

A Rational Vindication of the Catholic Faith

Being the First Part of a Vindication of Christ's Deity

John Fletcher
Joseph Benson
London, 1790

- Preface by the editor . . . 3
- Introduction, showing the occasion of the work, and addressing the reader . . . 16
- Expository letter to the Rev. Dr. Priestley, in four parts . . . 20
- Ch. I. A general view of the catholic faith, concerning the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, and the subject in debate between Catholics and Deists of every description . . . 32
- Ch. II. The sources of the popular arguments against the catholic faith . . . 39
- Ch. III. God the Father has a proper Son, by whom he made, and governs, and will judge the world . . . 47
- Ch. IV. Our Lord claimed the Divine honour of being the proper Son of God the Father . . . 56
- Ch. V. The view which the apostles give us of Christ -after their most perfect illumination . . . 60
- Ch. VI. The apostles apply to Christ many passages of the Old Testament; manifestly intended of the true God . . . 74
- Ch. VII. The inspired writers give Christ the names and titles, and ascribe to him the perfections of the true God . . . 89
- Ch. VIII. The Apostles represent Christ as the immediate author of the Divine works, whether of creation or preservation . . . 105
- Ch. IX. Christ is the Redeemer and Saviour of lost mankind . . . 117
- Ch. X. Christ is the final and universal Judge . . . 129
- Ch. XI. Divine worship was paid to him by patriarchs, prophets, and apostles, and is his undoubted right . . . 143
- Ch. XII, Christ is also very man . . . 166
- Ch. XIII. Objections answered . . . 182
- Ch. XIV. The use of the doctrine of Christ's divinity . . . 201