the Dragon' and the 'Story of Susannah' in 1662 is inexplicable on any other principle. These Jewish legends had never before appeared in the English Calendar of Lessons. The Calendar provided for the Scottish Church (1604) only appointed chapters from the books of Wisdom and Ecclesiasticus on six saints' days. The American Church omits the Apocrypha from the Calendar of daily Lessons, but retains it in the Table of Lessons for Holy-days.

Proper Lessons for Holy-days were selected by Musæus, a presbyter of Marseilles (circ. 490); Gennadius, Illustr. Viror. Cat.: 'Musæus.... hortatu S. from the Books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes, or from the Apocryphal books of Ecclesiasticus and Wisdom.

There can be no difficulty in determining what should be read on Holy-days when they fall in the week. For the fixed festivals (e. g. Circumcision, Epiphany, &c.) no lessons are appointed in the Calendar; and therefore on those days, and likewise on the moveable festivals and fasts (such as the Passion-week, Ascension-day, &c.) reference must be made to the Table of Proper Lessons to be read on Holy-days. But when a saint's day falls on a Sunday, there has been a difference of opinion in the choice of first lessons; one system rejecting all mention of the saint's day, and another substituting the saint's day for the Sunday. The following rules have been proposed¹:—

First Lessons on concurrent festivals.

I. Sundays which take precedence of Saints' Days.

The first and fourth in Advent—the first and fifth in Lent—the Sunday next before Easter—Easter-day—the first after Easter—Whit-Sunday—Trinity-Sunday. In all other cases the saint's day takes precedence of the Sunday; but note, that if the first Sunday after Easter fall upon the Feast of St Philip and St James, the second morning lesson will be that of St Philip and St James, but no further notice must be taken of that festival. Note also, that the first Sunday after Christmas takes precedence of all festivals except the Circumcision.

II. Holy Days which take precedence of other Holy Days.

Ash-Wednesday—the whole of Passion-week—Monday and Tuesday in Easter-week, and in Whitsun-week—

Ascension-day. If Ash-Wednesday fall on the 24th of February, the first lessons will be those of St Matthias' day; and if the Monday or Tuesday before Easter fall on the 25th of March, the first lessons will be those of the Annunciation of Mary.

There can be no objection to that portion of the rule which directs that on the days mentioned no notice should be taken of a saint's day. But on all other Sundays this rule directs that everything proper to the saint's day must displace the corresponding portion of the service of that Sunday. And again, no great objection can be raised to that part of the rule which concerns the Collect, and the Epistle and Gospel. But it is not clear that the lessons of the saint's day should be read instead of those of the Sunday; since the selected chapters form a distinct and continuous course for the Sunday first lessons; and by the above rule the Scripture narrative would be broken, and it might be by the reading of an Apocryphal chapter, which has been carefully avoided in the appointment of Sunday lessons. The difficulty appears to have originated in the feeling that, owing to the disuse of week-day services, the saints would perish from the memory of the people, unless their commemorations were observed on Sunday; and also from a strict interpretation of the rubric before the Collects in the Morning and Evening Prayer,—'Then shall follow three Collects,' &c.—understanding by it that no more than three Collects may be said, or not more than one Collect for the day. But this is not the interpretation which the compilers of our Prayer-Book have put upon their own rubric; for a second Collect is added to that for the day at certain seasons, which is in fact the insertion of a memory of Advent, and Christmas, and Lent; and three Collects are appointed on Good Friday. Hence it may be argued that the mention of a saint's day, falling on a Sunday or other festival, should be made as a memory, by the insertion, or addition of the Collect of the saint's day to the regular office at Morning and Evening Prayer. Custom, however, has rather fallen into the use of only one Collect, to which no objection would be raised, if it be taken with the qualification, that the course of the Sunday first lessons is not to be broken, or at least that only canonical Scripture be read. And perhaps the most usual mode of conducting service is, to take the lessons of the Sunday, and the Collect, Epistle and Gospel of the saint's day, unless the Sunday be one of those named in the above rule.

LESSONS.

These observations apply only to the first lessons. The second lessons are always taken from the New Testament, so that with the exception of the Revelation, it is read through three times in the year. The order is only interrupted on certain holy-days which have their own proper history, which is appointed to be read.

Lessons.

It is probable that from very antient times psalms or canticles have been intermingled with the reading of Scripture in the public service: and those which we now use occupy as nearly as possible the places where they have been sung for centuries. The first of these is the hymn Te Deum laudamus. In the Breviary it is called the 'Psalm Te Deum,' or the 'Canticle of Ambrose and Augustine,' from the old legend¹, that, at the baptism of Augustine by Ambrose, it was sung alternately by the two saints, as it was composed by inspiration. Most probably, however, it was composed in the Gallican Church; but it is yet doubtful to whom the honour of the production of this noble hymn is to be given, whether to Hilary, bishop of Poitiers (355), or to Nicetius, bishop of Trèves (535)¹. It is claimed for Hilary² by the Benedictine editors of his works; and there seems to be little reason to dispute it. It has by others been assigned to Hilary of Arles (440), because the earliest extant mention of it³ is found in the Rule of Cæsarius, bishop of Arles, in the fifth century. It is there ordered to be sung every Sunday at Matins. The rubric of the Sarum Breviary appointed it daily at Matins, except in Advent, and from Septuagesima to Easter, and some other days⁴. In 1549 it was ordered to be used 'daily throughout the year, except in Lent.' The exception was omitted in the rubric of Edward's second Prayer-Book.

Comber¹ observes that this antient hymn contains three particulars : First, an act of praise offered to God by us, and by all creatures, as well in earth as in heaven ; secondly, a confession of faith ; declaring, (1) the general consent unto it, (2) the particulars of it, concerning every person in the Trinity, and more largely concerning the Son, as to His divinity, His humanity, and particularly His incarnation, His death, His present glory, and His return to judgment : thirdly, a supplication grounded upon it ; (1) for all His people, that they may be preserved here and saved hereafter ; (2) for ourselves, who daily praise Him, that we may be kept from future sin, and be pardoned for what is past, because we trust in Him.

Benedicite.

The ‘hymn,’ or ‘psalm Benedicite,’ or the ‘Song of the Three Children,’ is a part of the Greek addition to the third Chapter of Daniel. It is a paraphractical exposition of the 148th Psalm, and was used as a hymn in the later Jewish Church², and was commonly sung in the Christian Church in the fourth century³. Some writers of that age speak of it as Scripture⁴. In the old offices of the English Church, the nocturns of matins ended with Te Deum, and were immediately followed by lauds, beginning with psalms, among which this Canticle was sung¹. In 1549 it was ordered to be used during Lent instead of Te Deum. In 1552, when a psalm was added to each Canticle after the Lessons of Morning and Evening Prayer, the rubrics concerning Te Deum and Benedicite were altered, as it appears, for uniformity, and these Canticles were to be used at discretion, without being limited to particular seasons.

THE CANTICLES.

They are the only portions of the kind, appointed in the English Service-book, which are not taken out of canonical Scripture. Although Benedicite may be thought suitable to the Services, or first lessons of some particular days, (e.g. Septuagesima Sunday, and the nineteenth Sunday after Trinity), yet the general practice is always to use the Te Deum.

In the old office, there had been a short lesson, called 'Capitulum²,' read after the Psalms of Lauds. It was no more than a single verse, and was rejected both from Quignon's Breviary, and from the reformed English service; and instead of it a chapter from the New Testament was appointed to be read as a second lesson: this, with a few exceptions upon special days, is always taken from the Gospels or Acts of the Apostles in the morning, and from the Apostolical Epistles in the evening.

The second Lesson.

The 'little chapter' at lauds, in the old offices, was followed by the Canticle which is still used after the second lesson. It was called the 'psalm Benedictus,' or the 'Song of the Prophet Zacharias.' In one edition of Edward's first Prayer-Book, the rubric directing its use 'throughout the whole year,' describes it as a 'Thanks- giving for the performance of God's promises.' And as by singing Te Deum after the lesson from the Old Testament we declare that the antient promises were fulfilled in the incarnation and atonement of the Saviour, and acknowledge the glory of the eternal Trinity; so after the lesson from the histories of the New Testament, we praise God for the fulfilment of His promises, in the inspired words of the father of John the Baptist, which may almost be called one of the earliest Christian hymns.

Jubilate Deo.

It will happen, in the course of reading the daily lessons according to the Calendar, that the chapter containing this song of praise will be read in the second lesson. Therefore, at the revision of the Prayer-Book in 1552, the 100th Psalm was added in this place, to be used instead of Benedictus. It had been sung among the Psalms of Lauds in the old offices; and the only difference between its present and former position is, that it was formerly read before the lesson, and is now read after it. It is an appropriate song of praise for Creation and Providence, and has been most commonly used: but from the history of its appointment, and the words of the rubric, it is clear that Benedictus should be used, 'except when that shall happen to be read in the Chapter for the day, or for the Gospel on St John Baptist's day.' Jubilate is always ordered, together with Te Deum, on the occasion of a solemn thanksgiving.

The service at this point passes to the third division of the old matin offices, called Prime. The repetition of a Creed in the course of the ordinary public service is not a custom of the early Church. It was taught to the catechumens, and rehearsed by them¹ in the hearing of μάθημα, γραφή. Bingham, x. 3. Creeds, pp. 26, sqq.

the faithful at their baptism. This appears to have been the earliest use of the forms which are still extant of the confessions of faith of various churches or dioceses. The legend that the Apostles, before they separated from Jerusalem, compiled the Creed called by their name, each one contributing a clause¹, may be dismissed from serious history. The fact of the existence of many creeds, among the scanty records of the Ante-Nicene Church, differing in expression, though agreeing in subject and order, proves that the churches founded by the Apostles in receiving the general deposit of Christian doctrine² did not receive from them any such formula as we now understand by *the Creed*³.

early Creeds.

The confession of faith in order to baptism was at first of the simplest kind: 'I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God⁴.' But early heresies made it necessary to introduce more exact definitions. Hence we have, towards the end of the second century, a declaration by Irenæus⁵ of the faith received from the Apostles and their disciples; and also by Tertullian⁶, in the shape of an enlargement of some articles of the Creed. What is called the Apostles' Creed is the Roman or Italian Creed, and is found in the exposition of Ruffinus¹ of Aquileia. What is called the Nicene Creed is the Creed settled by the Council of Nicæa (325), and enlarged by the Council of Constantinople (381), which was the Creed adopted by the Greek Churches². What is called the Athanasian Creed³ was composed in Gaul, before the Council of Ephesus (431), perhaps by Hilary of Arles⁴ (429)⁵, or by Victricius, bishop of Rouen (401)⁶.

Public Repetition of the Nicene Creed.

The constant repetition of the Creed in the public service arose in the Eastern Church as a safeguard against the Arian heresy. This use of the Nicene Creed was first ordered by Peter, called the Fuller, bishop of Antioch (circ. 471)⁷; and the example was followed by Timothy bishop of Constantinople (511)⁸. Of the Latin Churches that of Spain first adopted this Creed and the public use of it, for the same reason that had caused its use in the East, to bring the people back to the true faith after the Arian Gothic invasion: the third Council of Toledo (589) ordered it to be sung aloud by the people before the Lord's Prayer was said⁹. was received by the Gallican Church for the same reason in the time of Charlemagne¹. Rome enjoyed the reputation of being free from Arianism, and hence retained the more ancient and simple Creed. The constant public use of the Nicene Creed was at last received into the Roman Liturgy (1014), in order to assimilate the use of Rome with that of France and Spain². In this country, the Apostles' Creed was sung in the Anglo-Saxon office of Prime³: the Greater or Nicene Creed used at Mass was probably received from the Gallican Church.

CREEDS.

The recitation of the Apostles' Creed in the service of the Hours does not contradict the above statement touching the early concealment of the Creed, and the gradual introduction of the public use of the Nicene Creed into the Mass. As used in Matins, it was said together with the Lord's Prayer, before the Lections, privately by the choir⁴, and similarly at the beginning of the prayers at Prime it was repeated, but inaudibly, the priest raising his voice at the words, 'Carnis resurrectionem,' to which the choir responded in the concluding words, 'Et vitam æternam. Amen'⁵.

The Apostles' Creed, how used in the service of the Hours.

The Creed that was sung publicly in the Matin offices was the Athanasian. This has been used since the year 800⁶, in the English Churches, and probably long before that date, for it is found in MS. Psalters of the seventh and eighth centuries. In the Sarum Breviary it is appointed to be sung daily 'at Prime,' after the Psalms, and before the Prayers¹. In the Roman Breviary it is ordered to be used on Sundays only². Quignon, in his reformed Breviary, had appointed the Athanasian Creed on Sundays, and the Apostles' Creed on week-days³.

In 1549 the Apostles' Creed was appointed to be said ordinarily in this part of the service, and the Athanasian Creed in its stead upon the six festivals of Christmas, Epiphany, Easter, Ascension, Pentecost and Trinity. In 1552 seven saints' days were added to these festivals; so that this Creed should be used at intervals of about a month throughout the year⁴.

the East:*

Both minister and people are directed to repeat the Apostles' and Nicene Creeds, because it is the profession of every person present. It is to be repeated standing, to express our resolution to hold fast the true faith. The custom, still maintained in many churches, of turning to the East while repeating the Creed, is very ancient, and originated in the practice of the Jews, who always turned their faces in the direction of Jerusalem when they prayed. For the Jews before the Captivity there was this reason for the practice, that they thus prayed towards the mercy-seat where God vouchsafed to dwell. The custom was early introduced among the ceremonies of baptism, in which it was usual to renounce the devil with their faces to the west, and then turn to the east to make their covenant with Christ: the east, or region of the rising sun, being the source of light. Hence the

⁴ The American rubric allows that 'any churches may omit the words, He descended into hell, or may, instead of them, use the words,

He went into the place of departed spirits, which are considered as words of the same meaning in the Creed;' and allows the Nicene to be used instead of the Apostles' Creed in this place; making no mention of the Athanasian Creed.

turning towards the east became associated with the recitation of the Creed¹. As used by Christians now it is an apt and expressive symbol of the oneness of their faith.

THE CREEDS.

Bowing at the name of Jesus, in repeating the Creed, is a remnant of an old custom of bowing whenever that name was pronounced, according to St Paul's words (Phil. ii. 10). The 18th Canon (1604) gives the meaning of this custom:—'When in time of divine service the Lord Jesus shall be mentioned, due and lowly reverence shall be done by all persons present, as it hath been accustomed, testifying by these outward ceremonies and gestures their inward humility, Christian resolution, and due acknowledgement that the Lord Jesus Christ, the true and eternal Son of God, is the only Saviour of the world, in whom alone all the mercies, graces, and promises of God to mankind for this life, and the life to come, are fully and wholly comprised².

Quam nisi quisque integram, inviolatamque servaverit : absque dubio in æternum peribit.

Fides autem catholica hæc est, ut unum Deum in Trinitate : et Trinitatem in Unitate veneremur.

Neque confundentes personas : neque substantiam separantes.

Alia est enim persona Patris, alia Filii, alia Spiritus Sancti.

Qualis Pater, talis Filius : talis Spiritus Sanctus.

Increatus Pater, increatus Filius : increatus Spiritus Sanctus.

Immensus Pater, immensus Filius : immensus Spiritus Sanctus.

Æternus Pater, æternus Filius : æternus Spiritus Sanctus.

Et tamen non tres æterni : sed unus æternus.

Sicut non tres increati, nec tres immensi : sed unus increatus, et unus immensus.

Similiter omnipotens Pater, omnipotens Filius : omnipotens Spiritus Sanctus.

Ita Deus Pater, Deus Filius : Deus Spiritus Sanctus.

Ita Dominus Pater, Dominus Filius : Dominus Spiritus Sanctus.

Et tamen non tres Domini : sed unus est Dominus.

Ita tres Deos aut Dominos dicere, catholica religione prohibemur.

Pater a nullo est factus : nec creatus, nec genitus.

Filius a Patre solo est : non factus, nec creatus, sed genitus.

Church in the middle of the fifth century. Harvey, Hist. of the Creeds, pp. 452 sqq: Hardwick, Middle Age, p. 61, n. 4.

¹ Brev. Sar. Psalt. fol. xi. See parallel passages from the writings of Augustine; Waterland, Critical Hist. ch. ix. Another title of this Creed was 'Psalmus Quicumque Vult:' hence the custom of reciting it antiphonally.

Spiritus Sanctus a Patre et Filio : non factus, nec creatus, nec genitus, sed procedens.

Unus ergo Pater, non tres Patres ; unus Filius, non tres Filii : unus Spiritus Sanctus, non tres Spiritus Sancti.

Et in hac Trinitate nihil prius aut posterius : nihil majus aut minus.

Sed totæ tres personæ coæternæ sibi sunt et coæquales.

Ita ut per omnia (sicut jam supra dictum est) et Unitas in Trinitate : et Trinitas in Unitate veneranda sit.

Qui vult ergo salvus esse : ita de Trinitate sentiat.

Sed necessarium est ad æternam salutem : ut incarnationem quoque Domini nostri Jesu Christi fideliter credat.

Est ergo fides recta, ut credamus et confiteamur : quia Dominus noster Jesus Christus, Dei Filius, Deus et homo est.

Deus est ex substantia Patris ante sæcula genitus : et homo est ex substantia matris in sæculo natus.

Æqualis Patri secundum Divinitatem : minor Patre secundum humanitatem.

Qui licet Deus sit et homo : non duo tamen, sed unus est Christus.

Unus autem, non conversione Divinitatis in carnem : sed assumptione humanitatis in Deum.

Unus omnino, non confusione substantiæ : sed unitate personæ.

Nam sicut anima rationalis et caro unus est homo : ita Deus et homo unus est Christus.

Qui passus est pro salute nostra, descendit ad inferos : tertia die resurrexit a mortuis.

Ascendit ad cælos, sedet ad dexteram Dei Patris Omnipotentis : inde venturus est judicare vivos et mortuos.

Ad cujus adventum omnes homines resurgere habent cum corporibus suis : et redditori sunt de factis propriis rationem.

Et qui bona egerunt ibunt in vitam æternam, qui vero mala in ignem æternam.

Hæc est fides catholica, quam nisi quisque fideliter firmiterque crediderit : salvus esse non poterit.

Gloria Patri, &c.

Following the order of the mediæval services, we next arrive at the Prayers. These consisted of a number of versicles, commencing with the lesser Litany and the Lord's Prayer. The versicles which have been retained in our Service of Morning and Evening Prayer are selected from those used in the ancient ritual. In 1549 the custom was preserved of repeating the Creed as well as the Lord's Prayer after the lesser Litany; and the versicles concluded with the salutation, The Lord be with you, &c.

The salutation.

In our present form, the mutual salutation of minister and people, primitive if not apostolic¹, is a mutual thanksgiving for the right faith which has been confessed in the Creed, and a prayer to be kept in that faith; and preceding the prayers, as it was the ancient preface of a collect, it is a prayer that God will hear the joint petitions of minister and people in the versicles, and of the minister as the voice of the people in the collects that follow.

The Lesser Litany.

The Lesser Litany, by its three clauses, is an address to each Person of the Holy Trinity. In the Breviary each clause was thrice repeated². The direction that the Priest shall stand while saying the versicles, is a continuation of the rubric in the Sarum Office³. The versicles are almost all culled from the Book of Psalms⁴. The verse, 'Give peace, &c.,' with its response, was an antiphon belonging to the collect for Peace⁵, and was placed in 1549

among the versicles for constant use, instead of the words, 'Peace be within her walls, and plenteousness within her palaces.' The Commissioners of 1689 proposed to substitute for this response 'an answer promissory of somewhat on the people's part of keeping God's laws or the like, the old response being grounded on the predestinating doctrine taken in too strict an acceptation¹.'

The Collects (orationes) occupy the same position in which they occurred in the unreformed offices, viz. after the prayers (preces)². The collect for the day was said at the end of Lauds, and the collect for Grace, and other collects, at the end of Prime.

The Second Collect, for Peace, is in the Sacramentary Collect for Peace. of Gelasius :—

Deus auctor pacis et amator, quem nosse vivere; cui servire regnare est; protege ab omnibus impugnationibus supplices tuos: ut qui in defensione tua confidimus, nullius hostilitatis arma timeamus. Per³.

The Third Collect, for Grace, is in the Sacramentary Collect for Grace. of Gregory, and in the Anglo-Saxon Office :—

Domine sancte, &c.⁴

Here the Order of Morning Prayer ended until the last revision in 1661. In the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637) a rubric was added after the third collect of Morning and Evening Prayer, directing our present usage.

'After this Collect ended, followeth the Litany: and if the Litany be not appointed to be said or sung that morning, then shall next be said the prayer for the King's while the latter implies that God alone can give the victory which will secure peace as its result. The American Prayer-Book has only the first and last couplet of versicles, and omits the Collect for the day when the Communion Service is going to be read.

Majesty, with the rest of the prayers following at the end of the Litany, and the Benediction.'

Thus, although this conclusion of our service is of so late introduction, it belongs to a time when ancient customs were quite well understood. According to the old offices such prayers would be termed Memoriæ, or commemorations, *de Pace, de Gratia, pro Rege, &c.*¹

Prayer for the King's Majesty.

The earliest form of the Prayer for the King's Majesty that has yet been discovered occurs in two little books, from the press of Berthelet, who was King's printer at the end of the reign of Henry VIII. and the beginning of that of Edward VI. One of these books is entitled 'Psalmes or Prayers taken out of holye Scripture;' the date on the title-page being 1545, and that in the colophon being July 2, 1548. The book consists of xv. 'psalms,' made up of selected passages from the Psalms and other parts of Scripture; at the end these are called 'Finis xv. Psalmorum,' thus in appearance being intended as a devotional substitute for the 'xv. Psalmes' of the Primer. After this is the xxiind Psalm; and then follow 'A prayer for the Kyng,' and 'A prayer for men to saie entryng into battaile.' The difference of dates leads to a conjecture that the work was in type, but was stopped owing to the prevalent influence of the Gardiner faction at the close of the reign of Henry VIII., to be issued under more favourable circumstances in the next reign.

The other book containing this prayer is entitled, 'Prayers or meditations, wherein the mind is stirred patiently to suffer all afflictions here, to set at naught the vain prosperity of this world, and alway to long for the everlasting felicity: Collected out of holy works by the most virtuous and gracious Princess Katherine, queen of England,

France, and Ireland. Anno. dñi. 1547. The colophon states that this volume was printed by Berthelet, Nov. 6, 1547. It is unfortunately imperfect; the leaves marked A ii and D. i. being missing. The first portion, containing Queen Katharine's prayers, is a series of devotional sentences: after which comes this prayer for the King, the beginning of which is lost: then the prayer for men to say entering into battle: then 'A devout prayer to be daily said,' 'another prayer,' and 'a devout prayer.' If the dates in the colophon be right, this is the first printed copy. It does not vary from the other in any respect except the spelling: but as it is imperfect, the following transcript has been taken from the perfect form.

A prayer for the kinge¹.

O Lorde Jesu Christe, moste high, moste mightie, kyng of kynges, lorde of lordes, the onely rular of princes, the very sonne of god, on whose ryghte hande syttyng, docest from thy throne beholde all the dwellers upon earth: with mooste lowly hertes we besече the, vouchesafe with fauourable regard to behold our most gracious soueraigne lorde kyng Edwarde the syxte, and so replenysshe hym with the grace of thy holy spirite, that he alway incline to thy wil, and walke in thy way. Kepe hym farre of from ignoraunce, but through thy gifte, leat prudence and knowlage alwaie abound in his royall hert. So instructe hym (o LORD IESV) reygnyng upon us in erth, that his humaine majestee, alway obey thy divine majestee in feare and drede. Indue him plentifully with heauenly geftes. So strengthe hym, that he maie vanquishe and ouercome all his and our foes, and be dread and feared of al the ennemies of his realme. AMEN.

In the Prayer-Books of Edward VI. this prayer was not put into the Morning and Evening Service; it was, however, placed in the Primer (1553)², as 'the fourth

THE PRAYERS.

Collect for the King’ at Morning Prayer; another and shorter ‘Prayer for the King’ being added to the collects ‘for Peace,’ and ‘for aid against all Perils,’ at Evening Prayer. The collects in the Communion Office were the only prayers for the King in the public service, until the revision of the Prayer-Book at the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth (1559), when this prayer was altered and shortened, and together with the prayer for the Clergy and People was placed before the ‘Prayer of Chrysostome’ at the end of the Litany. There it remained until the last revision in 1661, when a rubric was placed at what had hitherto been the end of Morning Prayer, directing five prayers to be read after the three Collects, except when the Litany is read.

Prayer for the Royal Family.

The Prayer for the Royal Family was added among the Collects at the end of the Litany, in 1604; approved, if not composed, by Archbishop Whitgift¹, and placed in the Prayer-Book among the changes made by way of explanation, after the Hampton-Court Conference, on the authority of James I. It was then entitled ‘A Prayer for the Queen and Prince, and other the King and Queen’s children,’ and began with the words, ‘Almighty God, which hast promised to be a Father of thine elect and of their seed, We humbly beseech thee to bless our gracious Queen Anne, Prince Henry, and all the King and Queen’s royal progeny: endue them, &c.’ In the first form of prayers published by authority in the reign of Charles I., being a service provided for a fast-day (1625), the words ‘the fountain of all goodness’ were introduced into this prayer, and were continued in the Prayer-Book published in 1627; for the plain reason that the original clause was not thought appropriate in the case of a Sovereign who was at that time without issue. Afterwards (1632) the clause was replaced, and Prince Charles and the Lady Mary were mentioned in the prayer. In the following year, however, the first year of the primacy of Laud, the clause was again and finally removed. The inconvenience was thus avoided of continually altering the language of the prayer: which is a sufficient reason for fixing upon a general expression that should be equally suitable in all cases, without introducing the Archbishop's aversion to any language that savoured of Calvinism, as the ground for rejecting the original clause. It was also urged against the Archbishop, that political motives had caused him to omit the names of 'the Prince Elector Palatine and the Lady Elizabeth his wife,' after 1632, when in fact other names were introduced of princes more nearly connected with the throne, and the general expression 'the Royal Family' was added to include all the remoter branches¹.

Prayers for divers purposes;’ the first and second being the collects for the King from the Communion Service, and the third being also a

The Prayer for the Clergy and People is in the Sacramentary of Gelasius:—

Prayer for the Clergy and People

Omnipotens sempiterne Deus, qui facis mirabilia magna solus; prætende super famulos tuos pontifices, et super cunctas congregationes illis commissas, spiritum gratiæ salutaris; et ut in veritate tibi complaceant, perpetuum eis rorem tuæ benedictionis infunde².

² Brev. Sar. Psalt. fol. lx. post Letaniam. This was originally one of the prayers after the Litany; and there has been an English version of it in the Primer since the 14th century; Maskell, Mon. Rit. II. p. 107. It was somewhat altered in the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637); being entitled 'A Prayer for the holy clergy,' and commencing 'Almighty and everlasting God, who only workest great and marvellous things: Send down upon our Bishops, Presbyters and Curates, &c.' In the American Prayer-Book the language was again altered, 'Almighty and everlasting God, from whom cometh every good and perfect gift; Send down upon our Bishops and other Clergy, and upon the Congregation, &c.' In this book also the prayers are so placed that the Mistome.

The Prayer of St Chrysostome is found in the Liturgies of Basil, and Chrysostome; and although the composition of it cannot be certainly traced to either of those fathers, the prayer has been very anciently used in the middle of the Liturgies which bear their names. Thus a form of prayer taken from the Eastern Church found an appropriate place in our Prayer-Book, when a suitable concluding prayer was not found in the Western Breviaries. The following is the Greek original:—

‘Ο τὰς κοινὰς ταύτας καὶ συμφώνους ἡμῖν χαρισάμενος προσευχὰς, ὁ καὶ δύο καὶ τρισὶ συμφωνοῦσιν ἐπὶ τῷ ὀνόματί σου, τὰς αἰτήσεις παρέχειν ἐπαγγειλάμενος· αὐτὸς καὶ νῦν τῶν δούλων σου τὰ αἰτήματα πρὸς τὸ σύμφερον πλήρωσον, χορηγῶν ἡμῖν ἐν τῷ παρόντι αἰῶνι τὴν ἐπίγνωσιν τῆς σῆς ἀληθείας, καὶ ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι ζωὴν αἰώνιον χαρίζομενος¹.

This prayer was placed at the end of the Litany, when that service was revised by Cranmer in 1544, and at the conclusion of the daily Morning and Evening Prayer in 1661, according to the rubric of the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637).

The concluding benediction is derived from the Liturgies of the Eastern Churches¹, in which it has probably been used from the most primitive times. It is a common form of blessing used by St Paul, at the close of his Epistles, turned into a precatory benediction. It is thus a substitution of an apostolical form for that which had been anciently given to the Jewish Church. The older form involved the doctrine of the Trinity, under the three-nister may read straight on to the conclusion of the ordinary service. The ‘Prayer for all conditions of men,’ and the ‘General Thanksgiving,’ are placed before the ‘Prayer of St Chrysostom’ in the Order of Morning and Evening Prayer, and the ‘General Thanksgiving’ before the ‘Prayer of St Chrysostom’ at the end of the Litany.

fold repetition of the sacred Name; but this is a direct recognition of the doctrine according to the more full revelation given to the Christian Church. The benediction appointed in the Breviary at the conclusion of the prayers at Prime was nothing more than the ordinary commencement of a religious action, 'In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost¹.' This was omitted in the reformed offices, but nothing was substituted until our present benediction was placed at the conclusion of 'The Litany used in the Queen's Chapel,' (1559)².

SECT. IV.—Evening Prayer.

The order for Evening Prayer, called 'Evensong' in 1549, is formed upon the ancient offices of Vespers and Compline³. The Sentences, Exhortation, Confession, and Absolution, were appointed in 1552 to be said before the commencement of the older service: this part was not printed at the beginning of Evening Prayer until the last revision (1661). Of the versicles, the two former were added in 1552, thereby resembling the Morning Service. In 1549 the opening of the service followed the order of Quignon's Breviary⁴ more closely than that of Sarum. The most simple order was taken: Antiphons, and Responsories, and the metrical hymns were omitted; the place of the Little Chapter at Vespers in the Sarum Breviary was occupied by a chapter from the Old Testament: and was followed by Magnificat, which has been sung at Vespers, as long as the service can be traced. Our second Lesson occupies the place of the Little Chapter at Compline, which, after a hymn that is omitted, was followed by 'the Song of Simeon,' this having been sung at Evening Prayer from very early times¹. The Canticles thus inserted occupy a most significant place in our service. After reading the Old Testament we have the Song of Mary, testifying to the fulfilment of God's promises of mercy to the fathers; and after reading the chapter from the Apostolical Epistles, and there beholding how the promises were fulfilled in the propagation of the Gospel among the Gentiles, we express our readiness to receive that Gospel for ourselves, in the song of the aged Simeon, and our faith that by so doing we shall have peace in our death, of which every night brings a type in sleep. These two Canticles only were appointed in 1549. In 1552, for variety, and still retaining the ancient rule that Psalms and reading of Scripture should be alternated, the 98th and the 67th Psalms were appointed to follow the first and second Lessons, at the discretion of the Minister, unless either of them had been read in the ordinary course of the Psalms. They had not been sung among the Psalms of Vespers or Compline; but are clearly most appropriate, as songs of praise for the announcement of salvation.

In 1549, the service at this point, as in Morning Prayer, followed the Breviary², putting prayers and collects after the Song of Simeon. At the revision in 1552, the Apostles' Creed was placed here, as in the corresponding part of the Morning Service. EVENING PRAYER.

The second Collect, for Peace, is as old as the fifth century, occurring in the Sacramentary of Gelasius¹ (494). In the Sarum Breviary it is the fourth collect after the Litany:—

Deus a quo sancta desideria, recta consilia, et justa sunt opera, da servis tuis illam quam mundus dare non potest pacem; ut et corda nostra mandatis tuis dedita, et hostium sublata formidine tempora sint tua protectione tranquilla².

The third Collect, for Aid against all Perils, is also in the Sacramentary of Gelasius³, as an Evening collect,—the place which it occupies in the Sarum Breviary⁴.

There is a close resemblance between these ancient daily collects of Morning and Evening Prayer. In the first of each pair, the subject of petition is the same, but the words are different, and suited to the respective seasons. We ask outward peace in the morning to secure us against the troubles of the world, and inward peace in the evening to comfort and quiet our minds when we are to take our rest. In the second of each pair of collects, we ask in the morning grace and guidance to direct us in our duty, and in the evening light and aid when we are passive or unconscious. The metaphor of light according to Scriptural usage, will include the two ideas of knowledge and of comfort. We therefore pray that our understanding may be enlightened to perceive the sleepless providence of God, and our hearts cheered with the assurance of His love.

SECT. V. The Litany.

A form of supplication, resembling those features which distinguish the Litany from the other prayers, exists in the Apostolical Constitutions. The deacon bids the prayer¹, or names the subjects of petition, and the people answer to each, Lord, have mercy. And the prayer of the bishop proceeds with a series of short petitions for all orders and circumstances of men; the form, Let us pray, being frequently introduced².

About the fourth century, the word Litany came to be especially applied to solemn offices of prayer performed with processions of the clergy and people. In the time of Basil (370) some changes³ had been introduced into the litanies which were not in use in the days of Gregory Thaumaturgus (254): and processions took place at Constantinople in the time of Chrysostome (398); but the service at these processions consisted of singing hymns⁴. After-to use the churches within the city, assembled about the porticoes, and sung heretical hymns through great part of the night, and at dawn of Saturday and Sunday went through the city and out of the gates to their place of worship, singing antiphonally all the way. Chrysostome, fearing that his people might be induced by these processions to join the Arians, established them on a more splendid scale; and by the help of the Empress Eudoxia silver crosses were provided bearing wax-lights, which were carried in the processions of the orthodox. Socr. Hist. Eccl. VI. 8, Sozom. VIII. 8.

wards the procession was joined with fasting and prayers, and was used for special supplications in any peculiar emergency¹.

There is, however, no trace of such forms of prayer in the Western Churches before the fifth century. It is probable that the word litany, the Kyrie eleison, and processions,—the form and great part of the substance of these Oriental prayers—was received in the West early in that century²; and at first, the place at the beginning of the Litany, afterwards occupied by the invocations of numerous saints, was filled up with a frequent repetition of the form *Kyrie eleison*³. We find this custom in the time of Gregory the Great, and from it the Kyrie eleison was called the Litany, a name which we still retain, calling the form of words, Lord, have mercy upon us; Christ, have mercy upon us; Lord, have mercy upon us, the Lesser Litany. Besides these invocations, the service during the procession in the time of Gregory consisted in chanting a number of anthems⁴. And it was thus, as Beda relates⁵, that Augustine and his company of missionaries entered Canterbury, chanting a litany, which was one of the anthems appointed by Gregory to be sung in the procession of the Greater Litany.

LITANY.

The appointment of litanies on fixed days in every year is due to Mamertus, bishop of Vienne in Gaul (circ. 460). They had been used chiefly for the purpose of praying for rain, or for fine weather¹: but on the occasion of some calamities in his diocese Mamertus appointed solemn litanies, or rogations, to be yearly observed on the three days preceding the feast of the Ascension². These were soon called 'the rogation-days,' being the only days which were yearly set apart for such a service. Their observance was soon received throughout Gaul, and from thence passed to the Anglo-Saxon Church. The Great Litany of St Mark's day³, instituted by Gregory the Great (590) on the occasion of a pestilence in Rome, was also received in this country by the Council of Cloveshoe (747)⁴.

The Service used during the procession at rogations appears to have consisted chiefly of psalmody⁵, collects being said at different churches or stations. The next feature was the repetition of Kyrie eleison: and this was

³ Seven processions set out from different churches, and met in one principal church for a solemn service. Thus commenced the Litania Septena; and from the circumstances of its origin the Litany on St Mark's day (April 25th) is called the Litania major, although the service used does not differ from that of the rogations. called the Litany, as was also the procession itself. About the eighth century the invocations of saints were introduced into the churches of the West¹; and then this portion was called the Litany.

Besides the solemn rogation days, litanies were said in the English Church on the week-days during Lent, the invocations being varied on each day throughout the week². The English Litany was originally intended to be a distinct office. It was put forth as a separate book by Henry VIII. Edward's Injunctions (1547), however, ordered it to be said 'immediately before high mass³.' A rubric in the first English Prayer-Book (1549)⁴ ordered it to be said upon Wednesdays and Fridays⁵, and to be followed by the first part of the Communion Office. It was then placed after the Communion Office. In 1552 it was placed where it now stands, with the rubric directing it to be used upon Sundays, Wednesdays, and Fridays,

In the ancient Western litanies there were no invocations of saints: see 'A deprecation which Pope Gelasius appointed to be sung for the universal Church,' in a book of offices ascribed to Alcuin (Opp. p. 241, Paris 1617); the Litany of the monastery of Fulda, and that of the church of Milan, in Bingham, Antiq. XV. ⁵ The Jews observed Monday and Thursday besides the Sabbath for their special days of assembling those together that dwelt in villages, in regard of some great calamities which befel their nation upon those days, and that they might not be three days together without some public service of God. LITANY.

*and at other times when it shall be commanded by the Ordinary*¹. The Injunctions of Elizabeth (1559) renew the direction that the Litany should be said 'immediately before the time of communion of the sacrament²;' and likewise order 'that weekly upon Wednesdays and Fridays, not being holy-days, the curate at the accustomed hours of service shall resort to church, and cause warning to be given to the people by knolling of a bell, and say the Litany and prayers³.' And Grindal, archbishop of York, in his visitation (1571), directed 'the minister not to pause or stay between the Morning Prayer, Litany, and Communion, but to continue and say the Morning Prayer, Litany, and Communion, or the service appointed to be said (when there was no communion) together, without any intermission: to the intent the people might continue together in prayer, and hearing the word of God; and not depart out of the church during all the time of the whole divine service⁴.'

The petitions that we now use are generally of great antiquity. The following Litany, belonging to the tenth, or rather to the ninth century, is printed as an example of this part of our service, according to the use of the Anglo-Saxon Church⁵.

The old litanies generally commenced with the form Kyrie eleison, each part of it being once or thrice repeated. It was all omitted in preparing the Litany of 1544; and at the same time the words miserable sinners were added in the invocations of the Trinity, and also the words proceeding from the Father and the Son. These changes, and the mode of repeating the clauses, are peculiar to our English Litany. Next in the old litanies came the invocations of saints, beginning with St Mary, and ending Omnes sancti: orate pro nobis. But in the Litany adopted by Hermann and his advisers, which supplied some hints to Cranmer in his work of revision, these were entirely omitted. Only three such clauses had been retained by our Reformers in 1544. They stood as follows :

Saint Mary, mother of God, our Saviour Jesu Christ, pray for us.

All holy angels and archangels, and all holy orders of blessed spirits, pray for us.

All holy patriarchs, and prophets, apostles, martyrs, confessors, and virgins, and all the blessed company of heaven, pray for us.

Each clause was repeated by the choir, in the same way as the preceding invocations of the Trinity. In the revision of this Litany for the King's Primer (1545), these three clauses still appeared, but only the words pray for us were given to the choir. The clauses were entirely omitted in the next Litany, that of Edward VI. THE

LITANY.

The prayer, between the invocations and the deprecations, was inserted in 1544, in the place of the old and short clause, *Propitius esto : parce nobis Domine*¹; it is a translation of an anthem at the end of the penitential psalms, which therefore stood in the Breviary immediately before the Litany :

Ne reminiscaris, Domine, delicta nostra, vel parentum nostrorum, neque vindictam sumas de peccatis nostris. Non dicitur ulterius quando dicitur in choro. Parce, Domine, parce populo tuo quem redemisti pretioso sanguine tuo, ne in æternum irascaris nobis : et ne des hæreditatem tuam in perditionem, ne in æternum obliviscaris nobis².

Then follow in all the litanies the deprecations, varying both in phrase and number, but preserving a general uniformity of subjects: they were given commonly in single clauses, each being followed by Libera nos Domine. No one will doubt that Cranmer exercised the soundest judgment in his selection of these clauses, and in bringing them together as they had never been arranged before. The last of the series only has been changed since 1544. It then contained the clause, 'from the tyranny of the bishop of Rome, and all his detestable enormities,' after 'privy conspiracy:' in the next year the phrase was changed into 'abominable enormities,' by the Primer (1545); but the original phrase appeared in Edward's Prayer-Books, and in the Litany printed in the first month of Elizabeth's reign³. When the Litany was published by authority (1559) as used in the royal chapel, the clause was omitted. The words 'rebellion'

Litany had two similar clauses.

THE LITANY.

The Obsecrations.

and 'schism' were inserted at the last revision of the Prayer-Book in 1661.

The next portion, the plea for mercy by the merits of Christ's passion, is formed from the Old English Litany and that in Hermann's Consultation, as will be seen from the following phrases:—

Per mysterium sanctæ incarnationis tuæ:—Per nativitatem tuam:—By thy holy nativity (Hermann):—Per sanctam circumcisionem tuam:—Per baptismum tuum:—Per jejunium tuum:—By thy baptism, fasting, and temptations (Hermann).

Again,

By thine agony, and sweating of blood (Hermann):—Per crucem et passionem tuam:—Per pretiosam mortem tuam:—Per mortem et sepulturam tuam (Quignon):—By thy death, and burying (Hermann):—Per gloriosam resurrectionem tuam:—Per admirabilem ascensionem tuam:—By thy resurrection, and ascension (Hermann):—Per gratiam Spiritus Sancti:—Per adventum Spiritus Sancti Paracleti (Quignon):—By the coming of the Holy Ghost the Comforter (Hermann).

The next clause is formed by combining four separate clauses of Hermann's Litany:—

In all times of our tribulation:—In all times of our prosperity:—In the hour of death:—In the day of judgment: Deliver us, O Lord.

The clauses of the old Litany were,—

In hora mortis, succurre nos Domine.

The Intercessions.

The form of the suffrages that follow is common to all the litanies, but the subjects vary considerably. After the suffrage for the church, those for the ecclesiastical orders usually came first, and were followed by those for the prince, and for Christian people. Yet the intercessions for rulers of the church and of the state are occasionally transposed¹.

¹ Maskell, Mon. Rit. II. pp. 220, 226.

The clergy were described by Cranmer under the names of 'bishops, pastors, and ministers of the church;' which was altered at the last revision to 'bishops, priests, and deacons;' an expression more distinctly opposed to presbyterian notions of the Christian ministry.

LITANY.

The prayer for the peace of all nations is peculiar to our Litany. The old phrase was, 'That thou yield everlasting goods to our good doers.' Hermann's Litany prays 'to give peace and concord to all kings and princes.' Quignon limits the prayer for peace to Christian kings, and all Christian people. The ancient Anglo-Saxon Litany is remarkable in this respect, that it contains a suffrage 'for our enemies.'

The suffrages for grace seem to be formed from Hermann's Litany, where we find the expressions:—

That thou wilt vouchsafe to bring them again into the way of truth, which stray and be seduced:—to tread Satan under our feet:—to send faithful workmen into thy harvest:—to give to all the hearers increase of thy word, and the fruit of thy Spirit:—to lift them up that be fallen, and to strengthen them that stand:—to comfort and help the weaklings and such as be tempted.

The Sarum Litany has only:

Ut obsequium servitutis nostræ rationabile facias:—Ut mentes nostras ad cœlestia desideria erigas.

Two similar clauses had been introduced into Marshall's Primer:

That thou vouchsafe that all which do err and be deceived, may be reduced into the way of verity:—That thou vouchsafe that we may the devil with all his pomps crush and tread under foot.

The suffrages for special mercies may be considered as Cranmer's composition. The same subjects are indeed found, some of them in Hermann's Litany, and some in that of Marshall's Primer, but not with the same excellence of arrangement or expression. There are only two similar petitions in the Sarum Litany:—

THE LITANY.

Ut miseras pauperum et captivorum intueri et relevare digneris:—Ut fructus terræ dare et conservare digneris.

The last suffrage has nothing corresponding to it in any other litany: it is a beautiful summary, expressing what we ought to feel at the conclusion of such petitions as have preceded: it is in general expressions, to supply any omission of a request, or of a confession, which ought to have been made: a prayer for repentance, forgiveness, and the grace of amendment of life¹.

The Lesser Litany which follows is according to the old form; the response, 'Grant us thy peace,' being inserted from Hermann's Litany.

The versicle, response and prayer, 'O God, merciful Father,' &c., are also taken from Hermann's Litany, as to their position. The English litanies had many versicles in this place besides the couplet; and the prayer had formed a collect in the mass 'pro tribulatione cordis.'

Deus qui contritorum non despicias gemitum, et moerentium non spernis affectum; adesto precibus nostris, quas pietati tuæ pro tribulatione nostra offerimus: implorantes ut nos clementer respicias; et solito pietatis tuæ intuitu tribuas ut quicquid contra nos diabolicæ [fraudes ap. Palmer] atque humanæ moliantur adversitates, ad nihilum redigas, et consilio misericordiæ tuæ allidas; quatenus nullis adversitatibus læsi, sed ab omni tribulatione et angustia liberati, gratias tibi in ecclesia tua referamus consolati. Per Dominum².

The next portion reaching to the end of the Gloria Patri also differs from the older litanies in its position. It was taken by Cranmer in 1544 from the introduction

Minister may, at his discretion, omit all that follows, to the Prayer, We humbly beseech thee, &c.' It also inserts the General Thanksgiving in the place where it is to be read, before the Prayer of St Chrysostome.

to the Litany sung on Rogation Monday before leaving the choir to form the procession:—

Ordo processionis in secunda feria in rogationibus. Hæc antiphona dicatur a toto choro in stallis antequam exeat processio, cantore incipiente antiphonam. An. Exsurge, Domine, adjuva nos, et libera nos propter nomen tuum. Alleluia. Ps. Deus, auribus nostris audivimus: patres nostri annuntiaverunt nobis. Non dicitur nisi primus versus, sed statim sequatur Gloria Patri. Deinde repetatur Exsurge Domine¹.

In translating the verse of the psalm Cranmer completed the sense by adding what had been the second verse of the 43rd Psalm in the Vulgate; the whole passage is Ps. xlv. 1, in our translation.

The Versicles were taken at the same time from an occasional portion added to the Litany in time of war:

Si necesse fuerit, versus sequentes dicuntur a predictis clericis in tempore belli.

Ab inimicis nostris defende nos, Christe.

Afflictionem nostram benignus vide.

Dolorem cordis nostri respice clemens.

Peccata populi tui pius indulge.

Orationes nostras pius exaudi.

Fili Dei vivi miserere nobis.

Hic et in perpetuum nos custodire digneris, Christe.

Exaudi nos, Christe, exaudi, exaudi nos, Christe².

The last couplet was added at the same time, and was called 'The Versicle,' and 'The Answer,' shewing that it came from a different source. It was one of the couplets among the 'preces' of Morning and Evening Prayer³.

After the versicles, the old litanies of the English Church ended for the most part with the following seven collects¹:—

1. Deus cui proprium est misereri semper et parcere, suscipe deprecationem nostram; et quos delictorum catena constringit, miseratio tuæ pietatis absolvat. Per.

2. Omnipotens sempiternæ Deus, qui facis mirabilia, &c. (The Prayer for the Clergy and People.)

3. Deus qui caritatis dona per gratiam Sancti Spiritus tuorum cordibus fidelium infundis, da famulis et famulabus tuis, fratribus et sororibus nostris, pro quibus tuam deprecamur clementiam, salutem mentis et corporis, ut te tota virtute diligant, et quæ tibi placita sint tota dilectione perficiant.

4. Deus a quo sancta desideria, &c. (The Second Collect at Evening Prayer.)

5. Ineffabilem misericordiam tuam nobis quæsumus, Domine, clementer ostende; ut simul nos et a peccatis omnibus exuas, et a pœnis quas pro his meremur benignus eripias.

6. Fidelium Deus omnium conditor et redemptor, animabus famulorum, famularumque tuarum remissionem cunctorum tribue peccatorum: ut indulgentiam quam semper optaverunt, piis supplicationibus consequantur.

7. Pietate tua quæsumus, Domine, nostrorum solve vincula omnium delictorum; et intercedente beata et gloriosa semperque virgine, Dei genetrice, Maria, cum omnibus sanctis tuis, nos famulos tuos et omnem populum catholicum in omni sanctitate custodi; omnesque consanguinitate ac familiaritate, vel confessione et oratione nobis vinctos, seu omnes christianos, a vitiiis purga, virtutibus illustra, pacem et salutem nobis tribue; hostes visibiles et invisibiles remove; pestem et famem repelle; amicis et inimicis nostris veram caritatem, atque infirmis sanitatem largire; et omnibus fidelibus vivis ac defunctis in terra viventium vitam et requiem æternam concede. Per eundem Christum Dominum nostrum. Amen.

1. The first part of our present prayer, We humbly beseech thee, &c., altered from an old collect:—

Infirmittatem nostram quæsumus, Domine, propitiis respice: et mala omnia quæ juste meremur omnium sanctorum tuorum intercessione averte. Per¹.

2. O God, whose nature and property, &c. (Deus cui proprium).

3. Almighty and everliving God, which only workest great marvels, &c. (Omnipotens sempiterne Deus, qui facis).

4. A translation of the collect, Ineffabilem misericordiam.

5. Grant, we beseech thee, O Almighty God, that we in our trouble put our whole confidence upon thy mercy, that we may against all adversity be defended under thy protection. Grant this, &c.

6. A Prayer of Chrysostome.

In 1549, the first and fifth of the above collects were formed into our present prayer, the Prayer of St Chrysostome (without any title) being left as the conclusion. The occasional prayers, 'for Rain,' and 'for Fair Weather,' were added to the Collects at the end of the Communion Office. In 1552 these with four other occasional prayers were inserted at the end of the Litany before the Prayer of St Chrysostome: while the concluding benediction was added to the Litany of Elizabeth (1559).

The occasional prayers are entirely English compositions: since the collects in the special masses for Rain, for Fair Weather, and in Time of War², can hardly be said to have furnished a hint towards their expressions. The prayers In the time of Dearth and Famine were added in 1552; the second form was left out in 1559, and only restored, with alterations, in 1661. The prayer In the time of War and Tumults, belongs to 1552, and also that In the time of any common Plague or Sickness.

 THE

It is probable that all these forms had their origin in the necessities of the time¹. The prayers to be said every day in the Ember weeks were added at the last revision. They are peculiar to the English ritual². The Ember days were called *the fasts of the four seasons*³, or in our Calendar, the Ember days at the four seasons; and the observance of them with special fasting and prayer was an act of consecration of the four seasons of the year. Being occasions of peculiar solemnity, ordinations were held at these times; and this is the order of our Church in the 31st Canon. The particular days were settled by the Council of Placentia (1095)⁴ to be the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday after the first Sunday in Lent, after Whitsunday, after the 14th of September (the feast of Holy Cross), and after the 13th of December (St Lucia). The rubric, however, directs one of the prayers to be said not only on the Ember days, but on every day of the Ember weeks⁵. The Prayer that may be said after any of the former is as old as the Sacramentary of Gregory⁶, and in an English form has had a place in the Prymer, as long as that book can be traced, standing with the collects at the end of the Litany⁷. It was, however, omitted during the reign of Edward VI., but restored in the Litanies at the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth (1558 and 1559)¹. Its place is after the Ember prayers, and not after the Prayer for all conditions of men.

OCCA-SIONAL
PRAYERS.

The Prayer for the High Court of Parliament was composed most probably by bishop Laud. It first appeared in an 'Order of Fasting' in 1625, and again in 1628 in a special form of prayer 'necessary to be used in these dangerous times of war.' In these early forms it is almost verbally like the present prayer, only somewhat longer: it also contains the words 'most religious and gracious king²,' which have been commonly supposed to have been introduced as a compliment to Charles II. In 1661 the prayer was inserted in a special form for a Fast-day on the 12th of June, and again in the following January; and at the same time it was placed by the Convocation in the Book of Common Prayer³.

The composition of the Prayer for all conditions of men has been ascribed to bishop Sanderson. It was, however, most probably, composed by bishop Gunning, Master of St John's College, Cambridge. In its original shape it is supposed to have been longer, and to have brought into one prayer the petitions for the King, Royal Family, Clergy, &c., which are scattered through several collects⁴. The Convocation, however, retained the collects, and therefore threw out the corresponding clauses in this general Prayer, without altering the word finally, which seems to be needlessly introduced in so short a form. Before this, no general intercessory prayer occurred in the service except on those mornings when the Litany was said.

Thanksgivings.

Praise is an essential part of divine worship. Hence we retain throughout the service Doxologies, Psalms, and Canticles. But these do not include that particular thanksgiving for extraordinary deliverances, or indeed for daily mercies, which is due to the Author and Giver of all good things. Hence some particular thanksgivings¹ were annexed to the Litany at the revision of the Prayer-Book after the Hampton-Court Conference, by order of James I., under the title of '*An enlargement of thanksgiving for diverse benefits, by way of explanation*².' These were thanksgivings for Rain, for Fair Weather, for Plenty, for Peace and Victory, and for Deliverance from the Plague in two forms³. At the last revision, after the restoration of the Monarchy, another special form of thanksgiving was added, for restoring Publick Peace at home. Its language must have been felt to be strikingly appropriate, when read with the restored Common Prayer, after such a period of outrage and sedition. At the same time the Convocation accepted a form of General Thanksgiving, composed by Bishop Reynolds⁴,

³ Cardwell, Conf. pp. 222, sq.

⁴ 'A form of general thanksgiving was prepared and presented by the Bishop of Norwich on the 14th of December. It is frequently stated, that the general thanksgiving was composed by Sanderson; but it is clear from the proceedings of the upper house that it was prepared by Bishop Reynolds.' which rendered the book more perfect by making the Thanksgivings correspond with the Prayers¹.

SIONAL
PRAYERS.

¹ In the American Prayer-Book, the Prayer for all conditions of men and the General Thanksgiving are inserted in their place in the Morning and Evening Prayer. The Occasional Prayers and Thanksgivings include additional forms, For a Sick Person, for a Sick Child, For a Person, or Persons going to Sea, For a Person under Affliction, For Malefactors, after Condemna- tion, and A Prayer to be used at the Meetings of Convocation; also a Thanksgiving of Women after Child-birth, For Recovery from Sickness, and For a Safe Return from Sea. The Prayer for the Parliament becomes, with a slight alteration, A Prayer for Congress. In the Prayers For Fair Weather, and In time of Sickness, the references to the Old Testament are omitted.

CHAPTER II.

The Collects, Epistles, and Gospels; and Proper Lessons for Sundays and Holy-Days.

THIS part of the First Prayer-Book of Edward VI. was entitled, The Introits, Collects, Epistles, and Gospels, to be used at the celebration of the Lord's Supper and Holy Communion, through the year: with proper Psalms and Lessons for divers Feasts and days. An Introit, or psalm to be sung at or before the commencement of the Communion Office, was prefixed to each Collect. These were removed¹ at the revision in 1552; and the Proper Lessons were placed in the Calendar of Lessons.

The two parts of the Church-year.

Advent to Trinity;

The Epistles and Gospels are, with few exceptions, the same that had been appointed in the Missal. They form two series, which may be distinguished as doctrinal and practical. The ecclesiastical year is divided into two parts; the first, from Advent to Trinity, is designed to commemorate the life of Christ on earth; and the several particulars of His life are celebrated in their order,—His incarnation, nativity, circumcision, manifestation to the Gentiles; His doctrine and miracles, His baptism, fasting, and temptation; His agony, His cross, His death, His burial, His resurrection, His ascension; and the mission of the Holy Ghost: the object of the Epistles and Gospels during this time is to remind us of the benefits which we receive from God the Father, through the mediation and atonement of God the Son, and through the ministration of God the Holy Ghost. Hence this part of the Church's course of teaching is fitly ended with the Commemoration of the blessed Trinity. In the second part of the year—from Trinity to Advent—the portions of Scripture are selected with the view of instructing us to lead our lives after our Lord's example.

The greater part of the Collects were translated from those which were found in the Missals of the English Church. Many of them exist in the Sacramentary of Gregory, and therefore date at least from A. D. 590; some are still older, and are found in the Sacramentary of Gelasius (494), and some may be traced to that of Leo (483). The following Tables¹ will shew the general antiquity of our Collects.

The observation of Advent, as a season of preparation for Christmas, cannot be certainly traced to an earlier date than the 6th century¹, at least in the West: and even then the Eastern and Western Churches did not agree in a uniform period for its celebration². The Nestorians in the East were the first who changed the commencement of the Church-year from Easter³ to Advent; and we find this change adopted in Gaul in the 6th century⁴.

Antiquity of its observance.

² In the Orthodox Greek Church, since the sixth century, Advent has begun on St Martin's day (Nov. 14), and has included six Sundays, and a forty days' fast, called the Quadragesima S. Mar- tini, ib. p. 177, note.

⁴ Guericke, 'Remarks,' p. 178.

The Collects for the first and second Sundays were composed in 1549, being formed from the Epistles: that for the third Sunday was substituted at the last revision for a translation of the old Collect. The following is the Latin original of the Collect for the fourth Sunday in Advent:—

Excita quæsumus Domine potentiam tuam, et veni: et magna nobis virtute succurre: ut per auxilium gratiæ tuæ quod nostra peccata præpediunt, indulgentia tuæ propitiationis accelere. Qui vivis et regnas cum Deo Patre¹.

Its antiquity.

A Feast of the *Nativity of Christ*² is only to be found obscurely hinted at before the 4th century. Towards the latter part of that century the Roman Church had fixed it to the 25th of December³; and a little later only, we also find it in the East, and kept on the same day⁴.

The mediæval offices contained Masses for the Vigil, and the early Morning, as well as for the day itself of the Nativity⁵. And in 1549, two Communion⁶ were appointed for this day: the Epistle and Gospel of the High Mass, with a newly composed Collect, which were used at the second or principal Communion, are retained in our present service.

³ 'In Rome from the very first, and in the whole of the West also from a very early period, this day was looked upon as the Saviour's actual birthday; a view which most assuredly must have had some historical tradition to rest upon, especially as the chronological correctness of this date is defended even by St Chrysostom.' Homil. eis τὴν γενέθλιον ἡμέραν, Opp. II. p. 354. Guericke, p. 168.

⁶ The Collect at the first Communion was taken from the mass, in Vigilia: 'Deus qui nos redemptionis nostræ annua expectatione lætificas; præsta ut unigenitum tuum quem redemptorem læti suscipimus, venientem quoque judicem securi videamus:' the Epistle and Gospel from the mass in galli cantu.

The first Lessons¹ contain prophecies of the coming of Christ in our nature; and the second Lessons, Epistle and Gospel point out the completion of those prophecies, in the history of the incarnation. In the Collect we pray that we may be partakers of the benefit of His birth; and the Psalms are expressive of praise and thanksgiving for the revelation of this mystery. The words of Ps. xix. The heavens declare the glory of God, &c., are applicable to the circumstances of the birth of Christ, when a new Star appeared, which so plainly declared His glory, that the wise men came from the East to worship Him: Ps. xlv. a marriage-song upon the nuptials of Solomon with the daughter of Pharaoh, is mystically applicable to the union between Christ and His Church: Ps. lxxxv. has always been applied to the redemption of man by the coming of Christ.—Ps. lxxxix. is a commemoration of the mercies performed, and promised to be continued to David and his posterity to the end of the world; the birth of the Messiah being the greatest of those mercies: Ps. cx. is a prophecy of the exaltation of Christ to His kingly and priestly office; and Ps. cxxxii. composed upon the occasion of the building of the temple, recounts the promises of God to David, that Sion should be the dwelling-place of the Lord himself. All these Psalms were appointed in the Breviary.

After Christmas Day immediately follow the three holy days of St Stephen, St John, and The Innocents².

St Stephen was the first martyr¹; St John was the disciple whom Jesus loved²; and the slaughter of the children at Bethlehem was the first result of the Saviour's birth³. 'Martyrdom, love, and innocence are first to be magnified, as wherein Christ is most honoured.'

The old Collects were:—

St Stephen.

Da nobis quæsumus Domine imitari quod colimus; ut discamus et inimicos diligere: quia ejus natalitia celebramus, qui novit etiam pro persecutoribus exorare Dominum nostrum Jesum Christum Filium tuum. Qui tecum⁴.

The Rubric directs the Collect of the Nativity to be said after the Collect of the day on all these days and until the Eve of the Circumcision. In the old offices, the Collect of St Stephen was followed by Memoria de

² The festival of St John is not so early a date as St Stephen. The Mosarabic Missal is the first that gives a prayer for this day. Guericke, pp. 183.

⁴ Missal. Sar. In die S. Stephani Protomartyris, fol. xv. The Collect until 1661 was, 'Grant us, O Lord, to learn to love our enemies, by the example of thy Martyr Saint Stephen, who prayed for his persecutors, to thee which livest, &c.'

⁶ Missal. Sar. In die sanctorum innocentium, fol. xvi. The Collect until 1661 was, 'Almighty God, whose praise this day the young Innocents thy witnesses have confessed and shewed forth, not in speaking, but in dying: mortify and kill all vices in us, that in our conversation, our life may express thy faith, which with our tongues we do confess; through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

Nativitate; and the Collect of St John by Memoria de Nativitate et de sancto Stephano; and the Collect of the Innocents' Day by Memoria de Nativitate: de sancto Stephano: et de sancto Johanne.

THE
CISION.

According to this Rubric, the Sunday which falls after the 25th of December does not require a special collect, being within the octave of the Nativity. The Sarum Missal contained an office, *Sexta die a Nativitate Domini, sive dominica fuerit, sive non*¹: the Epistle for this intervening Sunday is taken from this mass; and the Gospel, from the mass *in vigilia Nativitatis*², shortened at the last revision by the omission of the genealogy.

The Sunday after Christmas Day.

The feast of the Circumcision of Christ commemorates the active obedience of Jesus Christ to the law in the fulfilment of a perfect righteousness. The first mention of it under this title is in Ivo Carnotensis (circ. 1090)³; in earlier writers it is called the octave of Christmas, and as such, has been kept since the 6th century at least.

The Circum-
cision.

The first Morning Lesson gives an account of the institution of circumcision; and the Gospel, of the circumcision of Christ: the first Evening Lesson, and the second Lessons, and the Epistle, all shew that, since the outward rite is abrogated, the spiritual circumcision of the heart is required in order to our acceptance with God.

The Collect for the Feast of the Circumcision is taken from a Benediction in the Sacramentary of Gregory:—

rum incentivis expurget ; et suam in vos infundat benedictionem¹.

A rubric was added in 1552, which shews that the idea of a daily communion, in place of the daily mass, had by that time passed away:—If there be a Sunday between the Epiphany and the Circumcision, there shall be used the same Collect, Epistle, and Gospel at the Communion, which was used upon the day of Circumcision. This rubric continued until the last revision, when it was expressed in more general terms.

Antiquity of the Festival.

The feast of the Epiphany is the earliest of those which may now be called the Christmas Festivals. The first historical notice of it is found in Clement of Alexandria² (200) ; and in the time of Chrysostom (400) it is spoken of as an old and leading festival of the Asiatic Church³. The earliest distinct trace of it in the West is found in Gaul in nearly the middle of the 4th century⁴.

Its design.

The design of the feast is to shew our gratitude to God for admitting the Gentiles to those religious privileges which had been confined to the Jews. There are three manifestations of our Saviour commemorated on this day: the first, mentioned in the Collect and the Gospel, the declaration of the birth of Christ to the wise men of the East⁵; the second, related in the second Morning Lesson, the manifestation of the Trinity at the baptism of Christ⁶; the third is the manifestation of the glory and divinity of

From Christmas to Epiphany, the design of the proper services is to set forth the humanity of our Saviour; and from Epiphany to Septuagesima, to shew the divine nature of the Son of Man, by relating in the Gospels some of His first miracles. The design of the Epistles is to excite us to the imitation of Christ, and to shew ourselves His disciples by the practice of Christian virtues.

The following are the originals of the Collects :—

Sunday.*

Sixth Sunday.

In the Sarum Missal the Sundays were reckoned from the octave of Epiphany; so that no propria had been required for more than five Sundays. In reckoning them more simply in 1549, from the Epiphany itself (omitting the 'Sunday within the octave,' or 'the octave Sunday', whichever it might be), some provision was needed for a sixth Sunday; which, as being seldom required, was supplied by a rubric:—The vi. Sunday (if there be so many) shall have the same Psalm [Introit], Collect, Epistle and Gospel, that was upon the fifth Sunday. Our present Collect, Epistle and Gospel were appointed in 1661. They refer more particularly to the manifestation of Christ's glory at His second coming, because they are more commonly read on the second Sunday before Advent², than on the sixth Sunday after the Epiphany.

*The Sundays

From this time the Sundays begin to be reckoned with reference to the coming Easter; and as the first Sunday in Lent, being about forty days before Easter, was therefore called Quadragesima Sunday³; and the Sunday before Ash-Wednesday, being fifty days before Easter, was called Quinquagesima Sunday; the names of the two preceding Sundays were given from the next after the Litany, in Hermann's Consultation, fol. 270. The latter part was altered in 1661. The Epistle was Rom. xiii. 8—10, which in 1549 was added to the Epistle for the first Sunday in Advent; and the Epistle for this Sunday was taken from the beginning of the same chapter, which had been read on the Friday after the first decads, sixty and seventy; and they were called Sexagesima and Septuagesima Sundays. LENT.

The design of the services on these Sundays is to call us away from the joy of Christmas, in order to prepare ourselves for the fasting and humiliation of Lent: from the manner of Christ's coming into the world, to think of our sins which were the cause of the sufferings of His life. The first Lessons are taken from those chapters of The Lessons. Genesis, which relate the creation and the fall of man, and his wickedness and punishment by the deluge. The subject of the Epistles and Gospels is to persuade to acts of self-denial and religious duty, and to recommend charity and faith, as the necessary foundation for all religious actions.

Deus qui conspicias quia ex nulla nostra actione confidimus: Sexagesima, concede propitius, ut contra adversa omnia doctoris gentium protectione muniamur².

Preces nostras, quæsumus, Domine, clementer exaudi: atque a Quinquagesima. peccatorum vinculis absolutos ab omni nos adversitate custodi³.

² Dom. in lx. fol. xxvii. The Epistle had been continued to the ninth verse of chap. xii., and thus included the mention of the glorious revelations given to the great Apostle, whose protection was sought in the prayer of the Collect. This part was omitted in 1549, and the phrase in the Collect altered. By dropping the phrase 'doctoris gentium,' the close connexion between the Collect and Epistle is obscured, if not entirely lost.

³ Dom. in l. fol. xxix. This Collect was full of meaning, when it was said in a time of penance, and confession, in order to receive the Sacrament before Lent. Hence we still retain the name of Shrove-Tuesday, as it has been called from Anglo-Saxon times. To shrive is, 'to hear confessions, and enjoin penance.' The Collect was changed in 1549 for that which now stands in our Prayer-Books: it is formed from the language of the Epistle, and may well bear comparison with any similar composition.

LENT.

Its antiquity.

The fast of Lent¹, as a preparation for the solemn festival of Easter, is of primitive observance, though not of Apostolical institution. The original duration of the fast appears to have been forty hours, in commemoration of the time that elapsed from the noon of Friday, when our Saviour began to yield to the power of death, until His resurrection. But in the time of Irenæus and Tertullian, other days were added to these, varying in different churches; until in the fifth century the usual fast was kept for thirty-six days, or six weeks, deducting the Sundays²; and in the eighth century, in the pontificate of Gregory II., Ash-Wednesday and the other three days were added to Lent, and the Quadragesimal fast was observed during forty days³. Its employment was to prepare the catechumens for baptism, and penitents for absolution, and the whole body of Christians for a worthy participation of the Communion at Easter⁴.

Ash-Wednesday.

The first day of Lent is now commonly called Ash-Wednesday (dies cinerum), from the ceremony, described by Gratian, as used towards those who were admitted to penance⁵. It was also called caput jejunii, as being the first day of the great fast. Special additional services were used, which included the seven penitential psalms⁶,

³ See Bingham, Antiq. Bk. XXI. ch. i; Guericke, Antiq. pp. 140, sq. It will be remembered that many periods of forty days occur as seasons of sorrow or abstinence; the rain of the deluge; the twice-repeated fast of Moses; the fast of Elijah; the space of repentance allowed to the Ninevites; and the fast of our blessed Saviour.

and many collects. These psalms are still appointed in our services of the day; six of them in the Morning and Evening Prayer, and the seventh in the Communion service, which is said after the Litany. A new Collect¹ was composed in 1549, as was also the collect for the first Sunday in Lent.

The Epistles and Gospels, read during this season, are continued from the old offices. They set before us the duty of self-denial, and teach us to withstand temptation by recounting Christ's victories over Satan. The fourth Sunday is called Midlent Sunday, or 'the Sunday of refreshment,' probably because the Gospel relates our Saviour's miracle in feeding the five thousand. The fifth is called Passion Sunday, because the commemoration of our Lord's passion then begins: the Epistle speaks of Him as our High Priest, sprinkling His own blood for us; the Gospel relates one of those conversations with the unbelieving Jews, in which he endured the contradiction of sinners.

que custodi; ut ab omnibus adversitatibus muniamur in corpore, et a pravis cogitationibus mundemur in mente².

THE HOLY WEEK.

The Quadragesimal fast was closed by the Great Week, Passion Week, or the Holy Week. It began on Palm Sunday¹, which was kept in commemoration of Christ's entry into Jerusalem. The whole week was observed with greater strictness and solemnity than the rest of Lent². This custom is retained in the Church of England by giving a special character to the daily services, in the appointment of Epistles and Gospels for each day, and thus collecting most of those portions of Scripture which relate to the crucifixion of our blessed Saviour. These are taken in an orderly course: the history of St Matthew is read on Palm Sunday, in the Second Lesson, and continued in the Gospel; St Mark's history is read in the Gospels on Monday and Tuesday; St Luke's, on Wednesday and Thursday; and St John's, on Good Friday. The Thursday in this week is called Cæna Domini, and Mandate, or Maundy Thursday, from the institution of the Lord's Supper on that day, and the command given to the Apostles for its continual observance, or from the new commandment³ to love one another.

In the East it was kept in the fourth and fifth centuries, but it was probably not until the sixth that it was observed in the West. vium), and the rubric says, 'Conveniunt clerici ad faciendum mandatum.' The following is the form of the 'Office for the Royal Maundy,' which is now used at the Chapel Royal, Whitehall: 'Exhortation, Confession, Absolution, &c. Ps. xli. First Lesson, Matt. xxv. 14—30. First Anthem. Distribution of clothing. Second Anthem. Distribution of woollen and linen cloth. Third Anthem. Distribution of money. Second Lesson, Matt. xxv. 31, to the end. Fourth Anthem. Two Prayers composed for the occasion. The Prayer for the Queen, and so on to the end.' Stephens' ed. of the Book of Common Prayer, (Eccl. Hist. Soc.), note, pp. 888 sqq.

On this day the candidates for baptism publicly rehearsed the Creed, and penitents were reconciled¹.

THE HOLY WEEK.

Good Friday² received its name from the blessed effects of our Saviour's sufferings, in obtaining eternal redemption for us. It has been observed from the first ages of Christianity; and in every church the history of Christ's passion was read³. This is fitly taken from St John's Gospel, because he was present at the crucifixion; and from his example we may learn not to be ashamed or afraid of the cross of Christ. The Epistle shews the insufficiency of Jewish sacrifices, and urges that they typified the one oblation of the Saviour, who made full satisfaction for the sins of the whole world: the Collects contain expressions of boundless charity, praying that the effects of His death may be as universal as the design of it. The proper Psalms⁴ were selected at the last revision: they were all composed for times of great distress, and most of them belong mystically to the sufferings of our Saviour; especially the 22nd, of which several passages were literally fulfilled by the events of the crucifixion⁵.

Easter Eve.

The last day of the Great Week, called Easter-Eve², was a fast-day of the universal Church³. It is kept holy in memory of Christ's resting in the grave, and of His descent into hell. The afternoon was one of the principal times for baptism: and the nocturnal service⁴, consisting of singing, prayer, and reading the Scriptures, was kept up until the dawn of Easter morning. The reformed Service-book had no proper Collect for this day: our present Collect was composed for the Prayer-Book for Scotland⁵ (1637), and with many alterations was placed in the Book of Common Prayer at the revision in 1661.

EASTER.

Disputes about the time of the celebration.

The long fast of Lent, and the solemnities of the Holy Week, are closed by the festival of Easter¹. It was a great occasion of rejoicing, and elicited peculiar acts of charity². Fierce disputes, however, have convulsed the Church about the proper time of its celebration,—whether it should be observed on the 14th day of the moon, with the Jewish Passover, or on the 25th of March, or on a Sunday: while those who agreed to observe the festival on no other than the Lord's day, varied by a week or a month according to their different calculations³. The whole paschal commemoration included fifteen days,—the week preceding⁴ and the week following⁵ the Day of the Resurrection. Hence the following Sunday was called the Octave of Easter⁶. On this day the newly baptized were formally presented, and incorporated into the Church; after which they put off their white baptismal robes⁷. The commemoration of Easter throughout the following week was continued, at least in some dioceses, until the eleventh century, when the festival was reduced to three days⁸.

² The indulgentiæ paschales included the liberation of prisoners, remission of debts, and manumission of slaves. Guericke, p. 152, n. Bingham, XX. 5, §§ 6, 7.

⁷ Dominica in albis, or post albas, sc. depositas; dies novorum, neophytorum; octava infantium; κυριακή εν λευκοῖς, ἡ καινή κυριακή ἀντίπασχα: Low-Sunday, as opposed to Easter, which is emphatically a high day.

A short service introductory to Matins on Easter Day was appointed in the Sarum Breviary; in which, after taking the host and the crucifix from the 'sepulchre,' and placing them on the altar, the following Anthem and Collect were said:—

An. Christus resurgens ex mortuis jam non moritur, mors illi ultra non dominabitur. Quod enim vivit, vivit Deo. Alleluia, Alleluia. Vers. Dicant nunc Judæi, &c. Vers. Surrexit Dominus de sepulchro. Resp. Qui pro nobis pependit in ligno. The Anthems Venite.

The Invitatory at Matins was, Alleluia, Alleluia. Christus hodie surrexit. Alleluia, Alleluia.

In 1549 this introductory service was retained:—

'In the morning afore Matins, the people being assembled in the church, these Anthems shall be first solemnly sung or said.

Christ rising again from the dead, &c. Alleluia, Alleluia.

Christ is risen again, the firstfruits, &c. Alleluia.

EASTER.

There are also Collects, Epistles, and Gospels appointed for two Communion: the Collect for the first Communion being said also on Monday, and that for the second Communion on Tuesday and on the following Sunday.

At the revision of the Prayer-Book in 1552, the above two anthems, omitting the Hallelujahs, were appointed instead of Venite. The Collect for the first Communion was appointed for Easter Day, Monday in Easter Week, and the Sunday after Easter; and the Collect for the Second Communion was appointed for Tuesday in Easter Week. And so it continued until the last revision, when the first Anthem¹ was prefixed, the Collect for Easter Day appointed to be used throughout the week, and the Collect for the Second Communion (1549) appointed for the Sunday after Easter.

So little variety occurs in our usual services that the change on Easter Day distinctly marks the festival. After the Absolution and Lord's Prayer, the office of praise is begun with anthems proper to the day instead of the daily Invitatory Psalm. This reference to the festival is maintained in the proper Psalms². Ps. ii. relates to the triumphant settlement of David in his kingdom, and is a prophetic representation of the kingly and priestly offices of Christ, after He had been violently opposed by His adversaries. Ps. lvii. referring to David's deliverance from Saul, in a mystical sense contains Christ's triumph over death and hell. Ps. cxii. is a thanksgiving was read in the Epistle at the Second Communion.

² Ps. ii. had been sung at Matins; Ps. cxii. at Vespers; Ps. cxiii. at Lauds; and Ps. cxviii. at Prime.

for all the marvellous works of our redemption, of which the crowning wonder was the resurrection. Ps. cxiii. is a thankful commemoration of the glory and condescension of God, which was never more discernible than in the work of redemption. Ps. cxiv. is a thanksgiving for the deliverance of Israel from Egypt, which was a type of our deliverance from sin and death: and Ps. cxviii. composed to celebrate the peace of David's kingdom when the ark had been brought into Jerusalem, refers prophetically to the kingdom of Christ¹.

The first Lessons contain an account of the institution of the Passover, the type of 'Christ our Passover'; and of the deliverance of the Israelites by passing through the Red Sea, a type of our deliverance from the death of sin by baptism. The Gospel and the Second Evening Lesson give us the full evidence of Christ's resurrection; and the Epistle and the second Morning Lesson teach us what use we must make of it. The Lessons read on Monday and Tuesday relate the feeding of the Israelites with manna,—a type of our Saviour, who was the bread of life that came down from heaven: the vanquishing of the Amalekites, while the hands of Moses were held up, by which posture he put himself into the form of a cross,—a type of the Christian's victory over his spiritual enemies by the cross of Christ: the smiting of the rock, which gave water to the Israelites,—a type of our Saviour smitten upon the cross, who gives us the water of life: the communication of the commandments to the people by the ministry of Moses, he being in this respect a type of Christ, the prophet like unto Moses, who should more perfectly reveal the divine will to man: and the intercession of Moses for the children of Israel, in whose behalf he was

The joyful commemoration of our Saviour's resurrection, and the promise of the Comforter, are the principal subjects of the Gospels from Easter to Whitsuntide; while the Epistles exhort to the practice of those duties which are answerable to the Christian profession.

Easter Day. Deus qui hodierna die per Unigenitum tuum eternitatis nobis aditum devicta morte reserasti: vota nostra quæ præveniendò aspiras, etiam adjuvando prosequere¹.

Third Sunday after Easter. Deus qui errantibus, ut in viam possint redire justitiæ, veritatis tuæ lumen ostendis: da cunctis qui Christiana professione censentur, et illa respuere quæ huic inimica sint nomini, et ea quæ sunt apta sectari².

Fourth Sunday. Deus qui fidelium mentes unius efficis voluntatis: da populis tuis id amare quod præcipis, id desiderare quod promittis, ut inter mundanas varietates ibi nostra fixa sint corda, ubi vera sunt gaudia³.

Fifth Sunday. Deus a quo cuncta bona procedunt, largire supplicibus tuis ut cogitemus te inspirante quæ recta sunt, et te gubernante eadem faciamus⁴.

The Rogation days. The three days preceding Holy Thursday, or the feast of our Lord's Ascension, are called the rogation days. Their origin has been traced to Mamertus bishop of Vienne (460), who appointed annual litanies on these days⁵. At the Reformation all other religious processions were abolished, except the perambulation of parishes in this week. No office, however, was appointed for use on

THE ASCENSION.

The day of our Lord's Ascension into heaven, forty days after His resurrection from the dead, has been observed as one of the great Church festivals² from the beginning of Christianity. Proper Psalms and Lessons are appointed for the day. Ps. viii. is a song of praise for creation, and the appointment of man to be lord of this world; but in a prophetic sense it sets forth the mercy of God in exalting our human nature above all creatures, which was fulfilled when the Son of God took our nature, and ascended with it to heaven. Ps. xv. shews how justly our Saviour, as the perfect and the pattern man, ascended to the holy hill of God, and thus points out the qualifications which we must endeavour to attain, if we would follow him there. Ps. xxi. was eminently fulfilled in our Lord's victory over death, and in His ascension, when having put all His enemies to flight, He was exalted in His own strength. Ps. xxiv. was composed by David on the occasion of bringing the ark into the place which he had prepared for it on Mount Sion; it has always been regarded as prophetic of the exaltation of Christ, the King of Glory, who passed through the everlasting doors, when He went back to His own glory in heaven:

¹ 'The curate...at certain convenient places shall admonish the people to give thanks to God, in the beholding of God's benefits, for the increase and abundance of His fruits upon the face of the earth, with the saying of Ps. civ. Benedic, anima mea. At which time also the same minister shall inculcate this and such like sentences, Cursed be he that translateth

the bounds and doles of his neighbour; or such other order of prayer as shall be hereafter appointed.' Q. Elizabeth's Injunctions (1559); Cardwell, Doc. Ann. XLIII. § 19.

THE ASCENSION.

Ps. xlvii. likewise, a song of praise for the victories of Israel over the surrounding nations, is applied to the Christian Church, whose Head and Lord is the great King upon all the earth, and has gone up with a merry noise: and Ps. cviii. calls upon us to give thanks to God, for setting Himself above the heavens, and being Lord both of Jews and heathens.

The Lessons.
Deut. x.

2 Kings ii.

The first Lessons relate the giving of the law to Moses in the mount,—a type of our Saviour's ascension into heaven to send down the new law of faith; and the assumption of Elijah, and the consequent communication of a double portion of his spirit to Elisha, which prefigured our Saviour, who after His ascension sent down the Holy Ghost upon His Apostles.

The ten days after the Ascension are sometimes called Expectation-week: they commemorate that anxious period during which the Apostles tarried at Jerusalem, in earnest expectation of the promised gift of the Comforter.

The Collect
for Ascension Day.

The Collect for Ascension-day was taken from the old offices:—

Concede, quæsumus, omnipotens Deus, ut qui hodierna die Unigenitum tuum redemptorem nostrum ad cælos ascendisse credimus, ipsi quoque mente in cælestibus habitemus¹.

Sunday after Ascension Day.

A new Collect was composed in 1549 for the Sunday after Ascension Day, taken from an antiphon which had been sung at Vespers on Ascension Day:—

O rex gloriæ, Domine virtutum, qui triumphator hodie super omnes cælos ascendisti, ne derelinquas nos orphanos, sed mitte promissum patris in nos Spiritum veritatis. Alleluia².

Whitsunday, or Pentecost.

The Festival of Whitsuntide corresponds with the Jewish Feast of Pentecost. That commemorated the delivery of the Law on Mount Sinai, fifty days after the Passover; and after the same interval¹ from the true Passover, when Christ was offered for us, the Holy Ghost was given to the Christian Church. The day was anciently called Pentecost. The English name Whitsunday has been commonly supposed to be White Sunday, from the white garments of the newly baptized; but when we remember that a very ancient mode of spelling the word is Wit-Sunday, the more probable derivation is that suggested by a writer of the fourteenth century², viz. Wit or Wisdom Sunday, in commemoration of the wondrous gifts bestowed on the Apostles. It is an especial festival of the reformed Church of England; 'having been selected in 1549 as the day on which the use of the new English Service should be commenced³.

Proper Psalms are appointed, the first three of which were sung at Matins in the old offices. Ps. xlviii. is a hymn in honour of Jerusalem, as particularly chosen for the place of God's worship, and also an expression of thankfulness that we are permitted to meet in His service, and wait for his loving-kindness. Ps. lxviii. contains a prophetic description of the ascension of Christ, who went up on high, and led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men; and, when the Lord gave the word, great was the company of the preachers. Ps. civ. is a hymn of praise to God the Creator; and is supposed to be a very early composition, from there being no allusion in it to the Mosaic ritual. It was probably selected for this day from the similitude between the natural and spiritual

Week.*

The whole of this week was sometimes considered as festival, as was also the whole of Easter-week. But when the Sunday after Whitsunday became a fixed time for ordination, the stationary fasts of the week were observed as days of humiliation and prayer for a blessing on the approaching ordinations. The Epistles read on the Monday and Tuesday refer to the baptism of converts, and their receiving the Holy Ghost by the hands of the Apostles: the Gospel for Monday seems to have been appointed for the instruction of the newly baptized, teaching them to believe in Christ, and to become the children of light; and the Gospel for Tuesday, with reference to the Ember-days, and the commission and duties of Christian ministers. The first Lessons furnish instances from the Old Testament of the ministry of the Holy Ghost: the confusion of tongues at Babel, which was repaired by the gift of tongues to the Apostles; the resting of God's Spirit upon the seventy elders; the inspiration of Saul and his messengers; and a prophecy of Moses, how God would deal with penitent Israel, and put His word in their heart. The second Lessons teach us to use spiritual gifts to edification; to take heed not to quench the Spirit, nor to despise his prophecies; but because many false prophets are gone into the world, to try all teachers who boast of the Spirit, by the rules of the catholic faith.

In the Greek Church the Octave of Whitsuntide was closed by a festival of All Martyrs¹. The Western Church, in later times at least, terminated Whitsuntide by the Festival of the Trinity, combining in one Commemoration the several objects of the previous festivals of the ecclesiastical year. This great feast, which gives name to the following Sundays until Advent, is unlike the other festivals in not resting upon one distinct fact in the history of Christianity; and accordingly we do not find any clear trace of its being kept before the 10th and 11th centuries. It was Pope John XXII., in the beginning of the 14th century, who first fixed its celebration to this Sunday².

TRINITY. them. Yet portions of the Old Testament receive their full interpretation from this doctrine, and are therefore read on Trinity Sunday. The first Morning Lesson glances at the work of the Word of God, and of the Spirit of God in creation; and the phrase, Let us make man, is thought to have some reference to the Persons of the Godhead. The first Evening Lesson records the appearance of Jehovah to Abraham, and relates how, on that occasion, three men stood by him. But the sacred mystery of the Trinity of Persons is most plainly manifested in the second Morning Lesson, which notices the baptism of the Son, the voice of the Father, and the descent of the Holy Ghost, shewing three distinct Persons, the second Evening Lesson declaring these to be One in essence. The Epistle and Gospel are the same that were read in the old offices on the octave of Pentecost, the last day of the more solemn time of baptism, to which the Gospel refers. Yet they are well suited to the festival, under its more modern name of Trinity Sunday: for the three Persons of the Godhead are mentioned in the Gospel; and the portion appointed for the Epistle contains the Hymn of the Angels, with its threefold ascription of praise to God.

Omnipotens sempiterne Deus, qui dedisti famulis tuis in confessione veræ fidei æternæ Trinitatis gloriam agnoscere, et in potentia majestatis adorare Unitatem: quæsumus ut ejusdem fidei firmitate ab omnibus semper muniamur adversis¹.

¹ One exception to this course occurs at the 18th Sunday, which Wheatly supposes to have been often one of the Dominicæ vacantes, or Sundays following the Ember days, which had no proper office because of the ordinations that were held at those times. And when an Epistle and Gospel were appointed for this Sunday, they were adapted to such solemnity. The Epistle mentions the spiritual gifts of a Christian, which are especially necessary in ordained teachers, that they should be enriched in all utterance and in all knowledge; and the Gospel, relating how our Lord silenced the most learned of the Jews by His questions and answers, teaches how false opinions are to be confuted by the right understanding of Scripture.

composed.

The arrangement of the Collects follows the order of the old Missal: when the course for the Sundays and fixed festivals of the ecclesiastical year, beginning with Advent, has been completed, the Collects are given for those Saints' days, the position of which will continually vary with respect to the Sundays¹. The Commemorations of the Apostles², and the Virgin Mary, and John the Baptist, have been selected from the number of real or factitious saints, in whose honour proper services were held; and for these it was necessary to compose a series of almost entirely new Collects, since the old Collects were mainly prayers for the saints' intercession³. The also from this rubric that the occurrence of a greater festival (fes-tum duplex, fest. ix. lectionum) set aside the ordinary Sunday service; which is our present rule; while we learn from another rubric that no notice was taken at Mass of a smaller festival, beyond the insertion of its Collect, as a Memory:

*In die sancti Felicis episcopi et martyris; fol. clx.: 'Sciendum est

num vel octava sine regimine chori

There is a difficulty in deciding what first lessons should be read on the 27th Sunday after Trinity.
It is suggested, as the course most suitable to the occasion, the Sunday next before Advent, that the First Lessons appointed for the sixth

Sunday after Epiphany should be read on this day; the corresponding Collect will have been used on the preceding Sunday with the Lessons for the 26th Sunday after Trinity; and the propria of the sixth Sunday after Epiphany have been chosen with reference to their more frequent use, as preceding Advent, than as following Epiphany. Many reasons present themselves against the use of the Lessons from the daily Calendar on this extraordinary Sunday.

Apostles is that of St Peter and St Paul, which was in use by the end of the fourth century. The feasts institution. Guericke, pp. 187 sq.

Epistles and Gospels that had been read on these days were generally retained; and proper first Lessons appointed from the books of Proverbs and Ecclesiastes, or from the Apocryphal books of Ecclesiasticus and Wisdom. For some few also, which have their own proper history, second Lessons are appointed.

The Collect for St Andrew's Day, composed in 1549, referred to the sufferings of his death³: this was changed in 1552, for an entirely new Collect, making mention of his ready obedience to the calling of Christ. The Prayer-Book of 1549 also retained a Collect in commemoration of St Mary Magdalene⁴. The feast of St

St Andrew.

St Mary Magdalene.

¹ Missal. Sar. In conversione S. Pauli, fol. clxii. This festival differs from those of the other Apostles, in not commemorating his death or martyrdom, but his conversion, which is selected not only as an event very striking in itself, but because it was made so highly beneficial to the Christian Church.

² Ibid. fol. cxcix.

³ 'Almighty God, which hast given such grace to thy Apostle Saint Andrew, that he counted the sharp and painful death of the cross to be an high honour, and a great glory: Grant us to take and esteem all troubles and adversities which shall come unto us for thy sake, as things profitable for us toward the obtaining of everlasting life: through Jesus Christ our Lord.'

⁴ 'Merciful Father, give us grace that we never presume to sin through the example of any creature, but if it shall chance us at any time to offend thy divine majesty, that then we may truly repent, and lament the same, after the example of Mary Magdalene, and by lively faith obtain remission of all our sins: through the only merits of thy Son our Saviour Christ.' The earliest extant mention of this festival is in the 26th canon of the Council of Toulouse (1229): Guericke, p. 193, note.

DAYS.St John the Baptist.

John the Baptist differs from the other festivals, in commemorating his birth. It is the only nativity, besides that of Jesus Christ Himself, that is kept by the Church. The reason for this difference appears to be, that the birth of the Baptist was foretold by an angel, and brought to pass after an uncommon manner. He was also the forerunner of our blessed Lord, and by preaching repentance prepared the way for the publishing of the Gospel. It has been observed since the 4th or 5th century¹.

Festivals of
Mary.

The mediæval Church held seven festivals in honour of the Virgin Mary². The two oldest of these are founded on the Gospel history, and pure expressions of reverence for her who is blessed among women, if indeed they may not also be regarded as festivals of our Lord Himself. The reformers of our offices accordingly retained these two Commemorations. *The Annunciation of the blessed Virgin Mary*³ (March 25) was observed probably as early as the 5th century: and soon afterwards—at latest in the 6th century—the feast of the *Purification of St Mary the Virgin*⁴ (Feb. 2) was held by the Western Church, while the Eastern had a corresponding festival, eighth century, but not clearly traced in the Latin Church before the 14th century. See Guericke, pp. 190—194; Hardwick, Middle Age, pp. 99, 326.

The feast of St Michael and all Angels—commemorating the ministry of the holy angels to the heirs of salvation—originated in some provincial festivals which were introduced between the 3rd and 9th centuries, and which were then combined into one common celebration on the 29th of September⁴. Its observance was not enjoined upon the Greek Church before the 12th century⁵. Our Collect is taken from the Missal:— St. Michael.

In 1549, no Epistle was appointed, but 'the same that is appointed for the Sunday,' was to be read; and the Gospel was, Luc. ii. [22—27]. The ancient Lection from Malachi was re-appointed 'for the Epistle' in 1662, and the Gospel extended to the 40th verse.

DAYS.

All Saints.

At first each Church celebrated the memorial of its own martyrs; but afterwards some few became the objects of commemoration by the whole Church. In the Greek communion a festival in honour of the whole army of Martyrs was kept on the octave of Whitsunday. In the course of time the idea of Martyr and Saint became very naturally identified: and when the Roman Pantheon was given to the Church by the Emperor Phocas (610), and converted into a Church of St Mary and All Saints, Boniface IV. instituted a festival of All Saints¹, which however did not long continue. It was renewed, and celebrated at Rome in the 8th century, on the 1st of November, and was made a festival of the universal Church by Pope Gregory IV. (834)². The power of canonisation, assumed by the Popes towards the end of the 10th century³, increased the number of saints, till the frequency of church holy-days became most inconvenient. These celebrations were removed from the reformed offices; but All Saints' day was retained in commemoration of all the known and unknown departed Christian worthies, and of the communion of the Church triumphant with the Church as yet militant on earth.

CHAPTER III

The Order for the Administration of the Lord's Supper, or Holy Communion.

SECT. I. Primitive Liturgies.

THE traces of the form of worship used by the Christian converts, which we find in the New Testament, refer to the Eucharist, as being emphatically the Christian service¹. Hence naturally arose the ecclesiastical use of the word *Liturgy*², to designate the form employed by the Church in celebrating that office, which was called the Mass by the mediæval and the Latin Church, but which we now call the Lord's Supper, and the Holy Communion³. From the scanty remains of very early

² In classical Greek, leitourgia denotes any public service, religious or secular. In the LXX. translation it is used for the ministry of the Levites (e. g. 1 Chron. xxvi. 30, εἰς πᾶσαν λ. Κυρίου); in the New Testament, for the ministry of prophets and teachers (Acts xiii. 2); and in ecclesiastical writers, for any sacred function, and, in an especial and strict sense, for the Eucharistic office. Thus we speak of the Liturgies of St James, St Mark, St Chrysostom, &c., for the service used in celebrating the Lord's Supper in the Churches of Antioch, Alexandria, Constantinople, &c.

³ Dr Waterland (Doctr. of the Eucharist, ch. I.) adduces the following successive appellations of this Service: Breaking of Bread, (A.D. 33), Acts ii. 42; Communion, κοινωνία (57), from St Paul's account of the effect of the service, which is the communion of the century.

Christian times we may gather so much concerning this form¹, as to allow that the various Churches, which were founded by the Apostles, had each a service for the Eucharist; and that these Liturgies, while differing it may be in some particulars, all agreed in their main features. The earliest extant account of the Sunday service is contained in the following passage of Justin Martyr's Apology (140). We find what we should expect from the traces that are scattered through the Apostolical writings: that this service included the reading of the Gospels or the Prophets; a sermon; a litany, in which all joined; then the Eucharist, in which the presiding minister offered up a prayer, the people answering heartily, Amen. Next followed the distribution of the consecrated elements; the service being always accompanied with almsgiving.

It was also called by the Latins, Collecta, Dominicum, Agenda; and by the Greeks, Mystagogia, Synaxis, Telete, Anaphora: see Maskell, Ancient Liturgy, p. 146.

τῶν ἀποστόλων ἢ τὰ συγγράμματα τῶν προφητῶν ἀναγινώσκειται μέχρι ἐγχωρεῖ· εἶτα παυσαμένου τοῦ ἀναγινώσκοντος, ὁ προσεστὼς διὰ λόγου τὴν νοουθεσίαν καὶ πρόκλησιν τῆς τῶν καλῶν τούτων μιμήσεως ποιείται· ἔπειτα ἀνιστάμεθα κοινῇ πάντες καὶ εὐχὰς πέμπομεν· καὶ, ὡς προέφημεν, παυσαμένων ἡμῶν τῆς εὐχῆς, ἄρτος προσφέρεται καὶ οἶνος καὶ ὕδωρ· καὶ ὁ προσεστὼς εὐχὰς ὁμοίως καὶ εὐχαριστίας ὅση δύναμις αὐτῷ ἀναπέμπει, καὶ ὁλοὰς ἐπευφημεί λέγων τὸ Ἄμην· καὶ ἡ διάδοσις καὶ ἡ μετάληψις ἀπὸ τῶν εὐχαριστηθέντων ἐκάστῳ γίνεται, καὶ τοῖς οὐ παροῦσι διὰ τῶν διακόνων πέμπεται. οἱ εὐποροῦντες δὲ καὶ βουλόμενοι κατὰ προαίρεσιν ἕκαστος τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ὁ βούλεται δίδωσι· καὶ τὸ συλλεγόμενον παρὰ τῷ προσεστῶτι ἀποτίθεται, καὶ αὐτὸς ἐπικουρεῖ ὀρφανοῖς, κ. τ. λ.¹

It is a general opinion that Liturgies were not committed to writing before the end of the second, or even of the third century²; nor indeed can we confidently assert that we have a perfect example of so high antiquity: yet certain portions, and expressions which we still use, can certainly be traced³, and perhaps the substance of the Liturgy itself may be recovered, which was used at a very early period. The following claims to be such an example of the Liturgy used in the second century⁴.

The Liturgy as used probably in the second century.

² This seems very probable, because, in the persecutions under Diocletian and his associates, though a strict inquiry was made after the books of Scripture, and other things belonging to the Church, which were often delivered up by the traditores to be burnt, yet we never read of any ritual books, or books of divine service, delivered up among them.' Renaudot, in Bingham, XIII. 5, § 3.

Gallican Liturgy.

The ancient Gallican Liturgy began with an anthem, followed by a prefatory exhortation. After the mutual salutation of the priest and people, a collect was said. Then the Trisagium was sung, followed by the canticle

'Benedictus.' Then came lessons from the Prophets and the Apostolic writings; after which the Hymn of the three Children was sung. Then the Gospel was read, before and after which the Trisagium was again sung, and the people gave the response (still continued by tradition in the English Church), 'Glory be to Thee, O Lord.' Afterwards the bishop preached, or a homily was read. Then the appointed prayers were said by a deacon for the hearers and catechumens. After their dismissal the bread and wine were brought in, and an oblation of them made, while an anthem was sung, which answered to the Offertory of later times. Then the Diptychs, containing the names of Christian worthies, were read; the collect post nomina was said; the kiss of peace given; and the collect ad pacem said; after which the canon followed, which was very short. After the consecration came the prayer post secreta; 'postea fiebat confractio et commixtio corporis Christi.' In the meantime the choir sung an anthem. This was followed by a collect, the Lord's Prayer, another collect, and the blessing, 'Pax, fides, et caritas, et communicatio corporis et sanguinis Domini sit semper vobiscum.' During communion an anthem was sung. Then one, or perhaps two, collects were said, and the people were dismissed¹.

This was probably the original form according to which the British Church celebrated the holy Eucharist till the end of the 6th century². It doubtless provided Augustine with some particulars, which being grafted upon the Roman, formed the Anglo-Saxon Liturgy³. The

Norman invasion brought with it a nearer approximation to the ecclesiastical customs of Rome, but it could not effect an entire conformity. The distinctive Uses of the English dioceses maintained their ground: and that of the Church of Salisbury, which was the Liturgy most widely adopted (1087—1549), was framed by Bishop Osmund, with the full idea not only that national Churches had a certain independence, but that exact uniformity of ritual is by no means necessary to ensure agreement in Catholic truth. This famous Liturgy is given as presenting the Eucharistic office which was used by the mediæval English Church, until the second year of the reign of Edward VI.¹

the dioceses, receiving partial alterations perhaps in each: so that 'the eucharistical offices of the Anglo-Saxon Church may have been for many years distinguished from each other by very important variations.' Maskell, ibid. p. lvii.

¹ See Maskell, Ancient Liturgy of the Church of England, where the Sarum Liturgy is compared with those of the Use of Bangor, York, and Hereford, and also with the Ordinary and Canon of the Roman Church.

mitted to attend. Missæ privata, familiaris, peculiaris, specialis, singularis, was celebrated by the priest with only one attendant: as distinguished from High Mass it was what is now called Plain, or Low Mass: but as opposed to the Missæ publica, it means that, whether people were present or not, the priest alone communicated. In the Missæ solitaria a priest consecrated, and performed the service without any attendant: it was for a time not uncommon in monasteries, but was at length forbidden, and was always discountenanced in England. Missæ votiva was said at the option of the priest, not agreeing with the office of the day, though subject to certain rules: some votive masses were fixed to be said at certain times, as the Missæ pro defunctis on the second of November. Missæ præsanctifi- with an address to be read to the people the next Sunday, or holy-day, or at the least one day before administering the Communion. The form is mainly that which still stands in our Prayer-Book, as the first notice of Communion; omitting the clause, 'Therefore if any of you be a blasphemer, &c.;' and in addition to the invitation to those who are troubled in conscience, 'requiring such as shall be satisfied with a general confession not to be offended with them that doth use, to their further satisfying, the auricular and secret confession to the priest; nor those also which think needful or convenient, for the quietness of their own consciences, particularly to open their sins to the priest, to be offended with them which are satisfied with their humble confession to God, and the general confession to the Church.'

'The time of Communion' was ordered to be 'immediately after that the Priest himself hath received the sacrament, without the varying of any other rite or ceremony in the mass (until other order shall be provided), but as heretofore usually the Priest hath done with the sacrament of the body, to prepare, bless, and consecrate so much as will serve the people; so it shall continue still after the same manner and form, save that he shall bless and consecrate the biggest chalice or some fair and convenient cup or cups full of wine with some water put unto it; and that day not drink it up all himself, but taking one only sup or draught, leave the rest upon the altar covered, and turn to them that are disposed to be partakers of the Communion, and shall thus exhort them as followeth: 'Dearly beloved in the Lord, ye coming to this holy communion must consider what S. Paul writeth to the Corinthians, how he exhorteth all persons diligently to try and examine themselves, &c.' (very nearly in the words of our present Exhortation at the time of the celebration of the Communion).

‘Then the Priest shall say to them which be ready to take the Sacrament: If any man here be an open blasphemer, &c.’ (the clause which is now inserted, in almost the same words, in the first Exhortation, giving warning of the Communion).

‘Here the Priest shall pause a while, to see if any man will withdraw himself: and if he perceive any so to do, then let him commune with him privily at convenient leisure, and see whether he can with good exhortation bring him to grace: and after a little pause the Priest shall say: You that do truly and earnestly repent you of your sins . . . make your humble confession to Almighty God, and to his holy Church, here gathered together in his name, meekly kneeling upon your knees. The General
Confession.

‘Almighty everlasting God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Maker of all things, the Judge of all men, we acknowledge, and we lament, that we were conceived and born in sins, and that therefore we be prone to all evils, and abhor from all good things; that we have also transgressed thy holy commandments without end and measure in despising thee and thy word, in distrusting thy aid, in trusting ourselves and the world, in wicked studies and works, wherewith we have most grievously offended thy Majesty, and hurt our neighbour. Therefore we have more and more buried ourselves into eternal death.

And we are sorry for it with all our hearts, and we desire pardon of thee for all the things that we have committed against thee; we call for thy help against sin dwelling in us, and Satan the kindler thereof: keep us, that we do nothing hereafter against thee, and cover the wickedness that remaineth in us with the righteousness of thy Son, and repress it in us with thy Spirit, and at length purge it clean out. Have mercy upon us, most gentle Father, through thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ. Give, and increase thy Holy Spirit in us, which may teach us to acknowledge our sins truly and thoroughly, and to be pricked with a lively repentance of the same, and with true faith to apprehend and retain remission of them in Christ our Lord, that dying to sins daily more and more, we may serve, and please thee in a new life to the glory of

Then followed the 'Comfortable Words,' the Prayer 'in the name of all them that shall receive the Communion,' and the Administration, with these words: 'The body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was given for thee, preserve thy body unto everlasting life:.' 'The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for thee, preserve thy soul to everlasting life:.' concluding with the blessing:

thy name, and edifying of thy congregation. For we acknowledge that thou justly requirest these things of us, wherefore we desire to perform the same. Vouchsafe thou, O Father of heaven, which hast given us a will, to grant us also that we may study to do those things with all our hearts which pertain to our health, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Hear ye the Gospel. John iii. God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that all which believe in him should have life everlasting. Or, 1 Tim. i. This is a sure saying, and worthy of all embracing, that Jesus Christ came into this world to save sinners. Or, John iii. The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hands: he that believeth in the Son hath life everlasting. Or, Acts x. All the prophets bear witness unto Christ, that all that believe in him receive remission of their sins through him. Or, 1 Joh. ii. My little children, if any have sinned, we have a just advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, and he is an atonement for our sins. When the pastor hath shewed to the people one of the said Gospels, he shall say further. Because our blessed Lord hath left this power to his congregation, that it may absolve them from sins, and restore them into the favour of the heavenly Father, which being repentant for their sins do truly believe in Christ the Lord; I, the minister of Christ and the congregation, declare and pronounce remission of sins, the favour of God, and life everlasting, through our Lord Jesus Christ, to all them, which be sorry for their sins, which have true faith in Christ the Lord, and desire to approve themselves unto him.' Hermann's Consultation, fol. 213 sq. (1547).

‘The peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and in his Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.’

A rubric ordered that ‘If there be a Deacon or other Priest, then shall he follow with the chalice, and as the Priest ministereth the bread, so shall he for more expedition minister the wine:’ also that the bread ‘shall be such as heretofore hath been accustomed; and every of the said consecrated breads shall be broken in two pieces at the least:’ and if the wine hallowed doth not suffice, ‘the Priest, after the first cup or chalice be emptied, may go again to the altar, and reverently, and devoutly, prepare and consecrate another, and so the third, or more, likewise beginning at these words, Simili modo postquam cœnatum est, and ending at these words, qui pro nobis et pro multis effundetur in remissionem peccatorum, and without any levation or lifting up.’

The Communion Office in the first Prayer-Book of Edward VI. (1549) differs in so many particulars from the re-arrangement of the Service in 1552, and has been the subject of so much discussion, that an abstract, at some considerable length, is given of it, as the most satisfactory mode of describing its construction. It is entitled:

The Supper of the Lord, and the Holy Communion, commonly called the Mass.

1. So many as intend to be partakers of the holy Communion, shall signify their names to the Curate over night¹, or else in the morning, afore the beginning of Matins, or immediately after.

¹ Comp. Hermann's Consultation, fol. 207. ‘We will that the pastors admit no man to the Lord's Supper, which hath not first offered himself to them, and after that he hath first made a confession of his sins, being catechised, he receive absolution according to the Lord's word...and for this purpose let the people be called together at eventide the day before.’

(1549).

2. And if any of those be an open and notorious evil liver, &c.

3. The same order . . . him that is obstinate.

4. Upon the day, and at the time appointed for the ministration of the holy Communion, the Priest that shall execute the holy ministry, shall put upon him the vesture appointed for that ministration, that is to say: a white albe plain, with a vestment or cope. And where there be many Priests or Deacons, there so many shall be ready to help the Priest, in the ministration, as shall be requisite: and shall have upon them likewise the vestures appointed for their ministry, that is to say, albes with tunicles. Then shall the Clerks sing in English for the office, or Introit (as they call it), a psalm appointed for that day.

The Priest standing humbly afore the midst of the altar, shall say the Lord's Prayer, with this Collect¹:

Almighty God, unto whom all hearts be open, &c.

Then shall he say a psalm appointed for the Introit: which psalm ended, the Priest shall say, or else the Clerks shall sing, iii. Lord, have mercy upon us, &c.

Then the Priest standing at God's board shall begin,

Glory be to God on high.

The Clerks. And in earth peace, &c.

Then the Priest shall turn him to the people and say,

The Lord be with you.

The Answer. And with thy spirit.

The Priest. Let us pray.

The Collect.

Then shall follow the Collect of the day, with one of these two Collects following for the King²:

been said before in this place, in the English Church.

Almighty and everlasting God, we be taught, &c.

The Collects ended, the Priest, or he that is appointed, shall read the Epistle, in a place assigned for the purpose, saying, The Epistle of St Paul, written, &c. The Minister then shall read the Epistle. Immediately after the Epistle ended, the Priest, or one appointed to read the Gospel, shall say, The holy Gospel, written, &c. The Clerks and people shall answer, Glory be to thee, O Lord¹. The Priest or Deacon then shall read the Gospel. After the Gospel ended, the Priest shall begin,

I believe in one God.

The Creed.

The Clerks shall sing the rest.

After the Creed ended, shall follow the Sermon or Homily, or some portion of one of the Homilies, as they shall be hereafter divided: wherein if the people be not exhorted to the worthy receiving of the holy Sacrament of the body and blood of our Saviour Christ, then shall the Curate give this exhortation to those that be minded to receive the same.

Dearly beloved in the Lord, ye that mind to come, &c. The Exhortation.
 (our present Exhortation, at the time of the celebration of the Communion, with the address (1548), warning open sinners not to come to the holy table, inserted after the words, 'Sundry kinds of death.')

In cathedral churches or other places where there is daily Communion, it shall be sufficient to read this exhortation above written once in a month. And in parish-churches upon the week days it may be left unsaid.

And if upon the Sunday or holy-day, the people be negligent to come to the Communion: Then shall the Priest earnestly exhort his parishioners to dispose themselves to the

Sentences.*

Then shall follow for the Offertory one or more of these sentences of Holy Scripture, to be sung whiles the people do offer, or else one of them to be said by the minister, immediately afore the offering.

In the meantime, while the Clerks do sing the Offertory, so many as are disposed shall offer to the poor men's box every one according to his ability and charitable mind. And at the offering days appointed every man and woman shall pay to the Curate the due and accustomed offerings.

Then so many as shall be partakers of the Holy Communion shall tarry still in the quire, or in some convenient place nigh the quire, the men on the one side, and the women on the other side. All other (that mind not to receive the said Holy Communion) shall depart out of the quire, except the Ministers and Clerks.

Then shall the Minister take so much bread and wine as shall suffice for the persons appointed² to receive the holy Communion, laying the bread upon the corporas, or else in

of the Elements.*

¹ This was the Exhortation appointed in 1548, with the addition of a clause, that wrong-doers must make satisfaction and due restitution: 'For neither the absolution of the priest can anything avail them, nor the receiving of this holy sacrament doth anything but increase their damnation.' The whole form, with verbal alterations, and the omission of secret confession, now stands in our Office as the first Exhortation, giving warning for the celebration of the Holy Communion. The idea and much of the language of this address was taken from the treatise 'Of the Lord's Supper,' and the sermons, or forms of exhortation to the communicants, in Hermann's Consultation, and similar addresses in the service of Pollanus.

² The rubrics at the end of the Office ordered that 'the parishioners of every parish shall offer every Sunday, at the time of the Offertory, the just value and price of the holy loaf;' and that 'some one at the least of that house, to whom by course it appertaineth to offer for the charges of the Communion, or some other whom they shall provide to offer for them, shall receive the holy Communion with the priest.'

This the Clerks shall also sing.

When the Clerks have done singing, then shall the Priest, or Deacon, turn him to the people, and say,

Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's church.

Then the Priest, turning him to the altar, shall say or sing, plainly and distinctly, this prayer following:

Almighty and everliving God, which by thy holy The Canon. Apostle hast taught us to make prayers and supplications, and to give thanks for all men: We humbly beseech thee most mercifully to receive these our prayers¹, . . . And we most humbly beseech thee of thy goodness, O Lord, to comfort and succour all them, which in this transitory life be in trouble, sorrow, need, sickness, or any other adversity. And especially we commend unto thy merciful goodness this congregation which is here assembled in thy name, to celebrate the commemoration of the most glorious death of thy Son: and here we do give unto thee most high praise, and hearty thanks, for the wonderful Commemoration of the saints departed.

We commend unto thy mercy, O Lord, all other thy servants, which are departed hence from us, with the sign of faith, and now do rest in the sleep of peace: Grant unto them, we beseech thee, thy mercy, and everlasting peace, and that, at the day of the general resurrection, we and all they which be of the mystical body of thy Son, may altogether be set on his right hand, and hear that his most joyful voice: Come unto me, O ye that be blessed of my Father, and possess the kingdom, which is prepared for you from the beginning of the world: grant this, O Father, for Jesus Christ's sake, our only Mediator and Advocate.

brake it, and gave to his disciples, saying, Take, eat, this is my body which is given for you: do this in remembrance of me.

Likewise after Supper he took the cup, and when he had given thanks, he gave it to them, saying: Here the Priest shall take the cup into his hands. Drink ye all of this, for this is my blood of the new Testament, which is shed for you and for many, for remission of sins: Do this as oft as you shall drink it, in remembrance of me.

The words before rehearsed are to be said, turning still to the altar, without any elevation, or shewing the Sacrament to the people.

Wherefore, O Lord and heavenly Father, according The Oblation. to the institution of thy dearly beloved Son, our Saviour Jesu Christ, we thy humble servants do celebrate, and make here before thy divine Majesty, with these thy holy gifts, the memorial which thy Son hath willed us to make: having in remembrance his blessed passion, mighty resurrection, and glorious ascension, rendering unto thee most hearty thanks, for the innumerable benefits procured unto us by the same, entirely desiring thy fatherly goodness, mercifully to accept this our sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving: most humbly beseeching thee to grant, that by the merits and death of thy Son Jesus Christ, and through faith in his blood, we and all thy whole Church may obtain remission of our sins, and all other benefits of his passion. And here we offer and present unto thee, O Lord, ourself, our souls and bodies, to be a reasonable, holy, and lively sacrifice unto thee: humbly beseeching thee, that whosoever shall be partakers of this holy Communion, may worthily receive the most precious body and blood of thy Son Jesus Christ, and be fulfilled with thy grace and heavenly benediction, and made one body with thy Son Jesus Christ, that he may dwell in them and they in him. And although we be unworthy (through our manifold sins) to offer unto thee any sacrifice: yet we beseech thee to accept this our bounden duty and service, and command these our prayers and supplications, by the ministry of thy holy angels, to be brought up into thy holy tabernacle before the sight of thy divine Majesty; not weighing our merits, but pardoning our offences, through Christ our Lord; by whom, and with whom, in the unity of the Holy Ghost, all honour and glory be unto thee, O Father Almighty, world without end. As our Saviour Christ hath commanded and taught us, we are bold to say. Our Father, which art in heaven, . . . and lead us not into temptation.

The Priest. Christ our paschal Lamb is offered up for us, once for all, when he bare our sins on his body upon the cross; for he is the very Lamb of God, that taketh away the sins of the world: wherefore let us keep a joyful and holy feast with the Lord.

Here the Priest shall turn him toward those that come to the holy Communion, and shall say,

¹ The mode of administration was thus ordered by a rubric at the end of the Office: 'Although it be read in ancient writers, that the people, many years past, received at the priest's hands the sacrament of the body of Christ in their own hands, and no commandment of Christ to the contrary: yet forasmuch as they many times conveyed the same secretly away, kept it with them, and diversly abused it to superstition and wickedness: lest any such thing hereafter should be attempted, and that an uniformity might be used throughout the whole realm, it is thought convenient the people commonly receive the sacrament of Christ's body in their mouths, at the priest's hand.'

The sources of our Communion Office will be perceived from what has preceded. It remains only to trace the changes by which it has been brought to its present arrangement. The title was changed in 1552.

The Rubrics.

The words of the first rubric (1549) implied that there was time between Matins and the Communion Service for intending communicants to signify their names to the priest. And the rubric remained in this form until 1661, when the Communion Service together with the Litany, having become in practice a part of the Sunday Morning Service, the names were ordered to be signified to the curate *at least some time the day before*³.

Notorious evil livers.

The second rubric refers to the case of notorious evil

² A collect 'for rain,' and one 'for fair weather,' were added to the six collects which we still have in this place.

³ The practice has fallen into disuse, and accordingly the rubric is omitted in the American Prayer-Book. Ecclesiastical hinderances to communion are, contempt of confirmation, and excommunication: personal hinderances are frenzy, and notorious crime.

livers, or persons who have done wrong to their neighbours by word or deed, to the offence of the congregation. The third likewise refers to malicious persons. These rules, implying an efficient system of corrective discipline, are wisely retained for self-reproof, and as a means of shewing what the Church requires in her members, though in practice they have fallen into disuse from the uncertainty of their legal application. There is, however, no doubt as to the duty of admonition; and ordinarily conscience and public feeling will deter a notorious offender from Communion, if not from crime. In proceeding to repulsion, it must be remembered that this is in fact excommunication, which requires the sentence of a competent judge; and that no private person may condemn a man upon common report as a notorious offender, unless he has been convicted by some legal sentence. The ecclesiastical rule is, according to the third rubric, to signify the case of one who will not be admonished, to the bishop, and take his advice. The safety of such a step to the individual clergyman consists in this, that the bishop is the party to institute legal proceedings, which he is bound to do, if the offender is to be repelled from Communion¹.

The fourth rubric determines the position of the priest, and of the holy table itself, together with its covering, at the time of Communion². Its language directing the Table to stand where Morning and Evening Prayer are appointed to be said, whether in the body of the church

Table.*

² In the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637) this rubric was: 'The holy table having at the Communion-time a carpet, and a fair white linen cloth upon it, with other decent furniture, meet for the high mysteries there to be celebrated, shall stand at the uppermost part of the chancel or church, where the Presbyter standing at the north-side, or end thereof, shall say the Lord's Prayer, with this Collect following for due preparation.'

THE

(as in parish-churches), or in the chancel (as in cathedrals and college-chapels), was meant on the one side to encourage ecclesiastical propriety, and on the other to justify the laxer usage of the ultra-reformers. Custom has, however, long retained the holy table in the chancel; it has also made a further interpretation of the rubric, viz. that the table is to stand altar-wise¹, at the east end of the church; and therefore the priest now ministers at the north end of the table, looking towards the south.

The Lord's Prayer, and Collect.

The Lord's Prayer and Collect were taken, in 1549, from the office which had been repeated by the priest as a preparation for saying Mass².

*The Com-

The Ten Commandments were inserted in 1552, from a supposed imitation of the Services used by Pollanus and a-Lasco³; and probably too, from a feeling that it was necessary to repeat God's commandments in the constant hearing of the people⁴, to preserve them from the rebellious spirit that broke out at intervals through the reign of Edward VI, and also from the communism of the Anabaptists⁵. The concluding response naturally

² Above, p. 293. The Collect was also said in the Missæ ad invocandum gratiam Spiritus Sancti. Miss. Sar. fol. cxxlii.

³ Above, pp. 42 sq., 45.

⁴ Exod. xx. 12—24, including the second table of the Law, had been read on Wednesday in the third week of Lent: Missal. Sar. Feria quarta post Oculi, fol. l. It is a very probable supposition that the Commandments were inserted in 1552, to ensure the constant reading of the second commandment: they were also given at full length, instead of the curtailed Roman form, in which also a clause of the second is joined to the first, and the number is then made up by a division of the tenth into two separate commandments. In Henry's Primer (1545, p. 460, ed. Burton) the words, 'Lord, into thy hands I commend my spirit: thou hast redeemed me, Lord God of truth,' are added as the tenth clause. King Alfred had added Exod. xx. 23, as the tenth commandment, 'Make not thou for thyself golden or silver gods.' Thorpe, Ancient Laws, I. p. 44.

The Offertory was the verse sung just before the oblation of the elements: and it was at this point that the people in ancient times made their offerings⁴.

The Offer-
tory.

A prayer resembling that for the whole state of Christ's Church is found in all liturgies. Instead, however, of being the first part of the Canon, or Prayer of Consecration, it was brought into its present position in 1552. The rubric preceding it then was: Then shall the churchwardens, or some other by them appointed, gather the devotion of the people, and put the same into the poor men's box: and upon the offering days appointed⁵, every man

Alms.

² The mediæval service inserted the king's name, together with that of the pope, and the bishop of the diocese, in the canon (above, p. 297). There was also a Missæ pro Rege (Missal. Sar. fol. ccxlii.); but the collects bear no resemblance to these prayers: see Maskell, Ancient Lit. p. 184. Mr Palmer (Orig. Lit. iv. § 3) refers to a collect, ordered to be said at mass by a synod of Scotland (1225), beginning with the words 'Deus in cujus manu corda sunt regum;' and to a Benedictio super Regem noviter electum, in the Exeter MS.,

⁴ In the primitive ages only such things were offered as were proper to be consumed at the altar, or at least in the service of the church. Afterwards this was limited to bread, and wine, and water: and whatever else was offered was regarded as first-fruits, or pious gifts for the use of the church and her ministers. See Maskell, Ancient Lit. pp. 53 sq. note.

and woman shall pay to the Curate the due and accustomed offerings. And the words of the prayer were: 'We humbly beseech thee most mercifully to accept our alms,' with the side note, If there be none alms given to the poor, then shall the words, &c. The first change was introduced into the rubric of the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637), which directed the deacon, or one of the churchwardens, to 'receive the devotions of the people there present in a bason provided for that purpose. And when all have offered, he shall reverently bring the said bason with the oblations therein, and deliver it to the Presbyter, who shall humbly present it before the Lord, and set it upon the holy table. And the Presbyter shall then offer up and place the bread and wine prepared for the Sacrament upon the Lord's table, that it may be ready for that service.' Still the prayer itself only mentioned our alms, and the side note the alms given to the poor. At the revision of the Prayer-Book in 1661, the substance of the Scottish rubric was taken. The *alms for the poor, and other devotions of the people*¹, were ordered to be received in a decent bason, and brought to the Priest, who shall humbly present, and place it upon the holy table. And when there is a Communion, the Priest shall then [offer up, and²] place upon the table so much bread and wine as he shall think sufficient. At the same time the words 'alms and oblations' were put into the prayer, and a corresponding change made in the side note, 'If there be no alms or oblations³.' The concluding croft (see above, p. 132); but they were not adopted.

The Exhortations.

The Exhortations belong entirely to the reformed offices. They have passed through many changes, not so much in language as in arrangement. In 1552 the Prayer for the Church militant was followed by an Exhortation at certain times when the Curate shall see the people negligent to come to the holy Communion. 'We be come together at this time, dearly beloved brethren, to feed at the Lord's Supper, unto the which in God's behalf I bid you, &c.²' Then followed another Exhortation, with the rubric: And sometime shall be said this also, at the discretion of the Curate. 'Dearly beloved, forasmuch as our bread and wine upon the holy table, saying that by this action we have an oblation of the elements, though it were much to be wished that this were more solemnly done than is usual; namely, not until the time of the administration.

¹ All mention of the dead was omitted in 1552, when the place and heading of this prayer were changed. It had been (1549) introduced with the words, 'Let us pray for the whole state of Christ's church:' in 1552 the words 'militant here in earth' were added, in compliance with Bucer's strictures upon the practice, which he allows to be very ancient: 'Scio esse per vetustam hanc precandi pro pie defunctis consuetudinem... Optarim ego commendationem defunctorum, et preces pro æterna eorum pace, prætermitti; et in locum... ista subijci: Quomodo una cum his et omnibus qui ad te nos hinc in fide nominis tui præcesserunt, possimus in adventu Filii tui gloriose prodire ad resurrectionem vitæ, atque collocari ad dextram Filii tui... Nolim in voce illa—somno pacis—dare occasionem placendi sibi iis qui affir-mant, defunctos in Domino dormire etiam animis usque ad extremum diem.' Bucer, Script. Anglic. pp. 467 sq. See above, p. 51, note. In the Prayer-Book (1637) much of the language of the formulary of 1549 was introduced; and this single clause was added in 1661, as a thanksgiving, the prayer remaining, according to its title, for the church militant in earth. 'When the doctrine of purgatory had been extirpated, the English Church restored the commemoration of saints departed.' Palmer, Orig. Lit. IV. § 10.

² Our second form of Exhortation, was composed apparently by Peter Martyr, at the instance of Bucer (Censura, cap. xxvii. p. 495), both to promote frequent communion, and that all who were present should communicate: 'ut qui communioni sunt præsentés sacramentis quoque participant.' The Exhortation contained the words: 'Which thing ye shall do, if ye stand by as gazers and lookers on of them that do communicate, and be no partakers of the same yourselves.'

duty is to render to Almighty God our heavenly Father, most hearty thanks, for that he hath given his Son our Saviour, &c.¹ Then shall the Priest say this Exhortation. 'Dearly beloved in the Lord, ye that mind to come, &c.' Then shall the Priest say to them that come to receive the holy Communion, 'Ye that do truly and earnestly repent you, &c.' This order continued until the last revision (1661). At that time regular Communion had ceased to be the rule. It was therefore necessary to give a notice² when it would be administered. Hence also an alteration was made in the beginning of each Exhortation, in order to give such notice; and the rubric directed one, or the other, to be read, after the Sermon or Homily ended, on the Sunday, or some Holy-day, immediately preceding. The Address was placed first, which was likely to be used most frequently as a general instruction to communicants, and also a warning to contemners of the ordinance; and hence the notice to blasphemers, &c. not to presume to come, was inserted in it, instead of being addressed to the communicants at the time of communion. Peter Martyr's Exhortation was directed to be used instead of the former, when the people were negligent to come to the holy Communion: and for a twofold reason, first, that communicants only were now present, and secondly, that a change had been now made in the position of this address, which, like the other, was not to

² The correct interpretation of the rubrics concerning notices to be given in church appears to be, (1) For the Communion: this should be given after the Creed, and may be in any terms; and if the sermon has not exhorted the people to come to the Communion, one of the Exhortations should be read after the prayer for the Church militant; the general practice, however, is to read a portion, or the whole, of one of the Exhortations after the Creed. (2) For any other purpose, of which notice may be given in church, the only proper time is after the Creed; and such notices may be given only by the minister.

be read at the time of Communion, the clause was omitted which referred to non-communicants standing by to gaze and look on. The third Exhortation (1552) was appointed to be said at the time of the celebration of the Communion; followed by the Invitation, which still retained its rubric, Then shall the Priest say to them that come to receive, &c.

The rubric before the Confession was altered in 1661, in accordance with that introduced into the Prayer-Book for Scotland¹, and with the exceptions of the Presbyterians at the Savoy Conference². The Confession was composed in 1548 from a longer form in Hermann's 'Consultation'³; and a comparison of it with its original shews how our Reformers kept in view the truth that confession was a personal action, an acknowledgment of personal sins; and that it was not necessary to recur at all times to the sin of our nature, which in a confession seemed to offer an excuse rather than an acknowledgment of personal transgression⁴.

The Confession.

The Absolution is the old form⁵, with an additional clause which may have been taken from the same source⁶, and which makes the formulary to be also a declaration of the need of repentance and faith in order to forgiveness.

The Absolution.

¹ 'Then shall this general Confession be made, in the name of all those that are minded to receive the holy Communion, by the presbyter himself, or the deacon; both he and all the people kneeling humbly upon their knees.' Rubr. (1637).

(above, p. 176). The words, 'By thought, word, and deed,' are due to this source; and those which follow, 'provoking most justly thy wrath and indignation against us,' are perhaps taken, as a single idea, from Pollanus (fol. 5), 'perditi jam inde a prima nostra origine, indies magis atque magis iudicium tuum in nos provocantes vitæ improbitate.'

*The Comfortable Words.
The Preface.*

The Comfortable Words that follow are the scriptural statements upon which the absolution is grounded: they are due to the same Lutheran source.

We come now to the more solemn part of the Office, anciently called the Canon, commencing with the Preface. The opening versicles are found in all Liturgies, as also is the Angelic hymn *Ter-sanctus*¹, which has probably been used in the Christian Church from the Apostolic age. The Proper Prefaces for the five great festivals are retained out of ten which occurred in the Roman and English Missals². That for Christmas-day was composed in 1549³. That for Easter is as old as the Sacramentary of Gelasius:

Et te quidem omni tempore, sed in hac potissimum die gloriosius prædicare, cum pascha nostrum immolatus est Christus. Ipse enim verus est agnus, qui abstulit peccata mundi: qui mortem nostram moriendo destruxit, et vitam resurgendo reparavit⁴.

The Preface for Ascension-Day was probably composed by Gregory the Great⁵:

Per Christum Dominum nostrum. Qui post resurrectionem suam omnibus discipulis suis manifestus apparuit, et ipsis cernentibus est elevatus in cælum, ut nos divinitatis suæ tribueret esse participes⁶.

The Preface for Whit-Sunday was composed in 1549,

³ The old Preface was: 'Quia per incarnati Verbi mysterium nova mentis nostræ oculis lux tuæ claritatis infulsit: ut dum visibiliter Deum cognoscimus, per hunc in invisibilium amorem rapiamur.' Miss. Sar. fol. xciv. All the Proper Prefaces in 1549 were appointed only for the day of commemoration: this was altered in 1552, in accordance with the old rubrics, which had appointed the Prefaces of these days to be said throughout their octaves: that for Whit-Sunday is to be said only during the six following days, because the octave is Trinity Sunday, which has its Proper Preface, and which is said only on that day, in celebration of the Unity in Trinity.

the form in the Missal containing a very short and imperfect allusion to the great event which is commemorated on this day¹.

The Preface for Trinity-Sunday is as old as the time of Gelasius :

Qui cum unigenito Filio tuo, et Spiritu Sancto, unus es Deus unus es Dominus, non in unius singularitate personæ, sed in unius trinitate substantiæ. Quod enim de tua gloria revelante te credimus, hoc de Filio tuo, hoc de Spiritu Sancto, sine differentia discretionis sentimus. Ut in confessione veræ sempiternæque deitatis, et in personis proprietas, et in essentia unitas, et in majestate adoretur æqualitas. Quam laudant angeli atque archangeli, Cherubin quoque ac Seraphin, qui non cessant clamare una voce dicentes².

The principal differences among the various reformed The Canon. Communion Offices are found in the prayers that follow : the arrangement, and to some extent the subjects which are introduced, turning upon the ideas of their several compilers as to what is required for a valid consecration, and the customs of primitive ages. The most usual arrangement was, after the Preface, to commence a long prayer, or series of prayers, including the recitation of the Words of Institution, and ending with the Lord's Prayer. This was retained in the first Prayer-Book of Edward VI., and was altered in 1552.

The Prayer in the name of the communicants was composed for the 'Order of Communion' (1548).

The Prayer of Consecration consists of three parts : The Consecration. an introduction expressing the meaning and object of the rite ; a petition ; and the words of institution. There had Commemoration of God's mercies. always been in this part of the Office a commemoration of God's benefits to man through Jesus Christ. The mediæval Canon contained prayers for living and dead persons; and any individual might be there specially mentioned, with the hope of deriving some benefit from the oblation that was made of the consecrated elements. Our Reformers carefully avoided all idea of the Church making sacrificial offerings to God in behalf of one or more individuals; they also reaffirmed a truth which had been strangely controverted, that 'the oblation of Christ once offered is a full and perfect satisfaction for the sins of the whole world.' The prayer is, 'Grant that we receiving these thy creatures of bread and wine... may be partakers of His most blessed body and blood:' differing from the phrase in the mediæval Canon², and from that which is retained in the Scottish Office³. It is so worded, in order to exclude all notions of physical change in the elements, by virtue of which they are identified or confounded with the Body and Blood of Christ; while the doctrine that every faithful recipient there partakes of Christ's glorified humanity is quite as carefully retained. The prayer does not expressly mention the consecration of the elements, nor the work of the Holy Spirit⁴ in consecration: but we pray that we may partake of them, in a sacramental manner, according to the full meaning of Christ's ordinance, whatever that may be, without specifying the hidden way in which the earthly elements are made conductors of the heavenly grace. Among the ceremonies of consecration⁵, in addition to the Words of Institution, we use simply the taking the bread and the cup into the hand, the breaking of the bread, and the laying the hand upon the bread, and upon the vessels containing the wine, in sign of blessing. Usually the Canon terminated with the Lord's Prayer¹, the petition for our daily bread being mystically understood as a prayer for the spiritual food then about to be received. However, at the great change of the service in 1552, the Lord's Prayer was placed after Communion.

⁴ On this subject see Mr Palmer's observations upon the Prayer or ἐπίκλησις, Orig. Lit. iv. § 19.

Our Administration of the Elements is according to the primitive order: the clergy first receive in both kinds, and then the people in like manner, having not only Communion in both kinds, but receiving the bread and the wine separately²; the people also coming into the chancel to receive, and the bread being delivered into the hand of the communicant. The form of words used in delivering the elements has met with many changes. The earliest that we can trace was simply,—‘The Holy Body,’—‘The precious Blood of the Lord our God and Saviour³;’ or ‘The Body of Christ,’ ‘The Blood of Christ, the Cup of Salvation⁴.’ In the time of Gregory the Great, it appears that the form used in the Roman Church was, ‘Corpus Domini nostri Jesu Christi conservet animam tuam⁵.’ The York and Hereford Missals seem to have wine. On this latter usage, which is retained in practice in the Scottish Office, see Skinner's Illustration of that Office, pp. 108 sqq.

² In the Eastern Churches the bread has been dipped in the cup, probably since the 5th century, and the laity thus communicated in both kinds. See Palmer, Orig. Lit. iv. § 19. On the different modes which have prevailed in administering the Eucharist, see Bingham, Antiq. xv. ch. 5.

furnished the original of our English form¹, which was in 1549, 'The body of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was given for thee, preserve thy body and soul unto everlasting life.' 'The blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, which was shed for thee, preserve thy body and soul to everlasting life.' In 1552, entirely new sentences were substituted, avoiding every appearance of calling the elements the body and the blood of Christ: 'Take, and eat this in remembrance that Christ died for thee, and feed on him in thy heart by faith, with thanksgiving.' 'Drink this in remembrance that Christ's blood was shed for thee, and be thankful.' When the Prayer-Book was revised at the beginning of the reign of Elizabeth (1559), these two sentences were combined: so that our present form contains the most ancient and simple words of delivery; adding the prayer formed with them in Gregory's time, and continued in the Missals; and also the favourite words of the staunchest reformers, implying that each individual is to take, and eat, and drink, with an application of the merits of Christ's death to his own soul².

of the Lord, which was shed for thy sins.'

*A Second
tion.*

The rubric directing a second consecration, if required, was added in 1661. It seems to have been connected with the change of practice in omitting to signify beforehand the names of the intending communicants. The meaning is that the priest should consecrate at first what he judges to be sufficient, which ordinarily will be very nearly what is required. What remains over is decently covered until the conclusion of the service, and then he calls upon any communicants to assist in consuming it; being only a little, this cannot degenerate into an irreverent eating and drinking. If a little more should be required, he is directed to repeat so much of the necessary words as to consecrate either more bread, or more wine, as may be needed¹.

At the revision in 1552, the anthems were omitted which had been sung by the choir during the time of Communion². Our post-Communion service consists of the Lord's Prayer, a Thanksgiving, the Great Doxology, and the Blessing. The Lord's Prayer was brought into this position in 1552, instead of being the conclusion of the Canon, which is by many considered its most appromunion.*

*The Lord's
Prayer.*

¹ This direction is one about which there has always been a difference of opinion. It certainly favours the notion that the act of consecration is connected not with the prayer, but with the simple recitation of the Words of Institution, and it does not even require all of them to be uttered. In this respect it goes beyond the direction in the Prayer-Book for Scotland, from which it is taken: 'And to the end there may be little left, he that officiates is required to consecrate with the least; and then, if there be want, the words of consecration may be repeated again, over more, either bread or wine; the Presbyter begin- ning at these words in the prayer of consecration, Our Saviour, in the night that he was betrayed, took &c.' (Fifth rubr. after the Office, 1637). The safest course is to avoid the necessity for any second consecration.

² These were in the old service, the 'Communio,' and the 'post-Communio.' Instead of these anthems, which were single verses from the Psalms, the 'Agnus Dei' was appointed in 1549. It is now felt that quietness better becomes the solemnity of the service, and the time after communicating is better occupied with a book of suitable devotions.

priate position. However, it cannot be out of place in any part of the Christian service. Here it commences the action of thanksgiving for the mercy that has now been vouchsafed to us in partaking of the Sacrament of life; and is a prayer that the spiritual food of the soul may be daily continued to us.

The Thanksgiving.

The first of the two forms of thanksgiving was, in 1549, the conclusion of the Prayer of Consecration; and some expressions in it are taken from the corresponding part of the Canon¹. In that position it was a part of what was called in the Office of 1637, *the Memorial, or Prayer of Oblation*². The second form was composed in 1549 for this part of the service; and it may be allowed to accord most with the thanksgivings which the primitive Church used in the same place³. One expression in it is taken from the Priest's thanksgiving after receiving⁴.

'*Gloria in
excelsis.*'

The Hymn 'Gloria in excelsis' is of eastern origin, but its author is unknown⁵. It was appointed in the time of Athanasius⁶ to be said with certain psalms at dawn; and perhaps Symmachus, bishop of Rome (500), directed it to be sung on every Sunday and holyday at the beginning of the Roman Liturgy⁷. At the revision of the Prayer-Book in 1552⁸, it was placed at the end of the service, which appears to be its most suitable position. The whole service indeed is eucharistical. But opening, as it was then made to do, with the Law, and prayers of humble confession, it is most natural to put the hymn of praise in close connexion with the thanksgiving, which has always been placed after Communion. The following is the Greek original of this hymn¹ :—

The Collects. Of the six Collects to be said after the Offertory, when there is no Communion, &c., three are taken from ancient offices³, the others were composed in 1549. The 4th was a Collect appointed for the second Saturday in Lent:—

Service to be read, without Communion.

The direction to read upon Sundays and Holy-days the early part of the Communion Service, when there is no Communion, was given in 1549. It has been supposed to resemble the Missa Sicca, which was used between the 13th and 16th centuries⁴: but the solemn part of the Office is not to be begun without communicants. It appears from this direction that a constant celebration of the Lord's Supper never came into use, when the daily Mass was discontinued. For the priest

¹ Several forms are given in Hermann's Consultation, fol. ccxxiv. 'Last of all let the pastor bless the people with these words: The Lord bless thee, and keep thee, &c. Or thus: God have mercy on us and bless us, and lighten his countenance upon us, and give us his peace. Or thus: God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost bless and keep us. Or thus: The blessing of God the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost be with us, and remain with us for ever.'

could not communicate alone, and the people had not learned to communicate except on festivals. The reformers shewed that they wished to introduce more frequent Communion, and gave orders to begin the office by way of reminding the people of their duty.

Every parishioner is required to communicate three times in the year at least, according to the decrees of ancient councils¹.

*Communion
three times in a year.*

The solitary masses of the Roman Church are excluded by the mention of four or three persons, as the least number, with whom the priest may celebrate the Holy Communion.

Communicants.*

The bread is required to be made of the best and purest wheat-flour that conveniently may be had; and is to be made in the way in which common bread is made, i. e. it is to be leavened, and is not to be made in the form of wafers². Only wine, together with bread, is required to be provided for Communion: and no ceremonies may be used in the public service but those which are specified in the Book of Common Prayer: therefore the mixing of water with the wine, however ancient and simple a ceremony, may not be used.

The Bread.

The Wine.

The remainder of the consecrated bread and wine may not be carried out of the church, but must be there reverently eaten by the priest and any communicants whom he shall call unto him. This direction forbids the reservation of the elements either for a communion of sick persons, or for any superstitious purpose.

of Pope Innocent III. Nicholls.

Notice has been already taken of the Declaration concerning kneeling at the Communion, which was added by the Royal Council in 1552, and having been omitted since the reign of Elizabeth, was again subjoined with certain modifications to the rubrics in 1661¹.

Summary of the Office.

It only remains, before leaving this Office, to add a few words concerning the general structure of the form we now use in the celebration of the Holy Communion. It consists of three general divisions: the Preparation, the Office itself, and the service of Thanksgiving. The first part of the Preparation incites the whole congregation to the exercise of repentance, by the Lord's Prayer, the Collect for purity, and the Ten Commandments; of holy desires, by the Collects for the king, and of the day; of obedience, by hearing the Epistle and Gospel; of faith, by repeating the Creed; and of charity, by the Offertory, and the Prayer for the whole Church. If we consider the Commandments as a permanent lection from the Law, this portion of the Office may be compared with the early Christian service, containing lessons from the Old Testament, the Gospels, and the writings of the Apostles, followed by an instruction or exhortation in the sermon. The ante-Communion then proceeds with a preparation of the communicants², in the Exhortation, and Invitation,

² 'Melius dividitur Missa in tres partes: scilicet in præparationem tam populi, quam materiæ consecrandæ; in eucharistiæ consecrationem et oblationem; in consecratæ communionem et mysterii conclusionem. Prima pars potest dici missa catechumenorum, pro eo quod major pars admittit catechumenos, secunda canon, tertia communio.' Gabriel Biel, in Canone, lect. 15. Here our custom may be traced of allowing non-communicants to be present at the beginning of the office, but not throughout the Preparation. The time when those who do not intend to communicate should withdraw, is not marked in our rubrics. The general practice has been that such should leave the church after the sermon, and therefore before the offertory. Mr. Maskell, discussing this subject (Ancient Liturgy, Pref. ch. v.) approves of this, rather shewing the care taken to provide fit recipients of those holy mysteries. Hence, that all may come with clean hands and pure heart, this more immediate preparation contains an humble Confession, and an Absolution, in which the promises of God to the penitent are applied with the authority which He has given to His visible Church; and then some of the most precious declarations of Holy Scripture are read, to confirm the hope and gratitude of the pardoned worshippers, who now proceed to the more sublime parts of the Office, commencing with the ancient Preface, and the Seraphic Hymn of Praise. But even in this part we observe that the jubilant character of the service is deferred: the attitude of prayer and supplication befits those who shall partake of these mysteries, at each step of their approach to the Table of the Lord. Here is, therefore, placed the Prayer of Humble Access, in which we again solemnly acknowledge our unworthiness of the mercies which we hope to receive through the unmerited kindness of our God and Saviour, in the cleansing of our sinful bodies and souls by the Body and Blood of Christ. The elements of Bread and Wine are then consecrated by the Word of God and prayer; the prayer of the faithful being offered by the priest, and the words in which this Sacrament was instituted being pronounced, according to the practice of the than another practice which some have attempted to introduce, namely, 'not to dismiss the congregation, or any part of it, until the offertory has been said.' The common practice also agrees with the determination of Romanist Liturgical writers. Romseè (Opp. IV. p. 140.) de Offertorio, says, 'Hic olim missa incipiebat, cætera enim quæ ante ponebantur, scilicet orationes et instructiones, habebant rationem præparationis ad sacrificium; unde illis interesse poterant catechumeni, et peccatores penitentes. Ast ad offertorium missa catechumenorum terminabatur, et incipiebat missa fidelium; quare tum ejectis catechumenis et penitentibus, soli fideles illi adesse poterant.' Maskell, ibid. pp. xci. sq.

primitive Church, and following as closely as possible the actions of our blessed Lord. The material elements, being thus set apart for a sacred use, are delivered into the hands of the kneeling people, since this posture most befits us when we are to receive a pardon which is needed to deliver us from death eternal. The post-Communion, like the ante-Communion, commences with the Lord's Prayer; the doxology being here added, because it begins an office of thanksgiving. For this service of praise two forms are provided: the first is principally designed to give expression to a feeling like St Paul's¹, who 'beseeches us by the mercies of God, to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy and acceptable to God, as our reasonable service;' for since Christ has given Himself for us, and now has given Himself to us, it is just and reasonable that we should offer up ourselves, our body and our soul, as dedicated to His will,—a sacrifice which is indeed the end of all our devotions. This Thanksgiving was originally the conclusion of the Canon; where, coming after the Consecration, and before Communion, it was taken to imply an oblation of the consecrated elements, or a material, though commemorative, sacrifice. In King Edward's second Prayer-Book, therefore, it was removed into a position where it can have no such meaning, but implies a strictly spiritual sacrifice of praise, and an oblation of the worshippers to the service of God². The second form of Thanksgiving consists more entirely of praise for the mercies which are assured to us in this Sacrament; yet it also includes a very earnest prayer for perseverance, and fruitfulness in good works. The Office then concludes with the great doxology, or song of praise for the mercies of redemption, as our Lord sung an hymn with His disciples after the Passover; and finally with the Blessing, in which the ancient giving of the Peace is preserved in the words of Scripture, and the example of our Lord is followed, who parted from His disciples in the act of blessing them.

The variations in the different Communion Offices, so far as they depend upon the order in which the several prayers are placed, will be more clearly seen from a tabular comparison of some ancient Offices with those which are now used in the English, Scottish, and American Churches.

CHAPTER IV.

The Baptismal Offices.

SECT. I. The Ministration of Public Baptism of Infants, to be used in the Church.

THE following portion of the Prayer-Book corresponds to the Manual and Pontifical of the mediæval period:—the one containing the occasional offices which fell within the duty of the parish priest; and the other, those which the bishop only might perform.

The Mediæval Office.

Our service for the Public Baptism of Infants¹ corresponds to three offices in the Sarum Manual;—Ordo ad faciendum Catechumenum, Benedictio Fontis, and *Ritus baptizandi*². The first of these contained many ceremonies at the church-door, such as the placing salt in the mouth, exorcism, and signings of the cross, ending with the recitation of the Lord's Prayer, Hail Mary, and Creed. Then the priest took the child's right hand, and introduced him into the church as a complete Catechumen. In practice this formed the commencement of the Baptismal service, which then proceeded, at the font, with the questions addressed to the sponsors³, the anointing with oil, baptism, the anointing with chrism, the putting on the chrism, and placing a lighted taper in the child's hand. If a bishop were present, Confirmation was then administered. A Gospel from St Mark was read, as a protection from the falling sickness; followed by another Gospel from St John¹. The water in the font was changed on the Saturdays before Easter-Day and Whit-Sunday, and at other times, as often as might be required, but not while it continued pure and clean. The form for consecrating the fresh water consisted of the invocations of a litany, prayers, and many ceremonies,—breathing upon the water, and putting into it wax, oil, and chrism.

³ Godparents—(formerly gossips = God-sibs or God-relations)—sponsors, fide jussores, ἀνάδοχοι, susceptores—are probably coeval with the practice of baptizing not only the infant children of Christians, but foundlings rejected by their heathen parents. They are mentioned by Tertullian, De Baptismo, c. 18. Opp. p. 264; Guericke, p. 240; Bingham, XI. 8.

PUBLIC
FANTS.

'Benedictio Fontis.'

In preparing a reformed service of Baptism, much use was made of the previous labours of Bucer and Melancthon in the 'Consultation' of Archbishop Hermann²; and some ceremonies, which had the authority of that treatise, were retained in 1549, although afterwards discarded.

*The reformed

The first rubric was originally longer, and in the form of an Introduction to the Office:—'It appeareth by ancient writers, that the Sacrament of Baptism in the old time was not commonly ministered but at two times in the year, at Easter and Whitsuntide³, at which times it was openly ministered in the presence of all the con-

² Hermann's Baptismal Service, borrowed word for word from Luther's Taufbüchlein (Daniel, Cod. Liturg. Eccl. Luth. p. 185), is printed at length in Mr Fallow's Baptismal Offices Illustrated, pp. 29 sqq.; and also a comparative view of the offices in the Sarum Manual, in Hermann's Consultation, and in the English Prayer-Books of 1549 and 1552. Mr Bulley (Communion and Baptismal Offices, pp. 90 sqq.) gives the Offices of 1549, 1552, and 1662, and also that in the Prayer-Book for Scotland (1637).

³ At Easter, in remembrance of Christ's resurrection, of which baptism is a figure; and at Whitsuntide, in remembrance of the three thousand souls baptized by the Apostles at that time. In the Eastern Church, the feast of Epiphany was also assigned for the administration of this sacrament, in memory of our Saviour's baptism. About the 8th or 9th century the Latin Church began to administer baptism (as at first) at all times of the year. Wheatly.

gregation: which custom (now being grown out of use) although it cannot for many considerations be well restored again, yet it is thought good to follow the same as near as conveniently may be: wherefore the people are to be admonished, that it is most convenient that Baptism should not be ministered, but upon Sundays and other holy-days¹, &c.' Since the custom of observing solemn times of baptism had long been disused, the mention of the custom was omitted in 1661. It was enough to specify the things which were necessary, which are, that the rite be administered at the font on a Sunday or a holy-day, 'when the most number of people come together;' that the time in the service be after the Second Lesson at Morning or Evening Prayer; and that three sponsors be required for each child²: notice must also be given by the parents at least before the beginning of Morning Prayer³. At the last revision (1661) it was directed be admitted to answer as godfather for his own child; nor any person before he hath received the holy Communion. The American rubric allows that 'parents shall be admitted as sponsors, if it be desired.'

³ Hermann's Consultation, fol. clxiv: 'But that all things may be ministered and received religiously and reverently, the parents of the infants shall signify the matter betimes to the pastors, and with the godfathers shall humbly require baptism for their infants. That if the parents, or the godfathers, or both, be subject to manifest crimes, they may be corrected of the pastor, if they will admit correction, or if they be incorrigible, that they may be kept from the communion of Baptism, lest they be present at so divine a ministration unto damnation, and with danger of offending the church....'

that the font should be filled with pure water at every time of baptism¹.

The Enquiry and Address.

The preliminary enquiry is according to the old rubric², and the address is formed from an opening exhortation in Hermann's Consultation³. The first prayer seems to have been originally composed by Luther; and from his form of baptism it was taken into that provided for the reformed service of Cologne, where it follows the examination and exorcism:—

The first
opening
Prayer.

Almighty God, which in old time didst destroy the wicked world with the flood, according to thy terrible judgment, and didst preserve only the family of godly Noah, eight souls, of thy unspeakable mercy; and which also didst drown in the Red sea obstinate Pharaoh the King of the Egyptians with all his army and warlike power, and causedst thy people of Israel to pass over with dry feet; and wouldst shadow in them holy baptism, the laver of regeneration: furthermore, which didst consecrate Jordan with the Baptism of thy Son Christ Jesu, and other waters to holy dipping and washing of sins, we pray thee for thy exceeding mercy look favourably upon this Infant; give him true faith, and thy holy Spirit, that whatsoever filth he hath taken of Adam, it may be drowned, and be put away by this holy flood, that being separated from the number of the ungodly, he may be kept safe in the holy ark of thy Church⁴, and may confess and sanctify thy

³ 'Beloved in Christ Jesu, we hear daily out of the word of God, and learn by our own experience, that all we, from the fall of Adam, are conceived and born in sins, that we are guilty of the wrath of God, and damned through the sin of Adam, except we be delivered by the death and merits of the Son of God, Christ Jesu our only Saviour.' fol. clxvii. 'Therefore our Lord Christ disputing with Nicodemus concludeth thus, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.' fol. clxx.

the Gospel.*

The second prayer is taken from the old Office:—

Hæc sequens oratio dicitur super masculinum tantum.

Deus, immortale præsidium omnium postulantium, liberatio supplicum, pax rogantium, vita credentium, resurrectio mortuorum: te invoco super hunc famulum tuum N. qui Baptismi tui donum petens, æternam consequi gratiam spirituali regeneratione desiderat. into the ark of Christ's Church, and so saved from perishing.' This, as excluding unbaptized infants from salvation, was omitted in 1552, together with the mention of the destruction of the old world, and of wicked king Pharaoh, by water. Cf. Cranmer, Reform. Legum: 'de Baptismo:' 'Illorum etiam videri debet scrupulosa superstitio, qui Dei gratiam et Spiritum Sanctum tantopere cum sacramentorum elementis colligant, ut plane affirmant, nullum Christianorum infantem salutem esse consecuturum, qui prius morte fuerit occupatus, quam ad baptismum adduci potuerit: quod longe secus habere judicamus.' See Laurence, Bampt. Lect. pp. 69 sq.

¹ Hermann's Consultation, fol. 175. This prayer was followed in 1549 by the ceremony of making a cross upon the child's forehead and breast, with the words, 'N. receive the sign of the holy cross, both in thy forehead, and in thy breast, in token that thou shalt not be ashamed to confess thy faith in Christ crucified, and manfully to fight, &c.'

² Manual. Sar. Ordo ad faciend. Catech. Maskell, p. 7. This was followed in 1549 by a form of exorcism: 'Then let the priest looking upon the children, say, I command thee, unclean spirit, in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, that thou come out, and depart from these infants, whom our Lord Jesus Christ hath vouchsafed to call to his holy Baptism, to be made members of his body, and of his holy congregation. Therefore, thou cursed spirit, remember thy sentence, remember thy judgment, remember the day to be at hand wherein thou shalt burn in fire everlasting, prepared for thee and thy angels. And presume not hereafter to exercise any tyranny towards these infants, whom Christ hath bought with his precious blood, and by this his holy Baptism calleth to be of his flock.' Comp. Maskell, pp. 7 sq.; Hermann, fol. 174.

Matthew¹: the corresponding passage from St Mark, now read in our service, was appointed in Hermann's 'Consultation,' where also it was followed by a short address, which furnished the idea and the matter of our brief exhortation upon the words of the Gospel:—

Believe these words, and this deed of our Lord Jesu Christ upon them, and doubt not but that he will so receive your children also, and embrace them with the arms of his mércy, and give them the blessing of eternal life, and the everlasting communion of the kingdom of God. The same Lord and our Saviour Jesus Christ confirm and increase this your faith. Amen².

The Prayer, or Thanksgiving, which follows this Exhortation, comes from the same source, where it formed the conclusion of the Catechism and Exorcism on the day preceding the baptism:—

giving upon
the Gospel.*

Almighty and everlasting God, heavenly Father, we give thee eternal thanks, that thou hast vouchsafed to call us to this knowledge of thy grace, and faith towards thee. Increase, and confirm this faith in us evermore. Give thy Holy Spirit to this infant, that he may be born again, and be made heir of everlasting salvation, which of thy grace and mercy thou hast promised to thy holy Church, to old men, and to children, through our Lord Jesus Christ, which liveth and reigneth with thee now and for ever. Amen³.

‘Consultation,’ with which the service opened on the day of the baptism :—

Beloved in Christ, yesterday by the grace of God we heard, how exceeding and unspeakable mercy is exhibited in Baptism. Ye have renounced Satan and the world ; Ye have confessed the faith of Christ, and ye have promised obedience to Christ and the congregation, and ye have required of God the Father, that for his Son’s sake, our Lord Jesus Christ, he will deliver these infants from the kingdom of darkness, and settle them in the kingdom of his beloved Son. You must remember these things, and doubt nothing, but that we shall receive all these things that we require, if we believe. Therefore lifting up your minds unto the Lord, appear ye here with all religion, as in the sight of Almighty God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and receive with sure faith and thanksgiving the benefit of regeneration and adoption into everlasting life, of the one God himself, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. And because the Lord himself commanded us to baptize in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost ; undoubtedly God himself baptizeth our infants, cleanseth them from sins, delivereth them from everlasting death, putteth upon them his own righteousness, and giveth them life eternal¹.

It will be seen that our address acknowledges the certain regeneration of every infant in baptism, but attributes all to the divine promise, not to any virtue residing in the element².

The Demands addressed to the Sponsors.

The demands in Archbishop Hermann's service before Baptism are different, and are addressed to the godfathers and the parents³. In the revised Prayer-Book (1552), the rubric was altered,—'Then shall the Priest demand of the Godfathers and Godmothers these questions;'—and the name of the child was omitted: but the enquiry was made in the same terms,—'Dost thou forsake, &c.'—until the last revision (1661), when the explanatory words—'in the name of this child'—were inserted. The last demand also, of obedience, was added at the same time; and the enquiries were thus made to correspond with the preceding address⁴.

Consecration of the water.

The four petitions for the child, and the Prayer for the sanctification of the water, which now immediately precede the action of Baptism, were originally placed at the end of the Office for Private Baptism, as a service to be used when the water in the font had been changed, which was 'every month once at the least,' before any child was baptized in the water so changed¹.

O most merciful God our Saviour Jesu Christ, who hast ordained the element of water for the regeneration of thy faithful people, upon whom, being baptized in the river of Jordan, the Holy Ghost came down in likeness of a dove: send down, we beseech thee, the same thy Holy Spirit to assist us, and to be present at this our invocation of thy holy name: Sanctify † this fountain of baptism, thou that art the sanctifier of all things, that by the power of thy word all those that shall be baptized therein may be spiritually regenerated, and made the children of everlasting adoption Amen.

O merciful God, grant that the old Adam, in them that shall be baptized in this fountain, may be so buried, that the new man may be raised up again. Amen.

Grant that all carnal affections, &c.

Grant to all them which at this fountain forsake the devil and all his works: that they may have power and strength to have victory and to triumph against him, the world, and the flesh. Amen.

Whosoever shall confess thee, O Lord: recognize him also in thy kingdom. Amen.

the demands; that 'the questions are to be considered as addressed to the sponsors severally, and the answers to be made accordingly.' Also the Gospel and the addresses may be sometimes omitted, by a rubric before the Gospel: 'Then the minister shall say as follows; or else shall pass on to the questions addressed to the sponsors, and from thence to the prayer immediately before the Immersion, or the pouring of water on the Infant. But note: that in every church the intermediate parts of the Service shall be used, once at least in every month (if there be a baptism) for the better instructing of the People in the grounds of Infant Baptism.' The Creed is not repeated, but instead of it the question is: 'Dost thou believe all the Articles of the Christian Faith, as contained in the Apostles' Creed? Ans. I do.'

¹ This service corresponds to the Benedictio Fontis of the Manual, which also it resembles in consisting of a number of short petitions; but very little was taken from that source. See Maskell, 1. pp. 20 sq.

Grant that all sin and vice here may be so extinct: that they never have power to reign in thy servants. Amen.

Grant that whosoever here shall begin to be of thy flock: may evermore continue in the same. Amen.

Grant that all they which for thy sake in this life do deny and forsake themselves: may win and purchase thee, O Lord, which art everlasting treasure. Amen.

Grant that whosoever is here dedicated to thee, &c.

The Lord be with you.

Answer. And with thy spirit.

Almighty everliving God, whose most dearly beloved Son, &c. Regard, we beseech thee, the supplications of thy congregation, and grant that all thy servants which shall be baptized in this water, prepared for the ministration of thy holy sacrament¹, may receive the fulness of thy grace, and ever remain² in the number of thy faithful and elect children, through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Bucer³ found much fault with this form; as though such blessings and consecrations, which he allows to be ancient, would create in people's minds the notion of magic and conjuration. Accordingly, at the revision in 1552, the first of the above prayers was omitted, as were also the words in the last prayer, which implied a consecration of the water⁴; and the petitions were brought into their present position. The rubric directing the change of the water every month was omitted: but the custom appears to have remained⁵. And this continued until 1661, when the direction to fill the font at each time of Baptism

¹ The Scottish Office (1637) added the words,—‘which we here bless and dedicate in thy name to this spiritual washing.’

² Hence we perceive that the grace of regeneration received in baptism is directly taught to be both universal and defectible: comp. the Order of Confirmation, ‘Defend, O Lord, this thy child with thy heavenly grace, that he may continue thine for ever.’ See was given in the rubric before the office, and the petition for consecration was inserted in this prayer,—‘Sanctify this water to the mystical washing away of sin¹.’

The mode of Administration.

Baptism was originally administered by immersion², and at a very early date by thrice repeated, or trine immersion, in symbolical allusion to the Trinity³, and also to the three days of Christ’s lying in the grave. The ancient Church, however, administered this sacrament to the sick by affusion: and in the 13th and 14th centuries this had become the universal custom in the Western Church⁴. The form of words, which accompanied the act of Baptism, was taken from the direction of our Lord to His Apostles⁵.

The following is the mediæval manner of baptizing:—

æval Church.

Deinde accipiat sacerdos infantem per latera in manibus suis, et interrogato nomine ejus, baptizet eum sub trina immersione, tantum sanctam Trinitatem invocando, ita dicens: N. Et ego baptizo te in nomine Patris: Et mergat eum semel versa facie ad aquilonem, et capite versus orientem: et Filii: et iterum mergat semel versa facie ad meridiem: et Spiritus Sancti: Amen. Et mergat tertio recta facie versus aquam⁶.

ἀναγεννήσεως ὅν καὶ ἡμεῖς αὐτοὶ ἀνεγεννήθημεν ἀναγεννῶνται: ἐπ’ οὐνόματος γὰρ τοῦ Πατρὸς τῶν ὁλων καὶ δεσποτοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ τοῦ Σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ Πνεύματος ἁγίου, τὸ ἐν τῷ ὕδατι τότε λουτρὸν ποιούνται.

⁶ Manual. Sar. Ritus Baptizandi; Maskell, p. 23. This ritual allowed a child in danger of death to be brought to church, and simply baptized without any ceremony: ‘Notandum est etiam quod si infans sit in periculo mortis, tunc primo introducatur ad fontem, et postea baptizetur incipiendo ad hunc locum: Quid petis? Et si post baptismum vixerit, habeat totum residuum servitium supra dictum!’ Ibid. p. 29.

This old form, to which the people were accustomed, was retained in the first Prayer-Book (1549), with the permission that, 'if the child be weak, it shall suffice to pour water upon it.' The action was brought to its present simplicity in 1552¹:—

Then the Priest shall take the child in his hands, and ask the name, and naming the child, shall dip it in the water, so it be discreetly and warily done, saying, &c. And if the child be weak, it shall suffice to pour water upon it, saying, &c.

From this period also the giving of the Christian name at the time of Baptism was more clearly marked. Previously the child had been called by its future name many times during the earlier part of the service; but these were now omitted, and the name was pronounced for the first time together with the act of Baptism. The alteration of the rubric in 1661 marks this still more clearly; and also shews that Baptism by immersion was no longer the rule²:—'If they shall certify him that the child may well endure it, he shall dip it in the water discreetly,' &c.

The Christian

After the action of Baptism, in 1549, two ancient ceremonies were retained,—the putting on the chrisom, and the anointing³. The ceremony of making the sign

² The undue stress laid upon immersion by the Anabaptists might well make it necessary that the Church's rule should declare without any doubt that the validity of the sacrament was not confined to that one mode of its administration.

The address to the congregation, with the Lord's Prayer, and the Thanksgiving that follows, were placed here in 1552. It is an important addition, expressing so unequivocally the regeneration³ of each baptized infant.

the head, saying, Almighty God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath regenerate thee by water and the Holy Ghost, and hath given unto thee remission of all thy sins: he vouchsafe to anoint thee with the unction of his Holy Spirit, and bring thee to the inheritance of everlasting life. Amen.' On the antiquity of these ceremonies, see Guericke, pp. 233 sq.

³ The sign of the cross was used by the early Christians on every occasion (Tertull. de Corona, c. 3): whence it is reasonable to conclude, even without direct evidence, that they used it on the solemn occasion of Baptism, as we know that it was used, not as a new ceremony, in the 4th century: August. de Catech. Rud. c. 20: 'Passionis et crucis signo in fronte hodie signandus es.' See Bingham, xi. 9, §§ 4—6.

² Regeneration is the ecclesiastical term applied to the grace received in baptism. It is taken from Tit. iii. 5, διὰ λουτροῦ καλιγγεσίας. In the language of Christian antiquity, the Latin word regeneratio, and the Greek words ἀναγέννησις, ἀνακαινισμὸς, ἀνάκτισις, ἀνανέωσις, μεταβολή, μεταποίησις, καλυπτοκία, καλιγγεσία, constantly signify the participation, and the effects of the sacrament of baptism. The term used to express a returning to God after a state of sin is μετάνοια, penitentia, conversio. Both the schoolmen, and the most eminent divines of the Reformation use these words in their ancient sense. Regeneratio and conversio are sometimes used as convertible terms by Calvin, as they were afterwards at the Synod of Dort (1618); but even at that period the words retained their distinction of meaning in exact writing. In the sermons, and books written about the beginning of the Rebellion, Regeneration came into common use for Repentance,

The Lord's Prayer also begins the action of thanksgiving, and thus occupies the same position in the Baptismal Service that it was made to occupy in the administration of the Lord's Supper, at the same revision of the Prayer-Book in 1552. And this use of the Prayer of the Faithful is peculiarly suitable, as beginning the ecclesiastical life of the infant with the expression of what is to be henceforth his privilege, in calling upon God as Our Father. The Thanksgiving for the benefits of Baptism, which have now been received in regeneration, adoption, and incorporation into Christ's Church, is also a prayer for the grace of perseverance, and growth of the spiritual life.

The Exhortation to the Godfathers and Godmothers was composed in 1549. Besides making mention of the Lord's Prayer and Creed, which had been enjoined in the old charge to the sponsors¹, the Ten Commandments are added, and sermons are pointed out as the means of obtaining sound instruction. It also shortly reminds them that the duties of a Christian life ought to be found in daily exercise among all who are baptized.

The Address to the Sponsors.

In the Prayer-Book of 1549, a rubric followed this Exhortation:—

and Conversion: and from the Puritans this improper use of the word passed to other writers, so much so that, at the revision in 1661 some found fault with the Prayer-Book for retaining the word Regeneration in its original sense, which it had kept for sixteen centuries, in opposition to their novel signification. Nicholls. See Bp Bethell's General View of the Doctrine of Regeneration in Baptism; and Comber's chapter upon 'The Close and Consequents after Baptism,' Companion to the Temple, III. 3, § 1.

¹ 'Godfathers and Godmothers of this child, we charge you that ye charge the father and the mother to keep it from fire and water and other perils to the age of vii year: and that ye learn or see it be learned the Paternoster, Ave Maria, and Credo, after the law of all holy church; and in all goodly haste to be confirmed of my lord of the diocese or of his deputy; and that the mother bring again the chrisom at her purification: and wash your hand or ye depart the church.' Manual. Sar. Benedictio Fontis, Maskell, p. 14. The rubric was more specific: 'et quod confirmetur quam cito episcopus advenerit circa partes per septem milliaria.' Ibid. p. 25.

The minister shall command that the chrisoms¹ be brought to the church, and delivered to the priests after the accustomed manner, at the purification of the mother of every child; and that the children be brought to the bishop to be confirmed of him, so soon as they can say in their vulgar tongue the Articles of the Faith, the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments, and be further instructed in the Catechism, set forth for that purpose, accordingly as it is there expressed. And so let the congregation depart in the name of the Lord.

tion,

The mention of the chrisoms was omitted in 1552, and the rubric itself was changed in 1661 for a specific form of words, in which the minister is to give the direction about Confirmation. It was then necessary to bring this ordinance to the memories of the people; and more than probable that many ministers ended the service without noticing the rubric, or making any mention of Confirmation. At the same time the declaration was added of the undoubted salvation of baptized infants²; and reference was made to the 30th canon (1604) for the object with which the sign of the Cross³ had been retained.

and the sign of the Cross.

² This assertion carefully avoids all mention of children unbaptized. It is borrowed from The Institution of a Christian Man (1537), p. 35: 'Item, that the promise of grace and everlasting life (which promise is adjoined unto this sacrament of Baptism) pertaineth not only unto such as have the use of reason, but also to infants, innocents, and young children, and that they ought therefore, and must needs be baptized, and that by the sacrament of Baptism they do also obtain remission of their sins, the grace and favour of God, and be made thereby the very sons of God. Insomuch as infants and children, dying in their infancy, shall undoubtedly be saved thereby, and else not.' The omission of these last words in 1661 points out the improvement in the creed of our Reformers, and the assertion that it is certain by God's word, shews that they speak only of that which is revealed, the covenanted mercy of Almighty God. See Laurence, Bampt. Lect. pp. 184 sq.

The following are the rubrics of the mediæval office, relating to the Private Administration of Baptism by laymen.

Notandum est quod quilibet sacerdos parochialis debet parochianis suis formam baptizandi in aqua pura, naturali, et recenti, et non in alio liquore, frequenter in diebus dominicis exponere, ut si necessitas emergat sciant parvulos in forma ecclesie baptizare, proferendo formam verborum baptismi in lingua materna, distincte et aperte et solum unica voce, nullo modo iterando verba illa rite semel prolata, vel similia super eundem: sed sine aliqua additione, subtractione, interruptione, verbi pro verbo positione, mutatione, corruptione, seu transpositione sic dicendo: I cristene the N. in the name of the Fadir, and of the Sone, and of the Holy Gost. 'I know it is not made any part of the sacrament of baptism, which is acknowledged by the canon to be complete without it, and not perfected or bettered by it. I understand it not as any sacramental, or operative, or efficacious sign bringing any virtue to baptism, or the baptized. Where the Book says:—'And do sign him with the sign of the cross, in token &c.' I understand the Book not to mean, that the sign of the cross has any virtue in it to effect or further this duty; but only to intimate and express by that ceremony, by which the ancients did avow their profession of Christ crucified, what the congregation hopeth and expecteth hereafter from the infant, namely, that he shall not be ashamed to profess the faith of Christ crucified, into which he was even now baptized. And therefore also, when the 30th canon saith the infant is 'by that sign dedicated unto the service of Christ,' I understand that dedication to import, not a real consecration of the child, which was done in baptism itself; but only a ceremonial declaration of that dedication.' Bennet, Paraphrase &c. on the Common Prayer, pp. 206 sq.

The American Prayer-Book allows the sign of the cross to be omitted, if those who present the infant shall desire it, although the Church knows no worthy cause of scruple concerning the same.

Owing to the notion of the absolute necessity of baptism in all cases to salvation, which our earliest reformers had derived from mediæval principles, the first Prayer-Book (1549), as well as the 'Consultation' of Hermann³, retained the substance of these rubrics.

³ 'The people shall be taught and warned in sermons that they presume not lightly to minister privately this most divine sacrament....But if extreme necessity presses, that they that be present with the child being in danger, may join themselves together in

If any godly man be present when the infant is in extremity, let his ministry be used to baptism.' Hermann's Consultation, fol. 180.

The Pastors and Curates shall oft admonish the people that they defer not the baptism of infants any longer than the Sunday, or other holy-day next after the child be born, unless upon a great and reasonable cause declared to the Curate, and by him approved.

And also they shall warn them that, without great cause and necessity, they baptize not children at home in their houses. And when great need shall compel them so to do, that then they minister it on this fashion.

Rubrics
(1549):
Baptism by Laymen.

First, let them that be present call upon God for his grace, and say the Lord's Prayer, if the time will suffer. And then one of them shall name the child, and dip him in the water, or pour water upon him, saying these words: N. I baptize thee, &c.

In these directions for baptism by laymen there is no mention of consecration of the water, nor any rite but the simple act of baptism with water in the name of the Trinity. The only addition is the saying the Lord's Prayer, and calling upon God for His grace.

An attempt was made to set aside the permission thus given to laymen to baptize infants in case of necessity, by introducing a Canon of Convocation (1575), as an exposition, which the bishops considered themselves empowered to give of a rubric of doubtful meaning¹. Elizabeth, however, would not sanction the alteration; and the rubrics remained until the revision after the ministered by a lawful minister or deacon, called to be present for that purpose, and by none other. And that every bishop in his diocese shall take order that this exposition of the said doubt shall be published in writing before the first day of May next coming, in every parish-church of his diocese in this province; and thereby all other persons shall be inhibited to intermeddle with the ministering of baptism privately, being no part of their vocation. Hampton-Court Conference (1604). King James expressed a strong opinion, 'that any but a lawful minister might baptize anywhere, he utterly disliked; and in this point his highnesse grew somewhat earnest against the baptizing by women and laikes¹.' It appears also that the above-mentioned resolution of the bishops had been very generally acted upon, and that they had enquired into the practice of private baptism in their visitations, and censured its administration by women and lay persons². The rubrics were therefore now altered, so as to make no mention of baptism by any other than a lawful minister.

lawful minister.

An addition was made to the title of the Service, 'Of them that be baptized in private houses in time of necessity, by the Minister of the Parish, or any other lawful Minister that can be procured.' The direction not to defer baptism was continued. The warning not to use private baptism without great cause was expressed, 'that they procure not their children to be baptized at home in their houses. And when great need shall compel them so to do, then Baptism shall be administered on this fashion. First, let the lawful Minister, and them that be present call upon God, &c. . . And then, the child being named by some one that is present, the said lawful Minister shall dip it in water, or pour,' &c.

From this time, therefore, lay-baptism was distinctly disallowed by the Church of England; but still no precise service was marked out which the lawful Minister was to use in such hasty baptisms: any prayer for God's grace, with the Lord's Prayer, preceding the action of baptism, would suffice. At the period of the last revision

The parents are exhorted not to defer the baptism of their infants beyond the first or second Sunday after their birth. And if great necessity arises that the infant must receive baptism at home, the minister of the parish (or in his absence any other lawful minister that can be procured) is thus to administer the rite. He is to say the Lord's Prayer, and so many of the collects from the Office of Public Baptism, as the time and present exigence will suffer. Immersion is not mentioned, because under the supposed circumstances the child is weak and in danger of death. After the baptism, the minister is to give thanks for the infant's regeneration and adoption, in the usual form after a public baptism. The particular collects which ought to be used before the act of baptism are not specified. In a very great emergency it is enough to say the Lord's Prayer¹; but if possible the prayers in the Public Office which precede the Gospel, and the four short petitions for the child, with the prayer for the sanctification of the water, should also be used. The remainder of the Office will be used, when the child, if it do afterward live, shall be brought to church to be received into the congregation.

At that time, if the child has been baptized by any other lawful minister, the minister of the parish must examine by whom, and how it was done, lest anything essential to the sacrament should have been omitted; and then either certify to the congregation that all was well done, and in due order, and so proceed with the introduction to the Gospel¹; or if, through the uncertainty of the answers, 'it cannot appear that the child was baptized with water, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost (which are essential parts of Baptism),² he must then use the Office of Public Baptism², and administer the rite with the conditional

used the Word of God; and if they answer, that they know and remember that they did so, let the pastor say this moreover: Forasmuch as, beloved in Christ, I hear that all things concerning the baptism of this infant have been done in the name of God and according to His institution, I pronounce in the name of Christ that ye have done well. For infants want the grace of God, which our Saviour denieth not unto them, whensoever it is asked for children, according to His Word...And to confirm this faith, and that we may stir up ourselves to thank the Lord for this his so great benefit ministered to this infant by baptism, let us hear out of the Gospel, how the Lord will have children brought unto Him, and how He will bounteously bless them, which be offered unto Him; Mark x.: And they brought children, &c.' The enquiry 'Whether they think the child to be lawfully and perfectly baptized?' was continued until the last revision.

² Comp. Hermann, Consultation, fol. 183: 'But if they which offer the infant cannot answer sufficiently to the said demands, so that they grant that they do not well know what they thought or did in baptizing, being sore troubled with the present danger, as it often chanceth, then omitting curious disputations, let the pastor judge such an infant not to be yet baptized, and let him do all those

If the minister of the parish himself baptized the child, he at once commences the service by certifying the fact to the congregation, and then proceeds with the introduction to the Gospel at the words, 'who being born in original sin, &c.'¹

nister of the parish;*

Since 1604, a lawful minister is the only substitute for the minister of the parish in the administration of Private Baptism; hence there is another case to be considered; viz. What is the minister to do, if he finds by the answer to the first question that the child has been baptized by a woman, or a layman, and yet finds that the sacrament has been otherwise administered correctly in its essentials. He cannot certify that all is well done, and in due order; and he may not rebaptize the child, even with the hypothetical form. The most proper course appears to be, to remit such a case of irregular, though valid² baptism, until the period when the person may be

*if by an unauthorised

things which pertain to this ministration...which done, let him baptize the infant without condition...'

confirmed, and thus by his own act testify his desire to be received into Christ's Church¹.

The service is the same that is appointed for Public Baptism, with the necessary change of language to express that it follows, instead of preceding the act of baptism. And the comparison of these expressions in the several offices will shew the meaning which is intended to be conveyed concerning the benefits of this sacrament. Thus, in the certification that baptism has been rightly administered, it is said of the child:—'who being born in original sin, and in the wrath of God, is now, by the laver of regeneration in Baptism, received into the number of the children of God, and heirs of everlasting life.' In the address after the Gospel:—'Doubt ye not, therefore, but earnestly believe, that he hath likewise favourably received this present infant; that he hath embraced him with the arms of his mercy; and (as he hath promised in his Holy Word) will give² unto him the blessing in particular, had hitherto avoided any synodical determination on the subject; and that the inconveniences attending such a determination would outweigh the conveniences proposed by it, especially at a time when the authority of the Christian priesthood and the succession in the ministry were openly denied, or undervalued.' See Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. pp. 419 sqq.; Bulley, Tabular View, pp. 264 sq.

¹ 'No doubt recourse should be had in this and all parallel cases to that general direction which is given in the last clause of the Preface concerning the Service of the Church; where it is said, that 'all points of doubt, arising from the want or from the obscurity of rubrics, must be referred to the bishop; and if he determine them not, to the archbishop.' And as this is the only regular and safe method, so I am inclined to believe it was the real design of our revisors, that this particular point of lay-baptism should not receive any public resolution in the office, much less be left to the private determination of the officiating minister, but be subjected to the examination, judgment, and final decision of the ordinary of the diocese.' Sharp, Charges, p. 42.

² Before King James's revision (1604) this was expressed, 'that he hath given unto him the blessing of eternal life, and made him partaker of his everlasting kingdom.' Nothing more seems to have been originally meant than 'hath given to him a title to the blessing of eternal life, and made him partaker in a right to the enjoyment of his everlasting kingdom.' However of eternal life, and make him partaker of his everlasting kingdom.' In the thanksgiving after the Lord's Prayer: 'Give thy Holy Spirit to this infant, that he, being born again, and being made an heir of everlasting salvation, through our Lord Jesus Christ, may continue thy servant, and attain thy promise,' &c. And in the address after the reception into the congregation it is said,— 'that this child is by Baptism regenerate, and grafted into the body of Christ's Church.' The change of circumstance will also account for the different position of the Lord's Prayer, which, in the Public Office, is placed before the thanksgiving for the grace of baptism which has just been received; but, in this Office, comes before the thanksgiving which closes the Exhortation upon the words of the Gospel. The child having been baptized, this becomes in fact the thanksgiving for the grace of baptism previously received, and which is therefore preceded by the Lord's Prayer¹: and the second thanksgiving, which follows the signing with the cross, is in this Office a thanksgiving for the child's reception into the congregation. The examination of the sponsors is retained in the same terms in which it ordinarily precedes baptism: for, if the child lives, it is fit that the rule of the Church should not be broken by reason of the charitable action of administering the rite when there seemed to be no need of any to undertake for the future behaviour and training of the child. After the concluding exhortation to the Godfathers and Godmothers, the words were understood in their plain meaning, as if referring to actual possession; which is more than the heirship, which is declared in the Catechism to belong to baptized children: 'wherein I was made a member of Christ, the child ending with the words,—‘daily proceeding in all virtue and godliness of living,’ followed in the Prayer-Books previously to the last revision,—‘&c. As in Public Baptism,’ or ‘And so forth, as in Public Baptism.’ This was omitted in 1661, apparently with the intention of placing here the Address about Confirmation, which was added to the Office of Public Baptism. It was overlooked, however, and the rubric does not supply any direction : but according to its manifest intention, the Address should be added in this place¹.

SECT. III.—The Ministration of Baptism to such as are of Riper Years, and able to answer for themselves.

This Office was added at the last revision of the Prayer-Book in 1661 : the composition being attributed to Dr George Griffith, bishop of St Asaph. The want of such an Office was felt at that time owing to the growth of Anti-Pædobaptism and the general neglect of the ordinances of the Church during the rebellion. It is now used on the occasion of the Baptism of converts from heathenism or judaism by our missionaries, and of persons who have not been baptized in infancy through the carelessness or

¹ The address about Confirmation is placed here, as in the office of Public Baptism, in the American Prayer-Book. The following direction is also given : ‘If Infant Baptism, and the receiving of infants baptized in private, are to be at the same time, the minister may make the Questions to the Sponsors, and the succeeding Prayers, serve for both. And again, after the Immersion, or the pouring of Water, and the receiving into the Church, the Minister may use the remainder of the Service for both.’ This is an attempt to solve a difficulty which must occur to the minister of a parish ; whether it is possible with any propriety to unite the two baptismal offices for infants. The common mode of using the office of public baptism, and receiving the privately baptized child amongst the others into the congregation, is unsatisfactory, since it is hardly possible to avoid the appearance at least of praying for the future regeneration of a regenerate child, or to disentangle the clauses in the part of the service preceding the baptism, which cannot be applied to the child who has already been baptized.

perverse notions of their parents¹. A rite of this nature is therefore seldom administered in a Christian country; and whenever it is called for, it is an occasion of peculiar solemnity.

The rubric directs not only the examination of the candidate, but that timely notice shall be given to the bishop², or whom he shall appoint for that purpose, a week before at the least, to secure a due preparation, and instruction in the principles of the Christian religion. The catechumen is also exhorted to prepare himself with prayers and fasting for the receiving of this Holy Sacrament, according to the rule of the primitive Church³. The Service is formed upon that for the Baptism of Infants, with many changes, however, which adapt it to the different circumstances of the persons who are to be baptized. The Gospel is taken from our Saviour's discourse with Nicodemus concerning the necessity of a new birth of water and of the Spirit; and the exhortation that follows it treats of repentance in connexion with baptism. Moreover, since the catechumens are able to ¹ Cases will occur in which it may seem doubtful whether this Office, or that for the Baptism of Infants should be used. The rubric at the end of this Office directs the use of the latter for the baptism of persons before they come to years of discretion to answer for themselves. And Confirmation and Communion should immediately follow the baptism of an adult. Hence the office for the Baptism of Infants should be used for all persons who are not fitted either by age or intelligence for Confirmation, changing the word infant for child or person, as occasion requireth.

CHAPTER V.

The Occasional Offices.

SECT. I. The Catechism.

PREVIOUSLY to 1661 the Catechism was inserted in the Order of Confirmation. The title in the Prayer-Books of Edward VI. and Elizabeth was, Confirmation, wherein is contained a Catechism for Children; and in 1604, The Order of Confirmation, or laying on of hands upon children baptized, and able to render an account of their faith, according to the Catechism following; with a further title to the Catechism itself, that is to say, An Instruction to be learned of every Child, before he be brought to be confirmed by the Bishop.

The insertion in the Prayer-Book of such an authorized exposition of the elements of the Christian faith and practice, belongs to the Reformation¹. English versions and expositions of the Lord's Prayer and Creed had existed in early times². But immediately before the Reformation, it appears that these elements were by no means generally known. The origin of our rubrics about catechising may be referred to the Injunctions issued in 1536 and 1538³, which ordered the curates to teach the Catechising ordered before the Reformation.

¹ The idea is probably due to Hermann's Consultation, where, after Baptism follows (fol. 183), 'Of the Confirmation of children baptized: and solemn profession of their faith in Christ, and of their obedience to be shewed to Christ, and to His congregation;' and a catechism is inserted in this order of Confirmation, to be recited as the public confession of those who come to be confirmed. No part, however, of our Catechism was borrowed from this source.

people the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Ten Commandments, sentence by sentence, on Sundays and holy-days, and to make all persons recite them when they came to confession¹. And when the great hindrance to reformation was removed by the death of Henry, the instruction of the young and the ignorant was among the first particulars to which the advisers of Edward directed their efforts, in the Injunctions of 1547²: and as soon as a Book of Service was prepared, a Catechism was placed in it, that the exposition of these Christian elements might not depend on the care or ability of the curates. This manual still remains in our Prayer-Book, with only a few verbal alterations³, and the addition of an explanation of

² Cardwell. Doc. Ann. pp. 7, 25: 'Whether they have not diligently taught upon the Sundays and holy-days their parishioners, and specially the youth, their Paternoster, the Articles of our Faith, and the Ten Commandments in English; and whether they have expounded and declared the understanding of the same.'

³ The third answer was thus expressed:—'that I should forsake the devil, and all his works and pomps, the vanities of the wicked world...' The preface to the Commandments was added in 1552, and the Commandments were then given at length, which had before been in a very curtailed form, nearly as they had been in Henry's Primer (1545, ed. Burton, p. 460). In 1661, the words,—'the King and all that are put in authority under him,'—were substituted for —'the King and his Ministers,' (in the American Prayer-Book it is,—'the civil authority'): and in the Sacraments in 1604. The composition of this latter part is generally attributed to Bishop Overall¹, who was the prolocutor of the Convocation, and at that time dean of St Paul's. It was added by royal authority, 'by way of explanation²,' in compliance with the wish which the Puritans had expressed at the Conference at Hampton-Court³; and with two emendations⁴ was afterwards confirmed by Convocation and Parliament in 1661.

An intention was formed in the time of Edward and Elizabeth to have also another authorized catechism, for the instruction of more advanced students, and especially those in public schools, touching the grounds of the Christian religion. The original of this work is ascribed to Poynt⁵, 1552, the word 'chıld' was substituted for 'son' in the address before the Lord's Prayer.

³ Dr Reynolds complained that the catechism in the Common Prayer-Book was too brief; for which one by Master Nowel late dean of Paul's, was added, and that too long for young novices to learn by heart: requested therefore that one uniform catechism might be made, which, and none other, might be generally received: it was demanded of him whether, if to the short catechism in the Communion-Book something were added for the doctrine of the sacrament, it would not serve? His Majesty thought the doctor's request very reasonable: but yet so, that he would have a catechism in the fewest and plainest affirmative terms that may be: taxing withal the number of ignorant catechisms set out in Scotland, by every one that was the son of a good man... Barlow's Sum of the Conference; Cardwell, Conf. p. 187.

who was bishop of Winchester during Gardiner's deprivation. It was published in Latin and in English¹, in 1553, and is supposed to have had the approval both of Cranmer², and also of the Convocation which sanctioned the Articles in 1552.³ It seems, however, that this was not considered quite satisfactory; nor was it able to supplant the many similar compilations of the foreign reformers⁴, which were adopted by many teachers, and occasioned much complaint as to the want of a uniform system of religious instruction. Hence it was agreed by the bishops in 1561, that besides the catechism for ³ It appears that a licence for printing the work was granted in September, 1552: see Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. p. 145. When it was published, in 1553, the Articles of the preceding year were appended to each edition; and also a few prayers at the end of the English edition. The title was:— '*A short Catechism, or plain instruction, containing the sum of Christian learning, set forth by the King's majesty's authority, for all School-masters to teach. of our Lord MDLII. for to root out the discord of opinions, and establish the agreement of true religion: Likewise published by the King's Majesty's authority.' The Latin title was:— 'Catechismus brevis, Christianæ disciplinæ summam continens &c.' It appears that this mention of the Convocation on the title-page, though belonging only to the Articles, led to the assertion of Weston, the prolocutor of Q. Mary's Convocation, that this pestiferous and heretical Catechism, as he called it, was foisted fraudulently upon the synod, never having been authorized by the Convocation. See Lathbury, p. 144, and Hardwick's Hist. of the Articles, pp. 108 sq.

Even in 1578, when the exclusive use of Nowell's Catechisms had been enjoined in the canons of 1571, those of Calvin, Bullinger, and others, were still ordered by statute to be used in the University of Oxford. See Cardwell, Doc. Ann. I. p. 300, note.

children which were to be confirmed, another somewhat longer should be devised for communicants¹, and a third in Latin, for schools². It is probable that at this time Dean Nowell was employed upon such a catechism, taking Poynt's as his ground-work; so that it was completed before the meeting of Convocation³ (Nov. 11, 1562), by which it was approved, and amended, but not formally sanctioned, apparently because it was treated as part of a larger design, which was not realized⁴. The Catechism therefore remained unpublished until 1570, when it was printed at the request of the archbishops, and appeared in several forms, in Latin and in English⁵.

⁵ The larger Catechism, in Latin, intended to be used in places of liberal education, is reprinted in Bp. Randolph's Enchirid. Theolog. Its title is, 'Catechismus, sive prima institutio, disciplinaque pietatis Christianæ, latine explicata.' In the same year it was translated into English by Norton. Also an abridgment of it, called the Shorter, or the Middle Catechism, was prepared by Nowell for the use of schools. He also published a third, called the Smaller Catechism, differing but slightly from that in the Book of Common Prayer. It is probable that Overall abridged the questions and answers on the sacraments from this catechism. See Churton's Life of Nowell, pp. 183 sq. Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. pp. 167 sq.

the Romish Church¹. They may indeed be so called, in the language of the ancients, who applied the word to any religious ceremony². But in the restricted signification defined in the Catechism, only Baptism and the Lord's Supper can be correctly and really sacraments³.

The custom of blessing with the outward sign of imposition of hands is most ancient. In the Christian Church it was used after the Apostolical practice⁴, upon the newly baptized, and was at first the conclusion of the ministration of baptism. Subsequently to the 2nd and 3rd centuries, the anointing with chrism has been joined with it; and the rite has been reserved, in the Western Church⁵, as the peculiar function of the bishop, administered immediately after baptism, if a bishop were present, and in other cases during a diocesan visitation⁶.

CONFIRMATION.

In the first English Prayer-Book the order of the old service was very much retained, omitting, however, the use of chrism. After the versicles and the first prayer, it proceeded thus :

Ceremonies of Confirmation. (1549).

‘Minister. Sign them, O Lord, and mark them to be thine for ever, by the virtue of thy holy cross and passion. Confirm and strength them with the inward unction of thy Holy Ghost, mercifully unto everlasting life. Amen. Then the Bishop shall cross them in the forehead, and lay his hand upon their head, saying, N. I sign thee with the sign of the cross, and lay my hand upon thee : In the name of the Father, &c. And thus shall he do to every child one after another. And when he hath laid his hand upon every child, then shall he say, The peace of the Lord abide with you. Answer. And with thy spirit.’

This was omitted at the revision in 1552, and our present benedictional prayer was inserted, ‘Defend, O Lord, this child with thy heavenly grace,’ &c.

The Collect, ‘Almighty and everlasting God, who makest us,’ &c. was composed in 1549, from the collect which preceded the laying on of hands in Archbishop Hermann’s Order of Confirmation¹.

The present Office.

The Service was brought into its present form at the last revision in 1661. Being separated from the Catechism, its title was : ‘The Order of Confirmation, or laying on of hands upon them that are baptized, and comes to

¹ ‘Almighty and merciful God, heavenly Father, which only workest in us to will and to perform the things that please thee, and be good indeed ; we beseech thee for these children.....Increase in them the gift of thy Spirit, that ever going forward in the knowledge and obedience of thy Gospel, in thy congregation, they may continue to the end.....So give these children

the thing that we pray thee for, through thy Son Christ, that when we shall now lay our hands upon them in thy name, and shall certify them by this sign that thy fatherly hand shall be ever stretched forth upon them, and that they shall never want thy Holy Spirit to keep, lead, and govern them in the way of health...’ Hermann’s Consultation, fol. 191.

years of discretion,' instead of the words (1604), 'and able to render an account of their faith according to the Catechism following.' What had previously been an explanatory rubric before the Catechism, was turned into a preface to be read at the opening of the service of Confirmation: and instead of questions from the Catechism¹, the solemn demand of personal acknowledgement of the baptismal vow is addressed to the candidates, to be answered by each one for himself. The whole service is to be said by the bishop, except only the preface. The Lord's Prayer was at the same time inserted after the action of laying on of hands; and also the collect, 'O Almighty Lord,' &c., before the concluding blessing.

CONFIRMATION.

Confirmation occupies an important position in the economy of the Church, which is pointed out in the last rubric², that it is the admission to full communion. Baptism is administered to infants through the faith and charity of others: but knowledge at least of the elements

Meaning of the rite.

¹ Before this revision a rubric had directed the curate of every parish, in sending the names of the children to the bishop, to specify which of them could say the Articles of the Faith, the Lord's Prayer, and the Ten Commandments, and also how many of them could answer to the other questions contained in this Catechism. In Hermann's Consultation (fol. 186), the parish priests are directed, certain days before the coming of the visitors, 'to prepare the children, whom they purpose to offer to Confirmation, to make their confession of faith, and profession of Christian communion and obedience decently and seemly, which must be done of them after this sort.' Then follows a long catechism; and then (fol. 190),—'After that one of the children hath rehearsed a full confession of his faith, and hath professed the obedience of Christ before the whole congregation, it shall be sufficient to propound questions to the other children after this sort: Dost thou also, my son, believe and confess, &c. Here it shall suffice, that every one answer thus for himself: I believe and confess the same, and yield up myself to Christ, and his congregation, trusting in the grace and help of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.'

² This is taken from the rubric in the Sarum Manual, Ritus Baptiz. Maskell, p. 31: 'Item nullus debet admitti ad sacramentum corporis et sanguinis Christi Jesu extra mortis articulum, nisi fuerit confirmatus, vel a receptione sacramenti confirmationis fuerit rationaliter impeditus.'

CONFIRMATION.

of Christian truth, and an intelligent promise of Christian obedience, is required in those who come to the Lord's Supper. At the age which is now generally fixed upon for this ordinance, more information is required than the mere ability to repeat the Catechism. This is left to the discretion of the curate, who is to present to the bishop such persons within his parish as he shall think fit: the earlier rubric, however, may still be received, so far as to point out the least amount of knowledge which the curate can accept in a candidate for Confirmation. Other qualities, in the absence of higher knowledge, must be sought in a desire to be admitted to the Holy Communion.

SECT. III. The Form of Solemnization of Matrimony.

There is no doubt that marriage has been solemnized with religious rites from the earliest times of the Christian Church¹. Being also an occasion of rejoicing, it was forbidden in the 4th century, together with other festivities, during the solemn fast of Lent²; and in the 11th century, at many other seasons also³. The only seasons now prohibited, not indeed by law, but by custom and propriety, are Lent and any occasion of a public fast⁴.

Marriages forbidden at certain seasons.

Easter; during fourteen days before the Feast of St. John Baptist, during the fasts of the Four Seasons, and on all vigils: Concil. Sa- legunat. (Selengsted in Franconia, 1022) can. 3; Mansi, XIX. 397.

⁴ The following clause was proposed to the Convocation (1661), but was not inserted in the Prayer-Book:—'By the ecclesiastical laws of this realm there be some times in the year wherein marriages are not usually solemnized, as from Advent Sunday until eight days after the Epiphany; from Septuagesima Sunday until eight days

The rubrics of the publication of banns¹, in the earlier Prayer-Books, directed that they should be asked *three several Sundays or holy-days in the time of service, the people being present, after the accustomed manner*². after Easter; from Rogation Sunday until Trinity Sunday.' See Cardwell, Synodalia, I. pp. 133 sq. note.

² 'Non fidabit sacerdos nec consentiet ad fidationem inter virum et mulierem ante tertium dictum bannorum. Debet enim sacerdos banna in facie ecclesiæ infra missarum solemnia cum major populi adfuerit multitudo, per tres dies solemnes et disjunctas, interrogare: ita ut inter unumquemque diem solemnem cadat ad minus una dies ferialis... Et si contrahentes diversarum sint parochiarum, tunc in utraque ecclesia parochiarum illarum sunt banna interroganda.' Manual. Sar. Ordo ad faciendum Sponsalia: Maskell, Mon. Rit. I. p. 44.

³ This rubric has been generally supposed to be set aside by the Marriage Acts (26 Geo. II. c. 33, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 76), which say:—'The said banns shall be published upon three Sundays preceding the solemnization of marriage, during the time of Morning Service, or of the Evening Service if there be no Morning Service in such church or chapel on any of those Sundays, immediately after the Second Lesson.' The rubric does not provide for any publication of banns but during the Communion Office, or that part of it which is directed to be said after the Litany: so that banns could not be asked at all in churches where there was no Morning Service. This is remedied by the Act, which allows a publication under such circumstances in the afternoon, and specifies the most public time in that service in which it must be done. The intention of the law is satisfied by the usual publication after the second lesson in the Morning Service. But if the Morning Prayers were said at an earlier hour, and the Litany and the Communion Office formed the principal or midday service, then surely the banns must be asked in that service, and before the Offertory sentences.

Notice of the names and places of abode of the parties may be required to be given to the minister seven days before the first publication of the banns: Stat. 26 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 2. See Hook, Ch. Dict. art. BANNs OF MARRIAGE. The American rubric is of necessity in different terms:—'The laws respecting Matrimony, whether by publishing the Banns in churches, or by License, being different in the several States, every Minister is left to the direction of those laws, in every thing that regards the civil contract between the parties. And when the Banns are published, it shall be in the following form. I publish &c.'

MARI-MONY.

The commencement of the service is taken from the Sarum Manual¹:

In primis statuatur vir et mulier ante ostium ecclesiæ coram Deo, sacerdote, et populo², vir a dextris mulieris, et mulier a sinistris viri³.

Tunc interroget sacerdos banna dicens in lingua materna sub hac forma :

Ecce convenimus huc, fratres, coram Deo, et angelis, et omnibus sanctis ejus, in facie ecclesiæ, ad conjungendum duo corpora, scilicet hujus viri et hujus mulieris, Hic respiciat sacerdos personas suas, ut a modo sint una caro et duæ animæ in fide et in lege Dei, ad promerendam simul vitam æternam quicquid ante hoc fecerint. Admoneo igitur vos omnes, ut si quis ex vobis qui aliquid dicere sciat quare isti adolescentes legitime contrahere non possint, modo confiteatur.

Eadem admonitio fiat ad virum et ad mulierem, ut si quid ab illis occulte actum fuerit, vel si quid devoverint, vel alio modo de se noverint quare legitime contrahere non possint, tunc confiteantur⁴... Si vero aliquis impedimentum aliquod proponere voluerit, et ad hoc probandum cautionem præstiterit⁵, differantur sponsalia quousque rei veritas cognoscatur.

The addresses, which were placed in 1549 at the beginning and end of the service, are in accordance with

² The direction that their friends and neighbours should be present comes from the form of service in Hermann's Consultation (fol. 241): 'Wherefore they shall endeavour themselves to bring very many with them unto the holy assembly ...for the prayers of many are godly desired.' The American rubric directs the parties to come into the body of the church, or to be 'ready in some proper house, with their friends and neighbours.'

⁴ The York Manual gives the English form:—'Also I charge you both, and either by yourself, as ye will answer before God at the day of doom, that if there be any thing done privily or openly between yourself: or that ye know any lawful letting why that ye may not be wedded together at this time: Say it now, or we do any more to this matter.' Maskell, i. p. 43, note.

the practice of the reformers throughout our offices, of providing instruction for the people in the meaning of the services in which they were to join. Hence the above short and final bidding of the banns was lengthened into an address on the institution and religious use of matrimony¹.

Matt. xix. and Ephes. v. and then proceeding:—'Out of these places the despoised persons and rest of the congregation must be warned that they learn and consider first, how holy a kind of life and how acceptable to God matrimony is. For by these places we know that God Himself instituted holy wedlock and that in paradise, man being yet perfect and holy, and that He hath greatly blessed this copulation, and joineth Himself all those together which contract matrimony in His name, and giveth the husband to be an head and saviour to the wife, as Christ is the Head and Saviour of the congregation, and furthermore giveth the wife a body and a help to the husband, that here in this world they may lead a godly, honest, and joyous life together: ' and again, in the prayer after the ceremonies of the ring and joining of hands:—'Which also honoured matrimony with His presence, and with the beginning of His miracles, and would have it to be a token and mystery of His exceeding love towards the congregation.' ¹ A ring was given together with gifts (arrhæ) at the time of the contract of marriage (ἔγγυσις, sponsalia) by the Romans (Juv. Sat. vi. 27, 'digito pignus fortasse dedisti:') and was described by Pope Nicholas (860) among the customary ceremonies of the espousals: Respons. ad Consulta Bulgarorum, c. 3, (Mansi, xv. 402) 'post sponsalia, quæ futurarum sunt nuptiarum promissa fœdera, quæque consensu eorum qui hæc contrahunt, et eorum in quorum potestate sunt, celebrantur; et postquam arrhis sponsam sibi sponsus per digitum fidei a se annulo insignitum desponderit, dotemque utriusque placitam sponsus ei cum scripto pactum hoc continente coram invitatis ab utraque parte tradiderit; aut mox, aut apto tempore...ambo ad nuptilia fœdera perducentur.' See Bingham, Antiq. xxii. 3, § 5. The American rubric omits the ceremony of laying the ring upon the book, but simply directs that 'the man shall give unto the woman a ring. And the minister taking the ring shall deliver it unto the man, to put it upon the fourth finger &c.'

in tua pace consistat, et in tua voluntate permaneat, et in tuo amore vivat et crescat et senescat, et multiplicetur in longitudinem dierum. Per Dominum.

Tunc aspergatur aqua benedicta super anulum.

Si autem antea fuerit anulus ille benedictus, tunc statim postquam vir posuerit anulum super librum, accipiens sacerdos anulum tradat ipsum viro: quem vir accipiat manu sua dextera cum tribus principalioribus digitis, et manu sua sinistra tenens dexteram sponsæ docente sacerdote dicat:

With this rynge I the wed, and this gold and silver I the geve, and with my body I the worshipe¹, and with all my worldely cathel I the endowe.

Et tunc inserat sponsus anulum pollicis sponsæ dicens: In nomine Patris; deinde secundo digito dicens: et Filii: deinde tertio digito dicens: et Spiritus Sancti. deinde quarto digito dicens: Amen. ibique dimittat anulum: quia in medico est quædam vena procedens usque ad cor: et in sonoritate argenti designatur interna dilectio, quæ semper inter eos debet esse recens.

Deinde inclinatis eorum capitibus dicat sacerdos benedictionem super eos:

Benedicti + sitis a Domino, qui fecit mundum ex nihilo. Amen.

The prayer, 'O Eternal God, Creator,' &c., which occupies the place of this short blessing, is formed from the two prayers which were said at the blessing of the ring. In 1549 the ancient 'tokens of spousage, as gold and silver,' were still given with the ring, and therefore were mentioned in this prayer: 'that as Isaac and Rebecca thee honour.' The old word was, however, retained, as in Luke xiv. 10, and as it is still in common use in the phrase 'worshipful,' for 'honourable.' The meaning of the clause is, that the woman is to be admitted to the honour and dignity of a lawful wife: see Hooker, Ecc. Pol. v. 73, § 7. The clause is omitted in the American Prayer-Book; and the Lord's Prayer is inserted before the Prayer, 'O Eternal God &c.'

(after bracelets and jewels of gold given of the one to the other for tokens of their matrimony) lived faithfully together,' &c. This was omitted in 1552; and thus we use as ceremonies only the two simple and expressive forms, which were also retained in the ritual compiled for Archbishop Hermann of Cologne, viz. the giving of a ring, and the joining of hands. The latter ceremony, and the declaration that follows it, are taken from that ritual¹; and the blessing, which then concludes the actual marriage rite, is taken from that of the mediæval Church :

Bene-dicat vos Deus Pater, custodiat vos Jesus Christus, illuminet vos Spiritus Sanctus. Ostendat Dominus faciem suam in vobis et misereatur vestri. Convertat Dominus vultum suum ad vos : et det vobis pacem : impleatque vos omni benedictione spirituali, in remissionem omnium peccatorum vestrorum ut habeatis vitam æternam, et vivatis in sæcula sæculorum. Amen².

*The Service
after the

The preceding service corresponds to the ancient espousals, being the actual ceremony of marriage, performed at the door of the church according to the old rubric, or in the body of the church according to the English rubric. The service then proceeds with appropriate prayers for the newly-married persons, which, like and joining of hands, I the minister of Christ and the congregation pronounce that they be joined together with lawful and Christian matrimony, and I confirm this their marriage in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Amen.' Hermann's Consultation, fol. 244.

The third prayer is taken from the mass, which formed the conclusion of the mediæval office. It is the prayer which included the sacramental benediction, and which was said while the newly-married persons were kneeling under a veil² :

MATRIMONY.

Holy Communion at a Marriage.

The reformed service, like that from which it had been derived, ended with an administration of the Holy Communion, the rubric being expressed in positive terms, 'The new married persons, the same day of their marriage, must receive the Holy Communion.' This was altered in 1661, in compliance with the objection of the Presbyterians¹, or more probably from a conviction that many persons would be married according to the rites of the Church, who were far from being in communion with it².

The address which now closes the service is of the nature of a homily, shewing the relative duties of married persons. It consists of a series of extracts from the Epistles of St Paul and St Peter; the intention of our reformers being clearly to keep before the minds of the people the idea that matrimony was recognized by the Apostles, as a holy estate, in which Christians were to serve God, and was forbidden to none, inasmuch as married men, of the laity or clergy, were in holy brotherhood with 'St Peter, the Apostle of Christ, who was himself a married man.'

¹ 'This rubric doth either enforce all such as are unfit for the sacrament to forbear marriage, contrary to Scripture, which approves the marriage of all men; or else compels all that marry to come to the Lord's Table, though never so unprepared; and therefore we desire it may be omitted, the rather because that marriage-festivals are too often accompanied with such divertisements as are unsuitable to those Christian duties, which ought to be before and follow after the receiving of that holy sacrament.' The bishops reply to this, that it 'enforces none to forbear marriage, but presumes (as well it may) that all persons marriageable ought to be also fit to receive the holy sacracrament; and marriage being so solemn a covenant of God, they that undertake it in the fear of God will not stick to seal it by receiving the Holy Communion, and accordingly prepare themselves for it. It were more Christian to desire that those licentious festivities might be suppressed, and the Communion more generally used by those that marry: the happiness would be greater than can easily be expressed.' Cardwell, Conferences, pp. 331, 360.

² This was necessarily the case before the Act of 1836 (6 and 7 Gul. IV. c. 85), which allowed a contract of marriage to be made in the presence of a registrar.

SECT. IV. The Order for the Visitation of the Sick.

This Office, like that of Private Baptism, is intended to bring the ministration of the Church to the chambers of those members, who are unable to join in her public worship. The apostolical precept¹, that the sick man shall 'call for the elders of the Church,' was as strongly urged in mediæval² as in our own times³; and our present Order for the Visitation of the Sick is mainly taken from that which was used before the Reformation, as will be seen by the following extracts from the Sarum Manual:

*Private and

The Confession¹ which is retained in the rubric of this office is not required absolutely, as necessary for the forgiveness of sins, but if a sick or dying man feel his conscience troubled with any weighty matter, since the remembrance of sin is apt to be stirred at the approach of death, special confession is advised, in order that the conscience may be guided to repentance, or the scruples of a penitent eased, by the spiritual advice of the minister². The Absolution which is appointed to follow this Confession, differs also from the other forms of Absolution in the Morning and Evening Prayer, and in the Communion Office, which are expressed in general and more precatory terms. This, however, contains the mediæval indicative clause, dispensing pardon, as well as an earnest prayer that pardon may be granted¹. But it must be observed that the rubric directs it to be used after a special confession for the unburdening of a troubled conscience, and then only if the penitent humbly and heartily desire it². The collect that follows is in fact the original absolution, or reconciliation of a dying penitent, found in the old formularies of the English Church, and in the Sacramentary of Gelasius³.

Deus misericors, Deus clemens, qui secundum multitudinem miserationum tuarum peccata pœnitentium deles, et præteritorum criminum culpas venia remissionis evacuas: respice super hunc famulum tuum N. sibi remissionem omnium peccatorum suorum tota cordis contritione poscentem. The Collect,
'O most merciful God,'
&c.

² The rubric of 1549 directed this Absolution to be used also 'in all private confessions:' hence this is the form referred to in the Exhortation to the Communion, as the 'absolution of the priest,' 'comfort and absolution as of the ministers of God and of the Church.' The direction was omitted in 1552; and this Absolution was not so precisely ordered in any case, by the substitution of the phrase 'after this sort' for 'after this form.' The rubric concerning Confession, and the Absolution, are omitted in the American Prayer-Book.

³ The First Prayer-Book (1549) contained also the following form of anointing:—'If the sick person desire to be anointed, then shall the Priest anoint him upon the forehead or breast only, making the sign of the cross, saying thus:—As with this visible oil thy body outwardly is anointed: so our heavenly Father, Almighty God, grant of his infinite goodness that thy soul inwardly may be anointed with the Holy Ghost, who is the Spirit of all strength, comfort, relief, and gladness: and vouchsafe for his great mercy (if it be his blessed will) to restore unto thee thy bodily health and strength to serve him; and send thee release of all thy pains, troubles, and diseases, both in body and mind. And howsoever his goodness (by his divine and unsearchable providence) shall dispose of thee: we, his unworthy ministers and servants, humbly beseech the eternal Majesty to do with thee according to the multitude of his innumerable mercies, and to pardon thee all thy sins and offences, committed by all thy bodily senses, passions, and carnal affections: who also vouchsafe mercifully to grant unto thee ghostly strength by his Holy Spirit to withstand and overcome all temptations and assaults of thine adversary, that in no wise he prevail against thee, but that thou mayest have perfect victory and triumph against the devil, sin, and death, through Christ our Lord: Who by his death hath overcome the prince of death, and with the Father and the Holy Ghost evermore liveth and reigneth God, world without end. VISITATION OF THE SICK.

The Communion of the Sick.

The rubric of 1549 directed that, if a sick person was to receive the Communion on the same day in which there was a celebration of the holy Eucharist in the church, the priest should reserve at the open Communion so much of the sacrament of the body and blood as should serve the sick person, and so many as should communicate with him, if there were any. The service to be used in this case was, the general Confession, the Absolution, with the comfortable sentences of Scripture, the distribution of the elements, and the collect, 'Almighty and everliving God, we most heartily thank thee,' &c.

Communion with reserved Elements. (1549.)

If there was no open Communion on that day, the curate was directed to visit the sick person afore noon, and to celebrate the holy Communion in the following form²:—

'O praise the Lord, all ye nations, laud him, all ye people; for his merciful kindness is confirmed towards us, and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Glory be to the Father, &c.

'The Celebration of the Holy Communion for the Sick.' (1549.)

² In the ancient church, private consecrations of the Eucharist were sometimes used; but the ordinary custom appears to have been to send the consecrated elements to the absent, whether sick or in prison, by the hands of the deacon. See Bingham, Antiq. xv. 4. §§8-13.

If more sick persons were to be visited on the same day, the curate was ordered to reserve a sufficient portion of the elements from the first consecration, and immediately to carry it, and minister it unto them.

'The Communion of the Sick.' (1552.)

At the revision in 1552 all mention of reservation of the consecrated elements was omitted. The rubric directed that 'having a convenient place in the sick man's house, where the curate may reverently minister, and a good number to receive the Communion with the sick person, with all things necessary for the same, he shall there minister the Holy Communion.' And the only change in the service from that of the public Communion was the use of the special Collect, Epistle, and Gospel.

The shortened Communion of the Sick. (1661.)

At the last revision in 1661, the number 'three, or two at the least,' was mentioned as requisite to form a company of communicants with the sick person¹; and the direction was given to shorten the service in such private exception to this rule is that, in a time of contagious sickness, 'upon the special request of the diseased, the Minister may only communicate with him:' this rubric was added in 1552, when such private administrations were otherwise forbidden.

administrations, by commencing with the special Collect, Epistle, and Gospel, and then passing to the Communion Office at the address to the communicants, 'Ye that do truly and earnestly repent you, &c.'

COMMUNION OF THE SICK.

If the Visitation Service is used at the same time, the priest ends that service after the prayer, 'O most merciful God, &c.:' and instead of the psalm, proceeds to the collect of the Communion of the Sick, and thence to the address to the communicants, as before¹.

The rubric which points to spiritual communion, as a topic of consolation to one who is unable to partake of the material elements², is taken from the ancient office of Extreme Unction:—

Spiritual Communion.

Deinde communicetur infirmus nisi prius communicatus fuerit: et nisi de vomitu vel alia irreverentia probabiliter timeatur: in quo casu dicat sacerdos infirmo:—Fratr, in hoc casu sufficit tibi vera fides, et bona voluntas: tantum crede, et manducasti³.

This rubric does not imply that the actual participation of this sacrament is a matter of indifference. Like the other sacrament of baptism, it must be received, where it may be had. But a faithful Christian need not fear separation from the love of Christ, if 'either by reason of the extremity of sickness, or for want of warning in due time to the curate, or for lack of company to receive with him, or by any other just impediment,' he do not receive the sacrament of Christ's body and blood in his last extremity.

With the first part of the Exhortation and all other things unto the Psalm. And if the sick desire to be anointed, then shall the priest use the appointed* prayer without any Psalm.'

BURIAL OF
THE DEAD.SECT. V. The Order for the Burial of the Dead.

The ancient Church treated the bodies of the dead with a care suited to the belief of the resurrection of the body. Hence instead of consuming them by fire¹, the Christians committed them to the grave, as early as the third or second century². The funeral was also accompanied with prayer, and hymns of praise and thanksgiving³.

The mediæval services included the *Commendation*⁴, between the death and the burial, the *Burial*⁵ itself, the *Mass for the Dead*⁶, and the *Office for the Dead*⁷, together with *Trentals*⁸, and Anniversary Commemorations.

The arrangement of the reformed service has been much changed at the several revisions of the Prayer-Book. In 1549 it was as follows:—

BURIAL OF
THE DEAD.

The first
vice. (1549.)

The Priest meeting the corpse at the church-stile, shall say: or else the priests and clerks shall sing, and so go either into the church, or towards the grave,

I am the resurrection, &c.

I know that my Redeemer, &c.

We brought nothing, &c.

When they come at the grave, whiles the corpse is made ready to be laid into the earth, the priest shall say, or else the priest and clerks shall sing,

Man that is born of a woman, &c.

In the midst of life.....to fall from thee.

Then the priest casting earth upon the corpse, shall say,

I commend thy soul to God the Father Almighty, and thy body to the ground, earth to earth, &c.

Then shall be said or sung,

I heard a voice from heaven, &c.

Let us pray. We commend into thy hands of mercy, most merciful Father, the soul of this our brother departed, N. And his body we commit to the earth, beseeching thine infinite goodness to give us grace to live in thy fear and love, and to die in thy favour: that when the judgment shall come which thou hast committed to thy well-beloved Son, both this our brother, and we, may be found acceptable in thy sight, and receive that blessing which thy well-beloved Son shall then pronounce, &c. masses continued to be said in that church, but with more particular solemnity on the third, the seventh, and the thirtieth day, at each of which times a dole of food or money was distributed among the poor.'

BURIAL OF
THE DEAD.

This prayer shall also be added,

Almighty God, we give thee hearty thanks for this thy servant, whom thou hast delivered from the miseries of this wretched world, from the body of death and all temptation; and, as we trust, hast brought his soul, which he committed into thy holy hands, into sure consolation and rest: Grant, we beseech thee, that at the day of judgment his soul and all the souls of thy elect, departed out of this life, may with us, and we with them, fully receive thy promises, and be made perfect altogether, through the glorious resurrection of thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord.

These psalms with other suffrages following are to be said in the church, either before or after the burial of the corpse.

Ps. cxvi. cxxxix. cxlvi.

Then shall follow this lesson, 1 Cor. xv. [v. 20 to end.]

The lesson ended, then shall the Priest say,

Our Father, &c.

Priest. Enter not, O Lord, into judgment with thy servant.

Priest. From the gates of hell.

Answer. Deliver their souls, O Lord.

Priest. I believe to see the goodness of the Lord.

Answer. In the land of the living.

Priest. O Lord, graciously hear my prayer.

Answer. And let my cry come unto thee.

Let us pray. O Lord, with whom do live the spirits of them that be dead; and in whom the souls of them that be elected, after they be delivered from the burden of the flesh, be in joy and felicity: Grant unto this thy servant, that the sins which he committed in this world be not imputed unto him, but that he, escaping the gates of hell, and pains of eternal darkness, may ever dwell in the region of light, with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, in the place where is no weeping, sorrow, nor heaviness; and when that dreadful day of the general resurrection shall come, make him to rise also with the just and righteous, and receive this body again to glory, then made pure and incorruptible: set him on the right hand of thy Son Jesus Christ, among thy holy and elect, that then he may hear with them these most sweet and comfortable words: Come to me, ye blessed of my Father, possess the kingdom, &c.

symbolical of any consecration, or because the tendency of the time was to take all such actions out of the hands of the priest, the rubric was altered to its present terms,—‘Then, while the earth shall be cast upon the body by some standing by, the Priest shall say,’—and the commendation was altered to the present declaration,—‘Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God of his great mercy to take unto himself the soul of our dear brother, here departed, we therefore commit his body to the ground,’ &c.

The lesson was appointed to follow the anthem,—‘I heard a voice from heaven,’ &c. Then followed,—‘Lord, have mercy upon us,’ &c.; the Lord’s Prayer; the prayer, ‘Almighty God, with whom do live,’ &c.; and the collect, ‘O merciful God,’ &c., as in our present service. No direction was given which part of the service should be said in the church; nor was any psalm appointed: and in this state it continued until the last revision (1661), when the rubric was added, after the commencing anthems, appointing the psalms and lesson to be read in the church before proceeding to the grave.

*The present
Office.
In what
not be used.*

The first rubric was added in 1661, directing that the Office should not be used for any that die unbaptized¹, or excommunicate, or have laid violent hands upon themselves. The interpretation which the law puts upon this rubric is certain: that baptism by any hand, however irregular, is yet valid to secure the church’s rites of burial: excommunication is a punishment which can only be inflicted by the sentence of a competent tribunal: and the question of suicide is determined by the coroner’s inquest².

² However painful may be the circumstances under which the Burial Service will at times be used, a clergyman may not treat an individual as excommunicated, without any previous legal sentence, or by setting aside the verdict of an authorized, though perhaps mistaken, jury. A notoriously wicked man ought to have

The second rubric directs the priest to meet the corpse BURIAL OF THE DEAD at the entrance of the church-yard¹; and then to go into the church, or towards the grave: that is, into the church on all ordinary occasions; and to the grave, if the person has died of any infectious disease².

Of the anthems, which are said or sung in the procession, the first and second have long been used in some part of the funeral offices. The Anthems:

² Or when the body is offensive, it has been recommended that the priest should first go to the grave, and after the burial finish the service in the church. See the rubric before the Psalms (1549). It appears that from 1552 to 1661

the lesson was read at the grave; and that it was then appointed to be read in the church, together with the psalm, owing to the objection of the Presbyterians to standing in the open air. See above, p. 125; Cardwell, Conferences, p. 332.

The anthems, appointed to be said by the priest, or sung by the priest and clerks, while the corpse is made ready to be laid into the earth, are also taken in great measure from the old offices. Archbishop Laurence (Bampt. Lect. p. 381) observes that this fixes the meaning of the expression in the anthem,— 'Suffer us not at our last hour for any pains of death to fall from thee;' these words therefore will not bear the Calvinistic interpreta-

The practice of casting the earth¹ upon the body is a retention of an old ceremony in its most simple form :

The verse that follows (Rev. xiv. 13) was read as an Epistle in the daily Mass for the Dead:—

In diebus illis: Audivi vocem de cælo: dicentem mihi. Scribe: beati mortui qui in Domino moriuntur. Amodo jam dicit Spiritus: ut requiescant a laboribus suis. Opera enim illorum sequuntur illos³.

The lesser Litany with the Lord's Prayer was appointed in the old Office of Burial: The Prayers.

BURIAL OF
THE DEAD.The Prayer,
'Almighty God, with whom,' &c.*

The prayer and collect which conclude the service are compositions belonging to the revision of the Prayer-Book in 1552. Only the opening words of the prayer retain any trace of the old Office:—

Deus, apud quem spiritus mortuorum vivunt, et in quo electorum animæ, deposito carnis onere, plena felicitate lætantur¹...

'O Merciful
God,' &c.*

The collect was formed from the collect in the Communion Office at Burials², together with what had been the latter clause of the preceding prayer; which therefore continued to occupy its original place, closing the service with our Lord's 'most sweet and comfortable words.'

*Review of the Service.
The Anthems.*

In our Burial Service the ancient custom is retained of conducting the corpse to the grave with holy hymns³, fitted to cheer the heart of the mourner. The promises of our resurrection are pronounced, as the priest receives the corpse at the entrance of the church-yard, and leads it to its resting-place. In the three processional anthems we are reminded of the three necessary graces to be exercised at a funeral; namely, faith, patience, and thanksgiving: and these are placed in their proper order; for by faith we gain patience, and when patience hath her perfect work, it will produce thanksgiving.

The Psalms.

bant, cum quis eorum de sæculo fuisset evocatus.' Canon (1604) LXVII. 'when any is passing out of this life, a bell shall be tolled, and the minister shall not then slack to do his last duty. And after the party's death, there shall be rung no more but one short peal, and one other before the burial, and one other after the burial.'

all loud and unseemly complaints, and to turn them into prayers and devout meditations. Ps. xc. composed by Moses while the children of Israel were dying in the wilderness, shews us what thoughts befit a funeral; that we should consider our own lot, and apply the instance of mortality before us to the improvement of our own condition. The lesson is called St Paul's Gospel; it includes the fullest account of the resurrection that is to be found in Scripture, and hence is fitted to allay sorrow for the departed, and to prepare us freely to follow when God calls.

BURIAL OF

The Lesson.

The corpse was carried into the church with thanksgiving; it is carried thence to the grave in silence: the preparation then made for laying it solemnly in its 'bed of rest' must strike those who survive with serious apprehensions of their own mortality. The Church therefore employs this interval with a meditation on the shortness, and misery, and uncertainty of life, together with an acknowledgment of our dependence upon God our Saviour for support under the pains of temporal death, and deliverance from eternal death.

The Anthems
at the Grave.

The casting of earth upon the body was accounted an act of piety by the heathen¹. And although it is not done by the priest himself, as in the Greek Church, and in our own previous to 1552, yet the ceremony is explained by the words which accompany the action, to denote that the body of our brother is committed to the earth, to be mingled with the dust, and so to wait in certain hope of the resurrection². And the comfort of jecto ter pulvere.'

² The declaration, that 'it hath pleased God to take unto Himself the soul,' was objected to by the Presbyterians in 1661, on the ground that it 'cannot in truth be said of persons living and dying in open and notorious sins' (Cardwell, Confer. p. 333). But hope of future blessedness is strengthened by the anthem (Rev. xiv. 13) from the apostolical revelation, which assures us that the dead in Christ are blessed, for they rest from their labours.

THE DEAD.

The Prayers.

The prayers which conclude the service are mainly compositions of our reformers, and differ from those in the mediæval offices most widely in having respect only to the living, instead of the dead¹, whose doom is already certain. The former seems to respect the whole company, being a thanksgiving for the deliverance of a Christian from the miseries of this sinful world, and a prayer that the number of the elect of God may shortly be accomplished. The latter is peculiarly designed for the comfort of the relations and friends of the deceased, collecting it from chosen sentences of Scripture, expressing charitable hope² for our brother, and turning our thoughts from it is founded upon the Scriptural expression, concerning the death of every man, that 'dust returns to the earth as it was, and the spirit returns to God who gave it' (Eccles. xii. 7); not necessarily to eternal life, but to His righteous judgment. Also the certain hope is of the resurrection, and of the change of our vile body; referring not only to the resurrection of true Christians to eternal life, but to the general resurrection of all mankind: comp. the corresponding form at the Burial of their Dead at Sea; 'We therefore commit his body to the deep, to be turned into corruption, looking for the resurrection of the body...

The form is much altered in the American Prayer-Book:—'Forasmuch as it hath pleased Almighty God, in his wise providence, to take out of this world the soul of our deceased brother, we therefore commit his body to the ground; earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust; looking for the general Resurrection in the last day, and the life of the world to come, through our Lord Jesus Christ; at whose second coming in glorious majesty to judge the world, the earth and the sea shall give up their dead; and the corruptible bodies of those who sleep in him shall be changed, and made like unto his own glorious body; according to the mighty working whereby he is able to subdue all things unto himself.'

² These expressions of thankfulness and hope were objected to by the Presbyterians in 1661 (above, p. 125), but the bishops simply replied, that 'it is better to be charitable, and hope the best, than rashly to condemn.' Cardwell, Conf. pp. 333, 362. 'We are often unnecessary grief to the more useful exercises of repentance, in order to our joyful meeting in the kingdom of God¹.

CHURCH-
WOMEN.

SECT. VI. *The Thanksgiving of Women after Child-birth; commonly called, The Churching of Women*².

This service of Thanksgiving is of very ancient use in the Christian Church, and is derived from the Jewish rite of Purification³, whence it was called The Order of the Purification of Women (1549); but this title was altered in 1552, in order to prevent any misconstruction that might be put upon the word. Our service is mainly derived from the mediæval office:—

Primo sacerdos et ministri ejus dicant psalmos sequentes: ps. Levavi oculos meos. ps. Beati omnes. Gloria Patri. Sequatur:

said to hope that which we do only wish or desire, but have not particular grounds to believe; only we are not sure of the contrary, or that the thing is impossible.' Bennet, Paraphr. p. 236. These clauses are altered in the American Prayer-Book:—'We give thee hearty thanks for the good examples of all those thy servants, who, having finished their course in faith, do now rest from their labours:' and the words, 'as our hope is this our brother doth,' are omitted.

¹ 'Take away this (service of psalms, and prayers, and thanksgivings) which was ordained to shew at burials the peculiar hope of the Church of God concerning the dead, and in the manner of those dumb funerals what one thing is there whereby the world may perceive that we are Christian men?' Hooker, Ecl. Pol. v. 75, § 4.

² The Occasional Offices being arranged in a natural order, it may seem strange that this Thanksgiving should be placed after the Burial Service, which forms the natural close of the series. The reason of this is apparent from the custom of an earlier period, and which is still recognized in the rubric, with regard to Baptism. As in the Roman ritual, that sacrament was administered to infants within a few days of their birth; and the direction was continued in 1549, that the chrismos should be brought to church at the purification of the mother of every child. This service, then, followed after that of Baptism; but it was not placed in that part of the Prayer-Book, in order that the series of offices concerning the child should be uninterrupted.

vice.*

The address was prefixed when the office was translated into English, according to the custom of our reformers, of adding a few words to shew the meaning of the services to those who were to join in them. The Psalms were appointed in 1661¹. Ps. cxvi. composed by David upon his recovery from some dangerous sickness, is applicable to any deliverance from peril: this therefore concerns the woman, as Ps. cxxvii. has more reference to the birth of the child, and is suited to excite the parents to thankfulness. The service of praise is followed by a simple form of prayer,—the lesser Litany, with the Lord's Prayer², and versicles culled from the Psalms, after the ancient model, summed up in a short collect of prayer and thanksgiving³.

The Rubrics.

The rubric does not allow any private use of this service: it must be said in the church. But no direction is given to what part of the public service it is to be added. Probably it was intended to be said before the Communion Office⁴: custom has, however, sanctioned its insertion

¹ In the earlier Prayer-Books, Ps. cxxi. was retained from the old service.

³ Before 1661 the Collect was more simply translated from the old form,—‘O Almighty God, which hast delivered,’ &c.

⁴ It was said immediately before Mass, according to some Visita-before the General Thanksgiving at Morning or Evening Prayer¹.

THE COMMINATION.

SECT. VII. *A Commination, or Denouncing of God's anger and judgments against sinners, with certain Prayers to be used on the first day of Lent, and at other times, as the Ordinary shall appoint*².

This addition to the ordinary service on Ash-Wednesday is a memorial of the solemn public penitence, which formed so distinct a feature in the discipline of the early Church³. It is called a Commination, from the opening tion Articles of the Bishop of Norwich (1536): Nicholls, Addit. Notes, p. 66. The rubric of the earlier Prayer-Books implies that this custom was retained: in 1549, the woman was directed to kneel 'in some convenient place nigh unto the quire door;' and in 1552, when the Holy Table, prepared for Communion, might possibly not be in the chancel, the woman was directed to kneel 'in some convenient place nigh unto the place where the table standeth.' But, as it appears, the custom of communicating had passed away, the service was read in the reading-pew; and hence the rubric (1601) directs the woman to kneel 'in some convenient place, as hath been accustomed.'

¹ The American rubrics assume that this Thanksgiving will be commonly inserted in the Morning or Evening Prayer; and either the whole service may be used, or the Lord's Prayer may be omitted, or the concluding prayer only may be said, at the discretion of the minister. The Psalm, as in other parts of this Prayer-Book, is supplied by 'a Hymn,' or selected verses from the 116th Psalm: the Lesser Litany is omitted, also the Doxology at the end of the Lord's Prayer. The accustomed offerings are directed to be applied by the minister and churchwardens to the relief of distressed women.

² This title was added in 1661. In the first Prayer-Book it was simply, 'The first day of Lent, commonly called Ash-Wednesday;' and in 1552, 'A Commination against sinners, with certain prayers, to be used divers times in the year;' the alteration being made in accordance with a suggestion of Bucer, who wished this service to be used at least four times in a year (Censura, c. xxv.; Script. Angl. p. 491). No special days, however, were appointed; but in the reign of Elizabeth Archbishop Grindal inquired whether it was used at divers times; and 'for order sake,' named 'one of the three Sundays next before Easter, one of the two Sundays next before the feast of Pentecost, and one of the two Sundays next before the feast of the birth of our Lord, over and besides the accustomed reading thereof upon the first day of Lent.' Visit. Art. (1576) § 3; Cardwell, Doc. Ann. i. p. 398.

address, or exhortation to repentance, in the course of which the curses of God against sin are recited. With the exception of this address, which, like the similar forms in our other services, is a composition of our reformers, the special prayers are the same which were used on this occasion in the mediæval Church, and perhaps in very early times¹.

Then several collects were said; after which followed the ceremony of blessing and distributing ashes: the beginning of the prayer, 'O most mighty God,' &c. is taken from the Benedictio Cinerum, and the remainder formed from one of the preceding collects:—

THE COM-
MINATION.

Domine Deus noster, qui offensione nostra non vinceris, sed satisfactione placaris: respice, quæsumus, super famulos tuos, qui se tibi graviter peccasse confitentur: tuum est enim absolutionem criminum dare, et veniam præstare peccantibus; qui dixisti pœnitentiam te malle peccatorum, quam mortem: concede ergo, Domine, his famulis tuis, ut tibi pœnitentiæ excubias celebrent, et correctis actibus suis conferri sibi a te sempiterna gaudia gratulentur. Per Christum¹.

The general supplication, which is appointed to be said by the people after the minister, is also formed from portions of the ancient service:—

The Supplications,
'Turn thou us,' &c.

Convertimini ad me in toto corde vestro: in jejuniis et fletu et planctu: et scindite corda vestra, et non vestimenta vestra: et convertimini ad Dominum Deum vestrum: quia benignus et misericors est; patiens et multum misericors; et præstabilis super malitia²....

Et interim cantentur sequentes antiphonæ. Exaudi nos, Domine, quoniam magna est misericordia tua: secundum multitudinem miserationum tuarum respice nos Domine... Alia antiphona. Juxta vestibulum et altare plorabant sacerdotes et Levitæ ministri Domini, dicentes: Parce, Domine, parce populo tuo; et ne dissipet ora clamantium ad te, Domine³.

This service differs from the other forms of public worship appointed in our Prayer-Book, in being entirely supplicatory. Instead of singing the Psalms, or reading them in a standing posture, the 51st Psalm, the Psalm of confession, is said by the priest and people kneeling. Then instead of pronouncing an absolution, the minister says two prayers, which are petitions for absolution; upon which the people plead for their own pardon in a series of earnest supplications: and the service concludes with the blessing of the Jewish church turned into the form of a precatory benediction¹.

The first attempt at having special forms of prayer for use at sea was made by the rebel parliament, as a supplement to the Directory, when it was found that the proscribed Book of Common Prayer was used in all ships in which there was any observance of religion at all². At the restoration, therefore, some proper forms were added to the revised Prayer-Book. They are not a complete office; nor are they arranged in any particular order: but as additions to the Common Prayer³, or as particular supplications, or thanksgivings, for deliverance from the perils of the sea or from the enemy, they are well adapted to their several occasions⁴.

³ The following is the first of the ARTICLES OF WAR:—'Officers are to cause public worship, according to the Liturgy of the Church of England, to be solemnly performed in their ships, and take care that prayers and preaching by the chaplains be performed diligently, and that the Lord's day be observed.'

⁴ These forms are retained in the American Prayer-Book, with the necessary changes of expression, such as ships of war, for Her Majesty's Navy, &c. This Prayer-Book also contains A Form of Prayer for the Visitation of Prisoners, which was 'treated upon by the Archbishops and Bishops, and the rest of the Clergy of Ireland, and agreed upon by Her Majesty's Licence in their Synod, holden at Dublin, in the year 1711.' (Bp Mant's Book of Common Prayer, with Notes;) and A Form of Prayer and Thanksgiving to Almighty God, for the fruits of the earth, and all the other blessings of His Providence, to be used yearly on the first Thursday in November, or on such other day as shall be appointed by the civil authority; and also Forms of Morning and Evening Prayer to be used in Families.

SECT. IX. *The Form and Manner of making, ordaining, and consecrating of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, according to the order of the United Church of England and Ireland*¹.

THE ORDINAL.

From the earliest times of Christianity persons have been solemnly set apart for the ministry of the Church by imposition of hands and prayer². Presbyters and bishops may have been appointed to their office by election, or by the nomination of a Christian emperor³: but the fitness of the person was examined by ecclesiastical regulations⁴; and it was the bishop's office, or the metropolitan, if the party elect were himself a bishop, to ordain him according to certain rules and ceremonies⁵.

The only orders retained in the reformed Church of England are those which have claim to Apostolical antiquity⁶. The reformed Ordinal was prepared as a companion to the first English Prayer-Book in 1550⁷, and with a few changes was added to the revised Prayer-Book in 1552. The service was again revised by the Convocation in 1661⁸.

² Cf. Acts vi. 6; xiv. 23; 2 Tim. i. 6.

⁴ Ibid. ch. iii. and iv.

⁵ Ibid. ch. vi.

⁶ These are the three Ordines majores. The Ordines minores were subdeacons, ὑποδιάκονοι, ὑπηρέται, assistants to the deacon: acolyths, ἀκόλουθοι, an office peculiar to the Western Church, attendants of the bishop when officiating, and also assistants to the subdeacon: exorcists, ἐπορκισταί, or ἐξορκισταί, originally those who enjoyed the gift of the Spirit to pray over the ἐνεργούμενοι, or δαμονιζόμενοι, but at a later period, an office extending to the care of the catechumens: door-keepers, ostiarii, janitores, θυρωροί, πυλωροί: readers, lectores, ἀναγνώσταί, mentioned in Tertullian (de Præscript. c. 41): and singers, cantores, ψαλταί, to lead the ecclesiastical music, an office dating at latest from the middle of the fourth century. Guericke, § xiv. pp. 61 sqq. The seven orders of the Roman Church are the 'holy,' or greater, viz. the priest, deacon, and sub-deacon, and the lesser, viz. acolyte, exorcist, reader, and porter. See Cramp, Text-Book of Popery, p. 291, note.

ORDINAL.Canonical Seasons.

The canonical seasons for ordination are the Sundays following the ember weeks¹, although upon urgent occasion it may be administered upon some other Sunday or Holy-day. The canon also directs it to be done 'in the time of divine service,' that is, in the Communion Office, according to the universal custom of antiquity²; the particular time varying for the different orders: the ordination of deacons is before the Gospel; the ordination of priests is after the Gospel; and the consecration of bishops is before the Offertory.

At the reformation the ceremonial of ordination was much simplified, and the prayers were almost entirely new compositions: yet in the general arrangement of these services, and in the peculiarities which distinguish them from all others,—such as the introduction of the Litany into the Communion Office,—the 'form and manner' of conferring holy orders is the same that has been used for many centuries³. This will be seen in the following extracts, which contain all the passages where the mediæval furnished matter or hints towards the composition of the reformed Ordinal⁴.

Post evangelium... dicat archidiaconus: Accedant qui ordinandi sunt sacerdotes¹. Deinde episcopus dicat: Sacerdotem oportet offerre, benedicere, præesse, prædicare, conficere, et baptizare.

¹ The address, and the questions that follow it, are in some degree peculiar to our Ordinal. They may have been modelled upon the corresponding portion of the office of consecration of bishops, and introduced to preserve uniformity in the several offices (Palmer, Orig. Lit. ch. xii. § 7). There is a short form of examination in an Ordinal of about the 11th century:—'Episc. Est dignus? Resp. Dignus

est. Episc. Est justus? Resp. Justus est. Episc. Faciat illum Deus semper in suo servitio dignum et justum manere. Deinde interrogat episcopus presbyterum hæc verbis: Vis presbyterii gradum in nomine Domini accipere? R. Volo. Vis in eodem gradu quantum prævales et intelligis secundum canonum sanctiones jugiter manere? R. Volo. Vis episcopo tuo ad cujus parochiam ordinandus es obediens Benedicentis eos episcopo postea, et manum super capita eorum tenente, et nihil eis dicente, et una manu tangente, et omnes presbyteri qui praesentes sunt, manus suas super capita eorum levatas teneant.

Sequitur praefatio sacerdotum:

Oremus, dilectissimi, Deum Patrem omnipotentem, ut super hos famulos suos, quos ad presbyterii munus elegit, caelestia dona multiplicet, et quod ejus dignatione suscipiunt, ipsius consequantur auxilio...

Sequitur consecratio. Deus, sanctificationum omnium auctor, cujus vera consecratio, plenaque benedictio est, tu, Domine, super hos famulos tuos, quos presbyterii honore dedicamus, munus tuae benedictionis effunde: ut gravitate actuum et censura vivendi probent se esse seniores, his instituti disciplinis, quas Tito et Timotheo Paulus exposuit, ut in lege tua die ac nocte meditantes, quod legerint credant, quod crediderint doceant, quod docuerint imitentur; justitiam, constantiam, misericordiam, fortitudinem, caeterasque virtutes in se ostendant, exemplo probent, admonitione confirmet, ac purum et immaculatum ministerii sui donum custodiant: et per obsequium plebis tuae, panem et vinum in corpus et sanguinem Filii tui sancta et immaculata benedictione transforment, et inviolabili caritate, in virum perfectum, in mensuram aetatis plenitudinis Christi, in die justitiae et aeterni judicii, conscientia pura, fide plena, Spiritu Sancto pleni persolvant. Per eundem.

'Come, Holy Ghost,' &c.*

Veni, Creator Spiritus,
Mentes tuorum visita:
Imple superna gratia

et consentiens esse secundum justitiam et ministerium tuum. R. Volo. Voluntatem tuam bonam et rectam ad perfectionem sibi beneplacitam Deus perducere dignetur. Tunc eo inclinato, imponat manum super caput ejus, et omnes presbyteri qui adsunt manus suas juxta manum episcopi super caput illius teneant: et ille dei orationem super eum. Martene, Eccl. Rit. II. 146.

² This second imposition of hands, with the words, 'Accipite Spiritum Sanctum,' &c. appears not to be earlier than the 12th century: see Maskell, III. p. 220, note. The American Office retains our form of words, 'Receive the Holy Ghost for the office and work of a Priest,' &c.; but provides also another which may be used in its stead, 'Take thou authority to execute the Office of a Priest in the Church of God, now committed to thee by the imposition of our hands. And be thou a faithful dispenser,' &c.

by the Holy Ghost to undertake this ministry. Some of the necessary qualities may be known to others, and therefore testimonials are required¹, and examinations are held: other qualities are in the secret mind of the candidate.

The inward

The first and principal qualification is the inward call, the motion of the Holy Ghost,—‘the good testimony of our own heart, that we have taken this office neither for ambition, covetousness, nor any evil design, but out of a true fear of God, and a desire to edify the Church².’ The second principal qualification is the true outward calling, which refers to the regular way of admission to holy orders; and an open acknowledgment is required to be made of the validity of the orders which are about to be conferred. The Oath of the Queen's Sovereignty³ is taken by all ecclesiastical ministers, as the counterpart of the oath which is taken by the sovereign, to ‘preserve to the bishops and clergy, and to the churches committed to their charge, all such rights and privileges as by law shall appertain unto them.’ The only essentials of valid ordination are prayers or benedictions with the Apostolic imposition of hands⁴: and these are found in our Ordinal, united with a most simple and significant ceremony, viz.

Ceremonies.

² Calvin, Inst. iv. 3, § 11. See Beveridge, Serm. ix. ‘On the Preparatory duties for Holy Orders.’

³ The oath of submission to the Pope, which was imposed on metropolitans in the 11th century, and afterwards on all bishops (Palmer, Orig. Lit. ii. pp. 290 sq.) was prohibited by Henry VIII.; and in its place the oath of the King's Supremacy was taken by the clergy (1531) with the proviso, ‘quantum per Christi legem licet.’

See Hook, Church Dict. Art. SUPREMACY. The word sovereignty was preferred by Elizabeth (see above, pp. 25, 53), and thus explained:—‘under God to have the sovereignty and rule over all manner persons born within these her realms, dominions, and countries, of what estate, either ecclesiastical or temporal, soever they be, so as no other foreign power shall or ought to have any superiority over them.’ Injunctions (1559), Cardwell, *Doc. the delivery of the New Testament to a deacon, and the Bible¹ to a priest, and to a bishop. The ancient distinction between the orders of the clergy is also maintained, in the old practice of admitting to the diaconate by the hands of the bishop alone; while in the ordination of a priest, all the priests present together with the bishop lay their hands upon his head²; and in the consecration of a bishop, the bishops present join with the archbishop in the same solemn rite³.

¹ The Book of the Gospels was delivered to a deacon, and to a bishop, according to the rubric of the Sarum Pontifical. This rite in the ordination of a deacon was for many ages peculiar to the English Church, and was introduced into France, and thence into Italy, about the ninth or tenth century: Maskell, Mon. Rit. III. p. 199. In the consecration of a bishop, it appears to have been adopted in this country about the 12th or 13th century, soon after the adoption of the mitre: ibid. p. 275.

'Presbyter cum ordinatur, episcopo eum benedicente, et manum super caput ejus tenente, etiam omnes presbyteri qui presentes sunt manus suas juxta manum episcopi super caput ejus teneant.' Can. IV. 'Diaconus cum ordinatur, solus episcopus, qui eum benedicit, manum super caput illius ponat: quia non ad sacerdotium, sed ad ministerium consecratur.' Mansi, III. 951. This decree seems to have prevailed in the Latin Church: Bingham, Antiq. II. 19, § 10.

APPENDIX I.

The Services for the State Holydays.

The Queen's Accession.

Offices for the three days sanctioned by Convocation,

THESE four special Services¹ do not form part of the Book of Common Prayer, but are 'annexed to' it by the authority of a proclamation customarily issued at the commencement of each reign. Thus the authority for using them instead of the service enjoined by the Act of Uniformity, is the same as that which appoints any special service on the occasion of a fast, or thanksgiving day. This is, indeed, the only authority for the special service on the anniversary of the sovereign's accession, or for observing the day itself². The observance of the three days (Nov. 5, Jan. 30, May 29) rests upon acts of parliament: the 5th of November is kept in memory of the Gunpowder-Treason, or Papist's Conspiracy³; the 29th of May, in memory of the birth and return of the king, Charles II.⁴; and the 30th of January, as a fasting day, in memory of the murder of king Charles I.⁵: and the Convocation provided a service for each of these occasions. While the Convocation (1661) was engaged upon the revision of the Prayer-Book, the Service for the 5th of November (1605) was revised, and the Offices for the 29th

² There is no Act of Parliament enjoining the observance of this day; but it has been observed with special prayers in every reign since the Reformation. The Service (1576, 1578) is printed in Elizabethan Liturgical Services (Park. Soc.) pp. 548 sqq. Canon II. (1640) enjoined the observance of the day, and recognized 'the particular form of prayer appointed by authority for that day and purpose,' (Cardwell, Synodalia, I. p. 392; Percival, p. 25); but a later statute (1661, 13 Car. II. c. 12) forbade the enforcement of these canons (Percival, p. 8). A new form was compiled by command of James II. which, with some considerable alterations made in the time of Queen Anne, has been issued at the beginning of each succeeding reign. of May and the 30th of January¹ were sanctioned. But these Offices were not sent with the Prayer-Book to the parliament. Hence we have special services for these days which have what may be considered a sufficient authority, although not the force of law;—viz. the sanction of convocation and the crown. And if the history of these Offices ended here, there would perhaps be little dispute about their use, whatever might be said about the wisdom of retaining a permanent commemoration of such events². But James II. ordered the 29th of May to be observed in a more general memory of the Restoration of the Royal Family, and accordingly altered the service which had been provided by Convocation for that day³. And William III. ordered the 5th of November to be observed also in memory of his landing in England, and altered that service accordingly⁴. Hence these Offices, in the shape in which they are now annexed to our Prayer-Book⁵, have only the authority of the crown, exercised too in times when such dispensing power was

Royal authority.

¹ Two offices for the 30th of January were published in 1661. One of these contained a petition in allusion to the martyrs: 'that we may be made worthy to receive benefit by their prayers, which they, in communion with the Church Catholic, offer up unto thee for that part of it here militant.' This was laid aside, and another form published, which was again altered, as well as that for the 29th of May, by the Convocation in 1662. Lathbury, Hist. of Convoc. pp. 305 sq. The office for the 30th of January is not used on a Sunday, but is transferred together with the fast to the following day.

APPENDIX I. certain to be disputed, when James II. was introducing Popery, and William III. was favouring the Presbyterians.

*Construction

These Services are all constructed upon one model. They commence with proper sentences of Scripture: a canticle is appointed instead of Venite, compiled of single verses from the Psalms¹; Proper Psalms, and Lessons: additional suffrages after the Creed: long proper Collects instead of the Collect for the day: a long Prayer to be inserted at the end of the Litany; and a proper Collect, Epistle, and Gospel², in the Communion Office.

² The preceding observation will apply to the Gospel for the 30th of January (Matt. xxi. 33-41), which contains a prophetic description of the treatment which our blessed Lord should experience at the hands of the Jews. The Gospel for the 5th of November was originally Matt. xxvii. 1-10, containing the history of Judas betraying his Master: this 'for some good reasons' was changed by William III. for a passage (Luke ix. 51-57) intended to correct a mistaken zeal for religion, 'shewing us that our faith, be it ever so true, cannot warrant us to persecute or destroy those of different persuasions.' Wheatly.

APPENDIX II.

Alterations in the Book of Common Prayer, prepared by the Royal Commissioners for the Revision of the Liturgy in 1689.

THIS document, which from the above date to the present year has been supposed to be lost¹, is now at length accessible²; and an abstract of it, as the last effort to make the Prayer-Book meet the requirements of dissenters, will form the natural conclusion of this endeavour to interpret its formularies by reference to its original sources, and subsequent history.

APPENDIX
II.

The direction to say the Daily Prayer is thus altered:—The Preface.
'And all priests and deacons that have cure of souls shall exhort the people of their congregations to come frequently to prayers on week-days, especially in the great towns, and more particularly on Wednesdays and Fridays, at least for the reading of the Litany: and where a congregation can be brought together, the ministers shall give their attendance for saying of Morning and Evening Prayer.'

The word Priest is altered to 'Minister,' and Sunday to 'Lord's day.'

The Apocryphal Lessons in the calendar of Saints' days are altered to chapters chiefly from Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. The names of Saints, which have not a proper service, the Table of Vigils, &c. are struck out.

The Calendar.

'Whereas the surplice is appointed to be used by all ministers in performing divine offices, it is hereby declared, that it is continued only as being an ancient and decent habit. But yet if any minister shall come and declare to his bishop that he cannot satisfy his conscience in the use of the surplice in divine service, in that case the bishop shall dispense with his not using

MORNING PRAYER.

An additional versicle and response is inserted:—‘Enlighten our minds, O Lord. That we may understand the great things of thy law.’

The Canticles.

The 148th Psalm is substituted for Benedicite. The 100th Psalm is placed before Benedictus.

In the versicles after the Creed, the response, Because there is none other that fighteth for us, &c. is altered:—‘That we may serve thee without fear all the days of our lives.’

In the Prayer for the Queen, the words most gracious are omitted; and after heavenly gifts is added,—‘direct all their counsels to thy honour and glory: Bless all their righteous undertakings.’

Evening Prayer.

It appears to be intended to substitute ‘Ps. 8’ for Magnificat, and ‘Ps. 134’ for Nunc dimittis. The Doxology is also added to the Lord’s Prayer throughout the book¹.

The Athanasian Creed.

A note is added to the rubric before the Athanasian Creed:—‘The articles of which ought to be received and believed, as being agreeable to the Holy Scriptures. And the condemning clauses are to be understood as relating only to those who obstinately deny the substance of the Christian faith.’

The Litany.

Additional suffrages inserted in the Litany:—‘From all infidelity and error, from all impiety and profaneness, from all superstition and idolatry.’ ‘From drunkenness and gluttony, from sloth and misspending of our time, from fornication, adultery, and all uncleanness.’ ‘From lying and slandering, from vain swearing, cursing and perjury, from covetousness, oppression and all injustice².’ Sudden death is altered:—‘Dying suddenly and unprepared.’ The coming of the Holy Ghost is altered:—‘By thy sending of the Holy Ghost, and by thy continual intercession at the right hand of God.’ ‘That it may please Thee to take their majesties’ forces by sea and land into thy most gracious protection, and to make them victorious over all our enemies.’ ‘That it may please Thee to incline and enable us to pray alway with fervent affection, in everything to give thanks, to depend upon Thee, and trust in Thee, to delight ourselves in Thee, and cheerfully to resign ourselves to thy holy will and pleasure.' 'That it may please Thee to endue us with the graces of humility and meekness, of contentedness and patience, of true justice, of temperance and purity, of peaceableness and charity.' 'That it may please Thee to shew thy pity upon all prisoners and captives, upon all that are persecuted for truth and righteousness' sake, upon all that are in affliction.'

APPENDIX
II.

It is proposed to omit the Lord's Prayer, when there is a Communion. The Gloria Patri is struck out.

After the Prayer, 'We humbly beseech Thee, &c.' the following addition is made: 'Then the Minister continuing in his place shall use the Collect, Almighty God, to whom all hearts, &c. Then shall the Minister rehearse distinctly the Ten Commandments. . . Or sometimes the Eight Beatitudes, especially on Communion days. See the Communion Service. Then shall follow the Collect for the day. Then the Epistle and Gospel. Then (if there be no Communion) the Nicene Creed. Then the General Thanksgiving, &c. The Prayer commonly called S. Chrysostom's. 2 Cor. xiii. 14. The grace, &c. Then the Minister shall declare unto the people what Holydays or Fasting days. . . Whether the Minister may not here be directed to use in the pulpit before Sermon the Prayer for the whole state of Christ's Church, &c. accommodated to the purpose; or some such other prayer? Note, that when there is no Communion at all this shall be read in the same place with the rest of the Service.'

The Conclusion of the Litany.

Additional Prayers:—'A Preparatory Prayer for the receiving of the Communion, to be read on the Lord's day, or some weekday or days before.' 'A Prayer to be said in any time of calamity. Q. of Prayers for the Army and Navy? Rubr. Whereas the Apostles did use prayer and fasting before they ordained, and that it has been the practice of the Church to enjoin fasts in the four weeks of the year commonly called Ember-weeks before the Lord's days appointed for Ordination, to implore the blessings of God upon them that are to ordain, and upon those that are to be ordained: it is therefore earnestly recommended to all persons to spend some part of those days in prayer to God for his blessing on the Church, and on all that are to be sent out to officiate in it. And it is most solemnly charged on all that are concerned in Ordinations, chiefly on the persons that are to be ordained, to spend those days in fervent prayer, and fasting, for the due preparing of themselves to be initiated into Holy Orders. This rubric to be read immediately after the Apostles' Creed on the Lord's day next before any of the Ember-weeks.'

The Collects.

The revision of the Collects is most extensive¹, scarcely one remaining without some change, and an entirely new collect being proposed in by far the greater number of cases. The general feature in these alterations is the lengthening of the collect by the introduction of phrases from the Epistle and Gospel, such as abound in the devotional writings of the Non-conformists: e. g. the following is the first Collect for Good Friday:—'Almighty God, the Father of mercies, we beseech thee graciously to hear the prayers of thy Church, for which our Lord Jesus Christ was content to be betrayed and given up into the hands of wicked men, and to suffer death upon the cross: and according to that new covenant which he sealed there with his precious blood, put thy laws into all our hearts, and write them in our minds; and then remember our sins and iniquities no more; for the sake of him who, when he had offered one sacrifice for sin, for ever sat down on thy right hand, and now liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, ever one God, world without end.' The following addition is made to the Collect for the second Sunday after Trinity:—'and give us grace to fear and love thee above all things; and to have bowels of compassion towards all our brethren, that so we may have confidence towards thee, and whatsoever we ask we may receive of thee, through Jesus our Lord.' And the following is substituted for the ancient Collect for the Sunday next before Advent:—'O Eternal God, who art faithful and true, and according to thy gracious promises hast raised up a glorious deliverer to us, who is the Lord our Righteousness; we beseech thee to stir up the wills of thy faithful people, that bringing forth plentifully the fruit of good works, they may be a people prepared for the Lord: and we pray thee, hasten his kingdom when he shall reign and prosper, and execute judgment and justice in all the earth. Grant this for thy infinite mercies' sake in Jesus Christ, to whom with thee, O Father, and the Holy Ghost, be eternal praise.'

Rubr. 'See the Commination. A Sermon or Homily then to be used. Whereas the observation of the fast of Lent is an ancient and useful custom, designed for the bringing of all Christians to a serious examination of their lives past; to repent of their sins, and to fit themselves for the worthy receiving of the Communion at Easter; It is most earnestly recommended to all persons, but more particularly to all churchmen, to observe that time religiously, not placing fasting or devotion in any distinction of meats, but spending larger portions of their time in prayer, meditation, and true abstinence, and in works of charity, forbearing feasting and entertainments.

This is to be read the Lord's day before Ash-Wednesday.'

The proper Anthems for Easter-day are arranged as Versicles and Responses:—Minister. Christ our passover is sacrificed for us: therefore, &c. People. Not with the old leaven, &c. Minister. Christ being raised from the dead, &c. People. For in that he died, &c. Minister. Likewise reckon ye also, &c. People. But alive unto God, &c. Minister. Christ is risen from the dead, &c. People. For since by man came death, &c. Minister. For as in Adam all die, &c. People. Who is he that condemneth? It is Christ that died. Minister. Yea, rather that is risen again. People. Who is even at the right hand of God; who also maketh intercession for us.'

The fifth Sunday after Easter is called 'Rogation Sunday,' and has a new Collect:—'Almighty God, who hast blessed the earth that it should be fruitful and bring forth every thing that is necessary for the life of man, and hast commanded us to work with quietness and eat our own bread; bless us in all our labours, and grant us such seasonable weather that we may gather in the fruits of the earth, and ever rejoice in thy goodness, to the praise of thy holy name, through Jesus Christ our

APPENDIX II. Lord.' 'Deut. xxviii. 1—9' is appointed 'For the Epistle,' and 'S. Matt. vi. 25 to the end' is 'The Gospel.'

THE HOLY COMMUNION.

Rubr. 'When there is no Communion, there is not to be any Communion-service. The Minister that consecrates ought always to be an Archbishop, Bishop, or Presbyter.

The Beatitudes.

The eight Beatitudes may be read after, or instead of the Ten Commandments, upon the great Festivals, the people kneeling, and responding after each¹, 'Lord, have mercy upon us, and make us partakers of this blessing,' and after the last, 'Lord, have mercy upon us, and endue us with all these graces, and make us partakers of the blessedness promised to them, we humbly beseech thee.'

The Creed.

Note to the clause in the Nicene Creed,—'Who proceedeth from the Father and the Son;'² 'It is humbly submitted to the Convocation whether a note ought not here to be added with relation to the Greek Church, in order to our maintaining Catholic communion.'

The Sentences.

The apocryphal sentences are omitted; and a rubric prefixed to four sentences², directing them 'to be read only in those churches where the custom is that the minister has any share of the offerings.'

It is proposed to make a shorter form of warning, 'seeing in many parishes the returns of monthly communions are commonly known.'

First Exhortation.

Instead of the reference to Judas,—'lest by profaning that holy Sacrament you draw down the heavy displeasure of God upon you;'² and instead of the mention of private absolution,—'let him come to me, or to some other minister of God's word, and open his grief, that he may receive such spiritual advice and comfort as may tend to the quieting of his conscience, and his better preparation for the holy Communion.'

Proper Preface.

A new Preface is added for Good Friday:—'Who hast not spared thine own Son, but delivered him up for us all, that by

¹ The Beatitudes are also given on another paper inserted in the book, with a distinct response or prayer after each: e.g. 'Our Lord Christ spake these words, and said, Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Lord, have mercy upon us, and endue us with an humble and contented spirit,' &c.

Form for a second consecration:—‘O merciful Father, hear the prayers of thy Church, that have now been made unto thee in the name of thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ, who the same night that he was betrayed, took bread,—or the cup, &c.’

Second Consecration.

The clause,—‘For thou only art holy; thou only art the Lord,’—is altered:—‘For thou only art the holy One of God; thou only art the eternal Son of God.’

Gloria in
excelsis.

Additional Collects to be said ‘when there is no Communion:’—our present Collects for the 5th, 12th, 16th, 17th, 21st, 22nd, and 23rd Sundays after Trinity.

Rubric at the end of the Office:—‘And in every great town or parish there shall be a Communion once a month: and in every parish at least four times in the year, that is, on Christmas-day, Easter-day, Whit-Sunday, and some Lord’s day soon after harvest, at the minister’s discretion. And all ministers shall exhort their people to communicate frequently.’

Rubrics.

Addition to the declaration about kneeling:—‘But to take away all pretence of scruple, if any, not being satisfied herewith, shall some day in the week before they intend to receive the holy Communion, come to the minister of their parish, and declare that they are verily persuaded in conscience that they cannot receive it kneeling without sin; then the minister shall endeavour to give them satisfaction in this matter, after which, if they still press it, then the minister shall give them the sacramental bread and wine in some convenient place or pew without obliging them to kneel.’

‘None are to be sureties but such as either have received the Communion, or are ready to do it.’

PUBLIC

Rubrics.

First Prayer. 'Almighty and . . . and after the baptism of thy well-beloved Son Jesus Christ in the river Jordan, didst appoint water to be used in this sacrament for the mystical washing . . . ark of Christ's Church; and persevering in faith, hope, and charity, may so pass through this present evil world, that finally he may come to everlasting life, through . . .'

Second Prayer.

The Sureties. Inserted before the address to the sponsors:—'Then shall the Minister, speaking to the congregation, ask, Who are the sureties for this child? Then may the parent or parents present their sureties, if there be any other besides themselves.'

Manner of baptizing.

'He shall pour or sprinkle water upon it; or (if they shall certify him that the child may well endure it) he shall dip it in the water discreetly and warily, saying, &c.

Sign of the Cross.

'Whereas the sign of the Cross is by this Office appointed to be used in Baptism according to the ancient and laudable custom of the Church, it is not thereby intended to add any new rite to the Sacrament as a part of it, or as necessary to it; or that the using that sign is of any virtue or efficacy of itself; but only to remember all Christians of the death and cross of Christ, which is their hope and their glory; and to put them in mind of their obligation to bear the cross in such manner as God shall think fit to lay it upon them, and to become conformable to Christ in his sufferings.

'If any minister at his institution shall declare to his bishop, that he cannot satisfy his conscience in baptizing any with the sign of the cross; then the bishop shall dispense with him in that particular, and shall name a curate who shall baptize the children of

Dost thou, in the name of this child, believe the articles of the Christian faith? Ans. All these I steadfastly believe. Min. Dost thou renounce the world, the flesh, and the devil? Ans. I renounce them all. Min. Wilt thou keep the commandments of Christ, and persevere in them? Ans. I will, God being my helper.'

PRIVATE

THE CATE-CHISM.

'Q. What do you learn further in this Creed?

Further Explication of the Creed.

A. I learn that Christ hath had, still hath, and ever will have, a Church somewhere on earth.

Q. What are you there taught concerning this Church?

A. I am taught that it is catholic and universal, as it receives into it all nations upon the profession of the Christian faith in baptism.

Q. What privileges belong to Christians by their being received into this Catholic Church?

A. First, the communion of saints, or fellowship of all true Christians in faith, hope, and charity. Secondly, the forgiveness of sins obtained by the sacrifice of Christ's death, and given to us, upon faith in him, and repentance from dead works. Thirdly, the rising again of our bodies at the last day to a state of glory. Fourthly, everlasting life with our Saviour in the kingdom of heaven.'

At the end of the Answer, 'My duty towards God, &c.' the words are added,—'especially on Lord's days¹;' and then follows a division of the Answer into four heads, in the form of a broken Catechism upon the first four Commandments; the last being,—'Q. What learn you by the fourth commandment?

II.

A. To serve him truly all the days of my life, especially on Lord's days.' A similar broken Catechism is inserted after the answer, 'My duty towards my neighbour, &c.' and also after the explication of the Lord's Prayer. In the latter part upon the Sacraments there are many verbal alterations with a view to greater plainness.

CONFIRMATION.

A long exhortation is introduced 'to be read the Lord's day before a Confirmation;' and the Preface to the office is turned into an address at the time of Confirmation:—'You have been lately informed for what end you ought to come hither. And I hope you come prepared according to the exhortation then made to you; that is, with a serious desire and resolution openly to ratify and confirm before the Church, with your own mouth and consent, what your sureties promised in your names when you were baptized; and also to promise that, by the grace of God, you will evermore endeavour yourselves faithfully to observe such things, as you by your own confession have assented unto.'

The Prayer for the sevenfold gifts of the Spirit is altered:—'Renew and strengthen them, we beseech thee, O Lord, more and more, by the Holy Ghost the Comforter, and daily increase thy graces in them. Fill them with the knowledge of thy will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding; and enable them to walk worthy of their holy calling with all lowliness and meekness; that they may be blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke, shining as lights in the world, to the praise and glory of thy Name, through Jesus Christ our Lord.' A third prayer in the same strain is added before the Blessing; and also an 'Exhortation to the confirmed, who are to be required to stay and hear it.' The concluding rubric directs that 'none shall be admitted to Confirmation, but such as shall be judged fit to receive the Communion upon the next occasion.'

MATRIMONY.

In the Form of Solemnization of Matrimony, the direction to publish the banns immediately before the Sentences for the Offertory is struck out. The ring is said to be 'used only as a civil ceremony and pledge,' and is delivered with these words:—'With this ring I thee wed, with my worldly goods I thee endow: and by this our marriage we become one according to God's holy institution. And this I declare in the presence of Almighty God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost. Amen.' The service following the marriage-ceremony is directed to be said 'either in the body of the church, or at the Communion-table.' After the declaration of the duties of husbands and wives, the collect, 'O Almighty Lord and everlasting God, &c.'¹ is added, with the blessing, 'The peace of God, &c.' The concluding rubric directs, — 'If the new married persons signify beforehand to the Minister that they desire the holy Sacrament, there shall be a Communion. If they do not, they shall be exhorted to receive it as soon as they have an opportunity.'

Communion.

In the Order for the Visitation of the Sick, a direct form of interrogation is provided, concerning the sick person's repentance:— 'Do you truly and sincerely repent of all your sins, and beg of God forgiveness of them through Jesus Christ? Do you, in this your sickness, submit yourself to the holy will of God, to be disposed for life or death, as to him shall seem good? Do you solemnly promise and vow, that if it shall please God to raise you up again, you will spend the rest of your life in his fear, and live according to your holy profession? Do you forgive all the world, even your greatest enemies...? Are you truly sorry for all the wrongs you may have done...? Are you willing to make reparation...? Have you made your will...? Is your conscience troubled with any weighty matter, in which you desire my advice and assistance?' After this follows the prayer, 'O most merciful God, &c.' and then the Absolution, which is retained with the addition of certain words:— '*... and upon thy true faith and repentance by his authority committed unto me, I pronounce thee absolved*² from...' 'Q. about a rubric or canon for the absolution of the excommunicate in extremis.' The Psalm is changed for a Hymn, composed of verses from the Psalms. At the end of the Office it was intended to add other occasional prayers, and among them one 'to be said with the family if the Minister be present when the person is departed, or be desired to come soon after,' but this form was not composed.

II.Communion
of the Sick.

Note:—‘The whole Office for the Sick may be used if the persons concerned can bear it, and desire it: otherwise the Minister is to proceed as is here appointed.’ and to the rubric directing the order of administration, last of all the sick person, the words are added, ‘unless the Minister perceive him ready to expire.’

BURIAL OF
THE DEAD.

The rubric directs that the Office is not to be used for the unbaptized, or excommunicate, or any that ‘have been found to lay violent hands upon themselves; unless such of them as were capable had received absolution according to the former Office in the Visitation of the Sick.’ ‘1 Thess. iv. 13 to the end,’ is appointed to be read as a shorter lesson in colder or later seasons. In the anthems at the grave, the words, ‘through any temptations’ are substituted for,—‘for any pains of death:’ and in the form of committing the body to the ground, the words are,—‘...it hath pleased Almighty God to take out of this world the soul of our brother (or sister) here departed...dust to dust; in a firm belief of the resurrection of the dead at the last day, in which they who die in the Lord shall rise again to eternal life through...’ The prayer, ‘Almighty God, with whom do live,’ &c. is entirely altered:—‘...that it hath pleased thee to instruct us in this heavenly knowledge, beseeching thee so to affect our hearts therewith, that seeing we believe such a happy estate hereafter, we may live here in all holy conversation and godliness, looking for and hasting unto the coming of the day of God; that being then found of thee in peace, without spot and blameless, we may have our perfect consummation, &c.’ The words in the Collect, ‘as our hope is this our brother doth,’ are omitted.

THANKSGIVING OF WOMEN.

A ‘Psalm or Hymn,’ composed of verses from the Psalms, is substituted for Ps. cxvi; and a rubric at the end of the office directs ‘the Blessing to be used, if this Office be used before or after Service.’

THE COMMUNION.

‘The proper Office for Ash-Wednesday.’

A new preface is proposed, upon the subject of fasting, and the superstitious application of it to distinction of meats instead of humiliation before God; and then, instead of the curses from Deut. xviii. the Beatitudes are read, as in the Communion Office, with the response after each, 'Lord, have mercy,' &c.; and are followed by 'the judgment of God denounced against sinners,' viz. 1 Cor. vi. 9, 10; Gal. v. 19—21; and Ephes. v. 5, 6; with a response, 'O Lord, preserve us from these sins, and from thy wrath which they justly deserve.' The address and the remainder of the service is retained with only a few verbal alterations.

APPENDIX
II.

Additional rubrics:—'The persons who desire to be ordained, shall send their Testimonials to the Bishop from the place of their present residence at least a month before; and come themselves to be examined at least a week before. After the receipt of the Testimonials, the Bishop shall give order that public notice be given of their desiring Holy Orders, in the Church, Chapel, or College where they reside, the Lord's day before the Ordination.'

THE ORDINAL.

Note:—'Whereas we have been often imposed upon by men pretending to Orders in the Church of Rome, it is therefore humbly proposed, whether, since we can have no certainty concerning the instruments of Orders which they shew, they may be admitted to serve as Deacons or Presbyters of this Church without being ordained according to the following Offices.'

Romish
Orders.

Notes inserted in the Ordination of Priests, i. e. Presbyters:—'Seeing the reformed Churches abroad are in that imperfect state that they cannot receive Ordination from Bishops; it is humbly proposed, whether they may not be received by an Imposition of Hands in these or such like words: Take thou authority to preach the Word of God, and to minister the holy Sacraments in this Church, as thou shalt be lawfully appointed thereunto.'

Orders of Reformed
Churches.

'Whereas it has been the constant practice of the ancient Church to allow no Ordination of Priests, i. e. Presbyters, or Deacons, without a Bishop, and that it has been likewise the constant practice of this Church ever since the Reformation, to allow none that were not ordained by Bishops where they could be had; yet in regard that several in this kingdom have of late years been ordained only by Presbyters, the Church being desirous to do all that can be done for peace, and in order to the healing of our dissensions, has thought fit to receive such as have been ordained by Presbyters only, to be ordained according to this Office with the addition of these words,—"If they APPENDIX II. shall not have been already ordained..." By which as she retains her opinion and practice, which make a Bishop necessary to the giving of Orders when he can be had; so she does likewise leave all such persons as have been ordained by Presbyters only, the freedom of their own thoughts concerning their former Ordinations. It being withal expressly provided that this shall never be a precedent for the time to come, and that it shall only be granted to such as have been ordained before the — day of — .

Archbp
Bramhall's
Form of Letters of Orders.

The Letters of Orders are to be given them in the form used by Archbishop Bramhall¹:—'Non annihilantes priores ordines (si quos habuit), nec validitatem nec invaliditatem eorundem determinantes, multo minus omnes ordines sacros Ecclesiarum Forinsecarum condemnantes, quos proprio judici relinquimus; sed solummodo suppletes, quicquid prius defuit per canones Ecclesie Anglicane requisitum, et providentes paci Ecclesie ut schismatis tollatur occasio, et conscientiis fidelium satisfiat, nec ullo modo dubitent de ejus ordinatione, aut actus suos presbyteriales tanquam invalidos aversentur....'

Form of Ordination.

New hymns were to be composed in place of Veni Creator. 'Whereas it was the constant practice of the Church to ordain by prayer, which practice continued for many ages, and that the pronouncing these words, "Receive the Holy Ghost," in the imperative mood, was brought into the Office of Ordination in the darkest times of popery; it is humbly submitted to the Convocation, whether it be not more suitable unto the general rule the Church of England has gone upon of conforming herself to the primitive Church, to put these words in some such form as this:

'Pour down, O Father of Lights, the Holy Ghost on this thy servant, for the office and work of a Priest in the Church of God, now committed unto him by the imposition of our hands, that whose sins he does forgive, they may be forgiven, and whose sins he doth retain they may be retained, and that he may be a faithful dispenser of God's holy word and sacraments, to the edification of his Church, and the glory of his holy name, through Jesus Christ, to whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost be all honour and glory world without end. Amen.'

The form of words used by the bishop in the delivery of the Bible was to be prefaced by the phrase:—‘ in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Take thou authority, &c.’

The preceding with other alterations, amounting to about 600 articles, were prepared by the Commissioners¹ in an interleaved copy of a black letter edition of the Book of Common Prayer (1683—86). This Book remained in the hands of Archbishop Tenison, and afterwards passed with his papers into the possession of Dr E. Gibson, bishop of London, by whom it was placed in the Lambeth Library².

¹ Above, p. 141. The Commission was dated the 17th of September, 1 William and Mary, 1689. A Diary of the proceedings of the Commissioners, from Oct. 3 to Nov. 18, was written by Dr John Williams, which is also printed in the Parliamentary Return, in an Appendix of Illustrative Documents, pp. 91 sqq.

MAURICE.—The Doctrine of Sacrifice deduced from the Scriptures. With a Dedicatory Letter to the Young Men's Christian Association. By FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE, M.A. Chaplain of Lincoln's Inn. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

MAURICE.—Lectures on the Ecclesiastical History of the First and Second Centuries. 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

"His point of view is so thoroughly human, the philosopher and the man predominate so completely over the antiquarian and the controversialist, that a student will really derive from him a much better and truer conception of the early Church than from most professedly complete narratives. We have never read a Church History in which the ordinary points of controversy were more subordinated, and yet we know none in which the importance of the Catholic doctrine and discipline is more clearly brought out. We find the heretics in this book intelligible beings, enter into their struggles of intellect and conscience; are led to see how they deviated from Catholic belief, under what temptations, and in search of what objects."—Spectator.

"Church History comes to us with advantage from the pens of men who write thus with hearts full of liberal and Christian feeling, and with minds trained to philosophical contemplation. The subject is one full of life and fire; everywhere it ought to inspire the deepest interest; and there is no reason why it should be offered to the public only in the shape of prosy dissertations. This any man will understand who reads the present volume."—Examiner.

"Nevertheless, in spite of every drawback and objection, this volume has such decided merits that it may be safely recommended to theologians, and for lay readers it is the best introduction to the study of Ecclesiastical History with which we are acquainted."—Clerical Journal.

MAURICE.—Lectures on Modern History and English Literature. [Preparing.]

MAURICE.—Law's Remarks on the Fable of the Bees, with an Introduction of Eighty Pages by FREDERICK DENISON MAURICE, M.A. Chaplain of Lincoln's Inn. Fcp. 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d.

"This introduction discusses the Religious, Political, Social, and Ethical Theories of our day, and shows the special worth of Law's method, and how far it is applicable to our circumstances."

MAURICE.—Letter to Dr. Jelf, on the meaning of the word Eternal, and on the Punishment of the Wicked. Fifth Thousand. With a Final Letter to the Council of King's College, and a Preface of Seven Pages in answer to Dr. Jelf's Preface to the Third Edition of his Reasons, &c. 8vo. sewed, 1s.

MAURICE.—The Prophets and Kings of the Old Testament. Crown 8vo. Second Edition. 10s. 6d.

"No statesman, no politician, no student of history, can fail to derive instruction from this volume."—Spectator.

"Whatever obscurity there may be in our author's other writings, here at least there is none. We cannot but rejoice that it is so, and that thus so much that is true and valuable becomes popular."—Scottish Ecclesiastical Journal.

MAURICE.—Learning and Working.—Six Lectures delivered in Willis's Rooms, London, in June and July, 1854. The Religion of Rome, and its influence on Modern Civilization.—Four Lectures delivered in the Philosophical Institution of Edinburgh, in December, 1854.
