THE PREFACE.

SINCE the great Happiness or Misery of Human Life depends wholly upon the right or wrong Conduct of it, he that shall point out any of its Irregularities or Mistakes, is a Universal Friend, a Promoter of the Publick Happiness. And the more severe his Censure is, provided it be just, the more serviceable it may be.

Especially, if the Irregularities be points out are not only important, frequent and inveterate, but such as lie secret and unobserv'd, and have all along pass'd under the Notion of Excellencies. He that reflects upon such Misconducts as these, obliges by his Discovery as well as Reproof.

This Confideration has occafioned the following Reflections upon the Study of Learning and Knowledge; the greateft Faults of which, by a Kind of unaccountable Superstition, are canoniz'd for Virtues.

The Truth is, the Light that divulges other Miscarriages will be sure to bide these. For beside that they are visible only to a few (since none can judge of the Faults of the Learned A 2 without without Learning) those few that do discern them, have seldom Ingenuity enough to acknowledge them. For either they are so proud as not to be willing to own themselves to have been so long under a Mistake; or so Ill-natur'd that they don't care others should be directed to a better Way than they themselves have travel'd in.

In the following Reflections I have endeawour'd to mark out fome of thefe lefs obferv'd Mifconducts, wherewith I myfelf have been too long impos'd on, and which after all my Conviction (so deep are the Impressions of early Prejudice) I can hardly yet find Power to correct. For Education is the great Bias of Human Life, and there is this double Witchcraft in it, that 'tis a long Time before a Man can see any Thing amis in a Way he is used to, and when he does, 'tis not very eafy to change it.

I can eafily divine how these Reflections will be received by some of the rigid Votaries of old Learning. But if they are of Service here and there to an ingenuous and unenslaved Spirit, I shall not much regard the Magisterial Censures of those, whose great and long Study has had no better Effect upon them, than to make them too wise for Conviction.

RE-

CONDUCT OF HUMAN LIFE.

The First REFLECTION.

Wherein the general Conduct of Human Life is taxed, for placing Learning in fuch Things as are little or nothing perfective of the Understanding.

1. A S there are two Faculties in Man, Underfanding and Will; fo there is a double Conduct of Human Life, Intellectual and Moral. The Moral Conduct of Men has been continually exposed, ever fince Preaching and Writing have been in the World. But it has fared otherwife with the Intellectual, which stands not fo fair a Mark, nor has been fo often hit. Not that it is really lefs faulty, but because its Faultiness is lefs notorious, lies further in, and must be drawn forth into View by a Chain of Confequences, which few have either Difcernment enough to make, or Patience enough to attend to.

2. The chief Irregularities of it are three, respecting the End, the Means, and the Degree of Affection.

First, The placing Learning in fuch Things as are little or nothing perfective of the Understanding.

Secondly, The undue and irregular Method of profecuting what is really perfective of it; and Thirdly, The too importunate Pursuit of Knowledge in general.

S Fift

3. First, Men generally place Learning in fuch Things as are little or nothing perfective of the Underftanding. This, I confess, is a fevere Charge, as it fastens an Imputation of Folly upon the Learned Order: And not only fo, but in that very Thing wherein they think their Wisdom confists. Learned Men do indeed often, not only own but affect Ignorance in Things befide their Profession. But to censure them as defective in that one Thing they pretend to, to make that their blind Side where they think they see cleares, to maintain, that they are not only really knowing, but that generally they don't fo much as know what true Knowledge is; this is fo high a Charge, that even those who may be convinced of the Truth will fcarce forgive the Bordiness of it.

4. That the Truth of it may appear, I fhall first briefly observe, what Knowledge is perfective of the Understanding; and then shew, that the generality of the World place Learning in that which is not fo.

5. And, first, I grant the Knowledge of all those Truths is perfective of the Understanding, which are the Matter of those Arts and Sciences that are built upon stable and immoveable Foundations, fuch as Divinity, Metaphyficks, Geometry, together with all those unchangeable Rules and Measures of Reason and Confequence, which lead us to all other Knowledge, and are the Subject of that Art we term Logick. And accordingly I allow him to be a truly learned and knowing Man, who has furnished his Mind with bright and clear Ideas, lodged them orderly and regularly in his Head, and fettled the Relations and Confequences of one to another. He that is able to think clearly (for fo much a Man knows, as he understands distinctly, and no more) to judge truly and folidly, and to reafon dependently and confequentially.

6. But this is not the Measure which the generality of the World has thought fit to proceed by. Learning is generally placed in a Sort of Knowledge, widely different from this. The World does not effeem him a learned Man, whose Learning has cleared his Underflanding, who is arrived at Diffinctness of Conception, and and is a thorough Mafter of Notion and Difcourfe. it will coft great Pains, great Labour of Mind, Clofenefs of Thinking to attain to this. This there fore muft not be Learning, but fomething elfe muft, that is easier to be attain'd, tho' little or nothing perfective of the Understanding. And in fuch Knowledge it is generally placed.

7. For, first, 'Tis reckon'd a notable Point of Learning, to understand Variety of Languages. This alone gives a Man a Title to Learning, without one Grain of Sense; and on the other Side, let a Man be an Angel for Notion and Discourse, yet unless he can express the fame Thought in Variety of Words, he may go for a rational, but will by no Means be effeem'd a learned Now is it not a ftrange Thing, that fo much Man. Strefs should be laid on fo very a Trifle ? For what am I the better for being able to tell, what 'tis a-clock in twenty Languages? What does this fignify to the Perfection of my Understanding ? Words are purely in order to Senfe ; and are therefore of no farther Value. than as they help either to learn or to communicate it. Therefore, to affect them for themfelves, is to turn the Means into the End, than which nothing is more abfurd. And yet this vain Piece of Pedantry has prevail'd all the World over, and with fome to that Degree, that they have confounded Ideas with Words, and have Thus Mr. made all Science to terminate in the latter. Hobbes makes Reason to be nothing elfe, but " Sequela Nominum, a well-order'd Train of Words." Never certainly was a plainer Argument of the great Degeneracy of Mankind. And tho' all the Multipliers of Tongues are not comprehended under this latter Charge, yet it may concern them to confider, how great a Folly it must be to place Learning in that, which is one of the greatest Curles upon Earth, and which shall utterly cease in Heaven.

8. Again, it passes for an extraordinary Part of Learning, to understand History: That is, in other Words, to know what a Company of filly Creatures called Men have been doing for almost these fix thousand Years. Now, what is my Understanding the Perfecter for this ? I deny eny not, that there are fome Matters of Fact, as the ore remarkable Turns of Ecclefiaftical Hiftory, and the greater Revolutions of the Civil World, which are of Moment to be known ; because, by discovering to us the Conduct of divine Providence, they fupply us with Occasions of acknowledging and adoring the Wisdom and Goodness of GOD. Neither do I deny, that there are many other Historical Passages, which may be of Moment to be known ; tho' not as perfective of our Understanding, but as touching our Interest. And so it may be of Moment to me to know, the Clock has ftruck One, if I have made an Affignation at that Time : But fure the bare naked Theory of the Clock's having ftruck One, will add but little to my Intellectual Perfection. The most trivial Matter of Fact in the World is worth knowing, if I have any Concern depending upon it : And the greatest without that, is utterly infignificant. So that 'tis not from the perfecting of our Understanding, but from the Relation they have to our Interest, that these Things deserve to be known.

q. I would defire the great Magnifiers of Hiftory, only to answer me this one Question. Suppose fuch and fuch Matters of Fact, in the knowing which they perhaps glory more, than the Actors themselves did in the doing them, had never been done. Suppose Fabius had never weather'd out Hannibal by Delays, nor Cyrus took Babylon by draining the River into the Ditches; what Diminution would this have been to the Perfection of their Understanding ? They cannot fay it would have been any. And why then should the knowing them now they are done, be reckon'd an Addition to it? And yet we find it is fo, and that Men study thefe Things, not only for their Ufe, (that we allow) but for their mere Theory, placing Learning in fuch Hiftory as has nothing to commend it, but only that it tells you, fuch and fuch Things were done. Of this impertinent Sort is the greatest Part of the Roman and Grecian History: Which, had not the World voted it for Learning, would no more concern a Man to know, than that a Bird has dropt a Feather upon the Pyrenean Mountains.

10. Again, it passes for a notable Piece of Learning to underftand Chronology; to be able to adjuft the In² tervals and Diftances of Time, when fuch a Man flowrifh'd, when fuch an Action was done, and the like. Now I deny not, but it may concern fome to know thefe Things, who have any Intereff depending upon it. It may concern fome to know, for Inftance, that there is a twofold Date of the Victory at Actium, the one reckon'd from the Fight there, the other from the taking of Alexandria. But however useful it may be to know this, yet certainly as to any Intellectual Perfection that accrues by it, it muft needs be a very unedifying Stuffage of the Head; Altho' 'tis fogenerally accounted a great Accomplifhment and Enrichment of it.

11. There are many other Things which the Humour of the World has turn'd up for Learning, which Ignorance will never be the better for, and which Wifdom does not need. Thus 'tis counted Learning to have tumbled over a Multitude of Books, efpecially if great ones, and old ones and obscure ones; but most of all if Manufcripts, the Recovery of one of which is reckon'd. to much added to the Common wealth of Learning, as they call it. Hence a well-read Man fignifies the very fame as a learned Man in most Men's Dictionaries : And by well-read they don't mean one that has read well that has clear'd and improved his Understanding by his Reading, but only one that has read much, tho' perhaps he has puzzled and confounded his Notions by doing fo. Thus again, it goes for Learning, to be acquainted with Men's Opinions, especially of the Ancients ; To know what this or that Philosopher held, what this or that Author fays, tho' perhaps he fays nothing but what is either abfurd, or obvioufly true. What, for Instance, can be more absurd, than that Fancy of Empedocles, that there are two Semicircles compaffing the Earth betwixt them, one of Fire, the other of Air; and that the former makes Day, and the latter Night ? And yet to know this is Learning ! What can be more obvioully true, than that grave Doctrine of Aristorle, that Privation must go before the Introduction of the Form in all Generation ? Or, that a Thing must lose one Form before it can take another ? And yet 'tis Learning

Learning to know that he taught this ! To know the Thing is nothing : But to know that Ariftotle taught it, that is Learning ! Nay farther, tho' I am able to demonstrate the Circulation of the Blood, or the Motion of the Earth, yet I shall not be admitted into the Order of the Learned, unless I am able to tell, that Copernieus discover'd the one, and Harvey the other. Sœ much more learned an Atchievement it is, to know Opinions than Things ! And accordingly, those are reckon'd the most learned Authors, who have given the greatest Specimens of this Kind of Knowledge. Thus Picus Mirandula is more admired for his Examination of the Doctrine of the Pagans, than any of them were for what they deliver'd.

12. Now what an unreasonable Imposition is this, That tho' a Man can think and write like an Angel himfelf, yet he must not be accounted a Man of Learning, unless he can tell what every whimfical Writer hath faid before him ? And how hard will it fall upon chofe, whole Lot is to breathe in the last Ages of the World, who must be accountable for all the Whims and Extravagancies of fo many Centuries? And yet this is made fo great a Part of Learning, that the Learning of most Men lies in Books rather than in Things, and among Authors, where one writes upon Things, there are twenty write upon Books. Nay, fome carry this Humour fo far, that 'tis thought Learning to know the very Titles of Books and their Editions, with the Time and Place when and where they were printed. And many there are who value themfelves not a little on this Mechanical Faculty, tho' they know no more of what is in them, than they do of what is written in the Rolls of Deftiny.

13. From this placing of Learning in the Knowledge of Books, proceeds that ridiculous Vanity of multiplying Quotations, which is also reckoned another Piece of Learning, tho' they are used to impertinently, that there can be no other End in them, but to shew, that the Author has read such a Book. And yet 'tis no such convincing Evidence of that neither. It being neither new nor difficult, for a Man that is refolved upon it, to quote such Authors as he never read nor faw. And were it not too odious a Truth, I could name several of those Author-Mongers, who pass for Men of shrewd Learning.

14. Thefe and many other fuch Things (for 'twere endlefs to reckon up all) are by the Majority of the World voted for Learning, and in these we fpend our Education, our Study and our Time, tho' they are no way perfective of our Understanding. So that in short, the Charge of this Reflection amounts to thus much, That Learning is generally placed in the Knowledge of fuch Things, as the Intellectual Perfection of Man is little or nothing concern'd in.

The Second REFLECTION.

Wherein the general Conduct of Human Life is taxed for using undue and irregular Methods, in projecuting what is really perfective of the Understanding.

1. In the preceeding Reflection the Conduct of Human Life was cenfured for placing Learning in what is not perfective of the Understanding. In the prefent, it is charged with purfuing what is fo, in an undue and irregular Manner. The other was an Error about the End; this is an Error about the Means: Which are the two Hinges upon which all Prudence and Imprudence turns.

2. That the Truth of this Charge may appear, we are first to determine, what is the right Method of profecuting that Learning which is really perfective of our Understanding. And this, no doubt, must be an Application to him from whom every good and perfect Gift deficendetb. This is the right and the only right Method of Enquiry after that Truth which is perfective of our Understanding. For GOD is the Region of Truth, and in him are hid all the Treasures of Wisdom and Knowledge. This is that great and universal Oracle lodged in every Man's Breaft, whereof the ancient Urim and Thummim was an expressive Emblem. This we all may and must consult, if we would enrich our Minds with such Knowledge as is perfective of the Understanding. This is the true Method of being truly wife. And it is no other Method than what we are advised to, by the substantial Wisdom of GOD. Whofo is simple, let him turn in bither. I am the Light of the World: He that follows me, or (as the Word more properly fignifies) he that keepeth Company with me, walketh not in Darkness.

3. There are three Ways of doing this; the first is, by Attention; the focond, by Purity of Heart and Life; the third, by Prayer. The first, Attention, Malebranche calls, the natural Prayer of the Soul to GOD for farther Illumination. For indeed it is a filent Addrefs and Application of the Soul to the Fountain of Light and Truth; Tis an Interrogation of the divine Oracle, the eternal Word of GOD, and a patient Waiting upon him for an Answer. 'I is, in a Word, an 'Act of Intellectual Devotion to the Father of Lights, and fuch as if unfolded, befpeaks him in the Words' of the Royal Supplicant, Give me Wifdom that fitteth by thy Throne !

4. This is the same with Thinking or Medicating ; and as it is the fuft, fo it is the directeft and most compendious Method of Science. For this is to go directly to the Spring-head, to the lucid Fountain of Good. 'Tis to fix the Eye of the Mind upon the Intellectual Sun, which must needs be the most ready Way to be enlighten'd. The more heedfully we attend to this, we ihall not only discover the more, but also more clearly fee what we do discover. So a Man that cafts only a fhort, careless Glance upon the milky Way, fees only a confused Whiteness. But when he fixes his Eye upon i. with Steadiness and Delay of Application, he begins to difcern it more diffinctly, a new Star every Moment rifes under his Infpection ; and still the harder he looks, the more he difcerns, 'till he is fatiated with the Brightnefs and Multitude of Light.

5. This was the Method of the Inventers of Arts and Sciences :

Sciences: They made their Way by mere Dint of Thisking. This is the Method that has been used ever fince, by the greatest Improvers of them; such as Bacon, Boyle, Harvey, Malebranche, Sec. And we may fasely prophely, if ever any extraordinary Advancement be made in them hereafter, it will be done by Thinking.

6. The fecond Way is, by Purity of Heart and Life; For as Vice not only proceeds from Ignorance, but alfo caufes it, by befotting and clouding the Underftanding, to Purity not only proceeds from Knowledge, but alto produces it, making the Soul fee more clearly and ditingly. And the fame Method is retommended in Scriptare, Wildom, fays the Wife Man, will not enter into a polluted Spirit. So the Angel to Daniel, Many fhall be purified and made white, and none of the Wicked fhall underftand, but she Wife fhall underftand. To this Purpose too is that of our Lord, above repeated : He shot followeth me, evalueth not in Darknefi ; the Purity of his Heart is a Light to his Underftanding.

7. But to represent this more clearly : There are two Ways whereby Purny of Heart ferves to the Acquires ment of Knowledge; by natural Efficacy, and by the divine Bleffing. And first, by natural Efficacy, either by clearing the Medium, or by affilting the Faculty. As to the former, we are affored, not only that the Soul now fees through a Medium, and that this Medium is the Body, but likewife that she Grossneis of this Medium hindors the Sight of the Soul. Whence it follows. That whatever helps this Medium, helps the Sight of And this Parity does; especially that emithe Soul. neat Part of it which confidts in Chaftity and Temperance. For fight, it compoles the Paffions, especially that of Luft, by that the Animal Spirits, and by that the Blood. ' For the Motion of the Paffions ferments the Spirits, and the Fermentation of the Spirits agitates the Blood, and by Agitation raises all the feculont and droffy Parts of it, and makes it, like a troubled Fountain. thick and muddy. And therefore it is, that Men in any Puffion can't reason to clearly, as when they are in more Quist and Silence of Spirit. But by Purity all this, Disturbance is allayed, the Passions are becalm'd, the B Spirit

Spirits fix'd, the Fountain of the Blood clear'd up, and to all the inner Part of the Glafs, through which we fee, becomes more bright and transparent, more apt to transmit the Rays of Light to the Soul, which confequently fees more clearly through it.

8. But this is not all; for Purity clears the outward Part of the Glafs too. First by Confequence, because the finer the Spirits and Blood are, the finer will be the Threads of the outward Veil also. Then more directly; because Temperance refines and fubtilizes the Texture of the Body, and diministics its Bulk and Groffness, and unloads the Soul of a good Part of that Burthen, which not only prefies down her Afpirations, but also hinders her Sight.

9. And as Purity thus clears the Medium, fo it alfo affifts the Faculty. And that by the fame general Way, by composing the Pfiffions, which otherwise not only trouble and thicken the Medium, but alfo divide and disperse the Faculty. For the more Things a Man defires, the more he will be engaged to think on; and the more he thinks on at once, the more languid and confused will his Concessions be. But Purity, by compofing the Paflions, contracts the Defires, and by contracting these, it contracts also the Thoughts; whereby a Man is reduced to a greater Unity, Simplicity and Recollection of Mind; and having but few Thoughts to divide him, is the better able to think clearly.

10. Purity of Heart ferves to the Acquirement of Knowledge, fecondly, by the divine Bleffing. It invites not only the Holy Spirit, but also the Father and the Son, even the whole Godhead, to come and dwell in the Soul. This we are affured of from our Lord's own Mouth : He that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him and manifest myself to him. And again, If a Man love me, my Father will love bim, and we will come unto bim, and make our Abode The chafte and good Soul shall not only be with bim. loved by GOD, but be also of his Council and Privacy. This is the beloved Disciple, who has the Privilege to lean upon the Bosom of his Lord, and to be admitted to his most fecret Communications. And therefore, fays the the Pfalmift. The Secret of the Lord is with them that fear bim. And of Ananias, Azarias and Milael, who refused to defile themselves with the King's Meat, it is faid. That GOD gave them Knowledge and Skill in all Learning and Wildom.

11. The third and last Way of confulting GOD is by Praver. This also is a Method which the Scripture advises us to. If any of you lack Wildom let bim ask of GOD, who giveth to all Men liberally and upbraideth not, and it shall be given bim. And this we know was the Method whereby the wifest of Men obtain'd his unparallel'd Wildom. For as Wildom was his Choice, to the Method of his feeking and gaining it was by Prayer.

12. Thus have I defined, and by Scripture and Rea-, fon proved, what is the right Method of profecuting that Truth which is perfective of the Understanding. And now I think there need not many Words to fhew, that as Learning is commonly placed in what is not perfective of it, fo what is fo is generally profecuted by undue Methods. For whereas the first Method of acquiring it is by Attention or Thinking, this is generally fo little regarded, that few Men think lefs, for the most Part, than they who are engaged in the profess'd Study of Knowledge. This they don't reckon any Part of Study. nor any Progress in the Stage of Learning, but only a graver Way of being idle. Tis then only they itudy, when they are hanging their Heads over an old multy Folio, and stuffing their Memories with grey Sentences and venerable Sayings. And thus they spend their Time and their Pains, and having fcrambled through a Company of Books (most of which perhaps were written to as little Purpose as they are read) they think themselves learned Men, and the World is too often of their Opinion, tho' they have not made themfelves Mafter of any Sense or Notion, nor are able to demonstrate one fingle Truth upon folid Principles, and in a confequential Process.

13: And this is the Method not only of those who misplace Learning, but also of the most of those who place it right. Even these do not generally think for it

, but sead for it 3 feek it not in their Souls, but in Books. I deny not that Reading is one Way to Knowledge; but then 'tis only by Accident, as it is a Help to Thinking. And therefore Thinking is the only Thing to be regarded even in Reading (for Reading, as fuch, is nothing.) And then we read to most Purpofe, when we are thereby most enabled to think. So that Thinking is the immediate End of Reading, as Underflanding is of Thinking. And yet this Method is generally fo much inverted, that the main Strefs is laid upon Reading. Nothing but read, read, as long as Eyes and Spechaeles will hold ; no Matter whether the Head be clear, fo it be full.

14. Again, whereas Purity of Heart and Life is another Method of attaining true Knowledge, 'tis a fad as well as just Observation, That this is not only neglected by those who fit down contentedly in Ignorance, but alto by the generality of those few that addict themselves to the Improvement of their Minds. Nay, thefe, in Proportion to their Number, feem more guilty in this Refrect than the others, and nothing is fo common, as to see Men of famed Learning, who are yet very corrupt in their Tempers and Lives. Whence fome have fancied Learning an Enemy to Religion, and cried up Ignorance as the Mother of Devotion. And tho' their Conclution be notorioufly abfurd, yet it must be own'd." the Ground on which they build it is too true: Men famed for Learning are often as infamous for Living ;" and many that fludy hard to furnish their Heads, are yet very negligent in purifying their Hearts : Not confidering, that there is a moral as well as a natural Communication between them; and that they are concerned to be pure in Heart and Life, not only upon the common Account, in order to Happiness hereafter, but even in order to their own particular End here.

15. Then, Laftly, whereas another Method of Learning is Prayer; the generality of Students do not apply themfelves to this at all. Pray indeed ('tis to be hoped) they do for other Things, which they think lie more out of their Reach; but as for Learning, they think they can compasible well enough by their own Industry. and and the Help of good Books, without being beholden to the Affiitance of Heaven. But did they attentively confider, that GOD is Truth, 'tis not to be imagined they would be fo indifferent in using Prayer, or any of the preceeding Methods of confulting GOD for his own Light.

The Third REFLECTION.

Wherein the general Conduct of Human Life is taxed with too importunate a Pursuit of Knowledge in general.

r. H Aving paft the two firft Stages of our Intellectual Conduct, that of the End and that of the Means, and reflected on the Irregularities of each, I come now to the Third and Laft, which confifts not in the Choice of the Object, or of the Method to it, but in the Degree of Affection wherewith it is profecuted. And this Part of our Conduct is as irregular and faulty, if not more fo, than either of the former : And the Fault of it is, a too importunate Purfuit of Knowledge in general.

2. This Charge is of a larger Extent than either of the preceding: Those concerning such only, as either misplace the Object, or missake the Method of Learning, But not only they who err in the Placing of Learning, or in the Way to it, but even they who are right in both come under this Censure; they all agree in pursuing it too importunately.

3. In order to make out the Truth of this Charge it will be neceffary first to confider. How far it becomes M in to employ h mfelf in the Profecution of Knowledge? And then it will be easy to determine, Whether our general Pursuit of it be immoderate or no. Now for the Determination of the former, let us observe the present State of Man, the Posture wherein he now flands.

4. And, First, The utmost Knowledge Man can arrive at in this World, by his utmost Endeavours, is very inconsiderable.

GOD)

GOD indeed has given us Reason enough to diflinguish us from the Brute Creation, and we may improve it fo far, as to diffinguish ourselves from one another: And fo one Man may deferve to be call'd Learned and Knowing, in Comparison of another that is lefs fo. But absolutely speaking, the most that any or all of us -either know or can know, is of little Confideration. What we know of GOD is but little ; for, as the Apostle fays, We fee through a Glafs darkly: What we know of ourfelves perhaps is lefs, and what we know of the World about us, is not much. "We have feen but a few of GOD's Works," and we understand yet fewer. There are almost an infinite Number of Things which we never fo much as thought of ; and most Things we conceive very darkly and uncertainly; and there is not one Thing from the Great of to the Leaft, which we do or can understand throughly. Those that apply their whole Study to any one Thing, can never come to the End of that ; fer not only every Science, but every Particular of each has its unmeasurable Depths and Recesses. Tis confect by a great Enquirer into the Nature of Antimony (as 'tis related by Mr. Boyle) " That 'tis impossible for one Man to understand throughly that fingle, Mineral only." And if a Man can't understand All of fo Little, how little must he understand of all ? Suppose farther, That all the Knowledge of all the Learned were put together, 'twould weigh but light. For what one Art or Science is there that is brought to any tolerable Perfection ? And if the common Stock be fo little. how fmall a Pittance is it that must fall to every particular Man's Share ? And where is that Man, who after all his Poring and Studying, is able to answer all the Questions, I will not fay which GOD put to Job, but which may be ask'd him by the next Idiot he meets?

5. 'Tis superfluous, as well as endles, to display the Particulars of our Ignorance; tho' indeed, when all Accounts are cast up, that will be found to be our best Knowledge. This only in general, our Life is so thort, our Progress in Learning to flow, and Learning itself to long and tedious, and what we do or can know to very little, that the Scepticks had much more Reason to con-conclude, from the Difability of our Faculties, and the Slightness of our Attainments, than from the Uncertainty and Instability of Truth, that there is no Knowledge.

6. But, Secondly, If it were possible for us to attain a confiderable Measure of Knowledge, yet our Life is fo short and so encumber'd, that we could make but little of the Enjoyment of it. All the Morning of our Days is fpent in the Preliminaries of Learning, in maftering Words and Terms of Art, wherein there is nothing but Toil and Drudgery. And before we can tafte any of the Fruits of the Tree of Knowledge, before we can relish what is rational, our Sun is got into the Meridian, and then it prefently begins to decline, and our Learning with it. Our Light, our Strength, and our Time make Hafte to confume ; Nothing increases now but the Shadows, that is, our Ignorance and Darkness of Mind ; and while we confider and look about us. the Sun fets, and all is concluded in the dark Shadow of Death. But often the Sun is intercepted by a Cloud long before it fets, and we live backward again, grow weak and childifh, filly and forgetful, and unlearn faster than we learn'd. Or if it chance to thine bright to the last, then we grow too wife for ourselves, and reject the greatest Part of what we had learn'd before. as idle and infign ficant.

7. Thirdly, There is no Neceffity of being fo won-. derfully Learned and knowing here. 'Tis neither neceffary, as enjoin'd by GOD, nor as a Means to any confiderable End. We can be good and we can be happy without it. And left any Advantages in our after-state should be alledged, this makes it more unneceffary than any Confideration befides. For tho' we are never fo unlearned now, yet if we know enough to do our Duty, we shall in a short Time arrive at such a Degree of Knowledge as is requisite to our supreme Perfection, to which our prefent Learning cannot add, and which our prefent Ignorance will not diminish. Perhaps not immediately upon our Difcharge from the Body, tho' even then there must be a vast Enlargement of our Understanding ; but doubtles, when we are adminted to the Vision of GOD, we shall then commence inftantaneoufly

Gantaneoufly wife and learned, and be fully poffeft of the Tree of Knowledge, as well as of the Tree of Life. For then that Glais, through which we now fee darkly, fhall be laid afide, and the Field of Truth fhall be clearly difplayed before us. And tho' even then there fhall be Degrees of Knowledge, yet the Variety of this Difpenfation fhall not proceed by the Degree of our Knowledge in this Life, but by another Measure. For,

8. Fourthly, Tho' there is no Necessity of our being fo learned and knowing, yet there is of our being good This is necessary, both as commanded and virtuous. by GOD, and as a Means of our Final Perfection. And befides, 'tis neceffary now, there being no other Opportunity for it. If we don't know here, we may know hereafter, and infallibly shall, if we are but good here. But if we are not good here, we shall neither begood, happy, nor knowing hereafter. The main Opportunity for Knowledge is after Life; the only Opportonity of being good is now : And if we take Care to improve this, we are fecure of the other ; but if this is neglected, all is loft. This therefore is indifpenfably neceffary, and 'tis the only Thing that is fo : And 'tis neceffary now ; neceffary not only to our Happines ingeneral, but alfo to our Intellectual Happineis in particular. For.

9. Laftly, Thus stands the Cafe between GOD and Man. Man was made in a State of Innocence and Perfection, in perfect Favour and Communion with GOD, his true Good, and in a Capacity fo to continue. From this excellent State he wilfully fell, and by his Fall fo difabled himfelf, that he could not by his own Strength repent, and fo provoked GOD, that tho' he could have repented, yet he could not have been pardon'd, without Satisfaction made to the Divine Juffice. This Satisfaction Man was not able to make, nor any other Creature for him. Whereupon GOD in great Mercy ordain'd a Mediator, his own Son, GOD and Man, between himfelf and his lapfed Creature ; who by the Sacrifice of himfelf should effect two Things, answerable to the double Necessity of Man : First, make Repentance available, which otherwife would not have been to; and, Secondly, merit Grace for him, that he might be able to repent. And this is what is meant by the Referation or Redemption of Man, which thus far is universal and unconditionate.

10. But fill, netwithflanding all that this Mediator hath done for him. Man is only fo far reflered, as to: be put into a pardonable and reconcileable State : He is vet only in a Capacity or Possibility of Pardon and Reconciliation, which is then, and then only, reduced to Act, when he truly believes, i. e. with fuch a Faith as is productive of all inward and outward Holineis s with which he may, without which he cannot be faved. notwithstanding Christ hath died to fave him. For the Defign of his Death was not to make Holine's unneceffary, but to make it available; not to procure a Privilege of being faved without it, but that we might be faved with it. If this Qualification be wanting, we shall be fo far from being any Thing advantaged from the Redemption purchas'd by our Mediator, that we shall be accountable for it, to the great Aggravation both of our Guilt and Mifery. It therefore highly concerns Man to improve with all Diligence this great and only Opportunity, of adorning his Mind with all. Christian Perfections ; fince with these, he may be happy in all his Capacities, and without them, he shall not only fall into a State of unutterable Mifery, but be alfo accountable for the Poffibility he had of efcaping it, for perverfely neglecting fo great Salvation, fo glorious an Opportunity of being faved.

11. These Things being premised concerning the present State of Man : First, That he can know but very little ; Secondly, That the Enjoyment of that little in a flort and encumber'd Life, is by no means answerable to the Labour of acquiring it ; Thirdly, That there is no Necessity of such a Deal of Learning and Knowledge, either as to this World or the next, and that ere long he fhall have his Fill of Knowledge in the Beatific Vision, one Glance whereof shall instruct him more than an eternal Poring on Books, and andiftinguish the greatest Doctor from the most ignorant Peasant ; Fourthly, That there is an absolute Necessity of his being holy, this being the Condition not only of his Happinels in general, but allo of the Accomplifhment of his Understanding in particular: And that now is the only Opportunity for it : Laftly, That the Attainment of Happinels upon this Condition, was the Purchale of his Saviour's Death, who has allo merited Grace for his Aflistance in the Performance of it; which if he neglect, he shall not only mils of Happinels, but allo be answerable for fo dear an Opportunity of gaining it: From these Premiss, it will, I think, follow with no lefs than Mathematical Evidence,

12. First, That Knowledge is not the Thing for which GOD defign'd Man in this Station, nor confequently the End of his bestowing upon him those Intellectual Powers which he has.

Secondly. That the End for which GOD did defign Man in this Station, and the Reafon why he beltow'd those Powers upon him was, That he might fo ferve him here, as to be rewarded with perfect Knowledge hereafter; And thirdly, That the principal Care and Concern of Man, both for his own Interest, and out of Compliance with the Defign of GOD, ought to be, to live a Christian Life, to accomplish the moral Part of of his Nature, to subdue his Passions, to wean himself from the Love of the World, to study Purity of Heart and Life, in one Word, "To perfect Holines in the "Fear and Love of GOD." And in particular, that he ought to purfue Knowledge no farther than as 'tis conducive to Virtue.

13. This therefore is the Measure to be always obferv'd, in our Profecution of Knowledge. We are to fludy only that we may be good, and confequently to profecute such Knowledge only as has an Aptness to make us so, that which the Apostle calls, The Truth which is after Godlines. Whatever Knowledge we profecute beside this, or further than 'tis conducive to this End, tho' it be, abfolutely confider'd, never so excellent and perfective of our Understanding, yet with respect to the prefetive of our Understanding, yet with respect Curiosity, an unaccountable Vanity, and only a more following and laborious Way of being idle and impertinent. 12. And

14. And this will be found, if well examined, to be nothing different from the Cenfure of the wife Preacher, I gave my Heart to know Wildom, fays he, and I perceived that this also is Vanity and Vexation of Spirit. Not that he now first applied himself to the Study of No. he had been infpired with that before, Wildom. and by the Help of it had discovered the Vanity of all other Things. But that Wifdom which faw through all other Things, did not as yet perceive the Vanity of itfelf. He therefore now gave his Heart to know Wifdom, that is, to reflect upon it, and to confider whether this might be excepted from his general Cenfure, and ftruck out of the Scroll of Vanities. And upon deep Reflection, he found that it could not, and that even this also was as much a Vanity as any of the reft. Not that his Proposition is to be understood abidutely, but only with respect to the prefent Posture of Man. Neither can it be understood of all Knowledge even in this Life : tome Knowledge being necessary to qualify him for Happiness in the next. It must therefore be understood of all that Knowledge, which contributes not to that great End. So that with these two necessary Limitations, the Sense of it is plainly this, That to Man in this prefent Juncture, all Knowledge which does not contribute to the Interest of his After-state, is Vanity and Vexation of Spirit.

15. For to what Purpose should we study fo much. fince after all we can know fo little ? Since our Life is as much too fhort for enjoying that little Knowledge we bave, as for compassing what we would have ; and withal, fince there lies no Manner of Obligation or Neceffity upon us to do thus? But (which is what I would most of all inculcate) to what Purpose imaginable should we be fo vehement in the Purfuit of Learning, of any Learning but what is of Ufe to the Conduct of Life. confidering these two Things, first, That 'tis but to stay a little while, and we fhall have all that Knowledge gratis, which we fo unfuccefsfully drudge for here, to the Neglect of more important Exercises ; and, Secondly, That there is fuch an absolute Necessity of being good, and that this fort uncertain Life is the only Time for it, it, which if acglected, this great Work must be undone for ever. Upon the former Confideration, this fludious Bookifh Humour, is like laying out a great Sum of Money, to purchase an Estate which after one weak, droping Life will of Course fall into Hand... Upon the latter, 'tis as if a Man that was riding Post upon Business of Life and Death, should, as he passes through a Wood, frand still to listen to the Singing of a Nightingale, and Io forget the only Business of his Jearney.

16. 'Tis most certain, the Cafes here supposed are as great Instances of Folly as can well be conceived. And yet (however it comes to pass that we are not fensible of it) 'Tis equally certain that we do the very fame, that we are too much concern'd in the Application; and that to most of us it may be truly faid, Thou art the Man!

17. For what Difference is there between him whe now labours and toils for that Knowledge, which in a little Time he shall be easily and fully posseful of, and him that deaily buys an Estate, which would otherwife come to him after a short Interval? Only this: That he who buys the Estate, tho' he might have spared his Money, however gets what he laid it out for. His Expence indeed was meedle/i, but not in vain. Whereas he that drudges in the Pursuit of Knowledge, not only toils for that which in a short Time he shall have, and in Abundance, but which after all he can't compass, and so undergoes a vain as well as meedle/s Labour.

18. Again, What Difference is there between him, who when he is upon Business of Life and Death, shall alight from his Horse, and stand to hear a Nightingale sing, and him who having an Eternity of Happiness to secure, and only this Point of Time to do it in, shall yet turn Virtuoso, and set up for Learning and Cariosity? 'Tis true, the Nightingale sings well, and 'twere worth while to stand still and hear her, were I disengaged from more concerning Affairs; but not when I am upon Life and Death. And so Knowledge is an excellent Thing, and would deferve my Study and Time, had I any to spare; but not when I have so great an Interest as that of my final State depending upon the good Use of sfit. My Bufinefs now is not to be Learned, but to be Good.

10. For is my Life to long, am I to overflock'd with Time, or is my depending Interest fo little, or so easily fecured, that I can find Leifore for unneceffary Curighties ? Is this Conduct agreeable to the prefent Pofture of Man, whole Entrance into this World, and whole whole Stay in it, is purely in order to another State ? Or would any one imagine this to be the Condition of Man by fuch a Conduct? Shall a Prifoner. who has but a few Days allow'd him to make a Preparation for his Trial, spend that little Opportunity in cutting and carving, and fuch like Mechanical Contrivances ? Or would any one imagine fuch a Man to be in fuch a Condition, near a doubtful Trial of Life . and Death, whom coming into a Prifon he should find fo employ'd ? And yet is there any Thing more abfurd in this, than to have a Man, who has fo great a Concern upon his Hands, as the preparing for Eternity, all bufy and taken up with Quadrants and Telescopes. Furnaces, Syphons and Air-Pumps ?

20. When we would expose any fignal Impertinence, we commonly illustrate it by the Example of Archimedes; who was bufy in making Mathematical Figures on the Sands of Syracufe, while the City was ftorm'd by Marcellus, and fo, tho' particular Orders were given for his Safety, loft his Life by his unfeafonable Study. Now, I confers there was Abfurdity enough in this Inftance, to confign it over to Pofterity : But had Archimedes been a Christian, I should have faid, that the Main of his Impertinence did_not lie kere, in being mathematically employed when the Enemy was taking the City, but in laying out his Thoughts and Time in fo unconcerning a Study, while he had no lefs a Concern upon him, than the fecuring his eternal Interest, which must be done now or never. Nothing certainly is an Impertinence if this be not, to hunt after Knowledge in fuch a Juncture as this !.

21. Many other Proceedings in the Conduct of Life, are condemn'd of Vanity and Impertinence, tho' not half fo inconfistent with the Character of Man, nor fo disgreeable to his present Postures. The Pens of moral Writers have been all along employ'd against them who spend their short and uncertain Lives, which ought to be spent in pursuing an infinitely higher Interest, in gaping up and down after Honour and Preferments, in long and frequent Attendances at Court, in raising Families, getting Estates, and the like. These are: condemn'd not only for their particular Vicious for what they have all in common, as they are millipendings of Time, and unconcerning Employments.

22. Now I would fain know, Whether any of thefebe-more expensive of our Time, more remote from thermain Bufinels of Life, and confequently more impertinent, than to be bufily employ'd in the Niseties and Cariolities of Learning? And whether a Man that: lowers away Six Weeks in Courte Attendances, be: not every Whit as accountably employ'd, as he : that fpends the fame Time in folying a Mathematical Queffion, as Mr. Des-Cartes in one of his Epifles confelles himfelf to have done? Why should the Profecution of Learning be, the only Thing excepted from the Vanities and Impertinencies of Life?

23. And yet fo it is. All other unconcerning Employments are cried down merely for being fo, as not confistent with the prefent State of Man, with the Character he now bears. This alone is not content with the Reputation of Innocence, but flands for politive Merit and Excellence. To fay a Man is a Lover of Knowledge, and a diligent Enquirer after Truth, is thought almost as great an Encomium as you can give him; and the Time fpent in the Study, tho' in the Search of the most impertinent Truth, is reckon'd almost as laudably employ'd as that in the Chapel. 'Tis Learning only that is allow'd (fo inconfistent with itfelf is Human Judgment) not only to divide but to devour the greatest Part of our short Life ; and is the only Thing that with Credit and publick Allowance stands . in Competition with the Study of Virtue : Nay, by the manus p efer'd before it, who had rather be accounted Learned than pious

24. But

24. Bot is not this a farange Competition? We confefs that Knowledge is a glorious Excellence. Yes Rectitude of Will is a far greater Excellence than Brightnefs of Understanding: And to be good, is a more glorious Perfection than to be Wife and Knowing, this being, if not the only, certainly the principal Difference between an Angel and a Devil. 'Tis far better, to use the Experision of Mr. Poiret, like an Infant without much Reafoning, to love much, than like the Devil, so reafon much without Love.

25. But fuppofe Knowledge were a more glorious Excellence than it is ; fuppofe it were a greater Perfection than Virtue : yet full this Competition would be utterly against Reason ; fince we can't have the former now in any Magine, and thall have it hereafter without Meafune : But the latter we may have now (for we may those much the' we can't know much) and can't have it ubersafter. Now the Question is, whether we ought to be more follionous for that Intellectual Perfection, which we can't have bere and fhall have bereafter ; or that is ubersafter? And I think we need not consult an i Quescher of conjure up a Spirit to be refolv'd.

Measure we have preferibed for our intellectual Conduct, that we ought to preferibed for our intellectual Conduct, that we ought to preferibed for our intellectual Conduct, that we ought to prefer the form of the the as it conduces to Virtue : And confequently, that whenwere we fludy to any other Purpole, or in any other Deigree than this, we are unaccountably, impertinently, I imay add, finfully employ'd. For this is the Whole of Man, To fear GOD and keep bis Commandments, the ownble-of Man in this Station particularly, and confesquertly this ought to be the Scope of all his Studies and "Endeayours."

27. And accordingly it is observable, that the Scripture, wherever it makes mention of Wisdom, with any Mark of Commendation, always means by it either Returgion itself, or fuch Knowledge as has a direct Influence rupon it. Remarkable to this Purpose is the 28th Chapter of Job 3 where having run thro' several Inflances of natural Knowledge, he adds, But where shall Wisdom C 2 be found, and where is the Place of Understanding ? As much as to fay, That in none of the other Things mentioned, did confift the Wifdom of Man. Then it fol-- lows. Man knoweth not the Price thereof, neither is it found in the Land of the Living. The Depth faith, It is not in me, and the Sea faith, It is not in me. Not in the . Depths of Learning, nor in the Recesses of Speculation. Secting it is hid from the Eyes of all Living. Destruction and Death (as we have beard of the Fame thereof with our Ears: As much as to fay, that after this Life, and then only, unless perhaps about the Hour of Death, Men begin to have a true Senfe and lively Relifh of this Wifdom. But in the mean time, GOD understandetb the Way thereof, and he knoweth the Place thereof. And unto Man he faid, Behold, the Fear of the Lord that is Wisdom, and to depart from Evil, that is Understanding ! : To Man he faid : Had it been to another Creature, suppose an Angel, in a State of Security and Confir-. mation, he would perhaps have recommended for Wifdom the Study of Nature, and the Arcana of Philosophy. But having to do with Man, a probationary unfixed . Creature, that shall be either happy or miferable eternally, according as he demeans himfelf, in this flort Time of Trial, the only Wifdom he advises to fuch a Creature in fuch a Station, is to fludy Religion and good Life.

28. From Authority let us defcend to Example: And two I would particularly recommend, of Men both eminently wife and learned ; I mean Moses and St. Paul. The latter profeffedly declares, I determined to know nothing but Jesus Christ and him crucified. And the former, complaining of the grofs Ignorance of his People, breaks out into this passionate Wish, O that they were wise! That they understood this, that they would consider their latter End !

29. Moles had been bred a Scholar as well as a Courtier, and was well inftructed in all the Secrets of Philofophy. And befide the Advantages of Pharaob's Court, he had had GOD himfelf for his Tutor; he had converfed perfonally with his Maker, and therefore mult needs be fuppos'd to know what was true Wifdom. But

But he does not make it confift in courtly Education. or the Mysteries of Philosophy; but in confidering our. latter End. He wishes that his People were wife; and to this End he does not wifh, that they were as wellbred, or as learned as himfelf, but only that they underftood this, this one Thing, that they would confider their latter End. This he make the Summary and Abstract of all Wisdom. Not unlike Plato, who defines Philosophy, The Theory of Death.

30. And here, if a short Digression may be dispens'd with, I would observe, how much Plato is in the right, and what an excellent Part of Wildom it is, to confider Death ferioufly. To make this diffinetly appear. I shall shew first, that the Consideration of Death is the most proper Exercise for a wife Man, and fecondly, that it is the most compendious Way of making him wife that is not fo.

. 31. First, it is the most proper Exercise for a wife Wildom confifts in a due Effimation of Things 5 Man. which then are duly estimated, when they are rated, both as they are in themfelves, and as they are in rela-If they are great and extraordinary in themtion to us. felves, they deferve to be confider'd for their own Sakes > if they nearly relate to us, they deferve to be confider'd for ours. And on both these Accounts. Death and its Confequences are highly deferving a wife Man's Thoughts.

32. For, first, They are in themselves great and extraordinary Transactions, and as such, deferve the attentive Confideration, even of a Stander by, of any other indifferent Being, fuppofe an Angel ; even tho' he were no otherwife concerned in it, than as 'tis a great Event, a noble and wonderful Scene of Providence. On this fingle Account, Death is as fit a Subject for the Contemplation of a wife Man, as any in Nature.

33. Or if there be within the Sphere of Nature, Things of a greater Appearance, yet there is none wherein Man is fo nearly concern'd. Since on this depends his eternal Happiness or Ruin. Nothing deferves fo much to be confider'd by him. Whether therefore we regard the Greatness of the Thing in itself, or its Greatness, with respect to us, the Confideration of Death

(30) Death is as proper an Exercise as a wife Man can be employ'd in.

34. And as 'tis fo fit an Employment for him that iswile already, fo, Secondly, it is the most compendious Way of making him wife that is not fo. For all Wifdom is in order to Happinels ; and to be truly wife, is to be wife unto Salvation. Whatever Knowledge contributes not to this, is quite befide the Mark. It is, as the Apoille calls it, Science fallely fo called. The Knowledge itfelf is vain, and the Study of it impertinent.

35. Now the only Way to Happiness is a good Life 3: and confequently all Wildom being in order to Happinels, that is the true, and the only true Wildom, that ferves to the promoting it. That therefore is the most compendious Way of making a Man wife, which fooneft makes him good. And nothing does this fo foon and fo well, as the ferious and habitual Confideration of Death. And therefore, fays the wife Man, Remember Death and Corruption, and keep the Commandments: The fhortest Compendium of Holy Living that ever was As if he had faid, Many are the Admonitions given. of wife and good Men, for the moral Conduct of Life. But would you have a fhort and infallible Direction? Remember Death and Corruption. Do but remember. this, and forget all other Rules if you will, and your Duty if you can.

36. And what is here remark'd by one wife Man, is confented to by all. Hence that common Practice among the Antients; of placing Sepulchres in their Gardens, and of ufing that celebrated Motto, Memento Mori. Hence that modern as well as ancient Cuftom, of putting Emblems of Mortality in Churches and other publick Places : By all which is implied, That the Confideration of Death is the greatett Security of a good Life. Indeed what other Confiderations do by Parts, this does at a Blow. It at once defeats the World, the Flefh and the Devil. For how can the World captivate him, who ferioufly confiders that he is a Stranger in it, and fhall fhortly leave it ? How can the Flefh enfnare him who has his Sepulchre in his Eye, and reflects on the told cold Lodging he shall have there i And how can they Devil prevail on him, who remembers that he shall die; and then enter on an unchangeable State of Happiness or Misery, according as he has either resisted, or yielded to his Temptations? Of so vast Confequence is the constant thinking upon Death, above all other, even, practical Meditation : And so great Reason had Moses for placing the Wisdom of Man in the Confideration of his latter End.

37. But to return. I now perfuade myfelf, that from the Character of Man, and his prefent Circumftances, as well as from divine Authority, it evidently appears, that however natural our Defire of Knowledge is, this Appetite is to be governed, as well as those that are fenfual; that we ought to indulge it only fo far, as may tend to the conducting our Lives, and the fitting us for that Happinels which GOD' hath promifed, not to the Learned, but to the Good: And that if it be gratified to any other Purpofe, or in any other Meafure than this, our Curiofity is impertinent, our Study immoderate, and the Tree of Knowledge ftill a forbidden Plant.

28. And now having stated the Measure of our Affection to, and Enquiry after Learning and Knowledge, it remains to be confider'd, how much 'tis observed in the general Conduct of our Studies. 'Tis plain, it is not observ'd at all. For these two Things are notorious : First, that very little of what is generally studied, has any Tendency to Living well here or happily hereafter. And Secondly, That these very Studies which have no religious Influence upon Life, do yet devour the greatest Part of it. The best and most of our Time is devoted to dry Learning ; this we make the Courfe of our Study, the reft is only by the By; and 'tis well if what is practical or devotional, can find us at Leisure upon a broken Piece of a Sunday or Holy day. The main Current of our Life runs in Studies of another Nature, that don't fo much as glance one kind Afpect upon good Living. Nay, 'tis well if fome of them don't hinder it. I am fure to great and to good a Man as St. Auftin thought fo, who speaking of the Institution and Difcipline pline of his Youth, has these remarkable Words : T learnt in those Things many aseful Words; but the same might have been learnt in Matters that are not wain ; And that indeed is the fafe Way, wherein Children ought to be train'd up. But Wo unto thee thou Torrent of Cufrom ! Who is able to refift thee ! How long will it be before thou art dried up ? How long wilt thou roll along the Sons of Eve, into a great and formidable Sea, which they can hardly pa/s over? Have I not, in Obedience to thee, read of Jupiter thundering and Fornicating at the fame Time? And yet, O thou hellish Torrent, the Sons of Men are fill toft in thee, and are invited by Rewards to learn these Things ! Thy Pretence indeed is, That this is the Way to learn Words, and to get Eloquence and the Art of Persuasion. As if we might not have known thefe Words, Golden Shower, Lap, the Temple of Heaven, without reading of Jupiter's being made a Precedent for Whereing ? This Immorality does not at all help the learning of the Words : But the Words greatly encourage the committing the Immorality. Not that I find Fault with the Words themselves ; they are pure and choice Veffels : But with that Wine of Error, which in them is banded and commended to us by our fottifh Feachers. And yet unless we drank of it, we were beaten, nor bad we any foter Judge to appeal to. And yet I, O my GOD, in whose Presence I now securely make this Recollection. willingly learnt these Things, and like a Wretch delighted in them, and for this I was called a good, hopeful Boy. By this you may fee what the Judgment of this holy and venerable Perfon was in his private Retirements, and at the most ferious Intervals of his Life, concerning the general Course of those Studies, which draw out the first Runnings of our Age, and which are of fo great Credit and Authority in the World, as to go under the Name of ingenuous and liberal Education. You fee he not only diapproves them, but reckons them among. those Sins and Irregularities of his Youth, whereof he thought himfelf obliged to make a particular Confession in this his great Penitential.

39. And here let me not be thought immodest, if upon great Confideration and full Conviction, I presume to tax the Management of our publick Schools. Many Milcarriages I might note, but I shall concern mylelf enly with those, which the Principles here laid down lead me to confider. And these we may comprehend under two general Heads of Complaint.

I. That they take up fo much of our Time.

II. That they teach us such frivolous and unprofitable. Things as they do.

In relation to the First, I can't with any Patience reflect, that out of fo fhort a Time as that of human Life, confifting, it may be of 50 or 60 Years (for where one lives longer, Hundreds come short) 10 or 20 shall be fpent between the Dictionary and the Lexicon, in hammering out a little Latin and Greek, and in learning a Company of Poetical Fictions and Fantaflick Stories: Were thefe. Things worth knowing, yet 'tis barbarous and inhuman, to make People spend fo much of their little Stock of Time upon them. This is to make ,a Cure of Human Ignorance, and to deal with the Infirmities of the Mind, as fome ill Surgeons do with the Wounds of the Body. If one were to judge of the Life of Man by the Proportion of it fpent at School, one would think the Antideluvian Mark were not yet out, and that we had a Profpect of at least 900 or 1000 Years before us. The Truth is, 'tis an intolerable Abuse it fhould be fo ; and were the Age as wife as it pretends to be, it would never fuffer it : Efpecially confidering what late Examples we have had of more compendious Methods beyond the Seas. It does not become me to project a Scheme of School-Discipline; I leave this to abler Heads. Only in the mean time I may venture to fay, that the common Way is a very great Tax upon Human Life ; fo large a Portion of which can very ill be spared, to be lavish'd away in the first Elements of Learning.

But the greateft Complaint againft these Seminaries is, the Frivolousness of the Things they teach. Not only the spending so much Time on the Things they teach is blame-worthy, but their teaching such Things at all. Setting Opinion and Fancy aside, what real Improvement is it to the Mind of a rational Creature, to be everlaid whaid with Words and Bhrafes, and to be full charged with Poetical Stories and Dreams ? How many excelistent and useful Things might be learnt, while Boys are sthumbing and mus desing Hefod and Homer, which then they do not understand, and which when they do, they will throw by and despife ; and that justly too : For of what Signification is fuch Stuff as this, to the Accomplifhment of a reasonable Soul? What Improvement - can it be to my Understanding to know the Amours of , Pyramus and Thisbe, or of Hero and Leander? Do Men sotain any Value for these Things when they grow up, or endeavour to preferve the Memory of them ? And -why must poor Boys be condemned to the Drudgery of slearning what when they are Men they must and will . unlearn ? Why must they be forced with fo great Exspence of Time and Labour, to learn fuch Things as are of no flanding Ufe ? So far from that, that they are dangerous as well as unprofitable. For I appeal to the . common Senfe and Experience of Mankind, whether it be not dangerous in the highest Degree, to entertain the gay catching Fancies of Boys, with the amorous Scenes of the Poets ? Whether it beilafe; to feafon their green Imaginations with fuch Images as are shere painted to the Life ? Is not this rather the direct Way to corrupt them, to fow in their tender Minds the Seeds of Impurity, to increase their inbred Propensities to Evil, and lay a flanding Foundation for Debauchery? Let any Man but confider Human Nature as it comes down. to us from Adam, and tell me whether he thinks a Boy is fit to be trufted with Ovid? I do not understand upon what Principle, either of Prudence or Piety, fush Books as these should be read by any p but least of all by Boys, whole for Minds are to inforptible of any ill Impression. Far better were it they should continue ig - . norant, than that their Understandings should be ac-. complish'd at the Hazard of their Morals ; upon which. fuch Studies as these can derive no very wholefome Influence. And yet to thefe our Youth is dedicated, and in these some of us employ: our riper Years, and then when we die, this very Thing makes one Parr of our Funeral Elogy, that we were to diligent and indefatigable:

"Able in our Studies; and to inquisitive in the Search of a Knowledge) perhaps that we produced an early Inters (ment by it; when; according to the Principles before laid down, we were as imperimently, tho' not fo innocently employ'd all the while, as if we had been fo long picking Straws in Bedlam.

40. The Sum of all is this: The Measure of profecuting Learning and Knowledge, is their Ulefulnefs to good Life., Confequently, all Profecution of them beyond or befide this End, is impertinent and immoderate. But fuch is the general Profecution of Learning and Knowledge, as is plain by appealing to the general Conduct of Study. It evidently follows, That the Intellectual Conduct of Human Life is justly chargeable with an immoderate and impertment Purfur of Knowledge.

The CONCLUSION.

To what a narrow Compass, by virtue of the preceding Reflections, are these three. Things reduced, which use to take up to large a Room, wiz. Learning itself, the Method of Learning, and the Defire and Profecution of Learning? These indeed are great Retrenchments, but such as are just and necessary to the Regulation of our Intellectual: Conduct.

And now who can forbear making these two Obfervations, I. That this Bookish Humonr, which every where so prevails, is one of the spiritual Disases of Mankind, one of the most malignant Relicks of original Depravation : It carrying in it the very Stamp and Signature of Adam's Transgression, which owed its Birth to an inordinate Defire of Knowledge. 2. That those who have Eyes, may in great Measure spare them, and they who have ones should not much lament the Want of them, upon account of Learning.

For my own Part, I am fo throughly convinced of the Certainty of the Principles here laid down, that I look upon myfelf as not only under a particular Obligation, but almost a Necessity of conducting my Studies by them. The last of which has left fuch a deep Impression upon me, that I now intend to follow the Advice where of the Heathen, (Marcus Antoninus, as I remember) The The The Bichiew Sidar pidor. Rid thyfelf of the Thirft after Books; and to itudy nothing at all but what ferves to the Advancement of Piety and good Life.

I have now fpent about 13 Years in the most celebrated University in the World; in pursuing both such Learning as the Academical Standard requires, and as my private Genius inclined me to. But in Truth, when I think on my pass Intellectual Conduct, I am as little fatisfied with it as with my Moral; being very conscious, that the greatest Part of my Time has been employed in unconcerning Curiosities, such as derive no Degree of moral Influence upon the Soul that contemplates them.

But I have now a very different Apprehension of Things, and intend to spend my uncertain Remainder of Time, in studying only what makes for the moral Improvement of my Mind, and Regulation of my Life: Being not able to give an Account, upon any rational and confistent Principles, why I should study any Thing elfe.

More particularly, I fhall apply myfelf to read fuch Books as are rather perfusive than initructive; fuch as warm, kindle and enlarge the Affections, and awaken the divine Senfe in the Soul; as being convinced by every Day's Experience, that I have more Need of Heat than of Light. Tho were I for more Light, fill I think this would prove the beft Method of Illamination, and that when all is done, the Love of GOD is the beft Light of the Soul. A Man may indeed have Knowledge without Love; but he that loves, tho' be wants Sciences bumanly acquired, yet he will know more than human Wifdom can teach him, becaufe he has that Mafter with; in him who teacheth Man Knowledge.
