In which the Author gives an account of Mr. Hill's new method of attack, and makes fome reconciling concessions to the Calvinists, by means of which their strongest arguments are unnerved, and all that is truly scriptural in Calvinism is openly adopted into the anti-calvinian dostrine of grace.

W E should be defervedly confidered as bad Protestants, if we were not ready always to give an an/wer with meckne/s to every man [much more to Mr. Hill, a gentleman of piety, learning, reputation, wit, and fortune] who alketh us a reajon of the hope that is in us. We confess that after the way, which our opponents call the herefy of the Arminians and Perfection fls, we working the God of our Fathers; believing what is written in the Scripture concerning the extent of redemption by price and by power.

Concerning the extent of Christ's redemption by price we believe, that be, by the grace of God tasted death to procure initial falvation for every man, and A 2 eternal falvation for them that obey him: And concerning the extent of his redemption by power, we are perfuaded, that, when we come to God by him, he is able and willing to fave to the uttermost our fouls from the guilt and pollution of fin here, and our bodies from the grave and from corruption bereafter.

With regard to our extensive views of Christ's redemption by price, Mr. Hill calls us Arminians : And with respect to our believing, that there is no perfect faith, no perfect repentance in the grave; that the christian graces of repentance, faith, hope, patience, &c. muit be perfected bere or never; and with respect to our confidence that Christ's blood fully apply'd by his spirit, and apprehended by perfect faith, can cleanse our hearts from all unrighteousness before we go into the purgatory of the Calvinifts, or into that of the Papifls, that is, before we go into the the valley of the shadow of death, or into the fuburbs of hell-with respect to this belief and confidence, I fay, Mr. Hill calls us Perfectionifts; and appearing once more upon the Stage of our controverfy, he has lately prefented the public with what he calls " A Creed for Arminians and Perfectionifis," which he introduces in thefe words : " The following " confession of faith bowever shocking not to say blaf. " phemous, it may appear to the humble christian, must " inevitably be adopted, if not in express words, yet " in fubstance by every Arminian and Perfectionist " what forver; the' the last article of it chiefly con-" cerns fuch as are ordained ministers in the Church of " England." And as among fuch ministers, Mr. J. Wesley, Mr. W. Sellon, and myfelf peculiarly oppose Mr. Hill's Calvinian doctrines of absolute election and reprobation, and of a death-purgatory; he has put the initial letters of our names to his creed : hoping, no doubt, to make us peculiarly ashamed of our principles. And indeed to thould we be, if any " blass bemous" or " shocking" confequence " inevitably" flowed from them.

But

But how has Mr. Hill proved that this is the cafe? Has he supported his charge by one argument? No: But among fome confequences of our dectrine, which are quite harmlefs and fcriptural, he has fixed upon us fome thocking confequences, which have no neceffary connexion with any of our doctrines of grace. We apprehend therefore, that by this method, Mr. Hill has exposed his inattention more than our " herefy."

If Mr. Hill had faid before a thousand witneffes I hold ten guineas in my right hand, and ten in my left, could the author of the Checks wrong him, or expose his own candor, if he infisted upon the truth of this confequence, " Then Mr Hill holds twenty guineas in both his hands." And if Mr. Hill protested ever so long, that he holds but fifteen in all, and that I am a " calumniator" for faying that he holds twenty: would not all the witneffes, who are impartial and acquainted with the proportion of numbers, clear me of the charge of calumny and accule Mr. Hill of inattention? Again: If I had faid before the fame witneffes, that I have two guineas in my right hand, and two in my left; and if Mr, Hill, to keep his error in countenance by bringing me in guilty of as great a mistake as his own, fixed the following confequence upon my affertions, "Then you hold feven guineas in both your hands;" should he not expose himself more than me? And would not all the candid spectators declare, that, altho' I have a right to maintain that ten and ten make twenty, my opponent cannot reasonably affert that two and two make feven. The justness of his illustration will appear to the reader, if he calls a look upon the creed which I have composed for an antinomian with Mr. Hill's principles The doctrines that it contains are all his own, and they are expressed chiefly in his own words, as appears from numerous quotations, inwhich which I refer the reader to the pages where he has publickly maintained the tenets which I expofe: But Mr. Hill has not produced in his Arminian-Creed one line out of my checks from which any flocking or blsfphemous doftrine flows by " unawoidable" confequence. If he had, I proteft, as a lover of truth, that I would inftantly renounce the principle, on which fuch a doftrine might be juffly fathered; being perfuaded that the pure light of a pure doftrine, can never be neceffarily productive of groß darknefs; altho it may accidentally be obfcured by occafional difficulties, as the fun may be darkened by interpofing clouds.

Some Readers will probably think, that I have made the Calvinists too many concessions in the following pages: but I am perfuaded that I have granted them nothing but what they have a feriptural right to: And God forbid that any protestant should grant them less !---- At the synod of Dors the Arminians being fenfible, that a gratuitous elec-tion can be defended by fcripture and reason, would debate first the doctrine of gratuitous, Calvinian re-probation, which is flatly contrary to reason and fcripture. The Calvinists on the other hand being confcious that the firength of their caufe lay in. maintaining a gratuitous clettion, and hoping that their gratuitous reprobation would naturally fculk under that election, infifted that the doctrine of election should be debated first. The Arminians would not confent to it, fo that nothing was-properly discuffed : and the Calvinists having numbers and the fword on their fide, deposed their opponents asobstinate heretics. Whilst we disapprove the feverity of the Calvinists, we blame the Arminians for provoking that feverity by refufing to clear up the doctrine of election. And improving by the miftakes of both parties, we make the reconciling conceilions which follow. (1)

PREFACE.

(1) We grant that there is an election of diffinguithing grace: but we show that this election is not Caivinian Election; thousands being partakers of the partial election of diffinguishing grace, who have no share in the impartial election of diffributive justice: Two diffinct elections these, the confounding of which has laid the foundation of numberlefs errors. See the Scripture Scales, Sect. XII.

(2) We grant the Calvinifts that initial falvation is merely by a decree of divine grace thro' Jefus. Chrift. But we affert that eternal falvation is both by a degree of divine grace and of diffributive juftice: God rewarding in Chrift with an eternal life of glory those believers who by patient continuance in well-doing feek for glory, honour, and immortality.

(3) We grant that, altho' God, as a judge, is novelocter of perfons; yet, as a Benetactor, he is and of confequence has a right to he; fo far a refpeter of perfons, as to beflow his farours in various degrees upon his creatures; dealing them to fome with a more fparing hand than he does to others:

(4) We grant, that, altho' God punishes no one with eternal death for original and neceffary fin; yet, when fin, which MIGHT HAVE BEEN AVOIDED by the help of creating or of redeeming grace, has been VOLUN-TARILY and PERSONALLY committed: God does punish [and of confequence has a right to punish] with eternal death, some offenders MORE QUICKLE than he does OTHERS; the shewing, in such a case, mercy or justice UPON GOSPEL TERMS, to whom he pleases, and as foon or as late as he pleases, being undoubtedly the privilege of his fovereign goodnessor justice:—An awful privilege this, which is perfectly agreeable to the evangelical law of liberty and upon which the calvinists have absorded built their

their twin doctrines of finished falvation and finished damnation; not confidering that fuch doctrines flain the first gospel-axiom and totally defiroy the fecond.

The nature of this concession may be illustrated by an example. Two unconverted foldiers march up to the enemy. Both have unavoidably tranfgreffed the third commandment; the one, by calling fifiy times for his damnation; and the other, five bundred times. Now, both having perfonally forteited their initial falvation, and continuing impenitent; God, as a righteous revenger of prophanenels, may juftly fuffer the fifty pence-debtor to fall in the battle, and to be instantly hurry'd to the damnation he had madly prayed for : And, as a long-fuffering, merciful Creator, he may fuffer the five-bund, ed-t encedebtor, I mean the foldier who has finned with an higher hand, to walk out of the field unhurt, and to be spared for years; following him still with new offers of mercy, which the wretch is fo happy as to embrace at lait. Here is evidently an high degree of the diffinguishing grace, which has been manifetted towards Manafles, and a thoufand other grievous. finners. But by this peculiar favour God violates no promife, and he acts in perfect confiftency with himfelf: For, when two people have perfonally forfeited their initial falvation by one avoidable fin, of which they do not repent when they might; he does no INJUSTICE to the fifty-pence debtor, whenhe calls him first to an account: And he greatly magnifies his LONG-SUFFERING, when he continues to reprieve the five-hundred-pence-debtor.

By this fparing ufe of diffinguifhing mercy, God ftrongly guards the riches of his grace. This inferior degree of forbearance makes thoughtful finners fland in awe; as not knowing but the first fin they will commit, fhall actually fill up the measure of their iniquity, and provoke the Almighty to fwear in

in his righteous anger, that their day of grace is ended. To justify therefore God's conduct with men in this respect, we need only observe, that, if diftinguishing grace did not make the difference which we grant to the Calvinist, perverse free-will would draw amazing strength from the unwearied patience of tree-grace. Suppose for instance, that God had ensured to all men a day of grace of fourscore years; would not all finners think it time enough to repent at the age of threefcore years and nineteen? Therefore, through the clouds of darkness which furround us, reason sees far into the propriety of the partiality with which diffinguishing grace difpenfes its. juperior bleffings. But all the partiality which that grace ever displayed, never amounted to one fingle grain of Calvinian reprobation. Becaufe God, as a sighteous judge, lets every man have a fair trial for his life. Nor will all the fophifms in the world reconcile the ideas, which the fcriptures and rectified reason give us of divine justice, with a doctrine which reprefents God as condemning to eternal torments a majority of men, for the necessary, unavoidable contequences of Adam's fin :--- A fin this, which, upon the fcheme of the abfolute predeftination of all events, was also made unavoidable and neceffary. To return :

(5) We grant that altho' Chrift died to purchafe a day of [initial] falvation for all men, yet he never died to purchafe ETERNAL falvation for any adults, but them that believe, obey and are faithful unto death. And that of confequence, the redemption of mankind by Jefus Chrift is general and unconditional with respect to INITIAL falvation; but particular and conditional with respect to ETERNAL falvation; excepting the cafe of infants, who die before actual fin: These, and only these, are blessed with unconditional cleftion and finified falvation in the Calvinistic fense of these phrases:—These are irress fibly faved and cternally admitted into one of the many mansions of our heavenly father's house: Free-grace, to the honour of our Lord's meritorious infancy, absolutely faves them without any concurrence of their freewill. Not is it furprizing, that God fhould do it unavoidably: for as they never were perfonally capable of working with free-grace, i. e. of working out their falvation: So they never were in a capacity of working AGAINST free-grace, or of beginning to work their damnation. Having never committed any act of fin, God can, confiftently with the golpel, fave them eternally without any act of repentance. In a word, infants having no unrighteonfuc/s but that of the first Adam, reason, as well as (cripture, dictates that they need no righteousfue/s but that of the ficond.

(6) From the preceding conceffion it follows, that obedient, perfevering believers are God's cleA in the particular and full fenfe of the word : being eleAed to the reward of eternal life in glory :—A reward this, from which they that die in a flate of apoflacy or impenitency have cut themfelves off, by not making their calling and conditional election fure.

(7) We grant, that none of thefe peculiar elect shall ever perish, though they would have perished had they not been faithful unto death : And we allow, that with respect to God's fore-knowledge and omnifcience, their number is certain. But we steadily affert that, with regard to the doctrines of general redemption, of God's covenanted mercy, of man's freeagency, of divine justice, and of a day in which the Lord will judge the world in righterufnefs : We fleadily affert, I fay, that, with regard to these doctrines, the number of the peculiar elect might be greater or lefs, without the least exertion of forcible grave, or of forcible wrath, For it might be greater, if more wicked and flothful fervants improved instead of burying their talent : And it might be less, if more good and

and faithful fervants grew faint in their minds, and drew back to perdition before they had fought the good fight out, kept the faith and finished their course.

(8) And lastly, we grant, that according to the election of diffinguishing grace, which is the basis of the various difpensations of divine grace towards. the children of men, Christ died to purchase more privileges for the chrift an Church, than for the jews, more for the jews than for the Gentiles, and more for some gentiles than for others : For it is indubitable that God, as a fovereign Benefactor may, without shadow of injustice, dispense his favours fpiritual and temporal as he pleafes; it being enough for the difplay of his goodness, and for the exciting of our gratitude, that the least of his heathen fervants has received a talent, with means, capacities and opportunities of improving it, even to everlasting happinels: (2) That God never defires to reap where he does not fow, nor to reap an hundred meafures of fpiritual wheat, where he only fows a handtul of spiritual barley: And (3) That the least degree of his improveable goodnefs is a feed, which nothing but our avoidable unfaithfulnefs hinders from bringing forth fruit to eternal life in glory.

By making these guarded concessions, if I mistake not, we rectify the mistakes of Arminius; we secure the doctrine of grace in all its branches, whilst Calvinism secures only the irrefifible grace, by which infants and compleat idiots are eternally faved; we turn the edge, and break the point of all the arguments by which the Calvin an doctrines of grace are defended; and tear in pieces the cloak with which the antinomians cover their dangerous error.

Had Arminius, and all the ancient and modern Semi-pelagians, granted to their opponents what we grant to ours; Calvinism would never have risen to as tremendous height. If you try to stop a great river, river, refufing it the liberty to flow in the deep channel which nature has affigned it, you only make it foam, rife, rage, overflow its banks, and carry devastation far and near. The only way then to make judicious Calvinists allow us the impartial, rcmunerative election, and the general redemption which the gofpel difplays; is to allow them with a good grace the partial, gratuitous election, And the particular redemption, which the Scriptures strongly maintain alfo. See the Scales : Sect, xi. xii. xiii. For my part, I glory in going as near the Calvinitls as I safely can. Zelotes is my brother as well as Homeftus; and fo long as I do not lofe firm footing on fcripture-ground, I gladly ftretch out my right hand to bim, and my left hand to his antagonists; endeavouring to help them both out of the opposite ditches, which bound the narrow way, where Truth frequently takes a folitary walk.

Iconclude this introduction by thanking Mr. Hill for coming a little clofer to the knot of the controverfy in his fictitious Creed, than he has done in his Finisbing-Stroke; for by this means he has flirred me up to dig deeper into the Scriptures-Thofe unexhausted mines of truth, which God has set before us. I would not intimate that I have dug out new gold : No : The oracles of God are not new : But I hope that I have separated a little dross from some of the richeft pieces of golden ore, which the Arminians and the Calvinists have dug out of those mines : And I flatter myfelf that the judicious, and unprejudiced will confess, that fome of those pieces, which Calvinian and Arminian bigots have thrown away as lumps of drofs or of Arfenic, contain neverthelefs truths more precious than thoufands of gold Should these sheets in any degree reand filver. move the prejudices of professors and prepare them for a reconciliation upon the fcriptural plan of the doctrines of grace and justice, or of the two gospelaxioms, I should humbly rejoice and thankfully give God the Glory

BEING AN

ANTI-CALVINIAN

CONFESSION OF FAITH,

For those who believe that CHRIST tassed death for every man, and that fome men by denying the Lord that bought them, bring upon themselves swift destruction.

ARTICLE I.

WE BELIEVE that Jefus Chrift died for the whole human race with an intention Firft, to procure abfolutely and unconditionally a temporary redemption, or an initial falvation for all men univerfally: And fecondly to procure a particular redemption, or an eternal falvation conditionally for all men, but abfolutely for all that die in their infancý, and for all the adult who obey him, and are faithful wato death.

§ We believe that, in confequence of the general and temporary redemption procured by Chrift for all mankind, every man is unconditionally bleffed with a day of grace, which the scripture calls the accepted time and the day of falvation. During this day [under various difpensations of grace, and by virtue of various covenants made through Christ-David-Mofes-Abraham - Noah-or Adam] God, for Christ's fake, affords all men proper means, abilities, and opportunities to work out their own falvation, or to make their calling and CONDITIONAL. election to the ETERNAL bleffings of their respective difpenfations fure: and as many as do it, by keeping the free gift which is come unto all men, or by recovering it thro' faithful obedience to re-converting grace : Or, in other terms, as many as know, and perfeveringly improve the day of their vifitation, are, in consequence of Christ's particular redemption, entitled to an eternal redemption or falvation; That is, they are eternally redeemed frem hell, and eternally faved, into different degrees of heavenly glory, according to the different degrees of their faithfulnels, and the various difpensations which they were under. While they that bury their talent, and know not-[i. e. squander away] the day of their visitation, forfeit their initial falvation, and fecure to themfelves. God's judicial reprobating, together with all its terrible consequences.

We believe moreover, that, altho' Chrift tafted death for every man, yet, according to his covenants of peculiarity or diffinguifhing grace, he formerly fhewed more love to the jews, than to thegentiles, and now fhows more favour to the chriftians than to the jews, and to fome chriftians than to others; befrowing more fpiritual bleffings upon the proteflants than upon the papifts—more temporal mercies upon the English than upon the Greenlanders; &c.--We farther believe, that this special favour is not only national, but also in fome cases perfonal; Thus it feems that God shewed more more of it to Jacob than to Efau-to Efau, than to Shechem; to David and Solomon, than to Jonathan and Mepbibosheth; to St. Paul than to Appollos; and to Peter, James, and John, than to Judas, Bartholomew and Matthias.-We likewife believe, that God [ACCORDING TO HIS PRESCIENCE] has a regard for the fouls, who [he forefees] WILL finally yield to his grace; And this regard he has not for those fouls, who [he forefees] WILL finally harden themfelves against his goodness. Thus WITH RESPECT to divine FORE-RNOWLEDGE, we grant that Chrift had a respect for fallen Peter, which he had not for fallen Judas: For when they were both lying in the guilt of their crimes, he could not but prefer him, who had not yet finned out his day of grace, to him who had :---him who had done the fpirit of grace a partial, temporary defpite, to him who had done that spirit a total and final despite-And, in a word, him who would repent, to him who abfolutely would However, this peculiar regard for fome men, not. this lengthening or fhortening a finner's day of grace arbitrarily, and this bestowing more talents, i. e. more temporal and fpiritual bleffings upon one man than upon another, according to fovereign prerogative, which God claims in his covenants of pecuharity :- This peculiar regard for fome men, I fay never amounts to a grain of partiality in judgment; much lefs to a rape committed by overbearing grace, or infrustrable wrath upon the moral agency of two men (fuppose Peter and Judas) to bring about in an. unavoidable manner the final perseverance of the one, and the final apoflacy of the other : For, had the covetous traitor humbly repented when he could yet do. it, he would have gone to heaven; and had the lying perjured apostle put off his repentance as obstinately as Judas did, he would have gone to the place of impenitent apostates : For, God having put life and death before the fons of men; and having appointed eternal rewards for those who finally chufe life life in the rectitude of their conduct, and eternal punifhments for those who finally chuse death in the error of their ways, he can no more finally turn the fcale of their will, than he can deny binsfelf, and turn the folemnity of the great day, into the pageantry of a pharifaic masquerade.

The end of the first article of Mr. Hill's fictitious creed is not lefs contrary to all our principles, than the middle part. For, according to all our doctrines of grace, perfons who are in glory like Peter, are infinitely more indebted to Christ's grace, than perfons who lift up their eyes in torments like Judas. This will appear if we confider the cafe of those two apostles. Altho' they were both equally indebted to Christ for his redeeming love, which put them in. a state of initial falvation; and for his diffinguishing favour, which raifed them to apostolic honours; yet upon our Scheme, Peter is INFINITELY MORE beholden to free-grace than Judas; and I prove it. thus. Chrift according to his remunerative election. which draws after it a particular redemption and an eternal falvation - Chrift I fay, according to that remunerative election has chosen Peter to the RE-. WARD of an heavenly throne and a crown of glory. Now this election, in which Judas has no intereft, fprings from God's Free-grace, as well as from voluntary perfeverance in the free obedience of faith. It was of FREE-GRACE that God defigned to give to all penitent, perfevering believers, and of confequence to Peter, a crown of glory in his heavenly kingdom :. For he might have given them only the conveniencies of life in a cottage on earth :--He might have dropped them into their original nothing-nels after having bleffed them with one fingle finile of approbation :--- Nay, he might have demanded their utmost odedience without promifing them the LEAST reward. Therefore Peter, and all the faints in glory, are indebted to Chuift, not only for their. rewards rewards of additional grace on earth, but also for all their eternal falvation, and for all the heavenly bleffings which flow from their particular redemption : Infinitely gracious rewards thefe, which God does not bestow upon Judas, or upon any of those who die impenitent ! Infinitely glorious rewards ! which nothing but God's FREE-GRACE in Christ, could move his distributive justice to bestow upon perfevering Hence it is evident, that Mr. Hill has believers. -tried to make our fundamental doctrine of general redemption appear ridiculous, by abfurdly clogging it with an odious confequence, which has no more to do with that comfortable doctrine, than we have to do with Mr. Hill's uncomfortable tenet of ab/olute reprobation.

The FICTITIOUS CREED:

ARTICLE II.

CC Believe that divine grace is indiferiminately give-"en to all men; and that God foreseeing, that by far the greater part of the world would reject this grace, doth nevertheles befow it upon them, in order to beighten their torments, and to increase their damnation in hell."

The GENUINE CREED:

ARTICLE II.

WE do not believe that divine grace is indifcriminately given to all men. For, altho' we affert, that God gives to all at least one talent of true tras grace to profit with ; yet we acknowledge, that he makes as real a difference between man and man as between an angel and an archangel; giving to fome men one talent, to others two talents, and to others five, according to the election of diffinguishing grace maintained in the Scripture Scales, Sect. xii-But the least talent of grace is faving, it free-will does not bury it to the last.

And we believe, that, altho' God forefaw, that in some unhappy periods of the world's duration, the greater part of adults would reject his grace, he nevertheless bestows it in different measures upon all : but not (as Mr. Hill fays) " in order to beighten the torments, and increase the damnation of any in hell." This is an horrid conceit, which we return to those who infinuate, that God gives common grace [that is, we apprehend, unsaving, graceless grace] to ABSO-LUTE reprobates, i. e. to men, for whom, [upon Mr. Hill's scheme of absolute reprobation] there never was in God the least degree of mercy and faving goodness :----- This thocking confequence, fixed upon us by Mr. Hill, is the genuine offspring of Calvinistic non-election, which supposes that God fends the Gofpel to myriads of men, from whom he absolutely keeps the power of believing it; tantalizing them with delusive offers of free-grace bere, that he may, without poffibility of escape, fink them hereafter to the deepest hell-the hell of the Capernaites.

According to the golpel, the reprobation that draws eternal damnation after it, fprings from our own perfonal free-will doing a final defpite to freegrace; and not from God's eternal free-wirath. And if Mr. Hill afks why God gives a manifestation of the spirit of grace to men, who [he forefees] will do it a final defpite, as well as to those who through that grace will work out their own falvation: We seply:

(r) For

(r) For the fame reason which made him give orleftial grace to the angels who became devils by fquandering it away-paradifaical grace, to our first parentsexpostulating, Gentile grace to Cain-jewish, royal. grace to Saul-and christian, apostolic grace to Judas. If Mr. Hill fays he does not understand what that reason is: we answer: By the same reason which induced the Master who corrected Mr. Hill for making a bad exercise at Westminster-school, to give his pupil pen, paper, ink, and proper instruction, before he could reafonably call Mr. Hill to an account for his exercise. And by the fame reason which would make all Shropshire cry out agianst Mr. Hill, as against a tyrannical master, suppose he horfe-whipped his coachman and postilion for not driving him if he had taken away from them boots, whips, fpurs, harnefs, coach and horfes; and if hehad contrived himfelf the fall of their apartment, that they might put all their bones out of joint, when the floor gave way under them.

(2) If Mr. Hill is not fatisfied with these illustrations, we will give him fome direct answers. God gives a manifestation of his grace to those who make their reprobation fure by finally refifting his gracious Spirit, Firft: BECAUSE he will show himfelf as he is, gracious and merciful, true and longfuffering towards all, to long as the day of their vifitation lasts .- Thus he bestows a talent of grace upon all his flothful fervants who bury it to the last, becaufe he will difplay his equity and goodnefs, altho they will difplay their wickedness and floth .---Secondly, BECAUSE he is determined, that if those fervants will deftroy themfelves, their blood shall. be upon THEIR OWN heads, according to the wellknown scriptures, O Israel, THOU baft destroyed THYSELF. I would-and YE WOULD NOT :- Thirdly, BECAUSE God will judge the world in rightcousness, and display his distributive justice in rendering to all all according to THEIR WORKS; DESERVEDLY cloathing his finally-unfaithful fervants with shame ; and making the faithful walk with him in white, because THEY ARE [evangelically] WORTHY. And, to fum up all in one, BECAUSE the two Gospel-axioms are firm as the pillars of heaven and hell; and God will difplay their truth before men and angels, and especially before pharifees and antinomians. Now according to the first axiom, there is a Saviour. a measure of faving grace, and a day of initial falvation for all. And according to the fecond axiom. there is free-will in all, and a day of judgment, with a final falvation or damnation for all, according to their good or bad works, that is, according to their freeagency; the good works of the righteous being the product of their free, avoidable co-operation with God's grace; and the bad works of the wicked fpringing from their free, avoidable rebellion against that grace.

Hence it appears, that the 2d. Article of the fictitious creed contains indeed a "flocking, not to fay bla/phemous" confequence; but that this confequence is nothing but a fpring of Mr. Hill's fuppofed " orthodoxy," abfurdly grafted upon the fuppofed " herefy" which St. John and St. Paul maintain in thefe words: He (Christ) was the true light, which lightesh EVERY MAN that cometh into the world — The GRACE OF GOD, which bringeth SALVATION, has appeared mate ALL MEN, TEACHING [not forcing] us to deny ungodline fs, &c. and to live foberly, &c. [if we are obedient to its TEACHING.]

TE believe that the benefits of a temporary redemption, of a day of falvation, and of the free-gift which came upon all men to the justification mentioned Rom. v. 18,-we believe, I fay, that chefe benefits, far from " depending wholly on the will of the creature" as to the RECEIVING of them, depend no more upon us than our fight, and the light of the fun. All those bleffings are at first as gratuitoufly, and irrefiftibly bestowed upon us, for Christ's fake, in our present manner of existence; as the divine image and favour were at first bestowed upon our first parents in paradife: with this only difference: Before the fall their paradifaical grace. came immediately from God our CREATOR : whereas fince the fall, our penitential grace comes immediately and irrefiftibly from God our Redeemer :---I fay irrefifibly, because God does not leave to our option whether we shall receive a talent of redeeming grace or no, any more than he left it to Adam's choice whether Adam should receive five talents of creative grace or no: Although afterwards he gives us leave to bury or improve our talent of redeeming grace grace, as he gave leave to Adam to bury or improve his five talents of creative grace. Our doctrine of the general redemption and free-agency of mankind ftands therefore upon the fame fcriptural and rational ground, which bears up Mr. Hill's fystem of man's creation and moral-agency in paradife; It being impossible to make any objection against the perfonal loss of redeeming grace in Judas, that may not be retorted against the perfonal loss of creative grace in Adam or Satan.

But, with respect to all the temporal and eternal benefits, which God has promifed by way of RE-WARD to his every good and faithful fervant, we believe that they depend upon the concurrence of two causes, the first of which is the free-grace of God in Jefus Chrift; and the fecond, the faithfulnefs of our affisted and rectified FREE-will; which faithfulness is gracioufly crowned by God's remunerative justice and evangelical veracity. And, instead of blushing at this doctrine, as if it were " flocking," we glory in it as being perfectly rational, strictly scriptural, and equally distant from the two rocks against which Calvinian orthodoxy is dashed in pieces : I mean the twin-doctrines of wanton free-grace, and eternal free-wrath, according to which God without any respect to the faith or unbelief, to the good or bad works of free-agents, abfolutely ordained for fome of them the robe of Christ's imputed righteoufnefs, and the unavoidable reward of eternal life by means of unavoidable faith ; while he abfolutely appointed for all the reft the robe of Adam's imputed unrighteousness, and the unavoidable punishment of eternal death, by means of noceffary, unavoidable unbelief.

46 T^{HOUGH the feripture tells me that the carnal "mind is enmity against God, yet I believe "that there is fomething in the heart of every natural "man, that can nourish and cherish the grace of God; "and that the sole reason why this grace is effectual in "fome and not in others, is entirely owing to themselves, "and to their own faithfulnes, and not to the distin-"guishing love and favour of God."}

The GENUINE CREED:

ARTICLE IV.

THOUGH the scripture tells us that the carnal mind is enmity against God, and that the flesh lusteth against the spirit, yet we believe, that from the time God initially raifed mankind from their fall, and promifed them the celestial Bruiser of the ferpent's head, there is a GRACIOUS free-agency in the heart of every man who has not yet finned away his day of falvation ; and that, by means of this GRACIOUS freeagency, all men, during the accepted time, can concur with, and work under the grace of God, according to the difpensation they belong to .- Again we believe that no child of Adam is a natural man in the Calvinian fenfe of the word-[i. e. abjolutely destitute of all faving grace] except he who has actually finned away his day of grace. And when we confider man as abfolutely graceles, or as a child of wrath in the highest sense of the word, we confider him him in fallen Adam, BEFORE God began to raife mankind by the promife of the woman's feed. Or we must confider that man in his own perfon, AFTER he has done final defpite to the fpirit of that grace, which has more or lefs clearly appeared to all mem under various difpenfations.

Mr. Hill greatly mistakes if he thinks that, according to our doctrine, God's "grace is effectual in fome and not in others;" for we believe that it is EF-FECTUAL IN ALL, though in a different manner, It has its FIRST and MOST defirable effect on them that "cherish it" through the above-mentioned GRACIOUS free-agency. And it has its SECOND, and less defirable EFFECT on those, who finally reject the gracious counsel of God towards them: for it reproves their fins; it galls their conficiences; it renders them inexcufable; it vindicates God's mercy; it clears his justice; it flews that the judge of all the earth does no wrong; and it begins in this world the just punishment which righteous vengeance will complete in the next.

The grace of God therefore, like the gofpel that testifies of it, is a two-cdged fword : It is a favour of life to those who cherish, and a favour of death to those who refist it. That fome cherish it, by its affiftance work righteouinefs to the last, and then receive the reward of the inheritance, is NOT " cntirely owing to themfelves and to their own faithfulnefs" as the fictitious creed afferts : Nor is it " entirely owing to the love and favour of God." This happy event has two causes: The FIRST is FREE-GRACE, by the affiftance of which, the faith and good works of the righteous are begun, continued, and ended : The SECOND is FREE-WILL humbly working with free-grace : as appears by the numerous fcriptures balanced in the Scripture fcales. And that fome on the other hand, refift the grace of God, and are per fonally perfonally given up to a reprobate mind that they might be damn'd, is not at all owing to God's freewrath, as the fcheme of Mr. Hill fuppofes : Nor is it entirely owing to the unfaithfulnels and obstinacy of impenitent finners. This unhappy event has also two caufes : The FIRST is man's Free-will finally refufing to concur with Free-grace : in working out his own falvation : And the fecond is Jufiwrath revenging the defpite done to God's Free-grace by fuch a final refufal.

With refpect to " the DISTINGUISHING love and favour" of God our Judge, and his distinguish-ED batred and ill-will fon which our eternal rewards and buni (hments unavoidably turn, according to Mr. Hill's twin-doctrines of finished salvation and finished damnation] we dare not admit them in our holy religion. We give to " DISTINGUISHING favour an important place in our creed, as appears from the Arit article of this; But that favour has nothing to do with God's judicial distribution of rewards or punishments, i. e. with God's appointing of us to eternal life or to eternal death.-We believe that it is a most daring attempt of the antinomians, to place diftinguishing favour, and diftinguishing grudge, upon the judicial throne of God, and in the judgmentfeat of Christ; no decrees proceeding from thence, but fuch as are dictated by IMPARTIAL JUSTICE putting Christ's evangelical law in execution, and firicity judging [i. e. juftifying or condemning, rewarding or punishing] moral agents, according to their works. We should think ourfelves guilty of propagating " a shocking, not to say blasphemous" doctrine, if we infinuated, that "diffinguishing favour," and not unbribed juffice dictates God's fentence; God himfelf having enacted, Curfed be he that perverteth judgment, &c. and all the people shall fay, AMEN. Deut. xxvii. 19: Nor need I tell Mr. Hill who has hinted, that God is fuch a partial Judge :- yea, that he carries carries partiality to fuch a height, as to fay to a man who actually defiles a married woman, and treacheroufly plots the murder of her injured hufband, Thou art all fair, my love, my undefiled, there is no fpot in thee :- Thou art a Man after my own Heart, If Mr. Hill has forgotten this anecdote, I refer him to the Five letters, the fale of which he does not fcruple to advertise again in his Three Letters, thus " I now " think it the way of duty to permit-the Five let-" ters to Mr. Fletcher, &c. to be again fold, in " order that both friends and enemies may, if pof-" fible, be convinced that-I NEVER RETRACTED " MY SENTIMENTS."-Strange confidence of boafting ! [O mores !] What have Morality and Godline/s done to Mr. Hill, that he will put them to a perretual blush; left his Venus [for she no longer deferves the name of Diana] should redden one moment?

The GENUINE CREED:

ARTICLE VI.

W E believe that God's attributes perfectly harmonize. Accordingly his goodness and mercy mercy incline him to " will for the falviation of " all men, upon gracious terms laid down by his wildom and veracity. As a proof of the fincerity of this wifh, he fwears by himfelf, that his antecedent will or decree, is not that finners fould die; but that by the help of his frée-grace and the fubmiffion of their free-will, they should turn and live. He does more fill :--- he grants to all men a day of initial falvation, and all that day long be firetches forth his hands to them; he reproves them for their fins; he calls upon them various ways to repent; and gives them power to do it according to one or another difpenfation of his grace : requiring little of those to whom he gives little : and much, of those to whom much is given. But it is his fubjequent decree, dictated chiefly by his bolinefs, justice, and forvereignty, that, if free-agents will none of his reproofs, and finally difregard the offers of his grace, his spirit shall not always firive with them : a day of calamity shall follow the day of their neglected falvation : and Justice shall be glorified in their righteous destruction. This is the fad alternative, which God has fet before them, if in opposition to his antecedent will, they [thro" their free-agency] finally choose death, in finally. chuing the way that leads to it.

This part of our doctrine may be fummed up in three propositions. (1) God's mercy abfolutely wills the INITIAL falvation of all men by Jefus Christ. — (2) God's goodnefs, holinefs and faithfulnefs abfolutely will the ETERNAL falvation of all those, who, by the concurrence of their affifted, unnecefficated free-will with his redeeming grace, are found penitent, obedient believers at the end of their day of initial falvation :—And (3) God's juffice, fovercignty, and veracity, abfolutely will the deftruction of all that are found impenitent at the close of the day of their gracious visitation, or initial falvation. To fee the truth of these three propositions, we reed only $C_{,3}$, confider confider them in the light of the two gofpel-axioms, and compare them with these declarations of Moses and Jesus Christ. I set lise and death before you, (freeagents, who enjoy a day of initial falvation: Chuse lise: (I offer it you first-Chuse lise, I fay,) that you may live eternally. But if you chuse death in the error of your ways, your rejected Saviour will complain, How often would I have gathered you as a ben gathereth her brood under her wings but ye would not: And now the things that made for your peace are hid from your eyes: That is, You are given up to judicial blindnefs, and to all its fearful confequences.

Hence it is evident, that the damnation of those. who obstinately live and die in their fins, and whom God was willing to fave AS FREE-AGENTS UPON COSPEL-TERMS, argues no " want of ability in him" to fave them cternally, if he would give up the day of judgment, and exert his omnipotence in opposition to his wildom, juffice, bolines, and veracity; or if he would deftroy the most wonderful of all his works. which is the free-will of moral agents. We never doubted his ability to unman man, and eternally to fave all mankind, if he would abfolutely do it; it being evident that the Almighty can overpower all his creatures if he is bent upon it, and drive them from fin to necefficated holinefs, and from hell to heaven, far more eafily than a shepherd can drive his. frighted sheep from the market to the slaughter house. Therefore, the supposition that, upon our principles, "God wants ability to fave" whom he absolutely will fave, is entirely groundles; every: man being actually faved fo far as God + ab/olutely wills.

+ The reader is defired to take particular notice of this obfervation. Because it cuts by the root Bradwarden's famous argument. "If you allow [fays he] (1) That God is able to do a " thing, and (2) That he is [abfoliately] " willing to do a thing : " Then.

wills : For, first, God abfolutely wills that all men fhould be unconditionally faved with an initial falvation; and THUS all men are unconditionally faved : and fecondly, he abfolutely wills that all men who are obedient, and faithful unto death should abfolutely be faved with an eternal falvation ; and THUS all men who are obedient and faithful unto death are actually faved. They shall never perish neither shall any pluck them out of Christ's protecting hand. But what has this for ipture-doctrine to do with calvinism ! —with the neceffary, eternal, finished falvation of ALL the difobedient sheep, who turn goats, foxes, lions, and ferpents ! who, far from remembring Lot's wite, filly rob their neighbours of their ewe-lambs —their heart's-blood—their reputation !

To conclude: The most that Mr. Hill can justly fay against our principles, is: (1) That, according to the gospel which we preach, MAN is a free-agent, and GOD is wife, boly, true, and just; as well as good, loving, patient and merciful: — And (2) That one half of these attributes do not permit him to NECES-SITATE free-Agents; that is, to make them abfolutely DO, or FOREEAR those actions, by which they are to stand or fall IN JUDGMENT. And let men of reason and religion fay, if this doctrine is not more rational and friptural, than the Calvinian doctrine of finished falvation, and of its infeparable counter-part, finished damnation. The

"Then (3) I affirm, that thing will not, cannot go unaccompli-"fhed :--- Otherwife God muft either lofe his power or change "his mind.---If the" [ab/oluce] "will of God could be fruftra-"ted and vanqihhed, its deteat would arife from the created wills "either of angels, or of men. But could any created will what-"ever, &c. counter-aft and baffle the will of God, the will of "the creature muft be superior either in firength or in wif-"dom to the will of the Creator: which can by no means be allowed." We fully grant to Mr. Toplady that the argument is "extremely conclusive," provided the two words alfolucity and alfolute be taken into it. And therefore we maintain, as well as he, that man is aftually faved, fo far as God ab/olucity wills.

ARTICLE. V.

E believe that the Redeemer did not fhed this precious blood, or pray abfolutely in vain for any man : feeing he obtained for all men. in their feation, a day of grace and INITIAL falvation, with a thouland fpiritual and temporal bleffings. Nor were his prayers for the eternal falvation of those who die impenitent rejected by his Father : For Chrift never prayed that they should be eter-. nally faved in impenitency. Before Mr. Hill can reafonably charge us with holding doctrines, which imply that Christ told a GROSS UNTRUTH when be faid, " I know that thou hearest me always," he must prove, that Christ ever asked the eternal falvation of fome men whether they repented or not; or that he ever defired his Father to force TO THE LAST repentance, faith, and obedience upon any man. If Mr. Hill cannot prove this, how can he make ap-pear that, according to our doctrines of grace, one of our Lord's prayers was ever rejected ? We grant that ?

that Christ asked the forgiveness of his murderers, and of those who made sport with his sufferings; but he alked it upon gospel-terms, that is, conditionally. Nor was his prayer ineffectual : for it obtained for them time to repent, and uncommon helps to to do, with a peculiar readiness in God to pardon them upon their application for pardon: And if after all, thro' the power of their free-agency, they defpifed the pardon offered them in the gospel, and repented not, they shall defervedly perish according to Christ's own declaration. He has acted towards them the part of a gracious Saviour: he never engaged himfelf to act that of a tyrant .---I mean, he never fent either his good spirit, or the evil fpirit of Satan, to bind the wills of men with adamantine chains of necessitated righteoufnefs, or of necessitated iniquity, that he might cast fome into Abraham's bolom and others into hell: as Nebuchadnezzar fent the firongest men in his army to bind Daniel's companions, and to caft them into the burning fiery furnace.

Once more: We believe that, with respect to the reward of the inheritance, and the doctrine of cternal falvation, Christ's atonement and intercession are like his gospel. Now his gospel is guarded by what one of Mr. Hill's feconds queerly calls " the valiant fergeant if," that is, the conditionality of the promifes and threatnings which relate to eternal falvation and eternal damnation; and this conditionality is the rampart of the old gospel and the demolition of the new; strongly guarding the antient doctrines of free-grace, free-will, and just wrath, against the novel doctrines of overbearing grace, bound will, and freewrath.

- I should not do justice to our cause, if I difmissed this Article without retorting Mr. Hill's objection. I have shewn how unreasonably we are accused of holding holding doctrines, which by "unavoidable" confequence, represent Christ as " telling a grof untruth :" And now we defire Mr. Hill, or his feconds, to show how the Son of God could, confistently with truth, profess himself to be the Saviour of men, the Saviour and Light of the world and the Drawer of all men unto bimfelf; if most men have been from all eternity under the fearful curse of Calvinian reprobation.-We ask if the Redeemer would have " told a grofs untruth," upon the fuppofition that Calvinifmis true, had he called himfelf The REPROBATOR of men-The NON-REDEEMER, the DAMNER of the world, and the REJECTER of all men from bimfelf; feeing that, according to the doctrines of grace (fo called) the bulk of men was EVER reprobated-NE-VER redeemed-NEVER initially faved-and NEVER drawn to Chrift.----We befeech candid Protestants to fay, if the bible does not clear up all the difficulties with which prejudiced divines have clogg'd the genuine doctrines of grace, when it teftifies, that our Redeemer and Saviour has procured a GENERAL temporary REDEMPTION together with an initial falwation for all men UNIVERSALLY; and a particular eternal redemption, together with a finished falvation tor them that obey him and endure to the end. And we intreat the lovers of the whole truth as it is in Jefus, to help us to bring about upon this scriptural plan, a reconciliation between those who contend for the doctrines of particular redemption and finished falvation; and those who maintain the doctrines of general redemption, and of a day of falvation for all mankind.

W E believe that out of mere mercy, and rich free-grace in Jefus Chrift, without any refpect to forefcen repentance, faith or goodnefs, God places all men in a ftate of initial falvation; electing them to that ftate according to the mysterious counfel of his diftinguifhing love, which places fome under the bright and direct beams of gospel-truth; whils he fuffers others to receive the external light of it, only thro' that variety of clouds which we call Calvinism, Popery, Judaism, and Mahometanism⁺; leaving

(2) We believe that God, for Christ's fake, peculiarly [altho' with different degrees of favour] accepts all those, who, in all the above-mentioned religions, i. e. in every nation, fear him and work righteousness. These, when considered as enduring to the end, are his elect according to the election of remunerative justice. For these, he is gone to prepare the many manfions in his Father's house: for these, he defigns the REWARD of the inheritance that fadeth not away in beaven. And when he speaks of some men as belonging to this number, it is always with respect to his fore-knowledge that they will freely perfevere in the obedience of faith; it being the highest pitch of antinomian dotage to suppose that God, the true, the wife, the holy, and righteous God. ELECTS men to the REWARD of perfevering obedience, without taking any notice of per/evering obcdience IN HIS ELECTION.

To fum up all in few lines: The doctrine of election has two branches: According to the first branch, we are chosen that we should be holy and obedient, in proportion to the ordinary or extraordinary helps, which divine grace affords us under one or another of its difpensations. This election to holinefs has nothing to do with prefcience ; it depends entirely on free-grace, and diffinguishing faweur.-According to the SECOND branch of the doctrine of election, we are chosen to receive the rewards of perfected holinefs and of perfevering obedience, in proportion both to the talents which free, diffinguishing grace has afforded us; and to the manner in which our affifted free-will has improved those talents. This remunerative election depends depends on four things: (1) On FREE-GRACE, promifing for Chrift's fake the reward of the inheritance to the perfevering obedience of faith :--(2) On FAITHFUL FREE-WILL, fecuring that reward by the affiftance of free-grace, and by the FREE obedience of faith :--(3) On DIVINE FAITHFULNESS, keeping its gofpel-promife for ever :--And (4) On DISTRIBUTIVE JUSTICE, difpenfing the reward according to the law of Chrift, and according to every man's work.--This election therefore has much to do with divine prefcience, as depending in part upon God's knowledge that ... fome men have improved, or WILL improve the grace which is given them, repert, believe, and be good" [if not very good"] and faithful firvants to the end.

Unprejudiced readers will eafily fee how much our doctrine of Election is preferable to that of our opponents. Ours draws after it only an HARMLESS reprobation from fome peculiar favours, and a RIGH-TEOUS reprobation from rewards of grace and glory obfinately defpifed, or wantonly forfeited; But the election of the Calvinifs is clogg'd with the dreadful dogma of an unferiptural and terrible Reprobation, which might be compared to a well known monfler, Prima Leo, postrema Draco, media ipía Chimæra.

Its head is Free-iwrath; its body, Unavoidable Sin; and its tail, Finified Damnation. In a word: Our ELECTION recommends God's free, diffinguifhing grace, without pouring any contempt on the holinefs of Chrift's precepts, the fanction of his law, the veracity of his threatonings, and the conditionality of his promife. And our REPROBATION difplays God's abfolute Sovereignty, without fullying, his mercy, impeaching his veracity, or difgracing his juffice. In a word our election doctrinally guards the throne of fovereign grace, and our reprobation, that of fovereign juffice: But Calvinian election and reprobation doctrinally overthrow both those thrones: or if they are yet left flanding, it is to allow Free-wrath to fill the throne of juffice, and an Unchafte, bloody Diana to ftep into the throne of grace, whence the hints to Laodiccan believers, that they may with advantage commit adultery, murder, and inceft; calling as many as take her horrid innuendos, My lowe, my undefiled, &c. and affuring them that THEY thall never perifh, and that all things [the moft grievous fins not excepted] thall work for their good.

W E believe that God's works were all originally very good; and that God did love, or approve of them all, as very good in their places. We maintain, that fome of God's works, fuch as fome fome angels, and our first parents, by free, avoidable difobedience forfeited God's love or approbation. He approved or loved them while they continued righteous; and difapprov'd or hated them, when the bad use which they made of their free-will deferved his difapprobation or hatred.—Again: We believe that God's ABSOLUTE gifts and callings are without repentance. God never repented that he gave all mankind his paradifaical favour in Adam, and yet all mankind forfeited it by the Fall.—God never repented that he CALLED all his fervants, and GAVE to avery one of them his talents, as he thought fit: and yet, when the wicked and flothful fervant had buried and forfeited his talent, God faid, Take the takent from bim.

Once more: We believe, that fo certain as God is the gracious creator and the righteous judge of angels and men, the doctrines of divine grace and divine juffice [or the two golpel-axioms] are perfectly reconcileable; and that, of confequence, God can juftly curfe mankind with temporal death, after having bleffed them with paradifaical life; and punish them in hel', after having bleffed them a fecond time with initial falvation during their day of perfonal probation on earth. To deny this is to deny, that there are graves on earth, or torments in hell for any of the children of men.

Neverthelefs we believe that there is no pofitive change in God. From eternity to eternity he is the fame holy and faithful God: therefore he unchangeably loves rightcoufnefs, and bates iniquity: Apoltacy in men or in angels does not imply any change in hin; the change being only in the receptive difficient of his free-notiling creatures. If I make my eyes fo fore that I cannot look with pleafure at the fun, or that it's beams, which cheared me yefterday, give me pain to-day; this is no D a proof proof that the fun has changed it's nature .- The haw that condemns a murderer abfolves me now : but, if I flab my neighbour in ten minutes, the fame law that now ABSOLVES me, will in ten minutes CONDEMN me.—" Impoffible!" fays Mr. Hill's fcheme : " The Law changes not." I grant it : but a free-agent may change: and the law of liberty, which is but the transcript of God's eternal nature, is fo ordered, that, without changing at all, it neverthelefs treats all free-agents according to their changes. The changes that God makes in the world do not change him: much lefs is he changed by the variations of free-agents: Such variations indeed hay rebels and penitents open to a new aspect from the Deity; but, that afpect was in the Deity BEFORE they laid themfelves open to it. Fire, without changing it's nature, melts wax and hardens clay : Now if a rebel's heart absolutely stiffens itself, fo that it becomes like unyielding clay; or if a penitent's heart humble itfelf, fo that it becomes like yielding wax, God changes not, any more than the fire, when he hardens the fliff rebel by relifting him, and melts the yielding penitent by giving him more grace.

To understand this better, we must remember that God's eternal nature is to refift the proud, and give grace to the humble; and that when free-grace, (which has appeared to all men) affists us, we are as free to chuse, humility and life as we are to chuse pride and death when we daily with temptation, or indulge the natural depravity of our own hearts. Hence it follows, that the judicial difference which God makes when he alternately finites and frowns, difpenses rewards and pani/hments springs not from any alteration in his unchangeable nature; but from a change in the mutable will and behaviour of free-agents: — a change this, which arises from THELR WILL FREELY RESISTING divine grace, if the alteration alteration is for the worfe; and from THEIR WILL yielding WITHOUT NECESSITY to that grace, if the change is for the better. Nor are we any more ashamed to own man's free-agency before a world-of fatalists, than we are ashamed to fay : Verily there is a REWARD for the rightcous : The band join in hand the wicked shall not be unpunished : Doubtles there is a God' that JUDGETH the earth, and will render to every man according to HIS works, that is, according to HIS freewill; works being our own works, only fo far as they fpring from our own free-will. And we think that the opposite doctrine, is one of the most abfurd errors, that ever difgraced Christianity; and one of the most dangerous engines, which were ever invented in Babel to fap the walls of Jerusalem :- A dreadful engine this, which if it rested upon truth, would pour floods of difgrace on all the divine perfections; would overfet the tribunal of the Judge of all the earth; and would raife upon the tremendous ruins the throne of the doctrinal idol of the day: I mean the fpurious doctrine of grace, which I have fometimes called The great Diana of the Calvinifts, becaufe, like the great Diana of the Ephefians, it may pass at once for Luna or finished Salvation in heaven and for Hecate or Finished Damnation in hell.

ARTICLE IX.

7 E Believe that the word or the truth of God is the divine feed, by which finners are born again when they receive it, that is, when they believe: and this fpiritual feed (as that enlightened. apostle Peter, justly affirms) endures FOR EVER :-but not for antinomian purpoles-not to fay to fallen believers in the very act of adultery or inceft My love ! my undefiled !- No: It endures FOR EVER. as a feed of reviving or terrifying truth : It endures FOR EVER as a two edged fword to defend the just, or to wound the wicked ; to protect obedient believers, or to pierce difobedient believers, and obstinate unbelievers : It endures FOR EVER as a fweet favour of life to them that receive and keep it; and as a bitter favour of death to them that never receive it, and: to them that finally caft it away, and never bring forth fruit to perfection.

But altho? the feed of the word can NEVER be loft with respect to both its effects, yet (as we have already observed) it is too frequently lost with re-. gard to its more defirable effect : If Mr. Hill doubts_ of it, we refer him to the parable of the fower, where our Lord observes that the good feed was thus loft in three forts of people out of four, merely. thro' the want of co-operation or concurrence on the part of free-will, which he calls good or bad ground foft or frony ground, &c. according to the good orbad choice it makes, and according to the steadines or ficklenefs of that choice. And if Mr. Hill ex-. claims against the obvious meaning of fo well known a portion of the gospel, the world will eafily fee that. fuppoling his doctrine of grace deferves to be called. chafte ebaste, when it prompts him to vindicate as openty as he dares, the profitableness of adultery and inceft to fallen believers; it by no means merits to be called devout, when it excites him to infinuate, that our Lord preached a "shocking, not to fay blafphemous doctrine.

6.6] BELIEVF, that Chrift does not always give "unto his theep eternal life; but that they often "perifh, and are by the power of Satan frequently "plucked out of his hand."

The GENUINE CREED:

ARTICLE X.

W E Believe that Christ's sheep mentioned in John x. are obedient perfevering believers; that is, as our Lord himself describes them, John, x. 4, 5, 27. perfons that HEAR [i. e. obey] his voice, — and whom be KNOWS [i. e. approves:] Perfons that know [i. 'e. approve] bis woice; — that know not [i. e. do not approve] bis woice of strangers; — and slee from a stranger instead of following him: —In a word, perfons that actually follow the good shepherd in some of his folds or Pastures; In this description of a sheep every verb is put in the prefent tense, to show us that the word sheep denotes a character, or perfons actually posses of fuch a character: So that the moment the character changes; the moment a man who once left all to follow Christ, leaves Christ to follow a firanger, he has no more to do with the name and privileges of a fleep, than a de/erter or a rebel has to do with the name and privileges of his majesty's foldiers or fubjects.

According then to our doctrine, no fleep of Chrift that is, no actual follower of the Redeemer perifhes. We think it is shocking to fay, that any of them are plucked out of his hand. On the contrary we frequently fay with St. Peter, Who will barm you [much more, who will feparate you from the love . of Chrift] if you be followers of that which is good [i. e. if you be sheep;] and we infiss upon the veracity of our Lord's promise, He that endureth unto the end in the character of a sheep, i, e. in the way of faith and obedience, the fame shall be [eternally] faved. And we maintain, that fo long as a believer does not make shipwreck of the faith and of a good conficence-fo long as he continues a sheep, an harmless follower of the Lamb of God, he can no more perifh, than God's everlafting throne can be overturned. But what has this doctrine of our Lord to do with Calvinifm?

With regard to the sheep mentioned in Matt. XXV. 33, 34. whom our Lord calls ELESSED of bis Father, we believe that they represent the multitude of obedient persevering believers, whom two apostles describe thus: BLESSED are they that do his [God's] commandments that they may have right [or if Mr. Hill pleases, privilege] to the tree of life, and enter Scc. into the city.. Rev. XXII. 14.—BLESSED is the man that ENDURETH temptation; for WHEN he is tried, he shall receive the crown of LIFE, which the Lord bath pramifed to THEM THAT LOVE HIM.—And this this is the love of God that we keep his commandments. James, i. 12. — 1 John v. 3. — For fuch ENDU-RING, OBEDIENT believers a kingdom of glory is prepared from the foundation of the world ; and to it they are and shall be judicially elected; while the goats, i. e. unbelievers, or difobedient fallen believers, are and shall be judicially reprobated from it. Hence it is, that when our Lord accounts for his judicial election of the obedient [whom he parabolically calls [hecp] he does not fay, Inherit the kingdom, &c. for I abfolutely finished your falvation : but he fays, Inbeberit the kingdom, for ye gave me meat, &c. ye fed the hungry from a right motive, and what you did in that manner, I reward it as if you had done it to myfelf. In other terms, Ye heard my voice, and followed me, in hearing the whifpers of my grace and following the light of your difpensation; and now I own you as my eternally-rewardable elect, my freep, which have followed me without finally drawing back.

Again, when our Lord gives an account of the judicial reprobation of the finally-difobedient, whomhe parabolically calls goats, he does not fay, Depart ye curfed into everlasting fire prepared for YOU from the foundation of the world, for I then absolutely finished your eternal reprobation. No: this is the counterpart of the gospel of the day. But he fays, Depart, &c. for ye gave me no meat by feeding the hungry in your generation, &c. That is, ye did not believingly follow me in following your light and my precepts. Either you never began your courfe, or you drew back before you had finished it. Either you never voluntarily listed under my banner, or you deferted before you had fought the good fight out : Either you never believed in me the light of the world, and your light; or, instead of keeping the faith, you voluntarily, avoidably, unneceffarily, and refolutely made thipwreck of it, and of a good confcience. And

And therefore your damnation is of yourfelves. You have perfinally forfeited your conditional election to the rewards of perfevering obedience, and perfinally made your conditional reprobation from those rewards fure by your final difobedience.

From these evangelical descriptions of the sheep and the goats, mentioned in John x. and Matt. xxv. it appears to us indubitable : (1) That thefe [heep [i. e. obedient, perfevering believers] Shall newer perifh, altho' they MIGHT perifh, if they brought upon themselves swift destruction by denying the Lord that bought them : (2) That they shall all be eternally faved, altho' they MIGHT have miffed eternal falvation, if they had finally difregarded our Lord's declaration, He that endureth unto the end, the fame Shall be [finally] faved .--- (3) That the Good Shepherd peculiarly laid down his life for the eternal redemption of obedient, perfevering believers; and that thefe believers are fometimes eminently called God's elect, because they make their conditional calling to the rewards of perfeverance fure, by actually perfevering in the obedience of faith.-(4) That the peculiarity of the eternal redemption of Christ's perfevering followers, far from being connected with the absolute reprobation of the rest of mankind, stands. in perfect agreement with the doctrines of a general temporary redemption; and a general, initial falvation; and with the doctrines of a gratuitous election to the bleffings of one or another difpenfation of God's faving grace-and of a conditional election to the rewards of voluntary, unneceffitated obedience. $-(\xi)$ That our opponents give the truth as it is in Jefus two desperate stabs, when they fecure the peculiar eternal redemption of finally obedient believers, and comfort mourning backfliders in fo unhappy a manner, as to overthrow the general, temporary re-. demption of all mankind; and to encourage or countenance the prefent difobedience of Loadicean believers.-(6) That the calvinian doctrines of grace, which

which do this double mifchief under fuch fair pretences, are of all the tares which the enemy fows, those which come nearest to the wheat, and of confequence those by which he can best feed his immoral goats, deceive fimple fouls, fet Christ's moral sheep at perpetual variance, turn the fruitful field of the church into a barren field of controverfy, and make a deiftical world think that faith is enthufiaftical fancy ; that orthodoxy is immoral nonfenfe; and that revelation is nothing but an apple of difcord.-(7) And lastly that the doctrines of grace which we maintain, do equal justice to all the divine attributes ;---defend faith, without wounding obedience :--- oppose pharifaifm, without recommending antinomianism;---affert the truth of God's promites without reprefenting his most awful threatnings as words without meaning ;-reconcile the Scriptures, without wounding conficience and reason; exalt the gracious wonders of the day of atonement, without fetting afide the righteous terrors of the great day of retribution; extol our heavenly Priest, without pouring contempt upon our divine Prophet;-and celebrate the honours of his crofs, without turning his sceptre of righteousness into a solifidian reed, his royal crown into a crown of thorns, and his law of liberty into a rule of life, by which his fubjects can no more stand or fall in judgment, than an Englishman can ftand or fall by the rules of civility followed at the French court.

To the best of my knowledge, Reader, thou hast been led into the depth of our doctrines of grace. I have open'd to thee the mysteries of the evangelical fystem, which Mr. Hill attacks as the herefy of the Arminians. And now, let Impartiality hand thee up to the judgment-feat. Let Reason and Revelation hold out to thee their confertaneous light. Pray that the Spirit of Truth may help thine infirmities: Turn Prejudice out of the court : And let Candour pronounce the fentence and fay, if it is our principles ples or those of Mr. Hill, which "inevitably" draw atter them "flocking, not to fay blasshemous" confequences.

I shall close this answer to the Creed which that Gentleman has composed for Arminians, by an observation which is not entirely foreign to our contro-verfy. In one of the three letters which introduce the fiftitious Creed, Mr. Hill fays, "Controverfy I am perfuaded has not done me any good;" and he exhorts me to examine closely whether I cannot make the fame confession. I own that it would have done me harm, if I had blindly contended for my opinions. Nay, if I had that my eyes against the light of truth ; --- if I had fet the plainest scriptures aside, as if they were not worth my notice ; --- it I had overlooked the strongest arguments of my opponents ;if I had advanced groundless charges against them; if I had refused to do justice to their good meaning or piety ;--- and, above all, if I had taken my leave of them by injuring their moral character, by publishing over and over again arguments, which they have properly answered, without taking the least notice of their answers; --- if I had made a solemn promife not to read one of their books, tho' they fhould publish a thousand volumes; if continuing to write against them, I had fixed upon them (as "unavoidable" confequences) abfurd tenets, which has no more neceffary connexion with their principles, than the doctrine of general redemption has with calvinian reprobation: If I had done this, I fay, controverfy would have wounded my confcience or my reason; and without adding any thing to my light it would have immoveably fixed me in my prejudice, and perhaps branded me before the world tor Pr. Arminian bigot: But, as matters are, I hope I . may make the following acknowledgment without betraying the impertinence of proud boafting.

Altho' I have often been forry that controverly fhould take up fo much of the time, which I might with much more fatisfaction to myfelf have employ'd in devotional exercises :--- and altho' I have lamented, and do still lament my low atta nments in the meekness of wildom, which should constantly guide the pen of every controverfial writer; yet I rejoice that I have been enabled to perfift in my refolution either to wipe off, or to thare the reproach of those, who have hazarded their reputation in defence of pure, and undefiled religion. And, if I am not mistaken, my, repeated attempts have been attended with these happy effects: In vindicating the moral doctrines of grace, I hope, that, as a man, I have learned to think more closely, and to investigate truth more ardently, than I did before. There are rational powers in the dulleft fouls, which lie hid as fparks in a Controversial opposition and exertion, like flint. the stroke of the steel, have made me accidentally. find out fome of these latent sparks of reason, for which I should never have thanked my Maker, if I had never difcovered them. I have frequently been thankful to find that my horfe could travel in bad roads better than I expected; nor do I think that it is a piece of pharifaifin to fay, I am thankful to find that my mind can travel with more eafe than I thought the could, through theological roads rendered almost impassable by heaps of doctrin: L rubbish, brought from all parts of Christendom, and by briars of contention which have kept growing for, above a thousand years .---- To return : As a divine, I fee more clearly the gaps and stiles, at which miftaken good men have turned out of the narrow ways of truth, to the right hand and to the left .- As a protestant, I hope I have much more effeem for the fcriptures in general, and in particular for those, practical parts of it which the Calvinits had infenfibly taught me to overlook or defpife. And this increasing effeem is, I trust, accompanied with a deeper conviction of the truth of chriftianity, and with dels, pharifees, and antinomians .- As a preacher, I hope I can now do more justice to a text, by reconciling it with feemingly contrary fcriptures .- As an anti-calvinift, I have learned to do the Calvinifts juftice in granting that there is an election of diffinguishing grace for God's peculiar people, and a particular redemption for all believers who are faithful unto death ;-And by that means, as a controvertift, I can more eafily excuse pious Calvinist, who thro' prejudice, mistake that scriptural election for their antinomian election; and who confider that particular redemption as the only redemption mentioned in the fcriptures. Nay, I can, without fcruple allow Mr. Hill, that his doctrines of finished falvation and irrefflible grace, are TRUE with respect to all those who die in their infancy.-As one who is called an Arminian, I have found out fome flaws in Arminianifm. and evidenced my impartiality in pointing them out, as well as the flaws of Calvinifin. [See the Preface.] -As a witney's for the truth of the gofpel, I hope E have learned to bear reproach from all forts of people with more undaunted courage. And I humbly truft, that were I called to feal with my blood the truth of the doctrines of grace and of justice against the pharifes and the antinomians, I could (divine grace fupporting me to the laft) do it more rationally and of confequence with greater steadiness .-- Again, as a follower of Chrift, I hope I have learned to difregard my dearest friends for my heavenly Prophet: Or to speak the language of our Lord, I hope, I have learned to forfake father, mother, and brothers for Chriff's fake and the gofpel's .- As a difputant, I have learned that folid arguments and plain fcriptures, make no more impression upon bigotry, than the charmer's voice does upon the deaf adder; and by that means, I hope, I depend lefs upon the powers. of reafon, the letter of the feripture, and the candour of professors, than I formerly did.-As a believer, I have have been brought to fee and feel, that the power of the fpirit of truth, which teaches men to be of one beart, and of one mind, and makes them think and speak the same, is at a very low ebb in the religious world; and that the prayer which I ought continually to offer is, O Lord, baptize christians with the fpirit of truth and the fire of love. Thy kingdom come! Bring thy church out of the wilderness of error and fin, into the kingdom of righteoufnefs, peace and joy in the Holy Ghoft.-As a member of the church of England, I have learned to be pleafed with our holy Mother for giving us floods of pure morality to wash away the few remaining Calvinian freckles still perceptible upon her face.-As a chriftian, I hope I have learned in fome degree to exercife that charity, which teaches us boldly to oppofe a dangerous error without ceafing to honour and. love its abettors, fo far as they refemble our Lord; and enables us to use an irony with St. Paul and Jefus Chrift, not as an enemy ufes a dagger, but as a furgeon uses a lancet or a caustic : And lastly, as a Writer I have learned to feel the truth of Solomon's observation, Of making many books there is no end, and much fludy is a wearine (s of the flesh : Let us bear the conclusion of the whole matter : F car God and keep. bis commandments: for this is the whole duty of man, and the fum of the anti-folifidian truth, which I endeavour to vindicate.

I do not fay that I have learned any of thefe leftons as I should have done; but I hope I have learned to much of them as to fay, that in thefe sefpects my controverfial toil has not been altogether in vain in the Lord. And now, Reader, let me intreat thee to pray, that if I am spared to vindicate more fully what appears to us the fcriptural doctrine of grace, I may be so helped by the Father of lights and the God of love, as to speak the pure truth in. perfect love, and never more drop a needlefily-fevere expression expression. Some fuch have escaped me before I was aware. In endeavouring to render my ftyle nervous, I have fometimes inadvertently rendered it provoking. Instead of faying that the doctrines of grace, (fo called) represent God as " abjulately graceles," towards inyriads of " reprobated culprits," I would now fay, that, upon the principles of my opponents, God appears "devoid of grace" towards those whom he has abfolutely " retrohated ' from The thought is the fame, I grant; all eternity. but the exprellions are lefs grating and more decent. This propriety of language I labour after, as well as after more meeknels of wildom. The Lord help me and my antagonists to keep our garments clean ! Controvertifts cught to be cloathed with an ardent flaming love for truth, and a candid humble regard for their neighbour. May no root of prejudice flain that flaming love! no bigo ry fpot that candid regard ! no matice rend our feamlets garments ! And, if they are ever roll'd in blood, may it be only in the blood of aur common enemies, deitructive Eryor, and the man of fin !
