My LORD, States

Am fo defirous, to express my Thankfulness to your Lordship, as for all the reft, so especially, for the last Favour You have done me, in contributing so freely to the giving me some ease from that burden which grew too heavy for me; that I make bold to prefix Your Lordship's Name to this Book of a great Man in another Nation; which I have Translated, and will live, I be-A 3 lieve, as long as Learning and Religion shall last among us.

Whereby your Lordship will fee that I have only exchanged, not given over my Labours; and that I Intend not to be less diligent in my station, than when I preached more; but rather fludy industriously to ferve the publick good some other way.

Which that I might promote, I have augmented this Work of Grotins, by the Addition of another Book: not equal indeed in ftrength of realoning, and variety of reading, to the foregoing; but in brevity and perspicuity, I hope, nothing inferiour; And, being a building relying, in great part, upon his Foundations, will stand as firm and unshaken, as those which excell it in beauty and neatness of contrivance.

Such as it is, I humbly prefent it to your Lordship; and praying God that the whole Work may have fome effect for the reclaiming those that are irreligious; or the fetling those who are wavering and doubtful; and the exciting us all to hold fast the Truth, as it is in the Lord Jefus, I remain,

OF THE AUTHOR, AND OF This WORK.

HE Name of this Author bath been so illustrious in these Western parts of the World, that as there are few persons who read Books to whom it is not known; so there needs no more to recommend this Work, and procure it entertainment, with all those that have beard of him. In which he hath faithfully laid out those great Talents of reason and learning, wherewith God blessed him above most other Men, in the defence of his most holy Religion. Which

Which he hath ferved very much in other works of his; but in none more than this: becaufe it is of fuch general ufe, and fo fatisfactory, that it may alone merit those titles of honour, which the Men of learning have bestow'd on him; though they be as high, as well can be devised.

There is nothing more ordinary in our Selden, than vir Maximus, vir fummus, the greateft, the chief of Men; when he fpeaks of Grotius. Upon whom Salmafius bestows the Title of Exymptic, most excellent; and as if he were in a rapture when he thought of him, cries out, & Saupearwirer, O most admirable, or wonderful, and supereminentissine, most supereminent Grotius! to whom he wished much rather to be like, than to be the most eminent person, for riches and honour, in the whole World. I shall only add the charaster which Baudius gave of him very early, 1612. in a Scazon he made upon him; where he thus admires him :

Vir magne, vir mirande, vir fine exemplo.

In English.

O thou great Man, thou wonderful Man, A Man without Example.

Yet as great a Man as he was, he fell into difgrace in his own Country, and was thrown into Prison

Prison (every body knows) in the Castle of Lupstein. In which strict confinement he meditated many profitableWorks, especially in things Sacred. For, during his long Imprisonment, he found by a happy experience (as he writes to Barlæus a great while after) there was a wonderful power in the holy Doctrines to fupport the mind, and to keep it erect an gainst all calamities. And therefore for his own solace, in the first place, (as he tells another Friend) be set himself to write this little Book : which he intimates both in the beginning and in the conclusion of it, was then composed, or rather hastily put together, when his Mind was more free than his Body. And therefore (when after several Editions he set it forth with Annotations, 1640.) he calls it in an Epistle to Sarravius, Partum doloris quondam mei, &c. The child of my grief in time past; now a monument of my Thankfgiving to God. And as it was written originally in his own Language; so it was in Verse; that it might be more popular, and more eafily committed to memory, by the rudest people : Juch as Mariners, for whom he chiefly intended it. He tells us as much in the Preface; but we may learn it more fully out of a Letter to him on this subject, from * Episcopius. Who fays, that * Inter Epift. Przft. vir. p. the oftner he read over those 630. Rythmes, the more he was rapt both into love, and admiration of them. There being nothing in them which was not most neceffary to be known; and was able to incline. the hardest heart to embrace this holy Religion. For it was hard to determine, he fays, whether the Majesty of the things, or the clearnels and fweetnels of the expressions were most to be commended : the Majesty of the matter not at all hindring the clearness of the Verse, nor its being tyed to Verse, at all diluting or enervating the Majesty of the Such a strife there was between these matter. two, with equal success; that it became a question, whether it was more divine to be able to have a solid and distinct conception in bis mind of things so difficult and sublime; or having conceived them, to cloath them in such comely and perspicuous words; that at the first glance every Reader understood his great sense, though bound up and fettered within the laws of Verse.

Which way I suppose be chose, because it was the ancient manner of delivering the most useful things; as be himself observes in his Prolegomena to Stobæus his Florilegium; Which was written not long after this Book. Where, as a proof of it, he alledges that of Homer; wha says, Clytemnestra did not incline to vice, till she had lost him, that was wont to fing to her. For precepts of Wisdom so taught are exceeding charming to the minds of Touth; being

ing not only more eafily imprinted on the memory, but touching the affections more powerfully, and to the very quick, than when otherwise (poken at large. And therefore the publick Laws were in the most ancient times thus written, as Aristotle informs us : and that true Religion might be more eafily convey'd into Peoples minds, and fixed there, Apollinarius translated all the Books of Moses (as Sozomen tells us, L. vi. C. 18.) and the rest of the History of the Bible, as far as the reign of Saul, into Heraick verse; in imitation of Homer's Poems. Suidas says, he put the whole Old Testament into such Verse; and it is not improbable, for what he did upon the Pfalms is still remaining.

If it were my present business, I could trace this way of Instruction down to our own times; and through our own Nation : in which it hath been very effectual, as the story of Aldelmus sufficiently informs us. Who first brought in the composition of Latin verse among the English, a little before Edward the Confessaria time; and by his excellent faculty in singing, wrought such wonderful effects upon the People, for the civilizing of their manners, and for their instruction in the duties of Religion ; that Lanfrank by his own Authority thought good to make him a Saint.

The

The very same charms Grotius hoped would have the fame effect upon the rude Seamen of his Country: into whom he defired by his Rythmes, not only to instill a Sense of piety; but to enable them to convey it to other Nations, with whom they traded. And it seems this work was so much famed, that it moved the curiofity of a great man in France (into which Grotius went after his wonderful escape, 1621. out of that Prison or rather Sepulchre, as he calls it in a Letter to a Friend, wherein it was first projected) to ask him very often, what the contents of that Book were, which he had written in Dutch, upon this subject of Religion. Whom he satisfied, by translating the sense of it into the Latin Tongue, in the Tear 1628 and addressing it unto that excellent Perfon, who made the inquiry, viz. Hieronymus Bignonius. Who together with Grotius and Salmasius, the famous Cardinal Richlieu (a " notable Judge of Wits) was wont Epift.Cl.sar. to fay*, were the only Perfons of ravii, p. 146. that Age, whom he lookt upon as urrived to the highest pitch of Learning. In which Translation, he tells Sarravius, in a Letter to him that Tear, he should find, if nothing elfe, that he had at least endeavoured brevity with perfpicuity. Which made it fo acceptable everywhere, though no longer in Verse, but now in Prose, that in the Tear, 1632. I find (he tells Cordesius another Learned M.in fo many, it seems, as some defired; for there were those who wished he would have answered a Book of Bodin's, which seemed to impugn it. This he thought a needless pains, for whatsoever it is, saith he (in a Letter to the same person*) that seems ^{* 1b, pag. 407.} to shake the foundations I have laid (upon which the Christian Faith relies) I have already obviated it, as far as is necessary to person a Reader that is not pertinacious. As for those Opinions which are commonly received in Christianity, but without the exact knowledge of which, we may be Christians; they do not belong to my Argument.

In the fame Iear alfo (1632) I find it Translated bere into the English Language. Which he himsfelf afterwards takes notice of, in a Letter to Gerard Vossius, 1638.*. Where he tells him, *Inter Epita that there were (befide the Englifh) two High Dutch Tranflations of this Book; one French; and that the English Embassfadour's Chaplain was turning it into Greek; and the Romanists rhemselves into the Persian Tongue: that by God's bleffing it might convert the Mahometans.

None of these could see any Socialianism, (or other dangerous herefie) in it; which some of the the duller fort of learned Men, were forward to charge it withal : because he doth not directly prove in this Book the Doctrine of the bleffed Trinity. Of which he gives this account in the forenamed Letter; "That he beard a great " man (who was Franc. Junius, as I take it,) " condemn du Plessis, and others for endeavour. " ing to prove that Mystery by reasons fetche " from Nature, and by Platonical Testimo-" nies (sometimes not very pertinent) which " ought not to come into a Disputation with "Atheists, Pagans, Jews, and Mahome: " tans : who must all be first drawn to believe " the Holy Scriptures ; that from thence they " may learn fuch things as cannot be known, " but by Divine Revelation.

This was the Reafon he medled not with the Doctrine of the Trinity directly : But if any body doubted of his Orthodoxy in this Point, They might fee (he tells him in another Letter) what his Opinion was, in his Poems then newly come¹ forth; and the larger explication of it he referved to bis Notes.

And for the same cause he did not distinctly treat of some other things; particularly about the Divinity of our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Satisfaction: for which omission this Book was blamed, as Sarravius writes to him, by some who had nothing else to do, but to find fault fault with the labours of others. To which Grotius returned fuch an Answer, as not only gave him, he tells us, most full fatisfaction, in those two Points; but enabled him to filence those accusers. He doth not intimate indeed what that reply was; but as to the former Point it is apparent from bis Annotations that he believed our Saviour to be indeed GOD of GOD. And that passage in the conclusion of the xxi Section of the fifth Book, concerning the Messias being called in the Holy Scriptures by the Name of GOD and LORD, I should have translated thus-The Mesfias is called by that August Name of GOD JEHOVAH, and alfo of LORD, viz. ELOHIM and ADONAI. For so he explains himself, I have fince taken notice, in his Annotations; and adds this observation; that the Talmud in Taanith fays, that when the time shall come, spoken of xxv. Ifa. 8, 9. (i.e. of the Meffiah) JEHOVAH fhall be shewn, as we say, with the singer : that is, Men shall be able to point others to him, saying, Lo there is JEHOVAH.

And as for the other thing, it is possible his Answer might be to the same purpose with what he writ to * Vossius. In * Epift. Præft. which he tells him, that if any Viror. p. 747. one defired to know (as he had already fignified in a Letter, to one that faid he ke was accused of Socialianism) what his opinion was in the business of Christ's fatusfa-Stian, even fince Crellius had written against him: it would appear plainly enough out of his Translation of the LIII. of Isaiah, in his Disputation against the Jews: (which you may find here in the V. Book, Section 19.) and from beace also, that in the Conclusion of this Work of the Truth of Christian Religion, be down not interpret these words, Heb. I.I 3. na Sac souis moundarly Q, in the Prefent Tense, making a purgation, or explating our fins, as Socinus doth; but in the paft time, expiatis peccatis nostris, having expiated, or purged away our fins. How they come to be otherwise translated in his Annotations on that place, put forth fince his death, I can give no account.

And in like manner, I fuppefe, he fatisfied another doubt about a paffage in this Book, which Sarravius defired him to refolve; though I cannot find his Anfwer to it : For he gives a punctual Anfwer afterward to a Questian propounded by a Minister of Rouen; who askt him, where he had that of Rabbi Nechumias, who made that publick Declaration (mentioned in the Fifth Book, Sect. 14.) concerning the appearing of Christ, 50 Tears before our Saviour; to this effect : That the time which Daniel had prefixed for the coming coming of the Meffiah, could not be prolonged above those Fifty Years. Which he tells Sarravius, * is to be found in the Talmud, in the Title Sarrav. p. 52. Sanhedrin (as he remembred;) and he thought also in Abenada upon Daniel.

This was in the Year 1640. when he first put out this Book with Annotations; containing the Testimonies of those Authors, in words at length; whom he had alledged: but had forgotten, it seems, to set down where he had this passage of Rabbi Nechumias. Nor is it now to be found among the Annotations; and therefore they that next Print the Book fo inlarged, will do well to supply it from hence, out of Sarravius; who was the first Person * to whom he made a present of * Epift.ad Galit after it came out, with the los, p. 460. Addition of Testimonies ; defiring to be admonified by him, if, in the midfl of much bufine's, any thing had escaped him, which was less exactly spoken; while he studied to serve the Christian cause.

To which he replies immediately, "That " as he could not but aftern it a very great ho-" nour to be acknowledged and beloved by the "Coryphæus of all Learning, both Sacred " and Profane; so he efformed this as a Gol-" den Book, wherein Grotius had joined a 2 Learning

And not long after he propounded some doubts, according to his own defire ; and mentioned some exceptions, (as was noted before) which some, who had no good will to him, took at this Golden Book, as he again calls it : And, notwithstanding the harsh censures of fome Learned Men, this excellent Person still perfisted in his high esteem of the worth of this Author; and believed all unprejudiced Men would ever look upon him with great Veneration. So he tells Salmafius five * Epift.Claud. Tears after *, (1645.) Whe-Sarrav. p.146. ther they will or no, Grotius will alway be accounted a great Man by you and me, and by all that love Equity and Goodness; for he is full of envy, who denies due praises to such an Hero. And a little while after, hearing of the news of his death, he most fadly * Ibid. p. 171. bewails it, * as the extinction of Ω.

of the bright Star of that Age; whose Name would be great as long as either Books or Learning were in honour. And while he had breath, he saith, he would glory in this, that he once had familiar acquaintance with a Man, who was re & nomine Magnus; no less great in Deed, than his Name imported.

This affection he seems to have carried with him, to his Grave; and honoured his Memory at such a rate, that in the Tear 1648. he still says, he was proud of the Friendship of that Man; by whom to have been known, was glorious; and who would be reverenced in all future Ages. In conclusion, he calls bim that Bleffed Soul; even after he himself had pronounced this sentence against Grotius , that he fa- Ibid. p. 196. voured the Papists; and not only yielded too much to them in his later Writings, but expressed too much disaffection to the Reformed in those Countries. All this he candidly passed over with this Censure; * He is the best * Ibid. p. 146. Man, who hath fewest faults; for there is no body to be found without fome.

And the same favourable judgment, I suppose, all serious and confidering Men will pass a 3 upon upon him now; and not be hindred by any prejudices, which may have been taken up against him among our selves, from reaping that benefit which they may receive by reading this excellent Book. Which I present again to the view of the English World, and have, in a manner, made a new Translation of it; the former, which came out near Fifty Tears ago, being so defective, that there were few Paragraphs in it, which stood not in need of some amendment; and in a great number, the sence was quite mistaken.

Who the Translator was, I am ignorant; but it is certain, he either did not understand the Latin Tongue, or did not attend to what he was about; as appears by innumerable Instances: But one may suffice, in the Third Book, Sect. 3. where he translates altera Petri, the one Epistle of Peter. Besides, there is plain Arianism in his Translation, (Book V. Sect. 21.) for he says, the Son was not uncreate, as the Father is; when in Grotius the words are, the Son is not ingenitus, unbegotten, as the Father is.

Yet where the Translation was passable, I have let it go as it was; that I might not seem to be too curious a Censurer of other Mens labours. And I have added such passages as were not there; the Book it self having ving been inlarged by Grotius, fince that old English Translation. I know not how neceffary it might be at that time, when it was first put into our Language; but now I think nothing can be more: And to make it of larger nfe, I have added also a Seventh Book of my own; in which, out of these Principles chiefly which Grotius builds upon in his Six Books, I have shewn that Christian Religion hash suffered very much by the Church of Rome; and that we need not go thither to be affured of the Truth of that Religion; but shall be better informed in our awn Church, by the Holy Scriptures, and such Works as thefe.

I have not quoted all my Authors, no more than Grotius did in the fuff Editions of his Book : And it would have made the Work alfo too long (I thought) to translate his. Testimonies, and add the like of my own. Nor would it have been so useful to common Readers; who do but perplex themselves in abundance of Quotations, and must, after all, believe that we report them truly; and therefore may as well believe us when we say, that they are ready at hand to attest every thing which is here affirmed from their Authority.

Since the finishing of this little Labour, I was informed by a Friend, that Mr. Clement Barksdale had translated part of this Work a 4 into into English; and upon Search, I found the three first Books, among some other Discourses, Printed 1669. And I am told further by another Friend, that he bath lately added (though I have not seen it) the three last Books. Which if I had known sooner, it might have saved me, I believe, most, if not all, of the pains I have taken. But I was perfectly ignorant of it; as I perceive he was of any former Translation, before his. For in that Edition of his Discourses, where he hath added the Third Book of this. Work; concerning the Authority of the Scriptures; he faith, it had not been till then in English.

But it will do no burt, though the same good thing he reached out to us by more hands than one: And so I leave it to God's Bleffing, upon the Reader's serious perusal:

To the HONOURABLE Hieronymus Bignonius,

THE

IN THE

Supreme Court of PARIS.

SIR,

OU are wont very often to ask me, who am fensible how highly you have deferved of your Country, of Learning, and (if you will permit me to add that) of me also, what the Argument of those Books is, which I wrote in my own Country Language, in the behalf of Christian Religion. Nor do I wonder you should make such a Question; for you who have read, and that with so great judgment, all that is worth the reading, cannot be ignorant what pains bath been already taken in the

this matter; by Raymundus Sebundus, with Philosophical subtility; by Ludovicus Vives, with variety of Dialogues; but especially by your Mornay, with no less Learning than Eloquence. For which cause it may seem more prostable to translate some of them into the Vulgar Tongue, than to begin a new Work upon this Subject.

But what other Men will judge of this matter I know not; my hope is, that before you, Sir, who are fo fair and eafie a Judge, I may be absolved if I say, that having read not only those Authors, but what the Jews have written for the old Judaical, and Christians for our Religion, I thought good alfo to use pry own judgment, such as it is; and to allow that freedom to my mind, which, when I wrote it, was denied to my body : For I thought that Truth was not to be contended for, but only with truth; and with fuch truth alfo as I approved in my own mind; knowing it would be but a vain labour to go about to persuade others of that which I had not first persuaded my felf to believe.

Omitting therefore such Arguments as feemed to me to have little weight in them, and the Authority of such Books as I either knew or suspected to be counterfeit, I selected those, both out of the ancient and modern times, which appeared to me to have the greatest force in them. And what things I fully asserted to Hieronymus Bignonius.

affented unto, those I both cast into an orderly method, and expressed in as popular a manner as I could invent; and likewise included in Verse, that they might be the better committed to memory.

For my intention was to do fome good fervice hereby to all my Country men, especially to Sea faring Men; that in their long Voyages, wherein they have nothing to do, they might lay out their time, and employ it; rather than, as too many do, lose and mis-spend it.

Wherefore, taking my rife from the commendation of our Nation, which for diligent skill in Navigation much excels the rest, I stirred them up to use this Art as a Divine benefit; not merely for their own gain, but for the propagation of the true, that is, the Christian Religion : For they would neither want matter for such endeavours, when in their long Voyages they commonly met either Pagans, as in China and Guinea; or with Mahometans, as under the Turkish Empire, the Persian, and the Africans; or with Jews, who, as they are now professed enemies of Christians, so are dispersed through the greatest part of the World : And there would always be store of impious men, who are ready, upon occasion, to vent the poyson which for fear they keep concealed. Against which mischiefs I wilhed that our Country-men might be sufficiently armed; and that they who are more ingenious ingenions than others, would use their utmost endeavours to confute Errours; and the rest would, at least, be so cautions, as not to be overcome by them.

And that I might shew Religion is no frivolous thing, I begin, in the first Book, at the ground or foundation thereof; which is, that there is a God. Now that I attempt to prove aster this manner.

Γhe

The FIRST Book OFTHE TRUTHE OF Chriftian Religion.

SECT. I.

That there is a GOD.

H A T there are fome things which had a beginning, is clear to common fenfe, ^a and by the confession of all : Howbeit, those things were not caufes to themfelves of their own being.

For that which is not, cannot produce any thing, neither had it power to be before it was; therefore it follows, that the faid things had their beginning from fome other thing, different from themfelves: Which may be averred, not only of fuch things as now we fee, or ever have beheld; but of fuch alfo as gave original unto thefe; and fo upward, until we come to fome prime gaufe, which never began to be, and which (as

(as we fay) hath its existence by neceffity, and not after any contingent manner : And this, whatever it be, (whereof by and by we shall speak) is that which is meant by Divine Power, or Godhead.

Another reason to prove that there is some fuch Divine Majesty, is taken from the most manifest consent of all Nations; such I mean as have not utterly loft the light of reafon and good manners, and become altogether wild and favage. For fince those things, which proceed from Man's pleasure and appointment, are neither the same among all Men, and are often fubject to change; and yet there is no place where this notion is not found, and it is not changed by the alterations of times, (as Aristotle himfelf notes, who was not over-credulous in fuch matters) we must affign fome caufe of it, that extends it felf to all Mankind : Which can be no other than either an Oracle of God himfelf, or a Tradition derived from the first Parents of Mankind. The former of which, if we admit, the thing in question is granted : And if we affirm the latter, there can no good reafon be given, why we should believe those first Parents did deliver a falshood to all their Posterity, in a matter of the greatest moment.

Moreover, whether we confider those parts of the World which were anciently known, or those that are lately found out, wherefoever there is (as we have faid) any relicks of humanity, there certainly is this truth acknowledged, as well by fuch Heathens as have any ingenuity and wisdom, as also by those that are of a more dull and stupid disposition :

disposition : The former whereof questionless could not all be deceived; neither is it likely that these later fo filly and fimple should any way devife how to deceive one another.

Neither let any Man here object, that there have been fome in many Ages, who have either believed there is no God; or professed they did not believe it : For both the small number of them, and the universal rejection of their opinion, as foon as their Arguments were underftood, make it appear, that it did not proceed from the use of right reason, which is common to all Men; but either from the Affectation of novelty (fuch as was in him that would needs maintain the Snow to be black) or from a corrupt mind, like as Meats to a diftempered Palate, tafte quite otherwife than indeed they are. Effectially fince both Hiftory and other Writings teach us, that the honefter any man was, the more diligently did he preferve the knowledge of God. And further, that this departure from so anciently received opinion, chiefly proceeds from the naughty disposition of those, whose interest it is that there should be no God; that is, no Judge of humane actions, appears even from hence : that whatfoever they put in the room thereof : whether a fucceffion of feveral kinds of things without any beginning; or a concourse of atomes; or any thing elfe whatfoever; it hath not lefs, if not greater, difficulties, nor is at all more credible (as is manifest to any Man, that vouchfafes an ordinary attention to the matter) than that opinion which is already received.

As for that which fome pretend, that they cannot believe there is a God, because they cannot fee fee him; if they fee any thing, they cannot but fee how unworthy this thought is of a Man, who doth but believe that he hath a mind, which he never faw, no more than he doth the Effence of God. Nor becaufe we cannot comprehend the Nature of God by our understanding, ought we therefore to deny there is any fuch Nature? For this is proper to every inferiour Creature, not to be able to comprehend those Beings which are fuperiour, and more excellent than it felf. The Beasts cannot conceive what Man is, much lefs can they know after what manner Men inftitute and govern Common-wealths, measure the Stars, and fail upon the Sea; for all these things are out of their reach. From which very thing, Man, who is raifed, and that not of himfelf, by the nobility of his nature, above the Beasts, ought to inferr; That that Being, by whom he is made fuperiour to Beasts, is no less superiour to him, than he himfelf to the Beafts; and that therefore there is fome Nature, which, as far more excellent, transcends his comprehension.

. The Truth of

SECT. II.

That there is but One GOD.

W E having evinced that there is a God, it follows that we speak of his Attributes. The first whereof is this, that There are not more Gods, but one God. This is gathered from hence, that God (as was said before) is what He is necessarily, and of Himself. Now what so what see is necessarily, or of it felf, is considered not in its general general notion, but as actually in being. Now things actually in being are particular. But if you fuppofe more Gods, you cannot find a reafon in each of them, why they fhould neceffarily be; nor why two rather than three, or ten rather than five fhould be believed.

Besides, the multiplication of those particular things that are of the same nature, proceeds from the exuberancy and fruitfulness of the causes whence such things more or less are generated: but of God there is neither beginning nor any cause.

Furthermore, in all particular things, there are certain, special, and particular properties, whereby the fame things are feverally diftinguished : now to make fuch a distinction in God, is altogether needless, fince that he is most necessary and simple by nature. Neither can any Man perceive any figns or tokens of the plurality of Gods. For this universal Sphere or circumference which we behold, makes up but one compleat World, wherein there is one most beautiful and glorious Sun : Likewife in every Man, the little World, there is but one special governing part, to wit, his foul or mind. Befides, if we should suppose two Gods, or more, freely acting and willing, what they please, they might will contrary things; and then one of them might be hindred by the other, from effecting what he had a mind to have done. But to fay that God can be hindred in what He defigns, is unworthy of his Majefty.

SECT. III.

That all Perfection is in GOD.

Hat we may know the rest of God's Attributes, let it be confidered ; that whatfoever is wont to be underftood by the Name of Perfection (which word we must be content to use, fince our Language furnishes us with no better, to express the Greek Teresbrus) is in God, may be thus proved. What perfection foever there is in things, it either had a beginning; or had no beginning. That which had no beginning, is the perfection of God : and that which had a beginning, of necessity must have fome-thing, that gave it fuch beginning. And fince nothing among all the things that have a being, is made of nothing; it follows that those perfections which appear to be in any effects were the reason why the cause thereof could produce any thing accordingly; and confequently are all in the first cause. Neither must it be here imagined, that the first cause can afterward be deprived of its perfection; either by fome other thing different from it felf, because that which is eternal hath no dependance upon any other thing, neither can be liable and fubject unto their actions; or of it self, because every Nature desires its own perfection.

Book I.

Christian Religion.

SECT. IV.

GOD is infinite.

ND we may add further, that these perfections which are in God, are in him after an eminent and infinite manner; for the nature of every thing is finite and limited, either for that the caufe whence it proceeded hath communicated fuch a measure or degree of existence, and no more thereunto, or for that the fame nature was not capable of any further perfection; Now there is no nature that doth communicate any thing of its own unto God, neither is he capable of ought that any other thing can impart; being (as before we faid) altogether absolute, and neceffary of himfelf.

SECT. V.

That GOD is eternal, omnipotent, omniscient, and absolutely good.

Gain, forafmuch as all things that have life, A are faid to be more perfect than those without life; and those which have power of acting, than those which want it/; and those endued with understanding fuperiour to fuch creatures as lack it; and those which are good, better than those that come short in goodness; it followeth from that which hath been spoken, that all those attributes are in God, and that after an infinit e finite manner. Therefore is he infinite in life, that is, eternal; infinite in power, that is, omnipotent; So likewife is he omniscient, and altogether good without any exception.

SECT VI.

That GOD is the Author and Caufe of all things.

FUrthermore, it follows from that which hath been fpoken, that what things foever fubfift, the fame have the original of their being from God: for we have proved, that that which is neceffary of it felf, can be but one; whence we collect, that all other things befides this had their original from fomewhat different from themfelves.

Now fuch things as have their beginning from another, we have feen before how that either in themfelves, or in their caufes, they proceeded from him which had no beginning, that is, from God.

Neither is this manifest by reason only, but also after some fort by very sense: for if we confider the wonderful frame and fashion of Man's body, both within and without, and how that each part and parcel thereof hath its proper use without the study or industry of his Parents, and yet with fuch art that the most accomplished Philosophers and Physicians could never sufficiently admire it; this verily shews the Author of Nature to be a most excellent Mind: concerning which matter Gulen hath written well; especially where he speaks of the use of the eye, and of the stand.

hand. Yea more, the very bodies of mute beafts do testifie the same: for their parts are not framed and composed by the power and vertue of the matter whereof they confift, but by fome fuperiour and higher caufe, definiting them to a certain end.

Neither is this plain by man and beasts alone, but also by plants and herbs, as hath accurately been observed by some Philosophers. This further is excellently noted by Strabe, concerning the fituation of the waters, which, if we confider the quality of their matter, ought to be placed in the middle between the earth and the air, whereas they are now included and difperfed within the earth, to the end they might be no hinderance, either to the fruitfulness of the ground, or to the life of Man. Now to propose that, or any other end, to any action, is the peculiar property of an understanding nature. Neither are all things only ordained for their peculiar ends, but alfo for the good and benefit of the whole Univer/e, as appears particularly in the water but now mentioned, which against its own proper nature is moved upward, left by the interpolition of a vacuity there should be a gap in the Univerfe: which is fo framed, that by the continued cohefion of its parts, it fuftains and upholds it felf. Now it cannot possibly be, that this common end should be thus intended, together with an inclination in things thereunto, but by the power and purpose of some intelligent nature, whereunto the whole Universe is in subjection. Moreover amongst the Beasts there are certain. actions obferved to be fo regular and orderly. done, that it is manifest enough they proceed from some kind of reason; as is plain in Pismires and B 4 and efpecially in Bees, and likewife in other creatures, which before they make any trial, do naturally efchew fuch things as are hurtful, and feek after fuch things as are profitable for them. Now that this inflinct or inclination of finding and judging things, is not in them by their own power, it is clear; for that they do always operate after the fame manner, neither have they any vertue or efficacy at all to the doing other things which are no more weighty : wherefore they must needs receive their power from fome reafonable external Agent, which directs them or imprints in them fuch efficacy as they have, and this reafonable and intelligent Agent, is no other than God himfelf.

In the next place confider we the Stars of Heaven, and amongft the reft, as most eminent, the Sun and the Moon, both which for the making the earth fruitful, and preferving living Creatures in their health and vigour, do fo feafonably-perform their course of motion, that a better cannot be devised. For when otherwise their motion through the Æquator had been much more fimple, we fee that they have another Motion by an oblique Circle, to the end, the benefit of their favourable aspects might be communicated to more parts of the Earth.

Now as the Earth is ordained for the use and benefit of living Creatures, so are all terrestrial things appointed chiefly for the service of Man, who by his wit and reason, can subdue the most furious creature among them; whence the very Stoicks did collect, that the World was made for Man's fake.

Howbeit, fince it exceeds the fphere of humane power, to bring the heavenly bodies in fubjection jection to him; neither is it to be imagined that they will ever fubmit themfelves to man of their own accord; it follows therefore that there is fome superiour mind or spirit, by whole fole appointment those fair and glorious bodies do perpetual fervice unto man, though he be placed far below them; which same mind is no other than the framer of the Stars, even the Maker of the whole World. Also the motions of these Stars which are faid to be Excentrical and Epicyclical (i.e. in a Circle within the Orb of another Star) do plainly fhew, not the power of matter, but the appointment of a free Agent. The fame do the Politions of the Stars tellifie. fome in this part, others in the other art of Heaven : together with the fo unequal form of the Earth, and of the Seas. Nor can we referr it to any thing elfe, that the Stars move this, rather than another way. The most perfect form also the parts thereof, fhut up as it were in the bosom of the heavens, and difposed with a marvellous order, do all expreshy declare, that they were not tumbled together, or conjoined as they are and figure of the World, viz. roundnefs; as also by chance, but wifely ordained by fuch an understanding as is endued with fuper-eminent excellency. For what Ninny is there fo fottish, as to expect any thing fo accurate and exact from chance? He might as well believe that Stones and Timber got cafually together, and put themfelves into the form of a House : or that out of Letters shuffled carelesly as it happened, there came forth an excellent Poem. A thing fo unlikely, that even a few Geometrical figures espied on the Sea-shore, gave the beholder just ground to argue, that fome man had been there; it being evident enough Digitized by Google enough that fuch things could not proceed from meer chance.

Furthermore, that Mankind was not from all Eternity, but at a certain time had a common beginning, may be manifested among other things from the progress of Arts and Sciences; yea, by the very ground whereupon we tread, which was anciently rude and untill'd, but afterward became posseffed with Inhabitants ; which alfo the Language spoken in Islands, derived from adjacent Countries, doth witnefs. The fame is apparent by certain ordinances, fo generally received amongst Men, that the institution thereof may not be thought to have proceeded fo much from the institute of nature, or evident deductions of reafon, as from perpetual and constant tradition, fcarce interrupted in a few places, either by the malice or mifery of Man : fuch was that of killing Beasts in Sacrifice, used in former times; and fuch also are now the modesty and shamesac'dnefs about venereal things, the folemnities of Marriages, and the abhorrence of all inceftuous Embraces.

SECT. VII.

Answer to that Objection concerning the cause of Evil.

N Either ought we to doubt of that which hath been fpoken, becaufe we fee many evil things come to pafs; the fource and caufe whereof cannot be afcribed unto God, who (as before hath been fnewn) is good, after the most perfect perfect and absolute degree of Goodnefs. For when we faid that God was the author and caufe of all things, we added withal, that he was the caufe of fuch things as really do fubfift : And no abfurdity (that I fee) will follow, if we affirm, that those things which have true and real existence. are the causes of some certain accidents as namely of actions, or the like. The Almighty (we know) created both Man, and those more fublime Minds, the Angels, endued with liberty of action ; which liberty in it felf is not finful, yet by its power fome fins may be committed. Now to make God the author of these evils, which are morally evil, is no better than blasphemy : howbeit there are other kind of evils, fo called, becaufe they afflict fome perfon with grief or lofs; and thefe we may affirm to be inflicted by God for the reformation and amendment of fome Sinner, or for punishment answerable to an offence, which to fay is no impiety, fince that fuch evils have nothing in them contrary to goodness, but rather they proceed from goodnefs it felf ; like a bitter potion from a good Phylician.

SECT. VIII.

Against the Opinian of two Principles or Causes of things.

Here, by the way, it may be noted, that the opinion of those Men is to be abandoned and avoided, which make two efficient causes, the one good, and the other evil: for from two Principles opposite to each other, there may follow the the ruine and deftruction, but in no wife a well ordered composition of things. Neither is this to pass for truth, to wit, that as there is fomething good of it felf, fo likewife there must needs be fomething absolutely evil in it felf; feeing that evil is a certain defect, which cannot be but in a thing that hath existence, which very having of existence, or being is good.

SECT. IX.

That GOD doth govern the whole World.

A Oreover that this whole Universe is go-M verned by the providence of God, is evident, for that not only men, which have right reason and understanding, but also the fowls, and beafts both wild and tame, which have in them fome thing correspondent to reason, do bear a kind of providence, or respectful care over the iffue which they bring forth. Which perfection. fince it is a part of goodness, must needs be attributed to God; and fo much the rather, because he is both omniscient and omnipotent, fo that he can no way be ignorant of fuch things as are done, or to be done; and can eafily direct and order the same as he pleafeth. To which also belongs that which we have fpoken before, concerning the moving of things contrary to their proper nature, to ferve an Universal end.

Tea, Sublunary things.

A ND that they are much out of the way, who fhut up this providence within the celeftial Orbs, and would have it defcend no lower than the Moon, is apparent; both from the reafon now mentioned, whole force extends to all created things; and alfo from hence, that the courfe of the Stars, as the best Philosophers acknowledge, and experience sufficiently demonstrates, are ordained for the nfe of Man. Now it stands but with equity that that Creature should be more regarded for whose sake another is ordained, than that which is appointed for anothers use.

Neither are they lefs erroneous that fay, this providence is extended unto universal things only, and not to particulars; for if they will have God to be ignorant of particular things as fome of them have professed, then verily God could not understand himself; neither should he be infinite in knowledge, as we have proved him before to be, if it be not extended unto every But then, if God do know these things, thing. why can he not also have care of them?especially fince that particulars, as they are particulars, are appointed for fome certain end, both fpecial. and general : And the common effences of things, which by the confession of the faid Authors are preferved by God, cannot fubfift but in their fingulars; So that if these singulars, being forsaken by Divine Providence, may perifh, then may the whole kindslikewife.

SECT. XI.

This is further proved by the preservation of Empires.

Nother forcible Argument of Divine Providence, particularly over humane affairs, both Philosophers and Historians acknowledge in the preservation of Common-wealths : first in general, for that wherefoever the courfe and order of ruling and obeying is once admitted, the fame always continues there : Then alfo, oftentimes in particular, it is evident by the long continuation of this or that very form of government thorow many Ages, as of a Monarchy with the Affyrians, Agyptians, and Franks; of an Arifocracy with the Venetians, and the like. For although Man's wildom and policy have fome ftroke in point of government; yet if we rightly confider the multitude of wicked men, and the harms that may proceed from without, and the changes that are naturally incident to humane affairs, it may feem impossible for any State fo long to fubfift, unlefs it were upheld by a constant particular care, and by the power of a Divine hand. Which is more evidently feen, when it pleafes God to change Empires, and translate them from one to another. For to those Instruments, whom he thinks good to use in that businefs, as a thing deftined by himfelf (fuppole Cyrus, Alexander, Cafar the Dictator, Cingi among the Tartars, Namcaa among the Chineses) all things what loever, even those which do not depend on humane Prudence, fucceed more profperoully.

fperoufly, beyond their own wifnes, that is fuitable to the ufual variety in humane cafualties. Which ftrange correfpondence, and combination, or confpiring, as we may call it, of events to a certain end, is a manifest token of a provident direction. Like as at Dice, if a Man now and then throw a lucky cast, which wins all, it may be no more than a chance : but if he throw the very fame an hundred times, there is no body, who will not conclude, that this proceeds from fome extraordinary Art.

SECT. XII.

And by Miracles.

Nother most certain proof of God's Provi-A dence, may be taken from those miracles and prophecies which are recorded in Hiltories : Where though many fabulous things be related in that kind, yet those that are testified by sufficient Witneffes living in the time when they came to pafs; fuch I mean as were defective neither injudgment nor in honefty, are not to be defpifed as altogether impoffible. For in as much as God is both omnipotent and omniscient, what can hinder him from fignifying what he knows, or what he pleafeth to do; and that even beyond the common course of nature, which being made and ordained by him, becomes fubject unto him by the title of Creation? Now if any do object that fuch things might have been done by fubordinate powers and minds inferiour to God; to them weanfwer, that fo much may be granted indeed :

indeed: but yet this makes way, that the fame may the more eafly be credited of God, who is to be thought either to work by the mediation of those Agents, or elfe out of his wifdom to permit them when they bring to pass any fuch thing. For in well ordered Kingdoms there is nothing done against the Statutes and common Laws, but by the arbitrament or permission of the Supreme Governours.

SECT. XIII.

Specially among the Jews whereunto credit may be given by reason of the long continuance of their Religion.

NOW that there have indeed been fome miracles feen, though the credit of other Histories should be questionable, yet it is ma-nifest enough in the Jewish Relgion: which albeit, it hath long been destitute of all humane helps, yea, exposed to contempt and fcorn ; yet for all that, hath still continued almost in all the Climates and parts of the World even unto this day; whereas all other Religions (faving the Christian, which is the perfection, as it were, of the Jewish) have either vanished, as foon as the Imperial Power and Authority was withdrawn whereby they were supported, as all the Paganish : or elfe are still perpetually upheld by the fame power and authority, as Mahumetanism. Now if it be demanded why the Jewish Religion hath taken such deep root in the hearts of the Hebrews, as that it cannot cannot thence be eradicated ? no better reafon can be given or conceived than this; namely, that those Jews that are now alive did from their Parents, as those Parents from their Progenitors, and fo upward, until the times of Mofes and Joshua, receive those Miracles mentioned in Scripture, by certain and constant Tradition, which miracles were done chiefly at the departing out of Agypt, and in their journey through the Wilderness, and entrance into the Land of Canaan, whereof their Ancestors were then Eyewitneffes. Nor is it at all credible, that it could otherwife have come to pafs, that a People who were fufficiently ftiff-necked, and of a ftubborn disposition, should take upon them a Law burdened with fo many Rites; or that wife Men, out of the many marks of Religion, which humane reason could have invented, should chuse Circumcifion; which could not be received without very great pain; nor retained without the derision of all strangers; and had nothing in it to recommend it, fave only this, that God was its Author.

SÈCT. XIV.

Alfo by the truth and antiquity of Mofes his Story.

Befides, The writings of Moles, wherein those miracles are recorded to posterity, do gain the greatest credit thereunto; not only because it was always a settled opinion, and constant report amongst the Hebrews, that this same Moles C was was commended by the Oracle of God to be a Leader of the People; but also because it is manifest enough, that he neither affected his own glory, nor defired their riches; forafmuch as himfelf reveals his own faults and delinquencies, which he might have concealed; and also he affigned the dignity of his Kingdom and Priesthood unto strangers, whence his own Posterity was brought to the common condition of Levites. By all which it appears, that he had no reafon to forge untruths: Neither doth he use any diffembling or alluring language, fuch as commonly colours over a lye; but he speaks after a plain, ingenuous manner, according to the quality of the thing he treats of.

Add hereunto the undoubted Antiquity of the Books of Moles, to which no other Writings are therein comparable: An argument whereof is, for that the Grecians (from whom all kinds of learning were derived to other Heathens) do confess they received their very Letters from others; which Letters of theirs have no other order, or name, or ancient form, than that of the Syriack or Hebrew Tongue: As also for that the most ancient Grecian Laws, whence the Romans collected theirs, had their Original from the Laws of Moles.

SECT. XV.

And by the Testimony of many Gentiles.

MOreover, belides these, there are many testimonies of such as were Aliens from the Jewish Religion, which declare that the most ancient reports which passed for truth among all Nations, were agreeable to what Moses hath related in his Writings. Thus what things he related concerning the beginning of the World 1 The fame are found also recorded in the most ancient Histories of the Phanicians, which are collected by Sancuniathon, and translated by Philo Biblins; and partly also found amongst the Indians and Agyptians. Hence it is that in Linus. Hesiod, and many of the Grecians, mention is made of a Chaos, which fome have intimated by the name of an Egg; also of the making of living Creatures, and last of all of Man according to a Divine Image; and of Man's dominion over other Creatures: All which may be read in fundry Authors, and at last in Ovid, who transcribed them That all things were out of the Greek Writers. made by the Word of God, was confessed even by Epicharmus, and the Platonicks ; and before them, by a most ancient Writer (not of those Hymns, which now go under that name, but) of those Verfes which Antiquity called Orphean Verfes;not because they had Orpheus for their Author, but because they fummarily comprised his Doctrine. Empedocles acknowledged that the Sun was not the primitive light, but a fit receptacle of light. Aratus and Catullus think that above the fphere C 2 or or orb of the Stars there is a Divine Habitation, wherein Homer imagined there was perpetual light.

That of all things, 'God was the most ancient, becaufe not begotten; the World most beautiful, because the work of GOD: and that darknefs was before the light, were all the doctrines of Thales, out of the ancient Learning : The last point whereof is found in Orpheus and Hefiod; whereupon the Gentiles, that are commonly fuperstitious in following old fashions and customs, do number their particular times by nights, not by days. It was the opinion of Athenagoras, that all things were ordered and difposed by the highest intelligence; of Aratus, that the Stars were made by God; and after the Grecians, of Virgil, that life was infused into things by the Spirit of God : and that Man was formed of Clay, is delivered by Hefiod, Homer, and Callimachus : Laftly, Maximus Tyrius affirms, that by the common confent of Nations, it is agreed, there is but one Supreme God, which is the caufe of all things. And the memory of the finishing the Creation in feven days space, was preferved, not only among the Greeks and Ital ans, by the honour they gave to the Seventh D.y. (as we learn out of Josephus, Philo, Tibullus, Clemens Alexandrinus, and Lucian) but among the Gauls and Indians, who all diftinguished their time, by Weeks, i. e. seven days; as we are taught by Philoftratus, Dion Caf-fius, Justin Martyr; and the most ancient Names of the Days of the Week.

Moreover, the Agyptians taught, that Man, at the beginning, led his life in all fimplicity, being naked in his body, and not ashamed: Whence came the Poets fiction of the golden age, which was famous even amongst the Indians, as Strabo relates. The History of Adam and Eve, the Tree, the Serpent, was extant, as Maimonides tells us, among the Idolatrous Indians, in his time: And that the fame is found among the Pagans of Pegu, and the Philippin Islands, People of the fame India; the name of Adam also among the Brachmans, and the account of 6000 Years being passed fince the World was made, among those of Siam; we have Witness of our own age which assure us.

And that the lives of thofe who fucceeded the first Men, were prolonged to near a Thousand Years, is reported by Berofus in his Chaldaicks, Manethos in his Ægypticks, Hieromus in his Phænician Records, Heftiaus, Hecataus, Hellanicus, in the account they have left of the Gracian affairs; and among the Poets, by Hefiod. Which is the lefs incredible, when we confider what is reported in the Histories of very many Nations, (particularly by Paufanias and Philoftratus among the Greeks, and Pliny among the Romans) that the Bodies of Men were anciently far larger than they are now; as was found upon the opening of fome of their Sepulchres.

Catullus alfo, after very many Greeks, reports, that heavenly visions appeared unto Men before fuch time as they, by the multitude and heinoufnefs of their crimes, did deprive themfelves of that facred acquaintance and familiarity with God, and his ministring Spirits. The wild life of the Gyants which Moles mentions, may be read almost every where in the Greek, and in fome Latin Authors. 'Tis to be noted of Noah's Flood, that in its history the memory of almost all Nations ends; even of fuch Nations as were un-C 3 known known till of late years : whereupon Varro called all the space before, the hid or unknown time. But those things we find wrapt up in the licentious Fables of the Poets, are truly, that is agreeable to Moses, delivered by most ancient Writers: Such are Berofus of the Chaldees, Abydenus of the Affyrians, who mentions the fending out of a Dove; as alfo Plutarch of the Grecians; and Lucian, who faith, that at Hieropolis in Syria, there is to be feen a most ancient History, both of Noah's Ark, and of those that were faved therein, both Men and Beafts. The fame History was extant also in Molo, and in Nicolaus Damascenus; the latter of which had also the name of the Ark : Which is found likewife in Deucalion's Hiftory in Apollodorus. To which we may add, that in feveral parts of America, as in Cuba, Mechoncana, Nicuraga, there hath been preferved the memory of the Flood; of the Creatures faved from perifhing in it; yea, of the Raven and the Dove; and the memory of the Flood it felf, even in that part now called the Golden Caftle, is witneffed by very many of the Spanish Nation.

In what part of the World Men lived before the Flood, that note in Pliny, of the building of Joppe, before the fame Flood doth teftifie. That the place whereon Noah's Ark relted after the Flood was in the Gordien Mountains, it is manifelt by the conftant remembrance thereof with the Armenians, from all Ages, until this time, Juphet the Father of the Europeans, whence came Ion, or, as anciently they pronounced the word, Javon of the Greenans, and Hammo of the Africans, and fuch like, are names which are found in Mofes his writings; as there are alfo footfteps steps of the rest, in the names of Nations and Countries, observed by Josophus and others. And then the endeavour of climbing up to Heaven, which of the Poets doth not mention? The burning of Sodom is spoken of by Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Tacitus, Pliny and Solinus. The most ancient use of Circumcifion hath been related by Herodotus, Diodorus, Strabo, Philo Biblius; and now is retained by the Posterity of Abraham, to wit, not only the Hebrews, but also the Idumaans, Ifmaelites, and others. A certain Hiftory of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and Joseph, agreeing with that of Mofes, was anciently extant in Philo Biblius, out of Sancuniath; in Berofus, Hecateus, Damascenns, Atrapanus, Eupolemus, Demetrius, and partly in that old Author of the aforefaid Orphean Verses; and now also there are some remainders thereof in Juftin, out of Trogus Pompeins : And almost in every one of these Authors aforenamed, there is fome mention made of Moles and his Acts; more particularly, how he was taken out of the Waters, and how the two Tables were given unto him of God, is plainly fet down in thuse Orphean Verses aforefaid. Add unto these the testimony of Polemon; also what fome of the Egyptians themfelves have recorded, to wit, Manethon, Lysimachus, and Charimon, concerning the departing out of Egypt.

Neither will it enter into the heart of any wife Man, to think that Mofes (having fo many Enemies, both of the Egyptians, and of other Nations, as the Idumeans, Arabians and Phænicians) would dare to divulge ought concerning the begianing of the World, and other ancient things, which either could be confuted by other more ancient Writings, or were repugnant to the C_A common common received opinion in those times : Neither, doubtlefs, would he publish any thing touching the affairs in that Age, which could be justly gainfayed or disproved by the testimonies of any then living. Of this Moles there is mention made by Diodorus Siculus, Strabo and Pliny, by Tacitus also; and after all them, by Dionyfius Longinus, in his Book concerning fublimity of Speech. Likewife Jamnes and Mambres, that refifted Moses in Egypt, are mentioned, not only by the Authors of the Talmud, but by Pliny and Apuleim. Amongst others, the Pythagoreans speak much of the Law it felf which was given by Mofes, and of the Legal Rites. Both Strabo and Jufin, out of Trogue, give an excellent testimony of the ancient Jewish Religion and Justice; infomuch that here (methinks)'tis needlefs to produce any further teltimony of fuch things as are found, or have anciently been found, confenting with the Books of the Hebrews, touching Joshua and others; feeing that whofoever gives credit unto Mofes, (which to do, no Man can, without great impudency, refuse) the fame must needs confess, that there were, indeed, wonderful Miracles anciently wrought by God; which is the thing we here chiefly go about to declare.

As for the Miracles of After-Ages, fuppole of Elijah and Elisha, and others, there is the lefs reason to think them counterfeit; because in those times Judea was both more known than formerly, and, upon the account of diversity of Religion, was extreamly hated by their Neighbours; who might have very easily blassed the Fame of such Miracles, if they had been lyes, as soon as it began to be spread abroad. The Histoty of Jonah, who lay three days in the Whale's Belly, Belly, is to be read in Lycophron, and Aneas Hazons; fave only that, inftead of Jonah, they have put the name of Hercules; whom they fo much honoured, that to make him appear the more illuftrious, they were wont (as Tacitus and Servius, and others, have noted) to report of him whatfoever magnificent things they heard of in any other places.

Certain it is, that Julian, who was an Enemy of the Jews, as much as of Christians, was forced, by the evidence of History, to confess; that fuch Men lived amongst the Jews as were inspired with the holy Spirit of God; and that Fire defcended from Heaven, upon the Sacrifices of Moles and Elias. And verily, 'tis well worth our observation, that amongst the Hebrews there were not only grievous punifhments appointed for fuch Men as did fallly affume to themfelves the Prophetical Function, but alfo many Kings, and great Men, that might have by that means purchafed authority to themfelves; and likewife very many learned Men, as was Efdras, and others, that never durft arrogate to themfelves this dignity; nor any Man elle, for divers Ages before the times of Jelus.

SECT. XVI.

The fame is proved by the Oracle and Predictions.

BUT more unlikely it is, that fo many thoufand People should be imposed upon, in the avouching of a perpetual and publick Prodigy, (as

(as we may call it) to wit, the holy Orcele, which after a refplendent manner, fhined from the breftplate of the High-Prieft: The truth whereof was fo ftrongly believed by all the Jews to have continued until the deftruction of the first Temple, that out of all doubt, their Ancestors had certain knowledge concerning the fame.

Like to this from miracles, there is another argument as forcible and effectual to prove GOD's Providence, taken from those Predictions of future events, which among the Hebrews were many, and manifest. Such was that Prophecy of his being made Childlefs, who fhould attempt to re-edifie Jericho: And that at the Overthrow of the Temple at Bethel by a King named Josiah, foretold above Three Hundred Years before the thing came to pass. So likewife the very name. and chief acts of Cyrus, foretold by Ifaiah : The event of Hierufalem's fiege by the Chaldeans, foreflown by Jeremiah : So also Daniel's Prediction touching the translation of the Empire of the Allyrians unto the Medes and Perfians; then from them unto Alexander of Macedon, whofe Empire fhould afterward, in part, be divided among the Successors of Ptolemy and Seleucus. And what evils also the Hebrew Nation should fuffer from all thefe, but efpecially from Antiochus Epiphanes; which were to clearly foretold, that Porphyry, who compared with these Predictions, fuch Grecian Histories as were extant in his time, could no otherwife tell how to shift them off. than by faying, that those things which were father'd upon Daniel, were written after fuch time as they came to pais; which is all one, as if one fhould deny that that was written in the time of Augustus, which hath been published in Virgil's name, name, and was always reputed for Virgil's work: For there was never any more fcruple made of the former amongst the Hebrews, than of this latter amongst the Romans.

To these things we may add very many, and most famous Oracles among the People of Mexico and Peru; which foretold the coming of the Spaniards into those Countries, and the calamities which should thereupon follow. And hither alfo may be referred, not a few dreams, fo exactly agreeing with the events, which both in themfelves, and in their Caufes, were wholly unknown to them that dreamed; that they can-not, without great immodefty, be referred to chance, or to natural caufes : Of which kind Tertullian, in his Book Of the Sout, hath collected illustrious examples, out of the most approved Authors. Spectres alfo, or Apparitions, belong to this head; which have been not only feen, but heard to speak; as those Historians relate, who are the farthest from superstitious credulity; and is reported by Witneffes of our own Age, who have lived in China, and in Mexico, and other parts of America. Nor are publick trials of innocence, by touching of red-hot Plow-fhares, to be delpifed ; which the Hiftories of fo many German Nations, and the Laws themfelves have remembred.

SECT. XVII.

The Objection is answered, why Miracles are not now to be seen.

NEither is there any reason to object against fuch Miracles, because there are not the like to be feen in these days, neither the like predictions heard of; for it is a fufficient proof of Divine Providence, that fuch things did come to pass at any time : Which being once granted, it will follow, that God may be believed with as much providence and wisdom, now to cause them to furcease, as anciently he used the same. Neither stands it with reason, that those Laws, which were given to the Universe, concerning the natural course of things, and uncertainty of future events, should be lightly or always transgreffed : But only at fuch a time, when either there was a just cause; as, when the worship of the true God was almost banished out of the World, refiding only in a little part thereof, to wit, in Judaa, where it necessarily was to be (as it were) fortified with new aids, against the impieties wherewith it was compassed about; or when Christian Religion (whereof by and by we shall speak more particularly) was first, by God's Decree, to be published throughout the World.

Book I.

Christian Religion.

SECT. XVIII.

And that now there is such liberty in offending.

Here are those who are wont to doubt of the Divine Providence, becaufe they fee fo much wickedness hath, like a Deluge, overfpread the face of the whole Earth; which Divine Providence, they contend, if there were any, would have made its chiefest business to reftrain and suppres. But this is easily answered, confidering that when God had created Man with freedom to do good and evil, referving abfolute and immutable goodness to himself, it had not been reasonable to have put such a stop to evil actions, as should have been contrary to that liberty. Howbeit, to keep Men from fin, God ufeth every kind of means, which is not repugnant to the liberty aforefaid. Such is the ordaining and publishing of the Law, together with inward and outward admonitions, both by threats, and also promises. Nor doth he suffer the effects of wickedness to spread fo far as they might have done : Whence it is, that all kind of government could never yet be fubverted, nor the knowledge of Divine Laws utterly extinguished or abolished. Neither may those delinquences which are permitted to be done amongst Men, be thought altogether unprofitable; fince that (as before we have touched) they may be used either for the punishment of other no less lewd tranfgreffors; or for the chaftifement of fuch as fometimes wander from the way of vertue; or laftly, to exact fome worthy pattern of patience patience and conftancy from fuch as have made good proficiency in the School of Piety and Vertue. Laftly, even they whofe wickednefs feems to be winked at for a time, are wont to pay dearly for it at laft; and to be reckoned withal the more feverely, becaufe they have been long forborn : Infomuch that it is plain, they fuffer what God would, who have done what He would not.

SECT. XIX.

Infomuch that good Men are oppressed.

BUT, and if fometimes there feem to be no punifhment at all inflicted upon profane Offenders, and even fome good Men (which may occafion the weak to be offended) are fore opprefied by the infolencies of the wicked, who many times make them not only to lead a wearifome and miferable life, but alfo to undergo a difgraceful death; we are not prefently to banish from humane affairs the Providence of God, which hath been proved, as we have now faid, by ftrong reafons; but rather (as the wifest fort of Men have thought) we should conclude and argue thus.

Book I. Christian Religion.

SECT. XX.

The fame Argument is retorted to prove that the Soul furvives the Body.

FOrafmuch as God hath an Eye unto all Men's actions, and in himfelf is most just, fuffering fuch things to come to pass, as we see they do; therefore we must expect that there will be some future Judgment after this Life, to the end such notorious transgressions may not remain unpunished, nor well-deserving vertue be unrecompenced with due comfort and reward.

SECT XXI.

Which is proved by Tradition.

Durther, to confirm this truth, it must necesfarily be admitted, that the Souls of Men do furvive their Bodies. Which most ancient Tradition was derived from our very first Parents, (for from whence elfe could it proceed ?) unto almost all civilized People; as is plain by Homer's Verfes; and by Philosophers, not only of the Grecians, but likewise the Druides in France, and Brachmans in India, and by those relations also which many Writers have published concerning the Egyptians, and Thracians, and Germans. ln like manner, touching God's judgment to come after this life, many things we see were extant, as well among the Grecians, as also among the Fgyptians Egyptians and Indians; as we learn out of Strabo. Diogenes Laertius, and Plutarch: Whereunto may be added that old Tradition of the Confumption of the World by fire, which was anciently found in Hystaspis and the Sibyls, and now also in Ovid and Lucan, and the Indians of Siam: Of which thing the Aftrologers have noted this to be a fign, that the Sun draws nearer and nearer to the Earth. Yea, when the Canaries, America, and other foreign places were first discovered, this fame opinion of the Immortality of Men's Souls, and the last Judgment, was found among the Inhabitants there.

SECT. XXII.

Against which no contrary Reason can be brought.

VEither can there any reason in nature be given, to disprove so ancient and common received tradition. For every thing that in this World comes to an end, perifhes either through the opposition of some more forcible contrary Agent, as coldness in any subject, by reason of the more prevalent power and intention of heat; or through the substraction of that subject, whereupon it depends; as the quantity of the glass, when the glass isbroken; or through the defect and want of the efficient cause, as light by the Sun-fetting. Now none of all these can be faid to happen unto the Soul of Man: Not the first, because there is nothing that is contrary to the Soul; nay, it felf is of fuch a peculiar nature, that that it is apt to receive fuch things as are contrary between themselves, at the fame time together, after its own, that is, after a Spiritual and Intelle-Stual manner. Not the fecond, for there is not any subject whereon the nature of the Soul hath any dependance : if there were, in all probability it should be the humane body : but that this cannot be, it is manifest, because when the powers and abilities of the Bodies are tired in their operations; the mind alone doth not by motion contract any mearinefs. Likewife the powers of the Body are impaired and weakned by the redundancy or excels of the object, as the fenfe of feeing by the full splendor and bright face of the Sun: but the more excellent objects that the Soul is conversant about, as about universals and figures abstratted from sensible matter, it receives thereby the more perfection. Again, the powers that depend upon the Body are only bufied about fuch things as are limited to particular time and place, according to the nature and property of the Body it felf: but the mind hath a more noble object, and afcends to the contemplation of that which is infinite and eternal. Wherefore then feeing that the Soul depends not upon the Body in its operation, neither doth it in its effence : for we cannot difcern the nature of invilible things otherwife than by their operations. Neither is the third way of corruption incident to the Soul, there being no efficient caufe from which the Soul proceeds by a continual emanation. For we cannot fay our Parents are fuch a caufe; fince, when they are dead, their Children are wont to live. But if we will needs make fome caufe, from which the Soul proceeds, then we can imagine no other, fave the first and universal cause of all things, which, which, as in respect of its power, is never deficient; so in respect of its will, to be defective; that is, for the Almighty to will the extinction and destruction of the Soul, no Man can ever be able to prove.

SECT. XXIII.

Many Reasons may be alledged for it.

NAY, there are many ftrong. Arguments for the contrary; as, namely, the dominion given unto Man over his own actions; the natural defire that is in him to be immortal; the force of conficience comforting the mind for well done actions, though very translefome, and fupporting it with a certain hope: And on the contrary, the fting of a gnawing conficience at the remembrance of the ungodly and wicked actions, efpecially when the hour of death approacheth, as if it had a fenfe of an imminent judgment. And this gnawing worm of conficience the most profane Wretches and wicked Tyrants have not been able oftentimes to extinguish in them, no not then when they most of all defired it; as divers Examples do testifie.

SECT.

Book I. Christian Religion.

SECT. XXIV.

Whence it follows, that the end of all shall be Man's happiness after this life.

Seeing then the Soul is of a nature that in it felf hath no ground or cause of its own corruption; and feeing alfo that God hath given us many figns and tokens whereby we ought to understand, that it is his will the Soul should survive the Body; what more noble end can be propounded to Man, than the state of eternal happines? Which, in effect, is the same that Plato and the Pythagoreans spake of; faying, that it were good for Man if he could become most like unto God.

SECT. XXV.

Which to obtain, Men must get the true Religion.

NOW what this happinefs is, and how it is to be attained, Men may fearch by probable conjectures: But if any thing concerning this matter be revealed by God, that muft be held for a most certain and undoubted truth: Which fince Christian Religion pretends to bring unto us, above others, it shall be examined in the next Book, whether or no Men ought to give credit thereunto, and assuredly build their Faith thereon.

The SECOND Book OF THE TRUTH OF Chriftian Religion.

SECT. I.

To prove the Truth of Christian Religion.

T is not our purpose in this Second Book to handle all the Points of Christianity; but after our hearty Prayers made to Christ the King of Heaven, that he would grant us the affistance of his boly Spirit, whereby we may be enabled for such a Work, we shall only endeavour to make it appear that the Christian Religion it fell is most true and certain. Which I thus begin.

SECT.

The Truth of

Book II.

THE REAL PROPERTY AND INCOMENTAL OPPOSITION OF A DESCRIPTION OF A DESCRIPANTA DESCRIPTION OF A DESCRIPTION O

SECT. H.

Here is flewn that Jefus lived.

THAT there was such a Person as Jesus of Nazareth, who lived heretofore in Judea, when Tiberius was Emperour of Rome, is not only nost constantly profested by all Christians, who are scattered over the face of all the Earth: but acknowledged by all the Jews, who now are, or ever wrote fince those times. Nay, the very Pagan Writers, that is, such as are neither of the Jewish nor Christian Religion, namely, Suetonius, Tacitus, Pliny the Younger, and many more after them, do testifie the same.

SECT. III.

And was put to an ignominious Death.

THAT the fame Jefus was nailed to a Crofs by Pontius Pilate, Governour of Judza, is confelled allo by all Christians, though it might feem very difgraceful to them, to be the Worshippers of fuch a Lord. The Jews allo do the like; though they are not ignorant that upon this account they are very odious to Christians, in whose Dominionsthey live: because their Ancestors were the Men, that moved Pilate, and perswaded him to pass the fentence of Death upon Jesus. The Lagan Writers also, now named, have delivered the fame to Posterity. Yea, the Acts of Pilate were were extant a long time after, from whence this might have been proved; to which Christians never made their Appeal. For neither did Julian himfelf, nor any other adversaries of Christianity ever make doubt hereof: So that hence it appears, that there was hever any more certain story than this; which (we fee) may be confirmed, not only by the teltimonies of fome few Men, but also by the approbation of feveral Nations otherwise difagreeing and jarring among themfelves.

SECT. IV.

Tet afterward was worshipped by prudent and godly Men.

A LL which though it be most true, yet we fee how that throughout the remotest parts of the World he is worshipped as Lord; and that not in our days only, or those which are lately passed, but ever fince the time that this was done; to wit, ever fince the Reign of Nero the Emperor, when many People that professed this worship of Christ and Christian Religion, were for that cause tortured and put to death, as Tacitus and others do witness.

The Truth of Book II.

S E C T. V.

The Caufe whereof was, for that in his life time there were Miracles done by him.

NOW among fuch as professed Christianity, there were always many Perfons, who were both judicious, and not unlearned. Such as (to fay nothing now of the Jews,) Sergius, Governour of Cyprus, Dionysius Areopagita, Polycarpus, Justinus, Irenaus, Athenagoras, Origen, Tertullian, Clemens Alexandrinus, with divers others; who almost all being brought up in other Religions, and having no hopes of any Wealth or Preferment by Christianity, yet became Worship-. pers of this Man, that died fo ignominious a death, and exhibited due honour to him as God : of which no other reafon can be given, but this alone; that they made diligent enquiry, as became prudent Men, in a matter of greatest moment: and found that what was bruited abroad concerning the Miracles wrought by Chrift, was true; and relied upon firm Witneffes. As the curing, and that with his Word only, and before all the People, divers grievous and inveterate Difeafes; the reftoring of Sight to him that was born blind; the multiplying of a few Loaves more than once, for the feeding many Thoufands, who could teftifie the truth of it; the recalling of the Dead to Life again; and many more of the like kind. The report of which things had then fuch a certain and 'undoubted' original; that neither Celfus, nor Julian, when they wrote against Christians, durst deny there were were fome Prodigies done by Christ; and the Hebrews in the Talmudical Books do openly confess it.

SECT VI.

Which Miracles were not wrought either by the help of Nature, or Affistance of the Devil; but meerly by the Divine Power of GOD.

HAT these wondrous Works were not wrought by any Natural Power, it is manifest, by this very thing, that they are called monders and miracles. Nor is it possible by the force of nature, that any grievous Difeases and Infirmities should be cured meerly by a Man's Voice, or by the vertue of a Touch, and that even upon a fudden. And if fuch Works could have any way been afcribed to a Natural efficacy, it would have been faid before now, either by those that were professed Enemies of Christ while he lived upon Earth, or by those that have been Adverfaries of his Gospel fince his death.

By the like Argument we may prove, that they were not jugling delusions, because they were done openly in the fight of all the People : amongst whom divers of the Learned fort did malign and bear ill will unto Christ, not without envy observing all that he did. Add further, that the like Works were often iterated, and the effects thereof were not transitory, but permanent and durable. All which being duly pondered, it must needs follow (as the Jews have confeffed) fefled) that these Works proceeded from a more than Natural or Humane Power, that is, from fome Spirit either good or evil. That they proceeded not from any evil Spirit, may be proved, because that the Doctrine of Chrift, (for the confirmation whereof these Works were wrought) was quite opposite and contrary to bad Spirits. For it prohibits the worshipping of evil Angels, and diffwades Men from all uncleanness of affections and manners, wherein fuch Spirits are much delighted. And this is also plain, for that wherefoever the Doctrine of the Gospel was received and established, there followed the downfall of the worship of Dæmons, and of Magical Arts: and one God was worshipped with a detestation of Dæmons; whofe power and authority, Porphyry acknowledges, was broken by the coming of Chrift.

Neither is it to be thought that any wicked Spirit is fo ignorant and foolifh, as to effect and often bring to pais things that are caufes of its own hurt and difgrace, and no way conducing to its honour or benefit. Belides, it ftands no way with the vvifdom or goodnefs of God himfelf to believe that he would fuffer fo harmlefs and innocent Men, fuch as feared him, to be deceived by the delufion of Devils : and fuch were the first followers of Chrift, as is plain by their innocent life, and by the many calamities which they endured for conficience fake.

But on the other fide, if thou affirmest that those works of Christ proceeded from some good Spirits which are inferiour to God; in so faying thou dost confess that the same works were well pleasing unto God, and did tend to the honour of his name; forasinuch as good Spirits do nothing but but what is acceptable and glorious unto God: To fay nothing now of fome of Chrift's works, which were fo miraculous, that they feem to have God himfelf for the author of them, and could not have been done but by the immediate Finger of an omnipotent power, as fpecially, the reftoring divers Perfons from Death unto Life again.

Now God doth not produce any Miracle, nor fuffer any fuch Wonders to be wrought without fust cause : For it becomes not a wife Maker of Laws to forfake and depart from his own Laws, unlefs upon fome good and weighty reafon: Now no other cause of these things can be given than that which was alledged by Chrift himfelf, namely, that hereby his doctrine might be verified and confirmed. And doubtlefs they that were Spectators of his Works, could conceive no other reafon thereof : among which fince there were (as was faid) many godly Men, pioully and devoutly affected, it is horrible impiety to imagine, that God did work thefe things only to delude and deceive them. And this was one cause why very many of the Jews who lived about the time of Jesus, even fuch as could not be perfwaded to relinquish or omit one jot of Mofes his Law, fuch as those who were called Nazarenes and Ebionites, did notwithstanding acknowledge that this Jefus was a Doctor or Mafter sent from Heaven.

The Truth of Book II.

SECT. VII.

Christ's Refurrection proved by credible Reasons.

DEfides the Miracles that Christ wrought to D confirm his Doctrine; another like Argument may be taken from his wonderful Refurre-Stion to Life again, after that He was Crucified, Dead, and Buried.

For the Christians of all Ages and Countries alledge the fame, not only for a truth, but alfo as the most strong ground and chiefest foundation of their Faith; which could not be, unlefs those that first taught Christianity, did perswade their Auditors that the thing was fo for certain; And yet they could not induce any wife Man to the belief hereof, unless they could verily affirm, that themfelves were Eye-witnefles of this matter. For without fuch an ocular teftimony, no Man in his wits would have given credit unto them; effectially in fuch times, when to believe them was to expose themselves to the greatest mischiefs and dangers. But that this was their constant Assertion, both their own Books, and other Writings do teftifie. For out of their Books it appears, that they appealed unto Five hundred Witnesses that had beheld Jesus after he was rifen from the Dead. Now it is not the fashion of lyars and diffemblers to appeal to fo great a number of Witneffes. Neither could it poffibly fo fall out that fo many Men should agree and confpire together to bear falle witnefs. Or fuppose there had been no other Witnesses, fave those twelve known known Apostles, the first publisher's of Christian doctrine, yet this had been fufficient. No Man is wicked for nothing. And honour for their lying they could not expect, in regard that all kind of dignities and promotions were then in the hands of the Pagans or Jews, from whom they received nothing but reproach and ignominy. Neither could they hope for any Wealth and Riches, becaufe this profession was oftentimes punished with the loss of goods and possessions : or if it was not; yet the Gospel could not be taught by them, unless they omitted or neglected all care about worldly goods. Neither could the hope of any other worldly advantage move them to utter untruths; feeing that the very preaching of the Golpel did expose them to labours, hunger, thirst, ftripes and imprisonments.

To get credit and reputation only among their own Country-men was not fo much worth, that they poor fimple Men, whofe life and doctrine was abhorrent from all pride, fhould therefore run upon fo great inconveniences. Neither again could they have any hope their doctrine would make fuch progrefs, as to win them any fame; being opposed both by the nature of Man, which is intent to its own advantage, and by the authority of them, who then every where governed, unlefs they had been fome way animated and incouraged by the promise of God.

To which we may add, that they had no reafon to promife themfelves, that this fame, fuch as it might prove, would be durable: fince they expected (God on purpofe concealing his counfel in this matter) the end of the whole World as nearly approaching; which both their own Writings, and the Writings of those Christians that that followed them, make most evident. It remains therefore that we fay, if they did lye, it was for the defence of their Religion; which cannot with any reason be laid to their charge, if the thing be rightly confidered. For either they did fincerely believe that this Religion which they professed was the true Religion, or elfe they were of a contrary mind. If they did not believe it to be true; nay if they thought not that it was abfolutely the best, they would never have made choice hereof, and refused other Religions far more fafe and commodious. Nay further, though they conceived it to be true, yet they would not have professed it, unless they had been fully perfwaded, that the profession thereof was necessary; fpecially, for that they might have eafily forefeen, and partly they could tell by experience what troops of Men would be exposed to death for this profeffion, which without just caufe to occasion was no better than plain robbery or murder.

But if we fay, they believed that this Religion was true, and the very beft, and by all means to be profeffed, and that after the death of their Lord and Master: furely, that could no way be fo, if their Master's promife concerning his Refurrection had deceived them, and not proved true. For that had been enough to make any Man in his wits disbelieve, even that which he had already entertained.

Moreover all Religions, and Christianity more than any other, forbids lying in bearing falle witnefs, especially in divine things, wherefore they could not for the love of Religion, and that fuch a Religion, be induced to tell untruths. Befides, these Men were of an upright conversation; their life was spotlefs and unblameable even in the judgment iudgment of their adversaries; who had nothing to object against them, fave their fimplicity, which of all other difpositions is the most unlikely to forge a lye. Nay, there were none among these Primitive Christians (whereof we fpeak) who did not fuffer grievous torments for profelling that Jelus was rilen : and many of them were put unto most exquisite pains of death for bearing testimony of the fame. Now granting it to be possible, that a Man in his wits may be content to endure fuch things, for fome opinion which he hath conceived, and really believes in his mind; yet that for a fallhood, which he knows to be fo, not only fome one Man, but a great many Men, who are like to gain nothing at all by making that falfhood to be believed, should consent to suffer such cruel torments, is a thing altogether incredible.

Now that thefe were not Mad-men, both their conversation and their writings do abundantly testifie. Likewise what is spoken of the first Apostles, may also be faid of Paul, who openly taught that he faw Christ fitting in Heaven: who also was not inferiour to any in the *Jewish Reli*gion; nor might be have wanted dignities and preferments, if he would have followed the foot-steps of his Fathers.

Whereas on the contrary, by taking upon him the profession of Christianity, he became liable to the hatred and malignity of his Kinsfolks, and ingaged himfelf to undertake difficult, dangerous, and laborious travels through the World; and laft of all to undergo a difgraceful death and torment.

SECT. VIII.

Answer to the Objection, That the Resurrection seems impossible.

SUCH and fo great testimonies no Man can disprove or gainfay, unless fome will reply, that the thing it felf is impossible to be done: for fo are those things which imply a contradiction, as they speak. Howbeit that cannot be affirmed of this matter. It might indeed, if one could fay that one and the felf-same Man lived and died at the felf-same time: But that a Man may be restored from death to life, especially by the power and vertue of him who first gave life and being unto Man, I see no reason why it should be accounted for a thing impossible.

Neither hath it been thought impossible by wife Men; for Plate writes that this was done to Eris an Armenian. And the like is related of a certain Woman by Heraclides a Philosopher of Pontus, of Aristans by Herodotus; and of another by Plutarch: all which, (whether true or false) do shew that in the opinion of learned and wise Men the thing was conceived to be possible.

SECT. IX.

5 I

The Refurrection of Jesus being granted, the Truth of his Doctrine is confirmed.

IOW if it be neither impoffible that Chrift fhould return to Life again; and it doth fufficiently appear by great Teltimonies(wherewith Rabbi Bechai, a Master of the Jews, was fo convinced, that he acknowledged the truth of this thing) and this Chrift himfelf alfo, as both his Difciples and others confess, did publish a new Doctrine, as by a Divine Commandment: truly it necessarily follows, that that Doctrine is true. For it doth not confift with the Divine Juflice and Wisdom to honour Him after so excellent a manner; who had committed the crime of fallifying in fo weighty a matter. Especially confidering that before his Death he had foretold to his Disciples, both his Death, and the kind of it, and his Refurrection to Life again: adding this withal, that thefe things should therefore come to pass, that they might testifie and confirm the truth of his Doctrine.

And thus much for the Arguments which arife from the facts themfelves which were done: Let us proceed to those which arise from the nature and quality of his Doctrine.

SECT.

The Truth of Book II.

SECT. X.

Christian Religion preferred before all others.

N D here truly we must fay, that either all A kind of divine Worfhip whatfoever must be rejected, and utterly banished from among Men, (which impiety will never enter into the heart of any one that can believe there is a God who takes care of all things; and withal confiders how Man is endued with excellency of understanding, and liberty to chufe what is morally good or evil; and upon that account is capable as of reward fo of Punishment ;) or elfe this Religion is to be admitted and approved of for the very best : not only in regard of the outward Testimonies of works and miracles aforefaid; but also in confideration of fuch inward and effential properties, as are agreeing thereunto: namely, becaufe there is not, neither ever was there any other Religion in the whole World, that can be produced either more honourab'e for excellency of reward, or more abfolute and perfect for Precepts, or more admirable for the manner according to which it was commanded to be propagated and divulged.

SECT. XI.

For excellency of Reward.

FOR to begin with the reward that is at the end propounded to Man, which though it be the laft in fruition and execution, yet is it the first in his intention: If we confider the institution tion of the Jewish Religion by the hand of Moses, and the plain or express covenant of the Law, we shall find nothing there promifed fave the welfare and happiness of this life : as namely, a fruitful Land, abundance of Corn and Victual, victory over their Enemies, foundness of Body, length of Days, the comfortable Bleffing of a hopeful Isfue, and furviving Posterity, and the like. For if there be any thing beyond, it is involved in dark fhadows, or must be collected by wife and difficult reasoning : Which indeed was the Caufe why many (in particular the Sadduces, who profeffed themfelves to be followers and observers of Moses his Law,) had no hope of enjoying any happiness after this life.

As for the Grecians, who received their Learning from the Chaldeans and Agyptians, and had fome hope in another World, after this life was ended; they spake thereof after a very doubtful manner; as appears by the difputations of Socrates, by the Writings of Tully, Seneca, and others. And the Arguments they produce for it are grounded upon Uncertainties; proving no more the happiness of a Man, that of a Beast : Which while fome of them observed, it was no wonder if they imagined that Souls were translated and conveyed from Men to Beafts, and again from Beasts into Men.

Í

But because this Opinion was not confirmed by any testimonies, or grounded upon certain reafon, (and yet it was underiable that there is fome end proposed to Man's actions,) therefore others were induced to think, that vertue was the end or reward of Mens endeavours; and that a wise Man was happy enough, even though he were put into that tormenting brafen Bull made by

by Phalaris. Howbeit this fancy was justly diftaftful and improbable to another fort, who faw well enough that Man's happinels, especially the highest, could not consist in any thing that was accompanied with perils, troubles, torment and death (unlefs we have a mind to follow the found of words without the fenfe of things: Wherefore they placed Man's chiefest happines and end in fuch things as were delightful and pleafing to [enfe. But yet this opinion alfo was disproved and fufficiently confuted by many, as being prejudicial to all honefty, the feeds whereof are rooted in our hearts by nature: as alfo because it debases Man, who is advanced to a higher pitch, and throws him down into the rank of Beafts; which ftoop down, and pore upon nothing but what is on the Earth.

With thefe and fuch like Uncertainties and doubtings was Mankind distracted, at that time when Chrift brought in the true knowledge of the right end : who promifed unto his followers after their departure hence, a life, not only without death, without forrow and trouble, but attended with the highest joy and happines : and that not of one part of Man alone, to wit, of his Soul, (the felicity whereof after this life, partly by probable conjecture, and partly from tradition, was hoped for before) but also of his Body and Soul together. And this most justly; that the Body, which for the Divine Law, must often fuffer grievances, torments and death, may not be without a recompence of reward. Now the reward and promifed joys are not vile and bafe, as good chear and dainty fare, wherewith the more carnal fort of Jews feed their hopes; or the embraces of beautiful Women, which the Turks

Turks expect to enjoy after death : for both thefe sensualities are proper to this frail life, at the best being but helps or remedies of mortality, the former of them conducing to the prefervation of every particular Man or Beaft : and the latter for the continuation of the fame creatures by fucceffion in their kind. But by the happiness aforefaid our Bodies shall be indued with constant vigour, agility, ftrength, and more than a ftar-like beauty. In the Soul there shall be an understanding without errour, even of God himfelf and his Divine Providence, or whatfoever is now hid from us. And a will freed from all turbulency of paffions, busied chiefly about the fight, the admiring and praising of the Almighty. In a word, all things much greater and better, than can be conceived by comparison with the best and greatest things in this World.

SECT. XII.

Answer to an Objection, That Bodies once Dead cannot be revived again.

BESIDES the doubt but lately answered, there is another difficulty objected against this Doctrine of the Refurrection: namely, how can it be possible for humane Bodies once diffolved into dust and corruption ever to be united and fet together again? But this relies upon no reason. For fince it is agreed among most Philofophers, that howfoever things be changed, there remains still the fame matter, capable of divers Species or Forms; who dare fay, that either God doth not know in what places, though never for E_3 distant, diftant, the parts of that matter are, which belong to a humane Body; or, that He wants Power to reduce them and fet them together again; and do that in his Univerfe, which we fee Chymifts do in their Fornaces, and Veffels, gather together and unite things of the fame nature, though fcattered and difperfed? And that a thing alfo may return to the form of its original, though the fpecies be never fo much altered, we fee an example in the nature of things; as in the Seeds of Plants and living Creatures.

Neither is that knot impossible to be unloosed which is tyed by many; concerning those hu-mane bodies which pass into the nourifhment of wild Beasts or Cattle; who, being fed with them, become again the food of Man. For we must know, that the greatest portion of fuch things as we eat is not converted into integral parts of our bodies; but either turned into excrements, or humors of the body, as Phlegm and Choler; yea, much of that which becomes our nourishment is wasted away, either by difeases, or by inward natural heat, or by the Air about us. All which being fo; he that fo carefully regards all kinds of brute Beasts, that none of them perish, the fame God with a more special providence can alfo provide for humane bodies, that fo much of them as becomes the food of other Men, shall no more be converted into the substance of those that eat them, than are poisons or physical potions; and the rather, because it is in a manner naturally apparent, that humane Flesh was not in-tended for Man's food. Or suppose it were not fo, but fomething which hath made an accession to the latter body must be taken from it again; this will not make it not to be the fame body; for for even in this life there happen greater changes of particles than this comes to. Yea, we fee, that a Butterfly is in a Worm; and the fubftance of Herbs or Wine in fome very fmall things, from whence they may be reftored to their former juft magnitude. Surely, fince both thefe and many other things may without any inconvenience be fuppofed, there is no reafon that the reftitution of a body diffolved fhould be reckoned among impoffible things: which learned Men, Zoroafter among the Chaldeans, almost all the Stoicks, and Theopompus among the Peripateticks, believed not only might, but fhould be.

SECT. XIII.

The excellency of holy Precepts given for the worship of God.

THE fecond thing wherein Christian Religion excells all others that are, or ever were, or can be imagined, is the great holiness of Laws and Precepts; both in those things that appertain to the Worship of God, and in those that concern other matters.

The holy Offices of the Pagans throughout almost the whole World, (as Parphyry shews at large, and the Navigations of our times have difcovered) were full of cruelty; For it was the usage, in a manner every where to appeale the Gods, even with the factifice of Humane Blood. Which custom neither the Greek Learning, nor the Roman Laws took away; as appears by what we read concerning the Victums made to Bacchus Omesses among the Greeks; and of a Greek Man E 4. and and Woman, and a Man and Woman of Gaul, which were facrificed to Jupiter Latiaris at Rome : Those most holy Mysteries also, whether of Ceres, or of Liber Pater, were as full as ever they could hold of filthiness and obscenity; as appeared when the fecrets of this Religion were once laid open, and began to be divulged : of which Clemens Alexandrinus, and others, have given us a large account. Those Festival days also which were confectated to the honour of the Gods, were celebrated with fuch fpectacles, that grave Cato was ashamed to be prefent at them. But in the Jewish Religion there was nothing unfeemly, nothing difhoneft or unlawful. Howbeit left the People that were prone to Idolatry, should decline or fall back from the true Religion, it was loaded or burdened with many precepts concerning fuch things as in themfelves were neither good nor evil; fuch were the facrificing of Beafts, the Circumcifion, an exact rest from labour upon the Sabbath, and the prohibition of eating fundry kind of meats; fome of which cuftoms the Turks have borrowed from them, adding further a prohibition for drinking Wine.

But the Christian Religion teacheth, that as God is a most pure Spirit; So is he to be worshipped with pureness of mind and Spirit, together with such works as in their own nature without a precept are most laudable and honess. Thus the professions thereof are not to circumcife the sheft, but their carnal lusts and desires; not to keep Holyday by a rest from all kind of work whatsoever, but only from that which is unlawful. Nor are we to offer unto God the blood and fat of Beasts; but if need be, even our own blood for the testimony of the truth. And what bounty or liberality rality foever we beftow upon poor and neceffitous persons, to look upon it as given to God himfelf. We need not now abstain from any kind of meat or drink, but may and ought to use them both with moderation, fo that our health be not thereby impaired; fometimes notwithstanding fubduing our Bodies to our minds by fasting, that they thereby may be the better fitted and prepared for more chearful devotion. But the chief point of this Religion, it is every where apparent, lies in a pious confidence : by which being composed to a faithful obedience, we rely wholly upon God, and ftedfaftly believe the performance of his promifes. Whence there arifes a good Hope, and a true Love both of God and our Neighbours : which makes us obey his Precepts, not in a base fervile manner, for fear of punifhment; but that we may pleafe him, and have him, out of his great goodnefs, our Father and Rewarder.

Moreover we are taught to pray, not for riches or honours, or fuch things as many times do hurt to thole that wish much for them: but first and chiefly that which tends to God's glory; then for our felves, fo much of these perishing things as nature desires; leaving the rest to Divine Providence: and fatisfying our felves that all shall be well, which way foever things go. But for eternal things, it teaches us to pray with the most earnest desire, viz. for pardon of our fins past, and the affistance of his Spirit in time to come; whereby being strengthened against all terrors and allurements, we may constantly persist in a pious course of life.

This is the true Worship of God in Christian Religion, than which nothing can be invented more worthy of Almighty God. SECT.

SECT. XIV.

Concerning the Offices of Humanity which we owe unto our Neighbonr.

IKE to thefe are the duties we owe unto our Neighbour. As for Mahumet's Religion being hatcht in Wars, it breaths nothing but Wars, and is propagated by Wars, and Hoffility. Thus the Laws and Statutes of the Lacedamoni, ans, which among the Greeks were most applauded, even by the Oracle of Apollo, (Ariftotle notes, and blames them for it) were wholly directed to warlike force. And yet the fame Aristotle maintains War against Barbarians to be natural; when, on the contrary, 'tis certain that Men were by nature made to friendship and fociety. For what is more unjust and unequal, than for fingle Murders to be punisht; but to vaunt and triumph in the flaughter of whole Nations, as in a glorious exploit? And yet, that fo much celebrated Roman Common-wealth, how did it come by fuch a Name, but by Wars? which oft times were manifestly unjust, as they themselves confess those were, against Sardinia and Cyprus. And truly generally, as the best Historians have committed to memory, most Nations thought Robberies and Plunders, without the bounds of their own Country, to be no difgrace at all to them. The exacting of revenge, Aristotle and Cicero make a piece of vertue : To behold Swordplayers cut and flash each other, was one of the publick recreations of the Pagens; And nothing more ordinary than to expose their Children.

Among the Hebrews indeed there was a better Law, and more holy Discipline : but yet to a People of an impotent Anger fome things were connived at, and fome things indulged. As a violent feizure upon the feven Nations, who had deferved it: with which not contented, they profecuted all that differ'd from them with a cruel hatred; the figns and marks of which yet remain. in the prayers which they conceive against us Christians. But to profecute him that hurt them. by rendring like for like; and to kill, by their own private hands, him that had flain any of their Kindred, was permitted by the Law it felf. Whereas the Law of Chrift forbids us to revenge any injury that is done us, either in words or deeds: left that wickedness which we condemn in others, we should again allow by its imitation. It would have us do good to all, to the good indeed chiefly, but to the wicked alfo; after the Example of God, who beftows the benefit of the Sun, the Stars, the Rain, the Winds and Showers. in common upon all Men whatfoever.

SECT. XV.

Of the Conjunction of Man and Woman.

THE Conjunction of Man and Woman, whereby Mankind is Propagated, is a thing most worthy of the care of Laws. Which part of them it is no wonder the Pagans neglected, when they told fuch lewd stories of the Whoredoms and Adulteries of the Gods which they worshipped. Nay the filthy and abominable use which one Man made of another, was defended by the example example of their Gods. Into whole number upon that account, Ganymedes was anciently put, and afterwards Antinow. Which flagitious wickedness is now most frequent among the Mahometans, and is thought lawful by the Chinefes, and other Nations. Yea, the Philosophers of Greece feem to have made it their business, to find out an honeft Name, for that most filthy thing.

Among which Greek Philosophers the most excellent commending community of Women; what did they do elfe but turn a whole City into one common Brothel-houfe? A most unworthy thing : for fince there is among fome mute Animals a certain conjugal League or Covenant, how much more equal is it, that fo holy a Creature as Man should not be born of uncertain feed : with the extinction of all those mutual affections which are naturally between Parents and their Children.

The Hebrew Law indeed forbad all filthiness ; but both allowed one Man to have more Wives; and gave the Husband alfo a right for any caufe, to put away his Wife. Which the Mahometans at this day use; and the Greeks and Latins anciently with fuch licence, that the Lacedamonians and Cato, even lent their Wives to other Men, to use for a time.

But the most perfect Law of Christ penetrates to the very roots of Vices : and holds him who only attempts upon the chaftity of any Woman, or looks lafeivioufly upon her, to be guilty before GOD, the Judge and Searcher of the Hearts, of that crime, which, though not acted, yet was defired. And fince all true friend sperpetual and infoluble, He would defervedly have that to be fuch, which with the fociety of minds, contains tains alfo a conjunction of Bodies. Which, without all doubt, is most profitable alfo for the right education of those Children, that are the fruit of that Conjunction. Among the Pagans, fome few Nations were content with one Wife; as the Germans and the Romans. Which the Christians now follow; that the mind of the Wife being intirely given to the Husband, may be compensated with an equal retribution : and the government of the Family may the better proceed under the direction of one Ruler : and divers Mothers may not bring in discord among Children.

SECT. XVI.

Touching the use of Temporal Goods.

A ND now to come to the use of those things, which are vulgarly called Goods; we find that Thests were permitted by some Paganish Nations, as the Egyptians and Lacedamonians: and they that did not allow this to private Men, did publickly little else, as the Romans: Who muss have returned to their Huts and Cottages, the Roman Orator said, if they should have been bound to restore to every body his own.

The Hebrews indeed had no fuch cuftom, yet their Law, that it might fute it felf in fome meafure, to the humor of that People, permitted them to take ufury of Strangers; amongft other things promifing the reward of riches to them that observed the Law.

But the Law of Christianity forbids not only all kind of injustice towards all fort of Men, but also prohibits us to take any carking and exceffive five care for these transitory things, because our mind is not able diligently and duly to attend unto two feveral matters; either of which are enough to take up the whole Man, and oftentimes draw us into contrary thoughts and coun-Befides, the exceflive care both for getting fels. and keeping riches is accompanied with a kind of bondage and anxiety, which spoils that very pleasure which is expected from riches. Whereas those things that nature is content withal, are both few and eafily acquired, without much labour or charge : yet if God bestow any overplus upon us, fo that we have fomewhat to fpare, we are not commanded to cast the fame into the Sea. as fome Philosophers unadvisedly have done; neither must we keep it unprofitably, or lavish it out wastfully; but rather therewith we ought to fupply the wants and exigencies of other Men, either by giving, or by lending to them that would borrow : as becomes those that look upon themselves not as Lords and Masters of the things they enjoy, but as Stewards and Dispensers under God Almighty, the Father and Master of all : knowing also that a benefit well bestowed is a treasure full of good hope; which neither the wickedness of Thieves, nor the variety of Cafualties can in the least diminish.

A rare example of which true and unfeigned liberality we find in the primitive Christians, who fent relief as far as from Macedonia and Achaia to the poor that lived in Palastine; as if the whole World had been but one Family. And here in the Law of Christ this caution is added, that the hope of being paid again, or getting credit by it, do not deflowr our bounty; whole beauty and grace is quite loft with God, if it have refpect fpect to any thing but him. And that no Man may pretend, for a cloak of his covetoufnefs, that he fears he may have need of all that he hath, when he grows old, or falls into any calamity; the Law promifes a fpecial care of fuch Men as obferve thefe Precepts. And to work a greater confidence in them, puts them in mind of the confpicuous providence of God in feeding the wild Beafts and Cattle, and in adorning the Herbs and Flowers; and reprefents withal what an unworthy thing it would be, if we fhould not believe fo good and fo powerful a God : but deal with Him, as if he were a bad Creditor, whom we will not truft any further, than while we have a Pawn or pledge in our hands for our fecurity.

SECT. XVII.

Of Swearing.

THERE are other Laws that forbid Perjury, but this Law of Christ will have us to refrain also from all kind of Swearing, unless we be lawfully call'd thereunto upon necessfity. Nay enjoins fuch faithfulness and fincerity in all our words, that there may be no need to exact an Oath of us.

SECT. XVIII.

Of other Matters.

M Oreover there can nothing be found commendable and praise-worthy, either in the Philosophical writings of the Grecians, or in the fayings fayings of the Hebrews, and other Nations, which is not contained in the Precepts of Christianity, and that also established by Divine authority : as namely, concerning modefty, temperance, goodnefs, decent behaviour, prudence, the office of Magistrates and Subjects, Parents and Children, Masters and Servants, Man and Wife between themfelves; and chiefly the efchewing those vices which among many of the Grecians and Romans went under the name and colour of honefty; fuch were the defires of honours and glory. And to be short, admirable is the *substantial bre*vity of these precepts, comprehended in these few words, that we ought to love God above all things, and our Neighbours as our felves; that is, we must do as we would be done unto.

SECT. XIX.

Answer to an Objection touching the Controversies abounding among Christians.

DUT here peradventure fome will object D against this, which we speak concerning • the excellency of Christianity, and tell us of the great diversity of opinions amongst Christians, whereupon there have fprung fo many fects and factions as do now abound in the Church.

For answer whereunto, we may observe that the like diversity of opinions happens almost in all kind of Arts and Sciences, to wit, partly through the weakness of humane apprehension, and partly because Man's judgment is hindred and intangled by his affections. Howbeit this variety of opinions is contained within certain bounds bounds and limits : for there are fome common principles agreed upon by all, and whereupon they ground their doubts. Thus in Mathematicks'tis questioned whether a circle may be made quadrangular : but not whether after the taking away of equal parts from equal, the refidue will not remain equal. The fame may be feen in natural Philosophy, also in the Art of Physick, and in other Disciplines. In like manner the difference of opinions that is amongst Christians doth not hinder the common confent and agreement in those fundamental principles, for which chiefly we have commended Christian Religion; the certainty whereof appears in this, namely, that those which out of mutual and deadly hatred fought all the occasion and matter of contention they could, durst not for all that proceed fo far, as to deny that these Precepts were commanded by Christ : no not even those that refuse to frame their lives and actions according to that rule.

67

But if there be any Man that will contradict these Principles, he is to be accounted like to those Philosophers that denyed the Snow to be white : For as these are confuted by sense, so are those convinced by the unanimous confent of all Christian Nations, and of the Books which were. written by the first Christians, and by those next to the first, and by the Doctors which followed afterward; even those that witnessed their faith in Christ by their death. For in the opinion of any indifferent Judge, that must needs be reputed the true dottrine of Christ, which fo many have fucceffively acknowledged and profeffed; like as we are perfwaded that was the doctrine of Socrates, which we read in Plato and Xenophon; as alfo that of Zeno the Philosopher, which we find held SECT. by the Stoicks. F

SECT. XX.

The excellency of Christian Religion is further proved from the dignity of the Author.

THE third thing wherein we faid Christian Religion excelled all others that are, or can be devised, was the manner whereby it was delivered and divulged. Where first we shall speak of the Author.

They that were authors of the wifdom among the Grecians, confessed that they could not affirm almost any thing for certain in their dostrine, because (quoth they) truth lies hid in a deep Pit; and our minds are no lefs dazled in the contemplation of divine things, than the eyes of an Owl in beholding the bright fhining of the Sun : Belides, there was none among them but was notorioufly guilty of fome vice or other. For fome were flatterers of Princes, others addicted to the impure love of Boys or Harlots ; others gloried in a Dog-like impudence. And that they all envied one another, their fcolding about words or matters of no moment is a great argument; as this is of their coldness in the worship of God, that even they who believed one God, fet him afide, and not only worshipped others, but fuch as they knew were no Gods; making that only the rule of their Religion, which was commonly received and practifed in publick. Touching the reward of godliness they determined nothing for certain, as appears by the last (farewel) disputation of Socrates at his death.

Maho-

Mahamet, the Author of a Religion that is fpread very far, his own Followers do not deny, to have been a Man that abandoned himfelf to luft, throughout his whole life: But gave no affurance at all, by which Men may be fatisfied, that there fhall indeed be fuch a reward as he promifed; confifting in banqueting and in venery; fince they do not fo much as pretend that his Body was raifed to life again, but it lies buried at Medina to this day.

And as for Moles the Founder of the Hebrew Law, though he was an excellent Perfon, yet he cannot be freed from all blame : fince he could fcarcely be perfwaded with much reluctance to undertake the Embaffy, which God charged him withal to the King of Egypt : and expressed alfo some distrust of God's promife for bringing water out of the Rock, as the Hebrews themselves confess. And he did fcarce partake of any one of those promises which by the Law he made unto the People, but was perplex'd with continual mutinies and feditions in the Wilderness; neither was he permitted to enter into that blessed and pleafant Land, fo much desired.

But Christ is defcribed by his Disciples, as a Perfon without all fin; nor did others ever produce any testimony to prove that He was guilty of the least: but whatsoever He prescribed to others, He performed Himself. For there was nothing that God gave Him in charge, which he did not faithfully perform; being most simple and void of guile in his whole life; most patient of injuries, nay, of cruel torments, as He shewed in suffering even the punishment of the Cross; most loving and kind to all Men, even to his Enemies; yea, those Enemies who put Him to death:

on whom he had fuch compassion that he befeeched God to forgive them.

As for the reward which he promifed unto his Disciples, it is both faid, and proved by undoubted arguments, that he himfelf is made partaker thereof after a most eminent and excellent manner. For after he was rifen from the dead. there were many that beheld, and heard, and handled, and felt Him: He also ascended up into Heaven in the fight of his Twelve Disciples; where He obtained the highest power, as was evident in that according to his promise made at his departure, he endued them that were his Followers with ability to fpeak those Languages which they had never learnt, and with other wonderworking Powers; which will not let us doubt, either of his faithfulnefs, or of his Power to bestow upon us the reward which he hath promised. And thus we have shewn how that this Religion is more excellent than others, in regard that Christ the Author of it hath himself performed what he commanded; as also in his own perfon obtained, and already enjoyeth the happines that he promised.

SECT. XXI.

Also from the wonderful spreading of this Religion.

E T us in the next place defcend to the effects of this doctrine brought by him to the World: which, if they be well weighed, will appear to be fuch, that if God have any care of humane affairs, affairs, this doctrine cannot but be believed to be Divine. It was very agreeable to Divine Providence, to make that which was beft, to be of the greatest and largest extent. Now such was the fuccefs of the Christian Religion; which, we fee publisht and taught through all Europe, not excepting the most Northern Provinces : and no lefs through all Afia, even the Islands of it in the Sea : through Egypt alfo and Athiopia, and some other parts of Africa: And lastly, through America. Nor is this only done now, but was fo anciently, as is witneffed by the Hiltories of all times, by the Books of Christians, the acts of Synods, and by that old Tradition at this day preferved among the Barbarians concerning the Travels and Miracles of Thomas, Andrew, and other Apostles. Clemens, Tertullian, and some Ancients belides, have noted how far the name of Christ was known amongst the Britains, Germans, and other most remote Nations in their times. And certainly there is no other Religion comparable hereunto for ample and large extent. Pagani/m indeed is one name, but cannot be faid to be one Religion; fince that it was neither agreed upon by the Profeffors thereof what one thing they should worship; but some adored the Stars, others the Elements, and a third fort reverenced their Cattel, others fuch things as have no subfiftence : Nor was this Worship performed by virtue of the fame Law, nor from any common Mafter.

The Jews indeed are difperfed and fcattered up and down, yet remain one people. Howbeit their Religion had never any notable growth or increase after Chriss's Ascension: and their Law was not to much made known by them, as by Christians. F 3

The Truth of Book II.

Then for Mahumetanism, it is possible of Land enough, but 'tis not alone: for Christian Religion is also professed in the fame Countries; where, in some places there are greater numbers of Christians than of Turks: who, on the contrary, are not to be found at all, in most parts where Christianity is planted.

SECT. XXII.

Confidering the meeknefs and fimplicity of them that first taught this Religion.

TT follows that we confider by what means this Christian Religion had its augmentation and increase, that therein it may be comparable, and preferred before others. We see it commonly true of most Men, that they will ealily follow the examples of Kings and Potentates what way foever they go; specially if Law and Penalties compell them to it. Hereby were the Religions of the Pagans, and of Mahomet propagated. But they that first taught the Christian Religion not only wanted all civil power and authority, but were of mean condition, no better than poor Fifhermen, Weavers, and the like. Yet by fuch Mens pains and industry, that doctrine, within the space of Thirty Years, or thereabouts, was published not only throughout all the parts of the Roman Empire, but also among the Parthians and remote Indians.

Nor was it thus only in the beginning; but for almost three whole Ages together, this Religion was fo promoted by the endeavours of private Men; without any threatnings; without any Worldly thing to invite Men to it: yea, against the will and the most violent opposition of those who then had the Imperial Power; that before Constantine professed Christianity, this was become, very near, the greatest part of the Roman World.

Amongst the Grecians that taught Morality, divers there were that commended themfelves alfo very much by their skill in other Arts. As the Platonists were famous for the study of Geometry, the Peripateticks for the Hiftory of Plants and living Creatures, the Storcks for Logical fubtilty, the Pythagoreans for knowledge of numbers and harmony : many alfo were admirable for eloquence, as Xenophon, Plaso, and Theophrastus. But the first Doctors and Teachers of Christianity were endued with no fuch art, but used the plainest language, without inticing words; only after a bare manner or naked form of speech pronouncing their precepts, promifes, and threatnings. Which having no efficacy in themfelves proportionable to fuch a progress as Christianity made, we must needs confess, it was either attended by Miracles, or by God's fecret power affifting the bufinefs, or both together.

SECT. XXIII.

What great impediments there were that might terrifie Men from the embracing or the professing hereof.

TEreunto may be added another thing confiderable, namely, that they who received Christianity from those Teachers, had not their minds void of a certain form and rule of Religion; and fo were not by that means ductile and eafie to be drawn, as they were who first received the Paganish worship and Mahomet's Law: much less was their minds prepared for it, by fome antecedent inftitution; as the Hebrews by Circumcifion, and the knowledge of one God, were made fit to accept the Law of Moles : But quite contrary, were filled with Opinions and Cuftoms, which are a kind of another nature, repugnant to those new Institutions; being educated, viz. and confirmed by the authority of Laws and of their Parents, in the Paganish Religion, or the Jewish Rites.

Befides this, there was another impediment, to wit, the moft grievous evils, which they who undertook Christianity, must expect to fuffer, or had reason to fear, upon that account. For feeing that humane nature abhors fuch evils, it must needs follow, that the causes of those evils cannot be admitted of without much difficulty. A long time were the Christians deprived of all honours and dignities; and likewise much afflicted with divers penalties, with confiscation of goods and banishments: which notwithstanding were were all but flea-bitings, for they were condemned to dig in the Mines; and to fuffer torments, than which more cruel could not be devifed.

And fuch multitudes of them were put to death, that there never was a greater number of Men at one time fwept away, and devoured, either by famine, or pestilence, or war, as the writers of those times do testifie. Their manner and kind of death alfo was not or dinary, but fome were buried alive; others crucified; others endured punishments of the like kind, which cannot be read or thought of without the greatest horror : and yet this favage cruelty, which continued without much intermission (and that not every where) till almost the time of Constantine, in the Roman World, and in other places endured longer; was fo far from diminishing the number of Christians; that, quite contrary, their Blood might be called the Seed of the Church: there fprang up still fo many, in the room of those that were cut off.

Now let us herein also compare other Religions with Christianity. The Greeks and the reft of the Pagans, who are wont to magnifie their own things above measure; yet give us in but a very fhort Catalogue of such as suffered death for the fake of their Doctrine: Some Gymnosophists, Socrates, not many more, are all they can number. And in those eminent Men, it can scarce be denied, but that there might be fome desire of transmitting the same to Posterity, which had a hand in the Business. But amongst those Christians that suffered martyrdom for their faith, there were very many of mean rank, of the common fort of People, such as were scarce ever taken taken notice of, or known to their Neighbours that lived hard by them. There were Women alfo, Virgins, and young Men; fuch as had no defire nor any probable hope of getting renown in future times by their fufferings : According as in the Books of Martyrs, we find the Names but of a few in comparison of the whole number of those that were put to death, who are only registred in gross.

To which we must add, that by a small compliance and fimulation, suppose by casting a little Frankincense upon the Altar, most of them might have freed themselves from such punishments. Which cannot be faid of those Philosophers; who, whatfoever they might think fecretly in their hearts, in all their apparent actions, conform'd themfelves to the vulgar cuftoms. So that, to have fuffered death for the honour of God, cannot well be attributed to any other, but only the Jews and Christians. And not to the Jews neither, after the times of Christ: nor before them, but to a few, if they be compared with Christians. More of which suffered for the Law of Christ in some one Province; than the Tews ever did; whose patience in this kind may all very near be reduced to the times of Manaffer, and of Antiochus.

Wherefore, feeing Christian Religion in this particular also fo vaftly excells all other, it ought justly to be preferred before them. And from fuch a multitude of all kinds, and fexes of People, diffinguish'd by fo many feveral places and ages, as did not stick to die for this Religion ; we may well gather, there was very great cause of fuch conftancy : which cannot be imagined to be any other but the light of Truth, and the Spirit of GOD. SECT.

SECT. XXIV.

Answer to them that require more forcible Reasons.

Inally, if any yet be not fatisfied with these arguments abovesaid, but desire more forcible reasons for confirmation of the Christian Religion; let fuch know; that according as things are divers, they must also have divers kinds of Proofs. Thus is there one way in Mathematicks, another in Physicki, a third in matters of advice and counfel; and laftly, another kind, when a matter of fact is in question : wherein verily we must rest content when the testimonies are free from all fuspicion of untruth. Otherwise down goes not only all the use of history, and a great part of the art of Physick, but all the piety also that ought to be between Parents and Children, which cannot be known other ways. And indeed it is the pleafure of Almighty God, that those things which he would have us to believe (fo that the very belief thereof may be imputed to us for obedience) should not fo evidently appear, as those things which are apprehended by fense and plain demonstration; but only be fo far forth re-vealed as may beget faith, and a perswasion thereof in the hearts and minds of fuch as are not obstinate : That so the Word of the Gospel may be as a touchstone, whereby Mens dispositions may be tried whether they be curable or not.For feeing these arguments, whereof we have spoken, have induced to many honeft, godly, and wife Men to approve of this Religion, it is thereby plain plain enough that the fault of other Mens infidelity is not for want of fufficient testimony, but becanfe they would not have that to be had and embraced for truth, which is contrary to their affections and defires : It being, that is, an hard matter for them to make no great account of honours, and other worldly advantages; which they must do, if they receive what Christ hath taught, and fo become engaged to observe his Precepts. Which is discovered to be true by this very thing; that they take many other Hiftorical Narrations to be true; which notwithstanding appear to be fo meerly by authority: and not by any fuch foot-steps of them remaining at this day, as the History of Christ hath; partly in the confession of the Jews, who are now in being, and partly in those things, which are every where found in the Assemblies of Christian People; of which it must needs be granted there was fome caufe.

Laftly, feeing the long duration or continuance of Christian Religion, and the large extent thereof can be ascribed to no humane power, therefore it must be attributed to miracles : or if any deny that it came to pass through a miraculous manner; this very getting fo great strength and power without a miracle, may be justly thought to surpass any miracle.

SECT. I.

To prove the Authority of the Books of the New Covenant.

FTER that a Man is once perfwaded by the reafons abovefaid, or is induced by any other arguments to believe that this Religion which Chriftians profefs is the trueft, and abfolutely the beft; if he defire to learn all the parts thereof, then must he have recourfe unto the most ancient writings that contain the fame Religion, which commonly we call the Books of the New Testament, or rather new Covenant.

For he is very unreasonable who denies this Religion to be contained in those Books, as all Christians affirm. Since it is but equity to believe every every Sect; be it good, or be it bad; when it fays its opinions are to be found in fuch or fuch a Book: as we believe the Mahometans, that the Religion of Mahomet is contained in the Alcoran.

Forafmuch then as we have before proved that the Chriftian Religion is most true; and it is manifest withal that it is contained in these Books, if there were no other ground, yet this alone is fufficient to prove and avouch the Authority of those Books.

But if any body requires a more particular demonftration of it, I must first lay down this Rule, which all indifferent Judges will allow; that it is incumbent upon him, who will impugn the authority of any writing received for many Ages, to produce Arguments which prove that Writing to be false: which if he cannot do, that Book is to be defended, as in possible of its Authority.

SECT. II.

Here is shewn that such Books were written by the Authors, whose names they have prefixed.

WE fay then that those Books which are not in question amongst Christians, and carry before them a certain Name, are the very Works of those Authors whose names they bear; Because those primitive Fathers, Justin, Irenaus, Clemens, and others after them do quote quote those Books under these very names. As alfo because Tertullian witnesseth that there were Original Copies of fome of those Books extant in his time. And belides, all the Churches received those Books for authentical, before there were any common publick Meetings. Neither did ever the Pagans or Jews raife any controversie about this, as if these were not the works of those Men, whofe they were faid to be : but Julian himfelf plainly confelleth that those were the writings of Peter and Paul, Matthew, Mark, and Luke, which Christians under those names have read and received. For as no Man in his wits can doubt that those Writings, which go under the names of Homer and Virgil, are truly theirs, becaufe the one hath been fo long time received among the Latin, and the other among the Greek Authors : In like manner, it were more abfurd to bring the Authors of those Books in question, which are granted almost by all the nations in the world.

SECT. III.

Some Books were anciently doubted of.

IN the Volume of the New Covenant, there are fome Books indeed now received, which were not fo received from the beginning, as the fecond Epiftle of St. Peter, that of St. James and Jude, two of St. John the Elder, the Revelation, and the Epiftle to the Hebrews: Yet this is certain, that they were acknowledged by mamy Churches; which appears fufficiently from hence, that the ancient Chriftians use their Teftimonies Testimonies as Sacred : Which makes it credible that fuch Churches as from the beginning had not those Books, either were ignorant of them, or doubtful : Yet afterward when they were better informed touching the same, they admitted them into the Canon (as we now see) according to the example of other Churches.

Neither can any good reafon be given why any Man fhould counterfeit those Books, fince there is nothing comprised in them, neither can ought thence be collected which is not abundantly expressed in other Books unquestioned.

SECT. IV.

The Authority of such Books as have no Titles, is proved from the quality of the Writers.

A ND here let no Man miftruft the verity of the Epiftle to the Hebrews, becaufe the Writer of it is unknown; nor doubt of the two Epiftles of S. John and the Revelation, becaufe fome Men do queftion, whether the Author of them was John the Apoftle, or fome other of that name? For the name is not fo much to be regarded as the quality or condition of Writers. Hence it is that we receive many Books of Hiftory, whose Authors are to us unknown; As that concerning the Alexandrian War by Cafar : becaufe we may perceive that whosever writ the fame, lived in those times, and was present when the things were done. In like manner it ought ought to fuffice us, that whofoever wrote the Books we speak of, both lived in the primitive Age, and were endued with Apostolical gifts. For if any body will fay, that these qualities might be feigned, as the very Names might be in other Writings; he fays that which is not credible, viz. that they who every where prefs the study of truth and piety, would for no cause at all make themfelves guilty of the crime of forgery: which is not only deteftable among all good Men, but by the Roman Laws was to be punished with death.

SECT. V.

Thefe Pen-men writ the Truth, because they had certain knowledge of what they writ.

HIS therefore must be allowed, that the Books of the New Covenant were written by those Authors, whose Names they bear, or by fuch as bear fufficient witnefs of themfelves : To which if we farther add, that they were also well acquainted with the matters whereof they wrote, and had no purpose to lye or diffemble, it will follow that the things which they committed to writing were both certain and true, becaufe every untruth proceeds either from ignorance.or from a wicked desire to deceive.

As touching Matthem, John, Peter and Jude, they were all of the fociety and fellowship of those Twelve whom Jesus did chuse to be witnesses of his Life and Doctrine; fo that they could not want notice of those things which they did relate late. The fame may be faid of James, who was either an Apofile, or as fome think the next a-kin to Jelus, and by the Apostle's confectated Bishop of Hierufalem. Paul alfo could not err through lack of knowledge, about those Points which he professeth were revealed to him by Jesus himfelf reigning in Heaven; nor could he, or Luke either, who was an infeparable companion to him in his travels, be deceived about those things which were done by himfelf. This Luke might eafily know the certainty of those things which he writ concerning the life and death of Jefus: For he was born in the places next adjoining to Palestina; through which Country when he travelled, he faith he fpake with fuch perfons as were eye-witneffes of the things that were done. For doubtlefs belides the Apostles with whom he had familiarity, there lived many others at that time who had been cured by Jefus, and had feen him both before his Death and after his Refurrection.

If we will give credit to Tacitus and Suctorians in those things which happened a long time before they were born, because we are confident that they diligently enquired into the truth thereof; how much more ought we to believe this Writer, who faith that he received all the things which he relates from them that had feen the fame.

It is credibly reported of Mark, that he was a conftant companion with Peter, fo that whatfoever he writ, are to be look'd upon as dictated by Peter, who could not be ignorant thereof. Befides, the fame things that he writes are almost all extant in the Writings of the Apostles. Neither could the Anthor of the Aposalypfe be deceived or deluded in those Visions, which he faith were fent fent unto him from Heaven. Nor he that writ the Epiftle to the Hebrews err in those things which he profession, either to be inspired into him by the Spirit of God, or else saught him by the Apostles.

SECT VI.

As also because they would not lye.

THE other reason we spake of to prove the truth of the said Holy Writers, because they had no will to tell an untruth, is twisted with that which we handled above, when in general we proved the truth of Christian Religion, and of the History of the Resurction of Christ.

Those that will accuse any Witness for the pravity of their will, must produce fomething by which it may be thought credible, their will might be diverted from uttering the truth : but this cannot be averred of the faid Authors. For if any do object and fay, that they acted in their own caufe, and did their own bulinefs; we muft fee why this should be thought their cause and intereft. Not that they might get any thing by it in this World, or thereby avoid any danger: when for the fake of this profession, they both loft all the goods of this World, and ventured upon all manner of dangers. This therefore was not their cause and interest, but only out of reverence to God : which fure doth not perfwade Men to lye; especially in fuch a bufines, whereupon depends the everlaiting Salvation of Mankind.

Such an impious piece of villainy we cannot believe they could be guilty of , if we confider either their Doctrines, every where most full of piety; or their life, which was never yet accufed of any wicked deed : no not by their greatest Enemies, who objected nothing to them, but their want of learning and unskilfulnefs; which did not qualifie them fure for inventing falfehoods. And indeed, if there had been the least spice, as we speak, of fraud and cheating in them, they would not themfelves have recorded their own faults, and preferved the memory of them : as of their all forfaking their Master when he was in danger, and Peter's denial of him three times.

SECT. VII.

A Confirmation of the Fidelity of these Au-thors from the Miracles which they wrought.

N the other fide God himself gave illustri-ous testimonies of their Fidelity by working monders, which either they or their Disciples with great boldnefs publickly avouched, adding alfo the names of the perfons, places, and other circumstances : So that the truth or fallhood of their affertion might eafily have been difcovered by the inquisition of the Magistrate.

their curing the diseases of the body upon a fudden in the fight of the People. Neither were they any whit difinayed with fear either of the Jewish Magistrates of those times, whom they knew to be most maliciously fet against them; or of the Romans, who were far from having any good will to them, and, they were fure, would lay hold on any thing on which they might ground a charge of their being inventors of a new Religion : and yet neither Jews nor Pagans, in the times immediately following, durft ever deny, that wonders were wrought by those Men. Yea, the Miracles of Peter are mentioned by Phlegon in his Annals, who lived under Adrian the Emperor. Moreover the Christians themfelves in those Books that contain a reason of their. faith, which they exhibited to the Emperors, to the Senate, and to the Governours, do relate thefe things as most manifest and unquestionable truths: yea, they openly report that there continued a wonderful vertue of working strange effects at their Sepulchres for fome Ages after their Death; which if it had been falfe, they knew that to their shame and punishment the Magistrates could have confuted it very eafily. But there were fuch multitude of Miracles wrought at the Sepulchres I spoke of, and so many Witneffes of them, that they extorted even from Porphyry a confession of it.

The Truth of the Writings confirmed from bence, that many things are found there which the event hath proved to be divinely revealed.

THESE things ought to fuffice, but there are other Arguments which we may heap upon these, to prove the truth and fidelity of these Authors Writings. For many things are therein foretold, which were impossible for Men by their own power to know or bring to pass: yet we see the truth thereof wonderfully confirmed by the event.

Thus it was foreeold that this Religion should upon a sudden have a large and ample increase; that it should continue for ever; and though it were rejected by most of the Jews, yet should it be imbraced by the Gentiles. Thus likewife was foreeold what hatred and spight the Jews would bear against them that professed this Religion, and what grievous Perfecutions they should undergo: The Siege also and destrution both of Hierussiem, and of the Temple, together with the miserable Calamities of the Jewish Nation,

SECT. IX.

As allo from God's Care in preferving his People from falle writings.

TDESIDES this, if it be granted that God D out of his providence takes care of humane affairs, fpecially fuch as belong to his honour and worship; then it cannot be that he should fuffer to great a multitude of Men, who had no other delign but to worthip God after a holy manner, to be cheated with lying Books. And forafunch as fince the time that fo many Sells have forung up in Christianity, there hath not been one that received not either all or the maft of those Boaks, (excepting some few that contain no singular matter differing from the reft) it is a great argument that no material thing could be objected against these writings; specially since the faid Seas were to partial and ipitefully bent against each other, that what one approved, others rejected, even for this reason, because it was there approved:

SECT. X.

Answer to the Objection, That divers Books were not received by all.

THERE were fome indeed, though very few, among those that would be called Christians, who rejected all those Books, which G 4 they they faw contradicted their peculiar Opinions. Such, for inftance, as out of hatred of the Jews reviled their God, the Maker of the World; and the Law which he had given them: or on the other fide, fuch as for fear of the evils which Christians were to undergo, chose to lurk and lie hid under the name of Fews; who had liber-ty, without any danger, to profess their Réligion. But these very Men were renounced, in those times, by all other Christians throughout the World : when as yet all that differed in their opinions, with the fafety of piety, were tolerated, by the order of the Apostles, with great patience. As for the former kind of these adulterate Christians, I think they have been fufficiently confuted, both by that which we have faid before, when we proved that there was but one onely true God, the fole framer of the whole World; As alfo by those very Books, which that they might have fome femblance of Christians, they did admit of, specially the Gospel of Luke : wherein is evidently shewn that the same God whom Moles and the Hebrews worshipped, was preached by Christ. And the other fort we shall more fitly confute, when we come to oppugn. thole that both are and would be called Jews. For the prefent only this I fay, that their impudence is wonderful great, who flight and extenuate the authority of Paul; feeing there was not one of all the Apostles, that founded and taught more Churches than he did : and his Miracles were at that time reported to be exceeding numerous, when (as e'rewhile we faid) there might eafily have been trial, and enquiry made of the truth of the matten li then it be true that he wrought wonders, why may we not believe him concerning ing his Heavenly Visions, and instruction received from Chrift himfelf? to whom if he was fo dear, it cannot be that he should teach any thing inglorious or ingrateful unto Christ, as falsities or untruths would have been. And as touching that particular, which is the only thing whereof they accuse him, namely his doctrine of the liberty and freedom which was purchased for the Hebrews from those Rites and Ceremonies that were formerly commanded them by MOSES; He had no reafon at all to teach it, but only the truth of the thing which he aflerted. For he himfelf was both circumcifed, and did alfo of his own accord observe very many things which the Law enjoined. And then for the fake of the Christian Religion, he both did more difficult and fuffered harder things than the Law required, or could be expected upon the account of the Law; and taught alfo his Disciples to do and fuffer the like. Whence it appears that he uttered no flattering or enticing speeches unto his auditors; who were taught instead of the Sabbath, to keep every day holy for divine worship, and instead of the little expences which the Law required to fuffer the loss of all their goods, and instead of the blond of Beasts, to confecrate their own bloud unto God. And further, Paul himfelf plainly affirms, that Peter, John, and James, in token of their confent with him, gave him the right hands of fellowship: which he never durst have spoken, if it had not been true, because the fame Men being then alive might have convicted him for a lyar.

These therefore(of whom I have now spoken) being excluded, as scarce deserving the name of Christians; the most manifest consent of so many

Book III.

The Truth of

many Congregations of Christians, who received these Books, added to what hath been spoken of the Miracles which the Writers of them wrought, and the singular care which God takes about matters of this kind, ought to be sufficient to induce any indifferent Men to give credit thereunto: specially considering that they are wont commonly to credit any other Books of History, which have no such testimonies; unless they see some plain reason to the contrary, which cannot be faid of any of those Books whereof we have spoken.

SECT. XI.

Answer to an Objection, That these Books seem to contain things impossible.

FOR if any body fay, that fome things are related in thefe Books, which are impoffible to be done; the Objection vanifhes, when we confider what hath been before difcourfed; that there are things which cannot indeed be done by Men, but are poffible with God (fuch, that is, as include in themfelves no repugnancy or contradiction, as we fpeak) and that in the number of fuch things, are even those Miraculous powers which we most of all admire, and the recalling of the Dead to Life again.

SECT.

Book III.

SECT. XII.

Or things contrary to Reason.

NEITHER are they to be more regarded, who fay that forme data who fay that fome doctrines are comprised in these Books which are difagreeing to right reason : For this is confuted first by such a vast multitude of Men who wanted no wit, learning or wifdom, as have followed the authority of thefe Books ever fince the first times. And then all those things which were shewn in the first Book to be confonant to right reafon; for inftance, that there is one God, who alone is abfolutely perfect, infinite in vertue, life, wildom, and goodness, of whom all things that have any being were made : whose care and providence reacheth over all his works, efpecially unto Men; and who can after this life bountifully reward all them that obey him : and that we ought to bridle our fenfual appetites : that amongst Men there is kindred and alliance, and therefore they ought to love one another with fincere affection; All these you shall find most plainly delivered in these Books. But to affert any thing for certain beyond these, either about the nature of God, or about his will, by the mere conduct of humane reason, the contrary resolutions, not only of the Schools among themfelves, but of particular Philosophers, may teach us how unfafe and fallacious it is.

And it is no marvel: for if Men do fo far difagree in their opinions, when they difpute about the nature of their own Soul, then they must must needs much more dissent, when they go about to determine any thing not revealed con-cerning the higheft mind, and the most supreme Spirit which to far transcends our weak apprehension. If (as prudent Men are wont to fay) to enquire into the Counsels of Kings be dangerens, and not to be attempted or attained by us; who then is there fo fagacious, that he fhould hope to be able by his own conjecture to find out what God's Will is in those things, which he may will freely as he pleases? Wherefore Plate faid very well, that none of these hidden mysteries could be known without an Oracle. Now there can no Oracle be proved to be an Oracle indeed by any clearer testimonies than those that are contained in the faid Books of the new covenant. It is fo far from being proved, that it is not fo much as afferted, that God did ever reveal any thing to Men concerning his nature, which was repugnant to thefe Books : Nor can there any later fignification of his will, which is credible, be produced. For if there was any thing otherwife commanded or permitted before the times of Christ, in such matters as are either plainly indifferent, or not at all in themfelves due, nor plainly difhonest, it makes nothing against these Books; fince that in fuch matters the later laws annul the former.

Answer to an Objection, That some of these Books are repugnant to the other.

THERE are those who are wont further to object against these Books, that there is sometime a certain disagreement in their sence. But, quite contrary, whofoever will judge of this matter with an indifferent mind, shall find this also may be added to the arguments for the authority of these Books, that we do most manifeftly and apparently agree about fuch things as concern any weighty point of doctrine or history : Which confent and accord cannot elfewhere he found among any other Writers that are of one and the fame fett or profession, whether we confider the Jews or the Greek Philofophers, the Physicians or the Roman Lawyers. All which do not only differ much among themfelves, yea, even those that are of the fame fect, as Plato and Xenophon; but oftentimes one shall find the fame Writer to affirm now one thing, then another, as if he were forgetful of himfelf, or knew not what to refolve upon. But thefe Writers, of whom we speak, do inculcate and express the fame points of faith; they deliver the same Commandments; and as for their narration of the life, and death, and refurrection of Christ, the Sum and fubstance in them all is the very fame.

As touching fome finall circumftances, which make nothing to the main matter, they might happily have admitted a very easie reconciliation;

tion; though we now do not know it, because of the likeness of things done at divers times, the ambiguity of names, or more names than one of the fame Man or Place, and fuch like things. Nay this very thing ought to vindicate and free these Writers from all fuspicion of falfehood; it being usual with those that would have lyes and untruths credited, to relate all circumftances by compact and agreement, fo as there shall not appear any colour or filew of difference. Or if it be fo, that for any finall difference, which cannot to exactly be reconciled, a whole Book shall lose its credit; then we must believe no Books at all, specially those of History : yet we see that Polybins, Halicarnaffenfis, Livy, and Plutarch, for the Jubstance of them are efteemed authentical and true, though in fome circumstances they do not agree : Which makes it the more equal and juft, that no fuch thing should destroy their credit, who we see by their very Writings were always most studious of Piety and Truth.

Answer to an Objection, taken from ontward Testimonies, which make more for these Books.

HERE remains another way of overthrowing a Testimony, which is by producing contrary Testimonies out of other Authors.

But

But I dare boldly fay, that there are no fuch testimonies to be found, unless a Man will produce the fayings of them that were born a long time after, and of fuch also as did so openly profess enmity against Christianity, that they could be no fit Witnesses in this matter.

Nay, on the contrary, if need were, we could alledge many testimonies to confirm divers parts of the hiftory which is delivered in the faid Books. Thus both Hebrews and Pagans report that Je-fus was crucified, and that fundry miracles were done by him and his Difciples. Those most famous Books of Josephus, which were fet forth about Forty Years after Christ's Afcension, do make mention of Herod, Pilate, Festus, Felix, John the Baptist, Gamaliel, and of the destruction of Hierusalem at large. Herewithal agree that which the Authors of the Talmud have recorded concerning those times. Tacitus relates how cruelly Nero used the Chrifians. And anciently there were certain Books extant, not only of private Men, as of Phlegon, and others ; but alto fome publick Acts, whereunto the Christians appealed, for that in them there was mention made of the Star that appeared at Christ's Nativity, and also of the Earthquake and Eclipse of the Sun (against the course of Nature, it being then full Moon) at the time of Christ's Passion upon the Crofs.

SECT. XV.

Answer to the Objection, That the Scriptures were changed.

TOW what can be farther objected against these Books, I fee not, unless it be faid that they remained not altogether the fame that they were from the beginning. And indeed it must be granted, that what is common to other Books might happen, nay did happen to these; namely, that by the carelefness, or the perverse care of the Transcribers, fome Letters, syllables or words might be changed, left out, or added. But it is an unjust thing to bring in question the truth of fuch a Book, or evidence only, because in fo many ages there could not but be great variety of Copies, fince both cuftom and reason requires, that what appears in the most, and most ancient Copies, be preferred to the reft. But that either by fraud or any other way, all the Copies were corrupted, and that in point of doctrine, or some remarkable piece of History, will never be proved : for there are neither any evidences, nor any witneffes of those times, which attest it. But if, as was faid before, there be any thing urged, in much later times, by those who bare an implacable hatred to the Disciples of these Books; that ought to be look'd upon as a Reproach, not as a Testimony.

And this truly, which we have faid, may be well thought a fufficient Answer to those, who object a change in the Scripture; for he who affirms that, especially against a writing which hath hath been long, and in abundance of places, received, ought himself to prove his Charge. But to make the vanity of this Objection more fully appear, we will shew, that what they feign, neither was, nor could be done.

We have proved before, that the Books were written by the Authors whofe Names they bear : Which being granted, it follows, that other Books were not foisted into their room, nor was any notable part of them changed. For, fince that change must needs have fome defign, that part would notorioufly differ from the other Parts and Books which were not changed; which cannot now any where be difcerned : Nay, there is an admirable agreement, as we faid, in their Senfes.

Befides, as foon as any of the Apostles or Apoftolical Men published any thing, there is no doubt to be made, but Christians, with great diligence, (as became their piety, and care to preferve and propagate truth to Posterity) took from thence many Copies for their use : Which therefore were dispersed as far as the Christian Name, through Europe, Afia and Egypt ; in which places the Greek Language was fpoken.

And more than this, the Original Copies alfo, as we faid before, were preferved till two Hundred Years after Chrift. Now it was not poffible that any Book, diffused into fo many Copies, and kept, not only by the private diligence of particular Perfons, but the common care of the Churches, should be altered by the hand of any falsifier. Add further, that these Books, in the following Ages, were translated into the Syriack. Athiopick, Arabick and Latin Tongues: Which Translations are yet extant; and do not differ in Ĥ any thing of moment from the Greek Capies them-

Befides, we have the Writings of those Men, who were taught by the Apostles themselves, or by their Disciples, wherein many places are cited out of these Books, to the fame sense and meaning which now we read them. Neither was there any in the Church of fo great anthority in those times, as to have met with obedience, if he would have changed any thing : As is plain enough by the free and open diffent of krenaus, Tertullian and Cyprian, from those that were most eminent in the Church. After which times there fucceeded many other Men, of great Learning and Judgment, who having first made diligent enquiry thereof, received thefe Books, as retaining their ariginal puaity. Hitherto alfo may be referred what but now we faid of divers Sects of Chriftians; all which, at least fuch as acknowledged God to be the Maker of the World, and Chrift to be the Author of a new Law, did receive and use these Books accordingly as we do the fame. And if any had attempted to alter, or put any thing new into any part thereof, they should have been accused by the rest for fargery and false-dealing therein. Neither was there ever any Sect that had the liberty, at their pleafure, to alter any of thefe Books for their own turns : For it is manifest, that all of them did draw their arguments, one against another, out of the fame. And as for that which we touched concerning Divine Providence, it belongs no lefs unto the chiefest parts, than unto the whole Books; namely, that it is not agreeable to it, that GOD fhould fuffer fo many Thousand Men, which incerely defired to be godly, and earnestly fought after eternal life, to be

SECT. XVI.

For the Authority of the Books of the Old Testament.

NOW, for a finuch as it hath pleafed God to leave us also the writings and evidences of the Jewish Religion, which was anciently the true, and affords no finall testimonies for Christianity; therefore it will not be amifs, in the next place, to justifie the authority of the same. First then, That these Books were written by the same Men, whole Names they bear, is manifest in like manner as we have proved of ours before of the New Covenant.

These Authors were either Prophets, or other very faithful and credible Men, fuch as was Efdras, who is thought to have collected the Books of the Old Testament into one Volume, during the life-time of the Prophets Haggai, Malachi and Zachary. I will not here repeat again what is faid before, in the commendation of Moles. Both that part of Hiftery, which at first was delivered by him, as we have shewn in the first Book; and that also which was collected after his time is withessed even by many of the Hearben. Thus the Annals of the Phanicians have recorded the the names of David and Solomon, and their Leagues with the Men of Tyre. As well Berofus, as the Hebrew Writers, makes mention of Nebuchadonosor, and of other Chaldean Kings. He whom feremy calls Vaphres, King of Egypt, is termed Apries by Herodotus. In like manner the Books of the Grecians are replenished with Narrations concerning Cyrus and his Succeffors, until the times of Darius. And many other things concerning the Nation of the Jews are related by Jescphus, in his Books against Apion : Whereunto we may add what before we have touched out of Strabo and Trogus. But as for us Christians, we cannot in the least doubt of the truth of these Books, out of every one of which almost there are testimonies extant in our Books, which are found likewife in the Hebrew. Neither do we find, when Christ reprehended many things in the Doctors of the Law and Pharifees of his time, that ever he accused them of Forgery committed against the Writings of Moles, or the Prophets; or that they used counterfeit Books, or such as were changed.

Then, after Christ's time, it cannot be proved, neither is it credible, that the Scripture was corrupted in matters of any moment, if we confider rightly how far and wide, over the face of the Earth, the Nation of the Jews was spread, who every where were the Keepers of thefe Books. For, first of all, the Ten Tribes were led away captive by the Affyrians, into Media; then afterward the two other Tribes : And many of these also, after Cyrus granted them liberty to return, setled themselves in foreign Countries. The Macedonians invited them, with great pro-mifes, to come into Alexandria. The cruelty of Antiochus.

Antiochus, the Civil Wars of the Macchabees, together with those of Pompey and Soffins from without, did difperfe and fcatter abroad many of them. The parts of Africa about Cyrene, were full of the Jews; fo were the Cities of Afia, Macedonia, Lycaonia; and likewife the Isles of Cyprus, Crete, and others. Also what a number of them there was at Rome, may be learned out of Horace, Juvenal and Martial. Now it is not possible that fuch Multitudes, fo far distant one from another, should be cozened in this kind; neither could they ever accord all in the coining of an untruth. Add moreover, that almost Three Hundred Years before Chrift, at the appointment and care of the Kings of Fgypt, those Books of the Hebrews were translated into the Greek Tongue, by those that are called the Scventy Interpreters. So as then the Grecians had the fenfe and fubstance of them, though in another Language; whereby they were the lefs liable to be changed. Nay more; these Books were translated both into the Chaldee Tongue, and into that of Jernsalem, that is, the half Syriack, a little before, and a little after the time of Christ. Other Greek Translations afterward there were; as, namely, by Aquila, Symmachus and Theodotion; all which Origen compared with that of the Seventy Interpreters; and after him, others alfo; who could find no diversity of history, or of any matter worth speaking of.

Philo lived in the Reign of Caligula, and Jofephus furvived the times of both the Vefpafians; Which two Writers alledge out of the Hebrew Books the fame things that we read at this day.

Now in these very times began Christian Religion to be more and more propagated, being H 3 professed 104 professed by many of the Hebrews, and by sundry Persons that had learned the Hebrew Tongue; who, if the Jews had fallified in any notable part, could have quickly discovered it, by comparing more ancient Copies; and so have made it publickly known. But they are so far from doing this, that, on the other side, they alledge many testimonies out of the old Covenant, to the same fense and meaning that they are used by the Hebrews: Which Hebrews may sooner be accused of any other fault, than (I will not fay falshood, but of so much as) negligence about these Books; which they have so religiously and exactly deferibed and compared, that they know how often any one Letter is found therein.

The last, though not the least argument, to prove that the Jews did not purposely corrupt or alter the Scripture, may be, because the Christians, out of the very Books which are read by the Jews, do evince, and, as they trust, very strongly, that their Lord and Master Jesus is that fame very Messian which was anciently promised to the Jews, their Fore-Fathers. Which, above all things, the Jews would have taken care should not have been done, when the concroversie arose between them and the Christians, if ever it had been in their power to have changed what they listed.

A particular Confutation of the Religions opposite to Christianity.

HE Fourth Book beginning with that pleafure which many Men are wont to take, in beholding the danger wherein others are, while they are in none themfelves; flews, that it ought to be the greatest pleasure of a Christian Man in this life, aot only to rejoyce and bless himfelf that he hath found out the Truth, but to lend his help also to others that wander up and down in the Labyrinths of Errour; and to make them partakers of so great a benefit.

Which we in fome measure have endeavoured to do in the former Books: (the demonstration H_4 of of that which is true, containing in it felf the confutation of what is falfe) yet in regard that all kinds of Religions which oppofe themfelves to the Christian, viz. Paganifm, Judaifm and Mahometifm, besides that which is common to all, have certain errors proper to every one of them, and their peculiar Arguments which they are wont to oppose us withal. It will not be amiss to make a particular Disputation against every one of these; first beseching the Readers to free their Judgments from leaning to a Party, and from long custom and prejudice, (as impediments of a good mind) that with the greater indifferency they may take cognizance of what shall be faid.

SECT. II.

And first of Paganism, that there is but one God. Created Spirits are good or bad: the good not to be honoured, but as the most high God directs.

TO begin then againft Pagans: If they fay that there are divers eternal and co-equal Gods, we have confuted this Opinion before, in the first Book, where we taught that there is but orly one God, who is the cause of all things. Or if they, by the name of Gods, do understand the created Spirits which are superior to Men, they then either mean the good, or the bad : If they fay the good, first they ought to be well assured that fuch are so indeed, otherwise they commit a dangerous dangerous errour, in receiving Enemies instead of Friends, and Traytors for Ambaffadors. Then it were but reason that they should, in their very worship, make an evident difference between the most high God, and those Spirits; and likewife be fatisfied what order there is among them, what good may be expected from each of them, and what honour the most High is willing should be bestowed on every one of them. All which being wanting in their Religion, it is plain from thence how uncertain that Religion is, and how it were a fafer courfe for them to betake themfelves to the worship of one Almighty God ; which even Flato confessed was the duty of every wife Man; fpecially for that to whomfoever God is propitious and favourable, to them these good Angels must needs be ferviceable and gracious, being the Ministers and Servants of the most High.

SECT. III,

Evil Spirits adored by Pagans, and how impions a thing it is.

BUT it was the bad, not the good Spirits, which the Pagans did worship; as may be proved by weighty reasons: First, Because these adored Angels did not throw off their worshippers, unto the fervice of the true God; but, as much as in them lay, laboured to abolish the same; or, at least, in every respect, required equal honour with the Almighty. Secondly, Because they procured all the mischief they could to the worshippers of the One most High God, by provoking both both Magistrates and People to inflict punishments upon them. For when it was lawful for Poets to fing of the murders and adulteries committed by the Gods, and for the Epicures to take away all divine Providence, and any other Religion though never fo different in Rites) was allowed; as the Egyptian, the Phrygian, the Grecian, the Thusean, and the facted Rites of Rome; even then generally the Jews alone were made ridiculons, as appears by Satyrs and Epigrams written upon them; and fometimes also fuffered banishment. And as for Christians, they were afflicted with most cruel punishments: No other cause whereof can be given, than that both these Sects did worship one God, whose honour was impeached by the multitude of fuch Gods as the Heatthen adored, who did not fo much vie one with another. as with Him.

Thirdly, This was manifest by the manner of their worship, which no way befeemed any good and honest Spirit; namely, by humane blood; by the running of naked Men in the Temples; by Pageants and dancings, full of nasty filthines; such as may be seen at this day among some People of America and Africa, who yet sit in the darkness of Gentilism.

Yea, which is more, there both anciently were, and now are, People who worship'd evil Spirits; which they knew and professed to be such: Asy the Persians, Arimanius; the Greeks, those they called Cacadamons; the Latins, their Vejoves; and now some Athiopians and Indians, such like Deities; than which, nothing can be imagined more impious. For, what is religious worship but a restimony of an infinite goodness, that a Man doth acknowledge to be in him whom he worshippeth? Which

Which if it be exhibited unto a bad Spirit, it is false and deceitful, implying in it no less crime than high treason; forasmuch as the honour due unto the King is not only withdrawn from him, but is conferred upon his Enemy, and one that hath traiteroully revolted from him. Moreover vain is that perfuasion which they conceive of $G O D_{\bullet}$ that he is good, and therefore will not panif this offence ; becaufe they think, fo to do were contrary to his goodness : For mercy or clemency, that it may be just, hath its bounds and limits; and where wickedness abounds beyond measure, there justice doth, as it were, necessarily require the infliction of panishment. Neither is it less blameable, that they pretend Fear conftrains them to honour wicked Spirits, fince He that is perfectly good is as communicative alfo, and therefore the Author of all other Natures, which are his productions. And if he be, then it follows that he hath abfor lute power and dominion over all creatures, as over his workmanship; fo that nothing can be done by any of them, which he hath a defire to hinder. Which things being certainly true, we may eafily gather, that evil Spirits can no further do any hurt to him who hath God, most high, and most transcendently good, favourable to him, than that God, for the fake of fome good or other, shall think fit to permit.

Nor can a Man obtain any thing of those evil Spirits by his Prayers, which is not to be rejected; because he that is evil is then worst of all, when he feigns himself to be good: And the gists of Enemies are mere shares and treacheries. The Truth of

Against the Worschip which, in Paganism, is exhibited to Men after their Death.

Oreover, there were heretofore, and now VI also are Pagans, that tell us, they give honour and worship to the Souls of Men departed. But first they should have here also made some manifest distinction between this honour, and that which is due unto the most high God. Then again, all Prayers made to them are but vain and fruitlefs, unlefs those Spirits were able to give us fomething ; of which their worshippers have no certainty: Nor is there any more ground to fay that they can, than that they cannot. But another thing is worft of all, to wit, that many of them to whom fuch glory is given by the Heathen, in their life-time were notorioully wicked, and addicted to one filthy vice or other : Thus Bacchus was a Drunkard, and Hercules effeminate : Romulus proved a very Villain to his Brother, and Jupiter a Traytor to his own Father. So that their honour redounds to the difgrace of the true GOD, and of Vertue, which he loves; whilft Vices, which are inticing enough of themfelves, it recommends to Men by Religion.

Against worshipping of Stars and Elements.

OF more antiquity than this was the worfhipping of Stars, and of the Elements; as Fire, Water, Air and Earth; wherein great ignorance and folly was committed. For Prayers are the greatest part of religious worship, which cannot, without folly, be directed to any object, fave to intelligent natures : But Senfe tells us, that the Elements (as we call them) are no fuch things: And as for the Stars, if any fay they are, he will never be able to prove it, fince that no fuch matter can be collected from their operations and influences, which demonstrate their nature; but rather we may gather the contrary by their motion, which is not variable, like to that in things endued with liberty of will, but constant and unalterable. Befides, we have shewn before, that the course and motion of the Stars is appointed for the use of Men; whence Man ought to acknowledge himfelf to be both liker to God than they, in his better part; as also more dear unto him: And therefore much injury fhould he do to his own worth and dignity, if he fubmit himfelf to fuch things as God hath given to be ferviceable unto him; whereas, on the contrary, he ought rather to render thanks for them which cannot do, or it is not proved can do fo much for themfelves.

SECT VI.

Against worshipping of Brute Beasts.

BUT nothing is fo unworthy as this, that Men, especially the Egyptians, funk at length into fuch a fottishness, as to worship brute Beasts. For though in some of them there appears fome shadow, as we may call it, of understanding; yet that understanding is nothing, if we compare it with Man's : For they can neither express their inward conceptions by distinct words, or by writing; nor do works of divers kinds, no nor works of the fame kind after divers manners: much lefs can they attain to the knowledge of numbers, dimensions, and the celestial motions. Whereas, on the other fide, Man, by the force and diligence of his wit, catches all manner of Animals, though never fo ftrong; whether wild Beasts, Birds, or Filhes; and fo masters them, that, in some measure, he makes them subject to his Laws; as Elephants, Lyons, Horses and Oxen. Yea, from those which are hurtful, he draws to himfelf fome profit; as Medicines from Serpents: And hath this use and benefit from them all, (which is utterly unknown to them) that he contemplates the composition of their bodies, the situation of their parts; and comparing both their species and their kinds,one with another, learns from thence also his own dignity ; as much as the structure of Man's body is more perfect and noble, than that of the reft. Which things, if any Man rightly confider, he will be fo far from confidering other living Creatures tures as Gods, that he will rather look upon himfelf as conflictuted by the most High God, a kind of God over them.

SECT. VII.

Against worsbipping of things that are no Substances.

WE find also that the Grecians, Romans, and others, worfhipped those things which have no sublistence, but are mere Accidents of other things,

For, to omit those uncouch Deities, the Fever. Dame Impudence, and the like, let us name the better fort : Such were Health, which is nothing but a right temperature of the parts of the body : Good Fortune, which is an event that is correspondent to a Man's defire: The Affections alfo, fuch as love, fear, anger, hope, and the reft; which proceed from the confideration of fomething that is good or evil, easie or difficult; are certain motions or paffions in that part of the mind which is united to the body, by the blood efpecially; not having any absolute power of themselves, but are subordinate hand-maids to the commands of the will, their Mistress, at least in their continuance and direction. Then for Vertues, whole Names are divers; Prudence, in chusing what is profitable for us: Fortiende, in undertaking dangers: Justice, in abstaining from that which is another Man's : Temperance, in the moderation of pleasures, Oc. They are certain inclinations and propensions in the mind unto that which is. right, right, grown up by long exercife and practice; which, as they may be augmented in a Man; fo may they by neglect be diminifhed; nay, quite loft and abolifhed. As for Honour (whereunto we read there were Temples dedicated) it is other Men's judgment, or good opinion, concerning one whom they fuppofed endued with Vertue; which is often beftowed upon bad Men, as well as good, by the natural pronenefs there is in Men to err in their judgment.

These therefore having no sublistence, and therefore not to be compared, in dignity and worth, with things that do sublist, nor having any understanding of Men's prayers or veneration, it is most absurd and unreasonable to worship them as Gods; when for this very thing He is to be worshipped, who can both give and preferve them.

SECT. VIII.

Answer to the Argument of the Gentiles taken from Miracles done among them.

THE Pagans, for the commendation of their Religion, are wont to alledge Miracles; but fuch as in many things may be excepted against.

For the wifeft Menamong the Pagans rejected many of these, as supported by no testimony of any credible witness; but plainly counterfeit and fabulous. Other Miracles which they faid were done, hapned in some secret place, in the night, before one or two, whose eyes the craft of the Priests might easily delude by false shows and and appearances of things. And there are others which raifed great admiration, and paffed for wonders, meerly because they met with those who were ignorant of natural things; especially of hidden properties. As for inftance, fuch a thing might happen, if one fhould draw Iron with the Loadstone, among People who knew nothing of its vertue: in which arts Simon Magus, and Appollonius, as many have recorded, were very skilful.

I do not deny, but fome things greater than these were seen, which by Man's power alone could not be drawn out of natural causes; and yet did not need a power which was truly divine; that is, omnipotent: but might be performed by Spirits that are placed between God and Men. Who by their celerity, efficacy, fubtilty and diligence can eafily carry things far diftant from one place to another; and compound things that are very different, to the working of fuch effects as shall strike Men with astonishment. But that the Spirits, whereby this was effected, were not good, and therefore neither was the Religion good; appears already from what hath been faid before. And from hence alfo, that they faid they were compelled to do things, even against their wills, by the power of certain charms: when the wifest of the Pagans agree that there can be no fuch vertue in words; but only a power of perfwafion, and that no other way than by their fignification.

And it is another token of their wickedness, that they undertook to allure and draw this or that body, though never fo backward to it, into the love of fuch or fuch a Perfon. Wherein they were injurious to them; either in their vain promifes promifes, or in effecting what they promifed: for this alfo is forbidden by humane Laws, as a piece of Sorcery. Neither need any Man wonder why God fuffered fome marcels to be wrought by evil Spirits among the Gentiles, feeing they deferved to be cheated with fuch illufions, who to long time had forfaken the worfhip of the true God.

Moreover this is an argument of their weaknels and impotency, that their works never brought any confiderable good along with them. For if any feem'd to be call'd back to life after ` they were dead, they did not continue alive; neither could they exercise the functions of living Creatures. Or if it happened that any thing proceeding happily from a divine power, did appear to the Pagans; yet the fame was not foretold fhould come to pass for the confirmation of their Religion, and therefore there might be other causes, and far different reasons, which the divine efficacy propounded to it felf in the doing those things. As for example, if it was true, that Vespasian reftored fight to one blind; this was done, that he being thereby made more venerable, might the more eafily obtain the Roman Empire: to which he was chosen by God, that he might be a minister of his Judgments upon the Jews. More fuch like causes there may be of other wonders, which had no relation at all to their Religion.

And from Oracles.

THE very fame likewife, in a manner, may ferve for answer to that which they object concerning Oracles; efpecially what we have faid that these Men did worthily deferve to be deluded, for contempt of that knowledge which reason or ancient tradition suggested to every one of them. Then again the words of the Oracles, for the most part were ambiguous, and might eafily receive an interpretation, from any event whatfoever. Or if there was any thing more exprelly foretold by them, yet it is not neceffary that it should proceed from an all-knowing Mind: For it was either fuch a thing as might be forefeen by natural caufes then existing, as some Phyficians have foretold Difeafes that are a coming. or elfe fome probable conjecture might be made by that which commonly falls out, and usually comes to pass, as we read of fome perfons well skill'd in civil affairs, that have made notable gueffes at future events. Again, fuppose that amongst the Pagans, God fometimes used the miniftery of fome Prophets to toretel those things, which could have no certain caufe befides the will of God; yet this did not approve or confirm their heathenish Religion, but rather overthrew it. Such for inftance are those things, in the fourth Eclogue of Virgil, taken out of the Sibyls Verfes; where unwittingly the Poet gives us a lively defcription of the coming of Chrift, and his benefits. So in the fame Books of the Sibyle it was, I 2 Digitized by Goog that that he ought to be acknowledg'd as King, who should be our King indeed: and that he was to come out of the East, who should have dominion over all. We read in Porphyry of the Oracle of Apollo, which faith, that other Gods are aerial Spirits, but the God of the Hebrews is only to be worthipped : which faying, if the worthippers of Apollo obey, then they must cease to worthip him: if they do not obey it, then they make their God a lyar. Add farther, if those Spirits had refpected or intended the good of Mankind, above all things, they would have prefcribed a general Rule of life to Mankind, and alfo given Tome certain affurance of a reward to them that lived accordingly; neither of which was ever done by them.

On the other fide oftentimes in their Verfes we find fome Kings commended which were wicked Men, fome Champions extoll'd and dignifi'd with divine honour, others allured to immodest and unlawful love, or to the feeking after filthy lucre, or committing of Murder, as might be fhewn by many examples.

foundation thereof were quite overthrown. For if we take a view of all the Kingdoms and States that are among Christians or Mahumetans, we shall find no memory of Paganifm, but in Books. Nay Histories tell us, that even in those times, when the Emperors endeavoured to uphold the Pagan Religion either by violence and perfecution, as did the first of them; or by learning and fubtilry, as did Julian; it notwithstanding decay'd daily, not by any violent opposition, nor by the brightness and splendor of lineage and defcent, (for Jefus was accounted by the common fort only a Carpenter's Son;) nor by the flourishes of learning, which they that taught the Law of Chrift used not in their Sermons; nor by gifts and bribes, for they were poor, nor by any foothing and flattering fpeeches, for on the contrary they taught that all worldly advantages must be defpiled, and that all kind of adverfity must be undergone for the Gospel's fake. See then how weak and impotent Pagani (m was, which by fuch means came to ruine.

Neither did the Dollrine of Christ only make the credulity of the Gentiles to vanish, but even bad Spirits came out of divers bodies at the name of Christ: they became dumb also, and being demanded the reason of their filence, they were compelled to fay, they were able to do nothing where the name of Christ was called upon.

SECT. XI.

Answer to the Opinion of some that think the beginning and decay of Religions depend upon the efficacy of the Stars,

THERE have been Philofophers, that did afcribe the beginning and decay of every Religion unto the Stars : but this Star-gazing Science, which these Men profess to be skilled in, is delivered under fuch different rules, that one can be certain of nothing but only this, that there is no certainty at all therein.

I do not here speak of such effects as follow from a natural necessity of causes, but of those that proceed from the will of Man, which of it felf hath fuch liberty and freedom, that no necesfity or violence can be impressed upon it from without. For if the confent of the wilk did neceffarily follow any outward impression, then the power in our Soul, which we may perceive it hath to confult, deliberate and chuse, 'would be given in vain. Also the equity of all Laws, of all rewards and punishments would be taken away, seeing there can be neither fault nor merit in that which is altogether necessary and inevitable.

Again, there are divers evil alls or effects of the will, which if they proceeded of any neceffity from the Heavens, then the fame Heavens and Celeftial Bodies mult needs receive fuch efficacy from God, and fo it would follow, that God who is most perfectly good, is the true caufe of that which is Morally evil; and that when in his Law he profession to abhor wickedne/s, which which a force inferted by him into things themfelves will inevitably produce, he doth will two things contrary one to the other; that the fame thing fhould be done and not be done; and alfo that a Man offends in an action, which he doth by divine infligation.

Ĩ2Ť

They fpeak more probably, that fay the influences of the Stars do first affect the Air, then our Bodies, with fuch qualities as oftentimes do excite and ftir up in the mind fome defires or affections answerable thereunto: and the will being allured or enticed by these motions doth oftentimes yield unto them. But if this fhould be granted, it makes nothing for the question we have in hand. For feeing that Christian Religion most of all withdraws Men from those things which are pleafing unto the body, it cannot therefore have its beginning from the affections of the body, and confequently not from the influence of the Stars; which (as but now we faid) have no power over the mind, otherwife than by the mediation of those affections. The most prudent among Astrologers exempt truly wife and good Men from the dominion of the Stars : And fuch verily were they that first professed Christianity, as their lives do shew. Or if there be any efficacy in learning and knowledge against the infection of the body, even among Christians there were ever fome that were excellent in this particular, it nits in the state of the

SECT. XII.

The chief Points of Christianity are approved of by the Heathen : and if there be any thing that is hard to be believed therein, the like or worse is found among the Pagans.

DUT the Pagans have the lefs to object againft Bu I the ragans have the teaufe all the parts Christian Religion: becaufe all the parts thereof are of fuch honefty and integrity, that they convince Mens minds by their own light. In fo much that there have not been wanting Men among the Ragans alfo, who have here and there faid every one of those things, which our Religion hath in a body all together. As to give some instances; true Religion confists not in Rites and Ceremonies, but in the mind and Spirit: he is an Adulterer that hath but a defire to commit adultery: we ought not to revenge injuries : one Man should be the Husband of one Wife only: the league or bond of Matrimony ought to be constant and perpetual: Man is bound to do good unto all, fpecially to them that are in want : we must refrain from Swearing as much as may be : And as for our Food and Apparel we ought to content our felves with fo much as will fuffice nature, and the like. Or if happily there be fome points in Christianity hard to be believed, yet the like also is found amongst the wifest of the Heathen themselves;

as before we have shewn concerning the immortality of Souls, and of the Refurrettion of Bodies. Thus Plato, as he learned from the Chaldeans, diffinguished the Divine nature into the Father, and the mind of the Father; (which he calls also the branch of God, the Maker of the World) and the Soul or Spirit, which keeps together and preferveth all things.

Julian, as great an enemy as he was of Chriflians, thought that the Divine Nature might be joined to the humane : and gave inftance in Æfculapius, whom he imagined to have defcended from Heaven, to the end he might teach Men the Art of Phyfick. The Crofs of Chrift offendeth many : But what do not the Pagan Writers tell of their Gods? that fome of them waited upon Kings and Princes, others were Thunder-ftruck, others cut in funder. And the wifeft of them fay, that the more it coft us to be honeft, the more joy and delight it affords us.

To conclude, Plato in the fecond Book of his Commonwealth, as if he had been a Prophet, faith, for a Man to appear truly just and upright, it is requisite that his vertue be bereaved of all outward ornaments; fo that he be by others accounted a wicked wretch, and scoffed at, and last of all hanged. And indeed that Christ might be the Pattern of greatest Patience, could no otherwise be obtained.

SECT. H.--

The Jews ought to account the Miracles of Chrift sufficiently proved.

FIRST of all then, we must intreat them not to think that to be unjust in another Man's case, which they judge to be just and equitable in their own. If any Pagan demand of them why they believe that Miracles were wrought by Moses, they can give no other Answer save that there was always so constant a report thereof among their Nation, that it could not but proceed from the testimony of such as had seen the same.

Thus that the Widows Oyl was increased by Elista: that Naaman the Syrian was fuddenly cured of the Leprofie: that the Womans Son in whose House he Lodged was reftored to life, and

and other fuch like, are believed by the Jews for no other reason, than because witnesses of good credit have recorded to posterity, that such things were done. And they believe Elias his taking up into Heaven, only for the fingle Teftimony of Elisha, as a Man beyond all exception. But we produce twelve witness, of unblameable life, to testifie that Christ ascended up into Heaven. And many more that faw him upon the Earth after his death. Which things if they be true, then neceffarily Christ's Doctrine is true also; and indeed nothing at all can be alledged by the Jews for themselves, which by equal right, or more just title may not be applied to us also. But to omit farther Testimonies, it is the confelfion of the Authors of the Talmud, and other Jews themfelves, that ftrange Wonders were wrought by Chrift; which ought to fuffice for this particular. For God cannot any way more effectual-ly gain authority unto a Doctrine published by Man than by the working of Miracles.

SECT. III.

And not believe that they were done by the help of Devils.

THESE Miracles of Chrift, fome faid were done by the help of Devils. But this calumny hath been confuted before, when we shewed, that wherefoever the Doctrine of Chrift was taught and known, there all power of the Devils was broken in pieces. Others reply that Jefus learned Magick Arts in Egypt: but this Devided by Good flander flander hath no more, nay not fo much colour of truth, than the like accufation by the Pagans framed against Moses, whereof we read in Pliny and Apuleius.

For, that ever Jesus was in Egypt doth not ap. pear, fave only out of the Writings of his Difciples: who add farther, that he was an Infant when he returned thence. But it is certain by his own and others report, that Moses lived a great part of his time after he was grown to Man's estate in Egypt. Howbeit the Law, as well of Moses, as of Christ, frees them both from this crime, plainly forbidding fuch Arts, as abominable in the fight of God. And without all question, if in the time of Christ and his Disciples, there had been either in Egypt or any where elfe any fuch Magical Art, whereby Men might have been enabled to do the like Marvels as are related of Christ; to wit, giving speech to the Dumb on a fudden, making the Lame to walk, and the Blind to fee; then would Tiberius, Nere, and other Emperors have found it out, who fpared no cofts and charges in the inquiry after fuch like things.

Nay, if it were true which the Fews relate, how that the Senators of the great Council were skill'd in Magick Arts, that they might convince them that were guilty of that iniquity; then furely they being fo mightily incenfed against Jesus, as they were, and envying the honour and refpect which he obtained chiefly by his miracles, would either themfelves have done the like works by the fame art, or by fufficient reafons would have made it appear, that the works of Christ proceeded from no other cause.

SECT. IV.

Or by the Power of Words and Syllables,

M Oreover, that is not only a meer fable, but impudent lye, which fome of the Jews have invented concerning the Miracles done by Chrift, which they afcribe to a certain fecret name, which (as they fay) being placed in the Temple by Solomon, was preferved fafe by two Lions, during the fpace of One Thoufand Years and more, but afterward ftoln away by Jefus. For there is no mention made of those Lions (though it be a thing most remarkable and wonderful,) either in the Books of Kings and Cbronicles, or by Jofephus: nor was there any fuch thing found by the Romans, who accompanying Pompey, entred into that Temple, before the times of Je/us.

SECT. V.

The Miracles of Jesus were divine, because he taught the worship of one God the Maker of the World.

IT being then granted, as the Jews cannot deny, that wonders were wrought by Chrift, it will follow from the very Law of Moses, that he must be believed. For God faith, Deut. xviii. 15, &c. that other Prophets after the time of Moses should should be raifed up of God, to whom the People should be obedient, or otherwise become liable to grievous Punishments. Now Miracles are the most infallible Marks of the Prophets: Nor can any more illustrious be so much as conceived. But in Denter. xiij. it is faid, that if any, profeffing himfelf to be a Prophet, doth work Wonders, vet he must not be believed, if he go about to entice the People to a new Worship of the Gods. For though fuch Miracles be done, yet this is only by God's Permission, for tryal, whether the People would perfift conftantly in the Worfhip of the true God. From which places compared .together, the Hebrew Interpreters do rightly colleft, that every one must be believed that worketh Miracles, unless thereby he entice Men from the Worship of the true God; and in that case only Miracles are not to be credited, though in fhew most glorious. Now Jesus did not only not teach the Worshipping of false Gods; but also expresly condemned it as a most grievous Crime, and taught us to reverence the Writings both of Moses and the Prophets that fucceeded him. Wherefore there is nothing that can be objected against the Miracles that were wrought by Chrift.

Answer to the Objection, taken from the difference between the Law of Moles and of Christ: where is shewn, that a more perfect Law than that of Moses might be given.

S touching that which fome alledge, con-A cerning the difference between the Law of Moses and the Law of Christ, it is but of small moment. For the Hebrew Doctors themfelves make this Rule. That by the authority of a Prophet, who worketh Miracles, any Precept what foever may be boldly violated and transgressed, ex-cept that only which concerns the Worship of the true God. And furely that power of making Laws, which belonged unto God when he gave the Commandments by the hand of Mofes, went not from him afterward : Neither can any Man that of his own right makes Laws; be thereby hindred from making the contrary.

That which they object, that God then would be mutable, is nothing; for we fpeak not here of God's Nature and Effence, but of his Works: Light is changed into Darknefs, Youth into Old Age, Summer into Winter, and all by the Work of God. Thus God at the beginning, gave Adam leave in Paradife to eat of other Apples, but he forbad him to eat of the Fruit of one Tree: Why? Even becaufe it fo pleafed him: Generally he prohibited Men to kill others, yet he commanded Abraham to kill his Son. One while he forbad to offer Sacrifices apart from the Tabernacle, another while he admitted of them. Neither

Neither will it follow, becaufe the Law which was given by Mofes was good, therefore no beiter could be given. Parents are wont to fpeak half words and futter with Infants; to wink at the vices of their childhood; and entice them to learn with a piece of Cake. But fo foon as they come to riper age, their speech is corrected, the precepts of vertue are inftill'd into them by degrees, and they are taught what is the beauty of vertue, what its rewards. Now it is plain that the Precepts of that law of Moses were not exactly perfect, because many holy Men of those times led a more excellent life than those commandments required. Thus Moses, who fuffered the revenge of a wrong to be exacted partly by blows, and partly by fentence of the Judges, himfelf being vexed with most bitter injuries, became an Interceffor for his Enemies. So David, willing to have his rebellious Son to be fpared, did patiently endure reproachful speeches caft upon himself. We no where read that any good Men put away their Wives, which notwithstanding was permitted by the Law. The reafon of which is, that Laws are accommodated to the greater part of a People; therefore in the state and condition they were in, it was meet fomething should be winked at: to be reduced to a more perfect Rule, when God by a greater efficacy of the Spirit was to chufe unto himfelf a new peculiar People out of all Nations. Yea, all the rewards which are expresly promifed by the Law of Moses belong only to this mor-tal life : wherefore it must be granted, that there might fome better Law be given, whereby the reward of eternal happiness thould be promifed, not under any shadows, but in plain and Digitized by Google express express terms: which we see is done by the Law of Christ.

SECT. VIL

The Law of Moses was observed by Jesus, who abolished no Comandments that were efsentially good.

ND here by the way, for the conviction 1 of the Jews iniquity, it must be noted, that they who lived in Christ's time, used him most bakely, and punished him most unjustly; when as there could no just accusation be laid against him for transgressing the Law. He was circumcifed : he used the fame food and apparel that the Jews used : those that were healed of Leprofie, he fent unto the Priest: The Passoven and other Festival days he religiously observed : Though he did cure fome upon the Sabbath day ; yet he shewed both by the Law and by the common received opinions, that fuch Works were not forbidden to be done upon the Sabbath day. Then it was that he first began to publish the abrogation of fome Laws, when after his triumph over Death he afcended into Heaven, adorning his Disciples upon Earth with illustrious Gifts of the Holy Spirit, whereby he made it evident that he had obtained a regal Power, which includes in it the authority of making a Law: And that according to Daniel's Prophecy, ch. 3. whereof happened in the Reign of Augustus,) GOD would give the Kingdom to a Man (who should feem but a vulgar Person) over all Nations and Languages, which Kingdom should never have an end.

Now that part of the Law, the necessity whereof was taken away by Chrift, contained nothing that was honeft in its own nature : but confifted of things that were indifferent in themfelves, and confequently not immutable. For if those things had had in them any thing of themfelves, why they should be done; then would God have prefcribed them not to one, but to all People; and not after that Mankind had lived above the fpace of Two Thousand Years, but even from the beginning of all. Neither Abel, Enoch, Noah, Melchifedech, Job, Abraham, Isaac, or Jacob, (though all of them were godly men, and dearly beloved of God,) knew this part of the Law, but were altogether ignorant, or very little acquainted therewith; yet notwithstanding, for all that, they received the Testimony of their confidence in God, and of God's love unto them. Befides, neither did Moses exhort Jethro his Fatherin-law to the receiving of these Rites, nor did Jonab the Ninevites, neither did any other Prophets reprehend the Chaldaans, Egyptians, Sydonians, Tyrians, Idumeans, and Moabites, for not admitting those Ceremonies, though when they writ unto them, they reckoned up their fins exactly enough. These then were peculiar precepts, introduced either for the avoiding of fome evil, which the Jews were prone unto; or for the tryal of their Obedience, or for the fignification of fome future things.

Wherefore it is no more to be wondered, that these are abolished, than if any King should abrogate fome Municipal Statutes, (which belong, that is, to particular Corporations) to the end he might establish one Law within his Dominions. Neither can there any Reafon be alledged, to prove that God did fo bind himfelf, as that he would change nothing of the fame.

For if it be faid, that these Precepts are called perpetual, the fame Word Men oftentimes use, when they would fignifie that that which they command is not yearly, or accommodated to certain times, fuppofe of War, Peace, or Scarcity. Yet they are not thereby hindered from making new constitutions of the fame things, specially when the publick good requires it. Thus in like manner fome of the Divine Precepts given to the Hebrews were temporary, during the Peoples abode in the wilder ne/s: others were strictly tied to their Habitation in the Land of Canaan: therefore to diffinguish these from the other, he calls them perperual, whereby might be underftood, that they ought not any where, or at any time to be intermitted, unlefs God fignified that it was his Will fo to be. Which manner of fpeaking, fince it is commonly used by all People, ought to be lefs wondered at by the Hebrews: who know that in their Law it is called a Perpetual Statute, and a Perpetual Bondage, which continues only from one Jubilee, to another: And the coming of the Meffias is called by them the accomplithment of the Jubilee, or the greatest Jubilee of all. Thus in the Hebrew Prophets, there was anciently a promife of making a new Covenant, as in Jerem. xxxi. where God promifeth that he will make a new Covenant, which shall be K 3 Digitized by Google put put into their inward parts, and written in their bearts, neither shall men have any need, that one Shall learn Religion of another, for it Shall be manifest unto all. Yea farther, the Lord will forgive them their former iniquities, and will remember their fin no more : which is as if a King after great enmity and difcord amongst his Citizens and Subjects, should for the establishment of peace and tranquility among them, take away all diversity of Laws, and make one perfect Law common to them all, promifing forgiveness of faults by-past, if hereafter they do amend. And this which hath been faid might fuffice, but we will furvey every part of the Law which is abrogated, and fhew they were neither fuch as in themfelves could be well pleafing unto God, nor ought they to continue for ever.

SECT. VIII.

As the Sacrifices, which of themselves were never well pleasing unto God.

THE first and chief thing to be confidered, 1 are the Sacrifices, which many of the Hebrews think were invented by Man, before that they were commanded by God. And true it is indeed, the Hebrews were defirous of abundance of Rites and Ceremonies, fo that there was caufe enough why GOD fhould enjoin them very many, if it were but for this reason, left they should return unto the worship of false Gods, by the remembrance of their fojourning in Æ-Digilized by GOOg[e Howbeit Howbeit when their Posterity made too great account of them, as though of themselves they had been acceptable unto God, and a part of true piety; then did the Prophets reprehend them for it: About Sacrifices, faith God by David, in the fiftieth Pfalm, I will not fo much as exchange a word with thee; as if I were defirous to have thy burnt offerings continually before me. I will take no Bullock out of thy house, nor He-goats out of thy folds. For every beast of the Forest is mine, and fo are the cattle upon a thousand bills. I know all the fowls of the mountains: and the wild beasts of the field are mine. If I were hungry, I would not tell thee, for the World is mine, and the fulness thereof: thinkess thou that I will eat the flesh of Bulls, or drink the bloud of Goats? Offer unto God thanksgiving, and pay thy vows unto the most bigb.

Some there are among the Hebrews, who fay that this is spoken, because they that offered those facrifices, were of an impure mind and difhonest conversation. But the words now alledged shew another matter, to wit, that the thing in it felf was no whit acceptable unto God. For if we confider the whole feries and order of the Pfalm, we shall find that God in these words fpeaks unto the godly : for he had faid, Gather my Saints together unto me, and hear, my people: which are the words of a Teacher and one that instructeth. Then having ended those words now alledged, as his manner is, he fpeaks unto the wicked: But unto the wicked God faith. To the fame fenfe we may cite other places, as in the 51 Pfal. Thou defirest not facrifice, elfe would I give it thee, but thou delightest not in burnt offerings. The facrifice of God is a broken Spirit : a K 4 broken.

broken and contrite heart, O God, thou will not despise. So likewife in the fortieth Pfalm; Sacrifice and offering thou didst not defire, but hast tied me to thee, as he whofe ear was boared through, to be thy fervant : burnt-offering and fin-offering hast thou not required. Then Said I, Loe, I come : In the volume of the Book it is written of me : I delight to do thy will, O my God : yea, thy Law is within my heart. I have preached rightcoufnefs in the great Congregation : Loe, I have not refrained my Lips, O Lord, thou knoweft. I have not bid thy righteousness within my heart, I have declared thy faithfulness and thy salvation. I have not concealed thy lowing kindness and thy truth from the great Congregation. The like we read in the Prophet Isaiah, chap. 1. To what purpose is the multitude of your facrifices unto me, faith the Lord? I am full of the burnt-offerings of Rams, and the fat of fed Beasts, and I delight not in the blood of Bullocks, or of Lambs, or of He-Goats. When ye come to appear before me, who hath required this at your hands to tread my Courts ? Anfwerable to this place, and the Interpreter of it, is that in fer. 7. Thus faith the Lord of Hosts, the God of Israel; Put your burnt-offerings unto your facrifices, and eat their flesh your selves : For I spake not unto your Fathers, nor commanded them in the day that I brought them out of the Land of Egypt, concerning burnt-offerings and facrifices. But this thing commanded I them, Saying, 'Obey my voice, and I will be your God and ye Shall be my People: and walk ye in all the ways that I have commanded you, that it may be well unto you. Agreeing with this is that in Hosea 6. To shew mercy to men is more acceptable to me than sacrifice, to think rightly of God more than all burnt offerings. Laftly, 'n in the fixth of Micah, when the question was made, What was the best way to obtain the favour of God? Whether by coming before him with a great number of Rams, or with a great quantity of Oil, or with Calves of a Year old? to this God answers and faith, I will tell thee what is truly good and acceptable unto me; namely, To do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God.

By all which places it being apparent, that Sacrifices are not in the number of those things which God defires for themselves, or primarily; and that the People (a naughty Superstition creeping in, as is usual, by little and little among them) placed a great part of their Piety in them, and believed they made a sufficient compensation for their fins by Sacrifices: what wonder is it, if God at length take away a thing, which was not now in its own nature indifferent, but whose use was now become a Vice? Since King Hezekiab did not stick to break even the brazen Serpent, erected by Moses; because the People began to honour it with Religious Worship.

Moreover, there are divers Prophecies, that foretold these Sacrifices, whereof we speak, should come to an end: which any one may easily conceive, who doth but confider that according to the Law of Moses, only the Posterity of Aaron was to do facrifice, and that only in their own Country. But in the 11 oth Pfalm, there is a King promised whose Dominion should be most ample, the beginning whereof should be out of Sion: and this fame King was to be a Priest also for ever, and that after the order of Melchisedech. So Ifaiab faith, chap. 19. That there shall be an Altar to the Lord in the midst of the Land of Egypt, where where not only the Egyptians, but the Assyrians alfo, and the Ifraelites thall worthip God. And in the 66. chapter, he faith, that the People of all. Nations and Languages, which are far and widely distant, shall come as well as the Israelites, and offer gifts unto God, and of them also there shall be ordained Priefts and Levites : All which could not come to pais fo long as the Law of Moses remained in force. Add unto thefe, that in the first of Malachi, God foretelling future things, faith, he abhorr'd the Offerings of the Hebrews, I have no pleasure in you, neither will I accept an offering at your hand. For from the rising of the Sun even unto the going down of the same, my name shall be great among the Gentiles, and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering, for my name shall be great among the Heathen, faith the Lord of Hofts.

Laftly, Daniel in his 9. chapter rehearling the Prophecy of the Angel Gabriel concerning Chrift, faith, That be fhall caufe the facrifice and the oblation to ceafe. And not by words only, but really and indeed God plainly enough flews that he likes not any longer those Sacrifices which were prefcribed by Mofes, feeing that he hath fuffered the fews, for the space of one thousand fix hundred years and more, to be without Temple, without Altar, and without any certain diffinction of their Tribes or lineage; whence it might appear who they are that may lawfully offer facrifice.

SECT. IX.

The difference of Meat.

NOW what we have declared concerning the Law of Sacrifices, the fame may be proved of that Law which forbids the ufe of fome kinds of meats. For it is plain that after the great Deluge, God gave licence unto Nouth and his Polterity, to ufe any fort of victual: Which Right therefore paffed not only to faphet and Cham, but alfo unto Sem and his Polterity, Abraham, Ifaac, and facob. But afterward when the People being in Ægypt were addicted to the naughty fuperstitions of that Country; then began God to forbid them the eating of fome kind of living Creatures; either becaufe the Egyptians offered those creatures unto their Gods, and made divination by them; or becaufe in that ceremonial Law Mens fundry vices were shadowed out by divers kind of living creatures.

Again, that these precepts were not universal, it is manifest by that statute which was made touching the steph of a Beast that died of it felf, Deut. 14. which to eat was not lawsful for the Israelites, but it was lawful for the strangers that dwelt among them, unto whom the Strangers that is the time of the Messacher and a strangers the Law concerning forbidden meats should cease: when the Som should be as clean and as pure as the Oxe. And verily, in as much as God out of all Nations would 142 collect unto himfelf one Church, it was more just and equitable to have a common liberty than a bondage in fuch things.

SECT. X.

And of Days.

T follows, that we confider of Festival Days: all which were instituted and ordained in remembrance of that benefit received of God, when they were freed from Egyptian calamity, and afterward brought into the promised Land. Now the Prophet Feremy, in the 16th and 23d Chapters, faith, that the time would come when more new and greater benefits should so obscure the remembrance of that benefit, as that afterward there should fcarce be any mention thereof. Befides, that which but now was faid concerning Sacrifices, is true alfo of Festival Days; the People began to put confi-dence in them, thinking that if they kept and abferved them well, it was no matter though they transgressed in other matters: whereupon, in the first Chapter of Isaiah, God faith, That his Soul hated their new Moons, and appointed Feasts, and that they were fuch a trouble unto him, as that he was weary to bear them. More particularly it is objected concerning the Sabbath, that the Law thereof is universal and perpetual, because it was not given to one peculiar people only, but to Adam the Parent of all Mankind at the very beginning of the World. I answer, with the most learned of the Hebrews, that there is a twofold Precept concerning the Sabbath; the first is a Precept for commemoration, Exod. 20. 8. and the fecond is a Precept for observation, Exod. 31. 13, The former is fulfilled by a religious remembrance of the World's creation: and the latter confifts in an exact refraining from all kinds of other labour. The former was given from the beginning, which doubtless those godly men before the Law did obey, to wit, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Ifaac, and Focob. The last of which, though they travelled much, as we read, yet there is no where the leaft fign or remembrance of their intermitting their Journey for the Sabbath; which after they came out of Egypt you fhall always meet with. For after that the People were brought out of Egypt, and had happily paffed over the Red Sea, the next day they celebrated a Sabbath of rest and safety; wherein they fang a Song of triumph and rejoycing: from which time that exact rest upon the Sabbath was com-manded, which is first mentioned upon occasion of gathering the Manna, Exod. 16. 23. and 35. 2. Lev. 22. 3. And in this fence the deliverance from Egypt is made the reason for the Law of the Sabbath, Deut. 5. 15. By which Law provision also was made for Servants, against the feverity of those Masters that would not grant them any Reft or Relaxation from daily labour, as may be feen in the places aforefaid. It is true indeed, Strangers were bound to observe this Law, because it was meet there should be one form of Rest among all the People; but this Law of fo exact resting upon the Sabbath was not given to other People, as may appear by this, that in many places it is called a Sign, and a fpecial Covenant also between Gol and the Ifraelites, as in Exod. 31, 13, and 16. Now we have proved before before, by the promise of far greater benefits, that the ordinances which were inflituted for a memorial of the coming out from Egypt, were not fuch as ought never to cease. Add moreover, if the Law concerning the rest upon the Sabbath had been given from the beginning, and in that fense, that it nover might be abolished; then furely that Law had prevailed over other Laws, when there was a clashing between them : which we find was quite contrary, by its yielding to them. For it is evident, that Infants were rightly circumeifed upon the Sabbath; like, as during the time that the Temple stood, there were Beasts killed for Sacrifice, as well upon the Sabbath, as upon other days. Yea, the Hebrew Masters them: felves shew the mutability of this Law, when they fay, that by a Propher's appointment and command a work may be rightly done upon the Sabbath+ day: and this they prove by the taking of fericho upon the Subbath, according to the command. ment of Joshuah. And fome of them not unfitly fhew, that the diffinction of days shall be taken away in the time of the Mefkas, from that place in Ifaiab lxvi. 23. where it is prophefied, Io shall come to pass that the worship of God shall be perpetual from one new Moon to another, from one Subbath to another.

SECT. XI.

Also of outward Circumcifion.

I N the next place, let us come to Circumcifion, which certainly is Elder than Mofes: For it was given in command to Abraham and his Posterity.

Howbeit the Commandment thereof was the introduction or beginning of the Covenant published by Moses: For thus we read, that God fpake unto Abraham. Gen. 17. faying, I will give unto thee and to thy Seed after thee, the Land wherein thou art a stranger, all the Land of Canaan, for an everlasting possession, and I will be their God. And God faid unto Abraham, Thou shalt keep my covenant therefore, thou and thy Seed after thee: every man-child among you shall be circumcised. But now we know by what hath been already faid, that in the place of this Covenant, a new Covenant was to fucceed, which should be common to all People: For which caufe the necessity of that note of diffinition ought to cease. Besides, in the Precept of Circumcision there was a mystical and more excellent fignification contained, which the Prophets do plainly fhew in that they command the Circumcifion of the Heart, which all the Commandments of Jesus aim at.

Wherefore the Promifes also annexed to Circumcifion, are in like manner to be referred to fome greater thing: As that of *earthly poffeffe*ons, to the Revelation of a Poffeffion truly eternal: which was never made more manifest than by Jefus: fo that promife of making Abraham a Father.

ther of many Nations, hath reference to that time. when not a few, but an infinite number of People defperfed throughout the whole World, should imitate Abraham's Faith and confidence in God. which is fo often mentioned in Scripture; and this never came to pass, but in the time of the Gospel. Now it is no marvel, if the shadows of an intended Work be taken away : when the matter it felf is accomplisht. Laftly, that the grace of God was not tied to this fign, we may eafily difcern, because not only the more ancient, but Abraham himfelf having not as yet received Circumcifion, pleafed God: The Hebrews alfo, during all the time of their journey through the Defarts of Arabia, omitted Circumcifion, and yet God found no fault with them for it:

SECT. XII.

And yet the Apostles of Jesus were gentle in the toleration of these things.

TO doubt but the Hebrews had caufe to yield. many thanks to Jefus and his Ambaffadors, for that by Christ they might be freed from that heavy yoke of Ceremonies, and be affured of this their freedom both by Gifts and Miracles, fuch as were not inferiour to those that were wrought by Moses.

to follow what courfe of life they pleafed in matters of indifferency, Yet fo, that upon Strangers, (to whom this Law of Rites was never given) they fhould not impose a neceffity of observing them. Which one thing is fufficient to make it plainly appear, that the Jews do unjustly reject the Dollrine of Christ, under that pretence of the ceremonial Law. Having then answered this Objection, which chiefly is alledged against the Miracles of Jesus, we will now come to other Arguments, which may fitly ferve for the Conviction of the Jews:

SECT. XIV.

Who is proved to be already come, by the limited time of his coming, which was foretold.

T HE Prophet Daniel, to whom Ezekiel hath given a Teltimony of exceeding great Piety, neither would willingly deceive us, nor was himfelf deceived by the Angel Gabriel. Now he, taught by the fame Angel, in the Ninth Chapter of his Prophecy, hath left it recorded, that before five hundred Years should be expired, after the promulgation of the Decree touching the restoring of the City Hierufalem, the Mellias should come. But now, fince that time, above two thousand Years have paffed, and yet he whom the Jews expect is not come: Neither can they name any other Person, to whom that space or time can be rightly applied; which agrees to fit-ly unto fefus, that Nehumias, an Hebrew Doctor who lived about fifty years before Christ, plainly faid then, that the time of the Melfias, foretold by Daniel, could not be protracted beyond those Fifty Years then next enfuing. And with this note of time agrees another note, which we have touch'd before, concerning the eftablishing of a Dominion over all Nations by a Divine Authority, after that the posterity of Selencus and Ptolomy had ceased to reign; the latter whereof ended in Cleopatra, a little before Jesus was born. The third note is fet down in the forefaid 9th. destruction, Josephus himself referreth unto his time; whence it follows, that the time appointed for the coming of the Melfias, was then already paft. Hereunto likewife belongs that in the Second Chapter of the Prophet Haggai, where God, by the Prophet, comforteth Zerubbabel, the Son of Sheattiel, Governor of Judah; and Foshuah, the Son of Fosedech, the High Priest; who were forrowful to fee the Temple, which they built, fall fo short of the first Temple, with this promife, that the glory of the latter house Should be greater than the former : Which certainly can neither be meant of the greatnefs of the work, nor of the matter of the building, nor of the fabrick and artificial firucture, nor of the ornaments of that Temple; as may appear by the History of those times, both in the Holy Scriptures, and in Fosephus, compared with that of the Temple of Solomon; Add to this, that the Hebrew Doctors note, this latter Temple wanted two of the greatest endowments, which the former enjoyed, viz. a certain conspicuous Light, which was the token of the Divine Majefty there, and Divine Inspiration. But God himself briefly declares, in that very place, wherein the latter Temple should excel the former; when He promiles He would fettle, as by a fure Covenant, His Peace, i. e. his favor and loving-kindnefs, in that Temple. Which the Prophet Malachi declares more largely in his Third Chapter; Behold, I will fend my meffenger, who shall prepare my ways. There Shall shorthy come into his Temple (now Malachi lived when the latter Temple was built) that Lord whom ye defire; even that meffen: ger of the Covenant, who is our delight. Temple flood; which, in the account of the Hebrews, comprehends all that time which was between Zerubbabel and Vefpafian: For in the time of Herod the Great, the Temple was not re-edified out of its old Ruins, but by little and little it was repaired; bearing ftill the name of the fame Temple. And indeed, there was fa firm an Opinion amongst the Hebrews, and the neighbouring People, that the Melfias was furely to come in those times, that many took Herod; others, Judas Gaulonites; and a third fort, others that lived about the times of Jefus, to be the Melfias.

SECT. XV.

Anfwer to that which some conceive, touching the deferring of his coming, for the fins of the People.

Some of the fews, perceiving themfelves to be hard put to it, by these Arguments, concerning the coming of the Melfias, go about to fhift them off, by telling us that their fins were the cause why he did not come at the promised time. But (to omit that those Prophecies express a Decree determined, not sufpended upon any condition) how is it possible that this coming should be deferred by reason of their fins, when this also was foretold, that because of the many and hainous Tran/greffions of the People, the great City should be laid waste a little after the times of the Melfias? Moreover, one reafon of the Melfias his coming was, to cure a most most corrupted World, and, together with Rules for amendment of Life, to bring a Pardon for fins past. Whence it is that Zachariah faith, concerning his times, Chap. xiii. that there should be then a fountain opened to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Hierusalem, for to wash away fin and uncleanness. And it is affirmed by the Hebrews themfelves, that the Melfab shall be called Ifchcopher; that is, a Reconciler, or Explator of fins. But it is against all reason, to fay, that any thing was deferred, becaufe of that difease, for which it was precisely deltinated and appointed.

Alfo from the prefent state of the Jews, compared with those things which the Law promisetb.

COuching this which we affirm, of the coming of the Meffias long fince into the World, the Jews are convinced by very fense. God made a Covenant with Moles, and promifed to them the happy pollefion of the Land of Paleftine, fo long as they should lead their life according to the Commandments of the Law : But contrarily, he threatned Banishment, and fuch like Calamities, to come upon them, if they did grievoufly tranfgress the fame. Yet, if at any time when they were oppressed with Miseries, they, repenting of their fins, returned unto obedience; then would he he moved to have mercy upon the People, and cause, that though they were scattered to the L 3 Digitized by Google uttermost parts of the Earth, yet should they return again into their own Country; as we may read in Deut. 30. and Nehem. 1. and elfewhere. But now, for the space of one thousand five hundred years, and more, the Jews have wanted a Country, and a Temple: And when they have attempted to build a new one, they have been always hindred; even by Balls of Fire breaking out in the Foundations, and overthrowing the work; as Ammianus Marcellinus, a Writer who was not a Christian, reports. When this People, in times past, had defiled themselves with abominable wickedneffes, commonly facrificing even their children unto Saturn, accounting Adultery to be no fin, oppreffing and fpoiling the Fatherlefs and Widows, and shedding the innocent Blood in great abundance, all which the Prophets upbraid them with; then did they fuffer exile, yet not longer than for the fpace of feventy years; during which time alfo, God did not neglect to speak unto them by his Prophets, and to comfort them with the hope of a Return, pointing alfo at the very time thereof. But now, ever fince they were expelled out of their Country, they continue banished and contemptible; no Prophet comes unto them; there is no fign or token of their return; their Mafters and Ring-leaders (as if they were blafted with the fpirit of giddinefs) are fallen away to filthy fables and doctrines very ridiculous, wherewith the Books of the Talmud do abound; which they are bold to call the Law given by word of mouth, and are wont to equal or prefer to that which was written by Mofes. deftroyed; of his daily care and diligence in reading the Law; of Behemoth and Liviathan, and many other matters, are fo abfurd, that it would be irkfome even to repeat them. Howbeit, the Jews in all this time have neither turn-ed to the worfhip of falfe Gods, as they did in times paft; neither have they defiled themfelves with bloody Murders, nor are they accufed of Adulteries : But by prayers and fastings they labour to appeale God's wrath, and yet are not heard. Which things being fo, one of these -two must needs be granted; namely, that either the covenant that was given by Moles is quite abolifhed; or the whole body of the Fewish Nation lies under the guilt of fome notorious crime, which hath continued for fo many Ages together; which what it is, let themfelves fpeak,; or if they cannot tell, then let them believe us, that this fin is no other, but the contempt of the Meffiar, who was come before that these evils began to fall upon them.

Jefus is proved to be the Messian, by those things which were foretold concerning the Mellias.

left no Self behind them to uphold and maintain that opinion. There are not any at this day that profess themselves to be followers either of Herod, or of Judas Gaulonita, or of that great Impostor Barchochebas, who living in the times of Adrian, faid that he was the Mellias, and deceived fome, even of the molt learned. But those that profeis the Name of Jefus, have continued from the time that he lived upon Earth, even until this day; and are still not a few, only in this or that Coun-try, but very many, dispersed as far as the World extendeth. I could alledge many other Teltimonies anciently foretold or believed concerning the Me/fias, which we believe were accomplished in Jejus, fince they are not fo much as affirmed of any other: As, namely, that he came of the Posterity of David, and was born of a Virgin; which was divinely revealed to him that married that Virgin; when he would have put her away, fuppofing the had been got with child by another. Alfo, that this Meffias was born at Bethlehem, and began first to publish his doctrine in Galilee, healing all kinds of Difeases, giving fight to the Blind and making the Lame to walk. But this one may fuffice for many, the effect of which continues unto this day : It is most manifest by the Prophecies of David, Ifaiah; Zachariah and Hofea, that the Meffias was to be an Instructor, not only of the Fews, but also of the Gentiles; that by him the worship of false Gods should fall to the ground, and an huge multitude of Aliens and Strangers fhould be brought to the Worship of the only true God. but both People and Kings were converted unto the wor hip and fervice of one God. This was not owing to the Fervish Rabbins; but to the Disciples of Felus, and their Successors. Thus they were made the People of God, that before were not the People of God : And the faying of old Facob, Gen. 49. was fulfilled, That before all civil Authority should be taken from Judah, Shilo should come. SECT. XVIII.

Answer to that which is objected, of some things that are not fulfilled.

THE Jews usually object, that fome things were foretold, concerning the times of the Meffias, which are not yet fulfilled. But for anfwer, Those matters which they alledge, are obfcure, and admit of divers fignifications: Wherefore we ought not, becaufe of them, to forfake those things that are manifelt; such as the Holiness of the Commandments of Jesus, the excellency of the Reward, and the perfpicuous Language wherein it is propounded : To which, if we add the Testimony of his Miracles, these ought to be fufficient inducements to the receiving of his Doctrine. As for those Prophecies which go under the name of a fhut or clasped Book, oftentimes, for the right understanding thereof, there is requisite fome Divine helps and alfistances, which they are worthily deprived of, that neglect Digitized by GOOgle manifest Truths. The places of Scripture, which they object, are diverfly expounded, as themfelves cannot deny. And if any Men pleafe to compare either the ancient Interpreters, which lived when the People were led Captive into Babylon, or fuch as lived about Christ's time, with those that writ after that Christianity began to be hateful and odious unto the Jews, he shall find new Expofitions, purposely invented, to cross those forms, that well agreed with the fense of Christians. They know well enough that there are many things in the holy Scriptures, which mult be underftood by a Figure, and not in Propriety of Speech ; as, when God is faid to have defcended ; and to have a Mouth, Ears, Eyes and Noftrils. And why may not we likewife expound divers things, that are spoken of the times of the Meffias, after the fame manner; as that the Wolf shall dwell with the Lamb, and the Leopard Jhall lie down with the Kid; and the Calf, and the young Lyon, and the Fatling together; and the fucking Child shall play with the Serpents; and the Moun-tain of the Lord shall be exalted above other Mountains, whither Strangers shall come and worfhip.

There are fome things promised, which by antecedent or confequent words, or by the very fenfe, imply a tacit Condition in them. Thus God promifed many things unto the Hebrews, upon condition they would receive the Melfias that was fent, and obey him: Which fame things, if they come not to pass accordingly, then may they blame themfelves, that are the cause thereof.

Again, other matters were promifed determinedly, and without all condition; which if they be not already accomplifhed, yet may be hoped for here-hereafter. For it is evident, even among the Jews, that the time or Kingdom of the Melfias must endure unto the end of the World.

SECT. XIX.

And to that which is objected of the mean condition and death of Jesus.

Many do take exception at the low and mean condition of Jefus, but unjuftly, becaufe in facred Writ it is often faid, that God will exalt the bumble, but caft down the proud. Jacob, when he passed over Jordan, carried nothing with him, fave his flaff only; and yet returned enriched with a gleat flock of fheep.

Mofes was a poor Exile, and feeding the flocks, when God appeared to him in the bufh, and gave him commission for the conduct of his People. David alfo was called to his Kingdom, when he was feeding Sheep. And with many other fuch like Examples doth the Sacred Story abound. Now concerning the Melfinger unto the poor, that he should make no noise in publick, nor use any strife and contention; but deal gently, forbearing to break the shaken reed, and cherissing that heat which remains in stroaking flax.

Neither ought the reft of his afflictions, no not his ignominious death, to make him defpicable to any. For God oftentimes fuffereth the godly, not only to be vexed and difquieted by the wicked, as righteous Lot was by the Citizens of Sodom; but also even to be deftroyed, and flain, as is plain by the Example of Abel, who was cruelly murdered by his Brother; of Ifaiah, who was fawn in pieces; and of the feven Brethren in the Maccabees, who, together with their Mother, were miferably tormented, and put to death. The very Jews themselves fing the Seventy ninth Plalm; wherein are these words, The dead bodies of thy fervants have they given to be meat unto the fowls of the heaven : the flesh of those whom those lovest, O God, unto the beasts of the earth. Their blood have they shed, like water, round about Ferufalem : and there was none to bury them. And whofoever confiders the words of I (aiab in the 53d. Chapter, cannot deny that the Melhas himfelf ought to have passed thorow much Affliction, and Death, to come into his Kingdom, and obtain Power to adorn his Houshold, or Church, with the most excellent Bleffings.

The words in the Prophet are thefe: Who bath believed our report; and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed? For he Shall grow up before him as a tender plant, and as a root out of the dry ground : He hath no form or comeline (s : and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should defire him. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of forrows, and acquainted with griefs: And we hide as it were our faces from him; he was so despised, and in so small efteem among us. Surely he hath born our griefs, and carried our forrows; yet we didestcem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflisted. But he was wounded for our transgreshons : he was bruifed for our iniquities : the chastifement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we, like sheep, have gone aftray ; we have turned every one to his own way : And the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all. He was $_{2}$

was oppressed, and he was afflitted; yet he opened not his mouth. He is brought as a Lamb to the flaughter; and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, fo he openeth not his mouth. After imprisonment and sentence passed on him, he was taken away, but who fhall worthily declare his duration when he was restored to life again? For he was cut off out of the land of the living; but for the transgression of my people he was stricken; and he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death: though he had done no violence, neither was any deceit in his mouth. But though it hath pleased the Lord to bruise him, and he hath put him to grief; Yet because he made himself an offering for sin, he Shall fee his feed, he shall prolong his days, and the plcasure of the Lord shall prosper in his hand; He Jhall see of the travail of his soul, and shall be satisfied: By his knowledge Shall my righteous fer-want justifie many; by taking away their iniquities. Therefore will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong, because he hath poured his foul unto death. And he was numbred with the transgress, and he bare the fin of many, and made intercession for the transgreffors. Who is there, either among the Kings. or Prophets, to whom these things can be applied? Surely, none. As touching that thift which fome latter Jews have invented, telling us, that the Prophet speaks here of the Hebrews dispersed thorow all Nations; that by their Example and Perfuafion, they might every where make many Profelytes: This fence is first of all repugnant to many teltimonies of holy Writ, which loudly proclaim, that no evil is befaln the Jeros, which they have not deferved (and a great deal more belide) for their evil Deeds. He alfo, of whom Efaias treats, was to deprecate God for the Heathen; which the fews do not. And laftly, the very order and feries of the prophetical difcourse will not bear that interpretation; for either the Prophet (which seems more proper to that place) or God faith, This evil hapned unto him for the iniquities of my people. Now the people of Ifaiah, or the peculiar people of God, are the people of the Hebrews; therefore he who is faid by Ifaiah to have suffered such grievous things, cannot be that fame People.

But the ancient Doctors of the Hebrews more ingenuoufly confefs, that these things were spoken of the Melsias: Whereupon some latter among them have devised two Melsiafes; the one they call the Son of Joseph, who was to suffer many miseries, and a Bloody death; the other is the Son of David, to whom all things should fucceed prosperously. When it would be far more easte, and more consonant with the Writings of the Prophets, to acknowledge but one Melsias, who was to pass unto his Kingdom through many difficulties, and death it felf; which we believe of Jesus, and the thing it felf declares to be most true.

SECT. XX.

And, as though they were honeft Men that put him to death.

Many of the Jews are kept back from receiving the Religion of Jefus, by a certain pre-conceived opinion of the vertue and bonefty honesty of their Ancestors, and especially of the Priests, who out of prejudice condemned Jesus, and rejected his Dottrine. But what kind of Men their Ancestors oft-time were, (that they may not think I defame them) let them hear the words of their own Law and Prophets, wherein they are often called uncircumcifed in heart and ears; a people that honoured God with their lips. and with the garnish of Ceremonies, but their hearts were far from him. It was their Ancestors that went about, and were very near to have killed their Brother Joseph; and, in very deed, fold him into bondage. It was their Ancestors also, that, by their continual mutinies and feditions, made Moles weary of his life, who was their Leader, and Redeemer; whom the Earth, the Sea, and the Air obeyed. These were they that loathed the Bread that was fent from Heaven: complaining as though they had been in greateft want and fcarcity, even when they belched up again the Fowl that they had eaten. It was their Ancestors that, forfaking David, fo excellent and good a King, followed Abfalon, his rebellious Son. It was their Ancestors that flew Zachariah, the Son of Jehojada, in the most holy place; making their Priest himself a Sacrifice of their cruelty. Now as concerning the Chief Priefts, they were fuch as conspired the death of Ferency by a false accusation; and had killed him indeed. unlefs they had been hinder'd by the authority of fome of the Nobles: Notwithstanding which they prevailed fo far, as to have him imprisoned until the very moment that the City was taken. If any Man imagine those were any thing better that lived in the times of Jesus, Josephus will thew him his Errour; who defcribes their villainous

Alls, and grievous Punishments, fuch as the like were never heard of, and yet, as he thinks, below their Defert. Neither may we conceive more favourably of their great Council or Senate; fpecially because at that time the Senators were not chofen after the old Cuftom, by laying on of hands, but by the pleafure or fway of powerful Men: As the High Priefts also were not elected , for term of life, but obtained that Dignity only from year to year, and that oftentimes for Money. We need not then wonder, if Men that were. puffed up with Pride, unfatiable in their Ambition and Covetousness, did break out into fury and madnefs when they beheld a Man that, by his holy Precepts and upright Behaviour, reproved their far different Life, and vicious Conversation. Neither was there any other thing laid to his charge, but what the best of Men had been accufed of long before. Thus that Micaiab, that lived in the time of Jehoshaphat. was cast into Prifon, becaufe he boldly fpake the Truth, against Four Hundred lying Prophets. Abab upbraided Elijah, just as the Priests did Jesus; faying, that he was the Man that troubled the peace of Israel. So likewife Jeremy was accufed as well as Jefus, for prophelying against the Temple. Add moreover, what the ancient Doctors of the Hebrews. foretold; how that in the times of the Melfias. Men should be as impudent as Dogs, as stubborn as Affes, and as cruel as wild Beafts. God himfelf, forefeeing long before, how most of the Jews would stand affected in the time of the Melfias. faid, it would come to pass, that they should become his people, who were not his people; and of all the Cities and Towns of the Fews, fcarce one or two would go to the holy mountain : How-

SECT, XXI.

Answer to the Objection, that many Gods are worshipped by the Christians.

THERE remain yet two acculations to be answered, which the Jews bring both against our Christian Dostrine and Worship. The first is, in that they fay, we Christians do worship many Gods.

But we answer, that this is nothing but a wrefted explication of another's opinion, out of hatred. For, why should this be more objected against us Christians, than against Philo the Jew, who oftentimes makes three to be in God; and calls the reason or the word of God, the name of God; the maker of the World; neither unbegotten, as is God the Father of all, nor fo begotten as Men are? Whom both Philo, and Mofes the Son of Nachman, call alfo the Angel or Ambaffador. who takes care of the Universe : Or against the Cabalists, who diftinguish God into three lights, which fome of them call by the fame names that Christians do; to wit, of the Father, of the Son or the Word, and of the Holy Ghoft. And let me not omit what is agreed upon by all the Eebrews, that the Spirit wherewith the Prophets М were moved and infpired, is not any created thing, and yet it is diffinguished from the fender thereof: as also that which they commonly call fchechina. Now many of the Hebrews have taught, that that divine power which they term wisdom, thall dwell in the Melfias; whence by the Chaldee Paraphrast, the Melfias is called the Word of God: as by David, Estimas, and others, He is honoured with that august name of GOD and LORD.

SECT. XXII.

And that a humane Nature is worshipped.

VITH like facility may we answer the other Objection, which they alledge against us, faying, that we exhibit unto the creature that worship and honour, which is due unto God the Creator. For we fay, that no other honour or worship is given by us unto the Messar, than is required by the fecond, and the bundred and tenth Pfalms. The former whereof after a fort was fulfilled in David, but after a more excellent manner belongs unto the Meffias, as David Kimchi himself, a great adverfary of Chriflians, doth acknowledge. And the latter can be expounded of no other, but of the Melfias. For that which some later fews have devised of Abraham, David, and Hezekiah, is but vain and The faid Pfalm is David's, as the frivolous. Hebrew Inscription doth shew: That then, which David faith was faid unto his Lord, can neither be applyed to David himfelf, nor to Hezekiah; who amongft David's Posterity did excel David in in nothing. And Abraham had no fingular Priestbood, but was bleffed of Melchifedeck, as the lefs of the greater. Likewife that which follows concerning the Scepter, that should go out of Sion, and come to the uttermost Coasts, doth plainly appertain unto the Mcfhar; as is manifeft by other like places, which doubtlefs are meant of the Melfias : nor did the more ancient Hebrews and Paraphrasts otherwise understand it. Now I may as well believe upon the bare credit of his Disciples, because of their most eminent integrity and honesty, that it is Jefue of Nazareth, in whom properly these things are fulfilled; as the Jews believe Moses in those matters, which without any other witness, himfelf affirmed, were delivered to him of God. But befides this, there are many and most forcible arguments of that most excellent power, which we fay Jefus hath obtained; As namely, in that he was feen of many, after he was rifen from the dead : And many beheld him when he was taken up into Heaven : Devils also were caft out, and difeases were cured only by his name : The gifts of Tongues were given to his Disciples, which Jesus himself promised should be figns of his Kingdom.

Add unto these, that his Scepter, that is, the Word of the Gospel, being gone out of Sion, is run through the World (and that not by humane help, but by the Divine Power alone) to the utmost parts of the Earth: whole people and their Kings He hath subdued to himself; just as the Pfalms did plainly foretel. The fewish Cabalists place a certain Son of Enoch in the middle, between God and Men; without any indication of such a power: with how much better reason M_2 do do we give Him that dignity, who hath to evidently demonstrated that it belongs to Him?

Neither doth this tend, in the leaft, to the diminution or leffening of the glory of God the Father, from whom this power of Jefus doth proceed, to whom it must return; and to whole honour alfo it ministers and ferves.

SECT. XXIII.

The Conclusion of this part, with Prayer for the Jews.

DUT it is not our purpose in this Work, to D make any farther curious inquiry into these matters : neither had we spoken hereof, but only to thew, that there is no wicked or abfurd point in our Christian Doctrine, which any one can pretend, why he should not embrace a Religion, which is beautified and confirmed with fo many wonders; commands fuch honeft things; and promises such excellent rewards. For he that hath once received and embraced the fame, must for farther instruction in special and particular questions, confult those Books, wherein, as we have formerly declared, the points of Christian Religion are contained; which that it may come to pais, we beleech the Almighty to illuminate the hearts and minds of the Jews with the brightnefs of his truth, and to make those prayers effectual which Chrift himfelf uttered for them, even while he was hanging upon the Crofs.

Among the Bishops also, there were most sharp Contentions about the cheifeft Sees. And as at the beginning the greateft mifchiefs enfued, upon the preferring of the Tree of Knowledge, before the Tree of Life; even to then also was curious Learning more regarded than a godly Life, and Religion turned into an Art. The confequent of which was, that, after the example of those who built the Tower of Babel, a rath affectation of things out of their reach, bied jarring and confusion in their Language; together with difcord one with another. Which the common People observing, and not knowing oft-times which way to turn themselves, they threw the blame upon the holy Scriptures, and began to avoid them, as hurtful and dangerous.

Religion alfo began every where to be placed, not in purity of mind, but as if Judaifm was brought back into the World, in Rites and Ceremonies: and in fuch things as contain rather an excercise of the Body than any amendment of the mind: and in an eager zeal for that Party and fide, which they had once chosen. Till at length it came to pass, that there were every where many Christians in Name; but very few in Deed.

GOD did not wink at these Vices of his People, but, out of the innermost parts of Scythia and Germany, poured forth, like a Deluge, Immense swarms of Barbarous People into the Christian World. And when the valt slaughters which they made, proved not sufficient to correct and amend the lives of those that furvived; Mahomet, by God's just permission, fowed a new Religion in Arabia: and that directly opposite to the Christian Religion; but which in words expressed, in a manner, the life of the greatest part of Christians,

This Religion was first entertained by the Saracens; who had revolted from Heraclius the Emperour: and by their Arms fubdued, in a short space, Arabia, Syria, Palestine, Egypt, Persia; and afterward posselfied themselves of Africa, and, beyond the Sea, of Spain also. But the power of the Saracens was abated, as by others, so chiefly by the Turks; a Nation also very Warlike: which, after long combats with the Saracens, being invited to Peace, easily embraced a Religion fuited to their manners; and transferred the Majesty of the Empire to themselves. The Cities of Asia and Greece were taken; and, by the growing success of their Arms, they came into Hungary, and the Borders of Germany.

SECT. II.

The overthrow of the foundation of Mabometanism, in denying inquiry into Religion.

THIS Religion, altogether contrived for the fhedding of Blood, delights much in Rites and Ceremonies, and would be believed without all liberty of enquiry thereinto; whence the M 4. Vulgar Vulgar are prohibited to read their Books, that are accounted boly. Which thing is a manifest argument of the iniquity thereof: For justly may that Merchandise be fulpected, which is obtruded upon this condition, that it be not lookt into.

It is true indeed, there is not in all Men a like capacity or knowledge, and quick infight into all things; many being led into errour by pride; others by inordinate pation or affection; and fome by cuftom. But the divine goodne/s forbids us to think, that those Men cannot know and find the way to eternal faluation, who feek it not for any by-respect of profit or bonour, but with fubmillion of themselves, and all they have unto God, imploring his allistance for the obtaining of the fame. And fince that God hath implanted in the mind of Man the power and faculty of judging, there is no part of truth that better deferves the imployment thereof, than that of which we cannot be ignorant, without the danger of losing eternal falvation.

SECT. III.

A Proof against the Mahometans, taken out of the Books of the Hebrews and Christians, which are not corrupted.

I T is granted by Mahomet and his followers, that Moses was sent of God, and Jesus also: and that they were holy Men, which first of all published the dostrine of Jesus. But in the Alcoran, which is Mahomet's law, many things are recorded recorded plain contrary to what is delivered by Mofes, and by the Disciples of Fesus. Thus to give one Example for many, all the Apostles and Disciples of Christ, with one confent do testified, that Fesus was crucified; that the third day be was reltored to life again, and after that was seen of many. But Mabomet teacheth quite contrary; namely, that Fesus was privily conveyed into Heaven: and not himself, but formething in his likeness was nailed to the Cross; and confequently he did not die; but the fight of the Jows was deladed and deceived.

This Objection cannot be put off, unless Mobonnet fay (as he doth) that the Books of Mo/er and of Chriff's Difciples have not remained as they were at first, but have been corrupted. But we have confuted this fillion before, in the third Book.

Without doubt if any Man should fay, that the Alcoran is corrupted, the Mahometans would deny it, and fay, that were an answer sufficient to those that could not prove the contrary: But they cannot moreover, for the integrity of their Book, alledge such Arguments as we do produce, concerning the several Copies, that were in a short space dispersed throughout the World; and that not as the Alcoran, in one Language; which Copies were preferved by the fidelity of so many Sects, that varied much about other Matters:

The Mahometans are perforded that in the Fourteenth Chapter of St John, where mention is made of fending the Comforter, there hash been fomething registered concerning Mahomet, which the Christians have rafed out. But here bet me ask of them, whether they think this deprava-pravetion of Scripture was committed fince the time of Mahomet, or before.

That it hapned not after the coming of Mabennet, is plain, because ever fince that time there have been in the world very many Copies, not only in the Greek Language, but in the Syriac, Arabick, and in parts far distant from Arabia, the Ethiopick and Latin Tongues of divers tranflations: all which do fo agree in that place, as there cannot be shewn any diversity at all. And before the time of Mahomet, there was no caufe of alteration: For no Man could know before his coming what Mahomet would teach. Yea. if the Dodrine of Mahomet had contained nothing contrary to the doctrine of Jefus, the Christians would have made no more difficulty to receive his Books, than they did to receive the Books of Moses and the Hebrew Prophets. Or suppose there had been nothing written either of the dollrine of Jesus or of Mahomet : It is but equi-ty that that be received for the dollrine of Jesus, which all Christians generally agree upon; and that for the doctrine of Mahomet which all Mabometans do allow of.

the authors. As for Jelus, Mahomet himself confeffeth that he was the Meffect, which was promised in the Law and in the Prophets; whom the fame Mabomet calls the word, the mind and the wisdom of God; faying alfo, that he had no Father of mankind. But Mahomet (as his own followers believe) was generated and begot according to the ordinary course of nature. The life of Jesus was altogether unblameable, there being no crime that could be objected against him : But Mahomet a long time was a Robber, and always effeminate : Jesus ascended into Heaven, as Mahomet confesseth; but Mahomet lies yet intombed in his Sepulchre. Who then feeth not whether of them is to be followed?

But Mahomet faith of himfelf that he was fent, not with miracles, but with Arms. Howbeit fome of his Followers ascribe to him miracles also: But what kind, I pray? Only fuch as may either be done by humane art, as that of a Dove, which came flying to his Ear: or fuch as had no witneffes, as that of a Camel, which is faid to have had fome conference with him by night: or lattly, fuch as are confuted by their own abfurdity; that a Digitized by Google

SECT. VI.

Alfo such as first embraced both Religions.

TEXT, let us fee who, and what manner N of Perfons they were, that first received these several Laws. They that first embraced the Law of Jefus, were fuch as feared God, Men of a plain and innocent life: Now it flands not with the Goodne [s, of God to fuffer fuch Men to be gull'd and cheated, either by bewitching fpeeches, or by an appearance of Miracles. But they that first received Mahometanism were Thieves and Robbers, Men eftranged from all humanity and piety.

of his Difciples, and those that fucceeded them: as likewise by the very patient enduring of the torments and punishments that Christians fuffered. But the Dottors of Mahometanism wrought no miracles at all: neither did they fuffer any greivous perfecutions, or cruel kinds of death for their profession: But it is a Religion which follows, where Arms go before: of which it is an accellary, and nothing of it felf. Nor do they themfelves bring any better argument for the truth thereof, than their geod success in their Wars, and the largeness of their Empire; than which nothing in this point is more deceitful and uncertain.

They condemn the worship and fervices of the Pagans: and yet we know what great Victories were won by the Perssians, Macedonians and Romans: and how ample their Dominions were. Neither have the Mahametans themselves had always good fuccess with their Armies. The flaughters and great overthrows that they have received in many places, both by Soa and by Land are not unknown. They are now banished quite out of all Spain.

There is nothing that is liable to fuch uncertain alterations, nothing that may be common both to good and bad, which can be a certain note of true Religion; much lefs can their Arms, which are fo unjuft, that oftentimes they fall upon people that do not any way moleft or offend them, nor are known to them by any injury: in fo much that all the pretence they have for their Arms, is only Religion: which is most irreligious.

For there is no true worship of God, but what proceeds from a willing mind. And the will is 176 to be wrought upon by good inftruction and gentle persuasion, but not by threats or violence. He that is compelled to believe, doth not believe at all, but plays the Hyprocrite, and feigns himfelf to believe, that he may escape and avoid fome danger or punishment. And he that by threats or fense of punishment, will force another Man's affent, fhews by that very proceeding, that he diffrusts his arguments. Again, they themselves destroy this very pretence of Religion; in that they suffer any people that live under their Dominion, to use what Religion they please : yea, and fometimes they will openly acknowledge, that Christians may be faved by their own Law.

SECT. VIII.

The Precepts of both Religions compared.

Urthermore, let us compare the feveral commandments of both Religions; the one whereof commandeth patience; yea, and love, even to them that bate us: But the other revenge. In the one the bond of matrimony is kept firm and inviolable between the married parties, by a mutual bearing with one anothers humors: But in the other there is licence granted to depart and be divorced. Here the Husband performs himfelf what he requires of his Wife, and by his own example teacheth her to fasten her affection upon him alone : But there they may have Wives after Wives, there being still new incentives and fresh provocations to lust. Here Religion is planted within, and rooted in the very heart and. Sout ن را

Soul, that it being well cultivated, may bring forth fruit profitable for Mankind, but there Religion fpends almost its whole force in Circumcision, and in some other things, that of themfelves are neither good nor bad. Finally here, in Christianity, a moderate use of Meats and Wine is allowed of: but there in Mahometanism Men are forbidden to eat Swines flesh, and to drink Wine : which notwithstanding is a great gift of God, beneficial both for body and mind, if it be foberly taken.

And truly, it is no wonder, if fome childifb rudiments were taught before the most perfect Law, as that of Christ is: but after the promulgation thereof, to return again to types and figures were preposterous. Neither can any just reason be given why, after Christian Religion, which is far the best, it should be fit that any other should be brought forth.

SECT. IX

Answer to the Mahometans Objection, concerning the Son of God.

THE Mahometans tell us, they are not a little difpleafed with us, for faying that God hath a Son, feeing he ufeth not a Wife: As though the word Son could not have a more divine fignification in God. But Mahomet himfelf attributes many things as difhonourable and ill-befeeming God, as if he fhould be faid to have a Wife.

Thus he faith, that God had a cold band, which himfelf knew by experience: that God was carried in a chair, and the like.

Howbeit, when we fay, that fe/us is the Son of God, we do but fignifie the fame thing that he means, when he calls him the word of God. For the word is after a fort begotten of the mind. Add farther, that he was born of a Virgin, only by the operation of God, fupplying the vertue or efficacy of a Father; that by the power of God, he was carried up into Heaven: all which being confelled even by Mahomer himfelf, do fnew that Fefus by a fingular prerogative and peculiar right, may and ought to be called the Son of God.

SECT. X.

Many absurd things in the Books of Mabometans.

BUT on the other fide, it would be long to relate how many things there are, contrary to the truth of Hiftory, and many things very ridiculous in the writings of the Mahometans. Such is that fable of a fair and beautiful Woman, that learned a folemn charm or Song of fome Angels that were drunk, whereby file was wont to afcend into the Sky, and likewife defcend again; and afcending once a great hight into Heaven, file was caught of God, and there fixed, and made that Star which is called Venus.

Like to this, is that of a mouse in Noba's Ark, that was bred of an Elephant's Dung: and a Cat of the breath of a Lion.

SECT. XI.

A Conclusion directed unto Christians, admonishing them of their duty, upon the occafion of what hath formerly been handled.

A ND thus having ended this last difputation against the Mohometans, there follows a conclusion of the whole, not to aliens or strangers, but to all forts of Christians, of what Name, Nation, or Quality foever they be: Shewing briefly the use or application of what hath hitherto been delivered; to the end those things may be followed and sought after, which are good; and on the contrary, the evil eschewed.

First of all, that they lift up pure hands and hearts unto that God, who of nothing made all visible and invisible things; having fure confidence in him, that his providence and care watcheth over us; seeing that without his permission, N not not fo much as a sporrow falls to the ground. And let them not fear those which can only kill the body, but rather let them fear him that hath like power both over foul and body. And let them not only trust in God the Father, but also in Jefus Christ his Son, fince there is no other name upon Earth by which we can be faved: And this they may rightly do, if they be verily per-Iwaded that eternal life is prepared, not for fuch as in word only call God their Father, and Jefus their Lord, but for fuch as frame their life according to the will of Jefus, and their Father which is in Heaven.

Furthermore, Christians are admonished faithfully, and with due care to preferve the Dourine of Christ, as a most precious treasure : And for this cause, let them often read and meditate the Books of the Holy Scripture, whereby no Man can be deceived, unlefs first he deceive himself. For the Authors and Pen-Men of those Writings were more just and full of Divine Infpiration, than that they would deprive us of neceffary truths, or cover and conceal the fame with any clouds.

Howbeit, for the right understanding hereof, we must bring a mind disposed and prepared to obedience : which if we do, then nothing shall be hid from us, which ought to be believed, boped for, or done by us: And by this means, that holy (pirit will be cherished and excited in us, which is given us for a pledge and earnest of our future happines.

Moreover, I deter Christians from imitating the Pagans: first, in their worship of false Gods, which are nothing but vain names, which evil Damons use to alienate our minds and affections from the worldop of the true God. Wherefore we cannot pollibly participate with them in their fervices, and expect to receive benefit by the Sacrifice of Chrift. Secondly, neither may the Chriftians initate the Heathen in their licentious and diffolute manner of Life; having no other Law, than what is suggested by wift, and prompted by fenfual defire: from which Chriftians ought to be far removed; who should not only far excel the vitious and prophane Payans, but likewife the Lawyer's and Pharifee's among the fews; whole righteousine's could never bring them to the heavenly Kingdom.

Circumcission that is made with hands, is now nothing worth, but it is the inward Circumcission of the heart, the keeping of Gods Commandments, the new creature, faith that is perfected in love, which make Men known to be true Ifraelites and mystical fews, that is, praisers of God, and commendable in his fight. The distinction of meats, the Sabbaths and feast-days were but types and shadows of things, which exist in Christ and in Christians.

In like manner by occasion of Mahometanism, these Admonitions are given, that our Lord fess foretold, that after his time there should arise false Christ and false Prophers, which should lye, and fay they were sent of God. But suppose that an Angel should come from Heaven, yet we may not receive or entertain any other Dostrime than that which Christ hath left us, confirmed by so many testimonies. For God, who at fundry times, and in divers manners spake unto the gody that lived in times pass, bath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, the Lord of all things, the N 2 brightness brightnefs of his Father's glory; and the express Image of his fubfance, by whom all things are created that ever were or shall be; who upholdeth and governeth all things by his power, and having purged our fins, is now set at the right hand of God, and hath obtained a dignity above Angels: and therefore nothing can be expected more magnificent than this Law-giver.

Upon the fame occasion Christians are remembred, that the weapons of Christ and of their Christian Warfare, are not such as Mahomet used, but fpiritual, able to call down strong holds, and every thing that exalteth it felf against the knowledge of God. For our buckler, we have the shield of faith, whereby we may repel the fiery darts of the Devil: For a brest-plate we have righteousness, or integrity of life: The hope of eternal falvation is a helmet, which may cover the weakest part: And for a Sword, we have Words delivered from God, which pierce into the most inward parts of the Soul.

After this, follows the exhortation to mutual concord, which Chrift at his departure fo folemnby, and with fuch earneftnefs, commended unto his Difciples. There ought not to be many Mafters and Dodors amongft us, but we mult have one Mafter, even Jefus Chrift. All Chriftians are baptized into one name, wherefore there ought to be no Sells or Divifions among them: for the cure and remedy of which evils, those Apostolical fayings are fuggested; as, let no man think more bighly of himfelf than he ought to think, but let Men be wife with fobriety, according as God hath dealt to every Man the meafure of faith. If any do not fo well conceive and rightly understand all things as they ought, then their their weaknefs must be born with: that fo without any brawlings or fallings out, they may be fweetly united and knit together with us. If any do excel the reft in understanding, it is but meet alfo that they furpafs them in love, in holy affection and endeavours to do them good. And as for those that in some points are of different opinion from such as hold the truth; God's leifure must be waited for, until it please him to reveal the fame truth, that yet lies hid from them: and in the mean while those things, which are agreed upon, must be stedfastly kept and duly practifed.

We know now in part only, but the time shall come, when all things shall be known most plainly, and after a perspicuous manner. This also I beg of every one, that they do not unprositably detain the talent committed to them upon trust; but that they endeavour by all means possible to win others unto Christ. For which purpose, we muss not only use good exhortations, and wholsome speeches, but also the example of good life; that so the goodness of our Master may appear by his fervants, and the purity of the Law by our laudable Astions.

Laftly, My Difcourfe returning thither, where it began, I intreat fuch Readers, as are my Country-Men, that if hereby they reap any good, they would give thanks to God for it: And if any thing be lefs pleafing to them, they would have a regard both to the common infirmity of man's nature that is prone to Errour, and to the time and place wherein this work was rather haftily brought forth, than elaborately compofed,

The Seventh Book OF THE TRUTH OF Chriftian Religion.

SECT. I.

An Introduction, shewing what makes the Addition of another Book necessary.

F those Apostolical Exhortations, which conclude the last Book, had been carefully followed; there would have been no need of faying any more, for the confirmation of Mens minds in the belief of the Truth and Certainty of the Christian Religion. But the unhappy differences which are among Christians, and which are maintained with unspeakable animosities and hatreds (nay with anathema's also, which one part pronounces against the reft) have made many Men doubtful which of these hold the true Christian Faith, for which the Apostle exhorts us most earnestly to contend; and in this doubtfulnefs, there are fome who embrace none at all.

For we fee the Eaftern Church disjovnted from the Western: and the Western divided into three great parts, every one of which condemn the other two: and all of them are fubdivided into feveral little parties by variety of opinions; for which they contend with the fame zeal, that they do for the Faith of Chrift. Which is thereby difgraced; and reputed by fome to be of no greater certainty, than those dubious opinions.

SECT. II.

Divisions among Christians no such objection against Christianity, as is imagined.

BUT to a confidering Man, this will be no occasion of fcandal: but rather confirm him more in the true Chriftian Faith; which every one of us ought to preferve with the great-eft care, as a most ineftimable Treasure. For, as this is common to every Religion, to have many different about it, and different opinions in it; and as Chrift and his Apoftles foretold there would many false Christs, and false Apostles, and falle Prophets arife (as was faid before in the end of the foregoing Book) who would lye, and fay they were fent, when they were not, introducing false doctrines, and calling them by the Name of his Religion; and as they give us a good reafon alfo why it fhould be fo; that Mens probity and fincerity might be tried, and brought hereby to the touch-ftone, and that their diligence gence and care in preferving themfelves might be exercised : So, blessed be our Lord, the true Chriftian Religion is still retained, and kept intire every where, by all these difagreeing Parties; notwithitanding the fierce quarrels they have one with another. As appears by this (which is a fhort, easie, and certain way to our latisfaction in this matter) that the Faith into which they are all baptized, is one and the fame without any variation. That is, they all enter into the Church at the very fame Gate; and upon the fame terms and conditions, neither more nor lefs, are made members of Chrift, and have a title given them, if they live according to this Faith, unto eternal Salvation.

SECT. III.

As appears even in the Roman Church, which bath given the greatest scandal.

HE Church of Rome it felf, which now makes the greatest differences in the Christian World, requires nothing more at this day to be believed by those, that are by Baptism received into the Church of Chrift; but only those things which are contained in the Creed, commonly called the Apostles. This Creed is recited there by the Prieft, and this alone, when he comes to the Font; and he interrogates the Perfons to be baptifed (if they be adult) or their undertakers (if they be Infants) about no other belief. Upon the profession of which, he bids them enter into the holy Church of God, that Digitized by GOOg[e they they may receive the Celestial bleffing from the Lord Jefus Christ, and have a part with Him and with his Saints: And having again examined adult Perfons, asking them, Do you believe in God the Father Almighty ? &c. and mentioning no other Articles of Faith, he baptizes them; and declares them to be regenerate, and to have remiffion of all fins. And fo do we here; nor is there any different practice in any other part of the Christian World; but every where it is fufficient to confent to this Creed: which is nothing but a brief explication, what we are to believe concerning the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoft, in whofe Names we are baptized,

If there were any thing beyond this, which we are neceffarily bound to believe, it should have been then propounded when we were admitted into the state of Christianity. For Baptism gives us a right and title to Salvation (if we do not forfeit it afterward by apoltafie, or by a wicked life) and this Faith (with a promife to live according to it) gives us a right to Baptifm.

Herein indeed the Roman Church contradicts it felf in decreeing many other Articles of belief, without which it declares Men cannot be faved ; and yet receiving Men at Baptism into a ftate of Salvation without demanding their confent to any fuch Articles. But fo they do in many other things, and cannot avoid it: while they forfake the ancient Universal Rule; and fet up their own private Authority, to impose what they pleafe under pain of Damnation.

SECT.

SECT. IV.

But both contradicts it self, and departs from the Ancient and truly Catholick Church.

OR that no fuch things, as they would now oblige all Chriftians to believe, were anciently exacted, it appears most manifeltly by Irenaus and Tertullian, (to name no others) in feve-ral places. Who call the Creed now mentioned, the Rule of Truth, and the Rule of Faith : which the Church throughout all the World, faith Irenaus (though it be dispersed to the most extream parts of the Earth) received from the Apostles and their Disciples : and believes, as if there were but one Soul and one Heart, in fo many Men: and with a perfect confent preaches and teaches, and delivers these things, as having but one mouth. For though there be divers Languages in the World, yet one and the fame Tradition prevails every where : For neither the Churches in Germany believe otherways, or deliver any thing elfe; nor they in Spain; nor they in France; nor they in the East; nor they in Egypt; nor they in Lybia; nor they that are founded in the midst of the World. But as the Sun is one and the same in the whole World: So is the preaching of the Truth, inlightning all Men, who will come to the knowledge of it. And neither he who is most eloquent among the Governours of the Church, preaches any thing different, (for no man is above his Master) nor doth he that is weakest in speech lessen in the least this Tradition. For there being one and the same Faith, he that hath most to say cannot inlarge it; nor be that hath least, diminish it. Thus

Thus they declared their minds in those early days: when there was no Catholick Man or Woman in the World, required to believe any of those Doctrines, now in Controversie between us and the Roman Church: (and fet down in the Creed of Pope Pius IV. as necessary to Salvation) but they all contented themfelves with the fimple belief of those things, which the Apostles have delivered in their Creed, the greatest Men in the Church delivering no more, nor the meaneft faying lefs. And with this, wife and good Men fatisfied themfelves in times fucceeding, as appears by this remarkable Paffage of St. Hilary in his little Book, which he himself delivered to the Emperour Constantius. Where he thus complains, Faith is now enquired after; as if we had none. Faith must be set down in writing; as if it were not in the heart. Being regenerated by Faith, we are now taught what to believe; as if that Regeneration could have been without Faith. WE LEARN CRHIST AFTER BAPTISM : AS IF THERE COULD HAVE BEEN ANY BAP-TISM, WITHOUT FAITH IN CHRIST.

SECT. V.

Christianity therefore is not there in its Purity; but much corrupted.

7 HICH is a fufficient Argument to prove that the Christian Religion is not fincerely preferved in that Church: and ought to with-hold us from joyning with them, in impoling thus upon the Christian World; and thereby thereby breaking the Bond of Unity; and turning Men away from the Faith, by the palpable falfities, and abfurd mixtures, which are brought into it: and that as necessary parts of the Faith of Chrift. To the adulterating of which we ought by no means to confent, but maintain it in that purity wherein the Apostles delivered it to their Succeffors; as we find it fet down in the Works of a great many following Doctours of the Church; whole Names I forbear, but are ready at hand to make good what I quoted juft now out of Irenaus. Who acknowledges him for a fincere Christian, who holds fast riv xariva & distinat (as Epiphanius recites his words, which were then extant in Greek) That Rule of Faith, which he received in Baptism, firm and unmoveable. He cannot be a Heretick who thus believes on the Son of God, in the fence wherein the Nicens Creed (not adding any new Article of Faith, but only declaring what was believed from the beginning) hath explained the Word: But they are Schifmaticks who call him fo; and will not admit him into their Communion, unlefs he confent to other things, and hold them to be equally certain, and neceffary, with the ancient Rule of Faith.

SECT.

The Truth of Book VII.

SECT. VI.

Answer to an Evasion from the force of the foregoing Argument.

TO pretend that all those Articles of Faith, which they now impose, though not expresent mentioned in the Creed, yet are contained in one Article of it, viz. in the belief of the holy Catholick Church: is in effect to make all the rest of the Creed unnecessary, and to establish this fole Rule of Faith in the room of it. For if by believing the Catholick Church, we are to understand, as they would have us, whatfoever the Catholick Church propounds: then it had been enough to have faid to those Catechumens that came for Baptism, Do you believe in the Holy Catholick Church? And to add any more had been utterly superstuos.

But the vanity of this farther appears, in that none of the ancient Doctors who have expounded the Creed (and there are many of them) have given any fuch fenfe of that Article of the Catholick Church: Nay, it was not in the moft ancient forms of Faith: nor doth the Church ttuly Catholick teach any thing as neceffary to be believed to falvation, but what is contained in the Creed. For we do in their own fenfe, believe the Catholick Church; but not the Roman Catholick Church, (which their Creed will have to be the Mother and Miftrefs of all Churches:) becaufe, to omit many other abfurdities which are in it, there was a Catholick Church before there was a Roman: and to fay, that they believe believe the Catholick Church, meaning thereby the Roman, is nothing more than to fay, they believe themfelves.

SECT. VII.

Their absurd Explication of the Unity of the Catholick Church.

TOTHING therefore can be farther from the Truth, than that Explication of the Unity of the Catholick Church; which is delivered in the Roman Cathechifm, published by the Authority of the fame Pope Rius IV. in purfuance of the Council of Trent. Wherein the Catechumen is taught to believe and profess, that the Catholick Church is one, not only because of one Faith (and other reafons mentioned by the Apostle, Ephef. iv.) and because it is subject to one invisible Governour, which is Christ: But because it is subject also to one visible Governour. who holds the Roman Chair, the legitimate Succeffor of St. Peter. Concerning whom it is the unanimous opinion of all the Fathers, that this visible Head is necessary to constitute, and conserve the Unity. of the Church. and to this Head or Pastor, Christ hath given the authority of ruling and governing the whole Church, as the Vicar and minister of his Power.

Thus that Catechifm teaches, in the First Part, the IX. Article, n. 11, 12, 13. Which (befides that it is confuted by the plain demonstration now mentioned; that Christ had a Catholick Church, which had Unity in it felf, when there O was was no Roman Church) is directly contrary to the conftant Doctrine, not only of the Scripture, but of all the Fathers; (whofe confent they fally boalt of) and of many Popes of Rome; and of Councils alfo, both general and particular; even of the Councils of Lateran and Trent; which by approving the Five First General Councils, who condemn the Supremacy of the Bishop of Rome, do, in effect, condemn it themfelves.

SECT. VIII.

Which forbids us to join in communion with them upon such Terms.

Which hath kept the Rule of Faith, once delivered to the Saints, fimple and unmixed with humane inventions. Which if we admit, as necessary to Salvation; we betray the Truth of Chrift, and are false and unjust to innumerable Christian Brethren; who, by Baptism, are admitted into a state of Salvation, but hereby unmercifully cut off from the Body of Chrift; though they have that Faith, which makes them true members of it.

This is the great Crime of the Roman Church; and may fuffice, instead of all other demonstrations, to prove that they have corrupted themfelves, and departed from the fimplicity that is in Chrift. For this very Article alone (which is a part of their Faith) that there is no Salvation, but by Union with the Roman Catholick Church, and 1.000 Digitized by Google and that by fubjection to it; thrufts out of Heaven, not only the ancient Chriftian pious Emperours, who refufed fuch fubjection: But many of their ancient Popes, who acknowledged their fubjection was due to the Chriftian Emperours; together with the ancient Patriarchs and Fathers, affembled in many Councils; and the moft famous Chriftian Churches; the moft glorious Martyrs and Saints of Chrift, that the beft times of Chriftianity have known; and to fay nothing of after Ages, the prefent Chriftians of Greece, Ruffia, Armenia, Syria, Ethiopia; who by this Article of fubjection to the Catholick Roman Church, are all excluded from Chriftian Communion, and muft perifh everlaftingly.

For Bellonius fays, that in his Travels he met with Nine forts of Christians at Jerufalem; Eight of which Nine know nothing of this Universal Bishop, or do not regard him : and of the Ninth, there is scarce half that ackowledges his Authority.

And yet there are Men among them, of no mean note and number, who have the confidence to tell us, that by the Catholick Church, which we are bound to believe, is to be underftood the Bishop of Rome: whose Declarations, when he will determine any thing to be of Faith, we all ought to receive. And though we are affured, as much as we are that there was fuch a Person as St. Peter, that Christ never gave him (much lefs his Succeffors) any Authority at all over his whole Church: Yet now, to deny the Pope's Supremacy is fuch a Herefie, that let a man be never so Orthodox in all other points of the Catholick Faith; this alone is sufficient to make him be excommunicated and cut off from the Body of Christ.

Witnefs our King Henry VIII. who was excommunicated, and his Kingdom given away for no other fault, by a Bull of Paul the Third: who affirms in the beginning of that Bull, that herein he acted by Divine authority; which (according as God faith in the Prophet Jeremiah) had fet him over Nations and Kingdoms, to root up and destroy, as well as to build and plant; having the supreme power over all Kings and People, throughout the whole Earth. Which certainly is fuch new Language, never known in the Church for many Ages; that they who are not convin-ced thereby of the corruption of Christian Religion in the Roman Church, have their Eyes blinded with the Worldly Splendor of it.

SECT. IX.

But on the other fide, not to flight Episcopal Authority.

 $\mathbf{\nabla} \mathbf{T} \mathbf{E} \mathbf{T}$ on the other hand, it must be acknow-I ledged that this enormous power which they have usurped, is a very strong proof of the high Authority of Christian Bishops in the Church; and of the great reverence that was paid to them by Christian People. Who otherwife would never have thus fubmitted to their will and pleafure; had not the obedience, which they had been wont always to yield to their authority, difposed them to be brought by little and little under an abfolute fubjection.

Nor would there have been reason for those Cautions, which St. Peter gives to the Governors of of God's Church (not at Rome, but elfewhere, 1 Pet. 5. 2, 3.) not to Lord it over them: if they had not been invefted with a power, which all Chriftians reverenced fo much, that it might more eafily be abufed, than contemned; and fooner perfwade People to follow them with a blind obedience, than to flight their judgment, and refufe to conform to their Injunctions.

And therefore whofoever they are that now defpife all Ecclefiaftical Authority, we may be fure they have fwerved from the true Principles of Chriftianity: and they alfo are altogether inexcufable, who fhake off the Epifcopal Government, and refufe to be fubject to it, under a pretence that there ought to be an equality among Chrift's Minifters. Which as it is againft the practice of the whole Church for many Ages, from the beginning: So directly oppofes the Inflitution of Chrift, who fets his Apoftles in a fuperiority to the LXX; as his Apoftles fet fuch Men as Timethy and Titus in a fuperiority over the Presbyteries of those Churches, which they could no longer attend themselves.

SECT. X.

Arguments enough in the foregoing Books, to prove the true Christian Religion not to be fincerely preferved in the Roman Church: one is their way of worship,

I T would be easile to shew how much the Roman Church hath deviated from the Rule of Faith, by confidering particularly the falfity of 0.3 every one of those Doctrines which they have added to the ancient Creeds. But it will be more proper in fo fhort a Treatife as this, only to bring to the Reader's mind fome Principles in the foregoing Books; which direct us as plainly to reject Popery; (and upon the very fame ground) as those false Religions, for whose confutation he alledges them.

And Firft, Let the Reader again weigh his Arguments against the Worship of the Pagans, and he will find them, in feveral things as strong against the Worship of the Roman Church: whole Practices, it will hereby appear, are no less faulty than their Faith. As for example, in the Worship of Angels and Saints.

For the former, They should not only (as he difcourfes there, Book IV.) in their very Wor-thip, make an evident difference between the moft high God, and those Angels, to whom they commend themfelves, (which they do not do in the Roman Church, but quite contrary, in the external Acts of Adoration have none that are appropriated to God alone, but are all common to him with others, as Adoration, Invocation, Ourning Incenfe, nay offering the Sacrifice of the Mass in their Honour, and making Vows to them) but be fatisfied alfo what order there is among the Angels; what good may be expected from each of them; and what honour the molt high God is willing mould be beftowed upon every one of them. All which being wanting, (for there is nothing revealed about fuch matters) it is plain from thence, how uncertain that Religion is, and how much fafer it would be for them to betake themfelves, as we do, to the Worship of Almighty God alone. Effectially for that, to whomfoever He

He is fovourable, to them the holy Angels muft needs be kind and ferviceable (though no Petitions be made to them) being the Ministers and Servants of the most High : who hath reveal'd this to us, that He hath made them all fubject to Jefus Christ; to be sent forth by Him, for the good of those who shall be heirs of Salvation. In the number of which, they, above all others, have reason to hope to be, who have so great a respect to his Majelty, and confidence in his Goodness, that for fear of offending him, they dare Worship none but Himself alone; refting affured, He will deal well with them, even for this reafon; becaufe they have fuch a regard to him, as not to prefume without his warrant and authority, fo much as to recommend themselves to him, by any Angel in Heaven, though never fo great, but by his only begotten Son Jefus Chrift alone, who is the Head of them all, and whom he hath confectated to be our perpetual Interceffor with Him.

The like we may fay of the Wonhip of Saints; to whom all Prayers are fruitlefs and vain, unlefs they be able to do formething for their Supplicants. Of which they have no certainty; nor is there more ground to fay that they can, than that they cannot; but rather lefs ground: fince it is inconceivable how they fhould be able to hear and affilt fo many; as addrefs themfelves to the fame Saint, in feveral far diltant parts of the World: without fuppoling them to be equal to our bleffed Saviour (for they have as many, if not more, Supplicants, as He) by fuch an Union as he hath with the Divinity.

whole Sainthip there is too much reafon to queflion, being apparently guilty of fuch crimes, as are inconfiltent with it. For ihltance, our Thomas a Becket (by whole blood, they have prayed our Lord Chrift, that they may afcend into Heaven; and do ftill pray, (upon Decemb. 29.) that they who implore his help may have the faving effect of his Petaions) whom our Forefathers, even in the time of Popery, look'd upon as a Perjured Perfon, and as a Traytor : being not only called fo by the King: but in Parliament accufed of Treafon, the Bifhops as well as others being prefent; and the Bifhop of Winchefter pronouncing the fentence against him.

In fhort, the Devotions of the Roman Church are fo like the ancient Idolatry; that the cunningest Man in the World cannot find any difference, without a great many nice and fubtil diftinctions: which in practice make no difference at all.

SECT. XI.

Another is the way of promoting their Religion.

THERE is this Argument also against it (as Grotius speaks of Paganism, Book 4. Sect. 10.) taken from the Religion it felf; that if it be not supported by humane power, or poficy, immediately it falls to the ground. For as the Church of Rome (it hath been observed by wife Men of our own) got and increased its absolute Authority over Mens Conficiences, by obtruding on on the World fuppofititious Writings, and corrupting the Monuments of former times; by falfe Miracles, and forging falfe flories; by Wars alfo and Perfecutions; by Maffacres, Treafons and Rebellions; in fhort, by all manner of carnal means, whether violent or fradulent: fo take away thefe fupports, and that Religion cannot fland by its own ftrength.

And truly his reason in the Third Section of the fame Book against the Paganish worship, that it was from evil Spirits, because they instigated their Worshippers to destroy them that worshipped one God; holds good still (if there be any force in it) to prove the Roman Church not to be acted by the good Spirit of God; because they would not let those live (had they sufficient power) who worship only one God, the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost; and content themselves with the Belief before mentioned, into which they were baptized; not presuming to superadd any thing elfe, as necessary to falvation.

And which is worfe, while they have been most cruel to those, who for fear of offending God, dare not allow the worfhip they give to Saints, which they think belongs to him alone; nor fall down before the Sacrament and adore it, as very God Himfelf: They have tolerated fuch without any cenfure, who have railed St. Francis into an equality with, if not fuperiority unto our bleffed Saviour; and made the bleffed Virgin a kind of Goddefs; nay called the Pope the King of kings, and the Lord of lords; giving him fuch a power over all Kings and Kingdoms, as fober men among themfelves are ashamed to own. Which is just after the example of the Pagans, among whom, as Grotins observes, it it was lawful for the Poets, to fing what they pleafed, though never to leved, concerning the Gods, and for the Epicures to take Providence out of the World: while the Jews were made ridiculous, and the Chriftians most barbarously. used, as if they had been the vilest of Mankind. SECT. XII.

The Romanists themselves overthrow their ela caracteriza and Religion and

T HAT Argument also which he urges for Christianity against the Pagans, that the chief Points of Christian Doctrine were acknowledged by fome or other of the best and greatest among them; may be used by us also, for the Faith to which we now hold : there being feveral learned Writers in the Roman Church, who have acknowledged our belief to be fufficient to Salvation; and the Points which they have superadded, having been look'd upon by the most excellent Perfons among them, only as meer Scholaffical Opinions; and not certain Truths, of which we can have a full affurance.

Here I might fhew, how the fufficiency of the Scripture hath been owned; and the Apostles Creed likewife confessed to contain all things that are absolutely neceffary to be believed to Salvation. But because I would not have this Book fwell above the bignefs of the foregoing, I shall let them alone: and inftance only in the Do-Etrine of Transubstantiation, which is now preffed Digitized by Google with with fo much violence upon the Christian World; but most plainly condemned by Gratian in their Canon Law, and by the Author, or Authors, of the Canon of the Mass it self.

About the former we may be fatisfied out of the Decretum, if we look into the Third part, and the fecond Distinction, concerning Conferration. Where in the XLVIII. chap. out of St. Austin and Prosper, he fays, The heavenly Bread. which is truly Christ's stesh, suo modo, after a sort or manner is called the Body of Christ: whereas revera, in truth, it is the Sacrament of his Body, which was banged upon the Crofs : and the facriz ficing of the Flesh of Christ, by the hand of the Priest. is called his death, and passion, and crucifixion, not in the Truth of the thing, but in a fignifying myt ftery. Which words are fo directly against the prefent fence of the Roman Church, that no Proteftant can speak more expressly and clearly against it; nor defire a plainer confutation of it; unless it be that of the Gloss upon those words, which is this: The Celestial Sacrament, which truly represents the Flesh of Christ, is faid to be the Bo-dy of Christ; but improperly: whence it is faid to be for, fuo modo, fed non rei veritate, after à manner, but not in the truth of the thing. So the fence is, it is culled Christ's Body; that is, it is lignified thereby.

And if we look farther into the LII. chapter, we find he faith Chrift was facrified but once, in femet iplo, in himfelf when he hung upon the Crofs, &c. Tet is offered daily, in Sacramento, in the Sacrament, which the Church frequents in memory of that thing. Which Sacrifice in the next Chapter he calls exemplum, the example or refemblance of that upon the Crofs, offered in rememremembrance of his Death. Which is fufficient to convince us, that they believed in those days as we do now, and not as the Roman Church doth; elfe He would not have called that, which he fays was truly the flesh of Christ, the heavenly Bread. But to put all out of doubt, let us turn to the lxxii. Chapter, and there we find these remarkable words out of St. Auftin, which ful--ly explain the bufiness, Because it is not lawful for Christ to be devoured by our teeth, therefore our Lord would have this Bread and this Wine in a Myftery, by consecration of the Holy Spirit, to be potentially created his flesh and blood, and to be daily mystically offered for the life of the World. They are potentially then or virtually made his Body and Blood, though but Bread and Wine in themfelves: and of this Sacrifice which is thus wonderfully made in Commemoration of Christ, (as he adds out of St. Hier. ch. lxxvi.) it is lawful to eat; but of that which Christ offered on the Cross, fecundum fe, according to himfelf, none can eat.

But the Canon of the Mass will more abundantly convince us, that he or they that made it did not believe any thing of Transubstantiation. For (Firft,) after the Confectation of the Bread and Wine, the Priest figns them ten times, at least, with the fign of the Crofs: which can have no excuse made for it, (but is the greatest impudence) if it be indeed Chrift Himfelf who lies before the Prieft, whom he thus croffes; For fure he doth not intend to blefs Chrift, or to drive away the Devil from him, or any fuch like thing, for which those Crossings are used in that Church.

But more than this, (fecondly,) it is observable that after Confectation alfo, the Prieft still calls Chrift's Body, Panem Sanctum, the holy Bread of eternal Life; which shews that, when this Rule was made, they believed the Bread to be still remaining.

A farther indication of which, is, that (3dly) the Prieft proceeds to befeech God, that He would vouchfafe to look upon that Sacrifice of his gifts, with a propitious and ferene countenance; and to accept them as he did the Gift of his Servant Abel, and the Sacrifice of Abraham, and that which his High Priest Melchifedeck offered to him. Which is most abfurdly spoken, if the Priest there offer Christ himself unto God; For then he intercedes with him for our interceffor as if he needed our Prayers: and befides, compares him with the first Fruits of the Flock. and the fpoils of War; which is fo incongruous, and fo much below his heavenly glory, that an unprejudiced Man cannot but think, they who composed that Prayer, looked upon those gifts which they offered, as still Bread and Wine.

Which appears more fully (4thly) from what follows, in the next Prayer, where bowing profoundly, and laying his hands upon the Altar, the Priest humbly intreats God in this manner. Command these things to be carried by the hands of thy holy Angel, to thy high Altar, into the prefence of thy Divine Majesty. Where there are two plain testimonies against their present Doctrine, For (First) nothing but the Bread and Wine can be called bac, these things; which in no propriety of fpeech can fignifie the very natural Body of Chrift. Who (fecondly) can by none of God's Angels be carried into Heaven, being there already; nor brought more than he is into the prefence of the Divine Majetty, where he was before the Priest faid Mass, and fits for ever there Digilized by GOOgle Had at God's right hand.

Had they that composed this Prayer believed any thing of Transubstantiation, they would have faid, (and could not have faid otherways, if they faid any thing of this matter) Almighty God, behold here, before me upon thy Altar, lies thy only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, by my facrifice unto Thee: that very Christ, who is at thy right hand, I now take into my hands to present unto thy Majesty, under the Form of Bread and Wine. Him thou canft not reject, nor me his Priest, who offer Him unto Thee, Sc. Or fome fuch like Words, more befitting their prefent Notions, than defiring an Angel may carry what the Preist offers, and prefent it unto GOD.

But we find quite contrary, which is the last thing I shall observe, that in conclusion, the Prielt acknowledges, that by Chrift Jefus God always creates, and fantifies, and quickens, and bleffes (making a Crofs upon the Hoft and the Chalice, at every one of those three last words,) all thefe good things. Which can be meant of nothing but the Bread and Wine confectated to the Commemoration and Reprefentation of Chrift's Body and Blood facrificed for us. For Chrift's own very natural Body and Blood cannot in any tolerable fence, be faid to be continually created and quickned or made alive: unlefs you will. fuppose him to have been dead before, nay, not to have been at all. For Creation implies the thing not to have been; and Vivification, not to have been then alive, when it was quickned.

Yet this fancy, of Christ's Real Prefence in the Sacrament by Transubstantiation, against which there are fuch numerous Tellimonies in their own Communion fervice, is now become the piain Article of their Religion. For we all know to to our great greif and aftonifhment, that when the publick Authority of this Realm was on their fide, fubscription was not urged to any Article of their Religion, upon fuch violent and bloody terms, as unto this of the Real Prefence. The Mystery of which iniquity, as a great Man of our own faid, in the Age before us, cannot be better refolved than into the powerful and deceitful working of Satan; who delights thus to do defpite to our Lord, and to his Religion; by feducing his professed Subjects into a belief of fuch things as make them and Him ridiculous unto Unbelievers; and ingage them in the worlt kind of Rebellion he could imagine, by worfhipping Bread and Wine instead of their Saviour: and all this upon the leaft Occafions and fhalloweft Reafons.

SECT. XIII.

Other Instances of it.

B^UT befides thefe plain confessions of that Church against it felf, there are many other things, (which I shall but just name) wherein we have the testimony of feveral of their own learned Men (ready to be produced) for our, and against their belief: proving clearly, that the present is not the old Religion of that Church; but that they have brought into it many innovations: by adding to the Canonical Books of Scripture; by making their owlgar Latin Translation of the Bible (about which they themsfelves cannot agree) authentical; by forbidding the People to read the Holy Scriptures in their own Language : and by denying them the publick Prayers in a Language they understand; by giving the Pope, not only a new Title of universal Bishop, but an Authority and Jurisdiction, which was never heard of for many Ages; by increasing the number of Sa-craments, and altering their Nature; by taking away the Cup from the People; and turning the Sa-crament of Christ's Body and Blood into a proper expiatory Sacrifice; by celebrating the Eucharist without any Body to communicate; by fetting up Images in Churches, and ordaining Religious Worship to be given them; by invocating Saints and Angels; (as was faid before,) and by the Doctrine of Purgatory and Indulgences, and many other, together with a vast number of strange ceremonies in making Holy Water, confectating Bells, &c. For which no Antiquity can be pretended.

The woful effect of which is this (if we may fpeak the plain Truth) that by preffing upon Mens Belief a great deal too much, and placing great virtue in trifles, they have tempted Men to believe nothing at all. As is apparent from hence; that where and when (as an excellent Writer of our own fpeaks) this Religion hath most absolutely commanded, there and then A-theism or Infidelity hath most abounded. And how fhould it do otherwife? when as he obferves, fo many lying Legends have been obtru-ded upon Mens belief, and fo many false Miracles forged to justifie them, as are very likely to make fufpicious Men question the Truth of all: And fo many weak and frivolous ceremonies devised, and fuch abundance of ridiculous obfervances in Religion introduced, as are no lefs apt to beget a fecret contempt and fcorn of it in witty Men :

and confequently Atheilm and Impiety; if they have this perfwafion fetled in their mind (which is endeavoured to be rooted in them from their Child-hood) that if they be not of that Religion, they were as good be of none at all. And when a great part alfo of the Doctrines now mentioned, to apparently make for the temporal ends of those who teach them ; that fagacious Men can fcarce forhear thinking, they were on purpose devised to serve those designs: That particular Doctrine alfo of Transubstantiation being fo portentous, that joyned with the forenamed Perswasion of no Papists, no Christians, it hath in all probability brought more than Averroes to this refolution; fince Christians eat that which they adore, let my Soul be among the Philosophers : And lastly, the pretence which is fo common, that there is no ground to believe the Scriptures, but their Churches infallibility; and yet no ground to believe their Churches infallibility, but fome Texts of Scripture; being too plain a way to lead those who difcern the labyrinth wherein they are, to believe neither Church nor Scripture.

SECT. XIV.

Whereby they have spoiled Christianity as the Pagans did the natural Religion.

THESE things, which have been already urged by the Writers of our Church, for the conviction of those who are capable of it, I repeat here again; because they seem to me very P power powerful for the prefervation of those, who are not already tainted, or too far gone in that delusion. Which is fo great, (that to fum up all belonging to this Head) we may fafely fay. Popery is just fuch a depravation of the true Christian Religion, as Paganifm was of the Natural Religion. There cannot be a righter conception of it, than this; which appears too plainly, in the abfurd Doctrines and Opinions, which they have mingled with the Christian Faith, in their multiplied Superstitions; in their fabulous Relations of the Saints, wherein they have furpaffed the very Poets themselves, and (to pass by the reft) in their prostrating themselves before I-mages: and giving Religious Worship to Men departed.

Which last instance fornished the Pagans of Cochin with this answer to the Jesuits (as Chrif. Borras, one of that Order, relates) when they prefled upon them the belief of one God, and no more. We do believe it, faid they, but those whom you fee us worship in their Images, were Men of great Sanctity, whom pious People therefore worthip according to their merit, just as you give to the Apostles and Martyrs and Confelfors divers degrees of honour and religious fervice, as you know them to have excelled in vertue and piety. And that they might confirm this to be their fence of the Divinity, they hid the Jefuits observe one part of the Altar in their Temple to be void of Images, and to be hid in an obicure and dark place; which, they faid, was the proper feat of the most high God, the Maker of Heaven and Earth, who could not be reprefented in any form and thape; and that the Images which flood about that place were the reprefentations trations of their Interceffors with Him; who having great power with the most high God. did obtain many gifts and bleffings for those that invocated them. How this differs from the Notions of the Roman Church, I do not fee; unless it be in this, that they have fometimes adventured to represent God himself in a shape. Otherwife the worthip is the very fame (the dead Men, who are the objects of it, only changed) and may very well jultifie us, if we fay, (and therein we fpeak very moderately) that their Worship is an Image at least of the ancient Idelatry. And moves them (to make the refemblance more perfect) unto the very fame rage and violence, which was in the Pagans, against all those that differ from them, and cannot confent to worship God in that way : profecuting them with all manner of cruelty, as if they were utter enemies of God, and of all Religion.

By which we may certainly know that they are to far from being the only true Christians, that they are a very degenerate part of Christ's Church : wanting that great mark of his fairbful Disciples, to love one another, even as Christ loved us. To which they are fuch strangers, that quite contrary they not only hate and perfecute, but endeavour, as I faid, to root out those from the face of the Earth, who obediently believe all that they can find our Lord and his Apoltles have delivered; and profess they are ready with all their hearts to receive and do whatfoever any Body can farther teach them to be his mind, Nay, are very defirous and diligent to know it, fparing no pains to understand the whole Truth, as it is in Chrift Jefus.

SECT. XV.

Answer to what they say about Miracles.

THEY pretend indeed abundance of Miracles wrought in their Church, as a fufficient condemnation of those who obstinately refule to invocate Saints, to worship their Images and the confecrated Hoft, to believe Purgatory and all other things, for the proof of which thefe wonders are alledged. But herein alfo they imitate the Pagans, who were guilty of the like deceit: and the fame answer will ferve here, which Grotius gives there (L. iv. Sett. 8.) in his confutation of the old Idolatry. For First, the wifest Men among them have rejected many of these Miracles, as not supported by the testimo-ny of any credible witness : nay, as plain fictions. Others alfo of them which are pretended to be of better credit, hapned in fome private place, in the night, before one or two persons, whose eyes crafty Priests (as he speaks) might eafily delude with false shews and counterfeit appearances of things. And farther there are others which only raife admiration among People Ignorant of the nature of things; and are no true Miracles.

I deny not but there may have things been done among them, which no humane power could effect by the frength of natural causes; and yet no Divine, that is, omnipotent Power be needful to their production. For those Spirits, which are interposed between God and Man, are able by their nimblenefs, cunning, activity, and Digitized by Google ftrength strength to make fuch strange application of things (very diftant) one to another, as shall astonish the Spectators with wonderful effects. But there is too great reafon to think they are not good Spirits, that do thefe feats; becaufe they revive hereby the ancient fuperfition, or uphold the Image of it still in the Christian World; to the great difhonour of our Saviour, and the indangering the Souls of his People. Who have been to far milled, as not only to fanfie great Virtue in the Images of the Saints; and to cry up alfo fome Images, particularly of our Lady of Loretto (for instance) as indued with fome fingular power and virtue, which is not to be found in others: but to honour them to highly, as for one Miracle faid to be done by a Crucifix, to report a hundred to be wrought at fuch or fuch a Shrine of hers.

It is very confiderable alfo (to omit the reft) which he notes, in the V. Book, out of the Law of Mofes: that it fuppofes God might permit fome wonders to be done, only for their tryal; whether the People would perfift in the worfhip of the true God; which had been confirmed by undoubted and far greater and more numerous Miracles. Read Deuter. xiii. 1, 2, 3. Ec.

This is excellently expressed, and with advantage, by a great Man of our own; in these words; or to this effect. The Doctrine which we believe, that is, the Bible, hath been confirmed; as is confessed on all fides, by innumerable supernatural and truly Divine Miracles; and confequently the Doctrine of the Roman Church, which in many points is plainly opposite to the Bible, is condemned by them: I mean the Miracles of Christ and his Apostles. And therefore P_3 if if any strange things have been done in that Church, they prove nothing but the Truth of Scripture: which foretold, that (God's Providence permitting it, and the wickedness of the World deserving it) strange figns and wonders should be wrought to confirm false Dottrine; that they which love not the Truth might be given over to strong delusions. So that now we have reason rather to suffect and be afraid of pretended Miracles, as figns of false Dottrine; than much to regard them, as certain Arguments of Truth. Neither is it strange that God should permit some true wonders to be done, to delude those who have forged fo many wonders to deceive the World.

SECT. XVI.

Answer to another Objection.

B UT it is not likely, they fay, that Religion fhould be thus depraved in the Roman Church; because their Ancestors were Men of greater Vertue and Honesty, than to suffer the least alteration.

Which is the very thing that is alledged by the Jews, why they fhould not believe our Saviour was unjuilly condemned, and his Religion rejected by their Priefts and Elders, as Grotius obferves in the Vtb. Book. Out of which I might produce feveral things, as I have done out of the foregoing, to prove the vanity of the Romifh Traditions, as well as of the Jewifh; and thew alfo how they have brought back Judaifm, in a great measure, by the valt butden of Rites and Ceremonies, wherewith they have incumbered Christian Religion: But I shall wave all this (because I would make this Book as short as the rest) and only observe, in answer to what was now pretended; that whosever shall consider (as he speaks of the Ancestors of the Jews) what kind of Men, for several Ages, sate in the Chair of Rome, and how ignorant the People generally were; he cannot wonder at the corruption of which we complain.

Let him but read, First, the Centures which their own Authors have passed upon several Popes, as meer Epicures, and Men void of all Religion. &c. And then the bitter complaints which St. Bernard himfelf makes (and that while he wrote to a Pope) of the vices which were then annexed, even to the very Papacy : and farther, the description which such Men, as Marfilius of Padua, make of the Church of Rome, the whole Body of which, he faith, was to infected by the plenitude of Power, which is allowed to the Pope, that it might be more truly called a Shop of Traffick, nay, a Den of Thieves, than a Church of Chrift: (and to come nearer to our own times) the forwardness of their People, even fince the Reformation, to worship Men as Saints, hefore they were canonized by the Pope: and he will not think there hath been always fuch care and caution used about that and fuch like matters, as they would have us believe.

We have a memorable inftance of this thing last mentioned (to meddle with no other) in the Founder of the Jesuits Order, Ignatius Loyola: by whose Merits People recommended themfelves to God (if we may believe the Pope himfelf) before he was declared to be a Saint. P 4 So

U

So Urban VIII. informs us in his very Bull or Decretal Letters for his Canonization: where feveral miraculous Works are faid to have been done. for those, who fled to his help, and religiously worshiped his Image, and commended themselves to him (as the words are) with all their heart. He was made indeed a Beato by the preceding Pope: But the like stories are told of Xavier one of Ignatius his Companions, unto whofe Intercession the People applied themselves, and hoped in his merits (as the Bull for his Sainting tells us) even before he was made a Beato. So exceeding prone they have been of late to run into Superlition; as they were more long ago in the days of St. Martin, who broke down an Altar, which had been fet up by former Bishops themfelves in honour of a Martyr, (as the People called him) who proved to be no better than a Highway-Man (as St. Martin difcovered) that had been excecuted for his Robberies, and there buried.

SECT. XVII.

Popery and Mahometanism had the same Original.

7E may fafely therefore affirm, that the account which Grotius gives in the beginning of the VI. Book, of the rife of Mahometanism, may ferve as well for the Original of Popery. Which took its rife from the great decay of true piety, and the vain jangling that fell out among Christian People, by imploying their time in curious Questions: which made the vulgar vulgar at laft not know what to believe, and to lay the Fault upon the Scriptures; nay to avoid them as hurtful and dangerous. And then it was eafie to lead them any whither, when they had forfaken the light which fhewed them their way: and began alfo to place Religion, not in purity of Mind, but in Rites and Ceremonies; and to content themfelves in fuch things, as ferved rather to excercife the Body, than to amend the Soul.

In fhort, that falle Prophet Mahomet, and an Univerfal Bishop forang up both together, very near the fame time: as Treason and Idolatry fetled themfelves alfo together at the fame time in the Age following. For the Pope, under the pretence of retaining Images, which the Constantinopolitan Emperour deftroyed, revolted from him; denyed him the Tribute that was wont, till then, to be paid him, even out of Rome it felf; as well as other places; and denying him all Obedience, plainly thrust him out of Italy. This account Zonaras, and others give of Gregory the IId's proceeding against Leo Isaurus: and thus the Bishop of Rome, by bis Papal Authority, became the first Author of defection from a lawful Prince, upon the account of Religion.

SECT. XVIII.

And supports it self by the same means.

I F we look farther into what was faid before about Mahometanifm, we fhall find that Popery flands, and upholds it felf, by the very fame fhameful means, which keep up the Religion of that falle Prophet. By force, that is, and violence: compelling Men where they have any power to confent to what they fay, or rather to feign a confent to what they do not believe. Which difcovers the weakness of that Religion, and of the reasons of those that profess it: For he that extorts affent, (as was faid in the Book foregoing) by fense of Pain or fear of Punishtnent; plainly confesses by that very proceeding, that he distructs his Arguments.

At the best, they require belief of Men without all liberty of enquiring into Religion. For the Vulgar (just as in Turky) are prohibited to read the Books which are accounted holy : which is a manifest fign of its iniquity (as he there fpeaks of the Turkish Religion;) for justly may that Merchandize be fufpected, which is obtruded upon this condition; that it must not be look'd into nor examined. This is the way of the groffeft deceivers ; who will not fubmit themfelves to a Trial, and refuse to give any account : but will have us fubmit to their Authority, and take what fuch Men as they fay upon truft. Which is the method of the Roman Church, who are wont to put doubting of any part of their Doctrine among mortal fins: And to for fear what the iffue may be, will not fuffer their Peo-ple to try their Religion with indifference, that is, with true liberty of Judgment, and with a resolution to doubt of it, if the Grounds of it appear upon examination to be uncertain, and to leave it, if they prove apparently falfe. It is true inded (as it there follows) there is not in every Man the like capacity of knowledge and quick-fightedness to discern between Truth and falshood: Many also are carried away into

But those very Books, which the Roman Church pretends may miflead Men, (and therefore will not let them use) teach them, in the first and principal place to purge themfelves from all naughty affections; and then to be fober-minded, and not too forward to determine things on their own heads; but to reverence their Judgments who are over them in the Lord : and not to pretend to Religion, nor imagine they can judge a-right, till they be humble and meek, and without any other defign than this alone, of faving their Souls. Now the Divine Goodness forbids us to think, that fuch Men shall not be able to find the way to eternal Salvation, who feek for it in God's own Word, and in this manner; without any by-refpect to honour or Worldly advantage; and with entire fubmiffion of themfelves and all they have to Him, imploring his affiftance, that they may attain it. Which are in effect the verv words of Justin. Martyr and Origen.

And truly, fince GOD hath implanted in Mens minds the power and faculty of judging; there is no part of truth that better delerves the imployment of this faculty about it, than that of which we cannot be ignorant without hazard of our Salvation. After this, whofoever enquires with a godly mind, he shall not dangerously err: And where should he enquire after it, but in God's most Holy Word? without which we cannot know whether there be either Church or Priest or any thing elfe, wherein they would have us trust. SECT. XIX.

And refuses to be tried by Scripture.

IT is a manifest fign therefore of Imposture, that, when they cannot for shame, but some-times suffer their Religion to be tried, yet they will not have it tried by the holy Scriptures : In the reading of which (as was excellently faid in the conclusion of the foregoing Books) no man can be deceived, but he who hath first deceived himfelf. For the Writers of them were more faithful, and fuller of Divine Infpiration, than either to defraud us of any necessary part of Divine Truth, or to hide it in a Cloud, fo that we cannot fee it.

Why then should any body decline this way of trial; unlefs they fee themfelves to manifeftly condemned by the holy Scriptures, that they dare not let their Caufe be brought into fo clear a light? Which hurts indeed fore eyes; but comforts and delights those that are found : shewing us fo plainly what we are to embrace, and what to refuse, and being fo fure and fo perfect a Guide in all fuch matters ; that S. Hilary not only commends and admires the Emperor Constantius for defiring a Faith, according to what was written: But faith, He is an Antichrist who refuses this; and an Anathema that counterfeits it. And thereupon calls to him in this manner; O Emperor, thou Seekest for Faith; hearken to it, not out of new little Papers, but of the Books of God. There we must feek for it if we mean to find it: and if they be filent and can tell us nothing (fays St. Ambrofe) who shall dare to speak? Digitized by Google Let

Let us not therefore bring deceitful balances (they are the words of St. Auftin, in his fecond Book of Baptifin, Chap. vi.) wherein we may weigh what we list, and as we list, after our own li-king; faying, This is heavy, that is light: But let us bring the Divine Balance out of the Holy Scriptures, (as out of the Lord's Treasures) and in that let us weigh what is most ponderous : or rather, let not us weigh, but acknowledge those things, which are already weighed by the Lord.

Yes, fay they of the Church of Rome, we will be put into that Balance, and tryed by the Scriptures; but not by them alone. Which is in ef-tect, to refule to be tryed by them: for they give teltimony to their own fulnels, and perfe-Etion and plainnefs too, in things necellary; and fo do all other Chriftian Writers that fucceeded the Apostles; who do not fend us to turn over we know not how many other Volumes, but tell us here we may be abundantly fatisfied. In fo much that the first Christian Emperor Constantine (the Father of Constantius now mentioned) admonished the Bishops in the famous Council of Nice to confult with thefe heavenly infpired Writings, as their Guide and Rule in , all their Debates; becaufe they per (picuou fly instruct us, (as his very words are) what to believe in Divine things; and therefore they ought, he told them, to fetch from thence the Resolution of those things, which should come in question. To which Cardinal Bellarmine indeed is pleafed to fay, that Constantine truly was a Great Emperor, but no great Dodor: But as herein he fpeaks too fcornfully of him, fo he reflects no lefs up-on the Understanding and Judgment of those venerable Fathers affembled in that Council, Digitized by GOOG which (as Theodoret tells us in his Ecclefiaftical Hiftory) was composed of Men excelling in Apoftolical Gifts, and many of them carried in their Bodies the Marks of the Lord Jefus, and were, for the far greater part, a multitude of Martyrs affembled together: who all confented unto, and followed this wholfome Counfel of the Emperour: (as he there tellifies) knowing he did bur fpeak the fence of the truly Catholick Church.

Which did not merely bid Men hear it, and bring all Doctrines to its Touchstone: but confeffed plainly that even the Church it felf mult be tried by the Scriptures. It is the express fenvence of the fame St. Auftin, in his Book of the Unity of the Church. Where, in the focond Chapter, he faith, the Question then was (as now it is) Where is the Church? Now what shall we do, favs he? Seek for it in our own Words? or in the words of our Head, our Lord Jefus Chrift? I chink we ought to feek it rather in his words, who is the Truth and best knows his own Body. And in the beginning of the third Chapter thus procoeds; Let us not bear, thus fay I, and thus fayeft thou: but let us hear, thus fasth the Lord. The Lord's Books they are certainly ; to whole Authority we both confent, we both believe, we both yield ebediense : there let as feek the Chunch : there let us discuss our canse.

And to name no more, the Author of the imperfect work upon Sr. Mathew (carrying the name of St. Chryfoftome) declares this to fully, that it leaves no doubt in us what counte they took for farisfaction in this bulinefs. Heretofore, tays he, there were many ways, whereby one might know what was the true Church of Chrift, and what was Gentilifm: but now there is no way to know but Google what what is the true Church of Christ, but by the Scriptures. Why fo? Because all those things which belong properly to Christ in truth and reality; those Heresses have also in shew and appearance. They have Scriptures, Baptism, Eucharist, and all the rest, even Christ himself, like as we have. Therefore if any would know which is the true Church of Christ; how should he know it in such a confusion of multitude, but only by the Scriptures; which he repeats over again a little after, he therefore that would know which is the true Church of Christ, how should be know it but by the Scriptures?

To them let us go, and in them let us reft: and if you are the Difciples of the Gofpel, may we fay to the Romanifts (as Athanafius does to the followers of Apollinarius, in his Book about the Incarnation of Chrift) 'Do not fpeak un-'righteoully against the Lord, but walk in what 'is written and done. But if you will talk of different things from what are written, why 'do you contend with us; who dare not hear nor 'fpeak, befide those things which are written? Our Lord telling us, if you abide in the word, 'even in my word, pau shall be free indeed. What 'immodelt frenzy is this, to speak things, which are not written? and devise things which are 'frangers to piety?

To which if we faithfully adhere, there is this to be added for our incouragement; that though we fhould miltake in the fense of the Scriptures, yet they fecure us, that if we with honeft and upright hearts continue to inquire after the truth, (defigning nothing elfe) that error shall not prejudice us: But God will either diffeover to us his mind, or not condemn us for our error of weaknels, not of wilfulnels.

SECT. XX.

The Vanity of their appeal to Traditions.

S for Interpretations of Scripture by Tra-A dition, they may be pretended and talkt of; but cannot be produced in most places, where we are defirous of that help: which we gladly receive, when we can have it by a truly universal confent. But as for particular interpretations of the ancient Fathers, they do not abfolutely agree with each other, in their Expofitions of those Texts, upon which Controversies of greatest moment are now grounded. Nay, they oft-times propound divers interpretations alike probable. And fometimes plainly intimate their doubtfulnefs, and make but imperfect conjectures; in fuch a manner, as if they intended to excite Posterity to seek for farther resolution. Therefore we shall not diffent from them, though we do not affent to all their particular interpretations. Nay, we cannot more diffent from them, than by following their interpretations on fuch frict terms, as the Romanifts would bind us all to do, when they feem to make for their advan-tage. For then, there is not the least furmife or conjecture of any one Father, but must fuffice against the joint Authority of all the reft. To which Rule (of ferving their interest) they are fo true, that they flick not to reject any inter-pretation of the Fathers, when they think good : and, which is more, to prefer their own expofitions before theirs.

And

And fo they do in the matter of all other Traditions, though called Apostolical. For instance, the threefold immersion in Baptism, which seems to have flowed from an Apostolical Canon, is long ago abolished (faith their Canus) by a contrary custom. And to is the custom of giving Communion to Infants (which prevailed, fays their Maldonate, for 600 Years in the Church) not only antiquated by them, but decreed to be unlawful. Which clearly shews that they might, if they pleafed, make an end of all the controverfies that trouble the Church, without any difparagement (but rather with the increase) of its Authotity. For challenging a power to alter even the Inftitutions of Jefus Chrift (as they have done in taking away the Cup from the People in the Holy Communion) and much more those of the Apostles: what need all this stir about Apostolical Traditions, or the Decrees of the Church? which they may lay afide, at their pleafure; and have laid afide, as appears by many other Inftances, befides those now named, that may be given of it.

But it is fufficient for the direction of every honeft hearted Man to know (which is as certain as any thing of that nature can be, and may be undoubtedly relyed on) that nothing is clearer in the Tradition of the Church than this: that the Doctors of it declare the Scriptures to be full and perfpicuous in all needful matters. And therefore there needs no other Tradition, but the Tradition of the Scriptures: which fatisfie us abundantly, in the Truth of all those things which are univerfally received.

SECT. XXI.

And their Guilt in what they say about the Holy Scriptures.

HERE cannot therefore be a greater demonstration of their guilt than this, that notwithstanding such evident Testimonies from the Scriptures themfelves, and the concurrent ftream of the ancient Doctors of Chrift's Church: they have been forced (to avoid this tryal by the Scriptures) to fay fo many fcandalous things as they have done in difparagement of the Sacred Writings. Many of them are commonly known, and I am not willing to repeat the reft: but only fay this great Truth; that whether they will or no, their Church, fuch as it is, receives all its Authority from the Scriptures, and not the Scriptures from it. For we can have no notion, as was faid before, of a Church, or of its Authority, but from the Scriptures. Which therefore mult be of greater Authority, than that which receives Authority from them, and be first supposed to be infallible, before they can make us believe any thing elfe is fo. For we must be fecure of the proof, before we can be fure of the thing proved by it; otherwife it is no proof, but leaves us as much in doubt as we were before it was alledged.

If they fay, (and what elfe can be faid with any colour of reafon?) that we mult indeed learn their Churches Infallibility from the Scriptures; but then learn the reft from their Church: mark, I befeech you, what follows. Then it is manifelt, Firft, that they themfelves make the Scriptures the Rule of Faith in this one Article, at leaft, concerning the Catholick Churches Infallibility. Which we must therefore believe (and for no other reason) because the Scriptures which we first infallibly believe, do teach and prove it.

first infallibly believe, do teach and prove it. Whence it plainly follows that private Men may and must be affured of the truth of Scriptures (without the Help of their Churches Authority) before they can believe any thing elfe: becaufe it is the ground for their belief of that infallibility which their Church pretends, which to them is the General Rule of Faith.

And from thence it follows farther, that the Scriptures, which to us are the only Rule of Faith, ought to be acknowledged by them to be more than fo; even the Rule of their Rule of Faith. And if it be fo, what reafon can any Man alledge, why it fhould not be the immediate Rule of Faith (without fending us elfewhere to feek it) in all other Articles of the Creed, as well as in that of their pretended infallible Church.

We may appeal to all the World, and call Heaven and Earth, Angels and Men to witnefs, between us and the Roman Church (as a worthy Champion of our Caufe did long ago) whether the Articles of Chrift's Incarnation, his Death, Paffion, Burial, Refurrection, Afcenfion, Interceffion, the Refurrection of the Dead, and Life everlaiting, $\mathfrak{C}c$. be not much more plainly fet down in the Scriptures, to any Man's apprehenfion whatfoever; than the infallibility of the prefent Roman Church is, in fuch words as thefe, thou art Peter &c. Feed my Sheep, or any other from whence they challenge it. And therefore why fhould we be required to learn thefe or any other part of Chriftian Faith meerly from their Church, when we learn them fo eafily by the Scriptures in which they are to be found more clearly delivered, than any thing we read about their Church?

Let no Man doubt but if the Holy Ghoft will teach us that Article of the Churches Infallibility, immediately by the Scriptures, without the help of the Churches infallible Authority, (as they themfelves are forced to confess, because elfe the Church can have no Authority;) then He will immediately teach us, by the fame Scriptures, any other Article of our Creed, and whatfoever is necessary to Salvation, which are plainly and perspicuously enough set down in the Scriptures, without the help and affiftance of the Churches infallible Authority, which the Scriptures cannot be fuppofed to teach, but by places far more doubtful.

SECT. XXII.

It is our Wisdom therefore to adhere to the Scriptnres.

r O this Rule then let us flick; keeping those words of our Saviour always in mind, Fob. 3. 21, 22. He that doth evil hateth the light ; neither cometh to the light, left his deeds should be reproved. But he that doth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God. Let that be his Guide, who would not go aftray in dangerous Paths; into which he cannot fall, wo keeps clofe to the di-rections of the Holy Books : wherein all necef-fary Truth being fet down, as the most ancient and best Doctors unanimously agree, we are certain (every way) by believing them, to believe lieve all neceffary Truth; and if our lives be accordingly (without which they tell us, our belief will be vain) it is impossible we should fail of everlasting Salvation.

To these alone (as St. Austin speaks for himfelf, in his Book of Nature and Grace) we owe an absolute confent, without refusing any thing they propound to us. What foever it be (as his words are in his CXII. Epiftle) that is confirmed by the perspicuous authority of the divine Scriptures, those, viz. which are Canonical in the Church; it must be believed without any doubting. But as for any other witnesses or testimonies, to which thou art perswaded to give credit; thou mayest believe them, or not believe them, according as thou perceivest them deserve or not deserve to be relied on. A great reverence is due to the Church and its Teftimony (though lefs to the prefent Church of Rome than others; because it hath fo grofly abused the World by false Records, and forged Miracles, and fuch like things) yet only as to an humane Teftimony; which cannot equal that of the Holy Scriptures.

SECT. XXIII.

Which have more manifest Notes of Certainty than the Church

F OR if we take their own way and method, to affure our Minds that we follow an Infallible Guide, there is no Note which they give of the true Church, which they fay ought to be our Guide; but pleads far more ftrongly for the Holy Scriptures, that we fhould rather follow them, and give and undoubted credit to them. I fhall not run over all the Notes, 'nor' examine the cer-Q 3 tainty of them; but only briefly name fome of them, and shew, that if they prove any thing, it is the Authority of the Scriptures above the Church.

First, they fay, the very name of the Catholick Church is venerable, and ought to be regarded. But, as that Name is not proper to them alone . fo, if there be any power in Names to make us refpect any thing; what more awful than the Name of the Word of God, and the Sacred Scriptures, which were always given to these Books, to which we advise all Christians to adhere.

The next Note, which is Antiquity, is on the fide of the Scriptures alfo; which more justly claim to be ancienter than all other Books, which pretend to any Divinity; than the Catholick Church can claim to be ancienter than all other Societies, which call themfelves by the Name of a Church. Nay, the Doctrine contained therein, must be fupposed, as I have shewn, to be before the Church; which is made by belief and profession of that Doctrine: and the Old Testament certainly written, long before the Church was made Catholick.

As for Unity, in that the Church is not comparable to the Scriptures, whofe agreement and confent of parts is admirable. And if we fpeak of the fureft bond of true Catholick Unity, it is as manifest as the Sun, that the Holy Scriptures lay the foundation of it, and preferve us in it (if we adhere to them) by keeping us close to one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism : but the Church of Rome, which hath usurped the name of Catholick, makes this bleffed Unity impoffible, For, there being but two ways to it, either that we all agree in our Opinions about Religion, or that while we differ, it be no hindrance to Communion;

they have made the latter as impossible as the former : because they make it absolutely necessary to Communion and Salvation, to believe in every thing as they do.

The like might be faid of Holine s and Efficacy of Doctrine, (which depends upon the Churches fpeaking according to the Scriptures) Sanctity of the Authors of our Religion, (which cannot be known but out of the Scriptures) the Glory of Miracles, the Light of Prophecy, and all the reft: but I shall only touch upon one more, the Amplitude and Universality of the Church, in which they make their boaft. But herein the Scriptures most evidently excel; their Authority being there facred, where the Church of Rome (whole Notes these are) is not known, or not regarded. For all Christians in the World, of whatloever Sect they be, believe the Scriptures to be the Word of God: whereas they alone fay, that they are the only true Church of God. All Chriftians befides, who know any thing of this pretence of theirs, abfolutely deny it; and maintain the Divinity and Authority of the Scriptures, against all their Cavils.

SECT. XXIV.

The great incouragement we have to do fo.

B' following the Scriptures then, we follow the fureit Guide, by their own confession. For first, by following the Scriptures, we are certainly led by God; but by following the Church, we are only led by Men. And confequently the Faith we build upon the Scriptures is a Droine Q 4 Faith;

Faith; but the Faith we build upon the authority of the Church meerly, can be no more than humane. For the Scriptures are fully and amply proved to be of Divine Authority, by all those Arguments, which are alledged in the Third Book of this Work : the like to which can? not be produced to prove the infallible authority of the Church. Which cannot fo much as pretend that God hath bid us believe it, but by fending us to the Holy Scriptures, from whence it derives all its Authority.

Which is the fecond thing to be confidered, (and here I will take the liberty to transcribe part of the discourse of a great Man on this Subfect. with fome Additions) that by following the Scriptures, we follow that which they themfelves are forced to follow (as was noted before) and on which they entirely depend, for the proof of their own authority: on which they would have us entirely depend. Who have reafon rather to rely on that which they rely: and in fo doing tacitly confess the Scriptures are of greatest authority; and that they are furer of their Truth, than of the Churches Infallibility

And Thirdly, by following the Scriptures, we follow that which must be true, if their Church (which they would have us follow) have any truth in it; for their Church cannot but give attestation to them: whereas if we follow their Church we must follow that which, though the Scriptures be true, may be false; nay, which, if the Scriptures be true, must be false, because the Scriptures testifie against it.

Farther,

Farther, Fourthly, to follow the Scriptures, we have God's express Warrant, and Commandment; without any colour for any prohibition: but to believe their Church infallible, we have no Commandment, much less any express Commandment; nay, have reason to think, we are prohibited fo to do in fuch words as those, Beware of falle Prophets. Believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether they are of God, &c. Which require us to examine before we truft; and consequently not to give up our felves blindfold to those who considently claim the infallibility of St. Peter; but cannot produce any evidence of it.

Again, Fifthly, by following the Scriptures, we shall keep to that which was always believed and every where received : but by following the Church of Rome, we shall make our felves guilty of the Changes and Alterations which they have made (as another great Champion of our Church hath observed) in the Apostolical Creed, (by ma. king a new one, containing things that hold no conformity with the Apostles) and in the Apoftolical Succession (by ingroffing the whole Succeffion to Rome, and making other Bishops to be but the Pope's Deputies, as to their Jurifdiction) and in the Apostolical Government (by errecting a new and universal Monarchy in the Church) and laitly, in the Apostolical Communion, by excommunicating the greatest part of the Holy Catholick Church.

By, Sixthly, following the Roman Church alfo, we fhall be bound to hold many things, not only above above Reafon, but against it : whereas, by following the Scriptures, we shall only believe fome Mysteries, but no Impossibilities; fome things above Reafon, but nothing contrary to it. For, though there be things in Scripture, which, had they not been revealed, Reafon could not have diffeovered, yet there is nothing there, which being revealed, can by true Reafon be confuted.

Seventhly, Contrary to Flesh and Blood indeed, there are many things contained in the Scriptures; and therefore by following them we chall believe a Religion, which notwithstanding that great prejudice which Men had to it, prevailed and inlarged it felf over the World in a fhort time; without any Affiftance from worldly Power, Wit, or Policy, nay, against all these: whereas the Roman Church hath got all its Authority over Mens Confciences, by no other means, than by deviling false Records, false Miracles and Reports, (as was faid before) and by complying with Mens corrupt Affections, or by perfecuting those that would not comply : and by all other fuch like worldly means, whether of Policy or Force.

Eightbly, To which add, that by following the Scriptures, we shall believe a Religion, whole first Preachers and Professor could have no worldly ends to serve (as hath been demonstrated in the foregoing Books) but rather were to expect, as they every where found, nothing but Disgrace, vile, nay cruel usage, by all manner of Punishments: whereas the Head of the Roman Church, it is even palpable, makes their Religion the Instrument of his ambition, and seeks feeks thereby to entitle himfelf, directly or indirectly, to the Monarchy of the World: And befides, it is evident to him that hath but half an Eye, as we fay, that molt of the Doctrines which they have added to the Scriptures, make one way or other for the honour or temporal advantage of the teachers of them.

Ninthly, Again, following the Scriptures, we fhall embrace a Religion of admirable fimplicity: whereas the Roman Church and Doctrine is even loaded with an infinity of weak, childifh, unfavory Superfititions and Ceremonies: under which its own Children have groaned and heavily complained.

Tenthly, Those Holy Books also teach us, that we must not promise our felves falvation, unless we effectually mortifie all our evil affections and lufts; and forfaking every fin whatfoever, betake our felves to the practice of all Christian Vertue: But the Roman Church opens an eafier and broader way to Salvation; permitting at least this to be taught for as good and Catholick Doctrine as any other, that though a Man have continued all his life long in a courfe of fin, without the practice of any vertue, he may notwithstanding be let into Heaven by an act of Attrition at the hour of Death, if joyned with Confession; or by an act of Contrition without Confession. And therefore in this and feveral other regards, the Religion of that Church is not fo Holy, as the Doctrine of Chrift and his Apostles delivered in the Scriptures: and confequently is not fo likely to come from the Fountain of Holinefs and Goodnefs.

Eleventhly Digitized by Google

Eleventhly, But whatfoever ways they are pleased to devise, to humour Mens depraved appetites, we are fure of this advantage by following the Scriptures, which they cannot pretend to by following their Church. That if we happen to entertain an erroneous opinion, grounded, as we think, upon some place of Scripture, it is implicitly retracted and condemned, by our precedent full and intire affent to all things contained in the Scriptures; and our general refolution to hold nothing contrary to them, nor admit any thing (as neceffary to Salvation) that cannot be proved by them. Which makes the Errour that we unwittingly and unwillingly hold against the Scriptures, less dangerous : because our adherence to the Scriptures is nearer, clofer, and firmer, than it is to our particular Errour. Whereas by following their Church, not knowing what it is (whether the whole Body of People in that Communion, or a General Council, or the Pope, in, or out of a Council) we shall have no fuch Excuse for our Errours : but they will be rather much aggravated, by our adhering fo ftrictly to a doubtful and uncertain Rule. unto which the People in that Communion flick. ing clofer than they do to the Word of God, it leffens the value of all the Truths which they believe, and doubles the guilt of all their Errours.

And, Laftly, as this is a great fatisfaction to our felves, fo there is this to be added for the Comfort of others alfo: That by following the Scriptures, we fhall learn to bear with one another in our different opinions, about things which cannot thereby be determined; nay, in things which which are not directly against it, or wherein we are not yet fufficiently instructed: But by following the Roman Church we shall be taught to pass the heaviest fentences upon all those that believe not in all things as we do; nay, to take the feverest courses with them, though they be Men of the most innocent and useful lives; conforming themselves in all things to the Precepts of Christ Jesus, and to the Authority of their Governours for his fake, where it doth not manifestly contradict Him.

To conclude this, we, for our parts, are of the fame mind, even towards them, which Grotius before observed the Apostles were of towards the Jews: From whom, faith he (and let the words be taken, as if spoken by us, to those of the Roman Communion) they would not fo much as exact an acknowledgment of their happines, in being delivered from the heavy Toke of Rites and Ceremonies that lay upon them, But, if they would admit of the Commandments of Christ, which are full of all goodnes, easily permitted them to follow what course of life they pleased in matters of indifferency; provided they would not impose the necefity of observing them upon others.

SECT. XXV. Conclusion of all.

U PON these terms we are ready to agree with them; and I conclude all with this memorable Proposal, which Erasmus made in a Letter to Johannes Slechta, a Friend of his in Bohemia,

• The Truth of Book VII. 240 Bohemia, at the very beginning of the Reformation, MDXIX.

This would reconcile People to the Church of Rome, if all things were not so particularly defi-ned, and made a matter of Faith, which we would have to belong to it : but those only which are evidently expressed in the Holy Scriptures; or without which we do not see any way to be saved. To this purpose a few things are sufficient; and e few things may be sooner perswaded than a great many.

Now out of one Article we make Six Hundred: fome of which are fuch, that without endangering Peity, we may either be ignorant, or doubt of them. And, Such is the nature of Mankind, that what is once defined, we hold tooth and nail, and will by no means part with it.

But when all's done, the fumm of Christian Phi-lofophy lies in this, That we understand all our Hope to be placed in God, who freely gives us all things by his Son Jesus; by whose death we are redeemed, into whose Body we are planted by Baptism; that being dead to the Lust of this World, we may live according to bis Dostrine and Example; not only abstaining from all evil, but endeavouring to deferve well of every Body: and that if any adver fity happen, we bear it courageously, in hope of a future Reward; which, without all doubt, waits for all pious Perfons at the coming of Christ: and that we make such progress from vertue to vertue; as notwithstanding to arrogate nothing to our felves, but to afcribe all the good that is in us, or that we can do; unto GOD.

These things chiefly are to be inculcated, and beaten into the minds of Men; fo that they become as it were, their Nature. But if any will fearch into those things which are more abstruse, about the Divine Nature, the Hypoftafis of Chrift, or the Sacraments, that they may raife their minds the higher, and draw them from things here below, let them do fo provided that every Body be not compelled presently to believe what feems good to this or that Perfon.

For as out of large deeds arife fooner Law futes; fo are differences begotten, by very many definitions. And let us not be ashamed to answer to some things, God knowshow it may be done, it is sufficient for me to believe that it is done.

I know that Chrift's pure Body and Blood is to be purely received by those that are pure; and that He would have this to be a most holy Taken and Pledge, both of his Love to us, and of our Chriftian Concord among our felves. And therefore I will examine my self, and make a strict fearch; whether there be any thing in me that ill agrees with Chrift, whether any discord with my Neighbour.

But how the Ten Predicaments are there, how the Bread is Transubstantiated by the MysticalWords. (or, as He explains himfelf in the latter end of his Book upon lxxxiv. Pfal.) how the Body of Chrift is there, whether under the Substance of Bread, or under the species of Bread and Wine, and such like; doth not much conduce, in my Judgment, to proficiency in Piety, &c.

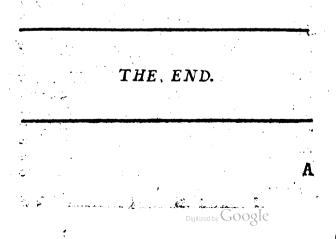

By these, and other fuch innumerable Disputations, in which some triumph; the Minds of Men are called away from those things, which alone are to the purpofe.

To conclude, it will be of great moment to establish the concord of the World; if all secular Princes and especially the Bishop of Rome, would abstain from all appearance of Tyrrany and of Coveroufness. Digitized by Google For

For Men eafily flart back, when they see Siavery is prepared for them; when they see they are not invited to Piety, but inveigled to be made a prey. If they perceive us to be harmless, to be beneficient; they will most easily credit us, and intrust themselves with us. Thus He.

It would not be very hard to make a longer Book on this Subject : but this is fufficient (as Grotius fpeaks in the beginning of this Difcourfe, about the Truth of Christian Religion) to convince those whose Understandings are rightly disposed, and are not pertinacioully fet against all farther information. But no Arguments can be found of force enough to convince a froward Will, and perswade perverse Affections: which make Men uncapable of Moral Truth, most of all of Divine. Which will not enter (as the wife Man speaks) into a malicious Soul; nor dwell in the Body that is fubject unto fin. For the Holy Spirit of Discipline will flee Deceit, and remove from thoughts that are without understanding, and will not abide when unrighteousness cometh in.
